
(i)

any collective agreements directly affecting the terms and conditions of employment; and where the employee is required to work abroad for more than one month, various details of that employment abroad.

(j)

Particulars of disciplinary and dismissal procedures

40-041

The written particulars must in addition specify any disciplinary rules applicable to the employee ²⁸⁹ (except such as relate to health or safety at work which must, under s.2(3) of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974, be included in the written statement of health and safety policy required to be issued to employees) ²⁹⁰ or at least refer to a document reasonably accessible to the employee which specifies the rules. There must also be specified a person to whom the employee can apply if dissatisfied with any disciplinary decision relating to him; and a person to whom the employee can apply to seek redress of any employment grievance; the manner of making such applications; and any steps consequent upon any such application. ²⁹¹ With effect from October 2004, these particulars must also cover the procedure which applies when an employee is disciplined or dismissed. ²⁹² Employers with fewer than 20 employees were exempt from the requirement to include a note about disciplinary rules and procedures in the written statement of main terms and conditions ²⁹³; but that exemption ceased to have effect from October 2004. ²⁹⁴

Statement of initial employment particulars; and use of alternative document to give particulars

40-042

Formerly, the obligation to provide written particulars could generally be discharged by referring to other documents, such as collective agreements, containing the required information; but that facility of reference to other documents was then restricted to certain particulars only ²⁹⁵, and most of the particulars must be gathered together in a single document known as the "statement of initial employment particulars". ²⁹⁶ However, with effect from October 4, 2004, provision was made for particulars to be given in the alternative form of a written contract of employment or letter of engagement, including such documents given to the employee before his employment begins. ²⁹⁷

Changes in terms

40-043

Any change in the terms of employment to be included in the statement is likewise to be notified to the employee within one month after the change. ²⁹⁸ The employer may, for this purpose, refer the employee to some document which is made reasonably accessible to him to the extent, but only to the extent, that the obligation to give the original particulars may be so discharged. ²⁹⁹ A change in the name of the employer must be notified to the employee as a change of terms, ³⁰⁰ as must a change in the identity of the employer which does not break the employee's continuity of employment, ³⁰¹ in which case the date must be specified on which the employee's period of continuous service began. ³⁰²

Effect of particulars

40-044

If the written statement describes itself as a contract of employment and if its receipt is acknowledged by the employee, the statement may be deemed to be the contract of employment itself and not a mere description of the contract, with the consequent application of the parol evidence rule to exclude inconsistent evidence of contractual terms verbally agreed.³⁰³ Even where that does not occur, the written statement may form the basis of an estoppel against the employer³⁰⁴; and the employee's acquiescence in the statement may, exceptionally, have the effect of raising an estoppel against him.³⁰⁵

Failure to provide accurate statement or to notify change in terms

40-045

If an employer fails to comply with his obligation to give his employee a written statement of the specified terms of employment,³⁰⁶ the matter may be referred to an employment tribunal which is empowered to determine which particulars ought to have been given.³⁰⁷ The tribunal is also empowered to "substitute other particulars", as it may determine to be appropriate, when an incomplete or inaccurate statement has been given.³⁰⁸ If the employer fails to give written particulars of a term, he or she may be unable to sue his employee for breach of that term; but the court might hold that it is not the intention of the Act that such a failure should affect the enforceability of the contract.³⁰⁹ Failure to notify changes in terms and inaccurate notification of changes are treated in the same way as failure to provide an accurate original statement.³¹⁰ It is not fully clear whether or when failure to notify changes in terms and failure to complain of lack of notification of changes appear not to vitiate or create an estoppel against a valid contractual variation.³¹¹

Compensation for failure with respect to the provision of employment particulars

40-046

In addition to the powers and remedies described in the previous paragraph, provision is made by s.38 of the Employment Act 2002, with effect from October 4, 2004, for employment tribunals to award compensation to an employee where the lack, incompleteness or inaccuracy of the employment particulars provided by the employer is established in the course of proceedings under specified employment tribunal jurisdictions.³¹² In particular, the tribunal must in those circumstances increase any award made against the employer in respect of the claim under the other jurisdiction(s) by a minimum amount of two weeks' pay and may increase any such award by the higher amount of four weeks' pay, or must award a minimum amount of two weeks' pay and may award a higher amount of four weeks' pay where compensation is not a remedy available for the claim in question, or where the tribunal does not award compensation in respect of that claim. There is, however, no duty to make or increase an award in this way "if there are exceptional circumstances which would make an award or increase ... unjust or inequitable".³¹³

^{1.} Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

^{209.} See below, paras 40-047 et seq.

^{210.} See below, paras 40-055 et seq.

- 211. Compare Vol.I, para.13-008 “Contracts in standard form”.
- 212. Re Walker [1944] 1 All E.R. 614, 616.
- 213.  Such as the unilaterally proposed pay rise which was found to be contractually binding in Hershaw v Sheffield City Council [2014] I.C.R. 1120 EAT or the contractual check-off mechanism which was held not to be derogable in Cavanagh v Secretary of State for Work and Pensions [2016] EWHC 1136, [2016] I.R.L.R. 591.
- 214. Compare Cabinet Office v Beavan [2014] I.R.L.R. 434 EAT as to the question of whether the employee's acceptance of a pay increase derived from a collective agreement also connotes acceptance of other changes to terms and conditions of employment which would result from that agreement.
- 215.  [2015] EWHC 181 (QB), [2015] I.R.L.R. 641.
- 216.  Norman v National Audit Office [2015] I.R.L.R. 634 (EAT).
- 217. [2013] I.R.L.R. 166 EAT.
- 218. [2012] EWHC 2830 (Ch), [2013] I.R.L.R. 198.
- 219. [2012] EWHC 2609 (QB), [2012] I.R.L.R. 979.
- 220. See especially [2012] EWHC 2609 (QB) at [57].
- 221. Ch.9 (Personal incapacity): e.g. minors: Vol.I, paras 9-030—9-031.
- 222. See, for example, Watt, The Nature of the Crown (1999).
- 223. See below, para.40-035.
- 224. Re Kendrew [1953] Ch. 291.
- 225. The exclusionary provisions were repealed by the Employment Act 1982.
- 226. cf. Att-Gen for Guyana v Nobrega [1969] 3 All E.R. 1604; Kodeeswaran v Att-Gen of Ceylon [1970] A.C. 1111. cf. now, R. v Civil Service Appeal Board Ex p. Bruce [1989] I.C.R. 171.
- 227. [1992] 1 All E.R. 897.
- 228. cf. Dunn v R [1896] 1 Q.B. 116; Dunn v Macdonald [1897] 1 Q.B. 401; Hales v R (1918) 34 T.L.R. 589; Denning v Secretary of State for India (1920) 37 T.L.R. 138; Shenton v Smith [1895] A.C. 229 (medical officer employed by Government of Western Australia dismissed at pleasure); Terrell v Secretary of State for the Colonies [1953] 2 Q.B. 482 (colonial judge dismissed at pleasure); IRC v Hambrook [1956] 2 Q.B. 641, 654. In Council of Civil Service Unions v Minister for the Civil Service [1985] I.C.R. 14, Lord Diplock, at 39C, referred to “the rule of terminability of employment in the civil service without notice, of which the existence is beyond doubt”. cf. Wade (1985) 101 L.Q.R. 153 et seq. and 180 et seq. As to policemen, see Police Act 1964 ss.29, 37; Cooper v Wilson [1937] 2 K.B. 309.
- 229. Rodwell v Thomas [1944] K.B. 596; Riordan v War Office [1959] 1 W.L.R. 1046 (upheld by the CA [1961] 1 W.L.R. 210, without reference to this point).
- 230. Mitchell v R (1890) 1 Q.B. 121n; Leaman v R [1920] 3 K.B. 663; Lucas v Lucas and High Commissioner for India [1943] P. 68; cf. Dudfield v Ministry of Works, The Times, January 24, 1964 (printed in Wedderburn, Cases and Materials on Labour Law (1967), p.296). See Logan (1945) 61 L.Q.R. 240.

- 231. Contained in Employment Rights Act 1996 Pt XI.
- 232. Civil servants are specifically excluded from the redundancy payments legislation by Employment Rights Act 1996 s.159(1)(b).
- 233. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.191(1), (2) (unfair dismissal) (including members of the military services—s.192(1), and s.191(1), (2)) applying to the Crown some but not all of the rights of individual employees created by the Employment Protection Act 1975 (including members of the military services—Employment Rights Act 1996 s.192(1)), Equal Pay Act 1970 s.1(8) (excluding the military services—s.1(9)—but note s.7 (service pay)); Sex Discrimination Act 1975 s.85(2) (excluding the military services with regard to “combat effectiveness”—s.85(4)). See also now Employment Rights Act 1996 s.193(1), (2) (“national security”).
- 234. cf. R. v Civil Service Appeal Board Ex p. Bruce [1989] I.C.R. 171; R. v Lord Chancellor's Department Ex p. Nangle [1992] 1 All E.R. 897.
- 235. Davies v Davies (1887) 36 Ch. D. 359, 393; Horwood v Millar's Trading Co [1917] 1 K.B. 305. cf. Gaumont-British Picture Corp Ltd v Alexander [1936] 2 All E.R. 1686; Nokes v Doncaster Amalgamated Collieries [1940] A.C. 1014, see below, para.40-175.
- 236. Esso Petroleum Co Ltd v Harper's Garage (Stourport) Ltd [1968] A.C. 269, 294, 307, 328, 336; cf. Instone v A Schroeder Music Publishing Co Ltd [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1308; Greig v Insole [1978] 1 W.L.R. 302, 325F–326D.
- 237. See above, Vol.I, paras 16-114 et seq.
- 238. See Vol.I, paras 16-001 et seq.
- 239. Coral Leisure Group Ltd v Barnett [1981] I.C.R. 503, 506 D-F, per Browne-Wilkinson J.
- 240. ¶s.8; and Deakin and G. Morris, Labour Law, 6th edn (2012), para.3.13. See V v Addey & Stanhope School Governing Body. That decision was applied in Blue Chip Trading Ltd v Helbawi [2008] UKEAT 0397/08/2011, [2009] I.R.L.R. 128, where however the contract of employment was treated as severable and recovery was allowed in respect of the lawful elements. It should be noted that further restrictions upon immigration and obligations in respect of immigration are imposed by the Immigration Asylum and Nationality Act 2006, and the Borders Citizenship and Immigration Act 2009, to which reference should be made.
- 241. Hounga v Allen [2014] UKSC 47, [2014] 1 W.L.R. 2889.
- 242. Miller v Karlinski (1945) 62 T.L.R. 85; Napier v National Business Agency [1951] 2 All E.R. 264; Tomlinson v Dick Evans "U" Drive Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 639; Davidson v Pillay [1979] I.R.L.R. 275; Corby v Morrison [1980] I.C.R. 564; Newland v Simons & Willer Ltd [1981] I.C.R. 521. cf. Hyland v JH Barker (North West) Ltd [1985] I.C.R. 861.
- 243. A vivid paraphrase received judicial approval in Tomlinson v Dick Evans "U" Drive Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 639, 642B, per Bristow J.
- 244. Coral Leisure Group Ltd v Barnett [1981] I.C.R. 503. cf. Hyland v JH Barker (North West) Ltd [1985] I.C.R. 861.
- 245. Davidson v Pillay [1979] I.R.L.R. 275; Corby v Morrison [1980] I.C.R. 564. The court in the latter case was however sceptical of the acceptance of the employee's innocence in the former case—[1980] I.C.R. 564 at 570 E-G. Compare Enfield Technical Services Ltd v Payne, Grace v BF Components Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 393, [2008] I.R.L.R. 500.
- 246. [1992] I.C.R. 626; compare Annandale Engineering v Samson [1994] I.R.L.R. 59; but contrast Salvesen v Simons [1994] I.R.L.R. 52.
- 247. [1995] I.C.R. 1091.

- 248. ![2000] I.C.R. 99 CA. The approach in the Woolston Hall Leisure case was reiterated and applied in Colen v Cebrian (UK) Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 1676, [2004] I.C.R. 568; and in Wheeler v Qualitydeep Ltd (t/a Thai Royale Restaurant) [2004] EWCA Civ 1085, [2005] I.C.R. 265, where the requirement of active participation by the employee in the illegality as to performance was insisted upon; compare now, however, V v Addey & Stanhope School Governing Body.
- 249. [2000] I.R.L.R. 94 QBD.
- 250. As to which, see generally Vol.I, paras 15-066 et seq.
- 251. [2006] EWCA Civ 1536, [2007] I.C.R. 623.
- 252. As defined by ss.9, 13(1), (5), 19.
- 253. s.39(1), subject to the exception contained in s.83(11) and Sch.9 Pt 1 (occupational requirements).
- 254. ss.124–126.
- 255. s.124(2)(b), (6).
- 256. As defined by ss.9, 13(1), (6), 19.
- 257. Or on the grounds of gender reassignment; s.7.
- 258. s.39(1), subject to a defined exception where being of a certain gender is an occupational requirement, s.83 and Sch.9 Pt I.
- 259. s.120.
- 260. s.124(2)(b).
- 261. s.124(2)(a), (c), (3)–(7).
- 262. s.8.
- 263. s.18.
- 264. See para.40-132 below.
- 265. s.39(1).
- 266. The Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (Amendment) Regulations 2003 (SI 2003/1673), implementing Council Directive 2000/78.
- 267. For the broad category of workers included, see s.83(2), and for the extension to contract workers, s.41. The 1995 Act s.7 originally restricted the application of the Act to employers of 20 or more employed persons; that exemption for small businesses was removed with effect from October 2004 by reg.7 of the 2003 Regulations.
- 268. See ss.6, 15, 39(1).
- 269. See ss.20, 39(5).
- 270. See ss.120, 124.
- 271. SI 2003/1660, in particular reg.6(1).
- 272. SI 2003/1661, in particular reg.6(1).

- 273. Directive 2000/78.
- 274. ss.10, 12, 39 subject to s.83(11) and Sch.9 Pt 1 (occupational requirements).
- 275. SI 2006/1031, similarly enacted in implementation of the requirements of Council Directive 2000/78 establishing a general framework for equal treatment in employment and vocational training.
- 276. ss.10, 12, 39 subject to s.83(11) and Sch.9 Pt 2 (exceptions relating to age).
- 277. SI 2011/1069 which, inter alia, repealed para.9 of Sch.9 Pt 2 (applicants at or approaching retirement age).
- 278. See ss.27, 39(3).
- 279. s.4(3)(b). The term “spent conviction” is defined by s.1(1) with reference to s.5. Section 56 of the Data Protection Act 1998 makes it a criminal offence to require job applicants or existing employees to make subject access requests in lieu of providing a normal criminal record check, which would not disclose spent convictions.
- 280. Compare, however, para.40-064, see below, where the effect of s.4(3)(a) upon non-disclosure of a conviction, in connection with an application for employment, is discussed.
- 281. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.137, originally s.1 of the Employment Act 1990.
- 282. See below, paras 40-115—40-116.
- 283. Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s.25 (“crew agreements”); and the requirements for written particulars made by Pt I of the Employment Rights Act 1996 accordingly do not apply to merchant mariners—see Employment Rights Act 1996 s.199(1).
- 284. Specific requirements of form are, however, made by the Apprenticeships (Form of Apprenticeship Agreement) Regulations 2012 (SI 2012/844). See also Deakin & Morris, Labour Law, 6th edn (2012), para.4.13.
- 285. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.1-7, 210-219.
- 286. As assessed under the provisions detailed below, paras 40-164—40-167.
- 287. Subject to the proviso to s.1(4)(d)(iii) of the Employment Rights Act 1996, made by s.1(5) relating to statutory schemes. It must also be stated whether a contracting-out certificate is in force for the employment concerned: s.3(5).
- 288. See below, paras 40-162 et seq.
- 289. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.3(1)(a).
- 290. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.3(2).
- 291. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.3(1)(b), (c).
- 292. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.3(1)(aa), (b)(i), (2) as inserted or amended by s.35 of the Employment Act 2002 with effect from that date.
- 293. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.3(3).
- 294. By virtue of s.36 of the Employment Act 2002, implemented with effect from that date.
- 295. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.2(2), (3), and s.6. See further below, para.40-054.

- 296. Employment Rights Act 1996. See s.2(4).
- 297. By virtue of s.37 of the Employment Act 2002, inserting new ss.7A and 7B of the Employment Rights Act 1996, to be implemented with effect from that date.
- 298. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.4(1), (3).
- 299. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.4(2), (3), (4), (5) and s.6.
- 300. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.4(6)(a).
- 301. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.4(6)(b).
- 302. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.4(8).
- 303. Gascol Conversions Ltd v Mercer [1974] I.C.R. 420.
- 304. cf. Smith v Blandford Gee Cementation Ltd [1970] 3 All E.R. 154; but contrast Parkes Classic Confectionery Ltd v Ashcroft (1973) 8 I.T.R. 43; and System Floors Ltd v Daniel [1981] I.R.L.R. 475, 476—“Nor are the statements of the terms finally conclusive: at most, they place a heavy burden on the employer to show that the actual forms of contract are different from those which he has set out in the statutory statement” (Browne-Wilkinson J.).
- 305. cf. Soutar v Fisher (1975) 10 I.T.R. 38; Boyce v Torquay Cemetery Co [1975] I.R.L.R. 80; but see Jones v Associated Tunnelling Co Ltd [1981] I.R.L.R. 477, 481—“In our view to imply an agreement to vary or to raise an estoppel against the employee on the grounds that he has not objected to a false record by the employers of the terms actually agreed is a course which should be adopted with great caution” (Browne-Wilkinson J.). See Deakin & Morris, Labour Law, 6th edn (2012), para.4.25.
- 306. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.1. See above, paras 40-040—40-044.
- 307. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.11(1), (2), 12(2); see Owens v Multilux Ltd [1974] I.R.L.R. 113; Leighton v Construction Industry Training Board [1978] I.C.R. 577; WPM Retail Ltd v Lang [1978] I.C.R. 787; and Mears v Safecar Security Ltd [1982] I.C.R. 626, for discussion of the scope of this power. cf. Eagland v British Telecommunications Plc [1993] I.C.R. 644. It was held by the Court of Appeal in Southern Cross Healthcare Ltd v Perkins [2010] EWCA Civ 1442 that this power does not extend to the construction of the terms of the contract of employment themselves save so far as might be necessary in order to assess whether the statutory statement correctly reflected those terms.
- 308. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.12(2); see Mears v Safecar Security Ltd [1982] I.C.R. 626.
- 309. cf. Anderson v Daniel [1924] 1 K.B. 138, 149.
- 310. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.11(1).
- 311. cf. Chant v Turriff Construction Ltd (1966) 2 I.T.R. 380; Parkes Classic Confectionery v Ashcroft (1973) 8 I.T.R. 43; System Floors Ltd v Daniel [1981] I.R.L.R. 475; Jones v Associated Tunnelling Co Ltd [1981] I.R.L.R. 477. Note that in Scally v Southern Health Board [1991] I.C.R. 771 a failure by the employer to inform the employee of a new pension entitlement was treated as a breach of an implied term of the contract of employment. See below, para.40-040.
- 312. The jurisdictions are specified under s.38(1) by Sch.5, subject to the possibility of amendment by ministerial order. The list includes all the major employment tribunal jurisdictions over employment rights.
- 313. Employment Act 2002 s.38(5).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 4. - Collective Agreements and Statutory Awards of Terms

(a) - Collective Agreements as Contracts

Legal enforceability

40-047

Although there was between 1975 and 1980, and has since 1999 been, legal provision which may be used to secure compulsory recognition of trade unions, ³¹⁴ the tradition and style of British collective bargaining strongly reflects its voluntary and informal development. The leading decision on the legal status of a collective agreement ³¹⁵ confirmed the majority ³¹⁶ opinion of those concerned with such agreements that they are not normally intended to create legal relations. ³¹⁷ This means that they are binding in honour only, and that their enforcement must depend on industrial and political pressure. This view is given statutory force under the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 ³¹⁸ and the presumption which it creates against intention to make a legally enforceable contract can be rebutted only where an agreement is in writing stating specifically that a legally enforceable contract is intended ³¹⁹; in the latter case it is conclusively presumed that a legally enforceable agreement was intended. ³²⁰ The same presumptions apply to the different parts of agreements where an agreement is in writing, and is stated to be intended to be legally enforceable as to part only. ³²¹

40-048

The process by which collective agreements are made is known as “collective bargaining” rather than “contract” ³²² and the application to them of the ordinary rules of the law of contract could lead to great difficulties. Some collective agreements are vague as to who are the parties (e.g. between “the Workpeople’s side and the Employer’s side of” the industry) and their language is often not legal language; there would be many difficulties in interpreting them if they were held to be legally enforceable. However, the former statutory obstacle to enforcement of collective agreements, ³²³ which applied to certain collective agreements even if they could be shown to be intended to have contractual force, has long since been removed entirely. ³²⁴

¹. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

³¹⁴. Employment Protection Act 1975 ss.11-16, repealed by the Employment Act 1980; Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 Ch.VA and Sch.1 inserted by the Employment Relations Act 1999.

³¹⁵. Ford Motor Co Ltd v AEF [1969] 2 Q.B. 303.

³¹⁶. To the contrary, see Gayler, Industrial Law (1955), pp.172-174; and cf. Edwards v Skyways Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 349; East London Bakers' Union v Goldstein, The Times, June 9, 1904 (printed in Wedderburn at p.272); Selwyn (1969) 32 M.L.R. 377; (1970) 33 M.L.R. 117, 238.

- 317. Kahn-Freund, The System of Industrial Relations in Great Britain (1954), p.57, and in (1942) 6 M.L.R. 112, 115-116; Wedderburn, Cases and Materials on Labour Law, pp.267-281; Wedderburn, The Worker and the Law, 2nd edn, pp.171-180, and in 24 M.L.R. 572, 583-584; Ardley and Morey v London Electricity Board, The Times, June 16, 1956; cf. Spring v National Amalgamated Stevedores and Dockers' Society [1956] 1 W.L.R. 585, 592; Ayling v London and India Docks Committee (1893) 9 T.L.R. 409; Hepple [1970] C.L.J. 122.
- 318. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.179.
- 319. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.179(1); see National Coal Board v National Union of Mineworkers [1986] I.C.R. 736. Compare also now Malone v British Airways Plc [2010] EWHC 302 (QB), [2010] I.R.L.R. 431 where it was held that there was no sufficient objective intention to give the terms of the collective agreement legal enforceability regarding cabin crew complements at the behest of any individual crew member.
- 320. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.179(2).
- 321. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.179(3).
- 322. See Kahn-Freund, The System of Industrial Relations in Great Britain (1954), pp.57 et seq.
- 323. Trade Union Act 1871 s.4(4).
- 324. Industrial Relations Act 1971 Sch.9 (itself repealed by Trade Union and Labour Relations Act 1974 s.1).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 4. - Collective Agreements and Statutory Awards of Terms

(b) - Incorporation of Collective Agreements into Individual Contracts of Employment Agency and collective agreements

40-049

A collective agreement might, in theory, be made by the negotiating parties as agents for their respective members, but the associations and unions making collective agreements appear to act as principals, and not as agents on behalf of their members ³²⁵; although some dicta ³²⁶ suggest that there is agency in this bargaining procedure. ³²⁷ Many difficulties would arise if the agency doctrine were accepted, e.g. what would be the position of nonunionists in the industry who were not represented in the collective bargaining? or of members who join the union after the date of the collective agreement? It may, however, be legitimate to employ the agency doctrine when union officials negotiate a settlement of a dispute on behalf of a few employees identified by name. ³²⁸ In Harris v Richard Lawson Autologistics Ltd ³²⁹ the Court of Appeal held that a shop steward had ostensible authority to negotiate an agreement on holiday pay on behalf of the members of the Transport and General Workers' Union employed by the company concerned, and that it was reasonable for the company to conclude that the revised terms had been adopted by the workers concerned although they had not been put to those workers for their approval.

Express incorporation

40-050

It is clear that the terms of a collective agreement may be expressly incorporated by a reference in an individual contract of employment. ³³⁰ In 1958, the Court of Appeal held that a provision in a collective agreement between the National Coal Board and a trade union had been incorporated into the individual contracts of employment, so that the employee was liable for breach of the obligation to work "such days or part days in each week as may be reasonably required by the management". ³³¹ But express reference in an individual contract of employment to a collective agreement as regulating the employee's wages or other substantive conditions of service will normally be held not to incorporate procedural provisions of the collective agreement. ³³² There may be express incorporation of terms from a collective agreement where the employer, for the purpose of complying with the statutory obligation to give written particulars of the terms of employment, ³³³ issues the employee with a document styling itself a contract of employment, which refers to one or more collective agreements, and which is signed as received by the employee. ³³⁴ The express incorporation, into individual contracts, of "no-strike" obligations derived from collective agreements is now subject to certain special statutory conditions which are considered below. ³³⁵ Express incorporation can give rise to an enforceable term in the individual contract of employment although, as is frequently the case, the collective agreement is expressed to be binding in honour only as between the parties to it. ³³⁶ As to the latitude of construction which is allowed (or denied) in relation to changed industrial relations circumstances, see Adams v British Airways Plc. ³³⁷ In the absence of any contrary intention, where terms from a collective agreement are specifically incorporated into individual contracts, the relevant terms will be those contained in the current collective agreement, and thus they may be varied from time-to-time. ³³⁸ On the other hand, once a term derived from a collective agreement has been incorporated into individual contracts, the termination of the collective agreement does not in itself affect the incorporated terms.³³⁹

Incorporation by implication

40-051

The problem of incorporation is more difficult when there is no relevant express term in the individual contract of employment, but it is alleged that the parties have tacitly agreed to incorporate terms of the relevant collective agreement.³⁴⁰ There is some informative case law from periods when national and local sectoral collective bargaining was more widespread than it is today. When the employee knows³⁴¹ of the terms of the collective agreement, it may well be legitimate to infer that it was the presumed common intention of both parties to the contract that these terms should apply when the contract itself was silent on any issue.³⁴² The terms of a collective agreement accepted by a Joint Council cannot be incorporated by implication if the functions of the Joint Council are not executory but “purely consultative”³⁴³ and not intended to create legally enforceable rights of action.³⁴⁴ The terms of a national collective agreement may be modified by a local collective agreement between the employers and union representatives, and in these circumstances the appropriate inference should be that it is the local agreement which is incorporated into individual contracts of employment.³⁴⁵ However, the cases show some tendency to treat the local agreement as not intended to affect the terms of individual contracts, particularly when the local agreement is a less formal one than the national agreement.³⁴⁶ In determining whether a particular part of a collective agreement has been incorporated into the individual contracts of employment of the employees, it is necessary to look at the content and character of those parts and whether they were apt to be a term of the contracts.³⁴⁷ A part of a collective agreement may, for instance, be treated as designed to give flexible and informal guidance as to what is expected to happen in given situations, in a way which is inconsistent with contractual rights being created.³⁴⁸ In the case of *Henry v London General Transport Services Ltd*³⁴⁹ Lindsay J. in the Employment Appeal Tribunal gave some important indications as to when the terms of individual contracts of employment will be treated as having been varied as the result of a collective agreement negotiated between the employer and a trade union or trade unions. In the instant case, it was held that individual contracts had been so varied by a collective agreement for the reduction of wages which had been acted upon for two years; it followed that the employers had not made an unlawful deduction from wages³⁵⁰ in paying the reduced remuneration.

40-052

In most collective agreements there will be many terms not directly applicable to the individual employee, e.g. procedural matters between the unions and the employers, and these may be held not appropriate to be incorporated by implication into individual contracts.³⁵¹ As the result of a statutory provision which is considered below,³⁵² “no strike” obligations contained in collective agreements can be incorporated into individual contracts by an implied term only where certain stringent requirements are observed. Also, since an express term in a contract must prevail over any alleged implied term, an express term in an individual contract of employment will displace any term in a collective agreement which would otherwise be incorporated in the contract under the implied term doctrine.³⁵³

Incorporation of “no-strike” obligations

40-053

Section 180 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 imposes special safeguards upon the incorporation, into individual contracts of employment, of “no-strike” obligations derived from collective agreements. Section 180 enacts that provisions in collective agreements placing restrictions upon strikes or other industrial action by workers will not be incorporated into individual contracts of employment unless the collective agreement:

(a)

is in writing; and

(b) expressly states that its “no-strike” provisions are liable to be incorporated into individual contracts of employment; and is reasonably accessible to the workers affected at their place of work and is available to be consulted during working hours.

(c)

The union(s) concerned must be independent union(s) ³⁵⁴ and the ordinary rules of express ³⁵⁵ or implied ³⁵⁶ incorporation must be satisfied. It is not clear how wide a range of collectively bargained terms fall within this provision; many clauses relating to dispute procedures could be regarded as terms which “have the effect of restricting the right” to take industrial action. Such clauses might in any event not be appropriate for incorporation into individual contracts, and s.180 should not be seen as altering the doctrine of appropriateness for incorporation. ³⁵⁷

Effect of statement of particulars under the contracts of employment legislation

40-054

Before 1993, it could be said that the obligation imposed by the contracts of employment legislation ³⁵⁸ on employers to issue a written statement giving certain particulars of the terms of employment had greatly strengthened the likelihood of incorporation, since the written notice was allowed to refer directly to the collective agreement. If the employee accepted the terms of the written statement without demur, the giving and the receipt of the notice would, in the absence of any indication to the contrary, often be treated as having the effect of incorporating the terms of the collective agreement into the individual contract of employment of each employee. ³⁵⁹ However, under the current legislation, the facility of reference to collective agreements is restricted to certain particulars only, ³⁶⁰ and the written particulars are required to specify any collective agreements which directly affect the terms and conditions of the employment in question. ³⁶¹ Moreover, it should be remembered that the written particulars are merely strong, and not conclusive, evidence of the terms of the contract, ³⁶² unless, perhaps, the employee signs a copy of the particulars which is retained by the employer and the document can be regarded as the contract itself. ³⁶³ Where the written particulars are regarded merely as evidence of the contract, rather than the contract itself, there should accordingly be no objection to parol evidence tending to add to, vary or contradict the effect of the written particulars; but once the written statement is regarded as an actual contractual instrument, the parol evidence rule does come into effect against evidence of inconsistent verbal agreements. ³⁶⁴

^{1.} Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

^{325.} Holland v London Society of Compositors (1924) 40 T.L.R. 440.

^{326.} Rookes v Barnard [1961] 2 All E.R. 825, 827 (there is no mention of this in [1964] A.C. 1129, but it was doubted in the Court of Appeal [1963] 1 Q.B. 623, 675); Edwards v Skyways Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 349, 354, 357 (“representatives”: it was conceded in this case that the union was acting as agent; the court also treated the negotiated terms of settlement as a standing

- offer by the company, which each individual employee could “accept”: [1964] 1 W.L.R. 349 at 353; Chappell v Times Newspapers Ltd [1975] I.C.R. 145, 172 D, H.
- 327. Discussed by Kahn-Freund (1942) 6 M.L.R. 112; in Flanders and Clegg, The System of Industrial Relations in Great Britain (1954), pp.55 et seq. and in Ginsberg, Law and Opinion in England in the 20th Century (1959), pp.215-263; Wedderburn (1961) 24 M.L.R. 572, 583; (1962) 25 M.L.R. 513, 526-530; and in The Worker and the Law, 3rd edn, pp.327-329; cf. Ford Motor Co Ltd v AEF [1969] 2 Q.B. 303, 331.
- 328. Deane v Craik, The Times, March 16, 1962 (see Wedderburn, Cases and Materials on Labour Law (1967), p.459; sed contra in The Worker and the Law, 3rd edn, p.328). cf. Edwards v Skyways Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 349; The Burton Group v Smith [1977] I.R.L.R. 350.
- 329. [2002] I.C.R. 765.
- 330. Hooker v Lange, Bell & Co [1937] 4 L.J.N.C.C.R. 199 (“at union rates”); Young v Canadian Northern Ry [1931] A.C. 83; National Coal Board v Galley [1958] 1 W.L.R. 16. cf. Hulland v Saunders [1945] K.B. 78; Secretary of State for Employment v ASLEF (No.2) [1972] I.C.R. 19, especially, per Roskill L.J. at 69.
- 331. National Coal Board v Galley [1958] 1 W.L.R. 16. cf. Spring v National Amalgamated Stevedores and Dockers’ Society [1956] 1 W.L.R. 585.
- 332. R. v Industrial Disputes Tribunal Ex p. Portland UDC [1955] 1 W.L.R. 949; National Coal Board v National Union of Mineworkers [1986] I.C.R. 736.
- 333. See above, paras 40-040—40-042 and see below, para.40-054.
- 334. Gascol Conversions Ltd v Mercer [1974] I.C.R. 420; cf. Secretary of State for Employment v ASLEF (No.2) [1972] I.C.R. 19, 53H-54A, 69C-70F; System Floors Ltd v Daniel [1981] I.R.L.R. 475.
- 335. See below, para.40-053; Bloomfield v Springfield Hosiery Ltd [1972] I.C.R. 91, 93E.
- 336. Marley v Forward Trust Group Ltd [1986] I.C.R. 891.
- 337. [1995] I.R.L.R. 377.
- 338. National Coal Board v Galley [1958] 1 W.L.R. 16; see as to the effect of the employer’s resignation from the employers’ federation that made the agreement, Burroughs Machines Ltd v Timmoney [1977] I.R.L.R. 404. Compare, however, Ackinclose v Gateshead MBC [2005] I.R.L.R. 79, EAT, where it was held that when a contract of employment only made reference to a national agreement as the relevant collective agreement without any further reference or incorporation, a successor agreement would not thereby be incorporated so as to take effect following transfer of the employment in question from a local authority employer party to the national bargaining structure to a private employer not party to that structure. Contrast, however, Griffiths v Salisbury DC [2004] EWCA Civ 162, where an agreement implementing the national agreement was held to be incorporated in the individual contract and where therefore a backdated pay freeze imposed under that agreement was effective.
- 339. Robertson v British Gas Corp [1983] I.C.R. 351; Gibbons v Associated British Ports [1985] I.R.L.R. 376. See also now Whent v T Cartledge Ltd [1997] I.R.L.R. 153.
- 340. On the doctrine of implied terms, see Vol.I, Ch.14, especially para.14-021.
- 341. There is some uncertainty about the extent of the requirement of knowledge. See Hepple, Employment Law, 4th edn (1981), para.267. See Deakin & Morris, Labour Law, 6th edn (2012), para.4.29, “The ‘bridge term’”.
- 342. McLea v Essex Lines (1933) 45 L.L. Rep. 254; Tomlinson v LMS Ry [1944] 1 All E.R. 537;

Hulland v Saunders [1945] K.B. 78; Joel v Cammell Laird (Ship Repairers) Ltd (1969) 4 I.T.R. 206. cf. incorporation of customary terms: Sagar v Ridehalgh [1931] 1 Ch. 310.

- 343. Dudfield v Ministry of Works; Faithfull v Admiralty, The Times, January 24, 1964 (printed in Wedderburn, Cases and Materials on Labour Law (1967), pp.296-300).
- 344. cf. Grieve v Imperial Tobacco Ltd, The Guardian, April 30, 1963 (see Wedderburn at p.118).
- 345. Clift v West Riding CC, The Times, April 10, 1964 (see Wedderburn at p.293). The written particulars to be supplied to the employee under the contracts of employment legislation, see above, paras 40-040—40-042, will now usually specify to which agreement reference is made.
- 346. Loman and Henderson v Merseyside Transport Services Ltd (1967) 3 K.I.R. 726, 732; Gascol Conversions Ltd v Mercer [1974] I.C.R. 420, 425 B-C. Compare also the decision of the Court of Appeal in Keeley v Fosroc International Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 1277, [2006] I.R.L.R. 961, and the comments by Auld L.J. on the construction of which terms will be treated as apt for incorporation where a staff handbook or collective agreement is generally incorporated (by express words) into individual contracts of employment.
- 347. Alexander v Standard Telephones and Cables (No.2) [1991] I.R.L.R. 286. Compare now Anderson v London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority [2013] EWCA Civ 321, [2013] I.R.L.R. 459 in which Maurice Kay L.J. sets out, at [16], a general approach to the incorporation by implication into contracts of employment of terms from collective agreements which treats the whole issue as one of “giving a fair meaning to the words used in the factual context (known to the parties) which gave rise to the agreement”, following the approach which Sir Thomas Bingham M.R. had taken in Adams v British Airways Plc [1996] I.R.L.R. 574 (CA).
- 348. Wandsworth LBC v D'Silva [1998] I.R.L.R. 193.
- 349. [2001] I.R.L.R. 132; upheld by the Court of Appeal: [2002] I.C.R. 910.
- 350. As to which see below, para.40-097.
- 351. Barber v Manchester Regional Hospital Board [1958] 1 W.L.R. 181, 190. cf. Rodwell v Thomas [1944] K.B. 596, 601; British Leyland Ltd v McQuilken [1978] I.R.L.R. 245 (long-term planning agreement). Compare Kaur v MG Rover Group Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 1507, [2005] I.R.L.R. 40, where a set of provisions concerning job security in a collective agreement were held to be inappropriate for incorporation into individual contracts of employment, as to certain of them because they were aspirational in character, and as to certain others because they were essentially collective undertakings rather than undertakings to individuals. Compare also now Malone v British Airways Plc [2010] EWHC 302 (QB), [2010] EWCA Civ 1225 where it was held both at first instance and on appeal to the Court of Appeal that a collective agreement regarding cabin crew complements was intended for planning for the deployment of cabin crew generally and not apt for incorporation into the contract of employment of each individual crew member.
- 352. See below, para.40-053.
- 353. cf. Simpson v Kodak [1948] 2 K.B. 184.
- 354. Defined in s.5.
- 355. See above, para.40-050.
- 356. See above, para.40-051.
- 357. See above, para.40-051.
- 358. See above, paras 40-040 et seq.
- 359. Camden Exhibition and Display Ltd v Lynott [1966] 1 Q.B. 555, 562–563, 565; Grime (1966) 29

M.L.R. 199; Tarmac Roadstone Holdings Ltd v Peacock [1973] I.C.R. 273; Soutar v Fisher (1975) 10 I.T.R. 38.

360. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.2(2), (3) and s.6.

361. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.1(4)(j).

362. Turriff Construction Co Ltd v Bryant (1967) 2 I.T.R. 292, 294; Gascol Conversions Ltd v Mercer [1974] I.C.R. 420, 427; Jones v Associated Tunnelling Ltd [1981] I.R.L.R. 477, 481, paras 21-22. See also above, para.40-044.

363. cf. Gascol Conversions Ltd v Mercer [1974] I.C.R. 420; System Floors Ltd v Daniel [1981] I.R.L.R. 475, 476, para.10 treats this as applicable only where the employee acknowledges receipt of the document specifically as a correct contract.

364. Gascol Conversions Ltd v Mercer, above, at 426F.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 40 - Employment ¹
Section 4. - Collective Agreements and Statutory Awards of Terms
(c) - Statutory Awards of Terms

Statutory awards of terms generally

40-055

It is appropriate to consider together with collective agreements certain statutory and governmental provisions which have this in common with collective agreements, that they establish terms and conditions of employment which are incorporated into the individual contracts of employment within the sphere of their operation. In these instances, the contract of employment provides the means of giving legal effect to a process by which terms of employment are determined at a collective level. ³⁶⁵

Statutory arbitration awards following non-disclosure

40-056

A source of implied terms in individual contracts of employment arises from the provisions of the Employment Protection Act 1975 concerning disclosure of information by employers to trade unions. ³⁶⁶ In these provisions, the sanction upon the employer consists in the right of the aggrieved trade union to apply to the Central Arbitration Committee, ³⁶⁷ complaining of the employer's breach of duty ³⁶⁸ and making a claim for changes in the terms and conditions of employment of the relevant group of employees. ³⁶⁹ If the Committee upholds the complaint of breach of duty, it may make an award ³⁷⁰ as to certain terms and conditions ³⁷¹ of employment which will form part of the individual contracts of employment ³⁷² of the employees concerned. ³⁷³ In this way, the collective procedural duties of the employer (that is, in certain circumstances to disclose information to recognised trade unions for the purposes of collective bargaining) are enforced by the right of the union to obtain a compulsory arbitration by the Central Arbitration Committee whose award will take legal effect via individual contracts of employment.

Provisions for statutory awards of terms and conditions or minimum terms and conditions in particular industries ³⁷⁴

40-057

The Wages Councils system formerly provided awards of minimum terms in particular industries ³⁷⁵; the most recent provisions to be abolished were for the setting of minimum terms and conditions of employment for agricultural workers by the Agricultural Wages Board. ³⁷⁶ There are some remaining provision for the fixing by the Secretary of State of remuneration and terms and conditions of teachers employed by local education authorities. ³⁷⁷

^{1.} Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment

Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

- 365. The provisions, which fell into this category, of the Employment Protection Act 1975 concerning statutory extension of terms and conditions of employment (Sch.11) and for statutory arbitration awards following non-recognition of unions (s.16), were repealed by the Employment Act 1980 s.19.
- 366. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 ss.181–185.
- 367. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.183(1).
- 368. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.183(1) and s.184(1) (further complaint arising from failure to disclose information).
- 369. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.185(1).
- 370. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.185(3).
- 371. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992. As specified by s.185(3), (4).
- 372. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.185(5) (which also limits the subsequent variation of the terms implied into individual contracts to prevent the employer from contracting out of the award with any individual employee).
- 373. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992. As specified by s.185(3), (4).
- 374. Compare now the general minimum wage provisions of and under the National Minimum Wage Act 1998, discussed see below, para.40-080.
- 375. Until its total abolition by the Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993.
- 376. Enterprise and Regulatory Reform Act 2013 s.72, with effect from June 25, 2013: SI 2013/1455.
- 377. School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Act 1991, as significantly amended by the Education Act 2002 ss.130, 216 and Sch.22 Pt I.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 40 - Employment ¹
Section 5. - Rights and Duties Under and Associated with a Contract of Employment

Introduction

40-058

The express terms of the contract of employment will govern any aspect of the relationship between the parties which falls within those terms. But in practice many aspects of the relationship will be left to implied terms which the parties must have intended to be incorporated into the contract. ³⁷⁸ The rights and duties of the respective parties are thus often left to be governed by a set of normally implied terms, and this section will proceed to consider, first, the duties of the employee, and, secondly, the duties of the employer. It is obvious that the duty of the one party in a particular aspect will be a right when viewed from the point of view of the other. It will appear in the course of this discussion that the rights and duties under a contract of employment are in some cases the result of an interaction between common law and statute law and that in many other cases there are rights and duties associated with the contract of employment which are entirely the product of statutes. Whilst it is useful to consider the statutory consequences of a contract of employment alongside the consequences normally implied at common law, it is important to keep the two categories distinct because the statutory consequences will not normally be susceptible of exclusion by express contractual terms in the way that the common law consequences will normally be. ³⁷⁹ The rules about exclusion of statutory provisions by express contracting out are specially mentioned where necessary in the ensuing discussion; in the absence of special reference thereto, it should be assumed that the statutory rights and duties cannot be modified or excluded by contract. ³⁸⁰

¹. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

³⁷⁸. cf. see above, paras 40-049—40-054 on the incorporation of the terms of a collective agreement into the individual contract of each employee.

³⁷⁹. See below, paras 40-085—40-086, 40-093—40-099, 40-107—40-112, 40-115 (statutory consequences).

³⁸⁰. This is generally the case for the provisions of the Employment Rights Act 1996, see s.203. See also, for example, the Equality Act 2010, see below, para.40-119 and para.40-126.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 5. - Rights and Duties Under and Associated with a Contract of Employment

(a) - Duties of the Employee

Duty to exercise skill

40-059

An employee who holds himself out as being skilled to do a certain type of work and is employed on that basis impliedly undertakes that he or she possesses and will exercise reasonable skill or competence in that work; throughout the period of the employment he or she owes a duty to his or her employer to perform his or her work with reasonable skill or competence. ³⁸¹ In the leading, though now antiquated, case on this point, the defendant advertised for a scene painter, the plaintiff applied for the job and was engaged, and the defendant was held entitled to dismiss him without notice when he showed himself to be incompetent as a scene painter. ³⁸² The employee's implied undertaking that he possesses the necessary skill may include an implied undertaking by the employee to indemnify his employer if the latter is held vicariously liable to a third person in respect of a tort committed by the employee against the third person arising out of a failure to exercise that skill. ³⁸³ It has been held that an employee is expected, under the terms of his or her employment, to adapt to new methods and techniques in performing his or her duties, provided that the employer arranges for him or her to receive the necessary instruction in the new skills, and that the nature of the work does not alter so radically as to be no longer the work the employee agreed to perform. ³⁸⁴

Duty to exercise reasonable care

40-060

Even where the employee does not profess a particular skill or competence requiring training or experience, ³⁸⁵ there is an implied term in the contract that the employee will exercise reasonable care in the performance of his or her duties. ³⁸⁶ Breach of this duty will not entitle the employer to dismiss the employee summarily unless the breach goes to the root of the contract, ³⁸⁷ but it may give rise to an obligation to indemnify the employer. ³⁸⁸ It would seem that the restrictions placed upon contracting out of liabilities resulting from negligence by s.2 of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 do not apply to provisions in a contract of employment excluding, or restricting liability for breach of, this duty, because the provisions of s.2 do not extend to the contract of employment except in favour of the employee. ³⁸⁹ Under s.7 of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974, it is the duty of every employee while at work to take reasonable care for the health and safety of himself or herself and of other persons who may be affected by his or her acts or omissions at work, ³⁹⁰ and, as regards any duty imposed on the employer by any health and safety legislation, to co-operate with the employer as far as necessary to enable the duty to be complied with. ³⁹¹ This provision may give rise to criminal liability ³⁹² but does not give rise to civil liability. ³⁹³

Obedience to lawful and reasonable orders

40-061

The employee impliedly contracts to obey the lawful and reasonable orders of his or her employer (or the employer's delegate) within the scope of the employment he or she contracted to undertake: this obligation is usually discussed in relation to summary dismissal. ³⁹⁴ The scope of the employment undertaken by the employee has been held to include adaptation to new methods and techniques of performing his duties. ³⁹⁵ It is a further implied term that the employer should not require an employee to do anything illegal, such as to drive a vehicle which is not insured against third-party risks as required by the road traffic legislation ³⁹⁶; the employer will be liable to indemnify an employee if the latter is held liable to a third person as a result of the unlawful act which the employer required the employee to do. ³⁹⁷

Duty of fidelity

40-062

It is another implied term in a contract of employment that the employee will serve the employer with fidelity and in good faith. ³⁹⁸ Thus an employee, during his or her period of employment, may not solicit the customers of his or her employer to transfer their custom to him or her after he or she has left the employment ³⁹⁹; nor may the employee solicit orders from the employer's customers or suppliers, or otherwise deal with them, on his or her own behalf rather than the employer's behalf. ⁴⁰⁰ But in the absence of a special covenant ⁴⁰¹ a former employee cannot be restrained from soliciting or doing business with the customers of a former employer. ⁴⁰² This proposition has been the subject of an important reaffirmation, in the context of a contract of employment between a solicitor-employee and the firm by which he was employed in Wallace Bogan & Co v Cove. ⁴⁰³ An employee cannot, however, rid themselves of the duty of fidelity to which the employee is subject during the currency of his or her employment by wrongfully repudiating his or her contract of employment. ⁴⁰⁴ On the other hand, an employee is not in breach of his or her duty of fidelity at a given moment merely because at that time he or she intends to act subsequently in a way which would be in breach of his or her fiduciary duty. ⁴⁰⁵

Work for another employer

40-063

Acceptance of employment with one employer implies an obligation not to work for another employer so long as the first employment continues, if the other employment would be inconsistent with the first employment, ⁴⁰⁶ but there are severe restrictions upon the availability of an order for specific performance, or an injunction to enforce this kind of obligation. ⁴⁰⁷ In his or her spare time (when the employee is not obliged to work for his employer) an employee is normally entitled to work for a third person. ⁴⁰⁸ But he or she may not, consistently with his or her duty to his or her employer, do in his or her spare time something which would inflict great harm on the employer's business. ⁴⁰⁹

Duties to disclose information

40-064

A further instance of an employee's duty of fidelity is that, although the employee is under no duty to disclose his or her own previous breaches of duty, ⁴¹⁰ the employee may, in the circumstances of a particular case, be under a duty to disclose the misconduct of fellow-employees ⁴¹¹; there is, however, no authority that the latter duty is generally to be implied in a contract of employment. ⁴¹² In one case, ⁴¹³ an employee was held to be so senior in the managerial hierarchy as to have a duty in the circumstances of the case to report the misconduct of his superiors or subordinates even though thereby incriminating himself. The decision in Tesco Stores Ltd v Pook suggests that a sufficiently senior employee may in certain circumstances come under a generally implied duty to disclose his or her own breaches of trust as well as those of other employees. ⁴¹⁴ Insofar as the employee's duty of fidelity requires disclosure of his or her own or another's personal circumstances, that duty is now limited by s.4(3)(a) of the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974, which provides that such a duty shall not extend to requiring the disclosure of a spent conviction ⁴¹⁵ or any circumstances ancillary to a spent conviction, whether the conviction be one's own or another's. The section goes on to provide, inter alia, that:

“... any failure to disclose a spent conviction ... shall not be a proper ground for dismissing ... a person from any ... employment, or for prejudicing him in any way in any ... employment.” ⁴¹⁶

An employee also owes a duty to convey to his or her employer information of value to the employer which the employee obtained in the course of his or her employment; and the employee will be restrained from using the information if he or she deliberately conceals it, intending to make use of it for his or her own advantage. ⁴¹⁷

Duty to refrain from disruption

40-065

It has also been held that the employee's duty of fidelity includes a duty to refrain from wilful disruption of the functioning of the enterprise. ⁴¹⁸ Although this duty seems to extend to individual acts, ⁴¹⁹ it applies primarily as a limit upon the employee's right to take certain kinds of industrial action. It is further considered in that context later in this section. ⁴²⁰

Duty not to disclose confidential information ⁴²¹

40-066

It is an implied term in every contract of employment that the employee will not disclose or make public any professional or trade secret or confidential information which the employee learns by reason of his or her employment. ⁴²² The employee also impliedly undertakes that he or she will not use to the detriment of his or her employer any information which he or she has obtained in confidence in the course of or as a result of his or her employment. ⁴²³ This implied duty was reaffirmed and its scope further defined in Thomas Marshall Ltd v Guinle ⁴²⁴ where Megarry V.C. suggested that there were four elements in the identifying of confidential information or trade secrets which the courts will protect, namely:

- (1)
the owner's belief that release of information would be injurious to him or advantageous to rivals;
- (2)
the owner's belief in confidentiality of the information;
- (3)
the reasonableness of these beliefs;
- (4)
the assessment of the information in the light of the usage and practices of the particular industry or trade.

The employee will be restrained by injunction from publishing or using any such confidential information.⁴²⁵ And a third party who receives⁴²⁶ information conveyed to him or her in breach of confidence by an employee or former employee may also be restrained from using the information.⁴²⁷ Moreover, it appears to follow from the decision in *Seager v Copydex Ltd*⁴²⁸ that the remedy of damages may be available in such cases against both the employee or ex-employee and the third-party recipient. In one case,⁴²⁹ an employee secretly copied from his employer's order book a list of the names and addresses of customers with the intention of using it for the purpose of soliciting from them orders for himself; when he used it for this purpose he was held liable in damages, and was also restrained by injunction from making further use of the information.

40-067

An employee is, however, entitled after the termination of his employment to make use of knowledge and experience honestly acquired in the course of the employment, so long as it was not acquired surreptitiously, nor was it detailed information entrusted to the employee expressly or impliedly in confidence.⁴³⁰ So if a person, after his or her employment has ceased, embodies in a book the product of his knowledge and skill ("know-how") as a professional which was acquired in the course of his or her work, the copyright vests in him or her.⁴³¹ In the leading case of Faccenda Chicken Ltd v Fowler,⁴³² the court insisted that the duty not to disclose confidential information becomes confined, once the employee's employment has ceased, to a duty not to disclose the employer's trade secrets, and cannot be more widely invoked to place fetters on the ability of ex-employees to compete. However, the decision and reasoning of the Court of Appeal in *Thomas v Farr Plc*⁴³³ suggest that the difficulty of policing a postemployment confidentiality clause may be adduced in support of the validity of a relatively wide non-competition covenant.

Exceptions to duty of confidence

40-068

There are some exceptions to the employee's duty not to disclose secrets, although it has been held to be a breach of the contract of employment for the employee to disclose a document which is libellous.⁴³⁴ In the case of documents which disclose fraud on the part of the employer an injunction will not be granted to prevent their disclosure.⁴³⁵ The Court of Appeal has said that there is no duty to keep the information secret when it relates to misconduct on the part of the employer of such a nature that it ought in the public interest to be disclosed to those who have a proper interest in receiving it, e.g. an agreement to maintain prices which is not registered as required by restrictive trade practices legislation.⁴³⁶ It has, however, been argued⁴³⁷ that some contracts of employment may contain an implied term ousting the rule in *Bent's Brewery Co Ltd v Hogan*⁴³⁸ (which treats it as a breach of confidence on the employee's part to disclose certain information about his or her employment to trade union representatives). A further set of exceptions to the employee's duty of confidence is provided by the Public Interest Disclosure Act 1998, the provisions of which are described in a later paragraph.⁴³⁹

Duty to account

40-069

An employee is bound to account to his or her employer for all property entrusted to him or her by the employer, and for all property received by him or her from a third person for or on account of the employer.⁴⁴⁰ An employee is also obliged to account to his or her employer for any bribe,⁴⁴¹ secret profit⁴⁴² or secret commission which he or she has received in connection with the employer's affairs, or earned by virtue of his or her position as employee.⁴⁴³ The employer's right to recover the bribe or secret profit received by the employee arises despite the fact that the employee's act in receiving or earning the money was criminal, and despite the fact that the employer suffered no loss.⁴⁴⁴ A further illustration of the duty to account occurs where an employee, upon the termination of his or her employment, is obliged to repay to the employer any commission paid to the employee in advance which had not actually been earned by the employee before his or her employment terminated.⁴⁴⁵ In the important case of Nottingham University v Fishel,⁴⁴⁶ Elias J. held that the employment relationship did not give rise in and of itself to a general fiduciary duty to account, so that such a duty arises only where specific terms or aspects of the relationship give rise to it.

Inventions and patents

40-070

Sections 39–43 of the Patents Act 1977 deal with employees' inventions. ⁴⁴⁷ The details of those provisions lie outside the scope of the present work. They deal with the circumstances in which an employee's invention will be taken to belong to the employer ⁴⁴⁸; with the compensation of employees for certain inventions ⁴⁴⁹; with the amount of such compensation ⁴⁵⁰; and with the enforceability of contracts relating to employees' inventions. ⁴⁵¹

Copyright and design right

40-071

The law of copyright was restated with amendments by Pt I of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, which also conferred a design right in original designs. ⁴⁵² Under that Act, ⁴⁵³ the author of a work is the first owner of any copyright in it ⁴⁵⁴ subject (inter alia) ⁴⁵⁵ to the provision that where a literary, dramatic, musical or artistic work or a film is made by an employee in the course of his or her employment, the employer is the first owner of any copyright in the work subject to any agreement to the contrary. ⁴⁵⁶ So far as the ownership of design right is concerned, the designer is the first owner of any design right in a design which is not created in pursuance of a commission or in the course of employment. ⁴⁵⁷ However, where a design is created in pursuance of a commission, the person commissioning the design is the first owner of any design right in it ⁴⁵⁸; and where, in other cases, a design is created by an employee in the course of his or her employment, the employer is the first owner of any design right in it. ⁴⁵⁹ The provisions relating to design right are not expressly subject to agreement to the contrary; but design right is transmissible by written and signed assignment, ⁴⁶⁰ and provision is made for the assignment of prospective ownership of future design right. ⁴⁶¹

Duty to indemnify the employer ⁴⁶²

40-072

If the employee, in breach of his or her duty to an employer to exercise a reasonable degree of competence in a particular skill or to take reasonable care in his or her work, ⁴⁶³ causes damage or injury by negligence to a third person, and the employer pays damages to the third person on account of the employer's vicarious liability for the employee's tort, the employer can recover an indemnity ⁴⁶⁴ from the employee. ⁴⁶⁵ It is arguable that the indemnity need not be based on an implied term in the contract of employment to the effect that the employee undertakes to indemnify the employer in these circumstances (although courts have put it on this ground) ⁴⁶⁶; it can be based on the breach of the employee's contractual duty to take care, with the measure of damages for that breach being the amount paid to the third person (which is a reasonably foreseeable loss resulting from that breach). So where a man employed to drive a lorry negligently backed it and injured a fellowemployee, the employer was entitled to recover from the driver the full amount of damages payable to the injured employee, together with the costs of defending the action brought by the latter. ⁴⁶⁷ In another case, ⁴⁶⁸ the court held that since the employee was engaged as a storekeeper, he did not impliedly agree to indemnify his employers if he negligently injured someone by his negligence in any other capacity; thus, no contractual indemnity could be recovered from him when he injured someone by his negligent driving in the course of his employment. ⁴⁶⁹ It has been argued that this conclusion is difficult to justify: the only term which need be implied is one that the employee will take reasonable care while about his or her employer's business. ⁴⁷⁰ Although that argument might be upheld, the enforcement of the employee's duty to indemnify the employer has been considerably restricted by developments described in the next paragraph. On the other hand, it would seem that the enforcement of the implied duty to indemnify is not restricted by s.4 of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 because that applies to unreasonable indemnities arising from express terms, not from implied terms of the kind involved here. ⁴⁷¹

No general duty on employer to insure the employee against tortious liability

40-073

Even if the employer is insured against his vicarious liability, the employee will not normally be entitled to claim the benefit of the insurance (except in the case of motor insurance) ⁴⁷² since there is no privity of contract. ⁴⁷³ Nor can the employee maintain that there is an implied term in the contract of employment to the effect that the employer agrees to take out insurance cover on behalf of the employee to protect him or her from liabilities arising from any tortious act committed by him or in the course of his or her employment. ⁴⁷⁴ This seems contrary to the common expectations of the parties, ⁴⁷⁵ and although a government committee once investigated the situation, ⁴⁷⁶ no change in the law has been made by Parliament because there is an agreement ⁴⁷⁷ among nearly all insurance companies engaged in employers' liability insurance not to make claims for indemnities from employees (using the name of the employer under the doctrine of subrogation) ⁴⁷⁸ except in cases of collusion or wilful misconduct by the employee, or where the employer consents to the claim being brought. ⁴⁷⁹ The agreement made by the insurance companies is now reinforced by judicial reluctance to compel an employer to seek indemnity from his employee at the instance of an insurer of the employer claiming to be subrogated to the employer's right against the employee. ⁴⁸⁰

Contribution

40-074

Since the employer who is liable under the doctrine of vicarious liability is a joint tortfeasor with the employee who committed the tort, the employer is also entitled to contribution (which may, in the court's discretion, amount to a full indemnity) ⁴⁸¹ from the employee under statute. ⁴⁸² If some blame attaches to the employer, e.g. for giving a task to the employee for which he or she lacked sufficient experience, the employer may not recover a full indemnity. ⁴⁸³

Authority of employee to make contracts

40-075

The relationship between employer and employee does not, of itself, confer any authority on the employee to make contracts binding on the employer. But an employee may, in appropriate circumstances, be an agent of his or her employer with such authority; the ordinary principles of agency apply to this situation, and reference should be made to the chapter on agency. ⁴⁸⁴

Duties in relation to industrial action—(1) strikes

40-076

It used to be thought clear that if employees strike without giving the required notice to terminate their contracts they will be in breach of contract when they withdraw their labour. ⁴⁸⁵ In Rookes v Barnard ⁴⁸⁶ it was conceded that a "no strike" clause in the relevant collective agreement had been incorporated into each employee's contract of employment ⁴⁸⁷; hence it was held that it would be a breach of contract for the employees to strike. Moreover, some dicta in that case ⁴⁸⁸ made it clear that any strike, even in the absence of a "no strike" clause, and even if the strikers gave proper notice to terminate their contracts, ⁴⁸⁹ would be in breach of contract because there was no genuine intention to terminate the contracts. As a result of these dicta, the normal strike notice came to be regarded as a notice of intention to break the contracts of employment by suspending performance of the employees' duties, and not a notice of termination, since this would affect pension rights, rights to holidays with pay, etc. ⁴⁹⁰ It later appeared, however, from the decision in Morgan v Fry ⁴⁹¹ that some contracts of employment may be subject to an implied term conferring a right to suspend the performance of the contract by way of strike action, provided no less notice of the action is given than would be required for a lawful termination of the contract. Section 147 of the Industrial Relations Act

1971 provided a statutory rule about the effect of strike action upon contracts of employment, but with the repeal of that provision in 1974,⁴⁹² the common law again prevailed. The common law position was re-examined in *Simmons v Hoover Ltd*⁴⁹³ with the conclusion that strike action did not operate to suspend the contract of employment but as a repudiatory breach of the contract which gave the employer the option of accepting the repudiation as a termination of the contract.⁴⁹⁴ It was held that:

“... if Morgan v Fry has introduced into the law the concept of the suspension of a contract it is only an embryonic form, for none of the consequences has been worked out; and it is difficult to see how this could be done except by legislation.”⁴⁹⁵

Duties in relation to industrial action—(2) action other than strikes

40-077

The question of whether various forms of industrial action other than strikes involve breach of contract on the part of employees has to be considered in relation to the particular kind of act or omission concerned. The “work-to-rule”, although designed not to involve breach of contract, may nevertheless be treated as the breach of an implied contractual duty to refrain from disruption of the functioning and purposes of the employing enterprise: such a duty, which can be characterised as a duty of co-operation or an aspect of the duty of fidelity,⁴⁹⁶ was recognised in Secretary of State for Employment v ASLEF (No.2).⁴⁹⁷ Such an implied term was held, in the case of *British Telecommunications Plc v Ticehurst*⁴⁹⁸ to have been breached by a concerted action of withdrawal of goodwill on the part of managerial employees. On the other hand, the duty of co-operation probably does not go to the lengths of requiring the employee to undertake to work normally in response to an ultimatum by the employer.⁴⁹⁹ The “go-slow” may be expected to involve breach of contract as a contravention of the employer’s implied standing instructions about how work is to be carried out. The “blacking” of particular goods or equipment (in the sense of refusal to handle or use them) may constitute breach on similar reasoning; but may avoid the characterisation of breach if the employer has not specifically required the particular goods or equipment to be handled or used.⁵⁰⁰ On the other hand, one case treated refusal by miners to descend in a lift to work with non-union employees as not merely breach of contract but tantamount to total withdrawal of labour.⁵⁰¹ The contractual status of an overtime ban will depend upon whether the employee can be regarded as having contracted to work such overtime hours as the employer may require him or her to.⁵⁰² It is possible for the employee to be under such an obligation although the employer may not correspondingly contract to provide a fixed minimum or maximum of overtime work.⁵⁰³ The effect of industrial action other than strikes upon entitlement to remuneration is considered in a later section.⁵⁰⁴

^{1.} Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

^{381.} Harmer v Cornelius (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 236. cf. Jones v Manchester Corp [1952] 2 Q.B. 852; Lister v Romford Ice and Cold Storage Co Ltd [1957] A.C. 555 (lorry driver). The terms of the contract may make the employer sole judge of the employee’s competence, provided the employer decides bona fide: Diggle v Ogston Motor Co (1915) 112 L.T. 1029.

^{382.} Harmer v Cornelius (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 236. As to summary dismissal, see below, para. 40-189. As to unfair dismissal, see below, para.40-223.

^{383.} See below, para.40-077.

^{384.} Cresswell v Board of Inland Revenue [1984] I.C.R. 508.

- 385. See above, para.40-059.
- 386. Lister v Romford Ice and Cold Storage Co Ltd [1957] A.C. 555; Janata Bank v Ahmed [1981] I.C.R. 791. And see the cases cited see below, para.40-189.
- 387. See below, para.40-183.
- 388. See below, para.40-072. But cf. Harvey v RG O'Dell Ltd [1958] 2 Q.B. 78 (storekeeper does not warrant his skill as driver: see below, para.40-072).
- 389. Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 s.1(2) and Sch.1 para.4.
- 390. s.7(a).
- 391. s.7(b).
- 392. s.33(1)(a), (3).
- 393. s.47(1)(a), (4).
- 394. See below, para.40-188. As to unfair dismissal, see below, paras 40-222 et seq.
- 395. Cresswell v Board of Inland Revenue [1984] I.C.R. 508; see above, para.40-059. However, Bull v Nottinghamshire Fire and Rescue Authority [2007] EWCA Civ 240, [2007] B.L.G.R. 439 indicates that the employer cannot unilaterally impose its managerial aspirations without clear evidence of their incorporation into the contracts of employment in question.
- 396. Gregory v Ford [1951] 1 All E.R. 121. cf. Semtex Ltd v Gladstone [1954] 1 W.L.R. 945.
- 397. Gregory v Ford [1951] 1 All E.R. 121. See below, para.40-114; cf. Vol.I, para.29-126.
- 398. Robb v Green [1895] 2 Q.B. 315; Wessex Dairies Ltd v Smith [1935] 2 K.B. 80; Hivac Ltd v Park Royal Scientific Instruments Ltd [1946] Ch. 169; Sanders v Parry [1967] 1 W.L.R. 753. See also Morison v Moat (1851) 9 Hare 241. It was confirmed in Lonmar Global Risks Ltd v West [2010] EWHC 2878 (QB), [2011] I.R.L.R. 138, reiterating the view previously taken in University of Nottingham v Fishel [2000] I.C.R. 1462, that the duty of loyalty or good faith is not without more to be equated with a fiduciary obligation; compare the discussion of the “duty to account” in para. 40-069. Compare also Threlfall v ECD Insight Ltd [2012] EWHC 3543 (QB), [2013] I.R.L.R. 185 where Lang J. reinforces the proposition that a senior employee with a duty of fidelity as to act in good faith vis-à-vis the employer is nevertheless not thereby necessarily or ordinarily under a fiduciary obligation to that employer. The contrast between the duty of fidelity owed by an employee and the fiduciary duty owed by a company director had also been emphasised by the Court of Appeal in Ranson v Customer Systems Plc [2012] EWCA Civ 841, [2012] I.R.L.R. 769 and had also been invoked by the Court of Appeal in Caterpillar Logistics Services (UK) Ltd v Huesca de Crean [2012] EWCA Civ 156, [2012] 3 All E.R. 129 as a factor in refusing to the employer of barring-out relief against a former employee.
- 399. Wessex Dairies Ltd v Smith [1935] 2 K.B. 80; Sanders v Parry [1967] 1 W.L.R. 753.
- 400. Thomas Marshall Ltd v Guinle [1978] I.C.R. 905, 922E–H.
- 401. National Provincial Bank of England v Marshall (1888) 40 Ch. D. 112.
- 402. Re Irish (1888) 4 Ch. D. 49. cf. Faccenda Chicken Ltd v Fowler [1986] I.C.R. 297; Balston Ltd v Headline Filters Ltd [1987] F.S.R. 330. But a former employee may be restrained from using trade secrets or confidential information: see below, paras 40-068—40-069. In Imam-Sadeque v Bluebay Asset Management (Services) Ltd [2012] EWHC 3511 (QB), [2013] I.R.L.R. 344 it was confirmed that, although the employee was relieved of the obligation of work while on “garden leave”, the negative obligations imposed on him by his employment contract remained part of his duties.

- 403. [1997] I.R.L.R. 453.
- 404. Thomas Marshall Ltd v Guinle [1978] I.C.R. 905, 920H–921C. cf. Evening Standard Ltd v Henderson [1987] I.C.R. 588.
- 405. Horcal Ltd v Gatland [1984] I.R.L.R. 288.
- 406. cf. the special cases of Lumley v Wagner (1852) 1 De G.M. & G. 604; National Provincial Bank of England v Marshall (1888) 40 Ch. D. 112.
- 407. These remedies are discussed see below, paras 40-207—40-209. cf. Evening Standard Ltd v Henderson [1987] I.C.R. 588. Compare also GFI Group Ltd v Eaglestone [1994] I.R.L.R. 119.
- 408. Hivac Ltd v Park Royal Scientific Instruments Ltd [1946] Ch. 169. cf. Nova Plastics Ltd v Froggatt [1982] I.R.L.R. 146.
- 409. Hivac Ltd v Park Royal Scientific Instruments Ltd [1946] Ch. 169 at 178 (spare-time work for trade rival was restrained by injunction).
- 410. Bell v Lever Bros [1932] A.C. 161.
- 411. Swain v West (Butchers) Ltd [1936] 3 All E.R. 261. Compare also Dunn v AAH Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 183, [2010] I.R.L.R. 709, with regard to disclosure by a finance director of fraud in which an ex-employee was implicated.
- 412. Swain v West (Butchers) Ltd [1936] 3 All E.R. 261.
- 413. Sybron Corp v Rochem Ltd [1985] Ch. 299.
- 414. [2003] EWHC 823 (Ch), [2004] I.R.L.R. 618. See also Thomson Ecology Ltd v Apem Ltd [2013] EWHC 2875 (Ch), [2014] I.R.L.R. 184.
- 415. Defined by s.1 by reference to a set “rehabilitation period”. Section 56 of the Data Protection Act 1998 makes it a criminal offence to require job applicants or existing employees to make subject access requests in lieu of providing a normal criminal record check, which would not disclose spent convictions.
- 416. Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 s.4(3)(b). cf. Property Guards Ltd v Taylor and Kershaw [1982] I.R.L.R. 175.
- 417. Cranleigh Precision Engineering Co Ltd v Bryant [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1293, 1319; Industrial Development Consultants Ltd v Cooley [1972] 1 W.L.R. 443.
- 418. Secretary of State for Employment v ASLEF (No.2) [1972] 2 Q.B. 455, 491, 498, 509. See also below, para.40-077.
- 419. Secretary of State for Employment v ASLEF (No.2) [1972] 2 Q.B. 455 at 492, 508.
- 420. See below, paras 40-076—40-077.
- 421. North [1965] J.B.L. 397, [1966] J.B.L. 31, [1968] J.B.L. 32; (1972) 12 J.S.P.T.L. 149; Gareth Jones (1970) 86 L.Q.R. 463.
- 422. Amber Size and Chemical Co v Menzel [1913] 2 Ch. 239; Alpertons Rubber Co v Manning (1917) 86 L.J.Ch. 377; British Industrial Plastics v Ferguson [1940] 1 All E.R. 479; Initial Services Ltd v Putterill [1968] 1 Q.B. 396. As to particulars in an action for breach of this term, see Sorbo Rubber Sponge Products v Defries (1930) 47 R.P.C. 454.
- 423. Merryweather v Moore [1892] 2 Ch. 518; Bent's Brewery Co v Hogan [1945] 2 All E.R. 570; Cranleigh Precision Engineering Ltd v Bryant [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1293. cf., as to the supplying of information about fellow-employees to a competitor interested in recruitment, GD Searle & Co Ltd v Celltech Ltd [1982] F.S.R. 92.

- 424. [1978] I.C.R. 905, 926D–G. The implied duty here served to protect the employer from “use” of the information, whereas the express covenant in question dealt only with “disclosure” thereof.
- 425. Merryweather v Moore [1892] 2 Ch. 518; Robb v Green [1895] 2 Q.B. 315; Amber Size & Chemical Co v Menzel [1913] 2 Ch. 239; Reid and Sigrist Ltd v Moss and Mechanism Ltd (1932) 49 R.P.C. 461; Under Water Welders & Repairers Ltd v Street and Longthorne [1968] R.P.C. 498; Industrial Furnaces Ltd v Reaves [1970] R.P.C. 605. But what was previously a trade secret of the employer may cease to be such when a specification for a patent relating to the secret is published by the employer: Mustad & Son v Dosen (1928) [1964] 1 W.L.R. 109n. (It is otherwise if publication is by a third person: Cranleigh Precision Engineering Ltd v Bryant, above, at 1311–1320.)
- 426. It is not necessary that the third party should know when he receives the information that it is given to him in breach of confidence: Printers & Finishers Ltd v Holloway [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1, 7. See also Prince Albert v Strange (1849) 1 MacN. & G. 25.
- 427. Cranleigh Precision Engineering Ltd v Bryant, above. See also Saltman Engineering Co Ltd v Campbell Engineering Co Ltd (1963) 65 R.P.C. 203, 213, 215.
- 428. [1967] 1 W.L.R. 923; on the quantum of damages, see Seager v Copydex Ltd (No.2) [1969] 1 W.L.R. 809.
- 429. Robb v Green [1895] 2 Q.B. 315. See also Louis v Smellie (1896) 73 L.T. 226; Baker v Gibbons [1972] 1 W.L.R. 693
- 430. Morris v Saxelby [1915] 2 Ch. 57, 88; affirmed [1916] 1 A.C. 688; United Indigo Chemical Co v Robinson (1931) 49 R.P.C. 178; Wessex Dairies Ltd v Smith [1935] 2 K.B. 80, 89; Worsley & Co v Cooper [1939] 1 All E.R. 290; Printers & Finishers Ltd v Holloway [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1; United Sterling Corp Ltd v Felton & Mannion [1974] R.P.C. 162. On express covenants relating to trade secrets, see Vol.I, para.16-118.
- 431. Stevenson, Jordan and Harrison v Macdonald and Evans [1952] 1 T.L.R. 101. On copyright, see below, para.40-071.
- 432. [1986] I.C.R. 297; compare also Balston Ltd v Headline Filters Ltd [1987] F.S.R. 330.
- 433. [2007] EWCA Civ 118, [2007] I.C.R. 932.
- 434. Weld-Blundell v Stephens [1919] 1 K.B. 520, [1919] A.C. 956; Bradstreets British Ltd v Harold Mitchell & Carapanayoti Co Ltd [1933] Ch. 190.
- 435. Gartside v Outram (1856) 26 L.J.Ch. 113.
- 436. Initial Services Ltd v Putterill [1968] 1 Q.B. 396.
- 437. Hepple, Employment Law, 4th edn (1981), para.312.
- 438. [1945] 2 All E.R. 570.
- 439. See below, para.40-159.
- 440. Biddle v Bond (1865) 6 B. & S. 225, 231; Parker v McKenna (1874) L.R. 10 Ch. App. 96.
- 441. Att-Gen v Goddard (1929) 98 L.J.K.B. 743.
- 442. Reading v Att-Gen [1951] A.C. 507.

- 443. See Vol.I, para.29-164; see also Industrial Development Consultants Ltd v Cooley [1972] 1 W.L.R. 443.
- 444. Reading v Att-Gen [1951] A.C. 507.
- 445. Bronester Ltd v Priddle [1961] 1 W.L.R. 1294. (The obligation will depend on the construction of the particular contract of employment.) cf. as to accidental overpayment of wages, Avon CC v Howlett [1983] 1 W.L.R. 605; Att-Gen's Reference No.1 of 1983 [1984] 3 All E.R. 369.
- 446. [2000] I.C.R. 1462 QBD. The approach taken in that case was followed and developed by the Court of Appeal in Helmet Integrated Systems Ltd v Tunnard [2006] EWCA Civ 1735, [2007] I.R.L.R. 126, to the effect that employees do not automatically owe fiduciary obligations to their employer as a consequence merely of their general duty of loyalty, so that in the instant case the employee owed no fiduciary obligation in respect of activities during employment which were preparatory, but no more than preparatory, to competitive activity in which the employee was planning to engage after leaving his current employment.
- 447. Phillips & Hoolahan, Employees' Inventions in the United Kingdom, Law and Practice (1982).
- 448. s.39.
- 449. s.40.
- 450. s.41.
- 451. s.42.
- 452. Pt III of the Act.
- 453. In force, so far as relevant, from August 1, 1989.
- 454. s.11(1).
- 455. See s.11(3) (Crown copyright, parliamentary copyright, copyright of international organisations).
- 456. s.11(2) as amended by SI 1996/2967.
- 457. s.215(1). (See also s.219.) (Note the special provision of s.220 (qualification by reference to first marketing).)
- 458. s.215. (See also s.219.)
- 459. s.215(3).
- 460. s.222.
- 461. s.223.
- 462. See Atiyah, Vicarious Liability in the Law of Torts (1967), pp.421–432.
- 463. See above, paras 40-059—40-060.
- 464. The employer may, alternatively, be entitled to claim contribution from his employee: see below, para.40-074.
- 465. Lister v Romford Ice and Cold Storage Co Ltd [1957] A.C. 555; Semtex Ltd v Gladstone [1954] 1 W.L.R. 945.
- 466. Lister v Romford Ice and Cold Storage Co Ltd [1957] A.C. 555; Harvey v RG O'Dell [1958] 2 Q.B. 78.

- 467. Lister v Romford Ice and Cold Storage Co Ltd [1957] A.C. 555.
- 468. Harvey v RG O'Dell Ltd [1958] 2 Q.B. 78. (Contribution amounting to a full indemnity under a statute was recovered: see below, para.40-074).
- 469. See n.386, above.
- 470. Jolowicz (1959) 22 M.L.R. 71, 289; Atiyah at p.424.
- 471. Compare above, para.38-219. In any event, s.4 protects a person “dealing as consumer”—see above, para.38-221 (which relate to the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/2083)); and in its decision in Keen v Commerzbank AG [2006] EWCA Civ 1536, [2007] I.C.R. 623 the Court of Appeal makes clear its view that this does not include an employee.
- 472. Road Traffic Act 1988 s.148(4). See Tattersall v Drysdale [1935] 2 K.B. 174; Austin v Zurich General Accident Insurance Co Ltd [1944] 2 All E.R. 243, 248; affirmed on other grounds: [1945] 1 All E.R. 316; Semtex Ltd v Gladstone [1954] 1 W.L.R. 945.
- 473. See Vol.I, Ch.18.
- 474. Lister v Romford Ice and Cold Storage Co Ltd [1957] A.C. 555 (a majority decision). Gregory v Ford [1951] 1 All E.R. 121 should still be applicable where insurance on behalf of the employee is still compulsory. See Deakin & Morris, Labour Law, 6th edn (2012), para.4.108 for an argument about the possible impact of the implied obligation of mutual trust and confidence, as to which compare below, paras 40-150—40-153.
- 475. Williams, 20 M.L.R. 220, 437; Jolowicz [1956] C.L.J. 101, [1957] C.L.J. 21; (1959) 22 M.L.R. 71, 189. Compare Deakin & Morris, Labour Law, 6th edn (2012), para.4.108.
- 476. See Lord Gardiner (1959) 22 M.L.R. 652.
- 477. Whitmore, Employers' Liability Insurance (1962), p.18, publishes the text.
- 478. See below, para.40-090.
- 479. For other details of these arrangements, see Atiyah at pp.426—427.
- 480. Morris v Ford Motor Co [1973] Q.B. 792.
- 481. Ryan v Fildes [1938] 3 All E.R. 517; Semtex Ltd v Gladstone [1954] 1 W.L.R. 945.
- 482. Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978 s.1. See Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), para.4—36—4—38; Ronex Properties Ltd v John Laing Construction Ltd [1983] Q.B. 398; Harper v Gray & Walker (a firm) [1985] 1 W.L.R. 1196.
- 483. Jones v Manchester Corp [1952] 2 Q.B. 852. See Atiyah at pp.428—432.
- 484. See above, Ch.31.
- 485. e.g. Parkin v South Hetton Coal Co Ltd (1907) 97 L.T. 98; affirmed 98 L.T. 162.
- 486. [1964] A.C. 1129.
- 487. See above, paras 40-050—40-054.
- 488. [1964] A.C. 1129, 1204, 1237. cf. in the Court of Appeal [1963] 1 Q.B. 623, 682—683. See Grunfeld, Modern Trade Union Law (1966), pp.317—334.
- 489. Under s.86 of the Employment Rights Act 1996, most employees must now give not less than one week's notice to terminate their contract, see below, para.40-163.

- 490. JT Stratford & Son Ltd v Lindley [1965] A.C. 269, 285. The Contracts of Employment Act 1963 Sch.I para.7(2), assumed that some strikes were not in breach of contract since it provided that “continuity of employment” was not to be interrupted unless a strike was in breach of contract (cf. para.11(1) of the Sch.); these words were accordingly repealed: Redundancy Payments Act 1965 s.37 (see now Employment Rights Act 1996 s.216).
- 491. [1968] 2 Q.B. 710.
- 492. Trade Union and Labour Relations Act 1974 s.1.
- 493. [1977] I.C.R. 61.
- 494. [1977] I.C.R. 61 at 76A–F. cf. Chappell v Times Newspapers Ltd [1975] I.C.R. 145, 174H–175A (where Lord Denning M.R. had been clear that a strike was a breach, though less clear that it was a repudiation of the contract); Haddow v ILEA [1979] I.C.R. 202. For an argument that the repudiation analysis does not apply where the strike is engineered or provoked by the employer, see Hepple, Employment Law, 4th edn (1981), para.491. For the question whether strike action may constitute not just repudiation but also self-dismissal, see below, para.40-192.
- 495. [1977] I.C.R. 61, 75H.
- 496. See above, paras 40-062—40-065.
- 497. [1972] 2 Q.B. 455, 491–492, 498, 508–509. (See Napier (1972) 1 I.L.J. 125.) cf. Solihull Metropolitan Borough v NUT [1985] I.R.L.R. 211 (in relation to teachers’ lunchtime duties).
- 498. [1992] I.C.R. 383.
- 499. See Fisher v York Trailers Ltd [1979] I.C.R. 834, 838A–C, per Slynn J. cf. Chappell v Times Newspapers Ltd [1975] I.C.R. 145 (which indicates, however, that the employee may be unable to enforce the contract against the employer in such a situation: see below, para.40-209); compare also, however, British Telecommunications Plc v Ticehurst [1992] I.C.R. 383.
- 500. Thomson & Co Ltd v Deakin [1952] 1 Ch. 646.
- 501. Bowes & Partners Ltd v Press [1894] 1 Q.B. 202.
- 502. cf. Camden Exhibition & Display Ltd v Lynott [1966] 1 Q.B. 555.
- 503. e.g. Tarmac Roadstone Holdings Ltd v Peacock [1973] I.C.R. 273.
- 504. See below, para.40-092.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 5. - Rights and Duties Under and Associated with a Contract of Employment

(b) - Duties of the Employer

(i) - Remuneration

Remuneration

40-078

The duty of the employer to remunerate an employee for services will normally ⁵⁰⁵ be found by construing the terms of the contract of employment in the light of the particular circumstances. ⁵⁰⁶ The remuneration will frequently be specified in a collective agreement, ⁵⁰⁷ whose terms are incorporated into individual contracts of employment ⁵⁰⁸; or the remuneration may be fixed by some special negotiating machinery or statutory authority. ⁵⁰⁹ Remuneration during illness is discussed in a separate paragraph. ⁵¹⁰ Most problems of construction will arise in the case of special terms in individual contracts. Thus, where an employee agreed to look for payment only to some particular fund and not to the employer personally, the employee had no right of action against the latter in the event of failure to recover from the fund. ⁵¹¹ If the contract provides for the employee to receive a sum part of which is stated to be a salary and part to be for expenses, the whole contract will be unenforceable if the provision relating to expenses is intended to evade tax liabilities. ⁵¹² It is a basic principle that an employee is paid for carrying out contractual duties, and must show himself or herself ready and willing to do so if he or she is to claim the corresponding contractual remuneration, so that where, for instance, the employee refuses to work according to new methods which are within his or her terms and conditions of employment, the employer is entitled to withhold payment. ⁵¹³ Difficult questions of construction arise with regard to the complex compensation and benefit arrangements which are frequently made with managerial or executive employees. In Mallone v BPB Industries Plc, ⁵¹⁴ the Court of Appeal construed the discretion to cancel mature options under a senior executive share option scheme as being limited by the requirement that it be exercised rationally with regard to the performance of the employee in question; a similar construction was applied with regard to performance bonus in Clark v Nomura International Plc. ⁵¹⁵

No express or fixed provision for remuneration

40-079

If the contract is silent as to remuneration, but the circumstances ⁵¹⁶ show that the services of the employee were not to be rendered gratuitously, ⁵¹⁷ there is early authority to the effect that the law will imply a term by which the employer undertakes to pay a reasonable sum of money by way of remuneration. ⁵¹⁸ In fixing what is a reasonable remuneration the court must look at all the circumstances, including conversations and correspondence between the parties, to see what sum they considered reasonable. ⁵¹⁹ The principle that a term specifying a "reasonable" remuneration will be implied when the exact amount has not been fixed extends to additional remuneration as well as to basic remuneration; thus where an employer wrote to his secretary saying that instead of a rise in salary, he would pay her a bonus on net trading profits of the previous year, the Court of Appeal held that this amounted to an undertaking to pay a reasonable sum as a bonus. ⁵²⁰ Where there is an arrangement for work to be done with remuneration at the discretion of the employer, early authorities seemed to treat the arrangement as creating no contractual right to remuneration.⁵²¹ But there are also decisions suggesting that a court would endeavour, if possible, to construe a similar provision as a contract of employment⁵²² for reasonable remuneration.⁵²³ However, where the articles of association of a company provided that “A managing director shall receive such remuneration ... as the directors may determine”, it was held that in the absence of any such determination of an amount the managing director was not entitled to any remuneration, even on the basis of quantum meruit.⁵²⁴ The situation where an annual hours contract is silent as to payment for overtime working was considered in the case of *Ali v Christian Salvesen Food Services Ltd.*⁵²⁵ Uncertainties of the kind discussed here may in practice be considerably reduced by the employer’s obligation under the contracts of employment legislation to give the employee written particulars of terms relating to remuneration and the intervals at which remuneration is paid,⁵²⁶ and by the employer’s obligation under the employment protection legislation to give the employee an itemised pay statement at the time of each payment of remuneration,⁵²⁷ which is discussed in a later paragraph.⁵²⁸ It should, however, be pointed out that some of the difficulties discussed in this paragraph raise the logically prior question of whether the arrangement concerned is a contract of employment at all.⁵²⁹

The national minimum wage

40-080

⚠ The National Minimum Wage Act 1998⁵³⁰ confers upon workers an entitlement to be paid at least the national minimum wage by their employers. In brief summary, the provisions of the Act are as follows.⁵³¹ The category of “workers” is broadly defined⁵³² (but so as to exclude contracts of apprenticeship)⁵³³ so as to extend beyond those having contracts of employment as such; special provision is also made which applies the Act to agency workers and to home workers who are not otherwise “workers”,⁵³⁴ and power is given to apply the Act to other individuals who are not otherwise “workers”.⁵³⁵ There has been a major question as to whether, and in what circumstances, tips paid by customers to or for workers such as waiters can be counted by employers in fulfilment of their obligation to pay the national minimum wage. In *Revenue and Customs Commissioners v Annabel’s (Berkeley Square) Ltd*⁵³⁶ the Court of Appeal held that money payments made in the form of discretionary service charges by customers to waiters and bar staff by credit or debit card or by cheque, and collected by the proprietor/employer to be transmitted to employees via a “tronc” system, administered by an employee called the “tronicmaster”, did not count towards the meeting of the requirement of s.1 of the National Minimum Wage Act 1998. Another major issue concerns the qualification of workers’ time spent “on-call”, in particular where this takes place on the employer’s premises. This has now been held to count as “time work”.⁵³⁷ ⚠ The Act provides for the making of regulations determining the hourly rate of remuneration by referral to the Low Pay Commission, and for excluding certain classes of persons or making modifications in relation to them.⁵³⁸ In the event of non-compliance by the employer with the minimum wage requirements for any “pay reference period”, the worker shall be taken to be entitled under his or her contract to be paid, as additional remuneration in respect of that period, the amount which is the difference between what he or she actually received and what he or she would have received for that period had he or she been remunerated by the employer at a rate equal to the national minimum wage,⁵³⁹ and officers appointed to enforce the legislation may also sue for that additional remuneration on behalf of the worker.⁵⁴⁰ Moreover, workers are given the rights not to suffer detriment, enforceable by complaint to an employment tribunal, nor to be unfairly dismissed by reason of asserting their right to the minimum wage.⁵⁴¹

Holidays and holiday pay

40-081

⚠ An employee’s right to holidays depends usually on the express or implied terms of his or her contract of employment; the terms of a collective agreement⁵⁴² frequently provide for holidays and holiday pay, and these terms are likely to be incorporated into individual contracts of employment.⁵⁴³ Statutes (or orders made under statutory powers) may provide for holidays with pay for certain categories of employees, e.g. for those engaged in agriculture, the Agricultural Wages Act 1948.⁵⁴⁴

Moreover, the Working Time Regulations, ⁵⁴⁵ as described more fully in a later paragraph, ⁵⁴⁶ now confer important general entitlements to minimum periods of paid holiday. It is also a general requirement under the contracts of employment legislation for employees to be given written particulars of any terms and conditions of employment relating to entitlement to holidays, including public holidays, and holiday pay. ⁵⁴⁷ The particulars must be sufficient to enable the employee's entitlement, including any entitlement to accrued holiday pay on termination of employment, to be precisely calculated. ⁵⁴⁸ The Court of Appeal decided in Morley v Heritage Ltd ⁵⁴⁹ that neither this provision nor general considerations of business efficacy required the implication of an entitlement upon termination of employment to payment in lieu of accrued holiday not previously taken. In Lock v British Gas Trading Ltd (C-539/12), ⁵⁵⁰  the CJEU held that the Working Time Directive required that holiday pay not be limited to basic salary where commission was part of the employee's remuneration.

Payment during absence due to sickness: the position at common law

40-082

The position at common law is that the right of the employee to claim salary or wages during his or her absence from work on account of illness or injury depends entirely on the terms of his or her contract. Particulars of terms relating to incapacity for work due to sickness or injury, including any provisions for sick pay, must be issued to the employee under the Contracts of Employment legislation. ⁵⁵¹ There are provisions under that legislation requiring the employer to allow sick pay where absence due to sickness occurs during a statutory period of notice. ⁵⁵² A large proportion of contracts of employment now include some form of scheme for payment during absence due to sickness. If no express term deals with the matter, the court must attempt to infer an implied term from all the relevant circumstances. In older authorities, the following considerations have been thought relevant in determining such an implied term:

(1)

If it is known to the parties that, in practice, the particular employer does not pay wages during illness to employees engaged in a capacity similar to that of the one in question, ⁵⁵³ it is an implied term of the contract that no wages are payable during the employee's illness. ⁵⁵⁴ On the other hand, if it is known to both parties that wages are usually paid during illness it will be an implied term of the contract that the employee shall be entitled to his wages throughout the period of his employment despite any absence due to illness. ⁵⁵⁵

(2)

If the employee receives sick pay out of a fund to which both the employer and the employees contribute, the employee is not entitled to wages while he or she receives benefits from the fund. ⁵⁵⁶ On the other hand, the receipt of social security sickness benefits does not of itself prevent the employee from claiming wages during the time he or she is in receipt of those benefits. ⁵⁵⁷

(3)

When the employee is paid by time, e.g. by the hour, and is not paid for any time in which he or she does not work, the employee will not normally be entitled to wages in respect of periods of absence through illness. ⁵⁵⁸ Similarly an employee paid by piecework (without any provision for guaranteed remuneration) is not entitled to wages if, through illness, he or she is unable to work. ⁵⁵⁹

(4)

Contracts of employment have been said to be of two kinds, one in which the consideration for the wages is actual work, and the other in which it is readiness and willingness to work, if of ability to do so. ⁵⁶⁰ It has been thought that in the former case, wages are not payable during the employee's illness, whilst in the latter case they are. ⁵⁶¹ In Beveridge v KLM UK Ltd ⁵⁶² it was ruled that an employee who offers her services to an employer is entitled, at common law, to be paid unless a specific condition of the contract regulates otherwise. However, that pronouncement has to be related to the specific context in which an employee claimed to be fit and certified to return to work, while the employers required their own medical adviser to confirm.

(5)

It has been held that where there is a contractual obligation to pay sick pay, but no agreed term as to its duration, a term should be implied which is reasonable having regard to the normal practice in the industry. ⁵⁶³

(6)

It should be noted that the existence of an express sick pay scheme may result in an implied term restricting the employer's power to terminate the contract during the absence of the employee due to sickness. ⁵⁶⁴

A common law presumption of entitlement to sick pay?

40-083

The decision in Orman v Saville Sportswear Ltd ⁵⁶⁵ suggested that a presumption of entitlement to sick pay should be applied to contracts of employment in general. It was said that:

"Where the written terms of the contract of service are silent as to what is to happen in regard to the employee's rights to be paid whilst he is absent from work due to sickness, the employer remains liable to continue paying so long as the contract is not determined by proper notice, except where a condition to the contrary can properly be inferred from all the facts and the evidence in the case. If the employer ... seeks to establish an implied condition that no wages are payable, it is for him to make it out." ⁵⁶⁶

In this case no such term could be implied because it was clear on the evidence that the plaintiff would not have agreed to it. The status of the suggested presumption of entitlement to sick pay was hard to assess. The question was re-examined and the authorities were reviewed in Mears v Safecar Security Ltd, ⁵⁶⁷ with the conclusion that it was wrong to apply a general presumption of entitlement to sick pay; the correct approach was to consider the circumstances according to the kind of factors listed above ⁵⁶⁸; it was said that:

"It may be, at the end of the day, if there are no factors either way which can properly be relied upon, that the correct inference is that if a man is employed for a period on a wage, then, if nothing else can be found, the presumption will be that the wage is to be paid during the period of employment; but if there are other factors it seems to us that they come in at the beginning of the exercise and not after certain presumptions have been made." ⁵⁶⁹

Moreover, the judgment of the Employment Appeal Tribunal, which was upheld by the Court of Appeal, in that case suggests that even where there was an implied provision for payment during sickness, it was subject to deduction of social security sickness benefit received by the employee. ⁵⁷⁰

Statutory sick pay

40-084

Part XI of the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992 provides for the payment of statutory sick pay by employers. ⁵⁷¹ The employee ⁵⁷² is entitled to statutory sick pay for days where three qualifying conditions are satisfied, ⁵⁷³ namely, that the day in question (1) is part of a period of incapacity for work ⁵⁷⁴; (2) falls within a period of entitlement ⁵⁷⁵; and (3) is a qualifying day. ⁵⁷⁶ The entitlement derived from these conditions is then subjected to certain limitations. ⁵⁷⁷ The overall effect ⁵⁷⁸ is that the employee is entitled to statutory sick pay for certain periods of incapacity up to a limit of 28 weeks' entitlement in any three years. ⁵⁷⁹ Each period of incapacity must consist of a minimum of four consecutive days; the days in question must be, in effect, working days or their equivalent; and the first three days of any one period ⁵⁸⁰ of incapacity are excluded. ⁵⁸¹ There must be prescribed notification of incapacity for work to the employer. ⁵⁸² Statutory sick pay is at prescribed rates, set by and under the Act, ⁵⁸³ subject to provisions for periodical review by the Secretary of State. ⁵⁸⁴ Provision was formerly but is no longer made, except in the case of small employers, for recovery by employers of amounts paid by way of statutory sick pay by setting such sums off against national insurance contributions or reclaiming them from the National Insurance Fund. ⁵⁸⁵ Provision is also made to ensure that payments of statutory sick pay operate in discharge of liability to contractual remuneration and vice versa. ⁵⁸⁶ The determination of questions of entitlement to statutory sick pay is to be carried out by the national insurance adjudication system with some modifications. ⁵⁸⁷ Enforcement of entitlement as so determined is by County Court process. ⁵⁸⁸ Provision is made to prevent employers from avoiding their liability to statutory sick pay by contracting out or by obliging an employee to make payments towards his or her statutory sick pay. ⁵⁸⁹ It is suggested that the provisions for statutory sick pay do not affect the express or implied ⁵⁹⁰ provisions of the contract of employment for sick pay or the continuance of remuneration during absence due to sickness, save insofar as the statute prevents the avoidance of statutory sick pay by contract, ⁵⁹¹ and insofar as it makes provision for mutual discharge of liabilities for statutory and for contractual sick pay. ⁵⁹²

Remuneration during suspension from work on medical grounds

40-085

Employees engaged upon certain industrial processes involving potential health hazards may be temporarily suspended from their normal work, usually on the advice of an Employment Medical Adviser, under certain statutory health and safety regulations, or by reason of a recommendation in a code of practice issued or approved under s.16 of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974. ⁵⁹³ The employment protection legislation gives the employee a right to be remunerated by their employer during suspension on medical grounds, for a period not exceeding 26 weeks. ⁵⁹⁴ The employee cannot claim this right in respect of periods during which he or she is incapable of work by reason of disease or bodily or mental disablement ⁵⁹⁵; he or she must at such times rely on such entitlement to sick pay or sickness or industrial injuries benefits as he or she may possess. Nor may the employee claim the right to remuneration on suspension on medical grounds, in respect of a time during which the employer has offered suitable alternative work and the employee has unreasonably refused to perform the work. ⁵⁹⁶ The amount of the entitlement is determined by the statutory concept of a week's pay. ⁵⁹⁷ The employer may set off any contractual remuneration the employer pays at such times against the statutory entitlement and vice versa. ⁵⁹⁸ The employee may complain to an employment tribunal of the employer's failure to pay the statutory entitlement and the tribunal may order the employer to pay the amount due. ⁵⁹⁹

Statutory maternity pay

40-086

Under the provisions of Pt XII of the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992 as amended or expanded by statutory regulations, a woman who is or has been an employee is entitled to statutory maternity pay for a Maternity Pay Period of up to 52 ⁶⁰⁰ weeks where she satisfies the statutory conditions. A number of the provisions relating to statutory maternity pay either require regulations to be made, or enable other provisions to be defined or modified by regulations, and reference should be made to the regulations which have been made in accordance with those provisions. ⁶⁰¹

Statutory paternity pay

40-087

Under the provisions of Pt XIIZA of the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992, inserted by the Employment Act 2002, ⁶⁰² as expanded by statutory regulations, an employee is entitled to statutory paternity pay for a Paternity Pay Period of up to two weeks where he satisfies the statutory conditions. The right to paternity pay is extended to the partner of an adopting parent, or to the member of an adopting couple who does not take adoption leave and pay. ⁶⁰³ A number of the provisions relating to statutory paternity pay either require regulations to be made, or enable other provisions to be defined or modified by regulations, and reference should be made to the regulations which have been made in accordance with those provisions. ⁶⁰⁴ The Work and Families Act 2006 conferred a further entitlement in certain circumstances to additional statutory paternity pay in the cases either of birth or adoption of a child. ⁶⁰⁵

Statutory adoption pay

40-088

Under the provisions of Pt XIIZB of the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992, inserted by the Employment Act 2002, ⁶⁰⁶ as expanded by statutory regulations, an employee is entitled to statutory paternity pay for a Adoption Pay Period normally of 26 weeks where he satisfies the statutory conditions. The right to adoption pay applies to the adopting parent, or to the member of an adopting couple who elects to take it. ⁶⁰⁷ A number of the provisions relating to statutory adoption pay either require regulations to be made, or enable other provisions to be defined or modified by regulations, and reference should be made to the regulations which have been made in accordance with those provisions. ⁶⁰⁸

Opportunity to earn and the right of lay-off

40-089

⚠ Where the employee's remuneration is dependent upon the number of hours he works within each week or upon the amount of his or her output (as in piece-work systems or systems of payment by commission) the question arises whether the employer impliedly contracts not only to pay for work done but also to provide a certain minimum remunerative opportunity for the employee and to make good any shortfall below that minimum. There is some older authority to the effect that the courts will imply an obligation on the employer's part to provide the piece-work employee with the opportunity in each week to earn a reasonable average rate of remuneration for the employment concerned. ⁶⁰⁹ On the other hand, older authorities suggest that a contract which contains no such obligation at all on the employer's part will be void for want of mutuality where the employee is under some obligation to work. ⁶¹⁰ Another approach to the same problem is to consider the extent to which the employer is entitled to lay the employee off work; that is to say, to suspend contractual working (and remuneration accordingly) by reason of lack of available work to be done. ⁶¹¹ There is older authority implying in the employer's favour a wide right of lay-off—the leading case was that of a coalmining company which successfully asserted the right to lay off underground workers (without remuneration) while the workings underwent maintenance. ⁶¹² In Bond v CAV Ltd ⁶¹³ it was said that it is plain that there is no general right to lay off without pay at common law, and that such a right exists only in very limited circumstances. If such an issue were to recur, the employer would probably have to base the claim to a right of lay-off on the existence of a practice of lay-off in the particular employment concerned, and would have to show the practice to have contractual force. It is unlikely that such a claim could be based on a term implied in the contracts of piece-workers generally. It is also thought that an arrangement purporting to give the employer an unlimited right of lay-off should not be classified as a continuous contract of employment; or, in other words, that in such a case no contract of employment subsists between periods of contractual working.⁶¹⁴ In Dakri & Co Ltd v Tiffen,⁶¹⁵  it was said that “unless a time was specified in the contract, then the law implies that the lay-off is to be for not more than a reasonable time”. In practice, the employer’s right of lay-off is often curtailed by guaranteed pay provisions, which are considered in the next paragraph.

Provisions for guaranteed remuneration

40-090

There are various kinds of provision by which employees whose remuneration depends upon actual work rather than their availability for work are partly protected from the consequences of being laid off work or put on short-time working by a guarantee of minimum remuneration in those circumstances. In many cases such provision is, or at least used to be, made as a term in individual contracts of employment incorporating the results of collective bargaining.⁶¹⁶ Where the individual contract contains such a term, the unilateral suspension by the employer of the guaranteed pay agreement has been held to constitute a repudiatory breach of contract by the employer.⁶¹⁷ Another source of guaranteed pay provisions used to be wages regulation orders emanating from Wages Councils,⁶¹⁸ which frequently resulted in the incorporation of such provisions as terms in the contracts of employment of employees within the particular industries concerned.⁶¹⁹ A further innovation in this direction was made originally by the Contracts of Employment Act 1963⁶²⁰ which provided a scheme of guaranteed minimum remuneration during the minimum periods of notice required by that Act.⁶²¹ The next development was the creation of a general right of employees to guarantee payments under the Employment Protection Act 1975. Under these provisions, as re-enacted in the Employment Rights Act 1996, an employee is entitled to a guarantee payment from his employer if his or her employer fails to provide him with work on a normal working day.⁶²² The employee must have been continuously employed by the employer for not less than one month before the day concerned.⁶²³ An employee is not entitled to a guarantee payment if the failure to provide him or her with work is the consequence of industrial action involving any employee of his or her employer or of an associated employer.⁶²⁴ Nor will an employee be entitled to a guarantee payment if the employer has offered the employee suitable alternative work and he or she has unreasonably refused that offer.⁶²⁵ The guarantee payment is payable only where the employee has a pattern of normal working hours⁶²⁶ as statutorily defined.⁶²⁷ The payment is calculated on a basis which approximates the guarantee payment to the employee’s normal week’s pay for his or her statutory “normal working hours”.⁶²⁸ The guarantee payment is, however, limited to a prescribed sum,⁶²⁹ and the entitlement to it is limited to a maximum of five days, or the employee’s number of working days in a normal week if that is less than five,⁶³⁰ in any period of three months.⁶³¹ Contractual remuneration paid by the employer may be set off against the obligation to make guarantee payments (and vice versa),⁶³² so that the employee whose remuneration is not dependent on being provided with work on particular days will automatically receive remuneration satisfying the obligation to make guarantee payments.⁶³³ The employee has a right to complain to an employment tribunal that his or her employer has failed to make a guarantee payment,⁶³⁴ and the tribunal may order the payment of the amount of guarantee payment due.⁶³⁵ The Secretary of State for Employment is given extensive powers to vary the limits upon and method of calculation of guarantee payments.⁶³⁶ The “appropriate Minister” is also empowered to make orders conferring exemption from the statutory scheme in favour of guarantee payments provisions made by collective agreements or by the orders of Agricultural Wages Boards,⁶³⁷ provided that there is a joint application by all the parties to the collective agreement or by the Agricultural Wages Board concerned,⁶³⁸ and provided the guarantee pay arrangements concerned provide adequate procedural safeguards for individual employees.⁶³⁹

Payment during disciplinary suspension

40-091

Since suspension from work is often in practice a part of the disciplinary procedures used by employers, it is important to consider the circumstances in which the employee will or will not be entitled to remuneration in respect of a period of disciplinary suspension. There is no generally implied contractual right on the part of employers to suspend employees without pay on disciplinary grounds.⁶⁴⁰ It must be shown that there is an express or implied term in the particular contract justifying this inroad upon the employer's normal obligations to the employee; and written particulars of such terms must now be given to employees.⁶⁴¹ It has been held that the contractual provision of a particular procedure for disciplinary suspension will exclude any right of disciplinary suspension outside that procedure,⁶⁴² and it seems that disciplinary suspension cannot be justified by reference to the employer's contractual right to dismiss for misconduct.⁶⁴³ An express right to disciplinary suspension has, however, been construed as a right to impose suspension with loss of pay,⁶⁴⁴ and such loss of pay may be inherent in the method of calculation of remuneration or otherwise be indicated as the intention of the parties.⁶⁴⁵ Although disciplinary suspension without pay results in a kind of deduction from wages, it was held⁶⁴⁶ that when the right to suspend was suitably formulated, it fell outside the prohibitions upon deductions then contained in the Truck Acts.⁶⁴⁷ Similarly, disciplinary suspension without pay would probably not constitute a deduction from wages contravening s.14 of the Employment Rights Act 1996⁶⁴⁸ and in any event would not do so where the disciplinary suspension was authorised by any provision of the contract of employment which had been notified in writing to the worker concerned,⁶⁴⁹ or where it was imposed on account of the worker's having taken part in any industrial action.⁶⁵⁰

The effect of industrial action upon entitlement to remuneration

40-092

In Henthorn and Taylor v CEBG,⁶⁵¹ the Court of Appeal held that there was a general common law principle that a plaintiff who claims that he or she is entitled to be paid money under a contract which he or she alleges the defendant has broken must prove that he or she was ready and willing to perform the contract; and that this rule meant that an employer sued for wages could plead that employees who had been "working to rule" had not been ready and willing to perform their part of the contract, without thereby assuming the burden of so proving. This doctrine not only serves to explain why an employee is not entitled to remuneration while striking, but also suggests that an employee may readily be found to have disentitled themselves from remuneration not only by taking part in a "go-slow" or a "work-to-rule" but also by associating themselves with threats of future industrial action.⁶⁵² It is a doctrine which in effect may give the employer indirectly a power of lock-out which is not directly conceded by the common law of implied terms of the contract of employment.⁶⁵³ It is arguable that the common law doctrine in question, when properly understood, should disable the employee from claiming to be "ready and willing" only when his or her conduct amounts to a repudiation of his contract or a breach going to the root of it.⁶⁵⁴ Several decisions have confirmed the existence of this common law doctrine and its applicability to industrial action.⁶⁵⁵ These cases show that if the industrial action consists of a partial or conditional refusal to perform the employee's contractual duties, and if the employer accepts the partial or conditional performance offered by the employee,⁶⁵⁶ then the employee is entitled to the appropriate proportion of his ordinary remuneration. It is not yet clear whether and in what circumstances that proportion is arrived at by, on the one hand, applying the principle of equitable set-off,⁶⁵⁷ or, on the other hand, calculating remuneration due on a quantum meruit basis.⁶⁵⁸ If the employer makes it quite clear that a partial or conditional performance of contractual duties is not acceptable as substantial performance of those duties, then that partial or conditional performance does not entitle the employee to any remuneration; it is as if there has been no performance.⁶⁵⁹

Remuneration during statutory time off

40-093

The Employment Protection Act 1975 and the Employment Act 1980 conferred upon employees the right in certain circumstances to time off work for particular purposes. These, as contained in the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 and Employment Rights Act 1996 are: for carrying out trade union duties,⁶⁶⁰ for taking part in trade union activities,⁶⁶¹ for performing public duties,⁶⁶² to look for work or make arrangements for training in the case of employees declared redundant,⁶⁶³ or for ante-natal care.⁶⁶⁴ These rights are described later⁶⁶⁵; reference is made to them here because the employee is in some cases given a statutory right to remuneration during such time off, so that these rights are in those cases also rights to guaranteed remuneration during absence from work for the recognised statutory purposes. The statutory rights to time off include a right to guaranteed remuneration in the case of time off for carrying out trade union duties, ⁶⁶⁶ and in the case of time off to look for work or make arrangements for training. ⁶⁶⁷ In the case of time off for carrying out trade union duties, the guaranteed remuneration is calculated as the amount the employee would have received for that time spent at work if he or she is paid solely with reference to time. ⁶⁶⁸ If he or she is paid partly by reference to the amount of work done, the payment is arrived at by applying the employee's average hourly earnings rate to the time spent off work. ⁶⁶⁹ The amount of contractual remuneration paid in respect of such a period of time off may be set off against this statutory liability and vice versa. ⁶⁷⁰ The employee may complain to an employment tribunal of failure to make the statutory payment ⁶⁷¹ and an employment tribunal finding the complaint substantiated must order the payment to be made. ⁶⁷² In the case of time off to look for work or to make arrangements for training, the guaranteed remuneration is calculated on the generally more restrictive basis of an "appropriate hourly rate" ⁶⁷³ arrived at by applying the statutory "week's pay" ⁶⁷⁴ to the statutory "normal working hours" ⁶⁷⁵ for the employee concerned. The amount is in this case also limited to two-fifths of one week's pay for the employee concerned. ⁶⁷⁶ The relationship to contractual remuneration and the enforcement mechanism are the same as in relation to remuneration for time off for union duties. ⁶⁷⁷ In the case of the right to time off for ante-natal care, also, an "appropriate hourly rate" of remuneration is defined, ⁶⁷⁸ and the usual sort of provisions are made with regard to the relationship with contractual remuneration ⁶⁷⁹ and to enforcement. ⁶⁸⁰ In the case of the rights to time off which do not include a statutory right to guaranteed remuneration, ⁶⁸¹ it will depend upon the nature and construction of the contract of employment whether the employee loses remuneration in respect of the time spent off work. If the remuneration is normally varied with reference to the time spent at work within each week, the employee will lose remuneration by virtue of the application of that normal pattern, unless a particular agreement to the contrary can be implied.

Equality of pay between men and women

40-094

Employers were placed by the Equal Pay Act 1970 (as subsequently amended by, in particular, the Equal Pay (Amendment) Regulations 1983 ⁶⁸² and the Sex Discrimination Act 1986 and the Employment Equality (Sex Discrimination) Regulations 2005 ⁶⁸³) under obligations to eliminate certain inequalities of pay between men and women. Despite the title of the Act, however, these obligations were not confined to remuneration but extend to all terms and conditions of employment. Corresponding provisions are now made by the Equality Act 2010 and those provisions of the Equal Pay Act are accordingly considered in later paragraphs under the broader head of equality of terms and conditions of employment between men and women. ⁶⁸⁴ Inequalities of treatment as between men and women employees (including inequalities in relation to pay) are also now subject to the wider provisions concerning sex discrimination in employment which were originally made by the Sex Discrimination Act 1975, and were then amended by the Sex Discrimination Act 1986. Corresponding provisions are now made by the Equality Act 2010 which are considered in later paragraphs ⁶⁸⁵ under the general heading of sex discrimination in the treatment of employees.

The right to itemised statements of pay and deductions

40-095

Under Pt I of the Employment Rights Act 1996, an employer is obliged to give each employee an itemised pay statement at the time of each payment of wages or salary. ⁶⁸⁶ The statement must give particulars of the gross amount of the remuneration, any deductions and the purpose for which they have been made, of the net amount of the remuneration and the amount and method of any part payment made in a different way ⁶⁸⁷ (such as in kind to the extent permissible). ⁶⁸⁸ Fixed deductions may be dealt with by a standing statement of fixed deductions made in writing and particularising the amount, frequency and purpose of each deduction; if such a standing statement is made, it will be effective for 12 months to reduce the employer's duty to particularise fixed deductions in each itemised pay statement so that it becomes a duty simply to give the aggregate amount of the fixed deductions described in the standing statement. ⁶⁸⁹ The standing statement may be kept up-to-date by written notice to the employee, ⁶⁹⁰ but there must be a re-issue of the statement in a consolidated form each year. ⁶⁹¹ An employee who complains of failure to give him or her an itemised pay statement may refer to an employment tribunal the question of what particulars ought to have been given. ⁶⁹² When a reference is made to a tribunal in these cases, the tribunal shall, where it finds a deficiency, make a declaration to that effect, ⁶⁹³ and may in addition order the employer to repay to the employee any un-notified deductions made during the 13 weeks preceding the application to the tribunal. ⁶⁹⁴

The protection of wages legislation

40-096

Before 1986, a number of restrictions were placed upon payment of wages in kind, deductions from wages, and payment of money wages other than in cash, by the Truck Acts 1831–1940 as modified by the Payment of Wages Act 1960. That legislation was repealed ⁶⁹⁵ and replaced by Pt I of the Wages Act 1986. That Act imposed certain general restrictions on deductions made from workers' wages, or payments received from workers, by their employers ⁶⁹⁶; it also imposed restrictions on deductions from wages, or payments by workers, in retail employment, on account of cash shortages or stock deficiencies ⁶⁹⁷; and provided for complaint to an employment tribunal in respect of contraventions. ⁶⁹⁸ The Wages Act 1986 has subsequently been consolidated into the Employment Rights Act 1996. The relevant provisions are described in greater detail in the next two paragraphs. They extend to Crown employment, ⁶⁹⁹ and there is power to extend them to employment outside the United Kingdom. ⁷⁰⁰ The remedy for any contravention of them is by way of complaint to an employment tribunal as provided by the statute, and not otherwise ⁷⁰¹; a provision in an agreement is void so far as it purports to limit or exclude them, or to preclude complaint of contravention unless it is a settlement promoted by a conciliation officer. ⁷⁰² Provision is made to ensure that complaint can also be made that a deduction has not been itemised as required by ss.11 and 12 of the Employment Rights Act 1996, ⁷⁰³ but double recovery is prevented. ⁷⁰⁴ A complaint to an employment tribunal must be brought within three months of the deficient wage payment or the payment by the worker which is in issue (or of the latest of a series of such) or, if that is not reasonably practicable, within such further period as the tribunal considers to be so. ⁷⁰⁵ The remedies consist of a declaration and an order to the employer to pay or repay as necessary to repair the contravention. ⁷⁰⁶

General restrictions on deductions made, or payments received, by employers

40-097

Under ss.13–15 of the Employment Rights Act 1996, an employer shall not make any deduction from any wages of any worker employed by him or her, ⁷⁰⁷ or receive any payment from any worker employed by him or her, ⁷⁰⁸ unless the deduction or payment is made by virtue of any statutory provision or any provision of the worker's contract, ⁷⁰⁹ or the worker has previously agreed to it in writing. ⁷¹⁰ A provision in a worker's contract must, in order to sustain a deduction or payment, be comprised in a written term previously copied by the employer to the worker ⁷¹¹ or in a term whose effect the employer has previously notified in writing to the worker. ⁷¹² These requirements do not apply to deductions or payments:

(1)

by way of reimbursement of the employer in respect of overpayment of wages or in respect of expenses ⁷¹³;

(2)

in consequence of statutory disciplinary proceedings ⁷¹⁴;

(3)

in pursuance of a duty on the part of the employer to deduct and pay over to a public authority 715;

- (4) in pursuance of an arrangement for deduction and payment over to a third person to which the worker has previously agreed in writing 716;
- (5) on account of the worker having taken part in a strike or other industrial action 717; or
- (6) in satisfaction of a court or tribunal order for payment by the worker to the employer. 718

The wages which are protected include:

- (1) any fee, bonus, commission, holiday pay or other emolument referable to the employment 719;
- (2) any sum payable under a statutory reinstatement or re-engagement order or a statutory order for the continuation of a contract of employment 720;
- (3) a statutory guarantee payment or other statutory payment in lieu of wages, statutory sick pay or maternity, paternity, or adoption pay 721; and
- (4) any payment in the nature of a non-contractual bonus. 722

Specifically excluded, however, are:

- (1) payments by way of advance under a loan agreement by way of advance of wages, 723 or any payment of expenses 724;
- (2) any payment by way of a pension, retirement gratuity or compensation for loss of office or redundancy payment 725;

(3)

any payment to the worker other than in the capacity of a worker ⁷²⁶; and any payment or benefit in kind, unless it is a voucher or stamp with a fixed money value and capable of being exchanged for money, goods or services. ⁷²⁷

(4)

A worker is defined for this purpose as a person who has entered into or works under a contract of service, of apprenticeship, or for the personal performance of any work or services unless for a client or customer of a profession or business undertaking carried on by that person. ⁷²⁸ Any deficiency, in the amount of wages paid on a particular occasion compared with the amount of wages properly payable on that occasion qualifies as a deduction from the wages, except insofar as it is attributable to an error of computation of the gross amount of wages then payable. ⁷²⁹ It was held in Bruce v Wiggins Teape (Stationery) Ltd ⁷³⁰ that unilateral reduction of wages by the employer might amount to unauthorised deduction within the meaning of the Act. The complete withholding of a week's wages has been held to constitute a deduction within the meaning of the statute. ⁷³¹ In New Century Cleaning Co Ltd v Church, ⁷³² the reduction of the job rates or piece rates for work which determined the amount of wages under a team-working payment system was held not to amount to an unauthorised deduction from payable wages within the meaning of the Act. Compare also the decision of the Employment Appeal Tribunal in Davies v Wyatt (Decorators) Ltd ⁷³³ where it was held that a unilateral reduction of wages in order to discharge the employer's liability under the Working Time Regulations ⁷³⁴ to provide for paid leave resulted in an unauthorised and unlawful deduction from wages. In Delaney v RJ Staples, ⁷³⁵ the House of Lords held that payment in lieu of notice, being related to the termination of employment, did not come within the definition of wages for this purpose.

Deductions from wages of and payments by workers in retail employment

40-098

Part II of the Employment Rights Act 1996 also provides for certain additional protection in the case of workers in retail employment, ⁷³⁶ the essence of which is that deductions from the wages of such workers, and payments by such workers to their employers, on account of a cash shortage or stock deficiency, may not in aggregate exceed 10 per cent of the gross wages payable to the worker on the pay day in question ⁷³⁷ (though that requirement does not apply in relation to such deductions from the final instalment of wages, or to such payments made at or after the time of the payment of the final instalment of wages). ⁷³⁸ Moreover, such a payment may only be received by the employer if the employer has previously notified the worker in writing of the worker's total liability to him or her in respect of the shortage or deficiency in question, and has made the demand for the payment in writing on a pay day not before the notification of total liability. ⁷³⁹ Furthermore, such a deduction or the first in a series of such deductions, or a demand for such a payment or the first in a series of demands for such payments, may only be made within 12 months of the employer's establishing the existence of the cash shortage or stock deficiency in question, or of any earlier date when he or she ought reasonably to have established it. ⁷⁴⁰ "Retail employment" is defined in terms of the carrying out of retail transactions (meaning the sale or supply of goods or supply of services) directly with members of the public or with fellow workers or other individuals in their personal capacities, or the collection of amounts payable in connection therewith. ⁷⁴¹

Attachment of earnings

40-099

In some instances an employer may lawfully make deductions from remuneration in implementation of judicial orders attaching earnings of the employee in execution of judgment debts and certain other court orders. The wages of “servants, labourers or workmen” were the subject of special legislation excluding attachment orders ⁷⁴² but this was overridden by subsequent legislation later consolidated into the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971. ⁷⁴³ Under that Act, various courts have power to make an attachment of earnings order to secure payments under a maintenance order, or the payment of certain judgment debts, or payments under an administration order, or the payment of any sum adjudged to be paid by a conviction, or by a legal aid contribution order. ⁷⁴⁴ An attachment of earnings order requires the employer to make periodical deductions from the debtor’s earnings and to pay them to the collecting officer of the court. ⁷⁴⁵ On each occasion on which the employer makes a deduction from the debtor’s earnings in compliance with an attachment order, he or she must give the debtor a statement in writing of the total amount of the deduction. ⁷⁴⁶ He or she may presumably include this in a statutory itemised pay statement, ⁷⁴⁷ but it will presumably not be sufficient to deal with it by a statutory standing statement of fixed deductions. ⁷⁴⁸ The employer is authorised to make a small deduction from the remuneration of the employee concerned, at a rate determined under the legislation, towards his administrative expenses while he or she is implementing an attachment order. ⁷⁴⁹

1. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

^{505.} On the employer’s right to make a deduction on account of bad work, see below, para.40-097.

^{506.} e.g. Aris-Bainbridge v Turner Manufacturing Co [1951] 1 K.B. 563 (HC) (commission payable on the annual turnover of an employer’s business: lump-sum payments under settlements of wartime contracts held to be included in the turnover). Compare Judge v Crown Leisure Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 571, [2005] I.R.L.R. 823, where the Court of Appeal upheld a decision of an employment tribunal that a verbal promise at a Christmas party eventually to place the claimant on the same salary scale as another employee was too indefinite to have contractual force, rejecting, however, the argument that this was a question of intention to create legal relations. Compare now also Attrill v Dresdner Kleinwort Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 394, [2013] 3 All E.R. 607, where it had been held that an announcement of a “guaranteed” minimum bonus paid could be regarded as “the stuff of contractual obligation” although communicated in a collective informal “town hall forum” to a workforce at large.

^{507.} See above, paras 40-047 et seq.

^{508.} See above, paras 40-049 et seq.

^{509.} See above, paras 40-055—40-057.

^{510.} See below, paras 40-082—40-083.

^{511.} Landman v Entwistle (1852) 7 Exch. 632; De Vries v Corner (1866) 13 L.T. 636.

^{512.} Napier v National Business Agency Ltd [1951] 2 All E.R. 264. See above, para.40-037 and cases there cited.

^{513.} Cresswell v Board of Inland Revenue [1984] I.C.R. 508. cf. also below, para.40-092 (effect of industrial action upon entitlement to remuneration).

^{514.} [2002] I.C.R. 1045.

^{515.} [2000] I.R.L.R. 766. Compare also Horkulak v Cantor Fitzgerald International [2004] EWCA Civ 1287, [2005] I.C.R. 402; the decisions of the High Court in Takacs v Barclays Services Jersey Ltd [2006] I.R.L.R. 877 QBD and of the Court of Appeal in Keen v Commerzbank AG [2006]

- EWCA Civ 1536*, [2007] I.C.R. 623, below, para.40-152, n.1014; Khatri v Cooperatieve Centrale Raiffeisen-Boerenleenbank BA [2010] EWCA Civ 397, where the requirement of rational exercise of discretions with regard to the awarding of bonuses was reaffirmed. See also GX Networks Ltd v Greenland [2010] EWCA Civ 784 where the Court of Appeal was similarly reluctant to treat as unfettered an employer's discretion, expressed to be "by exception only", to cap an employee's commission on sales; Rutherford v Seymour Pierce Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 375 (QB), [2010] I.R.L.R. 606 where at first instance an implied term, allegedly customary within the City of London, requiring that the employee must in order to qualify for a bonus be still employed at the time due for payment, was rejected as not being necessary to give business efficacy to the contract, as not being equitable and reasonable, and as not representing a notorious, invariable, or certain custom.
- 516. Way v Latilla Ltd [1937] 3 All E.R. 759. See also Higgins v Hopkins (1848) 3 Exch. 163, 166; Hulse v Hulse (1856) 17 C.B. 711; Lamburn v Cruden (1841) 2 M. & G. 253; Reeve v Reeve (1858) 1 F. & F. 280.
- 517. If the services were to be performed gratuitously, there will normally be no valid contract because of the absence of consideration: Lees v Whitcomb (1828) 5 Bing. 34; Vol.I, Ch.4.
- 518. Morrison v Baillie (1855) 2 Macq.H.L. 80; Price v Hong Kong Tea Co (1861) 2 F. & F. 466; Att-Gen v Drapers' Co (1869) L.R. 9 Eq. 69; North v Bassett [1892] 1 Q.B. 333; cf. Brown v Nairne (1839) 9 C. & P. 204. Compare Driver v Air India Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 830 where the Court of Appeal rejected the employer's contention that payment for overtime was discretionary as being contrary to the general position that where a contractual payment was not specified, the law implied a reasonable sum. As to implied terms generally, see Vol.I, Ch.14; as to quantum meruit claims generally, see Vol.I, paras 29-004, 29-071—29-073.
- 519. Way v Latilla Ltd [1937] 3 All E.R. 759 HL.
- 520. Powell v Braun [1954] 1 W.L.R. 401; see WPM Retail Ltd v Lang [1978] I.C.R. 787; cf. William Sindall Ltd v North West Thames RHA [1977] I.C.R. 294.
- 521. Taylor v Brewer (1813) 1 M. & S. 290; Roberts v Smith (1859) 4 H. & N. 315. cf. Jewry v Busk (1814) 5 Taunt. 302.
- 522. See also see below, para.40-089 for the question of whether a contract of employment must provide the employee with some degree of remunerative opportunity.
- 523. Bryant v Flight (1839) 5 M. & W. 114. But see Obu v A Strauss & Co Ltd [1951] A.C. 243, 250.
- 524. Re Richmond Gate Property Co Ltd [1965] 1 W.L.R. 335, see Vol.I, para.29-082.
- 525. [1997] I.C.R. 25.
- 526. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.1(4).
- 527. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.8–12.
- 528. See below, para.40-095.
- 529. See Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003), pp.60–64. It was held in 102 Social Club Ltd v Bickerton [1977] I.C.R. 911 that receipt of an honorarium did not create a contract of employment.
- 530. In force at various dates from April 1999 (SI 1998/2574).
- 531. The National Minimum Wage Regulations 2015 (SI 2015/621) consolidate and update all previous Regulations enacted under the National Minimum Wage Act 1998.
- 532. See s.54.

- 533. As to which compare Chassis & Cab Specialist Ltd v Lee [2011] UKEAT/0268/10/JOJ.
- 534. See ss.34, 35.
- 535. See s.41. Trainees on Government training schemes are excluded by virtue of the National Minimum Wage Regulations 1999 (Amendment) Regulations 2001 (SI 2001/1108) in force from May 1, 2001.
- 536. [2009] EWCA Civ 361, [2007] I.C.R. 1123.
- 537.  Whittlestone v BJP Home Support Ltd [2014] I.C.R. 275 EAT; cf. Esparon (t/a Middle West Residential Care Home) v Slavikowska [2014] I.R.L.R. 598 EAT. Different considerations may apply where the worker's home was her place of work: Shannon v Rampersad (t/a Clifton House Residential Home) [2015] I.R.L.R. 982 (EAT).
- 538. See ss.2–8.
- 539. See s.17.
- 540. See s.20. Sections 44–46 of the Employment Relations Act 2004 made extensive additions and amendments to the regime for the enforcement of the national minimum wage, with effect from April 6, 2005.
- 541. See ss.23–25. The enforcement mechanisms were further reinforced, with effect from July 2003, by the provisions of the National Minimum Wage Enforcement Notices Act 2003. Sections 8–12 of the Employment Act 2008 made further additions and amendments to the regime for the enforcement of the national minimum wage, with effect from April 2009. Section 152 of the Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Act 2015 modified s.19A of the National Minimum Wage Act 1998 to increase the relevant financial penalties.
- 542. See above, paras 40-047 et seq.
- 543. See above, paras 40-049 et seq.
- 544. See above, para.40-057.
- 545. SI 1998/1833 in force from October 1, 1998.
- 546. See below, para.40-112.
- 547. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.1(4)(d)(i).
- 548. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.1(4)(d)(i). Voluntary overtime cannot automatically be excluded for such purposes: Patterson v Castlereagh BC [2015] NICA 47.
- 549. [1993] I.R.L.R. 400.
- 550.  [2014] 3 C.M.L.R. 53, [2014] I.C.R. 813. For the domestic follow-up, see [2016] EWCA Civ 983, [2016] I.R.L.R. 946.
- 551. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.1(4)(d)(ii).
- 552. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.88(1).
- 553. e.g. where there was a notice in the place of employment that half-pay up to a total of 21 days a year would be paid as a matter of grace during illness: Petrie v Mac Fisheries Ltd [1940] 1 K.B. 258; or where the employee had been ill on several previous occasions and had not asked for nor been paid any wages: O'Grady v Saper Ltd [1940] 2 K.B. 469.

- 554. Petrie v Mac Fisheries [1940] 1 K.B. 258; O'Grady v Saper Ltd [1940] 2 K.B. 469.
- 555. K v Racchen (1878) 38 L.T. 38.
- 556. Niblett v Midland Ry (1907) 23 T.L.R. 240.
- 557. cf. Marrison v Bell [1939] 2 K.B. 187.
- 558. Hancock v BSA Tools Ltd [1939] 4 All E.R. 538.
- 559. See Browning v Crumlin Valley Collieries [1926] 1 K.B. 522.
- 560. Petrie v Mac Fisheries Ltd [1940] 1 K.B. 258; O'Grady v M Saper Ltd [1940] 2 K.B. 469; Hancock v BSA Tools Ltd [1939] 4 All E.R. 538. See also Lord Denning (1939) 55 L.Q.R. 353.
- 561. Cuckson v Stones (1859) 1 E. & E. 248; Warren v Whittingham (1902) 18 T.L.R. 508; Marrison v Bell [1939] 2 K.B. 187. The headnote is inaccurate: O'Grady v Saper Ltd [1940] 2 K.B. 469, 473.
- 562. [2000] I.R.L.R. 765.
- 563. Howman & Son v Blyth [1983] I.C.R. 416.
- 564. Compare Aspden v Webbs Poultry & Meat Group (Holdings) Ltd [1996] I.R.L.R. 521. (As to the effect on such a scheme of the termination of the insurance policy which supports it, compare Bainbridge v Circuit Foil (UK) Ltd [1997] I.C.R. 541).
- 565. [1960] 1 W.L.R. 1055.
- 566. [1960] 1 W.L.R. 1055 at 1064-1065.
- 567. [1981] I.C.R. 409 EAT; upheld by the Court of Appeal [1982] I.R.L.R. 183.
- 568. See above, para.40-082.
- 569. [1981] I.C.R. 409, 419C–D, per Slynn J., a passage adopted by the Court of Appeal [1982] I.R.L.R. 183, 189.
- 570. [1981] I.C.R. 409 at 419D–421B, distinguishing Sun and Sand Ltd v Fitzjohn [1979] I.C.R. 268 as based upon a concession by counsel for the employers.
- 571. The Statutory Sick Pay Scheme has been in force since April 6, 1983. For details of its operation, reference should be made to the following regulations: Statutory Sick Pay (General) Regulations 1982 (SI 1982/894); Statutory Sick Pay (Compensation of Employers and Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 1983 (SI 1983/376); Statutory Sick Pay (General) Amendment Regulations 1985 (SI 1985/126); Statutory Sick Pay (Additional Compensation of Employers and Consequential Amendments) Regulations 1985 (SI 1985/1411) and successive amending regulations.
- 572. Defined in s.163(1).
- 573. s.151(1).
- 574. As defined by s.152.
- 575. Defined by s.153.
- 576. See s.154.
- 577. By s.155.

- 578. This is necessarily a simplification, and further reference should be made to the detailed provisions of ss.152–155 and regulations for which provision is made by ss.153(5), 153(10), 155(5), 152(4).
- 579. See ss.155 as amended by the Social Security (Incapacity for Work) Act 1994 s.8 and SI 1982/894.
- 580. Periods of incapacity separated by no more than two weeks are consolidated together by s.152(3).
- 581. See ss.152(2), (3), (4), (6), 154, 155(1).
- 582. s.156 and regulations made under s.156(1).
- 583. s.157(1), (3).
- 584. s.157(2).
- 585. s.159 and regulations made thereunder. The Statutory Sick Pay Act 1994 removed the right of employers, other than small employers, to recover sums paid by them by way of statutory sick pay.
- 586. s.160 and Sch.2.
- 587. Statutory Sick Pay Percentage Threshold Order 1995 (SI 1995/512).
- 588. Statutory Sick Pay Percentage Threshold Order 1995 (SI 1995/512).
- 589. s.151(2).
- 590. See above, paras 40-082—40-083.
- 591. See above, n.587.
- 592. See above, n.584.
- 593. See Employment Rights Act 1996 s.64; and the Employment Protection (Medical Suspension) Order 1980 (SI 1980/1581).
- 594. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.64; subject to the exclusion in s.199(2) (share fishermen).
- 595. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.65(3).
- 596. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.65(4)(a) (see also s.65(4)(b)—compliance with employer's reasonable requirements to ensure the availability of his services).
- 597. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.69(1) and ss.220–229.
- 598. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.69(3).
- 599. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.70.
- 600. Increased from 26 weeks by s.1 of the Work and Families Act 2006 as from October 1, 2006.
- 601. Especially the Statutory Maternity Pay (General) Regulations 1986 (SI 1986/1960), as lately amended by the Social Security, Statutory Maternity Pay and Statutory Sick Pay (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/2690).
- 602. s.2, as from December 8, 2002, the entitlement to statutory paternity pay taking effect from April 6, 2003.

- 603. See s.171ZB of the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992 and Pt 3 of the Statutory Paternity Pay and Statutory Adoption Pay (General) Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/2822).
- 604. Especially the Statutory Paternity Pay and Statutory Adoption Pay (General) Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/2822).
- 605. ss.6–10, inserting new ss.171ZEA–171ZEE to the 1992 Act.
- 606. s.4, as from December 2002, the entitlement to statutory adoption pay taking effect from April 2003.
- 607. See s.171ZL(2) of the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992.
- 608. Especially the Statutory Paternity Pay and Statutory Adoption Pay (General) Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/2822).
- 609. Devonald v Rosser & Sons [1906] 2 K.B. 728.
- 610. R. v Welch (1853) 2 E. & B. 357; Whittle v Frankland (1862) 2 B. & S. 49; Thomas v Vivian (1872) 37 J.P. 228. (These cases recognise a wide but not unlimited right to lay the employee off.)
- 611. In Johnson v Cross [1977] I.C.R. 872, the Employment Appeal Tribunal duly applied Devonald v Rosser & Sons as representing a restriction on the employer's power of lay-off, but rather curiously interpreted that restriction as amounting to a duty to provide a reasonable level of work for the one week's minimum period of notice required of the employee by the contracts of employment legislation, see below, para.40-163.
- 612. Browning v Crumlin Valley Collieries Ltd [1926] 1 K.B. 522. This was treated, questionably, as a case where the stoppage of work was beyond the employer's control. See also the cases cited in the previous and the next note.
- 613. [1983] I.R.L.R. 360, 366.
- 614. The decision to the contrary in Puttick v John Wright & Sons Ltd [1972] I.C.R. 457 was necessary for the avoidance of an injustice in the particular circumstances.
- 615.  [1981] I.C.R. 256, 260C. Compare, however, Craig v Bob Lindfield & Son Ltd [2016] I.C.R. 527 (EAT).
- 616. Some details are given in Freedland, The Contract of Employment (1976), pp.93–95.
- 617. Powell Duffryn Ltd v House [1974] I.C.R. 123.
- 618. Wages Councils were abolished by s.35 of Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993.
- 619. See Freedland at pp.92-93.
- 620. First consolidated into the Contracts of Employment Act 1972 and then into the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978 and then consolidated into the Employment Rights Act 1996.
- 621. See now Employment Rights Act 1996 s.87(3) and ss.88–91.
- 622. ss.28–35 (excluding share fisherman: s.199). For guidance on the interpretation of s.28, see Abercrombie v Aga Rangemaster Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1148, [2014] 1 All E.R. 1101.

- 623. s.29.
- 624. s.29(3).
- 625. s.29(4), (5).
- 626. s.30(1).
- 627. ss.221–229.
- 628. s.30(2)–(4).
- 629. s.31(1) and regulations made from time to time.
- 630. s.31(3)–(5).
- 631. s.31(2).
- 632. s.32(2).
- 633. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.32(3). See Cartwright v G Clancey Ltd [1983] I.C.R. 552.
- 634. s.34(1) (limitation period—s.34(2)).
- 635. s.34(3).
- 636. s.33.
- 637. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.35(1) and (2).
- 638. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.35(1) and (2).
- 639. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.35(4), (5).
- 640. Hanley v Pease & Partners Ltd [1915] 1 K.B. 698; Marshall v English Electric Ltd [1945] 1 All E.R. 653.
- 641. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.3; see above, para.40-041.
- 642. Gorse v Durham CC [1971] 1 W.L.R. 775.
- 643. cf. Warburton v Taff Vale Ry (1902) 18 T.L.R. 420.
- 644. Wallwork v Fielding [1922] 2 K.B. 66.
- 645. cf. Marshall v English Electric Ltd [1945] 1 All E.R. 653.
- 646. Bird v British Celanese Ltd [1945] K.B. 336.
- 647. See below, para.40-096.
- 648. See below, para.40-098.
- 649. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.13(1), (2).
- 650. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.14(5). See Norris v London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority [2013] I.C.R. 819 EAT.
- 651. [1980] I.R.L.R. 361.

- 652. cf. Chappell v Times Newspapers Ltd [1975] I.C.R. 145.
- 653. cf. Cummings v Charles Connell & Co Ltd, 1969 S.L.T. 25.
- 654. cf. Secretary of State for Employment v ASLEF (No.2) [1972] I.C.R. 19.
- 655. Royle v Trafford BC [1984] I.R.L.R. 184; Sim v Rotherham MBC [1986] I.C.R. 897; Miles v Wakefield MDC [1987] I.C.R. 368; Wiluszynski v Tower Hamlets LBC [1989] I.C.R. 493; McPherson v Lambeth LBC [1988] I.R.L.R. 470; compare also Spackman v London Metropolitan University [2007] I.R.L.R. 74.
- 656. Wiluszynski v Tower Hamlets LBC [1989] I.C.R. 493; McPherson v Lambeth LBC [1988] I.R.L.R. 470.
- 657. Sim v Rotherham MBC [1986] I.C.R. 897.
- 658. Miles v Wakefield MDC [1987] I.C.R. 368, per Lords Brightman and Templeman, sed contra Lord Bridge. Compare now Cooper v Isle of Wight College [2007] EWHC 2831, [2008] I.R.L.R. 124.
- 659. McPherson v Lambeth LBC [1988] I.R.L.R. 470; Wiluszynski v Tower Hamlets LBC [1989] I.C.R. 493.
- 660. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.168.
- 661. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.170.
- 662. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.50 s.51(1).
- 663. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.52–54.
- 664. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.55–57.
- 665. See below, paras 40-117—40-123.
- 666. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.169.
- 667. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.53.
- 668. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.169(2).
- 669. s.169(3).
- 670. s.169(4).
- 671. s.169(5).
- 672. s.172(1).
- 673. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.56(1).
- 674. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.221–229.
- 675. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.234.
- 676. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.53(5), 54(4).
- 677. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.53(7). See above, nn.658–659, for the corresponding provisions in relation to time off for trade union duties.

- 678. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.56(1)–(4).
- 679. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.56(5)–(6).
- 680. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.57(1)–(5).
- 681. i.e. the rights to time off for trade union activities—s.28, and for public duties—Employment Rights Act 1996 s.50; see below, paras 40–119—40–120.
- 682. SI 1983/1794.
- 683. SI 2005/2467.
- 684. See below, para.40-127.
- 685. See below, paras 40–128—40–132.
- 686. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.8. (Merchant seamen are excluded: s.199.)
- 687. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.8(2)(a)–(d). The statement is not required to include particulars of tips paid to a waiter by customers, nor of an amount deducted by the employer in respect of tips—Cofone v Spaghetti House Ltd [1980] I.C.R. 155.
- 688. Some very limited restrictions upon payments in kind are imposed by the Employment Rights Act 1996—see below, para.40-097.
- 689. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.9(1), (2).
- 690. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.9(3).
- 691. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.9(4).
- 692. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.11(1).
- 693. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.12(3).
- 694. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.12(4), (5).
- 695. Wages Act 1986 s.11 and Sch.I which lists the legislation in full.
- 696. s.1, since consolidated into Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.13–16.
- 697. See now Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.17–22.
- 698. See now Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.23–26, 203–205.
- 699. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.191(1)–(4) and s.192(1).
- 700. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.201.
- 701. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.205(2).
- 702. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.203(1), (2).
- 703. See above, para.40-095.
- 704. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.26.
- 705. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.23.

- 706. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.24 and 25. Section 7(1) of the Employment Act 2008 provided, with effect from April 2009, for the insertion of a new s.24(2) into the Employment Rights Act 1992, which enables an Employment Tribunal to award compensation for financial loss which is sustained by the worker and is attributable to unlawful deduction from or unauthorised payment of wages.
- 707. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.13(1).
- 708. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.15(1).
- 709. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.13(1)(a). On the question of when it is appropriate to imply terms into the contract of employment in order to decide whether a deduction is authorised, see Luke v Stoke on Trent City Council [2007] EWCA Civ 761, [2007] I.C.R. 1678. Compare Bateman v Asda Stores Ltd [2010] I.R.L.R. 370 where it was held by the EAT that an imposed transfer to a new pay structure, less favourable than the old one for the complainant employee, did not represent an unauthorised deduction from wages because it was sustained by a wide power of variation of terms which the employer had reserved to itself by a provision in the staff handbook which was regarded as having contractual force despite its apparently unrestricted character.
- 710. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.13(1)(b).
- 711. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.13(2)(a) and s.15(2)(a).
- 712. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.13(2)(b) and s.15(2)(b).
- 713. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.14(1) and s.16(1).
- 714. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.14(2) and s.16(2).
- 715. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.14(3).
- 716. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.14(4).
- 717. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.14(5) and s.16(3). See Sunderland Polytechnic v Evans [1993] I.C.R. 392. In Hartley v King Edward VI College [2015] EWCA Civ 455, [2015] I.R.L.R. 650 the Court of Appeal held that the appropriate amount to be deducted for a day's strike is 1/260th of a worker's annual salary.
- 718. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.14(6) and s.16(4).
- 719. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.27(1)(a); it was held in Ainsworth v IRC [2009] UKHL 31, [2009] I.C.R. 985 that this includes holiday pay due under the Working Time Regulations 1998.
- 720. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.27(1)(g), (h).
- 721. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.27(1)(b)–(f).
- 722. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.27(3). It was held in Farrell Matthews & Weir v Hansen [2005] I.C.R. 509 EAT that there was no reason to construe s.27(3) as meaning that non-contractual bonuses could not come within the definition of wages unless they were actually paid.
- 723. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.27(2)(a).
- 724. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.27(2)(b).
- 725. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.27(2)(c), (d).
- 726. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.27(2)(e).

- 727. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.27(5).
- 728. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.230(3).
- 729. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.13(3), (4).
- 730. [1994] I.R.L.R. 536.
- 731. Penname Ltd v Paterson [1989] I.C.R. 12. It was reconfirmed in Elizabeth Claire Care Management Ltd v Francis [2005] I.R.L.R. 858 that non-payment of remuneration may qualify as "deduction from wages".
- 732. [2000] I.R.L.R. 27 CA.
- 733. [2000] I.R.L.R. 759.
- 734. See below, para.40-112.
- 735. [1992] I.C.R. 483.
- 736. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.17–22.
- 737. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.18(1), 17(1)–(3), (b), 19(1)–(4), 21(1), (2), 20(5), 21(3) and 22(4).
- 738. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.22(1)–(3).
- 739. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.20(1)–(3)(a) and s.20(4).
- 740. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.18(2)(3), 20(3)(b), 20(5).
- 741. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.17(2), (3).
- 742. Wages Attachment Abolition Act 1870 s.1.
- 743. See Freedland, Attachment of Earnings (1971), for a description of the Act's provisions.
- 744. s.1.
- 745. s.6 (see s.23 for offence of non-compliance with the order on the part of the employer and penalty on summary conviction of a fine).
- 746. s.7(4)(b).
- 747. See the Employment Rights Act 1996 s.8, and see above, para.40-095.
- 748. See Employment Rights Act 1996 s.9 and see above, para.40-095.
- 749. Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s.7(4).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 5. - Rights and Duties Under and Associated with a Contract of Employment

(b) - Duties of the Employer

(ii) - Other Duties

The duty to provide work

40-100

It has been shown in an earlier paragraph that the employer is under some degree of obligation to provide work when such provision of work is necessary to enable the employee to earn remuneration. ⁷⁵⁰ The further question arises of whether the employer is under a duty to provide work independently of the immediate remunerative opportunity which the work may provide. The assumption has tended to be that in the normal case of employment, the employer is under no obligation to provide the employee with work to do; it is sufficient for the employer to pay the agreed salary or wages regularly. ⁷⁵¹ Thus where a commercial traveller ⁷⁵² or a sales representative ⁷⁵³ is employed at a salary for a fixed period, as long as the salary is paid, there has been thought to be no obligation to provide work "to enable the employee to become au fait at [sic] his work". ⁷⁵⁴ However, it may be legitimate to infer in certain contracts that the employer is to give the employee (e.g. an actor or singer) ⁷⁵⁵ an opportunity for publicity to advance his or her career and reputation. ⁷⁵⁶ Moreover, when a man was employed as chief sub-editor of a Sunday newspaper for three years and the paper was sold, it was held that, although his salary was continued, the employers had broken the contract because "by selling the newspaper they destroyed the office to which they had appointed him". ⁷⁵⁷ A more generalised approach to the right to work has been discussed. In Langston v AUEW ⁷⁵⁸ the Court of Appeal thought it arguable that there was an implied right to work in contracts of employment generally, in the sense of a right to the satisfaction involved in working, earning one's remuneration by work, and having a useful function in the enterprise. Lord Denning M.R. referred, more specifically, to "a right to have the opportunity of doing his work when it is there to be done" ⁷⁵⁹ while Cairns L.J. spoke of "not merely a right to be paid his agreed wage but a right to come to work to earn it". ⁷⁶⁰ But the existence of such a right was only there decided to be arguable (and, in the view of Cairns and Stephenson L.JJ., very dubiously arguable). ⁷⁶¹ In the subsequent proceedings, ⁷⁶² the National Industrial Relations Court which existed at that period held that the employee concerned, a spot welder, had no such general right to work, but that he did have the right to such allocation of hours and overtime work as would give him the opportunity of earning such premium payments as he could expect to earn in his normal working conditions. ⁷⁶³

The duties of the employer relating to safety, health and welfare of employees

40-101

A full description of the law relating to the safety, health and welfare of employees is outside the scope of the present chapter. A very brief outline is given in the next two paragraphs, which deal with employer's liability and with statutory duties generally. Beyond that, reference should be made to the treatises which concentrate upon this particular aspect of the law of employment. ⁷⁶⁴

Employer's liability to provide for safety of employee

40-102

It is the common law duty of the employer to each of his or her employees to take reasonable care to see that the plant, tools, equipment, premises and system of work used in his business are safe ⁷⁶⁵ and to select and engage other employees who are competent. ⁷⁶⁶

Defective equipment

40-103

The employer is under no absolute duty at common law to warrant the safety of its employee. Therefore, where the employee was injured by a latent defect in a tool which the employer had bought from a reputable retailer who in turn had bought it from reputable manufacturers, it was held that the employer was not liable because the employer had in fact fulfilled his duty to take reasonable care. ⁷⁶⁷ The law in this particular type of case was altered by the Employer's Liability (Defective Equipment) Act 1969. Under that Act, an employer is liable when:

- (a) an employee suffers personal injury in the course of his employment in consequence of a defect in equipment provided by his or her employer for the purposes of his business; and
- (b) the defect is attributable wholly or partly to the fault of a third party (whether identified or not). ⁷⁶⁸

The law on contributory negligence applies to such a claim ⁷⁶⁹, but any agreement purporting to exclude or limit the liability of the employer under the Act is void. ⁷⁷⁰

Action in tort

40-104

In general, the duty to use reasonable care may be enforced either by an action in tort for negligence or by an action for breach of an implied term in the contract of employment ⁷⁷¹; but the action is usually brought in tort. It has been said in the House of Lords that the question whether there has been a breach of the duty is largely a question of fact, in the sense of an appraisal of the particular facts in the light of the broad legal principles which apply. ⁷⁷² For these reasons a detailed analysis of the cases has been omitted from this work and must be sought in works on the law of torts. ⁷⁷³ It is, however, important to note that it was held in Walker v Northumberland CC ⁷⁷⁴ that the employer was liable in respect of psychiatric illness suffered by the employee as the result of stress associated with his workload, and which the employer had been, in the particular circumstances of the case, negligent in failing to prevent. In Sutherland v Hatton, ⁷⁷⁵ the Court of Appeal reviewed the law concerning the employer's liability to the employee in respect of psychiatric illness caused by stress at work. Guidelines were laid down for determining the incidence and extent of such liability, this liability being the same whether regarded for the tort of negligence or under an implied term in contracts of employment. The guidelines emphasise that the ordinary principles of employer liability apply; they require it to be demonstrated that the risk of injury to health from stress at work should be reasonably foreseeable in relation to the particular employee, that if so the employer is in breach of duty as having failed to take steps which were reasonable in the circumstances, and that if so the particular breach of duty caused or materially contributed to the harm in question. In Barber v Somerset CC, ⁷⁷⁶ the House of Lords broadly endorsed the guidelines laid down in Sutherland v Hatton, though applying them to somewhat different outcomes in the particular cases which were under appeal. In Daw v Intel Corp (UK) Ltd, ⁷⁷⁷ the Court of Appeal considered the extent to which employers could discharge this duty of care by the provision of counselling services, making it clear that such provision would not operate as a panacea in all cases.

40-105

Although there may be differences between the relevant rules of tort and contract, ⁷⁷⁸ it seems to be assumed by the courts and the profession that the rules to be applied when an employee brings an action against an employer for personal injuries suffered by the former in the course of his employment are the rules of tort. ⁷⁷⁹ This may perhaps be justified on the basis that there is an implied term in the contract of employment to the effect that if the employee suffers personal injury as the result of a breach of a tortious or statutory duty ⁷⁸⁰ of the employer, the liability of the employer and the remedy of the employee are to depend on the rules of tort. ⁷⁸¹

Compulsory employers' liability insurance

40-106

Under the provisions of the Employers' Liability (Compulsory Insurance) Act 1969, ⁷⁸² an employer carrying on any business in Great Britain is required to maintain insurance under an approved policy with an authorised insurer against liability for bodily injury or disease sustained by his employees and arising out of and in the course of their employment in Great Britain. ⁷⁸³ The term "employee" here means an individual who has entered into or works under a contract of service or apprenticeship. ⁷⁸⁴ Insurance need not be maintained in respect of certain close relatives of an employer, ⁷⁸⁵ nor in respect of employees not ordinarily resident in Great Britain. ⁷⁸⁶ Local authorities, statutory nationalised corporations and certain employers specified by regulation are exempted from the obligation to insure. ⁷⁸⁷ There is provision for regulations to secure the issue and production for inspection of insurance certificates. ⁷⁸⁸ Failure to insure is an offence subject to a fine ⁷⁸⁹; there is a fixed amount for which insurance must be maintained in respect of claims arising out of any one occurrence. ⁷⁹⁰

Statutory duties of the employer relating to safety, health and welfare

40-107

Apart from the statutory modifications of employers' liability considered in the two previous paragraphs, the statute law relating to the safety, health and welfare of employees can conveniently be considered in three parts:

(1)

A wide range of duties is imposed on an employer by a system of statutes and regulations relating to particular types of workplace, industrial process or safety hazard. The statutory framework of this system is contained principally in the Mines and Quarries Act 1954, the Agriculture (Safety, Health and Welfare Provisions) Act 1956, the Factories Act 1961, the Offices, Shops and Railway Premises Act 1963, ⁷⁹¹ and in the Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1992. ⁷⁹² Breaches of the statutes are sanctioned by criminal penalties upon the employer (and sometimes upon the employee), but such breaches may, in the case of certain duties, give an employee injured by the breach a cause of action for damages against his employer. ⁷⁹³ The enumeration of those duties and the detailed description of the actions for breach of statutory duty are outside the scope of the present work.

(2)

40-108

The modern framework of statute law concerning safety, health and welfare at work was established by the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974. ⁷⁹⁴

The principal effects of the Act upon the employment relationship are as follows:

(a)

The Act imposes a set of general duties upon employers, all of which are directed towards making the employer ensure the health, safety and welfare at work of all his employees. ⁷⁹⁵ The duties extend the employers' common law duty in various directions, ⁷⁹⁶ but do not create a cause of action on which civil proceedings may be based. ⁷⁹⁷

(b)

Included among the general duties is a duty to make to all employees, and to keep up-to-date, a statement of the employers' general policy with respect to the employees' health and safety at work and of the arrangements for carrying out that policy. ⁷⁹⁸

(c)

Further included among the general duties is a power of the Secretary of State to make regulations providing for the appointment by recognised trade unions of safety representatives from amongst the employees, ⁷⁹⁹ and a duty on the part of the employer to consult such representatives with a view to making and maintaining effective arrangements for the health and safety of employees. ⁸⁰⁰

(d)

The authorities entrusted by or under the Act with the enforcement of health and safety obligations ⁸⁰¹ are empowered to appoint inspectors ⁸⁰² who are placed under a duty to pass on to employees and their representatives information relating to health and safety, where it is necessary in order to keep them adequately informed about health and safety matters. ⁸⁰³ The information may include that which the inspectors themselves may obtain in exercise of their powers of entry and investigation. ⁸⁰⁴

(e)

Provision is made for the appropriate Secretary of State to make health and safety regulations, which may replace existing statutory provisions, for any of the general purposes of Pt I of the Act. ⁸⁰⁵ This provided authority for the gradual replacement of the existing statutory framework and regulations by a completely new structure, to be augmented by codes of practice issued by the Health and Safety Commission. ⁸⁰⁶

(f)

Provision was made, by Pt III of the Act, from which employees generally have benefited, for extending the scope of the Building Regulations ⁸⁰⁷ and for including among the purposes for which they may be made, the securing of the health, safety, welfare and convenience of persons in or about buildings and of others who may be affected by buildings or matters connected with buildings. ⁸⁰⁸

(3)

40-109

The Employment Rights Act 1996 makes provision for a right of employees not to suffer detriment in health and safety cases, and for treating certain dismissals as unfair in health and safety cases. These provisions confer protections upon employees who are carrying out health and safety duties as designated by the employer, or are safety representatives or members of safety committees carrying out their functions, or who report safety or health hazards to the employer, or who absent themselves from the workplace in circumstances of danger, or who in those circumstances take protective measures. ⁸⁰⁹

Hours of work

40-110

The employer is required to give the employee written particulars of any terms and conditions relating to hours of work (including any relating to normal working hours). ⁸¹⁰ It is often necessary for various statutory purposes to determine whether an employee has normal working hours and if so what those hours are. ⁸¹¹ This frequently involves a decision about the contractual status of overtime working. The prevailing view has been that in order for overtime to form part of "normal working hours" it must be contractually obligatory upon both parties. ⁸¹² It also appears that most overtime working arrangements will be classified as not being contractually obligatory upon the employee. ⁸¹³

Statutory restrictions on hours of work

40-111

Various statutory provisions have imposed maxima upon the working hours and employment in certain circumstances of women, young persons and children. ⁸¹⁴ Further statutory provisions have imposed limits upon the hours of work of all employees in certain industries. ⁸¹⁵ Many of these restrictions were repealed or amended by ss.8 and 9 of the Employment Act 1989, to which reference should now be made. Terms and conditions of employment relating to hours of work may now fall within the provisions concerning equal terms and conditions of employment as between men and women, and the provisions for elimination of various kinds of discrimination in employment, which are considered in subsequent paragraphs of the present section. ⁸¹⁶

The Working Time Regulations

40-112

 Important controls upon working time, required by the EC Working Time Directive ⁸¹⁷ and the Young Workers Directive, ⁸¹⁸ were introduced by the Working Time Regulations 1998, ⁸¹⁹ which have been the subject of various subsequent amending Regulations. ⁸²⁰ The main provisions of these Regulations are, in brief summary, as follows. The Regulations apply to "workers"; the original restriction to those above the minimum school leaving age was revoked in 2003. ⁸²¹ "Workers" are so defined as not to be confined to those with contracts of employment, though so as to exclude the genuinely self-employed. ⁸²² "Working Time" is to be interpreted widely and purposively, including for example travel from a worker's place of residence to customer premises, ⁸²³  or the attendance of meetings as a trade union or health and safety representative. ⁸²⁴  The Regulations set a working time limit of an average of 48 hours per week, with a standard averaging period of 17 weeks which may be extended to up to 52 weeks by a collective agreement between employer(s) and trade union(s), or by a "workforce agreement" between employers and elected workforce representatives, or, in the case of employers of no more than 20 workers, which the workers sign individually. ⁸²⁵

Workers may agree in writing as individuals to disapply the weekly working hours limit.⁸²⁶ Provision is made to protect workers from suffering detriment (such as a denial of promotion or of training opportunities) because they refuse to agree to disapply the limits.⁸²⁷ There are also measures by which night workers are subject to a working time limit of an average of 8 hours in each 24 hour period, and by which night workers whose work involves special hazard or heavy physical or mental strain are subject to an 8 hour limit for each 24 hour period.⁸²⁸ Stricter limits upon maximum working time and night work are set for young workers.⁸²⁹ There are also measures relating to rest breaks and rest periods, whereby workers are entitled to one day off each week and young workers are entitled to two days off each week,⁸³⁰ whereby workers are entitled to 11 hours consecutive rest per day and young workers are entitled to 12 hours consecutive rest per day,⁸³¹ and whereby workers are entitled to a rest break of at least 20 minutes in a working day of longer than 6 hours, and young workers are entitled to a rest break of at least 30 minutes in a working day of longer than 4.5 hours.⁸³² It is incumbent on the employer proactively to ensure that working arrangements allow for workers to take their due rest breaks.⁸³³  Certain of those provisions are subject to exceptions in respect of collective or “workforce” agreements.⁸³⁴ The Regulations also confer upon workers within their scope, an entitlement to four weeks paid annual leave.⁸³⁵ There is provision for the enforcement of the limits on weekly working time and night work by the health and safety enforcing authorities,⁸³⁶ and for workers to assert in claims or complaints to employment tribunals, their entitlements, such as to rest periods and breaks and paid annual leave, and their rights to be protected from detriment, such as for refusing to agree to disapply limits on working time.⁸³⁷

Employee's belongings

40-113

Although an employer is under a duty to take reasonable care for his or her employee's personal safety,⁸³⁸ the employer has been thought to be under no similar duty to take positive steps to protect employee's personal belongings; thus, the employer of an actor was not liable when the actor's clothing was stolen from a dressing-room.⁸³⁹ However, a failure on the part of the employer to take reasonable steps to protect the employee's personal belongings might possibly amount to a breach of the implied obligation of mutual trust and confidence.⁸⁴⁰

Duty to indemnify the employee

40-114

The relationship of employment imposes a duty on the employer to indemnify or reimburse the employee against all expenses, losses and liabilities incurred by the employee in the execution of his employer's instructions, or within the authority granted to him by the employer, or during the reasonable performance of his employment.⁸⁴¹ Thus an employer who failed to insure his vehicle in respect of third-party risks⁸⁴² was obliged to indemnify his employee who drove the vehicle in the course of his employment and who was held liable to a third person injured by his negligent driving.⁸⁴³ Nor, it was held in Reid v Rush & Tompkins Group Plc,⁸⁴⁴ is the employer under any implied obligation to advise an employee working overseas to arrange his own insurance cover against accidents. But there is no general duty to keep the employee insured against all third party risks or to indemnify the employee against liability for his or her own negligence.⁸⁴⁵ Ancient authority suggests that if the act or omission of the employee was manifestly unlawful, he or she is not entitled to such an indemnity⁸⁴⁶; but he may still be entitled to an indemnity from his employer if the act was apparently lawful⁸⁴⁷ or he was ignorant of the facts which made it unlawful⁸⁴⁸ and could not be presumed to know that the particular transaction was unlawful.⁸⁴⁹

The rights of the employee in relation to trade union membership and Activities

40-115

Under the provisions of ss.146 to 151 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 as subsequently amended,⁸⁵⁰ a worker⁸⁵¹ has a right not to be subjected to any detriment as an individual by any act, or any deliberate failure to act, ⁸⁵² by his employer if the act or failure takes place for the purpose of preventing or deterring him from becoming a member of an independent trade union, or penalising him for doing so, ⁸⁵³ or from taking part in the activities of an independent trade union at any appropriate time, or penalising him for doing so, ⁸⁵⁴ or compelling him to be or become a member of any trade union or of a particular trade union or of one of a number of particular trade unions. ⁸⁵⁵ The Employment Relations Act 2004 established new or enhanced rights for workers not to be offered inducements relating to trade union membership and collective bargaining, and extended their rights not to suffer detrimental action in circumstances relating to trade union membership. ⁸⁵⁶

40-116

A worker may complain to an employment tribunal of an alleged infringement of any of these rights, ⁸⁵⁷ and the employer has to show the purpose of the act or omission in question. ⁸⁵⁸ A complaint upheld by the tribunal must be the subject of a declaration and may be the subject of an award of compensation. ⁸⁵⁹

Statutory rights of employees to time off

40-117

The Trade Union Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 and the Employment Rights Act 1996 as subsequently amended require employers to allow employees time off for various particular purposes. ⁸⁶⁰ Special procedures are created for the enforcement of these rights, ⁸⁶¹ but they must in addition modify, pro tanto, the ordinary effects of the contract of employment so far as the employee's obligation to attend for work is concerned. The extent to which these rights include the right to remuneration during the time off has been considered in an earlier paragraph. ⁸⁶² Some ⁸⁶³ of the most important rights to time off are as follows:

(1) Trade union officials; industrial relations duties and training

40-118

An employer must permit an employee who is an official of an independent trade union ⁸⁶⁴ recognised ⁸⁶⁵ by the employer to take time off work to carry out duties concerned with industrial relations between the employer or an associated employer and their employees, or to undergo training in industrial relations of a relevant and approved kind. ⁸⁶⁶ The amount of time off to be allowed, and the circumstances in which it is to be allowed, are the subject of guidance contained in a Code of Practice issued by the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service ("the Service"). ⁸⁶⁷ Section 14 of the Employment Act 1989 amended what was then s.27 of the 1978 Act so that the duties in respect of which an employer is required to allow officials of a trade union time off with pay are limited to duties concerned with matters in respect of which the employer recognises the trade union.

(2) Trade union activities

40-119

An employer must permit an employee who is a member of an independent trade union recognised by the employer ⁸⁶⁸ to take time off work for the purpose of taking part in any trade union activity of a recognised independent trade union of which the employee is a member or of which he is acting as a representative, provided that the activities do not themselves consist of industrial action. ⁸⁶⁹ The amount of such time off and the circumstances in which it must be allowed are to be the subject of guidance contained in a Code of Practice to be issued by the Service. ⁸⁷⁰

(3) Public duties

40-120

An employer must permit employees who hold certain public offices (such as that of justice of the peace) or who are members of certain public bodies (such as a local authority or statutory tribunal) to take time off work for the performance of their duties in the discharge of their office or of the functions of the public body to which they belong. ⁸⁷¹ The amount of time off thus required is the amount which is reasonable having regard to the extent of the public duties concerned, the amount of time off work already permitted under this head or for trade union duties or activities, and the effect of the employees' absence on the running of the employer's business. ⁸⁷²

(4) Employees under notice of redundancy; time off to look for work or make arrangements for training40-121

An employee who has been given notice of dismissal by reason of redundancy is entitled during his period of notice to be allowed by his employer reasonable time off work to look for new employment or to make arrangements for training for future employment, ⁸⁷³ provided that by the time of expiry of his statutory period of notice, or such longer notice as is actually given, the employee has been continuously employed for two years or more. ⁸⁷⁴

(5) Ante-natal care40-122

An employee who has, on the advice of a doctor, midwife or health visitor, made an appointment for the purpose of ante-natal care has the right not to be unreasonably refused time off during her working hours to enable her to keep the appointment. ⁸⁷⁵

(6) Time off for domestic reasons relating to dependants40-123

The Employment Relations Act 1999 created a new entitlement for an employee to be allowed a reasonable amount of time off for specified domestic reasons involving incidents befalling the dependants of the employee and requiring action by the employee. ⁸⁷⁶ The provisions of the newly inserted s.57A of the Employment Rights Act 1996 entitle an employee to be allowed a reasonable amount of time off for specified domestic reasons involving the care of dependants of the employee, and new s.57B enables the employee to complain to an employment tribunal that the employer has unreasonably refused to permit that time off. Further provisions protect the employee from being subjected to detriment, or from being dismissed, by his or her employer by reason of exercising or seeking to exercise this right to time off. ⁸⁷⁷

Effect of failure to allow time off40-124

An appropriately qualified employee may complain to an employment tribunal of failure to allow him or her time off in accordance with any of the foregoing provisions for time off. ⁸⁷⁸ If the complaint is upheld, the tribunal must, in the cases of time off for trade union duties, trade union activities and public duties, make a declaration to that effect and may in those cases award compensation assessed with regard to the employer's default, and to any loss sustained by the employee. ⁸⁷⁹ If a complaint is upheld of failure to allow a redundant employee time off to look for work or make arrangements for training, the tribunal must make a declaration to that effect and must also order the employer to pay to the employee an amount equal to the remuneration to which he or she would have been entitled if he or she had been allowed the time off, ⁸⁸⁰ the total amount recoverable being limited to two-fifths of a week's pay of the employee concerned. ⁸⁸¹ If a complaint is upheld of unreasonable refusal of time off for ante-natal care, or of remuneration due for that time off, the tribunal must make a declaration to that effect and must order the employer to pay the equivalent or due remuneration. ⁸⁸² (The rights to remuneration during time off in this case and in the case of the other rights to time off have been described in an earlier paragraph). ⁸⁸³

Provisions against sex discrimination during the period of employment

40-125

The legislation concerning sex discrimination in relation to employment deals with the three stages of the employment relationship:

- (1)
formation of the contract under which a person is employed;
- (2)
during the period of employment; and
- (3)
the termination of employment.

The provisions concerning sex discrimination in the formation and termination of the employment relationship are considered elsewhere in the present chapter. ⁸⁸⁴ The provisions concerning sex discrimination during the period of employment are themselves of two kinds:

- (1)
provisions originally in the Equal Pay Act 1970, known as the "Equal Pay Legislation", and now contained in the Equality Act 2010, for an equality clause in individual contracts under which a person is employed; other provisions, formerly in the Sex Discrimination Act 1975 and now in the Equality Act 2010 against sex discrimination during the period of employment generally (and after the period of employment).
- (2)

These provisions are described in the ensuing paragraphs. ⁸⁸⁵

Equality clauses in contracts of employment (1) gender equality

40-126

The Equality Act 2010, consolidating provisions previously contained in the Equal Pay Act 1970 as subsequently amended, principally by the Sex Discrimination Act 1975 and by the Equal Pay (Amendment) Regulations 1983, ⁸⁸⁶ provides for mandatory implication of an equality clause into the contracts under which certain persons are employed. ⁸⁸⁷ The equality clause requires an individual woman (or man) to be accorded contractual terms not less favourable than those accorded to an employed person of the opposite sex.⁸⁸⁸ The corresponding provisions in the antecedent legislation were held to require a term-by-term equalisation of the compared contracts of employment, for the purpose of which different elements of remuneration and benefits are to be regarded as distinct terms.⁸⁸⁹ The equality clause applies where a woman and a man are employed on “equal work”, a concept which includes (1) like work, (2) work rated as equivalent in the same employment, or (3) work which is, in terms of the demands made on the one (for instance under such headings as effort skill and decision-making), of equal value to that of the other.⁸⁹⁰ “Like work” means work of the same or a broadly similar nature as the other work in question,⁸⁹¹ whilst “work rated as equivalent” means work accorded a value equal to that of the other work in question in a job evaluation study (assuming the removal of differentiations between men’s work and women’s work in the system of evaluation).⁸⁹² For the purposes of the equality clause, the comparators include but are limited to those in the employment of the same employer or of an associated employer, working at the same establishment or at another establishment but at which terms of work common to both apply.⁸⁹³ The equality clause operates to bring less favourable terms in the contract up to the level of their more favourable counterparts, and to bring about the inclusion of terms not included in the contract which are included in the more favourable counterpart contract.⁸⁹⁴ The equality clause does not operate upon a variation between the contract and its counterpart if the employer shows that the variation is genuinely due to a material factor which is not the difference of sex; that factor must be a material difference between the woman’s case and the man’s, reliance on which is a proportionate means of achieving a legitimate aim where like work or work rated as equivalent is in issue.⁸⁹⁵ An employed person may present a claim to an employment tribunal in respect of the breach of a contractual term modified or included by the operation of an equality clause.⁸⁹⁶ The tribunal may award arrears of remuneration or damages,⁸⁹⁷ provided that arrears of remuneration are not awarded in respect of a time before the “arrears day”.⁸⁹⁸ An employer may apply to an employment tribunal for a declaration to resolve a dispute concerning the effect of an equality clause.⁸⁹⁹ Finally, any court may refer to an employment tribunal a question arising in proceedings before the court in respect of the operation of an equality clause.⁹⁰⁰ Where, on a complaint or reference to an employment tribunal, a dispute arises as to whether any work is of equal value within the meaning of the statute, the tribunal may determine that question, or may require a member of the panel of independent experts⁹⁰¹ to prepare a report with respect to that question.⁹⁰²

Equality clauses in contracts of employment (2) maternity equality

40-127

Provision was made by the Equality Act 2010 ss.72-74 for the contracts under which women are employed to be treated as including a maternity equality clause. The main effect of the maternity equality clause is to ensure that pay and bonus pay for a woman on maternity leave keep pace with the pay and bonus pay which the woman would have received if she had not been on maternity leave.⁹⁰³ In order to avoid re-duplication or conflict as between these provisions for a maternity equality clause and the general provisions against pregnancy and maternity discrimination,⁹⁰⁴ provision is made to exclude the latter provisions where the maternity equality clause is applicable.⁹⁰⁵

Sex discrimination during and after the period of employment

40-128

The Sex Discrimination Act 1975 as amended by the Sex Discrimination Act 1986 and by subsequent legislation made wide provisions concerning sex discrimination against an employed person during and after the period of employment; corresponding provisions are now made by the Equality Act 2010.⁹⁰⁶ It is unlawful for an employer to discriminate⁹⁰⁷ against an employed person in the way that access is afforded, or by refusing or deliberately omitting to afford access, to opportunities for promotion, transfer or training or to any other benefits, facilities or services.⁹⁰⁸ It is also made unlawful for the employer to discriminate against an employed person on the grounds of sex by dismissing the employed person⁹⁰⁹ or by subjecting him or her to any other detriment⁹¹⁰ (such as suspension of employment where that is not imposed on employed persons of the opposite sex).

Exceptions to requirement not to discriminate

40-129

There are some exceptions to these requirements not to discriminate during employment. The main exception consists in provision that the requirements relating to opportunities for promotion, transfer or training do not apply in respect of an employment for which being of a particular sex is an occupational requirement as statutorily defined. ⁹¹¹ It is also provided that the provision of benefits, facilities or services to employees falls outside these provisions if those benefits, facilities or services are also provided to the public ⁹¹² unless their provision to the employed persons differs in a material respect from their provision to the public, or their provision to the employed person is regulated by the contract under which that person is employed or the benefits, facilities or services relate to training. ⁹¹³

Complaints procedure

40-130

An employed person may complain of contravention of the statutory requirements to an employment tribunal ⁹¹⁴ which may if it upholds the complaint award one or more of the following remedies:

- (a)
 - an order declaring the rights of the parties ⁹¹⁵;
- (b)
 - an order for compensation ⁹¹⁶ assessed on the basis which would apply if the complaint were a tort action in the High Court ⁹¹⁷; or
- (c)
 - a recommendation of a particular course of action for the purpose of minimising the detriment complained of, with a sanction of compensation in the event of non-compliance limited as under sub-para.(b) above. ⁹¹⁸

Relationship to gender equality clauses

40-131

The relationship between the provisions concerning sex discrimination during the period of employment described in the immediately preceding paragraphs ⁹¹⁹ and the provisions concerning gender equality clauses described in an earlier paragraph ⁹²⁰ are as follows. Within their area of application, the gender equality clause provisions automatically remove certain inequalities by the operation of those clauses. The sex discrimination provisions, on the other hand, render unlawful certain acts of discrimination during the period of employment which fall outside the scope of an equality clause in that they do not themselves consist of the setting of contractual terms. It is provided that the latter provisions do not in general apply where the former provisions do ⁹²¹; however, there are certain defined circumstances in which the sex discrimination provisions may nevertheless operate in relation to contractual pay where direct discrimination or combined discrimination are involved. ⁹²² The upshot is that the sex discrimination provisions can apply in respect of matters not included in the contract under which a person is employed, can apply outside the area of comparison existing between workers doing like work or equivalently rated work, and are not limited to comparison between actual cases (that is to say, they can extend to comparison with a hypothetical employed person of the opposite sex). ⁹²³

Pregnancy and maternity discrimination during the period of employment

40-132

Provision is made by s.18 of the Equality Act 2010 to ensure that it counts as unlawful discrimination for an employer, during the period in which a woman is pregnant or on ordinary or additional maternity leave, ⁹²⁴ to treat her unfavourably because of the pregnancy or because of illness suffered by her as a result of it, or because she is on compulsory maternity leave or because she is seeking to exercise the right to ordinary or additional maternity leave. ⁹²⁵ In particular an employer must not discriminate against a woman in the above-mentioned sense as to her terms of employment, ⁹²⁶ or in the way that access is afforded to her or not afforded to her to opportunities to promotion, transfer, or training, or for receiving any other benefit, facility, or service ⁹²⁷ or by subjecting her to any other detriment. ⁹²⁸ There is a right to complain to an employment tribunal in respect of such discrimination ⁹²⁹; and the tribunal has power to award remedies including that of compensation. ⁹³⁰

Discrimination against married persons and civil partners during and after the period of employment

40-133

The Sex Discrimination Act 1975 (as amended by the Sex Discrimination Act 1986 and the Civil Partnership Act 2004) made provision concerning direct and indirect discrimination against married persons and civil partners in the employment field which was broadly similar to the provisions relating to sex discrimination during the period of employment described in the previous paragraphs, with this main difference, that the exception where being of a particular gender was a genuine occupational qualification had no application and no counterpart in cases of discrimination against married persons or civil partners. Corresponding provisions are now contained in the Equality Act 2010. ⁹³¹

Racial discrimination during the period of employment

40-134

Under the provisions of the Race Relations Act 1976 (as amended by subsequent legislation), it was unlawful for an employer or any person concerned with the employment of others to discriminate against any person employed on work of any description by refusing or deliberately omitting to afford or offer him the like terms of employment, the like conditions of work and the like opportunities for training and promotion as the employer makes available for persons of the like qualifications employed in like circumstances on work of that description. This provision afforded a continuing protection during employment, as well as at the stage of the initial offer of employment. Contravention of this provision was subject to the same enforcement mechanism as applies to the corresponding provisions relating to the formation of the employment relationship. Corresponding provisions are now contained in the Equality Act 2010. ⁹³²

Disability discrimination during the period of employment

40-135

In a way which is comparable with the protections against sex and race discrimination described in the foregoing paragraphs, the provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 imposed continuing duties upon employers during the period of employment, making it unlawful for an employer to discriminate against a disabled person whom he or she employs in the terms of employment which he or she affords him or her, in the opportunities which he or she affords him or her for promotion, training, transfer, or receiving any other benefit, or by refusing him or her any such benefit, and in particular requiring the employer to make reasonable adjustment to ensure that the disabled person is not placed at a substantial disadvantage. The Disability Discrimination Act 2005 amended and extended in various respects the provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 concerning disability discrimination in employment. Corresponding provisions are now contained in the Equality

Act 2010. ⁹³³

Equality with regard to religion or belief, sexual orientation, and age during the period of employment

40-136

Provisions very closely comparable to those relating to sex and race discrimination, were made, with effect from December 2003, with regard to religion or belief, with regard to sexual orientation, and with regard to age by, respectively, the Employment Equality (Religion or Belief) Regulations 2003, ⁹³⁴ the Employment Equality (Sexual Orientation) Regulations 2003, ⁹³⁵ and the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations 2006, ⁹³⁶ all of these sets of regulations being enacted in implementation of the requirements of Council Directive 2000/78 establishing a general framework for equal treatment in employment and vocational training. ⁹³⁷ Corresponding provisions are now contained in the Equality Act 2010. ⁹³⁸

Victimisation and harassment during and after the period of employment

40-137

The various aforementioned provisions of the Equality Act 2010 concerning discrimination during and after the period of employment are reinforced by provision against discrimination by way of victimisation, and against harassment. ⁹³⁹ Such victimisation occurs where a person subjects another person to a detriment by reason of the fact that the person victimised has done, or where it is believed that he or she has done or may do, any of a series of "protected acts" concerned with the claiming of rights under or assertion of contravention of the Act. ⁹⁴⁰ In such cases, the exception relating to occupational requirement ⁹⁴¹ does not apply and has no counterpart. "Harassment" is essentially defined as unwanted conduct, related to the protected characteristics of age, disability, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, sex, and sexual orientation, which has the purpose or effect of violating a person's dignity or creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment for a person. ⁹⁴² It is provided that employers must not harass persons in their employment or who have applied to them for employment ⁹⁴³; and employers are treated as harassing where in certain circumstances they fail to take reasonably practicable steps to prevent a third party from so doing. ⁹⁴⁴ The provisions in s.40 holding employers vicariously liable for such third party harassment have however been repealed as of October 1, 2013. ⁹⁴⁵

Terms involving unlawful discrimination

40-138

Under s.142 of the Equality Act 2010, a term of a contract, or in certain circumstances a term of a non-contractual agreement, is unenforceable where it involves unlawful discrimination, in which case provision exists for any person interested in such a contract to apply to a county court for an order removing or modifying such a term. ⁹⁴⁶ Further provision is made by s.145 of the Act to render void any term of a collective agreement, including an agreement not intended to be a legally enforceable contract, and to render unenforceable any rule of an employing undertaking so far as it constitutes, promotes, or provides for treatment which is unlawful under the Act. ⁹⁴⁷

Protection of rehabilitated offenders during the period of employment

40-139

Under the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974, ⁹⁴⁸ it is provided that a spent conviction or any circumstances ancillary thereto or any failure to disclose a spent conviction or any such circumstances shall not be a proper ground for prejudicing a person in any way in any occupation or employment. ⁹⁴⁹ This appears to extend to detriments suffered by an employee during his or her period of employment. However, no machinery of enforcement is provided in relation to this enactment. The ability of this provision to have any specific effect on the rights of the employee during employment therefore depends upon whether it could be used as the basis of a new cause of action based upon breach of statutory duty ⁹⁵⁰ or upon a notion of the right to work, ⁹⁵¹ and upon whether it can serve as a canon of construction of the employee's contractual rights, in relation, for instance, to a disciplinary procedure.

Rights in connection with parenthood and family responsibility

40-140

In this and the succeeding paragraphs, a brief summary is provided of the rights in connection with parenthood and family responsibility (formerly described as "maternity rights" but now constituting a broader category of rights) ⁹⁵² for which provision is made by Pt VIII of the Employment Rights Act 1996 as amended by subsequent legislation ⁹⁵³ and by Pt 8A of that Act as inserted by the Employment Act 2002. This legislation makes the following sets of provisions for rights in connection with parenthood, which are respectively summarised in the following paragraphs: (1) maternity leave; (2) adoption leave; (3) parental leave; (4) paternity leave; and (5) flexible working. There is also summarised, in this connection, the new legislation which makes provision for: (6) protection from detriment in connection with parenthood. In the cases of maternity leave, adoption leave, and paternity leave, associated provision is made for rights to maternity pay, adoption pay, and paternity pay, and those rights were detailed earlier in this chapter. ⁹⁵⁴ Other statutory rights in connection with parenthood and family responsibility are also described elsewhere in this chapter ⁹⁵⁵; particular note should be taken of the articulation of general notions of pregnancy and maternity equality and pregnancy and maternity discrimination in the Equality Act 2010, as described earlier in this chapter. ⁹⁵⁶

(1) Maternity Leave

40-141

Part VIII Ch.I of the Employment Rights Act 1996 deals with maternity leave. Section 71 and the associated regulations provide for an "ordinary maternity leave period" of 26 weeks ⁹⁵⁷ of which the characteristic is that the employee is entitled to return to her own previous job; s.72 and its associated regulations ⁹⁵⁸ provide for a compulsory maternity leave period of not less than two weeks; new s.73 and its associated regulations provide for an additional maternity leave period of 26 weeks from the beginning of the week of childbirth, of which the characteristic is that the employee is entitled to return to work though not necessarily to her own previous job.

(2) Adoption Leave

40-142

Part VIII Ch.IA of the Employment Rights Act 1996, as inserted by the provisions of the Employment Act 2002 deals with adoption leave. Section 75A and the associated regulations provide, in the case of qualified employees who adopt a child individually, or for one partner of a couple who adopt a child jointly, for an "ordinary adoption leave period" of 26 weeks from the beginning of the week of adoption which is normally paid leave; s.75B and its associated regulations provide for an additional adoption leave period of 26 weeks from the beginning of the week of adoption, in respect of which there is no statutory right to pay.

(3) Parental Leave

40-143

Part VIII Ch.II of the Employment Rights Act 1996 deals with parental leave. Sections 76 to 79 and the regulations made thereunder confer an entitlement, upon employees who satisfy the specified conditions, to be absent from work for up to 13 weeks for the purpose of caring for a child of theirs, before the child's fifth birthday. This is extended to 18 weeks before the child's eighteenth birthday in the case of disabled children. Section 80 provides for an employee to complain to an employment tribunal that his or her employer has unreasonably postponed such leave or prevented or attempted to prevent the employee from taking such leave.

(4) Paternity Leave

40-144

Part VIII Ch.III of the Employment Rights Act 1996, as inserted by Pt 1, Ch.1 of the Employment Act 2002, deals with paternity leave. Sections 80A to 80E and the regulations made thereunder confer an entitlement, upon employees who satisfy the specified conditions, to be absent from work for up to two weeks for the purpose of caring for a newly born child of theirs and to support the child's mother, and also confer a corresponding entitlement in the case of adoption.

(5) Flexible working: the right to request contract variation

40-145

The Employment Act 2002 makes provision under the title of "flexible working" ⁹⁵⁹ for parents, who are qualifying employees, of children aged under six or disabled children aged under 18, to have the right to apply to their employer for a contract variation relating to hours or times of work, or location of work as between home and a place of business of the employer, or for such other aspects of terms and conditions of employment as may be specified by regulations. That right imposes duties upon the employer, first to process the application in the manner prescribed by regulations, and secondly to refuse the application only where "he considers" that one or more of a prescribed set of grounds for refusal, such as "the burden of additional costs" applies or apply. ⁹⁶⁰ Section 12 of the Work and Families Act 2006, amending new s.80F of the Employment Rights Act 1996, extends the category of employees who are entitled to request flexible working by including "carers" within the scheme. The categories of adult relatives in respect of whom such a request may be made are specified by regulations. ⁹⁶¹

(6) Protection from detriment in connection with parenthood and family Responsibility

40-146

By a succession of enactments beginning with the Employment Relations Act 1999, ⁹⁶² there have been conferred upon employees a series of protections against detriment in connection with various aspects of parenthood and family responsibility or with the exercise of rights relating to parenthood and family responsibility. As a brief summary of the effect of those enactments, an employee has the right not to suffer detrimental treatment at work (other than dismissal, which is the subject of separate provision) ⁹⁶³ for the reason that:

She is pregnant or has given birth to a child, or

She has exercised or has sought to exercise the rights to maternity leave or maternity pay, or

She or he has exercised or has sought to exercise the rights to parental leave, or

She or he has exercised or has sought to exercise the rights to time off for domestic reasons (to care for dependants), ⁹⁶⁴ or

He has exercised or has sought to exercise the rights to paternity leave or paternity pay, or

She or he has exercised or has sought to exercise the rights to adoption leave or adoption pay, or the rights to paternity leave or paternity pay which apply to adoptive parents, ⁹⁶⁵ or

She or he has exercised or has sought to exercise the rights which relate to flexible working. ⁹⁶⁶

An employee may complain to employment tribunal of subjection to detriment for any of these reasons, ⁹⁶⁷ and the tribunal may award the remedies of declaration and/or compensation. ⁹⁶⁸

References and testimonials

40-147

Early authorities suggest that an employer need not give his employee a reference or testimonial when the employment ends, nor answer any inquiries from prospective employers of a former employee. ⁹⁶⁹ It was once said ⁹⁷⁰ to be an unreasonable custom that, on quitting at the end of the first month by notice given in the first fortnight, a domestic employee was entitled to have the character reference she came with handed to her to enable her to show it to her next employer. If the employer does give a reference or testimonial to an employee, an employer may be guilty of an offence ⁹⁷¹ if the employer gives a false character, either orally or in writing ⁹⁷²; the employer may also be liable in damages to a subsequent employer who suffers loss by engaging the employee in reliance upon the reference if it contains a statement of fact which the employer knows to be untrue, ⁹⁷³ or (possibly) if the employer is negligent in making statements in it. ⁹⁷⁴ It was held in Spring v Guardian Assurance Plc ⁹⁷⁵ that an employer who gave a reference to an employer of one of his ex-employees did owe a duty of reasonable care to the ex-employee to ensure that the facts stated in the reference were accurate, in accordance with the earlier decision recognising such a duty in the case of Lawton v BOC Transshield Ltd. ⁹⁷⁶ The duty of care which was recognised in Spring v Guardian Assurance Plc was later expounded by the Court of Appeal ⁹⁷⁷ as a duty to provide a true, fair and accurate reference when taken as a whole rather than as a series of discrete statements. It has since been ruled ⁹⁷⁸ that there is only a duty to take reasonable care not to give misleading information about the worker in question, and not a duty to give a reference that is full and comprehensive. The Court of Appeal has in a later case ⁹⁷⁹ upheld a decision of the County Court that the employers were negligent in providing a reference in respect of the claimant to subsequent employers which relied upon allegations of dishonest conduct which they had not properly investigated, and has since ⁹⁸⁰ held that there was no liability for negligent misstatement where the former employing company claimed that the former employee had left owing repayment of an advance commission payment, but where that was not asserted to any third party or in any reference given to a potential employer. The former employee will have an action for libel or slander against the employer for any untrue statement in the reference or testimonial which injures his or her reputation only if he or she can prove malice on the part of the employer, ⁹⁸¹ since the occasion is one protected by the defence of qualified privilege. ⁹⁸² If a written character reference is produced by the employee to the prospective employer, the document will usually belong to the employee, who will be entitled to damages if the prospective employer destroys or defaces it. ⁹⁸³

References and the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974

40-148

The writing of references and testimonials may be affected by the provisions of the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974. ⁹⁸⁴ If a reference is given in answer to questions, the questions are to be treated as not related to spent convictions or their ancillary circumstances and no penalty or liability can attach to failure to disclose these in the answer. ⁹⁸⁵ If the writer of a reference or testimonial does refer to spent convictions, and is sued for defamation for so doing, the writer cannot rely on the defence of justification (truth) if the statement is shown to have been made with malice. ⁹⁸⁶ The Act created a new offence of unauthorised disclosure of spent convictions which may be committed by a person who has in the course of his or her official duties had access to any "official record" or the information in it and who discloses a spent conviction other than in the course of his or her duties. ⁹⁸⁷

Data protection and privacy

40-149

The common law of the contract of employment has little to say about data protection and employees' privacy, though the employer's implied duty to deserve the trust and confidence of the employee might be invoked. ⁹⁸⁸ However, there is an increasingly significant body of statute law in this area, of which the main provisions, in very brief summary, are as follows. The Data Protection Act 1984 imposed requirements of registration, with the Data Protection Registrar (later replaced by the Information Commissioner), ⁹⁸⁹ upon all data users holding personal data which could be processed automatically and formed part of a collection of data; these requirements therefore extended to many employers. ⁹⁹⁰ The data user was obliged to comply with the data protection principles derived from the Council of Europe Convention on Data Protection. A more extensive and elaborate regime of data protection was envisaged by the EC Data Protection Directive of 1995. ⁹⁹¹ The Data Protection Act 1998 ⁹⁹² was enacted to implement the requirements of that Directive; it replaces in a more extended form the provisions of the 1984 Act. The concept of personal data is enlarged to include data within a relevant filing system as well as automatically processed data—that is, it goes beyond data held in computers or on disk. ⁹⁹³ Under the provisions of the Act, data controllers—which includes employers—are required to abide by the data protection principles of the Act, ⁹⁹⁴ and also to give effect to special controls placed upon the use of a category of data designated as "sensitive personal data". ⁹⁹⁵ The Act confers important rights upon data subjects, such as employees, in particular the right of access, in and on certain conditions, to personal data, ⁹⁹⁶ the right to prevent processing likely to cause damage or distress, ⁹⁹⁷ and rights in relation to automated decision-making which place significant restrictions on the way that the appraisal of employees' performance may be conducted. ⁹⁹⁸ Provision is made for claims to compensation for failure to comply with certain of these requirements. ⁹⁹⁹ There are also important controls placed by the Access to Medical Records Act 1988 upon the conditions on which an employer or prospective employer may have access to a medical report made on an employee or prospective employee for employment purposes. More generally, employees of public authorities may be able to invoke against their public authority employers the right to respect for private and family life which is embodied in art.8 of the European Convention on Human Rights and is incorporated into the law of the United Kingdom by virtue of the provisions of the Human Rights Act 1998. ¹⁰⁰⁰

Trust and confidence and other associated implied duties

40-150

The decision of the Court of Appeal in Western Excavating (ECC) Ltd v Sharp, ¹⁰⁰¹ that the statutory concept of constructive dismissal ¹⁰⁰² was to be interpreted as requiring either fundamental breach or repudiation of the contract of employment, has proved a fruitful source of case law about the employer's implied duties under the contract of employment and has given rise to the recognition of a number of new general and particular implied duties. The most important of those is a general implied duty to preserve the trust and confidence that an employee should have in his or her employer. ¹⁰⁰³ This implied term received the recognition of the House of Lords in Malik v Bank of Commerce and Credit International SA, ¹⁰⁰⁴ where it was held that there might be a breach of the implied term of trust and confidence, giving rise to “stigma damages”, where the conduct of the employer’s business was so disreputable as to damage the employee’s prospects of obtaining other employment. ¹⁰⁰⁵ Other implied duties so recognised have been: an implied duty not to behave arbitrarily, capriciously and inequitably in matters concerning remuneration ¹⁰⁰⁶; an implied duty to investigate a genuine and bona fide safety grievance ¹⁰⁰⁷; an implied duty to take reasonable steps to maintain an appraisal of a probationer during a trial period, giving guidance by advice or warning where necessary. ¹⁰⁰⁸ This whole development can be seen as the counterpart of the employee’s duty of contractual co-operation ¹⁰⁰⁹; but it stops short of an absolutely general implied term requiring the employer to behave reasonably towards the employee. ¹⁰¹⁰ Moreover, it has not permitted an argument to succeed that an employer’s equal opportunity policy must be regarded as an implied term of the contract of employment capable of overriding an express term in conflict with the policy. ¹⁰¹¹

Extensions of the implied obligation of trust and confidence

40-151

A significant extension of the development occurred (outside the context of constructive dismissal) in Scally v Southern Health Board, ¹⁰¹² where the House of Lords held that where a contract of employment negotiated between employers and a representative body, or otherwise settled on a non-individual basis, contained a term conferring on the employee a valuable right contingent upon his acting as required, of which he could not be expected to be aware unless that term was brought to his attention, there was an implied obligation on the employer to take reasonable steps to bring the term to the employee’s attention so as to enable him to enjoy the right in question. The implied obligation has been held to apply in the following situations: the Employment Appeal Tribunal has held that a local authority employer was vicariously liable for a breach of the implied obligation of trust and confidence where a councillor subjected the employee to harassment in the course of his work ¹⁰¹³; the Court of Appeal has held that another local authority employer was in breach of the implied obligation of trust and confidence where the employee was suspended, pending the investigation of an allegation of abuse of a child in her care, without sufficient cause ¹⁰¹⁴; the Court of Appeal has also held that an employing company was liable for breach of the implied obligation of trust and confidence in failing to offer a revised contractual package of pay and benefits to one worker which was offered to others in a similar situation. ¹⁰¹⁵

Further applications and extensions of the implied obligation of trust and confidence

40-152

⚠ There continue to be cases in which employing enterprises are held to be in breach of specific obligations which are implied in and from the particular circumstances but are derived from or associated with the general implied obligation as to trust and confidence. ¹⁰¹⁶ The decision of the Court of Appeal in Horkulak v Cantor Fitzgerald International ¹⁰¹⁷ confirmed the application of the implied obligation to the exercise of a contractual discretion as to the level of bonus payment to be awarded. The decisions of the High Court in Takacs v Barclays Services Jersey Ltd ¹⁰¹⁸ and of the Court of Appeal in Keen v Commerzbank AG ¹⁰¹⁹ ⚠ suggest that the implied controls upon the exercise of contractual discretions with regard to bonus payments are increasingly being envisaged in terms of obligations on the part of the employer to refrain from irrational or perverse exercise or non-exercise of such discretions, and also to refrain from termination of employment for the purpose of avoiding liability to bonus payment. In Braganza v BP Shipping Ltd, ¹⁰²⁰ the Supreme Court highlighted the extension of the implied term of trust and confidence to the employer’s exercise of contractual discretion, holding that “[a]ny decision-making function entrusted to the employer has to be exercised in accordance with the implied obligation of trust and confidence”. ¹⁰²¹ ⚠ The Court opined in Bradbury v BBC ¹⁰²² ⚠ that an employer’s several actions might cumulatively amount to a breach of the implied term.

The limits of the implied obligation of trust and confidence

40-153

Although the implied obligation as to trust and confidence has thus continued to be extended in various directions in recent years, limiting decisions and limiting doctrines also present themselves. In BCCI v Ali (No.2), ¹⁰²³ the Court of Appeal upheld the finding that two former employees had not shown a sufficiently strong causative link between the employer's breach of the implied term of trust and confidence and their difficulty in obtaining subsequent employment; the indications are that claims to stigma damages will in practice be difficult to establish. Most importantly, in Johnson v Unisys Ltd ¹⁰²⁴ the House of Lords held that the implied obligation of mutual trust and confidence did not apply to limit the manner in which an employer exercised a power of dismissal, so that a claim for "stigma damages" or for damages for distress or injury to feelings could not be made where that would be the basis of the claim. This was said to be for the reason that Parliament when enacting the provisions concerning remedies for unfair dismissal had intended that those provisions should provide the sole source of complaint and compensation for injury caused by the manner of dismissal from employment. That has left a difficulty of deciding whether, when dismissal eventuates from or at the end of a course of conduct on the part of the employing enterprise which would otherwise be regarded as a breach of the implied obligation of trust and confidence, the course of conduct is not to be so regarded by reason of the rule in Johnson v Unisys. In Eastwood v Magnox Electric Plc, McCabe v Cornwall CC ¹⁰²⁵ the House of Lords sought definitively to draw the boundary between the area of exclusion of liability for breach of the implied term of trust and confidence envisaged in the Johnson case, and the area of pre-dismissal conduct on the part of the employer, apparently including conduct capable of being treated as constructive dismissal, within which liability for breach of the implied term may arise; their approach was to distinguish those situations in which a cause of action for breach of the implied obligation had arisen before the dismissal took place, and to regard that cause of action as vested and protected from the Johnson exclusion. ¹⁰²⁶ The existence of the "Johnson exclusion" and the delineation of its scope in the Eastwood case were confirmed by the Supreme Court in the case of Edwards v Chesterfield Royal Hospital NHS Trust ¹⁰²⁷ so that the implied obligation of trust and confidence has effectively been precluded from attaching to the conduct of dismissal proceedings, as also has been the associated liability to damages for loss suffered as a result of a breach of a term (express or implied) in the contract of employment as to the manner of dismissal, unless the loss can be said to precede and be independent of the dismissal. ¹⁰²⁸ Moreover, the decision of the Employment Appeal Tribunal in Claridge v Daler Rowney Ltd ¹⁰²⁹ seemed to confirm the emergence of a doctrine adumbrated in Abbey National Plc v Fairbrother ¹⁰³⁰ to the effect that, at least in the context of the carrying out of grievance procedures, the employer will not be regarded as having constructively dismissed the employee or as having acted in breach of the obligation of mutual trust and confidence if the employer's conduct lay within the range of reasonable responses which the generality of employers might have made. However, in Bournemouth University Higher Education Corp v Buckland, ¹⁰³¹ the Court of Appeal rejected the argument that a "band of reasonable responses" test should apply to determine what constitutes fundamental breach of contract and therefore constructive dismissal on the part of the employer. Moreover, further illustration of the way in which failures in disciplinary or dismissal procedure may nevertheless amount to breach of the implied obligation of trust and confidence is provided by the decision in Lakshmi v Mid-Cheshire Hospitals NHS Trust ¹⁰³², and comparison should also be made with the decision in Lauffer v Barking, Havering and Redbridge University Hospitals NHS Trust. ¹⁰³³

Disclosures of information in the public interest

40-154

⚠ Provision is made by the Public Interest Disclosure Act 1998 ¹⁰³⁴ for the protection of workers who make certain disclosures of information in the public interest, and to allow such individuals to bring action in respect of victimisation. ¹⁰³⁵ In brief summary, these provisions are as follows. The protection applies to an especially enlarged category of "workers" which includes, for example, certain persons being provided with work experience or training for employment, although they do not have contracts of employment. ¹⁰³⁶ ⚠ Claims can be brought both against a worker's employer, an end-user of agency services, or both if the exercise of employer functions is shared. ¹⁰³⁷ ! The protection applies to qualifying disclosures, which are defined by reference to the kind of failure they tend to show—for example, the commission of criminal offences, miscarriages of justice or danger to health and safety, ¹⁰³⁸ and by reference to the persons to whom the disclosures are made—for example, to the employer or other responsible person, to a legal adviser, or to a Minister of the Crown—and the circumstances in which they are made—for example disclosure in good faith of exceptionally serious failure which it is reasonable in all the circumstances to make. ¹⁰³⁹ The Act confers upon workers the right not to suffer detriment on the ground that the worker has made a protected disclosure, ¹⁰⁴⁰ and provides for them to enforce that right by complaint to an employment tribunal, ¹⁰⁴¹ which may award compensation within prescribed limits. ¹⁰⁴² It is also provided that a dismissal, the reason or principal reason for which is that the employee made a protected disclosure, will be automatically treated as unfair for the purposes of the unfair dismissal legislation. ¹⁰⁴³ It is further provided that any provision in any agreement between a worker and his or her employer is void insofar as it purports to preclude the worker from making a protected disclosure—that is, insofar as it seeks to impose a countervailing duty of confidentiality. ¹⁰⁴⁴

Duties to avoid less favourable treatment of part-time work and fixed-term work

40-155

! Two important measures have been taken in response to EC Directives, conferring (to the extent defined) upon those working under certain specific types of employment contract or arrangement a right to equality of treatment with those employed under the corresponding “standard” type of employment contract or arrangement. The Part-time Workers (Prevention of Less Favourable Treatment) Regulations 2000, ¹⁰⁴⁵ implementing Council Directive 97/81 on part-time work, ¹⁰⁴⁶ require part-time workers ¹⁰⁴⁷ ! not to be treated less favourably than full-time workers of the same employer who work under the same type ¹⁰⁴⁸ of employment contract, ¹⁰⁴⁹ on the ground of being a part-time worker, unless there is objective justification for that less favourable treatment. ¹⁰⁵⁰ A part-time worker may complain to an employment tribunal of the violation of that right. ¹⁰⁵¹

40-156

Rather similarly, though by no means identically, the Fixed-term Employees (Prevention of Less Favourable Treatment) Regulations 2002 ¹⁰⁵² implementing ¹⁰⁵³ Council Directive 99/70 on fixed-term work, ¹⁰⁵⁴ require fixed-term employees ¹⁰⁵⁵ not to be treated less favourably than comparable permanent employees of the same employer engaged in the same or broadly similar work ¹⁰⁵⁶ on the ground that the worker is part-time, unless that less favourable treatment is justified on objective grounds. The right of no less favourable treatment is conferred by reg.3; it is a right not to be treated less favourably, on the ground of being a fixed-term employee, than the employer treats a comparable permanent employee as regards the terms of contract or by being subjected to any other detriment, if the treatment is not justified on objective grounds. ¹⁰⁵⁷ Regulation 4 provides that less favourable treatment with regard to any contract term is to be regarded as justified on objective grounds if the terms of the fixed-term employee’s contract of employment, taken as a whole, are at least as favourable as the terms of the comparable permanent employee’s contract of employment. A fixed-term employee may complain to an employment tribunal of the violation of that right. ¹⁰⁵⁸

^{1.} Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

^{750.} See above, para.40-089.

^{751.} Collier v Sunday Referee Publishing Co Ltd [1940] 2 K.B. 647, 650.

- 752. Lagerwall v Wilkinson, Henderson & Clarke Ltd (1899) 80 L.T. 55.
- 753. Turner v Sawdon & Co [1901] 2 K.B. 653.
- 754. [1901] 2 K.B. 653 at 657.
- 755. Clayton & Waller v Oliver [1930] A.C. 209; Withers v General Theatre Corp Ltd [1933] 2 K.B. 536.
- 756. cf. Collier v Sunday Referee Publishing Co Ltd [1940] 2 K.B. 647, 650.
- 757. cf. Collier v Sunday Referee Publishing Co Ltd [1940] 2 K.B. 647, 650. See also Driscoll v Australian RMSN Co (1859) 1 F. & F. 458 (employers sold ship in which the employee served).
- 758. [1974] I.C.R. 180, 190B–F (Lord Denning M.R.).
- 759. [1974] I.C.R. 180 at 190F–G.
- 760. [1974] I.C.R. 180 at 192E–F.
- 761. [1974] I.C.R. 180 at 192F–G, 193F–G.
- 762. Langston v AUEW (No.2) [1974] I.C.R. 510, 521D–522F.
- 763. [1974] I.C.R. 510 at 522D–H.
- 764. Munkman, Employer's Liability at Common Law, 15th edn (2009); Redgrave's Health and Safety, 7th edn (2010).
- 765. Wilsons & Clyde Coal Co v English [1938] A.C. 57; Wilson v Tyneside Window Cleaning Co [1958] 2 Q.B. 110. Compare now Jagedo v Smiths Industries Ltd [1982] I.C.R. 47; Johnstone v Bloomsbury HA [1992] 1 Q.B. 333. Note the discussion of s.2(1) of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977.
- 766. Black v Fife Coal Co Ltd [1912] A.C. 149.
- 767. Davie v New Merton Board Mills Ltd [1959] A.C. 604.
- 768. s.1(1). See Knowles v Liverpool City Council [1994] I.C.R. 243.
- 769. s.1(1).
- 770. s.1(2).
- 771. Matthews v Kuwait Bechtel Corp [1959] 2 Q.B. 57 (CA); Yapp v Foreign and Commonwealth Office [2014] EWCA Civ 1512, [2015] I.R.L.R. 112.
- 772. Qualcast (Wolverhampton) Ltd v Haynes [1959] A.C. 743, 755, 757–758, 759, 761. See also General Cleaning Contractors Ltd v Christmas [1953] A.C. 180; Latimer v AEC Ltd [1953] A.C. 643, 658.
- 773. See Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), paras 13–23—13–35.
- 774. [1995] I.C.R. 702.
- 775. [2002] I.C.R. 613.
- 776. [2004] UKHL 13, [2004] 1 W.L.R. 1089.
- 777. [2007] EWCA Civ 70, [2007] I.R.L.R. 355.

- 778. e.g. relating to remoteness of damage: Koufos v C Czarnikow Ltd [1969] 1 A.C. 350.
- 779. e.g. Doughty v Turner Manufacturing Co Ltd [1964] 1 Q.B. 518.
- 780. viz a duty which would be owed irrespective of the contract. But the Occupiers' Liability Act 1957 has not been treated as relevant in these cases, and that presumably would also be the case for the Defective Premises Act 1972. cf. as to the employee of a sub-contractor on a building site, Ferguson v Welsh [1987] 3 All E.R. 777.
- 781. A similar assumption must be made in a case such as Re Polemis and Furness, Withy & Co Ltd [1921] 3 K.B. 560, where, although there was a contract between the parties, the Court of Appeal decided the problem of remoteness of damage by reference to the rules of tort.
- 782. See Simpson (1972) 35 M.L.R. 63; Hasson (1974) 3 I.L.J. 79.
- 783. s.1 (the terms "approved policy" and "authorised insurer" being defined by s.1(3) as amended by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000).
- 784. s.2(1).
- 785. s.2(2)(a).
- 786. s.2(2)(b).
- 787. s.3. See SI 1971/1933, SI 1974/208, SI 1975/1443, SI 1998/2573; and National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 Sch.8 Pt I para.1.
- 788. s.4. See Employers' Liability (Compulsory Insurance) General Regulations 1971 (SI 1971/1117) as amended by SI 1974/208 and SI 1975/194. The Employers' Liability (Compulsory Insurance) General Regulations have been amended in various respects by the Employers' Liability (Compulsory Insurance) General (Amendment) Regulations 1994, and, more recently, SI 2004/2882.
- 789. s.6.
- 790. See Employers' Liability (Compulsory Insurance) General Regulations 1971 (SI 1971/1117) reg.3.
- 791. A fuller list of the relevant statutes is contained in Sch.1 to the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 as since amended.
- 792. SI 1992/2051, implementing European Union Council Directive 89/391 (the Framework Directive).
- 793. Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), paras 13–36—13–73.
- 794. Based upon the Report of the Robens Committee, "Safety and Health at Work", Cmnd. 5034 (1972). See Lewis (1975) 38 M.L.R. 442–448; (1975) 4 I.L.J. 34–38.
- 795. s.2 as supplemented by regulations.(1975) 4 I.L.J. 34–38
- 796. See above, para.40-102, and s.2(2)–(7) of the Act.
- 797. s.47(1)(a). Criminal penalties are provided by s.33 (as extended by ss.36 and 37), and administrative sanctions (which extend to the existing statutory provisions described in the first part of the present paragraph) are provided by ss.21–24 in the form of a power on the part of the inspectorate to issue improvement and prohibition notices.
- 798. s.2(3).

- 799. s.2(4). See the Safety Representatives and Safety Committees Regulations 1977 (SI 1977/500). See also White v Pressed Steel Fisher [1980] I.R.L.R. 176 EAT.
- 800. s.2(6) as amended by Employment Protection Act 1975 s.116 and Sch.15 para.2, to limit this duty to consultation with trade union safety representatives.
- 801. s.18(7) as amended by Employment Protection Act 1975 s.116 and Sch.15 para.8, to extend to agricultural operations. The responsibility devolves primarily upon the Health and Safety Executive established by s.10 of the Act. See the Health and Safety (Enforcing Authority) Regulations 1977 (SI 1977/746) as amended by SI 1980/1744.
- 802. s.19. The provision has been used to establish a combined unified inspectorate under the aegis of the Health and Safety Executive.
- 803. s.28(8). cf. also s.28(3)(b) which can create a privilege for disclosure of information to trade union safety representatives and cf. s.28(9) as amended by Employment Protection Act 1975 s.116 and Sch.15 para.9.
- 804. s.28(8)(a) referring to s.27(7), referring in turn to s.20.
- 805. s.15 as amended by Employment Protection Act 1975 s.116 and Sch.15 para.6, to extend the new system to agricultural operations.
- 806. ss.16–17 as amended by Employment Protection Act 1975 s.116 and Sch.15 para.7, to extend the new system to agricultural operations.
- 807. s.61, amending the Public Health Act 1936 ss.61–62 (itself later overtaken by the Building Act 1984).
- 808. s.61(2)(a).
- 809. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.44, 48, 49, 98(6), 100, 105(3), 108(3), 117(3), (4), 118, 119(1), 120, 122(3), 125, 128–132, 236(3). See Ewing (1993) 22 I.L.J. 165, 170–171.
- 810. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.1(4)(c).
- 811. e.g. for the purposes of the Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.162, 135, 155 and 139 (calculation of redundancy payment); Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.87–91 (rights of employee during period of notice); Employment Rights Act 1996 s.30 (calculation of guarantee payment). See below, para.40-256.
- 812. Tarmac Roadstone Holdings Ltd v Peacock [1973] I.C.R. 273; see below, para.40-256.
- 813. cf. Pearson v William Jones Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 1140; The Darlington Forge Ltd v Sutton [1968] I.T.R. 196; Turriff Construction Co Ltd v Bryant [1967] 2 I.T.R. 292; Tarmac Roadstone Holdings Ltd v Peacock [1973] I.C.R. 273. See below, para.40-256.
- 814. Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act 1920; Hours of Employment (Conventions) Act 1936; Shops Act 1950; Young Persons (Employment) Acts 1938 and 1964; Factories Act 1961 Pt VI; Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s.18; Children and Young Persons Act 1963 ss.37–44; Employment of Children Act 1973 s.1. See Hepple and O'Higgins, Encyclopedia of Labour Relations Law, paras 1–105, 1–230 and 1–231.
- 815. Coal Mines Regulation Act 1908 s.1, as amended by Coal Mines Act 1919 s.1; Mines and Quarries Act 1954 s.189; Transport Act 1968 Pt VI; Factories Act 1961 s.76; Shops Act 1950. See Encyclopedia of Labour Relations Law, para.1–232. The Baking Industry (Hours of Work) Act 1954 was repealed by s.8 of the Sex Discrimination Act 1986.
- 816. See below, paras 40-125—40-136.

- 817. Directive 2003/88.
- 818. Directive 94/33.
- 819. SI 1998/1833, in force from October 1, 1998.
- 820. The Working Time Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/3372), the Working Time (Amendment) Regulations 2001 (SI 2001/3256), the Working Time (Amendment) Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/3128), and the Working Time (Amendment) Regulations 2003 (SI 2003/1684). See also now the Working Time (Amendment) Regulations 2006 (SI 2006/99) and, in relation to agricultural workers, the Working Time (Amendment) (England) Regulations 2013 (SI 2013/2228).
- 821. SI 1998/1833 reg.26 was revoked by SI 2003/1684 reg.9.
- 822. See regs 3, 36; and see above, para.40-009.
- 823.  Federacion de Servicios Privados del sindicato Comisiones obreras (CC OO) v Tyco Integrated Security SL (C-266/14) EU:C:2015:578; [2016] 1 C.M.L.R. 22.
- 824.  Edwards v Encirc Ltd [2015] I.R.L.R. 528 (EAT).
- 825. See reg.23 and Sch.1. It was, however, held in Barber v RJB Mining (UK) Ltd [1999] I.C.R. 679 QBD that where an employer seeks to require workers to work longer hours than the maximum hours applicable to them under the Regulations, and they are unwilling to agree to do so, they may be granted a declaration that the employer's attempt so to require them to exceed the statutory maximum violates an obligation which has become part of their contract of employment.
- 826. See reg.5.
- 827. See reg.31.
- 828. See reg.6.
- 829. See new regs 5A, 6A, inserted by the Working Time (Amendment) Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/3128).
- 830. See reg.11.
- 831. See reg.10.
- 832. See reg.12
- 833.  Grange v Abellio London Ltd [2017] I.R.L.R. 108 (EAT).
- 834. See reg.23. Compare, as to collective agreements, Prison Service v Bewley [2004] I.C.R. 422 EAT.
- 835. See reg.13 as amended by the Working Time (Amendment) Regulations 2001 (SI 2001/3256). The issue of whether this entitlement can be discharged by the payment of "rolled-up" holiday pay was referred to the ECJ by the Court of Appeal in Caulfield v Marshalls Clay Products Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 422, [2004] 2 C.M.L.R. 45. In the joined cases Robinson-Steele v RD Retail Services Ltd, Caulfield v Hanson Clay Products (C-131 and C-257/04) [2006] I.C.R. 932, the ECJ held the practice of payment of "rolled-up holiday pay" to be unlawful, as failing to comply with the paid holiday obligations imposed by the Working Time Directive. However, in Sumsion v BBC (Scotland) [2007] I.R.L.R. 678, the EAT took a wide view of the employer's entitlement to stipulate when leave may be taken. See also NHS Leeds v Lerner [2012] EWCA Civ 1034, [2012] 4 All E.R. 1006 in which the Court of Appeal held that, in the case of a worker who had been on long-term sick leave, upon the termination of her employment during that sick leave her entitlement to four weeks' holiday pay representing the four weeks' annual leave required by the Working Time Directive was not forfeited by reason of her never actually having requested any holiday while on sick leave. It was, however, left open whether the same rule applies to the worker's additional holiday entitlement under the Working Time Regulations. Compare furthermore the decision in Bollacke v Klaas & Kock (C-118/13), where the CJEU held that the death of worker does not extinguish paid annual leave accrual.

- 836. See reg.28.
- 837. See regs 30–32.
- 838. See above, para.40-102.
- 839. Deyong v Shenburn [1964] K.B. 227; cf. Edwards v West Herts Group Hospital Management Committee [1957] 1 W.L.R. 415.
- 840. See below, paras 40-150—40-153.
- 841. Adamson v Jarvis (1827) 4 Bing. 66; Re Famatina Development Corp [1914] 2 Ch. 271.
- 842. As required by the Road Traffic Act 1988 s.143.
- 843. Gregory v Ford [1951] 1 All E.R. 121.
- 844. [1990] 1 W.L.R. 212.
- 845. Semtex Ltd v Gladstone [1954] 1 W.L.R. 945; Lister v Romford Ice and Cold Storage Ltd [1957] A.C. 555. See above, paras 40-072—40-073.
- 846. cf. Southern v How (1618) Cro. Jac. 468.
- 847. Adamson v Jarvis (1827) 4 Bing. 66.
- 848. Burrows v Rhodes [1899] 1 Q.B. 816; Thacker v Hardy (1878) 4 Q.B.D. 685.
- 849. Southern v How (1618) Cro. Jac. 468; Adamson v Jarvis, see above.
- 850. The most important amendments were made by s.13 of the Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993, and by s.2 of and Sch.2 to the Employment Relations Act 1999, and also by ss.29–32 of the Employment Relations Act 2004.
- 851. Excluded classes of employees are: share fishermen—s.284, work outside Great Britain—s.285. Crown employees are included—s.273. Section 31 of the Employment Act 2004 amended ss.146–151 of the 1992 Act to extend, to workers who are not employees, the existing protections of employees against detrimental action by their employer for being, or not being, a member of a trade union or for taking part in the activities of their union.
- 852. The effects of deliberate omission, as well as of positive action, are now included, reversing by statute the decision of the House of Lords on this point in Associated Newspapers Ltd v Wilson; Associated British Ports Ltd v Palmer [1995] I.C.R. 406.
- 853. s.146(1)(a). Compare, in relation to unfair dismissal, see below, para.40-227.
- 854. s.146(1)(b). See Robb v Leon Motor Services Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 506 EAT; and Marley Tile Co v Shaw [1980] I.C.R. 72. See also now Department of Transport v Gallacher [1994] I.C.R. 967.
- 855. s.146(1)(c).

- 856. Sections 29–32 of the 2004 Act make a series of additions and amendments to ss.146–151 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992; s.29 of the 2004 Act inserts new ss.145A–F into the 1992 Act.
- 857. s.146(5) (limitation period—s.147).
- 858. s.148(1) (as amended by the Employment Relations Act 2004) (see also s.148(2)—disregard of industrial pressure).
- 859. s.149(1). Compensation is asserted in accordance with the provisions of s.149. See Brassington v Cauldron Wholesale Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 405 EAT.
- 860. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.50–63C, Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 ss.168–173. Employees excluded are: those working abroad, Employment Rights Act 1996 s.196, Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.285. Crown employees are included, Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.191–193, Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.273, subject to a power of exemption on the grounds of national security in s.275.
- 861. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.51, 54, 57 and 60; Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 ss.168, 170, 171, 172.
- 862. See above, para.40-093; and Corner v Buckinghamshire CC [1978] I.C.R. 836 EAT.
- 863. Other such rights, not described in detail here, are those for occupational pension scheme trustees—Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.58–60; for employee representatives—Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.61–63; for young persons for study or training—Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.63A–63C inserted by the Teaching and Higher Education Act 1998 s.32; and for union learning representatives and consultation by union members with union learning representatives—Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.168A, 170 (2A)–(2C) inserted by s.43 of the Employment Act 2002 with effect from April 27, 2003. A new kind of statutory right to time off has been conferred on employees by s.40 of the Employment Relations Act 2004, which by inserting a new s.43M into the Employment Rights Act 1996 protects employees from being subjected to detriment by the employee by reason of being summoned for or being absent from work on jury service, with effect from April 6, 2005.
- 864. As defined by Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.5 (definition of “independent”) and s.1 (definition of “trade union”).
- 865. As defined by s.178(3).
- 866. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.168. See Beal v Beecham Group Ltd [1982] I.C.R. 460; Thomas Scott & Sons (Bakers) Ltd v Allen [1983] I.R.L.R. 329; Ashley v MOD [1984] I.C.R. 298.
- 867. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.168(3).
- 868. See above, n.859.
- 869. s.170(1), (2).
- 870. s.170(3).
- 871. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.50(1)–(3), (5)–(9). Rights extended to members of police authorities by the Time Off for Public Duties Order 1995 (SI 1995/694) with effect from April 1, 1995.
- 872. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.50(4). See Corner v Buckinghamshire CC, above, n.857.
- 873. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.52(1). See Dutton v Hawker Siddeley Aviation Ltd [1978] I.C.R.

1057 EAT.

- 874. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.52(2).
- 875. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.55(1)–(3).
- 876. Employment Relations Act 1999 s.8 and Pt II of Sch.4, with effect from December 15, 1999.
- 877. See below, paras 40-146, 40-235.
- 878. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.51(1), 54(1), 57(1); Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 ss.168(4), 169(5), 170(4) (limitation periods—Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.51(2), 54(2), 57(2); Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.171).
- 879. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.51(3), 54(4) and Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.172.
- 880. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.54(3), referring to s.53(3) referring to Employment Rights Act 1996 s.53(4).
- 881. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.53(5) and 54(4).
- 882. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.57(3)–(5).
- 883. See above, para.40-093.
- 884. See above, para.40-039 and see below, para.40-246.
- 885. See below, paras 40-128—40-132.
- 886. SI 1983/1794.
- 887. Equality Act 2010 ss.64–69. By s.83(2), these provisions extend to employment under contracts of service or of apprenticeship or personally to execute any work or labour; see above, para.40-009.
- 888. s.66.
- 889. Hayward v Cammell Laird Shipbuilders Ltd (No.2) [1988] I.C.R. 464.
- 890. s.65.
- 891. s.65(2).
- 892. s.65(4).
- 893. See s.79(1)–(4). See British Coal Corp v Smith [1996] I.C.R. 515 HL. Compare Allonby v Accrington & Rossendale College (C-256/01) [2004] I.R.L.R. 224 (ECJ), as to the construction of the “same employment” concept in accordance with art.141(1) of the EC Treaty. Compare also DEFRA v Robertson [2005] EWCA Civ 138, [2005] I.C.R. 750, expounding the notion of attributability of differences between terms and conditions of employment to a “single source” which had been articulated by the ECJ in Lawrence v Regent Office Care Ltd (C-320/00) [2002] E.C.R. I-7325. See further North v Dumfries and Galloway Council [2013] UKSC 45, [2013] 4 All E.R. 413.
- 894. s.66(2).
- 895. See s.69(1)–(3); leading authorities on the interpretation of the corresponding provisions in the antecedent legislation include Jenkins v Kingsgate (Clothing Productions) Ltd [1981] I.C.R. 715; (No.2) [1981] I.C.R. 592; Rainey v Greater Glasgow Health Board [1987] A.C. 224; Leverton v

Clwyd CC [1989] I.C.R. 33; Enderby v Frenchay HA [1994] I.C.R. 112. The decision of the House of Lords in North Yorkshire CC v Ratcliffe [1995] I.C.R. 833 placed some restriction upon the scope for treating market forces as a material factor other than the difference of sex. See also Strathclyde Regional Council v Wallace [1998] I.C.R. 205; Glasgow City Council v Marshall [2000] I.C.R. 196; Middlesbrough Council v Surtees [2007] I.R.L.R. 869.

- 896. s.127.
- 897. s.132(1)-(2).
- 898. s.132(3)-(4).
- 899. s.127(3).
- 900. s.128.
- 901. See s.131(8).
- 902. s.131.
- 903. s.74.
- 904. The provisions in question are those of s.18. See above, para.40-132.
- 905. s.76.
- 906. The provisions concerned apply to employment under a contract of service or of apprenticeship or a contract personally to execute any work or labour—s.83(2) (definition of employment); see above, para.40-009. Corresponding provisions are made for discrimination on the grounds of gender reassignment by s.7. The provisions are extended to discrimination occurring after the employment relationship has come to an end where the discrimination arises out of and is closely connected to the relationship in question—s.108.
- 907. "Discrimination" (meaning sex discrimination in this context) is defined by ss.13 (direct discrimination) and 19 (indirect discrimination).
- 908. s.39(2)(b).
- 909. See below, para.40-246.
- 910. s.39(2)(d).
- 911. s.83(11) and Sch.9 Pt 1.
- 912. In which event the matter is determined under Pt III of the Act, and in particular s.29.
- 913. s.83(11) and Sch.9 para.19.
- 914. s.120.
- 915. s.124(2)(a).
- 916. s.124(2)(b).
- 917. s.124(6)(b) referring to s.119.
- 918. s.124(2)(c), (7).
- 919. paras 40-128—40-130.

- 920. para.40-126.
- 921. See s.70.
- 922. See s.71.
- 923. See Deakin & Morris, Labour Law, 6th edn (2012), para.6.50.
- 924. As to which see below para.40-141.
- 925. s.18(1)-(4).
- 926. s.39(2)(a).
- 927. s.39(2)(b).
- 928. s.39(2)(d).
- 929. s.120.
- 930. s.124.
- 931. ss.8, 12-14, 39. The provisions are extended to discrimination occurring after the employment relationship has come to an end where the discrimination arises out of and is closely connected to the relationship in question—s.108. Provision for complaint to an employment tribunal is made by s.120(1), and for the awarding of remedies by s.124.
- 932. ss.9, 12-14, 39 subject to s.83(11) and Sch.9 Pt 1 (occupational requirements). The provisions are extended to discrimination occurring after the employment relationship has come to an end where the discrimination arises out of and is closely connected to the relationship in question—s.108. Provision for complaint to an employment tribunal is made by s.120(1), and for the awarding of remedies by s.124.
- 933. ss.6, 12-14, 20 (duty to make adjustments), 39 subject to s.83(11) and Sch.9 Pt 1 (occupational requirements). The provisions are extended to discrimination occurring after the employment relationship has come to an end where the discrimination arises out of and is closely connected to the relationship in question—s.108. Provision for complaint to an employment tribunal is made by s.120(1), and for the awarding of remedies by s.124. Compare also Hainsworth v Ministry of Defence [2014] EWCA Civ 763, [2014] I.R.L.R. 728 (employer's reasonable adjustment duty did not extend to an employee's association with a disabled person).
- 934. SI 2003/1660; in particular reg.6(2)-(4).
- 935. SI 2003/1661; in particular reg.6(2)-(4).
- 936. SI 2006/1031.
- 937. 2000/78.
- 938. ss.5, 10, 12-14, 39 subject to s.83(11) and Sch.9 Pt 1 (occupational requirements) and Pt 2 (exceptions relating to age). The provisions are extended to discrimination occurring after the employment relationship has come to an end where the discrimination arises out of and is closely connected to the relationship in question: s.108. Provision for complaint to an employment tribunal is made by s.120(1), and for the awarding of remedies by s.124.
- 939. ss.26-27. The provisions are extended to harassment occurring after the employment relationship has come to an end where the harassment arises out of and is closely connected to the relationship in question—s.108.
- 940. s.27(1)-(5).

- 941. s.83(11) and Sch.9 Pt 1.
- 942. s.26(1), (5); there is a further extension involving unwanted conduct of a sexual nature, as to which see s.26(2).
- 943. s.40(1). Provision for complaint to an employment tribunal is made by s.120(1), and for the awarding of remedies by s.124. This has now been held to extend to post-employment victimisation: Rowstock Ltd v Jessemey [2014] EWCA Civ 185, [2014] 1 W.L.R. 3615.
- 944. s.40(2)-(4).
- 945. Enterprise and Regulatory Reform Act 2013 (Commencement No.3, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2013 (SI 2013/2227).
- 946. s.143.
- 947. In which case provision is made by s.146 for complaint to an employment tribunal, which may make an order declaring such a term to be void or such a rule to be unenforceable.
- 948. In force from July 31, 1975, subject to the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 (Exceptions) Order 1975 (SI 1975/1023).
- 949. s.4(3)(b). "Spent conviction" is defined in s.1, by reference to s.5.
- 950. See Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), paras 13-36—73; 22-75.
- 951. cf. Nagle v Feilden [1966] 2 Q.B. 633; Edwards v SOGAT [1971] Ch. 354 and see above, para.40-100.
- 952. Pt VIII of the Employment Rights Act 1996 still has the heading "Maternity Rights", but that heading no longer describes all the chapters comprising that part of the Act.
- 953. The combined provisions of s.7 of and Sch.4 Pt I to the Employment Relations Act 1999, and the Maternity and Parental Leave, etc. Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/3312) replaced (with effect from December 15, 1999) the provisions of Pt VIII of the Employment Rights Act 1996 with a new and more elaborate set of rights to maternity and parental leave, which were such as to implement the provisions of Council Directive 96/34 on the framework agreement on parental leave. Provisions about paternity leave and adoption leave were added by Pt 1 Ch.1 of the Employment Act 2002, and further provisions about maternity leave were made by Pt 1 Ch.2 of that Act. Subsequent changes have been made by the Maternity and Parental Leave (Amendment) Regulations 2001 (SI 2001/4010); the Maternity and Parental Leave (Amendment) Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/2789); the Paternity and Adoption Leave Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/2788); the Paternity and Adoption Leave (Amendment) Regulations 2004 (SI 2004/923); and the Maternity and Parental Leave, etc. and the Paternity and Adoption Leave (Amendment) Regulations 2006 (SI 2006/2014).
- 954. See above, paras 40-086—40-088.
- 955. The further rights conferred apart from Employment Rights Act 1996 Pts VIII and 8A are the right to time off for dependants—see above, para.40-123, and certain rights in connection with dismissal—see below, para.40-235.
- 956. See above, paras 40-127—40-132.
- 957. This period was increased from 18 weeks with effect from April 6, 2003, under the provisions of Pt 1 Ch.2 of the Employment Act 2002. A new s.71(3) was substituted by s.111 of and Sch.1 para.31 to the Work and Families Act 2006, which would enable that period to be further increased by regulations.
- 958. SI 1999/3312 regs 6, 7.

- 959. The provisions are those of s.47, inserting new Pt 8A “Flexible Working” into the Employment Rights Act 1996. See now also the Flexible Working Regulations 2014 (SI 2014/1398), which extend the right to make a flexible working application to all employees who have been continuously employed for a period of at least 26 weeks.
- 960. In Shaw v CCL Ltd [2008] I.R.L.R. 284 EAT it was held that, although there is no right to return to work on a part time basis, refusal of such request may amount to unlawful direct or indirect sex discrimination, as such amounting to breach of the implied obligation as to mutual trust and confidence, and entitling the employee to resign and claim constructive unfair dismissal.
- 961. SIs 2006/3314 and 2007/1184. Moreover, SI 2009/595 extended the category of children in respect of whom such a request may be made so that it extends to children under 17 (with effect from April 2009).
- 962. s.9 and Sch.4 Pt III.
- 963. See below, para.40-235.
- 964. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.47C (as inserted by the Employment Relations Act 1999), as supplemented by reg.19 of the Maternity and Parental Leave, etc. Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/3312).
- 965. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.47C (as amended by the Employment Act 2002), as supplemented by reg.28 of the Paternity and Adoption Leave Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/2788).
- 966. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.47E (as inserted by s.47(1), (3) of the Employment Act 2002) (originally numbered s.47D, that number being corrected to 47E).
- 967. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.48 (as amended by the Employment Relations Act 1999 and by the Employment Act 2002).
- 968. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.49.
- 969. Carroll v Bird (1800) 3 Esp. 201; Handley v Moffatt (1872) 21 W.R. 231. Even if the former employer gives some information, he is under no obligation to give all the information he has about the employee: Wilkin v Reed (1854) 15 C.B. 192. The employer is now, however, under a statutory obligation to give the employee a written statement of the reasons for his dismissal, see below, para.40-194.
- 970. Moult v Halliday [1898] 1 Q.B. 125, 129, 130. (On the right to the property in such a reference, see the cases cited in n.969, below.)
- 971. Servants’ Characters Act 1792 (repealed by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2008 Sch.I Pt 3).
- 972. See R. v Costello and Bishop [1910] 1 K.B. 28.
- 973. Foster v Charles (1830) 7 Bing. 105 (an action for deceit). cf. Wilkin v Reed (1854) 15 C.B. 192.
- 974. Hedley Byrne & Co Ltd v Heller & Partners Ltd [1964] A.C. 465. (The principles laid down in this case may be wide enough to justify the courts in holding that a duty of care arises between the employer who gives the reference, and a subsequent employer who acts in reliance on it. See Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), paras 8-113 et seq. Esso Petroleum Co v Mardon [1976] 1 Q.B. 801).
- 975. [1995] 2 A.C. 296.
- 976. [1987] I.C.R. 7.
- 977. In Bartholomew v Hackney LBC [1999] I.R.L.R. 246 (CA). Yet further exposition of the requirement of fairness of references for former employees is provided by the Court of Appeal in Jackson v Liverpool City Council [2011] EWCA Civ 1068, [2011] I.R.L.R. 1009; the relevance of the public law duty of honesty and integrity was considered AB v A Chief Constable [2014] EWHC 1965 (QB), [2014] I.R.L.R. 700.

- 978. In Kidd v AXA Equity and Law Life Assurance Society Plc [2000] I.R.L.R. 301 QBD. Compare now also, to comparably restrictive effect, Aspin v Metric Group Ltd [2004] EWHC 1265.
- 979. Cox v Sun Alliance Life Ltd [2001] I.R.L.R. 448.
- 980. In Legal & General Assurance Ltd v Kirk [2002] I.R.L.R. 124.
- 981. Unless the case can be brought within a duty of care in negligence, see above, n.969, or if the employer communicates the reference to a person who has no “proper interest” in receiving it.
- 982. Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), paras 22-105 et seq.; Gatley on Libel and Slander, 12th edn (2013), paras 14-11 et seq.
- 983. See Wennhak v Morgan (1888) 20 Q.B.D. 635, 638, 640. (But cf. Taylor v Rowan (1835) 7 C. & P. 70.)
- 984. In force from July 31, 1975, subject to the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 (Exceptions) Order 1975 (SI 1975/1023).
- 985. s.4(2)—“spent conviction” is defined in s.1 by reference to s.5.
- 986. s.8(5).
- 987. s.9.
- 988. See below, para.40-150.
- 989. Under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 s.18 and Sch.2.
- 990. See now Pt III of the 1998 Act.
- 991. Directive 95/46.
- 992. Referred to in this paragraph as “the 1998 Act”. The principal substantive provisions of the Act came into force on March 1, 2000.
- 993. See s.1 of the 1998 Act and Schs 1, 2, 4.
- 994. s.4 and Sch.2.
- 995. s.2 and Sch.3. The circumstances in which sensitive personal data may be processed are specified by the Data Protection (Processing of Sensitive Personal Data) Order 2000 (SI 2000/417).
- 996. s.7.
- 997. s.10.
- 998. s.12.
- 999. s.13.
- 1000. Compare Halford v United Kingdom [1997] I.R.L.R. 471 (ECtHR), applied in Copland v United Kingdom (2007) 45 E.H.R.R. 37 (ECtHR). See also Swansea v Gayle [2013] I.R.L.R. 768 EAT: covert monitoring of employee outside the workplace not in violation of right to respect for private life.

- 1001. [1977] I.C.R. 221.
- 1002. See below, para.40-193.
- 1003. Courtaulds Northern Textiles Ltd v Andrew [1979] I.R.L.R. 84; Post Office v Roberts [1980] I.R.L.R. 347; Woods v WM Car Services Ltd [1981] I.C.R. 666; Bliss v South East Thames RHA [1987] I.C.R. 700.
- 1004. [1998] A.C. 20.
- 1005. A conclusion which the House of Lords ruled was not precluded by their older decision in Addis v Gramophone Co Ltd [1909] A.C. 488. However, it should be noted that such “stigma damages” are effectively excluded from the assessment of damages for wrongful dismissal, in particular where the wrongfulness consists in failure to follow contractual dismissal procedures, by the doctrine propounded in Johnson v Unisys Ltd [2001] I.C.R. 480 as re-confirmed by the Supreme Court in Edwards v Chesterfield Royal Hospital NHS Trust [2011] UKSC 58; see below, paras 40-153, 40-203.
- 1006. FC Gardner Ltd v Beresford [1978] I.R.L.R. 63.
- 1007. British Aircraft Corp v Austin [1978] I.R.L.R. 332. See, for authority for the view that the duty of trust and confidence results in a general implied duty to provide an effective grievance procedure, WA Goold (Pearmark) Ltd v McConnell [1995] I.R.L.R. 516.
- 1008. White v London Transport Executive [1982] Q.B. 489.
- 1009. Compare above, paras 40-062 (duty of fidelity), 40-065 (duty to refrain from disruption).
- 1010. Post Office v Roberts [1980] I.R.L.R. 347, 350, para.28. In Waltham Forest LBC v Omilaju (No.2) [2004] EWCA Civ 1493, [2005] I.R.L.R. 35 it was reasserted that the test of whether an act was capable of breaching the implied obligation was an objective one, so that the employee's subjective loss of trust and confidence was not sufficient in itself. In Nottinghamshire CC v Meikle [2004] EWCA Civ 859, [2004] 4 All E.R. 97, the objectivity of the test had been likewise asserted, but to the contrary effect that it was not necessary for the employee subjectively to have lost confidence in her employer in an overall sense. In Baldwin v Brighton and Hove City Council [2007] I.C.R. 680 it was held that it was not necessary to show that the employer's conduct was intended, as well as likely, to destroy the relationship of mutual trust and confidence.
- 1011. Grant v South-West Trains Ltd [1998] I.R.L.R. 188.
- 1012. [1991] I.C.R. 771. Compare however Crossley v Faithful & Gould Holdings Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 293, [2004] I.R.L.R. 377, in which it was held that there is no general obligation upon the employer to take reasonable care for the employee's economic well-being, and that the application of the criteria articulated in the Scally case did not require disclosure on the present facts. To similar effect has been Lennon v Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis [2004] EWCA Civ 130.
- 1013. Moore v Bude-Stratton Town Council [2001] I.C.R. 271.
- 1014. Gogay v Hertfordshire CC [2000] I.R.L.R. 703.
- 1015. Transco Plc v O'Brien [2002] EWCA Civ 379, [2002] I.C.R. 721.
- 1016. Jenvey v Australian Broadcasting Corp [2003] I.C.R. 79; Glendale Managed Services v Graham [2003] I.R.L.R. 465. Compare, at one further remove, Hagen v ICI Chemicals and Polymers Ltd [2002] I.R.L.R. 31. Compare also now Bunning v GT Bunning & Sons Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 104 where it was held to be arguable that a failure to conduct a proper risk assessment of the continued employment of the employee as a welder, as required by Regulations when she became pregnant, might constitute a serious breach of the implied obligation as to trust and confidence. Compare also Greenhof v Barnsley MBC [2006] I.R.L.R. 98, where it was held that a serious failure to make reasonable adjustments in favour of a disabled person, as required by the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, amounted to a breach of the implied obligation as to trust and confidence and a constructive dismissal; and Deadman v Bristol CC [2007] EWCA Civ 822, [2007] I.R.L.R. 888, where it was held that, as an aspect of maintaining mutual trust and confidence, the employer was obliged to follow the procedures for the investigation of complaints which it had published and implemented. Compare also now Shaw v CCL Ltd [2008] I.R.L.R. 284 EAT where it was held that, although there is no right to return to work on a part time basis, refusal of such request may amount to unlawful direct or indirect sex discrimination, as such amounting to breach of the implied obligation as to mutual trust and confidence and entitling the employee to resign and claim constructive unfair dismissal. A different kind of extension took place in Tullit Prebon Plc v BGC Brokers LP [2011] EWCA Civ 131, where the Court of Appeal held that the implied obligation as to mutual trust and confidence applied to and came into operation under a set of “forward contracts” under which a group of brokers employed by TP engaged to join BGCB at future dates, and that BGCB placed itself in repudiatory breach of those “forward contracts” by conspiring to bring about a mass early departure of those brokers whether or not lawful grounds existed for those departures. By contrast, TP were held not to be in breach of their implied obligation as to mutual trust and confidence to those brokers in seeking to persuade them renege on their “forward contracts” with BGCB, the intention being to reinforce rather than to abandon the relations between TP and the brokers. Compare also IBM United Kingdom Holdings Ltd v Dalgleish [2014] EWHC 980 (Ch) at [1537]–[1594]: breach of implied contractual duty of trust and confidence through failure to consult on pension changes (especially given previous statements).

1017. [2004] EWCA Civ 1287, [2005] I.C.R. 402.

1018. [2006] I.R.L.R. 877 QBD.

1019.  [2006] EWCA Civ 1536, [2007] I.C.R. 623. Compare also now Khatri v Cooperatieve Centrale Raiffeisen-Boerenleenbank BA [2010] EWCA Civ 397, where the requirement of rational exercise of discretions with regard to the awarding of bonuses was reaffirmed and Patural v DB Services (UK) Ltd [2015] EWHC 3659 (QB), [2016] I.R.L.R. 286.

1020. [2015] UKSC 17, [2015] 1 W.L.R. 1661.

1021.  [2015] UKSC 17 at [32]. Compare now also Hills v Niksun Inc [2016] EWCA Civ 115, [2016] I.R.L.R. 715, as well as Stevens v University of Birmingham [2015] EWHC 2300 (QB), [2015] I.R.L.R. 899 and Simpkin v Berkeley Group Holdings Plc [2016] EWHC 1619 (QB), [2017] 1 Costs L.O. 13.

1022.  [2015] EWHC 1368 (Ch), [2015] Pens. L.R. 457.

1023. [2002] I.C.R. 1258 (CA). In Holladay v East Kent Hospitals NHS Trust [2003] EWCA Civ 1696, (2004) 76 B.M.L.R. 201 it was held that the breach of the implied obligation must be a material cause of the event (arrest on suspicion of theft) which had caused the employee harm, but that it was not necessary to conclude that the event would not have occurred but for the breach.

1024. [2001] I.C.R. 480. Compare Reda v Flag Ltd [2002] I.R.L.R. 747 PC.

1025. [2004] UKHL 35, [2005] 1 A.C. 503.

1026. Compare also GAB Robins (UK) Ltd v Triggs [2008] EWCA Civ 17, [2008] I.R.L.R. 317.

1027. [2011] UKSC 58.

1028. See further below, paras 40-193, 40-203.

1029. [2008] I.R.L.R. 672.

- 1030. [2007] I.R.L.R. 320 EAT.
- 1031. [2010] EWCA Civ 121, [2010] I.R.L.R. 445.
- 1032. [2008] EWHC 878 (QB).
- 1033. [2009] EWHC 2360 (QB), [2010] Med. L.R. 68.
- 1034. Referred to in this paragraph as the 1998 Act. The Act came into force on July 2, 1999. In Miklasewicz v Stolt Offshore Ltd [2002] I.R.L.R. 344, the Court of Session held that its provisions applied to a disclosure before that date giving rise to a dismissal after that date.
- 1035. These provisions mainly take the form of sections in a new Pt IVA of the Employment Rights Act 1996, inserted by s.1 of the 1998 Act.
- 1036.  Employment Rights Act 1996 s.43K. Indeed, this has been held to include a health and safety consultant supplied by an agency and operating via his own service company: Keppel Seghers UK Ltd v Hinds [2014] I.R.L.R. 754 (EAT). Though cf. Day v Lewisham and Greenwich NHS Trust [2016] I.R.L.R. 415 EAT.
- 1037.  McTigue v University Hospital Bristol NHS Foundation Trust [2016] UKEAT/0354/15/JOJ, [2016] I.R.L.R. 742.
- 1038. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.43B. See Norbrook Laboratories (GB) Ltd v Shaw [2014] I.C.R. 540 EAT.
- 1039. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.43C–43H.
- 1040. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.47B as inserted by s.2 of the 1998 Act.
- 1041. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.48(1A) as amended by s.3 of the 1998 Act.
- 1042. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.49(6) as amended by s.4 of the 1998 Act.
- 1043. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.103A as inserted by s.5 of the 1998 Act.
- 1044. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.43J.
- 1045. SI 2000/1551, in force from July 1, 2000. See also now the Part-time Workers (Prevention of Less Favourable Treatment) Regulations 2001 (SI 2001/1107), in force from May 1, 2001, and the Part-time Workers (Prevention of Less Favourable Treatment) Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/2035), in force from October 1, 2002, which make further consequential provisions.
- 1046. Directive 97/81 as extended to the UK by Directive 98/23.
- 1047.  As defined in reg.1(2), similarly as in Employment Rights Act 1996 s.230(3). Compare Christie v Department for Constitutional Affairs [2007] I.C.R. 1553 EAT, where it was held that a part-time tribunal chairman came within the Regulations. In O'Brien v Department of Constitutional Affairs [2008] EWCA Civ 1448, [2009] I.R.L.R. 294 the Court of Appeal held that part-time judicial office holders are not “workers” for the purpose of these Regulations; however, in O'Brien v Ministry of Justice (C-393/10) the ECJ suggested that this decision was non-compliant with the Directive. In O'Brien v Department of Constitutional Affairs [2013] UKSC 6, [2013] 1 W.L.R. 522 the Supreme Court duly held that the decision of the ECJ did require a recognition that the part-time Recorder was entitled to be regarded as a “worker” for the purposes of the 2000 Regulations. O'Brien was distinguished in Gilham v Ministry of Justice [2017] I.R.L.R. 23 (EAT), where a narrower interpretation was favoured in the context of purely domestic employment rights.

- 1048. See reg.2. See for the judicial construction of this Regulation, and the clarification of the notion of comparable workers which it articulates, Mathews v Kent and Medway Towns Fire Authority [2006] UKHL 8, [2006] I.C.R. 365.
- 1049. SI 2000/1551.
- 1050. See reg.5(2).
- 1051. See regs 5(2), 8.
- 1052. SI 2002/2023, in force from October 1, 2002.
- 1053. But also in certain respects going beyond the scope of the Directive, the whole set of Regulations being made under the authority of ss.45, 51(1) of the Employment Act 2002.
- 1054. Directive 97/81 as extended to the UK by Directive 98/23.
- 1055. As defined in reg.1(2), “employee” being defined by s.45(6) of the Employment Act 2002 as in Employment Rights Act 1996 s.230(1).
- 1056. See reg.2(1).
- 1057. In Department for Work and Pensions v Webley [2004] EWCA Civ 1745, [2005] I.C.R. 577 it was confirmed that the employer's allowing a fixed-term contract to expire by effluxion of time without renewal does not in itself constitute a detriment, or less favourable treatment of a fixed-term employee than of a permanent employee, within reg.3 of the 2002 Regulations.
- 1058. SI 2002/2023 reg.7.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 6. - Termination of the Contract

(a) - Termination by Notice

Construction of the contract

40-157

Apart from any relevant statutory provision, ¹⁰⁵⁹ any question as to the duration of the employment, its terminability by notice, the length of the notice required to determine it, or the time at which notice to determine it may be given, will depend on the intention of the parties, either revealed in the express or implied terms of their contract, or to be inferred from all the surrounding circumstances. If there are express terms relevant to these issues, the problem is one of construction. Thus, an early authority held that a contract of employment “for 12 months certain”, and to “continue from time to time, until three months’ notice in writing be given by either party, to determine the same”, could be determined at the expiration of the first year, by giving three months’ previous notice. ¹⁰⁶⁰ Where the agreement was “for 12 months certain, after which time either party should be at liberty to terminate the agreement, by giving the other a three months’ notice”, it was held that the engagement could be determined by either party at the end of 12 months, without giving any notice. ¹⁰⁶¹ But where a similar agreement provided that it was to hold good for 12 months, with six months’ notice thereafter to terminate, it was held that notice could not be given until the 12 months had expired. ¹⁰⁶²

40-158

Under the provisions of Pt I of the Employment Rights Act an employer is required to give an employee, not later than two months after employment has begun, written particulars of terms of employment stating inter alia the length of notice which the employee is obliged to give and entitled to receive to determine his or her contract of employment, ¹⁰⁶³ or stating if there is no term as to notice, ¹⁰⁶⁴ and, where the employment is not intended to be permanent, stating the period for which it is expected to continue, or, if the contract is for a fixed term, stating the date when the contract expires. ¹⁰⁶⁵ The employee may require a reference to an employment tribunal to have such particulars supplied, ¹⁰⁶⁶ and either party may refer the question of the accuracy of particulars to an employment tribunal. ¹⁰⁶⁷ The particulars given by an employer are not themselves normally contractual documents, but will provide strong presumptive evidence as to the provisions of the contract of which they purport to give details. ¹⁰⁶⁸

Form of notice

40-159

In the absence of express or specifically implied contractual provision dealing with the matter, there is no rule as to the form of notice; it may be oral or in writing, as long as the intention to terminate is clear. ¹⁰⁶⁹ Moreover, even where a written contract of employment requires notice to terminate to be given in writing, the contract may nevertheless be terminated by word of mouth by agreement between the parties. ¹⁰⁷⁰ When an employee is given oral notice terminating his or her employment, the period of notice given is counted as running from the beginning of the day after that upon which the notice is given. ¹⁰⁷¹ However, it seems that employers will not be allowed to invoke notions of “constructive notice” where notice has not actually been received by an employee. ¹⁰⁷² Where, moreover, an employee is employed under a fixed-term contract, it is necessary to distinguish between notice to terminate and notification that the contract will terminate by effluxion of time. ¹⁰⁷³

“Permanent” employment

40-160

A provision for “permanent employment” or “pensionable employment” does not normally mean for life or even until the normal age of retirement: apart from a special condition in the contract, such employment can be terminated by reasonable notice. ¹⁰⁷⁴ But since it is a problem of construing the particular contract, words such as “permanent” may in some circumstances mean employment for life. ¹⁰⁷⁵ The mere fact that the employee becomes a member of the endowment and pension scheme for the permanent staff of the employer raises no implied term that the employment cannot be determined on reasonable notice. ¹⁰⁷⁶ However, in McClelland v Northern Ireland General Health Services Board, ¹⁰⁷⁷ it was held that a contract of employment based upon an advertisement for “permanent and pensionable” employment, and which contained express provision for termination in the event of “gross misconduct” on the part of the employee, was not impliedly terminable by the employer by reasonable notice in any other event.

Employment for an unspecified period: terminability by reasonable notice

40-161

If a contract of employment makes no express or specifically implied provision for its duration or termination by notice, there is likely to be implied at common law a presumption that the contract is for an indefinite period and terminable by a reasonable notice given by either party. ¹⁰⁷⁸ The older case law, generalising a custom formerly attaching to the employment of agricultural workers, revealed a presumption in such circumstances that the contract of employment was for a fixed term of a year or for a series of such terms. ¹⁰⁷⁹ Although that presumption could still be found at work in later cases, ¹⁰⁸⁰ it now appears to have given way entirely to the presumption of an indefinite duration and terminability by reasonable notice. ¹⁰⁸¹ The latter presumption is itself subject to the statutory provisions concerning minimum entitlements to notice. ¹⁰⁸² The statutory provisions may in many cases, especially in relation to manual workers with some seniority of employment, give rise to longer periods of entitlement than the common law would presume as a matter of “reasonable notice” in the particular circumstances; the details of the two sets of rules are considered in the following paragraphs.

The length of notice: common law

40-162

Although the contracts of employment legislation ¹⁰⁸³ prescribes minimum periods of notice to terminate a contract of employment, the common law rules on the subject may, in particular cases, require a longer period of notice to terminate a contract. The general rule is that the length of notice depends on the intention of the parties, revealed in their contract, as to what constitutes reasonable notice. ¹⁰⁸⁴ All the circumstances, such as the type of employment, local, trade ¹⁰⁸⁵ or professional ¹⁰⁸⁶ customs on the topic, the intervals at which remuneration is paid, or the period in relation to which the remuneration is stated (e.g. “£450 a year”), ¹⁰⁸⁷ have been regarded as relevant in fixing what amounts to reasonable notice in an individual case. A number of the many older reported decisions on this question are summarised in the footnotes below, but they do not lay down any rule of law and are merely guides to what may in the past have been held to be reasonable in different circumstances. They are summarised under the headings of clerical workers, ¹⁰⁸⁸ managers and directors, ¹⁰⁸⁹ editors and journalists, ¹⁰⁹⁰ commercial travellers and salespersons, ¹⁰⁹¹ superior employees in manual occupations ¹⁰⁹² and in non-manual occupations. ¹⁰⁹³ At common law, ¹⁰⁹⁴ a period as short as one week might be regarded as reasonable notice for subordinate employees. ¹⁰⁹⁵ The notice need not, in the absence of express provision, be given on a pay day, nor need it expire at the end of any period for which salary or wages are calculated, ¹⁰⁹⁶ but a term of the contract or a custom may require the notice to expire at the end of a particular period of employment. ¹⁰⁹⁷

Statutory minimum periods of notice

40-163

The contracts of employment legislation ¹⁰⁹⁸ prescribes minimum periods of notice which must be given to terminate contracts of employment of persons who have been continuously employed ¹⁰⁹⁹ for one month or more. ¹¹⁰⁰ For less than two years' continuous employment, not less than one week's notice must be given by the employer; for two years or more but less than 12 years, not less than one week's notice for each year of service; for 12 years or more, not less than 12 weeks' notice. ¹¹⁰¹ An employee who has been continuously employed for one month or more must give not less than one week's notice to terminate his contract of employment. ¹¹⁰² Contractual provisions for shorter notice take effect subject to the foregoing provisions, but either party may still waive his right to notice, or accept a payment in lieu of notice. ¹¹⁰³ The foregoing provisions apply to a contract for a term certain of one month or less, provided the period of continuous employment has been three months or more. ¹¹⁰⁴ In general, these provisions do not affect any right of either party to treat the contract as terminable without notice by reason of such conduct by the other party as would have enabled him so to treat it before the passing of the legislation. ¹¹⁰⁵ If an employer fails to give the required notice, ¹¹⁰⁶ the rights conferred by the legislation ¹¹⁰⁷ on the employee during the minimum period of notice applicable to the employee shall be taken into account in assessing the employer's liability for breach of contract. ¹¹⁰⁸

"Continuous employment"

40-164

The legislation ¹¹⁰⁹ contains detailed rules for ascertaining the length of an employee's period of employment and whether it has been "continuous". ¹¹¹⁰ The main provisions are: years are to be computed as aggregated periods making up twelve months ¹¹¹¹; a week means a week ending with Saturday ¹¹¹²; periods of absence from employment will still count as periods of continuous employment, even where there is no contract of employment in force during the absence, if they come within the following descriptions:

(a)

when the employee is incapable of work in consequence of sickness or injury for up to 26 weeks ¹¹¹³; when the employee is absent on account of a temporary cessation of work ¹¹¹⁴; or when the employee is absent under an arrangement or custom whereby the employment continues. ¹¹¹⁵

(b)

(c)

The treatment of part-time employment

40-165

Formerly, the provisions here referred to, by defining “continuous employment” so as to exclude part-time employment below the stated thresholds of weekly hours, have excluded part-time employment as thus defined from the scope of various statutory employment protection rights, most significantly rights to protection against unfair dismissal and to redundancy payments. It was clear from the decision of the House of Lords in R. v Secretary of State for Employment Ex parte Equal Opportunities Commission ¹¹¹⁶ that some or all of these exclusionary provisions in relation to part-time employment violated EU requirements of equal pay and treatment as between men and women (that is to say, they unlawfully discriminated against women). The exclusionary provisions were, accordingly, removed by the Employment Protection (Part-time Employees) Regulations 1995. ¹¹¹⁷

The treatment of periods of strike or lockout

40-166

Any week in which the employee takes part in a strike will not count towards the period of continuous employment. ¹¹¹⁸ On the other hand, continuity of employment is preserved in relation to weeks in which the employee takes part in a strike or is absent from work because of a lockout by the employer, provided those weeks occurred after 1963. ¹¹¹⁹ This provision has been held to apply even where the employee was dismissed during the strike and re-engaged after the strike had ended. ¹¹²⁰

Other provisions concerning continuity

40-167

The legislation also contains provisions preserving the continuity of employment in the event of reinstatement after military service ¹¹²¹ and causing previous employments to count towards the total period of employment where the change from one employment to the next was:

- (a) a transfer between associated employers ¹¹²²; or
- (b) consequent upon the transfer of the trade, business or undertaking in which the employee was employed ¹¹²³; or
- (c) a transfer from an employer to his or her personal representatives upon his or her death ¹¹²⁴; or
- (d) a consequence of a change in the partners, personal representatives or trustees who employed the employee. ¹¹²⁵

The legislation does not require that the period of “continuous employment” should be under a single contract: it may be “continuous” under a whole succession of new contracts between the same parties. ¹¹²⁶ It has been held that appointment of a receiver out of court does not normally determine current contracts of employment, ¹¹²⁷ but that if the receiver does make a new contract with the employee, the receiver does so as agent of the company so that continuity of employment is not broken. ¹¹²⁸

The right to guaranteed remuneration during a statutory period of notice

40-168

Not only does the contract of employment legislation provide for minimum periods of notice, but it also provides for guaranteed minimum remuneration during such periods. The 1996 Act ¹¹²⁹ prescribes the rights of employees for the period of notice required by the Act ¹¹³⁰; these rights cannot be excluded or limited by the contract. ¹¹³¹ If during “the normal working hours” ¹¹³² of the period of notice the employee is ready and willing to work but no work is provided, or the employee is incapable of work because of sickness or injury, or absent from work in accordance with the terms of his or her employment relating to holidays, the employer must pay him or her for the normal working hours he or she has lost at an average hourly rate of remuneration based upon the statutory calculation of a week’s pay. ¹¹³³ Where there are no “normal working hours” but the employee is ready and willing to work or incapable of work through sickness or injury, or absent on holiday, the employer must, for each week of the period of notice, pay the employee a statutory week’s pay. ¹¹³⁴ The liability of the employer under these provisions does not arise if the notice to be given by the employer to terminate the contract exceeds, by one week or more, the minimum period of notice required by the Act. ¹¹³⁵ Payments such as sick pay or holiday pay count towards the employer’s liability under the Act. ¹¹³⁶ Moreover, if the employer ordinarily reduces the amount of sick pay in respect of short-term incapacity benefit or industrial injury benefit claimable by the employee, the employer may continue to do so during a statutory period of notice. ¹¹³⁷ If the employee gives notice, the employer’s liability does not arise unless and until the employee leaves the service of the employer in pursuance of the notice. ¹¹³⁸ No payment need be made for the employee’s absence from work with the leave of the employer granted at the request of the employee ¹¹³⁹; nor is any payment due if the employee gives notice and then, on or before termination of the contract, takes part in a strike of employees of the employer. ¹¹⁴⁰ If the employer breaks the contract during the period of notice, payments made thereafter under the Act go towards mitigating damages recoverable by the employee for loss of earnings ¹¹⁴¹; if the employee breaks the contract during the period of notice, and the employer rightfully treats the breach as terminating the contract, the employer need pay nothing for the remaining period of the notice. ¹¹⁴² It was held in Secretary of State for Employment v Wilson ¹¹⁴³ and confirmed in Westwood v Secretary of State for Employment ¹¹⁴⁴ that the rights conferred by those provisions take effect via the contract of employment so that the common law rules as to mitigation of loss ¹¹⁴⁵ apply when quantifying the loss attributable to denial of these rights.

^{1.} Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

^{1059.} See below, paras 40-164—40-169.

^{1060.} Brown v Symons (1860) 8 C.B.(N.S.) 208; cf. Costigan v Gray & Bovier Engines (1925) 41 T.L.R. 372.

^{1061.} Langton v Carleton (1873) L.R. 9 Ex. 57.

^{1062.} Jacks v Palmer’s Shipbuilding & Iron Co (1928) 98 L.J.K.B. 366.

^{1063.} Employment Rights Act 1996 s.1(4)(e). See generally above, para.40-040, and below, paras 40-162—40-163.

^{1064.} Employment Rights Act 1996 s.2(1).

^{1065.} Employment Rights Act 1996 s.1(4)(g).

^{1066.} Employment Rights Act 1996 s.11(1).

- 1067. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.11(2).
- 1068. See above, para.40-054.
- 1069. cf. Stephenson v London Joint Stock Bank Ltd (1903) 20 T.L.R. 8. See, as to contingent or equivocal notice, Rai v Somerfield Stores Ltd [2004] I.C.R. 656 EAT.
- 1070. Latchford Premier Cinema Ltd v Ennion [1931] 2 Ch. 409, 410.
- 1071. West v Kneels [1984] I.C.R. 146.
- 1072. McMaster v Manchester Airport Plc [1998] I.R.L.R. 112.
- 1073. Compare London Underground Ltd v Fitzgerald [1997] I.C.R. 271.
- 1074. McClelland v Northern Ireland General Health Services Board [1957] 1 W.L.R. 594, 601; Walsh v Dublin HA (1962) 98 I.L.T.R. 82.
- 1075. Salt v Power Plant Co Ltd [1936] 3 All E.R. 322, 325. Quaere, whether this should not have been construed as employment until the normal age of retirement. cf. Ivory v Palmer [1975] I.C.R. 340. cf. Duke v Reliance Systems Ltd [1982] I.C.R. 449.
- 1076. Ward v Barclay Perkins & Co [1939] 1 All E.R. 287.
- 1077. [1957] 1 W.L.R. 594.
- 1078. See Freedland, The Contract of Employment (1976), pp.151–153 and cases there cited. The principle was established in cases such as Vibert v Eastern Telegraph Co (1883) Cab. & El. 17; Lowe v Walter (1892) 8 T.L.R. 358, 367; Creen v Wright (1876) 1 C.P.D. 591; Payzu Ltd v Hannaford [1918] 2 K.B. 348.
- 1079. Bailey v Rimmell (1836) 1 M. & W. 506; Beeston v Collyer (1827) 4 Bing. 309; Lilley v Elwin (1848) 11 Q.B. 742; Turner v Robinson (1833) 5 B. & Ad. 789; Fawcett v Cash (1834) 5 B. & Ad. 904; Buckingham v Surrey & Hants Canal Co (1882) 46 L.T. 885; Taylor v Garnett (1892) 8 T.L.R. 647; Cayme v Allan Jones & Co (1919) 35 T.L.R. 453.
- 1080. Vernon v Findley [1938] 4 All E.R. 311; reversed on other grounds [1939] 2 All E.R. 716; Jackson v Hayes Candy & Co [1938] 4 All E.R. 587; Mulholland v Bexwell Estates Co (1950) 66 T.L.R. (Pt 2) 764.
- 1081. De Stempel v Dunkels [1938] 1 All E.R. 238; Fisher v WB Dick & Co Ltd [1938] 4 All E.R. 467; Adams v Union Cinemas Ltd [1939] 3 All E.R. 136; James v Thomas H Kent & Co Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 551; Richardson v Koefod [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1812.
- 1082. See below, para.40-163.
- 1083. See below, para.40-163.
- 1084. A custom cannot prevail over the express terms of the contract relating to notice or the length of notice required: Evans v Roe (1872) L.R. 7 C.P. 138; Baxter v Nurse (1844) 6 M. & G. 935.
- 1085. Foxall v International Land Credit Co (1867) 16 L.T. 637. Domestic service used to be the subject of a particularly well established custom for a month's notice on either side—see, for the details, Moult v Halliday [1898] 1 Q.B. 125; George v Davies [1911] 2 K.B. 445. See also see below, nn.1081–1082.
- 1086. A producer or owner of a play has been held to be entitled to terminate the run of the play by giving a fortnight's notice according to the custom of the theatrical profession (Gubertini v Waller [1947] 1 All E.R. 746). Musicians not employed for a fixed term have been held to be, by custom, entitled to a fortnight's notice: Davson v France (1959) 109 L.J. 526.

- 1087. Cayme v Allan Jones & Co (1919) 35 T.L.R. 453.
- 1088. The length of notice for a clerk has been from one month for a clerk payable fortnightly (Vibert v Eastern Telegraph Co (1883) 1 Cab. & E. 17) to three months for those in a superior position (Fairman v Oakford (1860) 5 H. & N. 635, 636; Foxall v International Land Credit Co (1867) 16 L.T. 637); a person called a general manager (though in fact only a superior clerk) was entitled to three months' notice (Mulholland v Bexwell Estates Co (1950) 66 T.L.R. (Pt 2) 764; followed in SW Strange Ltd v Mann [1965] 1 W.L.R. 629, 642); clerk to merchant, six weeks held insufficient (De Stempel v Dunkels [1938] 1 All E.R. 238). "Month" in this context means a calendar month: P Phipps & Co (Northampton & Towcester Breweries) Ltd v Rogers [1925] 1 K.B. 14, 26, 27.
- 1089. Marine superintendent of shipping company, 12 months (Kaukul v Anglo-Soviet Shipping Co Ltd (1931) 41 Ll.L. Rep. 90); manager of life insurance department of an insurance company, one month held insufficient (Jupiter General Insurance Co v Shroff [1937] 3 All E.R. 67); controller of cinemas, six months (Adams v Union Cinemas Ltd [1939] 3 All E.R. 136); production manager at a factory one week insufficient (Orman v Saville Sportswear Ltd [1960] 1 W.L.R. 1055); a director under an implied general contract of employment was entitled to three months' notice (James v Thomas H Kent & Co [1951] 1 K.B. 551); a director and company secretary of a furniture firm, entitled to three months (HW Smith (Cabinets) Ltd v Brindle [1973] 1 C.R. 12, 21).
- 1090. Newspaper editor, 12 months (Grundy v Sun Printing Association (1916) 33 T.L.R. 77; Brennan v Gilbert-Smith (1892) 8 T.L.R. 284—a case where a custom appears to have been established), although six months has been found to be reasonable (Fox-Bourne v Vernon & Co Ltd (1894) 10 T.L.R. 647) and was apparently treated as an established custom for editors in McCabe v Pathe, etc. Ltd (1919) 35 T.L.R. 313, where it was held that the editor of a film newsreel was entitled only to one month's notice; sub-editor of newspaper, six months, evidence of custom (Chamberlain v Bennett (1892) 8 T.L.R. 234); foreign correspondent to The Times, six months (Lowe v Walter (1892) 8 T.L.R. 358); a journalist and photographer, six months (Bauman v Hulton Press Ltd [1952] 2 All E.R. 1121); regular contributors to newspaper, one month (Re Illustrated Newspaper Corp (1900) 16 T.L.R. 157); advertising agent for a newspaper, one month (Hiscox v Batchellor (1867) 15 L.T. 543).
- 1091. Commercial traveller, three months (Metzner v Bolton (1854) 9 Exch. 518; Grundon v Master & Co (1885) 1 T.L.R. 205); one month (Sellers v London Counties Newspapers [1951] 1 K.B. 784); one month, pursuant to a custom of the trade (Parker v Ibbetson (1858) 4 C.B.(N.S.) 347); salesman, three months (Fisher v WB Dick & Co Ltd [1938] 4 All E.R. 467); cf. a commercial agent (analogous to an employee), three months (Martin-Baker Aircraft Co Ltd v Canadian Flight Equipment Ltd [1955] 2 Q.B. 556, 581, 583).
- 1092. Head gardener, one month (Nowlan v Ablett (1835) 2 C.M. & R. 54); farm bailiff, one month (Johnson v Blenkinsopp (1841) 5 Jur. 870).
- 1093. Governess, schoolmistress, three months (Todd v Kerrich (1852) 8 Exch. 151); private tutor, three months (Wilson v Ucelli (1929) 45 T.L.R. 395); chief officer of a passenger steamer, 12 months (Savage v British India Steam Navigation Co (1930) 46 T.L.R. 294); claims assessor in insurance office, 10 weeks (Constable v Stuartson (1932) 44 Ll.L. Rep. 91); employed chartered engineer, at least six months, possibly 12 (Hill v CA Parsons & Co Ltd [1972] 1 Ch. 305).
- 1094. See below, para.40-163 for statutory provisions.
- 1095. e.g. for a milk roundsman: Evans v Ware [1892] 3 Ch. 502. See also Evans v Roe (1872) L.R. 7 C.P. 138 (foreman paid a weekly wage of £2).
- 1096. cf. Ryan v Jenkinson (1855) 25 L.J.Q.B. 11; Lowe v Walter (1892) 8 T.L.R. 358.
- 1097. Metzner v Bolton (1854) 9 Exch. 518.

- 1098. As originally enacted in the Contracts of Employment Act 1963 and later amended and consolidated into in the Employment Rights Act 1996 Pt IX.
- 1099. Defined in the Act: see below, paras 40-164—40-168.
- 1100. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.86. Various categories of employment are exempted from the application of these provisions of the Act: the master, skipper or seamen on certain ships and fishing boats (s.199(1) Employment Rights Act 1996).
- 1101. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.86(1).
- 1102. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.86(2). On the effect of notice to strike, see above, para.40-076.
- 1103. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.86(3). See Secretary of State for Employment v Rooney [1977] I.C.R. 440.
- 1104. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.86(4).
- 1105. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.86(6). This subsection preserves the employer's power to dismiss for misconduct, incompetence, etc.: see below, paras 40-183 et seq.
- 1106. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.86.
- 1107. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.87–91(4) (see below, para.40-183).
- 1108. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.91(5). Held in Secretary of State for Employment v Wilson [1977] I.R.L.R. 483, [1978] I.C.R. 200; and in Westwood v Secretary of State for Employment [1985] A.C. 20, to mean that the rights conferred by the legislation took effect as contractual rights and so were subject to common law rules of mitigation; see below, paras 40-200—40-201.
- 1109. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.210–219. The legislation is now to be read subject to the Employment Protection (Continuity of Employment) Regulations 1996 (SI 1996/3417), in force from January 13, 1997, which provide for the preservation of continuity of employment in certain special circumstances relating to the remedy of reinstatement or re-engagement of the employee.
- 1110. This term, and “continuously”, is used in s.86 of Employment Rights Act 1996.
- 1111. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.210(3).
- 1112. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.235(1).
- 1113. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.212(3)(a).
- 1114. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.212(3)(b), see Fitzgerald v Hall, Russell & Co Ltd [1970] A.C. 984 (held, that the reference is to work for the employee, not to the employer's work); Hunter v Smith's Dock Co Ltd [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1865; Thompson v Bristol Channel Ship Repairers Ltd [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 105; Clarke Chapman-John Thompson Ltd v Walters [1972] 1 W.L.R. 378; Puttick v John Wright & Sons (Blackwall) Ltd [1972] I.C.R. 457; McGarry v Earls Court Stand Fitting Co Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 100; Rashid v Inner London Education Authority [1977] I.C.R. 157; and Hanson v Fashion Industries [1981] I.C.R. 35. Flack v Kodak Ltd [1986] I.C.R. 775; Ford v Warwickshire CC [1983] I.C.R. 273 (a series of consecutive fixed-term contracts, each for an academic year, with a summer break between each contract). Contrast, however Surrey CC v Lewis [1987] I.C.R. 982 (concurrent fixed-term contracts of varying length). Compare Cornwall CC v Prater [2006] EWCA Civ 102, [2006] I.C.R. 731, where the Court of Appeal displayed a greater willingness than had previously been shown to regard a sequence of casual work contracts as being linked up, by periods of “temporary cessation of work” into a period of “continuous employment”. See also para.40-023 n.152, and compare Welton v Deluxe Retail Ltd [2013] I.R.L.R. 166 EAT.

- 1115. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.212(3)(c); see Wishart v National Coal Board [1974] I.C.R. 460; and Corton House v Skipper [1981] I.C.R. 307. Compare now also Welton v Deluxe Retail Ltd [2013] I.R.L.R. 166 EAT, where it was held that the “arrangement” cannot be a retroactive one.
- 1116. [1995] 1 A.C. 1.
- 1117. SI 1995/31 with effect from February 6, 1995.
- 1118. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.216(1).
- 1119. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.216(2)–(3).
- 1120. Bloomfield v Springfield Hosiery Finishing Co Ltd [1972] I.C.R. 91.
- 1121. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.217.
- 1122. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.218(6). See Zarb v British and Brazilian Produce Co (Sales) Ltd [1978] I.R.L.R. 78; Hillingdon AHA v Kaunders [1979] I.C.R. 472; and Merton LBC v Gardiner [1981] I.C.R. 186 CA. Compare also Da Silva v Composite Mouldings & Design Ltd [2009] I.C.R. 416.
- 1123. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.218(2). See Dallow Industrial Properties Ltd v Else [1967] 2 Q.B. 449; Kenmir Ltd v Frizzell [1968] 1 W.L.R. 329; Woodhouse v Peter Brotherhood Ltd [1972] 2 Q.B. 520; Secretary of State for Employment v Rooney [1977] I.C.R. 440; Dhami v Top Spot Night Club Ltd [1977] I.R.L.R. 231; Young v Daniel Thwaites & Co Ltd [1977] I.C.R. 877; Pambakian v Brentford Nylons Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 665; Rastill v Automatic Refreshment Services Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 289. In Lord Advocate v de Rosa [1974] 1 W.L.R. 946, it was held that the provision of the 1963 Contracts of Employment Act corresponding to the present s.218(2) was not to be treated as qualified, in a redundancy payments case, by s.3(2) or s.13(2) of the Redundancy Payments Act 1965 s.136(1)–(3) of the 1996 Act. In Evenden v Guildford City Association Football Club Ltd [1975] I.C.R. 367, it was held that the limits of para.17(2) could be transcended, in a redundancy payments case, by reference to s.9(2)(a) of the Redundancy Payments Act 1965 (s.210(5) of the 1996 Act) (presumption of continuity); but this was overruled in Secretary of State for Employment v Globe Elastic Thread Ltd [1979] I.C.R. 706. The provision of s.218(2) should be considered in conjunction with those of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 2006—see below, para.40-179.
- 1124. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.218(4). See Rowley Holmes & Co v Barber [1977] 1 W.L.R. 371.
- 1125. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.218(5). See Harold Fielding Ltd v Mansi [1974] I.C.R. 347; and Allen & Son v Coventry [1980] I.C.R. 9; and see below, para.40-180.
- 1126. Re Mack Trucks (Britain) Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 780, 787.
- 1127. See below, para.40-182.
- 1128. Re Mack Trucks (Britain) Ltd, above; cf. Deaway Trading Ltd v Calverley [1973] I.C.R. 546.
- 1129. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.87–91.
- 1130. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.86(1); see above, para.40-163.
- 1131. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.203.
- 1132. As defined by s.234 of Employment Rights Act 1996. See below, para.40-256.
- 1133. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.88(1). The “week’s pay” is calculated by reference to ss.220–229 of Employment Rights Act 1996. See below, para.40-255.

- 1134. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.89(1)–(4), the week's pay being calculated as in n.1126, see above. See below, para.40-255.
- 1135. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.87(4). The better view seems to be that this includes the case where the implied obligation to give reasonable notice see above, paras 40-161—40-162, applies to produce a period exceeding the applicable statutory minimum period by one week or more.
- 1136. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.88(2), 89(4).
- 1137. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.90.
- 1138. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.88(3), 89(5).
- 1139. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.91(1).
- 1140. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.91(2).
- 1141. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.91(3).
- 1142. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.91(4).
- 1143. [1977] I.R.L.R. 483.
- 1144. [1985] A.C. 20.
- 1145. See below, paras 40-200—40-201.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 40 - Employment ¹
Section 6. - Termination of the Contract
(b) - Termination by Payment in Lieu of Notice

The contractual status of payments in lieu of notice

40-169

Contracts of employment are frequently in practice terminated by payment in lieu of notice. There is some doubt as to the contractual status of a payment in lieu of notice. ¹¹⁴⁶ One view is that in the absence of express provision to the contrary in the original contract of employment, the payment is normally to be regarded as liquidated damages for a breach of contract consisting in the refusal to allow the employee to work out his notice. ¹¹⁴⁷ Some payments in lieu of notice can be viewed as an ordinary giving of notice accompanied by a waiver of services by the employer which is accepted by the employee. ¹¹⁴⁸ Another view might be that a right to terminate by payment in lieu of notice can be viewed as a normally implied corollary of a contractual right on the part of an employer to terminate by notice, unless it is clear that the employee has some special interest in being allowed to work out his notice. ¹¹⁴⁹ In the case of Delaney v Staples, ¹¹⁵⁰ Lord Browne-Wilkinson distinguished four principal categories of payment in lieu of notice, while making it clear that this was not necessarily an exhaustive list. ¹¹⁵¹ The categories, and the contractual status of each, were, in effect:

(1)

The employer gives proper notice of termination to the employee, tells the employee that he or she need not work until the termination date and gives him or her the wages attributable to the notice period in a lump sum. In this case, commonly called “garden leave”, there is no breach of contract by the employer; the employment continues until the expiry of the notice: the lump sum payment is simply advance payment of wages.

(2)

The contract of employment provides expressly that the employment may be terminated either by notice or, on payment of a sum in lieu of notice, summarily. In this case, summary dismissal accompanied by payment in lieu of notice is not in breach of contract.

(3)

At the end of the employment, the employer and the employee agree that the employment is to terminate forthwith on payment of a sum in lieu of notice. Again, the employer is not in breach of contract.

(4)

The employer summarily dismisses the employee without the agreement of the employee and tenders a payment in lieu of notice. In this case, which is the most common one, the employer is in breach of contract, and the payment in lieu of notice is in the nature of liquidated damages.

Subsequent case law suggests that the contractual status of payments in lieu of notice will now be determined by applying these four categories to the particular facts in question.¹¹⁵² Difficult issues may nevertheless still arise. The Supreme Court's decision in *Société Générale (London Branch) v Geys*¹¹⁵³ raised complex issues as to whether the employer had correctly and validly exercised a contractual right to terminate the contract of employment by payment in lieu of notice.¹¹⁵⁴ Lady Hale, agreeing with the majority of the Supreme Court, opined that it is an "obviously necessary incident of the employment relationship" that the other party is notified in clear and unambiguous terms that the right to bring the contract to an end is being exercised, and how and when it is intended to operate.¹¹⁵⁵ In *Cerberus Software Ltd v Rowley*¹¹⁵⁶ it was held that an employee, who had been wrongfully summarily dismissed, but the terms of whose contract were such that the employer could lawfully have terminated by six months' notice or payment in lieu of notice, could claim the payment in lieu only subject to the duty to mitigate his loss. In contrast to that is *HQ Service Children's Education (MOD) v Davitt*¹¹⁵⁷ where payment in lieu was made but the contract was deemed to have been terminated by notice which the employee had not been required to work out. As to payments in lieu of notice and "garden leave", comparison may be made with the decision in Symbian Ltd v Christiansen,¹¹⁵⁸ which deals with the application of the restraint of trade doctrine to contractual arrangements for garden leave.

The statutory and contractual effects of payment in lieu of notice

40-170

The view was at one stage taken¹¹⁵⁹ that the provision now contained in s.86(3) of the Employment Rights Act 1996 treats payment in lieu of notice as a derogation from the statutory obligation to give certain minimum periods of notice unless the employee accepts the payment when it is made, though it has more recently been held that if the contract of employment provides for payment in lieu of notice, or if the parties agree upon a payment in lieu of notice no shorter than the period to which the employee is entitled by contract or statute, the last part of s.86(3) applies, and a payment in lieu of notice can properly terminate the contract of employment.¹¹⁶⁰ However, in *Hardy v Polk Ltd*¹¹⁶¹ Burton P. held, in effect, that s.86 did not create an entitlement to payment in lieu of notice, or a claim in debt for failure to give the statutory minimum period of notice or payment in lieu thereof. Whether a payment in lieu of notice is regarded as a contractual right of the employer or as liquidated damages (as to which, reference may be made to the previous paragraph), the question of its quantum arises, and early authority suggests that it might not include any allowance for benefits conferred gratuitously, or in kind, during employment.¹¹⁶² The question also arises of the time at which the termination of the contract takes effect. The view of such payments as liquidated damages for breach seems to require the view that termination is immediate upon the ending of actual employment.¹¹⁶³ The view of such arrangements as involving a waiver of the right to the services of the employee may result in an extension of the date of termination to the date at which the notice in lieu of which payment is made would have expired.¹¹⁶⁴ Where an arrangement for payment in lieu of notice does result in a continuation of the contract for the duration of the notice period, the question whether the employee forfeits the right to the payment by taking other work depends upon whether that amounts on the facts to a repudiatory breach on the employee's part.¹¹⁶⁵

¹. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

¹¹⁴⁶. See Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003), pp.305 et seq.

¹¹⁴⁷. Dixon v Stenor Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 157, 158G.

¹¹⁴⁸. Lees v Arthur Greaves Ltd [1974] I.C.R. 501.

- 1149. cf. White v Riley [1921] 1 Ch. 1, 6.
- 1150. [1992] I.C.R. 483.
- 1151. [1992] I.C.R. 483 at 488–9.
- 1152. cf. Abrahams v Performing Right Society Ltd [1995] I.C.R. 1028; Gregory v Wallace [1998] I.R.L.R. 387. Compare also Locke v Candy & Candy Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 1350, [2011] I.R.L.R. 163, where it was held that the express contractual entitlement to payment in lieu of notice should be construed so as to include compensation equivalent to the annual bonus which would have been payable had the full period of notice been served.
- 1153. [2012] UKSC 63, [2013] 1 A.C. 523.
- 1154. See also above, para.24-001.
- 1155. [2012] UKSC 63, at [57].
- 1156. [2001] I.R.L.R. 160 CA.
- 1157. [1999] I.C.R. 978 EAT.
- 1158. [2000] I.R.L.R. 879 CA.
- 1159. Chapman, Blair & Atchinson v Executors of WG Leadley [1966] I.T.R. 84 (Sir Diarmaid Conroy Q.C.) (commenting on the corresponding provision in the Contracts of Employment Act 1963).
- 1160. Rex Stewart Jeffries Parker Ginsberg Ltd v Parker [1988] I.R.L.R. 483, 486.
- 1161. [2004] I.R.L.R. 420 EAT.
- 1162. cf. Gordon v Potter [1859] 1 F.& F. 644.
- 1163. Dixon v Stenor [1973] I.C.R. 157.
- 1164. Lees v Arthur Greaves [1974] I.C.R. 501; but contrast Dedman v British Building Appliances Ltd [1974] I.C.R. 53.
- 1165. Hutchings v Coinseed Ltd [1998] I.R.L.R. 190.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 6. - Termination of the Contract

(c) - Termination by Agreement or by Expiry of Fixed Period

Termination by prior agreement or expiry of fixed period: fixed-term contracts and limited-term contracts

40-171

When we speak of the termination of contracts of employment by agreement, we normally intend to refer to an agreement made subsequently to the original formation of the contract of employment in question. We might, however, properly also include within this category the termination of the contract of employment by prior agreement, which is to say by an agreement made when the contract of employment itself is made and as part of that contract. A contract of employment containing such an agreement will normally be referred to as a “fixed-term contract”, though the duration of a contract of employment may be limited other than by reference to a period of time (or to a period of notice), for example by reference to the completion of a task, ¹¹⁶⁶ in which case it may not be appropriate to refer to it as a “fixed-term contract”. It should also be noted that the termination of a fixed term contract on completion of the fixed term may be referred to as a termination “by effluxion of time” or “by expiry of the fixed term” rather than as termination by agreement. Moreover, it should also be noted that for the purposes of statutory rights associated with the termination of employment, such as the rights to statutory redundancy payment or not to be unfairly dismissed, the expiry of a fixed-term contract without renewal is treated as a dismissal, and is considered under that heading later in this chapter. ¹¹⁶⁷ Finally, and most important, it should be noted that the Fixed-term Employees Regulations 2002 ¹¹⁶⁸ introduced the new terminology of “limited-term contracts” and substituted that new terminology for the previously used terminology of “contract for a fixed term” in relation to many statutory employment rights. ¹¹⁶⁹ A statutory definition is provided for the “limited-term contract” ¹¹⁷⁰ which is very similar to the definition of the previously used terminology of the “contract for a fixed term”, and coincides with the conception of the fixed-term contract articulated in the present paragraph: that is to say, it includes contracts limited either by the expiry of a fixed period of time, or by the completion of a defined task, or by the occurrence of another previously specified limiting event. At the same time, the terminology of “fixed-term” contracts is used in the Fixed-term Employees Regulations themselves, and is defined ¹¹⁷¹ in almost the identical way, except that the limiting event of the attainment of normal retirement age is excluded. For the avoidance of the confusion which might otherwise result, the terminology of the “fixed-term contract” is retained throughout this chapter except where the particular context specially requires otherwise.

The conversion of successive fixed-term contracts into the contracts of employment of “a permanent employee”

40-172

The operation and effect of fixed-term contracts of employment has been extensively modified by the Fixed-term Employees Regulations 2002, ¹¹⁷² which were made under the authority of s.45 of the Employment Act 2002, mainly with the purpose of implementing Council Directive 99/70 on fixed-term work, ¹¹⁷³ and came into force on October 1, 2002. The Regulations make two main sets of new provisions, one conferring a right of no less favourable treatment upon fixed-term employees as compared with permanent employees, and the other converting certain successive fixed-term contracts of employment into the contracts of employment of permanent employees. The right of no less favourable treatment was considered in an earlier section of this chapter ¹¹⁷⁴; the conversion of successive fixed-term contracts into the contracts of employment of “a permanent employee” is considered in this paragraph. That conversion is effected by and according to reg.8. It occurs where an employee is employed under a fixed-term contract ¹¹⁷⁵ which follows successively upon a previous fixed-term contract or has itself previously been renewed, and where the employee has been continuously employed for four years under a renewed fixed-term contract or successive fixed-term contracts; the conversion takes effect either when such a contract is entered into or renewed, or when the employee has been continuously employed for four years, whichever is the later. ¹¹⁷⁶ There is some need for clarification of what it means to convert a fixed-term contract into the contract of employment of “a permanent employee”. It would seem to mean a conversion into a contract of employment which is of indefinite duration, terminable upon reasonable notice ¹¹⁷⁷ and subject to the statutory minimum periods of notice. ¹¹⁷⁸ Comparison should be made with the case law, considered in an earlier paragraph, ¹¹⁷⁹ concerning the construction of provisions for “permanent employment” in contracts of employment.

Termination by subsequent agreement

40-173

In accordance with general contractual principles, it is open to an employer and employee at any time during the currency of a contract of employment to terminate the contract by agreement. ¹¹⁸⁰ The agreement will be effective by virtue of the mutual release by the parties of their obligations under the contract of employment. ¹¹⁸¹ The agreement may be subject to terms, provided these do not, for instance, constitute an unlawful restraint of trade. ¹¹⁸² The agreement will be effective to override formal or substantive restrictions placed on the termination of the contract by the original contract itself. ¹¹⁸³ Because a termination by agreement may not be a “dismissal” for statutory purposes, the industrial (now, employment) tribunals and courts have been vigilant in distinguishing between genuinely bilateral termination and ostensible agreements generated solely by the employer. ¹¹⁸⁴ It used to be thought that there might be a termination by agreement rather than a dismissal where the parties agree in advance that the employee’s failure to return to work on a due date will operate to determine the contract, ¹¹⁸⁵ unless there was simply a unilateral stipulation by the employer to that effect. ¹¹⁸⁶ However, the Court of Appeal has held that the fact that there is some measure of agreement on the part of the employee to the termination of a contract of employment does not of itself prevent an employee from counting as dismissed for the purposes of the Act of 1978 (now the 1996 Act); and that a provision for automatic termination of a contract of employment for failure to report for work on one specific future date was void by virtue of s.140(1) of that Act, now s.203 of the 1996 Act, as purporting to limit the operation of the statutory right not to be unfairly dismissed, by trying to convert that right into a merely conditional one. ¹¹⁸⁷ Nevertheless, there may be held in appropriate circumstances to be a “consensual resignation” rather than a dismissal, for example under a genuinely consensual early retirement scheme. ¹¹⁸⁸ A termination of a contract of employment by agreement occurs also where there is an agreed change in the terms and conditions of employment, for instance by way of promotion, which is sufficiently fundamental to constitute the rescission of the original contract and its replacement by a new contract on different terms. ¹¹⁸⁹

Retirement

40-174

The notion of “retirement” from employment is one which is far from precise either in practical or in legal terms. In practical terms its normal or approximate meaning is the ending of the employment of a worker by reason of his or her having reached the end of his or her normal working life or career. In legal terms this may take various forms, such as termination of the contract of employment by the employing enterprise, perhaps by notice to terminate, or termination by expiry of a fixed-term contract of employment, or it might be regarded as termination by agreement, whether prior or ad hoc, or it might consist of termination by the worker (the latter especially in the case of so-called “early retirement”, itself a notion with further imprecisions). ¹¹⁹⁰ Without defining the notion of “retirement”, the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations 2006 ¹¹⁹¹ attached very significant new legal incidents to it, ¹¹⁹² some of which were immediately embodied in the unfair dismissal provisions of the Employment Rights Act 1996 and the rest of which were subsequently transposed into the Equality Act 2010. Many of those provisions, in particular those which had authorised employers to maintain a “default retirement age” of 65 or more, were repealed by the Employment Equality (Repeal of Retirement Age Provisions) 2011. ¹¹⁹³ The result is that if an employer requires an employee to retire from his or her employment, while no breach of the employee’s contract of employment may be involved—that is to say, while the retirement may take the form of a contractually lawful termination of employment—the imposition of retirement upon the employee may nevertheless represent an unfair dismissal ¹¹⁹⁴ and/or a dismissal which amounts to unlawful age discrimination. ¹¹⁹⁵

1. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

¹¹⁶⁶ Such a contract may more readily be classified as a contract for services; cf. above, para.40-004.

¹¹⁶⁷ See below, paras 40-215 (unfair dismissal), 40-249 (redundancy payments).

¹¹⁶⁸ SI 2002/2034.

¹¹⁶⁹ SI 2002/2034 reg.11 and Sch.2, amending Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.29, 65, 86, 92, 105, 108, 109, 136, 145, 199, 203, 235.

¹¹⁷⁰ SI 2002/2034 reg.11 and Sch.2 Pt 1 para.3, inserting new Employment Rights Act 1996 s.235(2A)–(2B).

¹¹⁷¹ SI 2002/2034 reg.1(2).

¹¹⁷² SI 2002/2034.

¹¹⁷³ Directive 97/81 as extended to the UK by Directive 98/23.

¹¹⁷⁴ See above, para.40-155.

¹¹⁷⁵ As defined in reg.1(2).

¹¹⁷⁶ Under reg.8(4), any period of continuous employment falling before July 10, 2002 is to be disregarded. It should be noted that, by virtue of reg.8(2)(b), the conversion effect occurs only if the employment of the employee under a fixed-term contract was not justified on objective grounds; as to the assessment of objective justification, compare Duncombe v Department for Education and Skills [2011] UKSC 14. Compare now also Hudson v Department for Work and Pensions [2012] EWCA Civ 1416, [2013] 1 All E.R. 1370 where the Court of Appeal considers the working of reg.8 and construes the scope of reg.18 as excepting employees currently employed on fixed-term contracts made pursuant to a Government training scheme, but does not exclude such employment under past contracts.

¹¹⁷⁷ See above, para.40-161.

¹¹⁷⁸ See above, para.40-163.

¹¹⁷⁹ See above, para.40-160.

¹¹⁸⁰ See Vol.I, paras 22-001 et seq.

¹¹⁸¹ Hence an “accord and satisfaction”—see Lees v Arthur Greaves Ltd [1974] I.C.R. 501, 506D. In Lambert v Croydon College [1999] I.C.R. 409, the Employment Appeal Tribunal held that a compromise agreement for early retirement on grounds of ill-health could validly fix the “effective date of termination of employment” for statutory purposes, see below, paras

40-217—40-218, even though it fixed it at a date earlier than that on which the agreement was made. In Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA (In Liquidation) v Ali [2001] I.C.R. 337, it was held in the House of Lords that the standard settlement agreement which ACAS proposes to parties to employment tribunal proceedings, known as the COT3 agreement, did not extend to the release of future liability from potential claims which could not have been foreseen or in the contemplation of the parties when the agreement was made—such as, in this case, the claim for “stigma damages” which had subsequently been successfully made against the BCCI by some of its former employees, see below, para.40-203. Compare Solelectron Scotland Ltd v Roper [2004] I.R.L.R. 4 EAT as to the validity of a compromise agreement which could be regarded as limiting the application of the TUPE Regulations.

- 1182. See Vol.I, paras 16-114 et seq. and cf. Wyatt v Kreglinger & Fernau [1933] 1 K.B. 793. In Fish v Dresdner Kleinwort Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 2246, [2009] I.R.L.R. 1035 it was held that the express provisions of termination agreements for the payment of bonus and severance pay could not be cut down by reference to fiduciary obligations or obligations of mutual trust and confidence owed by the employees, who had been senior managers, to the employer, although those payments had been reduced for remaining senior managers by reason of the impact of the banking crisis of 2008.
- 1183. e.g. Latchford Premier Cinema Ltd v Ennion & Paterson [1931] 2 Ch. 409, see above, para.40-159.
- 1184. East Sussex CC v Walker (1972) 7 I.T.R. 280; and, in the context of transfer to different work or work on different terms, Marriott v Oxford & District Co-operative Society Ltd (No.2) [1970] 1 Q.B. 186; Sheet Metal Components Ltd v Plumridge [1974] I.C.R. 373. A further example of this vigilance is provided by the decision of the Court of Appeal in Hellyer Bros v Atkinson [1994] I.R.L.R. 88.
- 1185. British Leyland Ltd v Ashraf [1978] I.C.R. 979.
- 1186. Midland Electric Ltd v Kanji [1980] I.R.L.R. 185.
- 1187. Igbo v Johnson Mathey Chemicals Ltd [1985] I.C.R. 505; overruling British Leyland Ltd v Ashraf [1978] I.C.R. 979.
- 1188. Birch v University of Liverpool [1985] I.C.R. 470.
- 1189. See Freedland, The Contract of Employment (1976), pp.72-76; and cf. Meek v Port of London Authority [1918] 2 Ch. 96; SW Strange Ltd v Mann [1965] 1 W.L.R. 629; BBC v Ioannu [1974] I.R.L.R. 77 at para.17 (decision affirmed [1975] I.C.R. 267).
- 1190. Compare Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003), pp.400-401, 429-431.
- 1191. SI 2006/1031.
- 1192. See also para.40-224.
- 1193. SI 2011/1069 which took full effect on October 1, 2011.
- 1194. As to which see para.40-224.
- 1195. As to which see para.40-246.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 40 - Employment ¹
Section 6. - Termination of the Contract
(d) - Termination Under the Doctrine of Frustration

Frustration

40-175

The doctrine of frustration applies to a contract of employment. ¹¹⁹⁶ Death of either party and permanent illness of the employee discussed in the following paragraphs, are instances where the doctrine applies. But other events may frustrate a contract of employment: a contract between a variety artiste and a manager was held to be frustrated by the calling up of the artiste for military service, even though the parties, so far as possible, treated the contract as subsisting throughout the War. ¹¹⁹⁷ It was held in Hare v Murphy Bros Ltd ¹¹⁹⁸ that a contract of employment may be terminated when the employee is sentenced to a substantial term of imprisonment, and there was some suggestion in the judgments of the Court of Appeal that this could be regarded as a termination under the doctrine of frustration. ¹¹⁹⁹ In a later case, it was held that a contract of apprenticeship was frustrated when the apprentice received a custodial sentence, and that he could not negate that frustration as being induced by his own fault. ¹²⁰⁰

Death of either party

40-176

The death of either party terminates the contract of employment, unless the contract expressly or implicitly provides otherwise. The contract is terminated only as from the time of death so that any right of action which has accrued to either party before that time remains enforceable ¹²⁰¹; but no claim lies to enforce rights which would accrue only after that time. ¹²⁰² The death of the employer normally operates to terminate the contract of employment just as the death of the employee: the personal representative of the employer is not normally obliged to continue the employment. ¹²⁰³ On the death of either party, a claim lies for the salary or wages of the employee up to the date of the death which terminates the contract. ¹²⁰⁴ Moreover, legislation now protects the position of employees in respect of their statutory rights in the event of the employer's death, and in certain circumstances securing those rights for the estate of the employee in the event of the employee's death. ¹²⁰⁵ It is provided, furthermore, that where, upon the death of an employer, an employee takes up employment with the personal representatives, the period of employment with the deceased employer counts as part of the period of continuous employment with the personal representatives for the purposes of statutory rights depending upon length of service or requiring a qualifying period of service. ¹²⁰⁶

Illness frustrating the contract

40-177

If the illness or injury is of such a nature, or if it appears likely to continue for such a period, as to defeat the purpose or object of the employment, the contract of employment will be frustrated. ¹²⁰⁷ The effect of the expected ¹²⁰⁸ period of the illness must depend upon the period and nature of the employment. In Marshall v Harland & Wolff Ltd, ¹²⁰⁹ the test was formulated as follows:

“Was the employee's incapacity, looked at before the purported dismissal, of such a nature, or did it appear likely to continue for such a period, that further performance of his obligations in the future would either be impossible or would be a thing radically different from that undertaken by him and accepted by the employer under the agreed terms of his employment?”

Although in that case the principle was maintained ¹²¹⁰ that there need be no act of the employer marking the point of time at which the frustration occurred, the current judicial approach to frustration by incapacity of the employee due to illness seems to be on the whole a cautious one which emphasises that frustration must be a conclusion made necessary by the circumstances of the particular employment. ¹²¹¹ There is even some suggestion that frustration by illness cannot in practice arise at all in relation to contracts of employment terminable by notice as distinct from contracts of employment for a substantial fixed term not terminable by notice, ¹²¹² though the better view seemed to regard the doctrine of frustration as restricted rather than totally excluded where the employer has the power to terminate by notice. ¹²¹³ This was confirmed in a more recent case ¹²¹⁴ where it was held that the contract of employment of a skilled workman was, though a periodic contract terminable by relatively short notice, nevertheless terminated by frustration without notice when it became apparent to both parties that the employee had become incapacitated by sickness from ever again performing his contract of employment. If a contract of employment is frustrated, the legal consequences upon the rights and obligations of the parties will be determined by the ordinary legal rules applicable to frustration. ¹²¹⁵ Early authority suggests that if the illness or injury is of a type or of a duration which does not frustrate the contract of employment, it is nevertheless a justification for the employee's failure to work while the illness or injury continues. ¹²¹⁶

¹. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

¹¹⁹⁶. See Vol.I, paras 23-037 et seq. So also does the distinct doctrine of supervening legal impossibility—Tarnesby v Kensington Chelsea & Westminster AHA [1981] I.R.L.R. 369.

¹¹⁹⁷. Morgan v Manser [1948] 1 K.B. 184.

¹¹⁹⁸. [1974] I.C.R. 603.

¹¹⁹⁹. [1974] I.C.R. 603 at 607E-F (per Lord Denning M.R.), 607H-608A (Stephenson L.J.), 608E-F (Lawton L.J.); not followed, however, in Norris v Southampton City Council [1982] I.C.R. 177. Compare now the restricted approach to frustration of the contract of employment which was taken in Four Seasons Healthcare Ltd v Maughan [2005] I.R.L.R. 324.

¹²⁰⁰. Shepherd & Co Ltd v Jerrom [1986] I.R.L.R. 358. See Vol.I, para.23-061.

¹²⁰¹. Stubbs v Holywell Ry (1867) L.R. 2 Ex. 311.

¹²⁰². Graves v Cohen (1930) 46 T.L.R. 121; cf. Harvey v Tivoli (Manchester) Ltd (1907) 23 T.L.R. 592. Contrast Phillips v Alhambra Palace Co [1901] 1 K.B. 59. This is merely an application of the general rule as to frustration.

¹²⁰³. Farrow v Wilson (1896) L.R. 4 C.P. 744. But cf. Graves v Cohen (1930) 46 T.L.R. 121, 123-124.

¹²⁰⁴. Law Reform (Frustrated Contracts) Act 1943, see Vol.I, paras 23-074 et seq., also, possibly, by the Apportionment Act 1870 (see below, para.40-196).

- 1205. See ss.136(5), 206, 207 of Employment Rights Act 1996.
- 1206. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.218(4); see above, para.40-167.
- 1207. Poussard v Spiers & Pond (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 410 (opera singer engaged for three months, unable to perform on first night and duration of illness uncertain—contract frustrated); Storey v Fulham Steel Works (1907) 24 T.L.R. 89 (engagement for five years as manager—after two years, six months' illness—no frustration); Warburton v Co-operative Wholesale Society [1917] 1 K.B. 663. For the question of payment during absence due to sickness, see above, paras 40-082—40-084. For the relationship with the reasonable adjustment duty (disability), see now Warner v Armfield Retail & Leisure Ltd [2014] I.C.R. 239 EAT.
- 1208. cf. the cases on the effect on an ordinary contract of a delay whose duration is uncertain; Vol.I, para.23-035.
- 1209. [1972] I.C.R. 101, 105A-B.
- 1210. [1972] I.C.R. 101 at 106F.
- 1211. [1972] I.C.R. 101 at 105B-106A, 106H-107C; Puttick v John Wright & Sons (Blackwall) Ltd [1972] I.C.R. 457; Hebden v Forsey & Son [1973] I.C.R. 607.
- 1212. Harman v Flexible Lamps Ltd [1980] I.R.L.R. 418, 419, para.7.
- 1213. cf. Egg Stores Ltd v Leibovici [1977] I.C.R. 260, 264C-265E; Hart v AR Marshall Ltd [1977] I.R.L.R. 51, 52, paras 5-7. The “short-term periodic contract of employment” referred to by Phillips J. in those cases is the ordinary contract of employment of indeterminate duration impliedly terminable by notice, see above, para.40-161.
- 1214. Notcutt v Universal Equipment Co (London) Ltd [1986] I.C.R. 414.
- 1215. See Vol.I, paras 23-070 et seq.
- 1216. Boast v Firth (1868) L.R. 4 C.P. 1.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 6. - Termination of the Contract

(e) - Assignment, Winding-up and Changes in the Employing Enterprise

Transfer of employment: (1) the position at common law

40-178

A contract for personal service cannot be assigned by one party without the consent of the other. ¹²¹⁷ Thus where two companies were amalgamated under an order of the court, the employer's rights under a contract of employment could not be assigned to the new company without the consent of the employee. ¹²¹⁸ Similarly, it has been held that the sale by a receiver (appointed by the debenture-holders) of the company's business as a going concern may operate to terminate the contracts of employment of all the company's employees. ¹²¹⁹ Where the identity of the employer is changed in such circumstances that statutory continuity of employment is preserved, ¹²²⁰ the new employer is not required to issue a complete new set of statutory particulars of terms of employment ¹²²¹ unless there is some change in the terms; the change in the identity of the employer can in those circumstances be notified by way of amendment of the existing particulars as if it were simply itself a change of terms. ¹²²² This should not, however, be seen as overriding the requirement of the employee's consent to the change of employer. ¹²²³

Transfer of employment: (2) the effect of the TUPE Regulations

40-179

The position concerning transfer of employment as described in the previous paragraph was very significantly altered by the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981. ¹²²⁴ More recently, the existing Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations were revised and replaced by the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 2006 ("the TUPE Regulations"). ¹²²⁵ The Regulations provide that upon a transfer of an undertaking to which the regulations apply, ¹²²⁶ or upon a "service provision change" ¹²²⁷—that is to say, in essence, where services are either outsourced, brought back in house, or assigned by a client to a new contractor—the contract of employment of any person employed immediately before the transfer ¹²²⁸ by the transferor in the undertaking or part transferred shall not be terminated by the transfer but, if it is a contract which would otherwise have been terminated by the transfer ¹²²⁹ shall have effect after the transfer as if originally made with the transferee of the undertaking, ¹²³⁰ unless the employee in questions lodges an objection to being employed by the transferee, in which case the transfer operates to terminate the contract of employment, though this is not to be treated as a dismissal of the employee. ¹²³¹ So in such cases, if the employee does not lodge an objection, there is an automatic novation of the contract of employment, which is extended by the regulations to include all the transferor's rights powers duties and liabilities under or connection with the contract. ¹²³² This would seem to include accumulated entitlement to statutory employment rights based on the contract of employment insofar as not otherwise transferred by other statutory rules relating to the continuity of employment. ¹²³³ The question of the effectiveness of variations in transferred contracts had proved a very difficult one under the pre-2006 Regulations. ¹²³⁴ The Regulations now provide that in respect of a contract of employment which is or will be transferred, any purported variation will be void if it is by reason of the transfer itself or for a connected reason which is not an economic technical or organisational reason entailing changes in the workforce, ¹²³⁵ but that otherwise a variation may validly be agreed. ¹²³⁶ The Regulations also, however, provide that where a transfer involves or would involve a substantial change in working conditions to the material detriment of the employee in question, that employee may treat the contract of employment as having been terminated, and that the employee shall be treated as having been dismissed by the employer. ¹²³⁷ Moreover, the Regulations also expressly preserve any independently arising right of an employee “to terminate his contract of employment without notice in acceptance of a repudiatory breach of contract by his employer”. ¹²³⁸

Dissolution or change in composition of partnership ¹²³⁹

40-180

A dissolution of partnership of employers may operate as a wrongful dismissal ¹²⁴⁰; but if the continuing partners offer new employment on the old terms and the employee unreasonably refuses it, he or she is only entitled to nominal damages in an action for such dismissal. ¹²⁴¹ There are provisions whereby statutory continuity of employment is preserved in the event of a change in the membership of a partnership of employers, ¹²⁴² and these provisions have been held to extend to the case of a change from employment by a partnership to employment by the sole surviving partner. ¹²⁴³ It should be noted that, under the provisions of the Limited Liability Partnerships Act 2000, employing partnerships may now be constituted in this new form of corporate entity, in which case different considerations apply.

Corporate insolvency and restructuring (1) ¹²⁴⁴

40-181

As the law of corporate insolvency and restructuring is itself subject to changes over time which cannot be fully detailed here, it is emphasised that the case law which is treated in this and the following paragraph must be understood in the context of its own contemporary company law regime. In the case of a company, the making of a compulsory winding-up order has been thought to operate automatically as notice of (wrongful) discharge to the employees of the company, since it amounts to notice that the company cannot continue to fulfil its obligations under its contracts of employment. ¹²⁴⁵ This would seem correct if there is an immediate termination of employment when the winding-up order is made. If, after the making of the order, the employment is continued by the liquidator, various views of the resulting situation are possible. The liquidator may be viewed as continuing the employment as the agent of the company. ¹²⁴⁶ In that case the making of the order could be seen as having no effect on the continuity of employment, ¹²⁴⁷ or as the giving of due notice to terminate, the period of notice to be worked out in the employment of the liquidator. ¹²⁴⁸ Alternatively, the order could still be viewed as a wrongful dismissal, but a wrongful dismissal rendered merely technical by the continuance of employment by the liquidator as agent of the company. ¹²⁴⁹ If the liquidator is viewed as employing in his or her personal capacity and not as the agent of the company, the winding-up order must then be seen as a wrongful dismissal followed by transfer of employment to the liquidator. ¹²⁵⁰ A resolution for voluntary winding-up accompanied by a discontinuance of employment will constitute a wrongful dismissal of the employees. ¹²⁵¹ Where the employment is continued by the liquidator after the resolution, the question of whether the resolution constitutes a wrongful repudiation has been thought to depend upon whether it is clear that the company cannot continue to fulfil its obligations. ¹²⁵² The better view would seem to be that the employee can in general in such cases opt to treat the resolution as a wrongful dismissal. ¹²⁵³

Corporate insolvency and restructuring (2)

40-182

The view has been taken that where a receiver and manager is appointed to a company by the court, the receiver does not generally act as the agent of the company, ¹²⁵⁴ and it would seem accordingly that there is a wrongful dismissal of employees of the company ¹²⁵⁵ (followed by transfer of employment to the receiver). On the other hand, where a receiver and manager is appointed to a company out of court by the debenture holders, the view has been taken that he or she will normally be empowered to act as the agent of the company in continuing the employment of its employees.¹²⁵⁶ There may nevertheless be held to be a wrongful dismissal of employees upon the appointment of the receiver out of court if (a) the employment of the employee concerned is of such a nature that its continuance was inconsistent with the appointment of a receiver and manager¹²⁵⁷; or if (b) the receiver is regarded as continuing the employment on behalf of the debenture holders rather than on behalf of the company itself,¹²⁵⁸ though the latter view of the receiver's position pending liquidation of the company was preferred in Deaway Trading Ltd v Calverley.¹²⁵⁹ A receiver and administrator was rendered personally liable, by s.44(1) (b) of the Insolvency Act 1986 on any contract of employment adopted by him in the carrying out of his function. The circumstances in which a contract of employment would be held to have been so adopted were considered by the Court of Appeal and the House of Lords in Re Paramount Airways Ltd (No.3).¹²⁶⁰

1. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

¹²¹⁷. See Vol.I, para.19-055.

¹²¹⁸. Nokes v Doncaster Amalgamated Collieries [1940] A.C. 1014; cf. Denham v Midland Employers Mutual Assurance Ltd [1955] 2 Q.B. 437.

¹²¹⁹. Re Foster Clark Ltd's Indenture Trusts [1966] 1 W.L.R. 125 sed quaere; insofar as the decision is founded on Brace v Calder [1895] 2 Q.B. 253, it is questionable because sale of the business does not dissolve the employing entity as dissolution of a partnership does, cf. see below, para.40-180. On the appointment of a receiver, see below, para.40-182.

¹²²⁰. See above, para.40-167.

¹²²¹. See above, para.40-040.

¹²²². Employment Rights Act 1996 s.2(2), (3).

¹²²³. cf. Ubsdell v Paterson [1973] I.C.R. 86, 89C; Cartin v Botley Garages Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 144.

¹²²⁴. SI 1981/1794, made under the European Communities Act 1972 in implementation of EEC Directive 77/187 of the Council of February 14, 1977, on the approximation of the laws of the Member States relating to the safe-guarding of employees' rights in the event of transfer of undertakings, businesses and parts of businesses; amended by the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (Amendment) Regulations 1987 (SI 1987/442). For recent judicial analyses of the aims and effects of the Directive and the Regulations, see Unison v Allen [2007] I.R.L.R. 975; Computershare Investor Services Plc v Jackson [2007] EWCA Civ 1065, [2008] I.R.L.R. 70; and Regent Security Services Ltd v Power [2007] EWCA Civ 1188, [2008] I.R.L.R. 66.

¹²²⁵. SI 2006/246, implementing amendments to Directive 77/187 which were made by Directive 98/50 and consolidated into the replacement Directive 2001/23. See now also the Collective Redundancies and Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (Amendment) Regulations 2014 (SI 2014/16). For a full overview, see J. McMullen, "TUPE: ringing the (wrong) changes" (2014) 43 I.L.J. 149.

¹²²⁶. See reg.3(1)(a), 3(2), 3(4)-(6). The key concept is that of the "economic entity", as to which see, most recently, Wain v Guernsey Ship Management Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 294, [2007] I.C.R. 1350. By reg.3(1)(a), the regulations apply to the transfer of an undertaking from one person to another—which excludes share takeovers of companies, where, however, a transfer provision is in a sense unnecessary because no change in the identity of the employer is involved; compare, however, Print Factory (London) 1991 Ltd v Millam [2007] EWCA Civ 322, [2007]

I.C.R. 1331, which shows the difficulty of distinguishing, at the margin, between a share sale and the transfer of an undertaking.

1227. See reg.3(1)(b), 3(3).

1228. See reg.4(3) and compare Secretary of State for Employment v Spence [1987] Q.B. 179; Litster v Forth Dry Dock & Engineering Co Ltd [1989] I.R.L.R. 161.

1229. See reg.4(1), cf. above, para.40-178, below, paras 40-181—40-183.

1230. See reg.4(1). See now Alemo-Herron v Parkwood Leisure Ltd [2014] All E.R. (EC) 400; See J. Prassl, “Freedom of contract as a general principle of EU law? Transfers of undertakings and the protection of employer rights in EU labour law” (2013) 42 I.L.J. 434, and para.1-029, above.

1231. SI 2006/246 reg.4(1), (7).

1232. SI 2006/246 reg.4(2)(a). But criminal liability is excepted by reg.4(6).

1233. See above, para.40-164.

1234. It had been under consideration by the House of Lords in the case of Wilson v St Helen's BC [1998] I.C.R. 1141.

1235. SI 2006/246 reg.4(4), subject to reg.9 which is more permissive towards variations of contract where transferors are subject to insolvency proceedings. See Kavanagh v Crystal Palace FC 2000 Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1410, [2014] 1 All E.R. 1033, and Manchester College v Hazel [2014] EWCA Civ 72, [2014] I.R.L.R. 392.

1236. SI 2006/246 reg.4(5).

1237. SI 2006/246 reg.4(9) subject to reg.9 which is more permissive towards variations of contract where transferors are subject to insolvency proceedings. See below, para.40-193 n.1342 as to the impact of reg.4(9) upon the pre-existing law.

1238. SI 2006/246 reg.4(11); as to the extent of such a right, compare below, para.40-193 on constructive dismissal.

1239. See Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003), at pp.500-501.

1240. Titmus v Rose & Watts [1940] 1 All E.R. 599; but it may not do so where there is no fundamental disruption to the work of the partnership, as where one partner among a number retires or dies: cf. Phillips v Alhambra Palace Co [1901] 1 Q.B. 59; Tunstall v Condon [1980] I.C.R. 786, 790F-791F.

1241. Brace v Calder [1895] 2 Q.B. 253. On mitigation, see Vol.I, paras 26-079 et seq.

1242. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.218(5). See above, para.40-167.

1243. Stevens v Bower [2004] EWCA Civ 496, [2004] I.C.R. 1582 where the approach earlier taken in Harold Fielding Ltd v Mansi [1974] I.C.R. 347 was rejected and it was held that the employees in question had continuity of service despite the change in the status of their employer from that of a partnership of solicitors to that of a sole practitioner.

1244. See Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003), at pp.501—505.

1245. See Graham, “The Effect of Liquidation on Contracts of Service” (1952) 15 M.L.R. 48, 52; citing Re Oriental Bank Corp Ltd (1886) 32 Ch. D. 366. See Deaway Trading Ltd v Calverley [1973] I.C.R. 46, 550H-551D.

1246. cf. McEwan v Upper Clyde Shipbuilders Ltd (In Liquidation) [1972] I.T.R. 296 (Industrial Tribunal).

- 1247. Ex p. Harding (1868) L.R. 3 Eq. 341.
- 1248. This seems to be the correct view of Re Oriental Bank Corp Ltd (1886) 32 Ch. D. 366.
- 1249. cf. McEwan v Upper Clyde Shipbuilders Ltd (In Liquidation) [1972] I.T.R. 296.
- 1250. cf. Golding and Howard v Fire, Auto and Marine Insurance Co Ltd (In Liquidation) [1968] I.T.R. 372 Industrial Tribunal.
- 1251. Reigate v Union Manufacturing Co Ltd [1918] 1 K.B. 592; Fowler v Commercial Timber Co Ltd [1930] 2 K.B. 1.
- 1252. Graham, "The Effect of Liquidation on Contracts of Service" (1952) 15 M.L.R. 48, 54; and see Davies, Modern Company Law, 6th edn (1997), pp.833 et seq.
- 1253. Contra, Midland Counties Bank v Attwood [1905] 1 Ch. 357; but see Reigate v Union Manufacturing Co Ltd [1918] 1 K.B. 592, 606 where Scrutton L.J. exposed a fallacy in the earlier case. See also Freedland, The Contract of Employment (1976), pp.335-337.
- 1254. cf. Burt Boulton & Hayward Ltd v Bull [1895] 1 Q.B. 276, 279.
- 1255. Reid v Explosives Co Ltd (1887) 19 Q.B.D. 264.
- 1256. Re Foster Clarke Ltd's Indenture Trusts [1966] 1 W.L.R. 125, 128B-G; Re Mack Trucks (Great Britain) Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 780, 786C-E.
- 1257. Re Mack Trucks (Great Britain) Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 780, 786C; but this doctrine held inapplicable even to a managing director in Griffiths v Secretary of State for Social Services [1974] Q.B. 468.
- 1258. cf. Hopley-Dodd v Highfield Motors Ltd [1969] I.T.R. 289 Industrial Tribunal.
- 1259. [1973] I.C.R. 546, 552D-E.
- 1260. Sub nom. Powdrill v Watson [1994] I.C.R. 395 CA, [1995] 2 A.C. 394 HL. The Insolvency (No.2) Act 1994 amended s.44 of the 1986 Act to reverse certain of the effects of that decision in respect of contracts of employment adopted on or after March 15, 1994. The resulting position has been stated in detail in an earlier chapter of this work; see Vol.I, para.10-050.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 6. - Termination of the Contract

(f) - Summary Dismissal

Summary dismissal generally

40-183

The law concerning summary dismissal used to form a very prominent part of the law of the contract of employment. This was because the common law implied very wide rights of summary dismissal into contracts of employment, and also because the common law duties of the employee were worked out in the context of actions concerning summary dismissals alleged to be wrongful. ¹²⁶¹ The law of summary dismissal has been considerably reduced in its importance for two reasons, first, because the employer's rights of summary dismissal have, since the decision in Laws v London Chronicle Ltd, ¹²⁶² been regarded as confined to cases of repudiation or fundamental breach of contract by the employee, in accordance with general contractual principles. ¹²⁶³ Secondly, the justifiability of dismissal is now in practice normally raised as an issue of unfair dismissal, ¹²⁶⁴ and the question of whether a summary dismissal was wrongful dismissal at common law has to that extent lost its former significance. The following paragraphs should be read as subject to those general considerations.

Misconduct

40-184

Where the employee is guilty of sufficient misconduct in his or her capacity as an employee he or she may be dismissed summarily without notice and before the expiration of a fixed period of employment. ¹²⁶⁵ Although the power of dismissal in these circumstances may be by virtue of an implied term in the contract, ¹²⁶⁶ it is also possible to view it as a power to rescind the contract upon a repudiatory breach of contract committed by the employee. ¹²⁶⁷ There is no rule of law defining the degree of misconduct which will justify dismissal. ¹²⁶⁸ The test to be applied must vary with the nature of the business and the position held by the employee, ¹²⁶⁹ and reported cases are therefore only a general guide. The general rule is that if the employee does anything which is incompatible with the due or faithful ¹²⁷⁰ discharge of his or her duty to his or her employer, he or she may be dismissed without notice ¹²⁷¹; the employee's conduct need not be dishonest, since it is sufficient if it is "conduct of such a grave and weighty character as to amount to a breach of the confidential relationship" ¹²⁷² between employer and employee. So where a manager of a betting shop borrowed money from petty cash to place a bet in another betting shop, knowing that his employer would not have granted permission for this borrowing had he been asked, the employer was justified in dismissing him summarily, even though the manager put an IOU in the till, and was not surreptitious. ¹²⁷³ On the other hand, even (conceded) gross negligence on the part of a senior social worker was held not to amount to "gross misconduct" meriting summary dismissal within the meaning of her contractual dismissal procedure. ¹²⁷⁴

Illustration of misconduct

40-185

❗ Many of the decisions on misconduct date from the last century, and may be out of accord with current social conditions. However, courts may endeavour to adapt to modern circumstances the principles derived from the older cases, and there is scope for judicial innovation when principles have to be applied to novel situations. Insubordination, ¹²⁷⁵ breach of confidence in disclosing trade or other secrets, ¹²⁷⁶ taking a secret commission ¹²⁷⁷ and drunkenness affecting performance of duties ¹²⁷⁸ are kinds of misconduct which have, in the circumstances of the case, justified summary dismissal. An employee may obviously be dismissed for dishonesty or fraud in his employment. ¹²⁷⁹ But conviction ¹²⁸⁰ of a crime is sufficient only if the conduct constituting the crime is inconsistent with the proper performance of his or her duties as an employee. ¹²⁸¹ In the absence of fraud, there is no obligation on a prospective employee to disclose to his or her prospective employer all the facts which might be material to the latter's decision whether or not to employ him or her, nor, during the employment, to disclose his or her own misconduct. ¹²⁸² Thus, the mere concealment of a material fact, without fraud, does not entitle the employer to dismiss the employee. ¹²⁸³ In Adesokan v Sainsbury's Supermarkets Ltd, the Court of Appeal held that an act of gross negligence might in an appropriate case amount to gross misconduct justifying dismissal where it inflicted grave damage upon the relationship between the parties. ¹²⁸⁴ ❗

Misconduct outside hours of employment

40-186

It has been held that dishonesty committed by the employee outside the hours of his employment will justify summary dismissal where it reveals the employee as "unfit for a position of trust and confidence". ¹²⁸⁵ Other forms of misconduct outside the course of employment may justify dismissal if the misconduct is incompatible with the due or faithful discharge of the employee's duty qua employee, as where the confidential clerk to a merchant was speculating to an enormous amount on the Stock Exchange in "differences". ¹²⁸⁶ Again, where the employee presided irregularly at a canteen committee meeting (held outside his ordinary hours of employment) at which he assaulted a fellow employee and was disrespectful to a superior officer, the employer was justified in dismissing him summarily. ¹²⁸⁷ The older authorities suggest that it is doubtful whether an employee's immorality unconnected with the employment ¹²⁸⁸ can justify dismissal without notice, unless the immorality is such as to show that he or she could not reasonably be trusted in the particular employment concerned. ¹²⁸⁹

Misconduct of apprentice

40-187

Special rules have been held to apply to minors who are employed as apprentices. ¹²⁹⁰ It has been held that conduct on the part of an apprentice which might justify the dismissal of an adult, such as words irritating his or her fellow employees and leading to the loss of the employer's time, does not justify the dismissal of the apprentice, ¹²⁹¹ nor does insolence and insubordination. ¹²⁹² Nor is it sufficient for the employer to show that the apprentice has repudiated the contract, unless it also appears that the repudiation was for the benefit of the apprentice. ¹²⁹³ Since the covenants by the employer in an apprenticeship deed were regarded as independent covenants, it has been held to be normally no excuse for the breach of the employer's obligations that the apprentice had broken his obligations. ¹²⁹⁴ But where an apprentice by his or her own wilful act prevents an employer from teaching him, the employer could set this up as a defence to an action on the covenant to keep, teach and maintain ¹²⁹⁵; and it has also been held a good defence that the apprentice was an habitual thief. ¹²⁹⁶

Summary dismissal for disobedience

40-188

An employee may be summarily dismissed if he or she wilfully disobeys any lawful and reasonable order of his employer, provided that:

“The disobedience must at least have the quality that it is ‘wilful’: it does ... connote a deliberate flouting of the essential contractual conditions.” ¹²⁹⁷

In circumstances which show that the employee is repudiating one of the essential conditions of the contract of employment, a single act of disobedience will justify dismissal. ¹²⁹⁸ But not every order of the employer will be a “lawful order” or a “reasonable order” ¹²⁹⁹ for this purpose, since the employee is not bound to obey an order to do something which is outside the contract of employment, ¹³⁰⁰ nor an order which places him or her in danger not reasonably contemplated at the time he or she entered the employment, e.g. an order to remain in a place in which his personal safety is endangered by violence or disease. ¹³⁰¹

Summary dismissal for incompetence or negligence

40-189

If an employee was engaged on the basis that he or she possessed a particular skill, it has been held that he or she may be dismissed summarily without notice if he fails to display a reasonable degree of competence in that skill. ¹³⁰² It has also been held that any employee (whether he or she professes a particular skill or not) is liable to be dismissed summarily if he or she performs his work so negligently that his or her employer’s business is likely to be seriously injured. ¹³⁰³ The view has been taken that an isolated act of forgetfulness or carelessness on the part of an employee will not normally entitle the employer to dismiss him or her without notice ¹³⁰⁴; but this has been said to be a question “of fact and degree in all cases” ¹³⁰⁵; “to forget to do a thing which, if not done, may cause considerable damage to the employer, or to his property, ... may be a serious neglect of duty”. ¹³⁰⁶ The older cases concerning summary dismissal for incompetence or negligence might well now be held to be restricted in their application by the development of the principle that summary dismissal is justified only by fundamental or repudiatory breach of contract on the part of the employee. ¹³⁰⁷

Grounds for dismissal need not be known at the time nor stated

40-190

An employer, when he or she dismisses his employee, need not allege any specific act of misconduct on the employee’s part as the ground for the dismissal; it is sufficient if such a ground did exist, whether or not the employer knew of it at the time of the dismissal. ¹³⁰⁸ But if the employer does know of the misconduct in question and thereafter continues the employment, he or she may be taken to have waived his or her right to dismiss the employee on that ground. ¹³⁰⁹ The employee now has a statutory right to a written statement of reasons for dismissal. ¹³¹⁰ The existence of that right does not in itself alter this aspect of the law of summary dismissal, unless the employer were held to be estopped from asserting grounds for dismissal which do not form part of a statutory written statement of reasons for dismissal.

The right to be heard on dismissal from public employment

40-191

Certain employees whose employment is in some sense public employment or involves the tenure of an office are entitled to the benefit of the application of the principles of natural justice before they can be dismissed. ¹³¹¹ The category of employees so entitled is not yet clearly defined but seems to include employees who are holders of a tenured office ¹³¹² or whose employment takes place under the authority and regulation of a statute or other constituent instrument giving it a public nature. ¹³¹³ It seemed that where the employee has this protection, remedies of a public law nature might be available to invalidate a dismissal not carried out in accordance with the principles of natural justice.

¹³¹⁴ The more recent view has been that a person employed under a contract of employment cannot invoke public law remedies to complain of his or her dismissal even if his or her employment is of a public nature, ¹³¹⁵ though an officer or office-holder who does not have a contract of employment may be able to do so. ¹³¹⁶ In R. (Shoosmith) v OFSTED, ¹³¹⁷ a senior manager employed by a local authority did succeed in obtaining judicial review of the decision to dismiss her summarily on the footing that she was an office-holder as well as being a contractual employee; on the other hand, it was held in Christou v Haringey LBC ¹³¹⁸ that social workers in that senior manager's department, who were regarded as ordinary contractual employees, could not invoke the doctrines of res judicata or abuse of process to complain of having been subjected to a second internal disciplinary process relating to a particular course of conduct on their part. The question whether an employee dismissed for misconduct is entitled to wages or salary up to the date of his dismissal is discussed in a later paragraph. ¹³¹⁹

¹ Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

¹²⁶¹ cf. above, paras 40-059—40-069.

¹²⁶² [1959] 1 W.L.R. 698; see below, para.40-188.

¹²⁶³ See Freedland, The Contract of Employment (1976), pp.212-219.

¹²⁶⁴ See below, paras 40-214 et seq. A dismissal can be contractually wrongful without being unfair, and vice versa—cf. Treganowan v Robert Knee & Co Ltd [1975] I.C.R. 405.

¹²⁶⁵ Spain v Arnott (1817) 2 Stark. 256; Atkin v Acton (1830) 4 C. & P. 208; Turner v Robinson (1833) 5 B. & Ad. 789; Boston Deep Sea Fishing Co v Ansell (1888) 39 Ch. D. 339. Compare Cavenagh v William Evans Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 697, [2013] 1 W.L.R. 238 in which the Boston Deep Sea Fishing case was distinguished on the basis that it did not go so far as to say that afterdiscovered misconduct provided an employer with a defence to an action for payment of an accrued debt consisting of six months' pay in lieu of notice due upon making the employee redundant.

¹²⁶⁶ Any express disciplinary rules applicable to the employee must be notified to him: Employment Rights Act 1996 s.1(4)(a) (see above, para.40-040).

¹²⁶⁷ See below, para.40-183; Vol.I, paras 24-035 et seq. In Ministry of Justice v Parry [2013] I.C.R. 311 EAT, Langstaff J. expounds this approach, holding in particular that the employee's conduct should be seen as a whole, so that an employer would usually be justified in dismissing an employee who committed a further act of misconduct within the period of effect of a warning, even though the act on its own might not merit dismissal.

¹²⁶⁸ Clouston & Co v Corry [1906] A.C. 122. Where the plaintiff was required to serve to the satisfaction of the defendants, it was held that a real though unreasonable dissatisfaction justified them in dismissing him: Diggle v Ogston Motor Co (1915) 84 L.J.K.B. 2165.

¹²⁶⁹ Jupiter General Insurance Co Ltd v Shroff [1937] 3 All E.R. 67, 74 PC.

¹²⁷⁰ The duty of fidelity is discussed see above, para.40-062. It has been held that if the employer produces sufficient evidence to establish a strong prima facie case of infidelity on the part of his employee, the onus of rebutting this inference may shift to the employee: Federal Supply Co v Aeghnm (1910) 103 L.T. 150.

¹²⁷¹ Pearce v Foster (1886) 17 Q.B.D. 536; Swale v Ipswich Tannery Ltd (1906) 11 Com. Cas. 88; Tomlinson v LMS Ry [1944] 1 All E.R. 537; Sinclair v Neighbour [1967] 2 Q.B. 279.

- 1272. Sinclair v Neighbour [1967] 2 Q.B. 279 at 289. Compare now Leach v OFCOM [2012] EWCA Civ 959, [2012] I.C.R. 1269 where the Court of Appeal held that the claimant had “abused the trust and confidence placed in him to a degree that was sufficiently serious to justify summary dismissal” (at [56]).
- 1273. Sinclair v Neighbour [1967] 2 Q.B. 279.
- 1274. Dietman v Brent LBC [1988] I.C.R. 842.
- 1275. The Marina (1881) 50 L.J.P. 33. cf. on insolence Shaw v Chairitie (1850) 3 Car. & Kir. 21; Hicks v Thompson (1857) 28 L.T.(O.S.) 255; Edwards v Levy (1860) 2 F. & F. 94; Wilson v Racher [1974] I.C.R. 428 (summary dismissal held not justified by the use of obscene language on a solitary occasion); but see Pepper v Webb [1969] 1 W.L.R. 514, see below, para.40-188.
- 1276. See above, paras 40-066—40-068. Beeston v Collyer (1827) 2 C. & P. 607.
- 1277. Boston Deep Sea Fishing Co v Ansell (1888) 39 Ch. D. 339; Federal Supply Co of South Africa v Angehrn (1910) 103 L.T. 150; Bell v Lever Bros [1932] A.C. 161. And see Reading v Att-Gen [1951] A.C. 507 for the situation where the employer claims the amount of the secret commission from his employee: Vol.I, para.29-164; see above, para.40-069.
- 1278. Wise v Wilson (1845) 1 C. & K. 662; Drysdale v New Era Co (1936) 55 Ll.L. Rep. 49. cf. Clouston & Co v Corry [1906] A.C. 122, 129; Hands v Simpson Fawcett & Co Ltd (1928) 44 T.L.R. 295.
- 1279. Brown v Croft (1828) 6 C. & P. 16n; Cunningham v Fonblanque (1833) 6 C. & P. 44, 49; Phillips v Foxall (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 666.
- 1280. The employee may show he was wrongly convicted: Parsons v LCC (1893) 9 T.L.R. 619. The imposition of a custodial sentence may make the contract impossible of further performance—Hare v Murphy Bros Ltd [1974] I.C.R. 603; see above, para.40-175.
- 1281. Hands v Simpson Fawcett & Co Ltd (1928) 44 T.L.R. 295. See also Pearce v Foster (1886) 17 Q.B.D. 536, 539, 540; Proctor v Bacon (1886) 2 T.L.R. 845.
- 1282. Bell v Lever Bros [1932] A.C. 161, especially at 228; Healey v Soc Anon Française Rubastic [1917] 1 K.B. 946, 947. Compare above, para.40-064 on duties to disclose information.
- 1283. Fletcher v Krell (1872) 42 L.J.Q.B. 55 (where a governess, described as a spinster, had in fact been married and divorced); Hands v Simpson Fawcett & Co Ltd (1928) 44 T.L.R. 295 (commercial traveller, who by terms of employment was to use motor-car, did not disclose previous driving conviction).
- 1284.  [2017] EWCA Civ 22, [2017] I.R.L.R. 346.
- 1285. Boston Deep Sea Fishing Co v Ansell (1888) 39 Ch. D. 339; Pearce v Foster (1886) 17 Q.B.D. 536 at 539–540. Federal Supply, etc. of South Africa v Angehrn & Piel (1910) 103 L.T. 150. cf. Sinclair v Neighbour [1967] 2 Q.B. 279.
- 1286. Pearce v Foster (1886) 17 Q.B.D. 536.
- 1287. Tomlinson v LMS Ry [1944] 1 All E.R. 537.
- 1288. cf. Gillet v Bullivant (1846) 7 L.T. 490.
- 1289. Pearce v Foster (1886) 17 Q.B.D. 536, 539–540.
- 1290. See Vol.I, paras 9-025—9-028. On apprentices in general, see Fridman, The Modern Law of Employment (1963), pp.973–978. The present chapter does not deal with the law as between employer and apprentice except where expressly stated.

- 1291. Newell v Gillingham Corp [1941] 1 All E.R. 552.
- 1292. McDonald v John Twiname Ltd [1953] 2 Q.B. 304.
- 1293. Waterman v Fryer [1922] 1 K.B. 499.
- 1294. Winstone v Linn (1823) 1 B. & C. 460; Phillips v Clift (1859) 4 H. & N. 168.
- 1295. Raymond v Minton (1886) L.R. 1 Ex. 244.
- 1296. Learoyd v Brook [1891] 1 Q.B. 431.
- 1297. Laws v London Chronicle Ltd [1959] 1 W.L.R. 698, 701.
- 1298. Laws v London Chronicle Ltd [1959] 1 W.L.R. 698; cf. Pepper v Webb [1969] 1 W.L.R. 514; Gorse v Durham CC [1971] 1 W.L.R. 775.
- 1299. Jacquot v Bourra (1839) 7 Dowl. 348; cf. now UCATT v Brain [1981] I.C.R. 542, 548E–G (order to employee to undertake to settle a libel action to which he was defendant was unreasonable).
- 1300. Price v Mouat (1862) 11 C.B.(N.S.) 508; Kaukul v Anglo-Soviet Shipping Co Ltd (1931) 41 Ll.L. Rep. 90; cf. Secretary of State for Employment v ASLEF (No.2) [1972] 2 Q.B. 455.
- 1301. Turner v Mason (1845) 14 M. & W. 112, 117, 118; Bouzourou v Ottoman Bank [1930] A.C. 271; Ottoman Bank v Chakarian [1930] A.C. 277. cf. McDonald v Moller Line (UK) Ltd [1953] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 662, 667. In Buckoke v GLC [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1092, it was held not unlawful for the GLC to have a regulation for firemen employed by them which left it to the discretion of the firemen whether to disregard traffic signals.
- 1302. Harmer v Cornelius (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 236. See above, para.40-059.
- 1303. Callo v Brouncker (1831) 4 C. & P. 518; Wise v Wilson (1845) 1 C. & K. 662; Edwards v Levy (1860) 2 F. & F. 94; Fillieul v Armstrong (1837) 7 Ad. & El. 557. See above, para.40-060.
- 1304. Baster v London & County Printing Works [1899] 1 Q.B. 901, 903.
- 1305. Baster v London & County Printing Works [1899] 1 Q.B. 901.
- 1306. Baster v London & County Printing Works, above, at 903; Power v British India Steam Navigation Co Ltd (1930) 46 T.L.R. 294.
- 1307. See above, para.40-183.
- 1308. Mercer v Whall (1845) 5 Q.B. 447, 466; Ridgway v Hungerford Market Co (1835) 3 A. & F. 171; Cussons v Skinner (1843) 11 M. & W. 161; Spotswood v Barrow (1850) 5 Exch. 110; Boston Deep Sea Fishing Co v Ansell (1888) 39 Ch. D. 339. cf. Cyril Leonard & Co v Simo Securities Trust Ltd [1972] 1 W.L.R. 80 (employment as managing agents). The Irish Supreme Court has not followed the proposition in the text: Carvill v Irish Industrial Bank Ltd [1968] I.R. 325.
- 1309. Boston Deep Sea Fishing Co v Ansell, above, at 358. But the employer does not lose his right of dismissal if he honestly accepts the employee's denial of guilt: Federal Supply, etc. of South Africa v Angehrn & Piel (1910) 103 L.T. 150; and if the alleged misconduct consists, not in a single act, but in a series of acts, the whole course of the employee's conduct must be taken into account. Compare now Cavenagh v William Evans Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 697.
- 1310. See below, para.40-194.
- 1311. See Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003), pp.70–71. Compare McLaughlin v

Governor of the Cayman Islands [2007] UKPC 50, [2007] 1 W.L.R. 2839.

1312. cf. Stevenson v URTU [1977] I.C.R. 893, 902G–H, per Buckley L.J.

1313. cf. Malloch v Aberdeen Corp [1971] 1 W.L.R. 1578, 1596, per Lord Wilberforce. Contrast, however, Gunton v Richmond LBC [1980] I.C.R. 755, 764B, 774B–F, 777B.

1314. See below, para.40-027.

1315. R. v East Berkshire HA Ex p. Walsh [1985] Q.B. 152.

1316. R. v Secretary of State for the Home Department Ex p. Benwell [1985] Q.B. 554.

1317. [2011] EWCA Civ 642, [2011] I.C.R. 1195.

1318. [2013] EWCA Civ 178, [2014] Q.B. 131.

1319. See below, para.40-197.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 6. - Termination of the Contract

(g) - Wrongful Dismissal or Repudiation

Termination by wrongful dismissal or wrongful repudiation

40-192

As a matter of general contract principle, the wrongful repudiation or wrongful purported termination of a contract cannot in itself terminate the contract, ¹³²⁰ at least unless it renders any continuance of the contract totally impossible by reason of its catastrophic nature. ¹³²¹ There is, however, a body of authority which treats wrongful dismissal as an exception to that general principle, so that the contract of employment is said to be terminated by wrongful dismissal even where the employee refuses to accept the dismissal as a termination of the contract. ¹³²² That view is a conclusion based on the fact that common law and equitable remedies will not normally be so applied as to keep a contract of employment in being following a wrongful dismissal. ¹³²³ The contrary view is that the contract of employment is not necessarily in principle terminated by wrongful dismissal even though no remedy may lie to maintain the contract in being. ¹³²⁴ That theoretical issue has acquired a new importance because of the statutory consequences now attached to the termination of the contract of employment. ¹³²⁵ The ultimate answer is that "termination of the contract of employment" is not really a concept with a single clear meaning ¹³²⁶, but with that qualification the better view now seems to be in favour of regarding wrongful dismissal as not in principle terminative of the contract unless accepted as such by the employee. Moreover, the courts now seem prepared to take the same view of a wrongful repudiation consisting in a fundamental change by the employer in the terms of employment which is not accepted by the employee as a termination of his or her contract. ¹³²⁷ The elective view of termination of the contract of employment was followed in granting a declaration that a wrongful dismissal was ineffective to determine the contract ¹³²⁸, in holding that an unaccepted wrongful repudiation could be the subject of injunctive relief to prevent a wrongful dismissal from taking effect until the proper contractual procedures had been followed ¹³²⁹, in holding that an employee could not free himself or herself of his or her obligation not to work for a rival employer during his contractual notice period by a wrongful repudiation which was not accepted by the employer ¹³³⁰; and in rejecting the view that an employee normally dismisses himself or herself so is not dismissed by his or her employer when he or she commits a repudiatory breach of contract. ¹³³¹ The Court of Appeal in its decision in Boyo v Lambeth LBC ¹³³² rather doubtfully applied the elective view of wrongful repudiation by the employer. In the case where the employer wrongfully purported to treat the contract of employment as frustrated, the contract was treated, for the purpose of assessing contractual compensation, as not validly terminated until the time that notice to terminate would have expired if given after a disciplinary process had been provided and had been completed within a reasonable period of time. The elective view of the effect of the employer's wrongful and repudiatory purported dismissal was confirmed by the Supreme Court in Société Générale (London Branch) v Geys. ¹³³³ In the particular case, the employee having elected to affirm the contract, the contract of employment was deemed to have remained in being until validly terminated by the eventual proper exercise of a payment in lieu of notice clause, ¹³³⁴ with the effect that the period of service upon which the employee's bonus entitlement was based was extended by some weeks, and the amount of the bonus entitlement was thereby increased by several million pounds. The current view seems to be that the difficulties raised by this approach in relation to the statute law that depends on the concept of dismissal can satisfactorily be resolved by treating a wrongful dismissal as resulting in an effective termination for statutory purposes whatever its theoretical effect as a matter of common law. ¹³³⁵ It has been held that a threatened breach by an employing company of its continuing obligation to employ the employee as a director was comparable to an anticipatory repudiatory breach of an executory contract, rather than an actual repudiatory breach, which could therefore be withdrawn at any time before its unequivocal acceptance by the employee.¹³³⁶

-
1. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).
- ¹³²⁰. See above, Vol.I, paras 24-001 et seq.
- ¹³²¹. cf. Harbutt's "Plasticine" Ltd v Wayne Tank & Pump Co Ltd [1970] 1 Q.B. 447. cf. also Hounslow LBC v Twickenham Garden Developments Ltd [1971] Ch. 233, 251E–254A for discussion of a different kind of exception to the general principle.
- ¹³²². Ridge v Baldwin [1964] A.C. 40, 64; Denmark Productions Ltd v Boscobel Productions Ltd [1969] 1 Q.B. 699, 737E–F; Decro-Wall International SA v Practitioners in Marketing Ltd [1971] 1 W.L.R. 361, 381E; Hill v CA Parsons & Co Ltd [1972] 1 Ch. 305, 314B–E “in the ordinary course of things”; GKN (Cwmbran) Ltd v Lloyd [1972] I.C.R. 214, 221B–C; Sanders v Ernest Neale Ltd [1974] I.C.R. 565.
- ¹³²³. See below, para.40-207 (specific performance and injunction); paras 40-210–40-211 (declaration).
- ¹³²⁴. Denmark Productions Ltd v Boscobel Productions Ltd [1969] 1 Q.B. 699, 731F–732F; Decro-Wall International SA v Practitioners in Marketing Ltd [1971] 1 W.L.R. 361, 376C–D.
- ¹³²⁵. See below, paras 40-214 et seq. (unfair dismissal provisions); paras 40-222 et seq. (redundancy payments legislation); paras 40-246 et seq. (dismissal contravening the Sex Discrimination Act 1975).
- ¹³²⁶. See Freedland, The Contract of Employment (1976), pp.299–300.
- ¹³²⁷. Rigby v Ferodo Ltd [1988] I.C.R. 29; cf. Burdett-Coutts v Hertfordshire CC [1984] I.R.L.R. 91.
- ¹³²⁸. Gunton v Richmond LBC [1980] I.C.R. 755, Shaw L.J. dissenting on this point. Thomas Marshall Ltd v Guinle [1978] I.C.R. 905, see above, para.40-066 was approved by the majority. Compare Marsh v National Autistic Society [1993] I.C.R. 453, where, however, it was held that the claim for remuneration is thereafter a claim in damages and not in debt.
- ¹³²⁹. Dietman v Brent LBC [1978] I.C.R. 737 (affirmed by the Court of Appeal on other grounds [1988] I.C.R. 842). The plaintiff was held on the facts not to be entitled to an injunction, because she had accepted the Council's repudiation before the trial of the action, inter alia by accepting employment elsewhere.
- ¹³³⁰. Evening Standard Co Ltd v Henderson [1987] I.C.R. 388; cf. Thomas Marshall Ltd v Guinle [1978] I.C.R. 905.
- ¹³³¹. London Transport Executive v Clarke [1980] I.C.R. 532, Lord Denning M.R. dissenting on this point. The majority did not follow the cases that had developed a doctrine of “constructive resignation”, e.g. Gannon v JC Firth Ltd [1976] I.R.L.R. 415 (strike action); Kallinos v London Electric Wire Ltd [1980] I.R.L.R. 11.
- ¹³³². [1994] I.C.R. 727.
- ¹³³³. [2012] UKSC 63, [2013] 1 A.C. 523.
- ¹³³⁴. As to which see above, para.40-169.

1335. See Robert Cort & Son Ltd v Charman [1981] I.R.L.R. 437 and see below, paras 40-220—40-221.

1336. Norwest Holst Group Administration Ltd v Harrison [1985] I.C.R. 668.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 6. - Termination of the Contract

(h) - Constructive Dismissal

Termination as the result of constructive dismissal

40-193

For the purposes of the various legislative provisions concerning dismissal, such as the unfair dismissal legislation and the redundancy payments legislation, "dismissal" includes the case where the employee terminates the contract of employment with or without notice in circumstances such that he or she is entitled to terminate it without notice by reason of the employer's conduct. ¹³³⁷ Where these conditions are fulfilled, the employee's resignation is treated as a constructive dismissal by the employer, provided that the employer's conduct is the main operative cause of the resignation. ¹³³⁸ In Western Excavating (ECC) Ltd v Sharp, ¹³³⁹ it was decided that the test for constructive dismissal as so defined was a contractual one, namely whether the employer's conduct amounted to a fundamental breach or repudiation of the contract of employment. This decision has resulted not only in considerable development of case law on the generally implied duties of the employer such as the duty to preserve trust and confidence ¹³⁴⁰ but also in extensive discussion in the case law of what constitutes repudiation on the part of the employer. This frequently involves an inquiry into the implied terms of the particular contract concerning geographical mobility ¹³⁴¹ or into the question of when the employer repudiates the contract by altering the terms and conditions of employment. ¹³⁴² It would seem that the question of whether there has been a repudiation by the employer should be viewed as a mixed question of law and fact with the result that a finding by an employment tribunal about repudiation or fundamental breach of an implied term should be disturbed on appeal only where there was no basis of evidence properly to support such a finding. ¹³⁴³ It would also seem that the notion that a party to a contract does not repudiate it by pursuing a bona fide but mistaken view of its effect ¹³⁴⁴ can have only a very limited application in disputes between employer and employee over terms and conditions of employment. ¹³⁴⁵ There is no constructive dismissal if the employee affirms the contract after and despite the employer's repudiation. ¹³⁴⁶ But delay in accepting the repudiation, and even continuing to work and accept remuneration are not in themselves conclusive of affirmation on the employee's part; there must be a consideration of the whole of the circumstances including factors such as whether the employee acted under protest or not. ¹³⁴⁷ It was held by the Employment Appeal Tribunal in Morrow v Safeway Stores Ltd ¹³⁴⁸ that conduct on the part of the employer which was sufficiently undermining of trust and confidence to amount to a breach of the implied obligation of trust and confidence was as such repudiatory of the contract of employment and so entitled the employee to resign and claim to have been constructively dismissed. It was held by the Court of Appeal in Rossiter v Pendragon Plc ¹³⁴⁹ that the test for constructive dismissal in relation to changes of terms and conditions associated with the transfer of an undertaking involved the same requirement of a repudiatory breach of contract as in other situations, this requirement being neither negated nor reduced by the TUPE Regulations. ¹³⁵⁰ As has been explained and explored in an earlier paragraph, ¹³⁵¹ the decision of the House of Lords in the leading case of Johnson v Unisys Ltd, ¹³⁵² that the implied obligation as to trust and confidence does not apply to limit the employer's power of dismissal, has left a difficult question as to when that implied obligation is applicable to conduct on the part of the employer which would, if the obligation applies to it, amount to constructive dismissal. In Edwards v Chesterfield Royal Hospital NHS Trust ¹³⁵³ the Supreme Court confirmed the demarcation of the "Johnson exclusion" which had emerged from the Eastwood case, ¹³⁵⁴ whereby that exclusion applies in respect of "steps on the part of the employer leading to dismissal" unless the loss complained of as resulting from those steps "precedes and is independent of the dismissal process". ¹³⁵⁵ According to this demarcation, the mere fact that a step taken by the employer might in itself amount to a constructive dismissal, even if it is eventually followed by a distinct act of dismissal on the part of the employer, does not in and of itself place that step within the “Johnson exclusion”—so that, for example, the suspension of an employee may still on its facts be held to be in breach of the implied obligation of mutual trust and confidence and may give rise to liability as a contractually wrongful constructive dismissal not caught by the “Johnson exclusion”. ¹³⁵⁶

-
1. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).
 - ¹³³⁷. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.95(1)(c), 136(1)(c); see below, paras 40-218—40-219, 40-249.
 - ¹³³⁸. cf. Jones v Sirl & Son (Furnishers) Ltd [1997] I.R.L.R. 493.
 - ¹³³⁹. [1978] I.C.R. 221. The decision was applied and reaffirmed in Bournemouth University Higher Education Corp v Buckland [2010] EWCA Civ 121, [2010] I.R.L.R. 445, where the Court of Appeal rejected the argument that a “band of reasonable responses” test should apply, and moreover rejected the argument that there was any doctrine of cure of fundamental breach which was special to employment law.
 - ¹³⁴⁰. See above, para.40-150. Compare now, on the question of breach of the implied term of trust and confidence arising out of the transfer of an undertaking, Sita (GB) Ltd v Burton [1998] I.C.R. 17. See also now Glendale Managed Services v Graham [2003] I.R.L.R. 465.
 - ¹³⁴¹. See Little v Charterhouse Magna Ltd [1980] I.R.L.R. 19; Jones v Associated Tunnelling Ltd [1981] I.R.L.R. 477.
 - ¹³⁴². See, e.g. Ford v Millthorn Toleman Ltd [1980] I.R.L.R. 30; Millbrook Furnishing Ltd v McIntosh [1981] I.R.L.R. 309; Pedersen v Camden LBC [1981] I.C.R. 674n. For attempted imposition of a variation in terms, coupled with the threat of dismissal if variation rejected, as constructive dismissal, see Greenaway Harrison Ltd v Wiles [1994] I.R.L.R. 380.
 - ¹³⁴³. See Pedersen v Camden LBC [1981] I.C.R. 674n.; Millbrook Furnishing Ltd v McIntosh [1981] I.R.L.R. 309; Woods v WM Car Services Ltd [1981] I.C.R. 666. There is, however, authority for the view that the question is one of law for the appellate tribunal—Walker v Josiah Wedgwood Sons Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 744, 750E–H, or that if the question is a mixed one, that nonetheless gives the appellate tribunal primary control over the issue—cf. O’Brien v Associated Fire Alarms Ltd [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1916.
 - ¹³⁴⁴. Sweet & Maxwell Ltd v Universal News Services Ltd [1964] 3 All E.R. 30; Woodar Investments v Wimpey Construction Ltd [1980] 1 All E.R. 571.
 - ¹³⁴⁵. Financial Techniques Ltd v Hughes [1981] I.R.L.R. 32, paras 28, 29, per Templeman L.J.; doubting Frank Wright Ltd v Punch [1980] I.R.L.R. 217; Millbrook Furnishing Ltd v McIntosh [1981] I.R.L.R. 309.
 - ¹³⁴⁶. Western Excavating (ECC) Ltd v Sharp [1978] I.C.R. 221, 226; Bashir v Brillo Manufacturing Co [1979] I.R.L.R. 295; Cox Toner International Ltd v Crook [1981] I.C.R. 823.
 - ¹³⁴⁷. Bashir v Brillo Manufacturing Co [1979] I.R.L.R. 295, at paras 15–19; Cox Toner International Ltd v Crook [1981] I.C.R. 823, 829C–H. See also Chindove v Morrisons Supermarket Plc [2014] UKEAT 0043/14/BA.
 - ¹³⁴⁸. [2002] I.R.L.R. 9. In Waltham Forest LBC v Omilaju (No.2) [2004] EWCA Civ 1493, [2005] I.R.L.R. 35 it was held that the final act or “last straw” in a series of actions which cumulatively amounted to constructive dismissal need not itself be a breach of contract or unreasonable; but it had to be more than very trivial and had to be capable of contributing, however slightly, to a breach of the implied obligation as to mutual trust and confidence. Compare also now Bunning v GT Bunning & Sons Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 104, in which the judgment of Wall L.J. adds further support to the notion of the “last straw” as articulated in the Omilaju case; compare also GAB Robins (UK) Ltd v Triggs [2008] EWCA Civ 17, [2008] I.R.L.R. 317.

1349. [2002] I.C.R. 1063 CA.

1350. Compare above, para.40-179 nn.1230–1231, from which it will be seen that reg.4(9) of the 2006 TUPE Regulations apparently provides an alternative statutory form of constructive dismissal in such circumstances.

1351. See above, para.40-153.

1352. [2001] I.C.R. 480. In Kerry Foods Ltd v Lynch [2005] I.R.L.R. 681, the doctrine in Johnson v Unisys Ltd received an important application or extension, in that it was held that where an employing enterprise sought to impose a six-day week on an employee working a five-day week, its conduct amounted not to a repudiatory breach of the obligation as to mutual trust and confidence, but rather to a giving of lawful notice to terminate the contract of employment coupled with an offer of re-engagement on different terms.

1353. [2011] UKSC 58.

1354. Eastwood v Magnox Electric Plc, McCabe v Cornwall CC [2004] UKHL 35, [2005] 1 A.C. 503.

1355. Lord Dyson in Edwards at [51] quoting from Lord Nicholls in Eastwood at [29]. Lord Dyson continued: “In other words ‘the court must decide whether earlier events do or do not form part of the dismissal process’ ” quoting from Lord Steyn in Eastwood at [39].

1356. Hence the possibility that “an employer may be better off dismissing an employee than suspending him”, an outcome regarded as “unsatisfactory and anomalous” but “the inevitable consequence of the interrelation between the common law and statute”: Lord Dyson in Edwards at [51] quoting from Lord Nicholls in Eastwood at [15] and [30] to [33].

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 7. - Remedies, and Rights Incidental to the Termination of Employment

(a) - Statement of Reasons for Dismissal

Written statement of reasons for dismissal

40-194

Under s.92 of the Employment Rights Act 1996 an employee ¹³⁵⁷ whose contract of employment is terminated by his or her employer with or without notice ¹³⁵⁸ or, being a limited-term ¹³⁵⁹ contract, expires without renewal, ¹³⁶⁰ is entitled to be provided by the employer, on request, within 14 days of the request, with a written statement giving particulars of the reason for the dismissal. ¹³⁶¹ It seems, however, that the obligation may be complied with by unambiguous reference to earlier letters if copies of them are included. ¹³⁶² The employee must for this purpose have completed two years of continuous employment ¹³⁶³ by the effective date of termination ¹³⁶⁴ of his or her contract. An employee may complain to an employment tribunal of an unreasonable failure on the part of his or her employer to provide any, or an adequate and accurate, written statement of reasons. ¹³⁶⁵ The tribunal, if it upholds the complaint, must make an award of two weeks' pay ¹³⁶⁶ to the employee. ¹³⁶⁷ The provisions of s.92 are important in practice, especially in relation to the unfair dismissal legislation. ¹³⁶⁸ They represent a reversal of the common law position as to dismissal where the rule is that no reasons need normally be given. ¹³⁶⁹ The qualifying period of continuous employment is one year ¹³⁷⁰; but neither that requirement nor the requirement of a request by the employee apply while the employee is pregnant or on maternity leave. ¹³⁷¹

¹. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

¹³⁵⁷. The following categories of employees are excluded: share fishermen—s.199(2) of Employment Rights Act 1996; such further categories as may be specified by order—s.209(1) of Employment Rights Act 1996. The section does apply to Crown employment—s.191(1), (2) of Employment Rights Act 1996.

¹³⁵⁸. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.92(1)(a) and (b). Quaere to what extent this includes "constructive" dismissal; cf. Sutcliffe v Hawker Siddeley Aviation Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 560.

¹³⁵⁹. See British Broadcasting Corp v Ioannu [1975] I.C.R. 267; and BBC v Dixon [1979] I.R.L.R. 114 CA. See also above, para.40-171. For an explanation of the change of terminology from "fixedterm" to "limited-term".

¹³⁶⁰. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.92(1)(c).

¹³⁶¹. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.92(2). It is not clear how specific the particulars have to be. Particulars are to be express, not by reference: Horsley Smith & Sherry Ltd v Dutton [1977] I.C.R. 594.

1362. Gilham v Kent CC [1985] I.C.R. 227.

1363. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.92(3) as amended by the Unfair Dismissal and Statement of Reasons for Dismissal (Variation of Qualifying Period) Order 2012 (SI 2012/989) with effect upon periods of employment beginning from April 6, 2012. For the period of “continuous employment”, see s.210 Employment Rights Act 1996 (which includes a presumption of continuity) see above, paras 40-164—40-167.

1364. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.92(6).

1365. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.93(1) (limitation period—s.93(3) of Employment Rights Act 1996). See Charles Lang & Sons Ltd v Aubrey [1978] I.C.R. 168; Daynecourt Insurance Brokers Ltd v Wiles [1978] I.C.R. 335; and Brown v Stuart Scott & Co [1981] I.C.R. 166.

1366. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.226(2).

1367. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.93(2)(b). The tribunal also has a power to declare what it finds were the reasons for dismissal; s.92(2)(a) Employment Rights Act 1996.

1368. See below, paras 40-214 et seq.

1369. See above, para.40-183.

1370. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.92(3), as amended by the Unfair Dismissal and Statement of Reasons for Dismissal (Variation of Qualifying Period) Order 1999 (SI 1999/1436).

1371. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.92(4), as amended.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 7. - Remedies, and Rights Incidental to the Termination of Employment

(b) - Recovery of Remuneration

Payment for services actually rendered

40-195

Where the employee is not paid for a period of employment ¹³⁷² which the employee has actually served, the employee's claim is not one for damages, but for a debt, viz payment of an agreed sum, ¹³⁷³ since he or she is entitled to be paid according to the agreed rate. ¹³⁷⁴ It has been held that the employee cannot claim, in addition to the sum due, damages for the delay in paying the salary or wages. ¹³⁷⁵ It appears that if the contract of employment did not specify a particular amount or rate of salary or wages, the employee who is not paid for a period of employment is entitled to sue upon a quantum meruit for a reasonable remuneration. ¹³⁷⁶ An employee may be able to make a claim for non-payment of wages to an employment tribunal under Pt II of the Employment Rights Act 1996 on the basis that it represents an unlawful deduction from his wages. ¹³⁷⁷

Apportionment of wages or salary ¹³⁷⁸

40-196

⚠ Wages or salary were thought not to be apportionable at common law, and early authority held that failure (for any reason other than breach of contract by the employer) by the employee to complete the entire period in respect of which he or she was to receive a definite sum as remuneration meant that he or she was unable to recover anything at all. ¹³⁷⁹ The terms of the contract of employment could nevertheless make the employer liable to pay a proportionate part of the agreed remuneration if the entire period was not completed. ¹³⁸⁰ However, the Apportionment Act 1870 ¹³⁸¹ ⚠ provides (inter alia) that:

“... all ... annuities ... and other periodical payments in the nature of income ... shall, like interest on money lent, be considered as accruing from day to day, and shall be apportionable in respect of time accordingly.”

It has been held ¹³⁸² that this Act applies to “wages” as well as to “salary” ¹³⁸³ and it seems just that, if it is not due to the employee's fault that the period of employment is not completed, the Act should apply. ¹³⁸⁴ It was held in Thames Water Utilities Plc v Reynolds ¹³⁸⁵ that accrual “day by day” is to be calculated by reference to calendar days rather than working days.

Entitlement to apportioned wages or salary upon summary dismissal for Misconduct

40-197

It has never been decided whether the Act entitles an employee dismissed for misconduct to claim his salary or wages pro rata for the broken period up to the date of the dismissal. ¹³⁸⁶ The older cases ¹³⁸⁷ and those decided without reference to the Act ¹³⁸⁸ held that the dismissed employee was not entitled to any wages or salary for the broken period of employment immediately preceding his or her dismissal, because his or her entitlement had not accrued due by then. The employee was, however, entitled to recover any arrears which had already accrued due by that time ¹³⁸⁹ even although they were in respect of a period after he had been guilty of misconduct. ¹³⁹⁰ It has been held that the contract may provide that if the employee is dismissed for misconduct, he or she shall forfeit all wages due to him, ¹³⁹¹ but it is possible that such a provision might now be subject to equitable relief against such forfeiture. ¹³⁹²

¹ Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

¹³⁷² viz a period of employment in respect of which the employee is entitled, by the contract, to be paid a fixed amount.

¹³⁷³ See Vol.I, para.26-008.

¹³⁷⁴ See above, paras 40-078 et seq.

¹³⁷⁵ Harper v Linthorpe Dinsdale Smelting Co (1909) 101 L.T. 608. Compare, however, Vol.I, para.24-168.

¹³⁷⁶ See above, para.40-079 and Vol.I, para.29-071 for a full discussion of this principle.

¹³⁷⁷ See above, para.40-097, and cf. Penname Ltd v Paterson [1989] I.C.R. 12. The employee's claim in respect of "unlawful deduction" may extend to the withholding of part of the employee's remuneration following a purported but wrongful demotion of the employee—see Morgan v West Glamorgan CC [1995] I.R.L.R. 68.

¹³⁷⁸ See Williams (1941) 57 L.Q.R. 373, 375–383.

¹³⁷⁹ Cutter v Powell (1795) 6 T.R. 320, see Vol.I, para.21-031.

¹³⁸⁰ Moriarty v Regent's Garage Co Ltd [1921] 1 K.B. 423; reversed on another ground: [1921] 2 K.B. 766. See also Swabey v Port Darwin Gold Mining Co (1889) 1 Megone 385.

¹³⁸¹ [!]s.2. Though compare Amey v Peter Symonds College [2013] EWHC 2788 (QB), [2014] I.R.L.R. 206, where the s.2 presumption was displaced pursuant to s.7. A similar approach was followed in Hartley v King Edward VI College [2015] EWCA Civ 455, [2015] I.R.L.R. 650, but that decision was subsequently overturned by the Supreme Court [2017] UKSC 39, [2017] 1 W.L.R. 2110, where the statutory principle of equal daily apportionment was held to apply and not to have been excluded by the particular contract.

¹³⁸² Moriarty v Regent's Garage Co Ltd, above. The Court of Appeal in this case held that the question of apportionment should not have been considered by the Divisional Court because the point had not been taken in the county court.

¹³⁸³ "Salaries" are, by s.5, expressly included within "annuities".

¹³⁸⁴ The Law Reform (Frustrated Contracts) Act 1943 will sometimes apply to this type of situation, and will enable the court to order payment of a "just" amount when the other party has "obtained a valuable benefit" before the frustrating event: s.1(3); see Vol.I, paras 23-084–23-091.

- 1385. [1996] I.R.L.R. 186. Since followed in Taylor v East Midlands Offender Employment [2000] I.R.L.R. 760 EAT.
- 1386. Moriarty v Regent's Garage Co Ltd [1921] 1 K.B 423 at 448–449.
- 1387. Lilley v Elwin (1848) 11 Q.B. 742; Ridgway v Hungerford Market Co (1835) 3 A. & E. 171.
- 1388. Boston Deep Sea Fishing Co v Ansell (1888) 39 Ch. D. 339; Healey v Soc Anon Française Rubastic [1917] 1 K.B. 946.
- 1389. Taylor v Laird (1856) 1 H. & N. 266; Button v Thompson (1869) L.R. 4 C.P. 330; Healey v Soc Anon Française Rubastic, above.
- 1390. Ramsden v David Sharratt & Sons Ltd (1930) 35 Com. Cas. 314. (The remedy of the employer is a counterclaim for damages for the employee's breach of duty.)
- 1391. Walsh v Walley (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 367.
- 1392. cf. Stockloser v Johnson [1954] 1 Q.B. 476 and see Freedland, The Contract of Employment (1976), pp.232–233.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 7. - Remedies, and Rights Incidental to the Termination of Employment

(c) - Protection of the Employee's Accrued Rights in the Employer's Insolvency

Preferential claims for wages in bankruptcy, or liquidation

40-198

Where an employer becomes bankrupt, or, in the cases of a company is wound up, under the Insolvency Act 1986 any arrears of remuneration (up to a limit laid down by statutory instrument ¹³⁹³) payable to an employee or ex-employee in respect of the whole or any part of the four months before the relevant date, becomes a preferential debt ranking with certain debts due to the Inland Revenue, and to Customs and Excise, and with certain social security contributions and contributions to occupational pension schemes and state pension scheme premiums, above other debts. ¹³⁹⁴ The same preference extends to arrears of accrued holiday remuneration without limit of time or amount. ¹³⁹⁵ Amounts payable by way of remuneration are defined to include certain pecuniary rights which may accrue to the employee, namely amounts owed in respect of statutory guarantee payments, ¹³⁹⁶ remuneration on suspension on medical or maternity grounds, ¹³⁹⁷ any statutorily guaranteed payment during statutory time off, ¹³⁹⁸ or remuneration under a protective award in respect of redundancy dismissal. ¹³⁹⁹

Recourse to the National Insurance Fund on insolvency of employer

40-199

Under ss.166 and 167 of the Employment Rights Act 1996 the Secretary of State ¹⁴⁰⁰ may, where an employer is insolvent, ¹⁴⁰¹ pay the unpaid amount of a redundancy payment owed to an employee by the insolvent employer, the payment being made directly out of the National Insurance Fund, ¹⁴⁰² which is subrogated to the rights of the employer. ¹⁴⁰³ Under Pt XII of the Employment Rights Act 1996 the same system is extended to a number of other debts owed to the employee by the insolvent ¹⁴⁰⁴ employer, which have accrued due by the time of the employer's insolvency and the termination of the employee's employment. ¹⁴⁰⁵ It should be noted that the list of such debts is in some respects wider than the list of debts due to the employer which are accorded priority in the employer's insolvency. ¹⁴⁰⁶ The list includes ¹⁴⁰⁷:

(a)

arrears of pay ¹⁴⁰⁸ for up to eight weeks;

(b)

statutorily guaranteed payments due in respect of statutory minimum notice periods, or compensation due for failure to give statutory minimum notice ¹⁴⁰⁹;

- (c) arrears of holiday pay, for up to six weeks accruing due in the last 12 months of the employment ¹⁴¹⁰;
- (d) any basic award of compensation for unfair dismissal ¹⁴¹¹;
- (e) any reasonable sum by way of reimbursement of any fee or premium paid by an apprentice or articulated clerk. ¹⁴¹²

Insofar as these sums accrue due in respect of particular periods of time, they are limited to the fixed maximum statutory week's pay for this purpose. ¹⁴¹³ The employee may complain to an employment tribunal of a failure by the Secretary of State for Employment to make or make in full an amount payable to the employee out of the National Insurance Fund under these provisions, ¹⁴¹⁴ and the tribunal may make a declaration upholding the complaint and declaring the amount due. ¹⁴¹⁵ The Secretary of State is subrogated to the rights of the employee in the employer's insolvency, ¹⁴¹⁶ but, since this recourse to the National Insurance Fund is more widely defined than the employee's rights to priority in the employer's insolvency, ¹⁴¹⁷ and since the Fund's priority apparently does not extend quite as far as the employee's own priority ¹⁴¹⁸ (not extending to the priorities set out in s.184(1) of the 1996 Act), ¹⁴¹⁹ the Fund may possibly find itself subrogated to unsecured and non-preferential rights in the insolvency.

¹. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

¹³⁹³. [1954] 1 Q.B. 476 Pt I para.9.

¹³⁹⁴. s.386 and Sch.6 paras 9–15 (to be read with Sch.4 to the Pension Schemes Act 1993. It should be noted that provision has been made, though not yet implemented, for the repeal of these provisions by s.1295 of and Sch.16 to the Companies Act 2006.

¹³⁹⁵. Sch.6 para.10.

¹³⁹⁶. Sch.6 para.13(2)(a).

¹³⁹⁷. Sch.6 para.13(2)(c).

¹³⁹⁸. Sch.6 para.13(2)(b).

¹³⁹⁹. Sch.6 para.13(2)(d).

¹⁴⁰⁰. Currently the Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform.

¹⁴⁰¹. Defined by s.166(6), (7) of Employment Rights Act 1996 to include individual bankruptcy or composition with creditors, bankruptcy of estate, liquidation of or appointment of receiver to a company.

¹⁴⁰². Employment Rights Act 1996 s.167(1).

- 1403. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.167(3).
- 1404. Defined by s.183 as in s.166(6), (7) of Employment Rights Act 1996 (see n.1393, above). This has been held to include a company trading under a company voluntary arrangement (CVA): Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills v McDonagh [2013] I.C.R. 1177 EAT.
- 1405. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.182, 185.
- 1406. See above, para.40-198.
- 1407. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.184(1).
- 1408. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.184(1)(a), (2). The term probably also includes sick pay.
- 1409. See above, paras 40-163—40-168. This entitlement has been held to be subject to the rules as to mitigation of loss that would have applied to the employee's own claim for damages for breach of contract—Secretary of State for Employment v Wilson [1977] I.R.L.R. 483. On the other hand, the entitlement has been held to be limited by the rules determining the statutory week's pay—see below, para.40-255, and not to include contractual fringe benefits falling outside those rules—Secretary of State for Employment v Haynes [1981] I.R.L.R. 270.
- 1410. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.184(1)(c); see above, para.40-081.
- 1411. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.184(1)(d); see below, para.40-240.
- 1412. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.184(1)(e).
- 1413. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.186(1); and see the current Employment Protection (Variation of Limits) Order.
- 1414. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.188(1), (2) (note limitation period).
- 1415. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.188(3).
- 1416. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.189(1), (5).
- 1417. See above, para.40-198.
- 1418. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.189(2).
- 1419. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.184—see above, para.40-198.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 7. - Remedies, and Rights Incidental to the Termination of Employment

(d) - Damages for Wrongful Dismissal

Damages for loss of earnings following wrongful dismissal

40-200

The remedy of an employee who has been wrongfully dismissed is an action for damages. The normal measure of damages is the amount the employee would have earned under the contract for the period until the employer could lawfully have terminated it, less the amount he or she could reasonably be expected to earn in other employment. ¹⁴²⁰ The dismissed employee, like any innocent party following a breach of contract by the other party, must take reasonable steps to minimise his or her loss. ¹⁴²¹ In the case of wrongful dismissal these reasonable steps mean that the employee must seek and accept any reasonable offer of other employment ¹⁴²²; if he or she fails to take other employment when he or she ought reasonably to have done so, damages will be assessed on the basis of the difference between the salary or wages under the broken contract, and what he or she would have received from the substituted employment. A reasonable offer of alternative employment may come from the defendant himself or herself. ¹⁴²³ A deduction must be made, however, on account of the accelerated receipt of damages for loss of future earnings. ¹⁴²⁴

40-201

The onus of proof is on the defendant employer to produce evidence to show that the dismissed employee ought reasonably to have obtained alternative employment. ¹⁴²⁵ If the defendant has a right to terminate the contract before the expiry of the term, damages for the wrongful dismissal should be assessed only up to the earliest time at which the defendant could validly have terminated the contract. ¹⁴²⁶ Thus, if the contract expressly provides that it is terminable upon, e.g. a month's notice, the damages will ordinarily be a month's wages. ¹⁴²⁷ In Gunton v Richmond LBC ¹⁴²⁸ it was held that where a dismissal was wrongful by reason of a failure to comply with a contractually binding dismissal procedure, ¹⁴²⁹ the damages were to be assessed only up to the expiry of the contractually due notice of one month notionally served on the day when the proper disciplinary procedure, if followed, could have been concluded. (In Edwards v Chesterfield Royal Hospital NHS Trust ¹⁴³⁰ a body of doctrine was articulated which, by excluding or severely restricting the awarding of damages at common law for the breach of contractual disciplinary procedures, ¹⁴³¹ seemed apt to preclude damages of the kind awarded in the Gunton case. However, the Supreme Court declined to overrule Gunton, or to declare it to be inapplicable in this respect, ¹⁴³² so that the possibility still seems to obtain that damages of that kind may be awarded.) Except in cases of alleged bad faith on the part of the employer, the court is not to analyse the chances that the employee would not have been dismissed had the procedure been followed. ¹⁴³³ If the employee's claim is on the ground that the employer dismissed him or her with insufficient notice, ¹⁴³⁴ in an action for damages the defendant employer is entitled to particulars of the period of time claimed by the plaintiff to constitute reasonable notice. ¹⁴³⁵ Similarly, the amount of damages for loss of salary and commission which would have been earned during a period of reasonable notice, had it been given, must be specially pleaded. ¹⁴³⁶ The value of the benefits which the employee receives from the substituted employment should be assessed by looking at the whole of his or her new situation, and not merely by reference to his or her nominal salary or wages. Thus, it was held that where, following his wrongful dismissal, the employee made a substantial investment in another firm and took employment in it at a low salary on the basis that he or she hoped to benefit from an increase in the value of his or her investment, account should be taken of the increase in value (during the relevant period) when assessing damages for wrongful dismissal. ¹⁴³⁷

Damages for other lost benefits

40-202

Damages for wrongful dismissal may also include an assessment of other benefits which the dismissed employee would have received from the continuation of his or her employment, e.g. the value of board and lodging or of a rent-free house. ¹⁴³⁸ But the employee cannot claim for the loss of expected benefits if these were not benefits which the employer was contractually bound to give. ¹⁴³⁹ Thus, where the grant of bonuses was entirely in the employer's discretion, damages for wrongful dismissal should not include any compensation for the loss of expected bonuses in the future. ¹⁴⁴⁰ But if the employee was entitled, by the terms of his or her employment, to receive gratuities given by customers, the estimated value of these gratuities may be taken into account in assessing damages. ¹⁴⁴¹

Damages for injury to feelings or reputation

40-203

If it is a term of the contract, express or implied, that the employer should not only pay a salary, but also give the employee an opportunity of publicity, damages may be awarded for loss of publicity, insofar as the employee has lost an opportunity of enhancing his or her reputation. ¹⁴⁴² It used to be considered that in an action for wrongful dismissal (as distinct from one for defamation) the employee is not entitled to damages for the injury caused by the dismissal to his or her existing reputation ¹⁴⁴³, and that damages could not normally be given, in an action for wrongful dismissal, for injury to the employee's feelings, his or her distress, social discredit or loss of reputation ¹⁴⁴⁴: so where an employee was wrongfully dismissed in a humiliating manner, he or she could not recover damages for these results of the dismissal, nor for the extra difficulty in finding other employment which was caused by the circumstances of his or her dismissal. ¹⁴⁴⁵ The proposition that damages for wrongful dismissal do not include damages for loss of reputation, or for stigma associated with the employment or the manner of its ending, seemed to have been greatly circumscribed by the decision of the House of Lords in Malik v Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA, ¹⁴⁴⁶ which did not itself concern a wrongful dismissal as such, but where, in comparable circumstances, the House of Lords refused to follow, or at least greatly circumscribed, the rule in Addis v Gramophone Co ¹⁴⁴⁷ and held that the employees might prove in the employer's liquidation for "stigma damages" reflecting the damage to the employees' prospects of future employment caused by the wrongful and apparently corrupt way in which the employer's business had been run. However, in Johnson v Unisys Ltd, ¹⁴⁴⁸ the House of Lords held that the implied obligation of mutual trust and confidence did not apply to limit the exercise by an employer of a power of dismissal, so that a claim for stigma damages could not be made where that would be the basis of the claim. To that extent, the rule in Addis v Gramophone Co is reinstated, at least where it is the manner of a dismissal which is the basis for claiming that it is contractually wrongful, so as to preclude a claim for "stigma damages" or for damages for distress or injury to feelings. However, as has been explained earlier, ¹⁴⁴⁹ the decision of the House of Lords in Eastwood v Magnox Electric Plc, McCabe v Cornwall CC ¹⁴⁵⁰ limited the scope of that exclusionary rule so that it did not apply to rule out a claim for psychiatric illness alleged to have been caused by a course of harassing conduct associated with disciplinary proceedings against the employee although that course of conduct culminated in his dismissal, on the footing that the course of conduct in question could be regarded as independent of the subsequent dismissal itself. The reinstatement of the doctrine in the Addis case has now been effectively completed, and the doctrine itself has even been reinforced, by the Supreme Court in Edwards v Chesterfield Royal Hospital NHS Trust. ¹⁴⁵¹ Not only did the Supreme Court take the approach of the House of Lords in the Addis case as the starting point for the modern common law position ¹⁴⁵² and confirm the existence of the "Johnson exclusion" (which as has been explained earlier precluded the implied contractual obligation of trust and confidence from applying to dismissal proceedings ¹⁴⁵³), but it also articulated the view that even express contractual obligations to follow specified dismissal procedures should not be treated as giving rise to damages at common law for their breach in the current context where the law of unfair dismissal can be seen as providing for the enforcement of such obligations. ¹⁴⁵⁴ It should be noted, however, that the holding of the Supreme Court as thus summarised was the subject of several dissents, ¹⁴⁵⁵ and that, within the deciding majority, different views were taken as to the basis on which the doctrine in Addis survives. ¹⁴⁵⁶ So the controversies surrounding this area of the common law ¹⁴⁵⁷ cannot be regarded as fully resolved.

Taxation

40-204

In an assessment of damages for loss of wages or salary in an action for wrongful dismissal, a deduction must be made on account of estimated income tax which would have been payable in respect of the wages or salary. ¹⁴⁵⁸ If the damages exceed £30,000, however, notional tax should not be taken into account in respect of the amount by which the total exceeds £30,000, because tax is chargeable on the excess ¹⁴⁵⁹ in the hands of the plaintiff. ¹⁴⁶⁰ (The rule that tax must be deducted applies only where the earnings would have been subject to tax, and the damages awarded to the plaintiff are not subject to tax in his hands). ¹⁴⁶¹ Full details will be found in Vol.I, above. ¹⁴⁶²

Deductions for social security contributions and benefits

40-205

In calculating the damages to be awarded for loss of wages, a deduction should be made for the employee's social security contributions which the employer would have been obliged to deduct from the plaintiff's wages. ¹⁴⁶³ Similarly, it has been decided ¹⁴⁶⁴ that unemployment benefit (now contribution-based Jobseeker's Allowance under the Jobseekers Act 1995) received by the plaintiff directly mitigates the plaintiff's loss of earnings and should be taken into account by way of deduction in assessing damages for wrongful dismissal. ¹⁴⁶⁵ But sums received by way of national assistance benefit (now income-based Jobseeker's Allowance under the Jobseekers Act 1995), being discretionary payments, should not be taken into account. ¹⁴⁶⁶ Moreover, it was held in Westwood v Secretary of State for Employment ¹⁴⁶⁷ that unemployment benefits were deductible in mitigation of damages only to the extent that they constituted a net gain to the employee, that net gain being reduced by his having exhausted his limited entitlement to that benefit earlier than he would have done if he had not been wrongfully dismissed.

Deductions for redundancy payments and unfair dismissal compensation

40-206

It was held at first instance in Stocks v Magna Merchants Ltd ¹⁴⁶⁸ that in assessing damages for a wrongful dismissal the court should deduct the amount of a redundancy payment received by the plaintiff employee in respect of that dismissal. It had been thought to follow, although it had not been established by decided cases, that there should also be a deduction of the amount of unfair dismissal compensation received in respect of the dismissal concerned. However, in O'Laoire v Jackel International Ltd (No.2), ¹⁴⁶⁹ it was held that unless the defendants can prove a double recovery for the same loss, there is no basis for setting off an unfair dismissal compensatory award against common law damages for wrongful dismissal.

¹ Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

¹⁴²⁰ For the working out of the details of this measure of damages in relation to the wrongful dismissal of the chief executive of a large public company, see Clark v BET Plc [1997] I.R.L.R.

348.

1421. Vol.I, paras 26-079 et seq.

1422. Beckham v Drake (1847–49) 2 H.L.C. 579; Reid v Explosives Co (1887) 19 Q.B.D 264; Re Newman [1916] 2 Ch. 309; Shindler v Northern Raincoat Co Ltd [1960] 1 W.L.R. 1038; Yetton v Eastwood Froy Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 104; see also Paterson v South-West Scotland Electricity Board, 1951 S.L.T. 9.

1423. Brace v Calder [1895] 2 Q.B. 253; Barnes v Port of London Authority [1957] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 486; cf. Jackson v Hughes [1938] 4 All E.R. 587.

1424. Lavarack v Woods of Colchester Ltd [1967] 1 Q.B. 278.

1425. See Vol.I, para.26-081. The defendant is entitled to particulars of other employment obtained by the plaintiff after his dismissal: Monk v Redwing Aircraft Co Ltd [1942] 1 K.B. 182.

1426. British Guiana Credit Corp v Da Silva [1965] 1 W.L.R. 248, 259–260. Compare also now Fosca Services (UK) Ltd v Birkett [1996] I.R.L.R. 325; and Wise Group v Mitchell [2005] I.C.R. 896.

1427. Hartley v Harman (1840) 11 A. & E. 798. See now Harper v Virgin Net Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 271, in which it was held that damages for wrongful dismissal should not include compensation for the chance that, if the employee had not been dismissed with insufficient notice, she would have become time-qualified to make a claim for unfair dismissal. The decision in Harper v Virgin Net Ltd was followed and applied in Wise Group v Mitchell [2005] I.C.R. 896.

1428. [1980] I.C.R. 755; cf. Dietman v Brent LBC [1987] I.C.R. 787; affirmed on other grounds [1988] I.C.R. 842. Compare also now Boyo v Lambeth LBC [1994] I.C.R. 727; see above, para.40-192.

1429. The judges in the Court of Appeal differed on whether the wrongful dismissal determined the contract in the face of the employee's non-acceptance of it as doing so (see above, para.40-192), but were all agreed that this was correct measure of damages on either footing.

1430. [2011] UKSC 58.

1431. This body of doctrine is explained more fully below at para.40-203.

1432. See, per Lord Dyson at [48] and (rather differently) Lord Mance at [94].

1433. Janicuk v Winerite Ltd [1998] I.R.L.R. 63.

1434. See above, paras 40-162 et seq.

1435. Monk v Redwing Aircraft Co Ltd [1942] 1 K.B. 182.

1436. Hayward v Pullinger & Partners [1950] 1 All E.R. 581.

1437. Lavarack v Woods of Colchester Ltd [1967] 1 Q.B. 278.

1438. Lindsay v Queen's Hotel Co [1919] 1 K.B. 212; Re English Joint Stock Bank (1867) L.R. 4 Eq. 350; British Guiana Credit Corp v Da Silva [1965] 1 W.L.R. 248, 259–260. In Silvey v Pendragon Plc [2001] EWCA Civ 784, the Court of Appeal held that an employee wrongfully dismissed 12 days short of his reaching the age at which pension rights would have accrued was entitled to damages for the loss of those rights and was not precluded from that entitlement by his acceptance of a payment in lieu of notice.

1439. Lavarack v Woods of Colchester Ltd, above. It should be noted, however, how the decision in the Lavarack case was distinguished by the Court of Appeal in Horkulak v Cantor Fitzgerald International [2004] EWCA Civ 1287, [2005] I.C.R. 402.

- 1440. See n.1431, above.
- 1441. Manubens v Leon [1919] 1 K.B. 209. cf. Palmanor Ltd v Cedron [1978] I.C.R. 1008.
- 1442. Marbé v George Edwardes Ltd [1928] 1 K.B. 269; Clayton & Waller Ltd v Oliver [1930] A.C. 209 ; Tolnay v Criterion Film Productions Ltd [1936] 2 All E.R. 1625. cf. Re Golomb and Porter & Co's Arbitration (1931) 144 L.T. 583; Collier v Sunday Referee Publishing Co Ltd [1940] 2 K.B. 647.
- 1443. Withers v General Theatre Corp Ltd [1933] 2 K.B. 536.
- 1444. Addis v Gramophone Co Ltd [1909] A.C. 488; British Guiana Credit Corp v Da Silva [1965] 1 W.L.R. 248, 259; Bliss v South East Thames RHA [1987] I.C.R. 700.
- 1445. Addis v Gramophone Co Ltd, above. Contrast the position of the wrongfully dismissed apprentice: see Dunk v George Waller & Son Ltd [1970] 2 Q.B. 163.
- 1446. [1998] A.C. 20.
- 1447. See above, n.1437.
- 1448. [2001] I.C.R. 480.
- 1449. See above, para.40-153.
- 1450. [2004] UKHL 35, [2005] 1 A.C. 503; compare also GAB Robins (UK) Ltd v Triggs [2008] EWCA Civ 17, [2008] I.R.L.R. 317.
- 1451. [2011] UKSC 58.
- 1452. See, in particular Lord Dyson at [21].
- 1453. See above, paras 40-153, 40-193.
- 1454. This view is most directly put forward by Lord Dyson at [39] adopting the view of Lord Hoffmann in the Johnson case at [66].
- 1455. On the part of Lady Hale and Lords Kerr and Wilson.
- 1456. Lord Phillips, differing in this respect from Lords Dyson, Walker and Mance, regarded it as being concerned not with the scope of the employer's contractual duty but with the measure and remoteness of damages for breach of that duty at [78]–[81].
- 1457. See Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003) at pp.356–368.
- 1458. Parsons v BNM Laboratories Ltd [1964] 1 Q.B. 95 (following British Transport Commission v Gourley [1956] A.C. 185). See Lyndale Fashion Manufacturers v Rich [1973] 1 W.L.R. 73. For the manner of calculating the effect of income tax, see Shore v Downs Surgical Plc [1984] I.C.R. 209.
- 1459. Income Tax (Earnings and Pensions) Act 2003 ss.403–404.
- 1460. Bold v Brough, Nicholson & Hall Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 201.
- 1461. British Transport Commission v Gourley [1956] A.C. 185.
- 1462. Vol.I, paras 26-217—26-225.
- 1463. Cooper v Firth Brown Ltd [1963] 1 W.L.R. 418. (This was a negligence case, but the same rule, it is submitted, would apply to the assessment of damages in contract for wrongful dismissal.)

- 1464. Parsons v BNM Laboratories Ltd [1964] 1 Q.B. 95. cf. Parry v Cleaver [1968] 1 Q.B. 195 (negligence case, concerning a police pension receivable as of right); Cheeseman v Bowaters Paper Mills Ltd [1971] 1 W.L.R. 1773. It was decided by the Court of Appeal in Hopkins v Norcross [1994] I.C.R. 11 that the employee did not have to give credit for retirement pension payments received following wrongful dismissal, these being exempt collateral benefits within the principle of Parry v Cleaver [1968] 1 Q.B. 195.
- 1465. Claims for damages for wrongful dismissal would seem not to be affected by the recoupment provisions either of the Social Security (Recovery of Benefits) Act 1997, which applies to “payments in consequence of any accident, injury or disease” (s.1(1)(a)) or of the Employment Protection (Recoupment of Jobseeker’s Allowance and Income Support) Regulations 1996 (SI 1996/2349), which apply to certain payments awarded by Employment Tribunals but not to common law damages.
- 1466. Foxley v Olton [1965] 2 Q.B. 306 (criticised by Ganz (1965) 23 M.L.R. 224). cf. Eley v Bedford [1972] 1 Q.B. 155.
- 1467. [1985] I.C.R. 209.
- 1468. [1973] I.C.R. 530, applying Parry v Cleaver [1970] A.C. 1; and Parsons v BNM Laboratories Ltd [1964] 1 Q.B. 95. But see Basnett v J & A Jackson Ltd [1976] I.C.R. 63.
- 1469. [1991] I.C.R. 718.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 7. - Remedies, and Rights Incidental to the Termination of Employment

(e) - Equitable Remedies and Declarations

Specific performance and injunction against employees (1)

40-207

In order to understand the role of the remedies of specific performance and injunction in the law of the contract of employment, it is necessary to distinguish between, on the one hand, a long history of the granting of those remedies against employees, and, on the other hand, a more recent history of the granting of those remedies against employers also. The granting of orders for specific performance or injunctions in enforcement of contracts of employment against employees is the subject both of a statutory provision and of case law authority. The statutory provision is that of s.236 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992, which limits enforcement against employees by providing that no court shall whether by way of an order for specific performance of a contract of employment or an injunction restraining the breach of such a contract compel an employee to do any work or attend any place for the doing of any work. The case law suggests the following rules. The court will not grant specific performance of a contract of employment. Such a contract is one for personal services and comes within the category of contracts whose execution the court cannot supervise and will not, therefore, enforce by an order for specific performance. ¹⁴⁷⁰ Early authority holds that the same rule applies to a contract of apprenticeship. ¹⁴⁷¹ For the same reason, the court will not usually grant an injunction for the fulfilment of a contract of employment ¹⁴⁷²; it will, however, grant an injunction to enforce an express negative stipulation, ¹⁴⁷³ except where the effect of doing so would be to compel the employee to remain in the employment. ¹⁴⁷⁴ When there is a positive undertaking to serve the plaintiff and a negative stipulation not to serve any other person, an injunction may be granted to enforce the negative stipulation if a breach of the positive undertaking would cause damage, even though the plaintiff fails to prove that a breach of the negative stipulation would do so. ¹⁴⁷⁵ The availability of an injunction in such cases would be subject, however, to the applicability thereto of s.236 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992, considered earlier in this paragraph.

Specific performance and injunction against employees (2)

40-208

In Thomas Marshall Ltd v Guinle, ¹⁴⁷⁶ the Vice-Chancellor granted interim injunctions to restrain an employee from acts of trade competition and disclosure of information in breach of his implied obligations of fidelity, ¹⁴⁷⁷ holding that the employee's unaccepted wrongful repudiation of his contract of employment had not released him from the obligations thereof, ¹⁴⁷⁸ and that although the court was powerless to force the employee to work in accordance with his contract, the court could restrain him from committing other breaches of his obligations during the period of his contract. A similar result was reached in Evening Standard Ltd v Henderson ¹⁴⁷⁹ where an employer, seeking to restrain the employee, the production manager of an evening newspaper, from working for any rival in the newspaper trade for the duration of the contractual notice period, was prepared to provide the employee with all his contractual benefits until the contract expired without insisting that he perform any services under the contract; the employee would not therefore be forced either to work for the plaintiffs or be reduced to a condition of starvation or idleness, and the balance of convenience was therefore in favour of granting an interlocutory injunction. However, it would now seem that in order to obtain an injunction to enforce the imposition of a period of “garden leave” (that is to say, a period of enforced idleness during which an employee may be prevented from working for any other employer during a period of notice, though not being required or even permitted to work for the original employer), the employer must show that the employee has no contractual entitlement to be allowed to work, and must justify the enforcement as if it were of an express covenant against post-employment competition. ¹⁴⁸⁰

Specific performance and injunction against employers

40-209

Until relatively recently, there was little or no indication of any willingness on the part of the courts to grant orders for the specific performance of contracts of employment by employers, or injunctions against dismissal, such as would result in the reinstatement of the employee in an employment from which he or she had been, or was about to be, dismissed. However, in Hill v CA Parsons & Co Ltd ¹⁴⁸¹ an injunction was granted to restrain the implementation of an employer's notice to dismiss where the dismissal would if carried out have been wrongful (by reason of the shortness of notice). ¹⁴⁸² A majority of the Court of Appeal ¹⁴⁸³ regarded the normal rule against such injunctions as displaced by:

(a)

the need to preserve the plaintiff's position until the unfair dismissal legislation came into force; and the fact that the employer had no lack of confidence in the employee and intended to dismiss him solely because of trade union pressure. ¹⁴⁸⁴

(b)

It appears, on the other hand, from the decision in Chappell v Times Newspapers Ltd ¹⁴⁸⁵ that employees would be most unlikely to obtain a similar injunction to restrain a dismissal which was a response to industrial action on the part of the employees, because in that situation the courts' normal objection to intervening once the relationship of mutual confidence has been destroyed will apply. ¹⁴⁸⁶ Moreover, that decision suggests that employees will be unable to show the readiness, ability and willingness to continue to perform their part of the contract, which is necessary if they are to obtain equitable relief, if they are members of a trade union currently engaged in industrial action and are, or are likely to be, a party to that action. ¹⁴⁸⁷ In certain cases, the courts have been willing to issue interlocutory injunctions to restrain breach of the contract of employment by the employer consisting of purporting to dismiss without following contractual dismissal procedure, ¹⁴⁸⁸ purporting to re-advertise the post to which the employee had been validly appointed, ¹⁴⁸⁹ or purporting to reorganise the employees' work inconsistently with their contractual job specification. ¹⁴⁹⁰ It has been a condition of that willingness that the court can find that a basis of mutual trust and confidence survives between the employer and the employee. ¹⁴⁹¹ The Court of Appeal recently held, in Mezey v South West London and St George's Mental Health NHS Trust ¹⁴⁹² that there was no reason of principle why the court should be without power, if in all the circumstances it judged it right to do so, to stay a suspension just as it was able to stay a dismissal. A full discussion of the relevant principles will be found in Vol.I, above. ¹⁴⁹³

Declaration and other remedies

40-210

The Civil Procedure Rules give the court power to make a declaration even where no other consequential relief is or could be claimed. ¹⁴⁹⁴ A party may obtain a declaration that he or she is not bound by a contract because the other party has repudiated it, ¹⁴⁹⁵ but such a declaration will not lie if the party seeking the declaration continues to perform his or her duties under the contract. Thus an employee who was still working under his or her contract of employment with a company could not claim a declaration that his or her contract had been repudiated because the chairperson of the company interfered with his or her work. ¹⁴⁹⁶ It used to be thought that if one party has purported to terminate a contract of employment, the court would grant a declaration that the contract still subsists, where the employed person enjoys a special “status” or “office” by virtue of a statute. ¹⁴⁹⁷

40-211

In Malloch v Aberdeen Corp, ¹⁴⁹⁸ a case decided by the House of Lords applying Scottish law, an order for the reduction of a dismissal (which had the effect of nullifying the dismissal) was granted in favour of a teacher who had been dismissed without a hearing. It was held that the legislation controlling the employment of teachers by education authorities in Scotland impliedly conferred a right to be heard before dismissal, ¹⁴⁹⁹ and it was held to follow that the teacher thence derived a special status or office which made it appropriate for his dismissal to be nullified. ¹⁵⁰⁰ It was thought that similar reasoning might be invoked to support the grant of a declaration of nullity of dismissal or an order of certiorari to quash the dismissal in an English case in which the plaintiff was regarded as having an employment similarly subject to the public law principle of natural justice. ¹⁵⁰¹ The decision in R. v British Broadcasting Corp Ex p. Lavelle ¹⁵⁰² seemed to suggest that view. However, the cases now suggest that an applicant for judicial review of a dismissal from employment must show that a public law right of his or hers has been infringed; and the fact that he or she is an employee under a contract of employment will normally mean that he or she does not have such a public law right. Thus in R. v East Berkshire HA Ex p. Walsh ¹⁵⁰³ a senior nursing officer failed in such a claim on the ground that he or she was seeking to enforce purely private contractual rights; in R. v Secretary of State for the Home Department Ex p. Benwell, ¹⁵⁰⁴ on the other hand, a prison officer succeeded because as a holder of the office of constable he or she had no contract of employment and hence no relevant private law rights.

^{1.} Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

^{1470.} See Vol.I, paras 27-024 et seq.

^{1471.} Webb v England (1860) 29 Beav. 44.

^{1472.} De Francesco v Barnum (1889) 45 Ch. D. 430; Ehrman v Bartholomew [1898] 1 Ch. 671.

^{1473.} Lumley v Wagner (1852) 1 De G.M. & G. 604 (opera singer); Warner Bros v Nelson [1937] 1 K.B. 209 (film actress).

^{1474.} Ehrman v Bartholomew [1898] 1 Ch. 671; Kirchner v Gruban [1909] 1 Ch. 413; Rely-a-Bell Burglar and Fire Alarm Co v Eisler [1926] Ch. 609.

^{1475.} Marco Productions Ltd v Pagola [1945] K.B. 111.

^{1476.} [1978] I.C.R. 905, applied in SG & R Valuation Service Co LLC v Boudrais [2008] EWHC 1340 (QB), [2008] I.R.L.R. 770.

^{1477.} See above, para.40-062.

^{1478.} See above, para.40-192.

^{1479.} [1987] I.C.R. 589.

^{1480.} William Hill Organisation Ltd v Tucker [1999] I.C.R. 291. Compare, however, SG & R Valuation

Service Co LLC v Boudrais [2008] EWHC 1340 (QB), [2008] I.R.L.R. 770 where the balance of convenience was held to favour the granting of interim relief. Compare now JM Finn & Co Ltd v Holliday [2013] EWHC 3450 (QB), [2014] I.R.L.R. 102.

1481. [1972] 1 Ch. 305.

1482. See above, para.40-162.

1483. Lord Denning M.R. and Sachs L.J.; Stamp L.J. dissenting.

1484. See, per Lord Denning M.R. at 315A to 316C, Stamp L.J. at 320E–H.

1485. [1975] I.C.R. 145.

1486. See, per Lord Denning M.R. at 173H–174B, Stephenson L.J. at 176B–D, Geoffrey Lane J. at 178H–179B.

1487. See, per Lord Denning M.R. at 173D–H, Stephenson L.J. at 177A–D and Geoffrey Lane J. at 179C–D.

1488. Irani v Southampton & Southwest Hampshire HA [1985] I.C.R. 590. In Barros d' Sa v University Hospital Coventry and Warwickshire NHS Trust [2001] EWCA Civ 983, [2001] I.R.L.R. 691, the Court of Appeal upheld the grant of an injunction preventing the consideration at the appeal stage of a disciplinary procedure of material adverse to the employee which had not been the subject of findings at the original inquiry stage. A further example is provided by Kircher v Hillingdon Primary Care Trust [2006] EWHC 21 (QB), [2006] Lloyd's Rep. Med. 215. Comparison should also be made with the decision in Lauffer v Barking, Havering and Redbridge University Hospitals NHS Trust [2009] EWHC 2360 (QB), [2010] Med. L.R. 68, and now also with West London Mental Health NHS Trust v Chhabra [2013] UKSC 80, [2014] 1 All E.R. 943 at [37] (breach of “implied contractual right to a fair disciplinary process”).

1489. Powell v Brent LBC [1988] I.C.R. 176.

1490. Hughes v Southwark LBC [1988] I.R.L.R. 55.

1491. Ali v Southwark LBC [1988] I.C.R. 567. Compare Lakshmi v Mid-Cheshire Hospitals NHS Trust [2008] EWHC 878 (QB), [2008] I.R.L.R. 956, and see Ashworth v Royal National Theatre [2014] EWHC 1176 (QB), [2014] I.R.L.R. 526 on the question of the employer's right to artistic freedom of expression.

1492. [2007] EWCA Civ 106, [2007] I.R.L.R. 244.

1493. Vol.I, paras 27-025 et seq.

1494. CPR Ord.15 r.16 as re-enacted in Sch.1 to the Civil Procedure Rules 1998. The circumstances in which there may be a declaration of continuing breach of a contract of employment were considered in Birmingham City Council v Wetherill [2007] EWCA Civ 599, [2007] I.R.L.R. 781.

1495. Spettabile Consorzio Veneziano di Armamento e Navitazione v Northumberland Shipbuilding Co (1919) 121 L.T. 628. Compare Kaur v MG Rover Group Ltd [2004] I.R.L.R. 279 QBD, where a declaration was granted of contractual entitlement not to be made redundant. The decision was reversed on appeal on other, substantive, grounds ([2004] EWCA Civ 1507, [2005] I.R.L.R. 40), but remains of interest as to this remedial point.

1496. Howard v Pickford Tool Co [1951] 1 K.B. 417; Cranleigh Precision Engineering Ltd v Bryant [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1293, 1304–1305.

1497. Francis v Municipal Councillors of Kuala Lumpur [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1411, 1417–1418; Vine v National Dock Labour Board [1957] A.C. 488, 500, 507. See further, Vol.I, para.27-026. In Gunton v Richmond LBC [1980] I.C.R. 735, the Court of Appeal upheld a declaration that a contract of employment had not been validly terminated by an unaccepted wrongful repudiation by the employer, despite their unanimous view that this was an ordinary contract of employment not conferring any special status, see above, para.40-191. But Shaw L.J. dissented from the view that the contract had not come to an end, see above, para.40-192, and thought that declaration was an unnecessary and inappropriate form of relief in this sort of case ([1980] I.C.R. 735 at 764A), Buckley L.J. thought that the relationship of employment had been effectively terminated even if the contract had not ([1980] I.C.R. 735 at 778D), and all three judges agreed that the measure of damages should be based not on a total nullification of the purported dismissal but merely on its notional postponement to the date on which it could validly have taken effect, see above, para.40-192 (and also para.40-201 with regard to the relation between the Gunton case and the decision in Edwards v Chesterfield Royal Hospital NHS Trust [2011] UKSC 58). So the decision scarcely serves to qualify the proposition in the text.

1498. [1971] 1 W.L.R. 1578. See above, para.40-191.

1499. See, per Lord Reid at 1581A–1583B.

1500. See, per Lord Reid at 1584D–E.

1501. cf. per Lord Wilberforce at 1595E–1597E.

1502. [1983] I.C.R. 99.

1503. [1984] I.C.R. 743.

1504. [1984] I.C.R. 723. For the position of Crown servants who have a relationship with the Crown analogous to a contract of employment, see R. v Civil Service Appeal Board Ex p. Bruce [1989] I.C.R. 171; and compare above, para.40-191.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 7. - Remedies, and Rights Incidental to the Termination of Employment

(f) - Employment Tribunal Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction of employment tribunals in relation to contracts of employment

40-212

Under what is now s.3 of the Employment Tribunals Act 1996, ¹⁵⁰⁵ the appropriate Minister was empowered (originally in 1971) to make an order to confer upon employment tribunals a jurisdiction to make pecuniary awards based upon contracts of employment. ¹⁵⁰⁶ The claims concerned include claims for damages for breach of a contract of employment or any other contract connected with employment ¹⁵⁰⁷ (but not damages for personal injuries) ¹⁵⁰⁸ and claims for sums due under such contracts. ¹⁵⁰⁹ The purpose of this provision is chiefly to enable an employment tribunal to deal with contractual claims which often arise incidentally to claims before employment tribunals for redundancy payments ¹⁵¹⁰ and complaints of unfair dismissal, ¹⁵¹¹ and thus to avoid an inconvenient separation of common law and statutory jurisdictions. An Order made ¹⁵¹² under this provision enables an employee to bring a claim for damages for breach of the contract of employment, or for a sum due under that contract, before an employment tribunal if the claim arises or is outstanding on the termination of his employment. ¹⁵¹³ The Order also enables an employer to make such a claim against an employee where the employee has claimed against him under the Order. ¹⁵¹⁴ There are exclusions of claims about the provision of living accommodation, intellectual property, obligations of confidence on the employee and covenants in restraint of trade. ¹⁵¹⁵ An employee's complaint about a contractual claim must normally be presented within a period of three months beginning with the "effective date of termination" of the contract of employment as defined in s.97(1) of the Employment Rights Act 1996 ¹⁵¹⁶; an employer's complaint about a contractual claim must normally be presented within six weeks of receiving a copy of an originating application relating to the employee's complaint. ¹⁵¹⁷ The maximum which a tribunal may order to be paid in respect of a contract claim, or a number of claims relating to the same contract, is £25,000. ¹⁵¹⁸ The contractual claims before employment tribunals may now be subject to the provisions for other methods of dispute resolution for which provision has been made by the Employment Rights (Dispute Resolution) Act 1998. ¹⁵¹⁹

¹. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

¹⁵⁰⁵. Provision was made for industrial tribunals to be known as employment tribunals by s.1 of the Employment Rights (Dispute Resolution) Act 1998 (with effect from August 1, 1998—(SI 1998/1658)).

¹⁵⁰⁶. Employment Tribunals Act 1996 (as renamed by the Employment Rights (Dispute Resolution) Act 1998) ss.3(1), 8(1).

¹⁵⁰⁷. Employment Tribunals Act 1996 (as renamed by the Employment Rights (Dispute Resolution) Act 1998) s.3(2)(a).

- 1508. Employment Tribunals Act 1996 (as renamed by the Employment Rights (Dispute Resolution) Act 1998) s.3(3).
- 1509. Employment Tribunals Act 1996 (as renamed by the Employment Rights (Dispute Resolution) Act 1998) s.3(2)(b).
- 1510. See below, paras 40-247 et seq.
- 1511. See below, para.40-244.
- 1512. Industrial Tribunals Extension of Jurisdiction (England and Wales) Order 1994 (SI 1994/1623), in force from July 12, 1994.
- 1513. SI 1994/1623 art.3. It was held in Sarker v South Tees Acute Hospitals NHS Trust [1997] I.C.R. 673 that this extended to the case of the employer's wrongfully resiling from a contract of employment before employment had commenced; and in Rock-it Cargo Ltd v Green [1997] I.R.L.R. 581 that it enabled an employee to claim a payment due under a compromise agreement on termination of employment. In Miller Bros and Butler Ltd v Johnston [2002] I.R.L.R. 386, the Employment Appeal Tribunal held that this jurisdiction is limited to claims arising or outstanding at the time of the termination of employment, and does not extend to claims arising later even though they arise out of the termination of employment, as, in this case, upon a subsequently finalised compromise agreement. Compare Peninsula Business Services Ltd v Sweeney [2004] I.R.L.R. 49 EAT, denying entitlement to commission payments which would normally have accrued due at a date later than that of termination of employment, and where the rules of the commission scheme excluded post-termination accrual.
- 1514. SI 1994/1623 art.4.
- 1515. SI 1994/1623 art.5.
- 1516. SI 1994/1623 art.7. See, for "effective date of termination", below, paras 40-220—40-221.
- 1517. SI 1994/1623 art.8.
- 1518. SI 1994/1623 art.10.
- 1519. See ss.7–8 (arbitration), ss.9–10 (compromise agreements).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 40 - Employment ¹

Section 7. - Remedies, and Rights Incidental to the Termination of Employment

(g) - Employer's Damages

Damages recoverable by the employer

40-213

The employee may be held liable in damages for the breach of any term of his or her contract of employment, whether express or implied, ¹⁵²⁰ such as by his or her failure to use due care or skill. ¹⁵²¹ Early authority holds that the employer is entitled to damages for those consequences which might reasonably be expected to have been in the contemplation of the parties (at the time when the contract of employment was made) as likely to result from the breach. ¹⁵²² Damages for failure or refusal to work will normally be assessed by reference to the value of the work lost ¹⁵²³ or the cost of procuring a substitute to do the work, ¹⁵²⁴ less the wages payable under the contract. But the loss of output suffered by the employer's business cannot be caused by any one employee's failure to work when there was a general stoppage by many employees on the same day. ¹⁵²⁵ The suspension of salary when an employee fails to work is not a "penalty". ¹⁵²⁶ In Imam-Sadeque v Bluebay Asset Management (Services) Ltd, ¹⁵²⁷ it was confirmed that the "penalty" doctrine extended to terms which provided that the contract breaker was to forfeit sums to which he was entitled, or would otherwise have been entitled, from the innocent party; but it was held that it did not apply to a compromise agreement for the termination of a contract of employment insofar as it prevented the employee from acquiring certain fund units in which his contract of employment had given him a contingent future interest. ¹⁵²⁸ The employer may, in addition to suspending the salary, be entitled to damages for breach of contract. ¹⁵²⁹ An employer who is entitled to dismiss his or her employee cannot, however, on that basis alone elect to treat the contract as continuing and suspend him or her for a period so as to prevent him or her (as a punishment) from earning his wages for that period. ¹⁵³⁰ The circumstances in which an employer may claim an indemnity from a tortfeasor employee in respect of the claim of a third person have been considered earlier. ¹⁵³¹

¹ Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

¹⁵²⁰ See above, paras 40-058 et seq.

¹⁵²¹ Hindley v Haslam (1878) 3 Q.B.D. 481; Sagar v Ridehalgh [1931] 1 Ch. 310, 316; Stumore, Weston & Co v Breen (1886) 12 App. Cas. 698; Baster v London & County Printing Works [1899] 1 Q.B. 901.

¹⁵²² Cassaboglou v Gibb (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 797. For these general principles with regard to damages, see Vol.I, paras 26-107 et seq.

¹⁵²³ Ebbw Vale Steel, etc. Co v Tew (1935) 79 S.J. 593. cf. National Coal Board v Galley [1958] 1 W.L.R. 16.

- 1524. Richards v Hayward (1841) 2 Man. & G. 574; National Coal Board v Galley [1958] 1 W.L.R. 16.
- 1525. National Coal Board v Galley, above.
- 1526. See Vol.I, paras 26-178 et seq. However, in Giraud UK Ltd v Smith [2000] I.R.L.R. 763 it was held by the Employment Tribunal that a clause purporting to entitle the employer to make a deduction from the employee's final remuneration payment, which was the equivalent of his pay for the number of days short of the contractually required four weeks' notice to leave given by the employee, was unenforceable as an unlawful penalty clause. The drawing of the distinction between "liquidated damages" and "penalty" clauses, in the context of employers' claims against prospective employees for breach of contract to enter into employment, was further expounded in Tullett Prebon Group Ltd v El-Hajjali [2008] EWHC 1924 (QB), [2008] I.R.L.R. 760, where the clause in question was upheld as not being a penalty on the basis that, although the clause had some purpose of deterrence of breach, that was not its predominant purpose.
- 1527. [2012] EWHC 3511 (QB), [2013] I.R.L.R. 344.
- 1528. See now also Cleeve Link Ltd v Bryla [2014] I.R.L.R. 86 EAT, and compare Li v First Marine Solutions [2014] UKEAT 0045/13/BI.
- 1529. Gaumont-British Picture Corp Ltd v Alexander [1936] 2 All E.R. 1686.
- 1530. Hanley v Pease and Partners Ltd [1915] 1 K.B. 698. Compare above, para.40-092 which discusses the effect of industrial action upon entitlement to remuneration.
- 1531. See above, para.40-072.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 40 - Employment ¹
Section 8. - Unfair and Discriminatory Dismissal
(a) - Unfair Dismissal
(i) - General Considerations

Introduction

40-214

By s.22 of the Industrial Relations Act 1971 (which came into force on February 28, 1972) in every employment except those excluded by ss.27–31, the employee was given the right not to be unfairly dismissed by his or her employer. That right was made enforceable by a right of complaint to an employment tribunal which was empowered to make a recommendation for re-engagement or reinstatement, or to award compensation. The unfair dismissal provisions of that Act were repealed but re-enacted with only minor amendments by the Trade Union and Labour Relations Act 1974. The Employment Protection Act 1975 made further amendments to those unfair dismissal provisions, and in particular replaced the provisions about remedies with a new and more extensive set of provisions. Hence the present law concerning unfair dismissal is derived from the Trade Union and Labour Relations Act 1974 as amended by the Employment Protection Act 1975. Those provisions were consolidated into Pt V of the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978 which was subsequently amended by the Employment Acts 1980, 1982, 1988 and 1990. Some relevant provisions were transformed into the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992, and some further amendments were made by the Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993. The present law is mainly contained in the latest consolidation, Pt X of the Employment Rights Act 1996, as subsequently amended. ¹⁵³² The case law concerning the interpretation of the unfair dismissal provisions is now very extensive, and in the following account of those provisions it is generally only cases which are broadly relevant to the common law of the contract of employment that are cited.

Employments covered, employments specifically excluded, and the qualifying period

40-215

The unfair dismissal provisions cover every employee under a contract of employment ¹⁵³³ subject to certain exclusions and to certain extensions, which are described in the next paragraphs. Certain exclusions arise inherently as a matter of common law. Thus a director, acting only as such, may be held not to be an employee for the purposes of these provisions. ¹⁵³⁴ A claimant may be excluded where his or her contract of employment is void for illegality, as where a fraud upon the Revenue is involved. ¹⁵³⁵ A series of exclusions are made by express statutory provisions. Those in the police service are excluded from the unfair dismissal provisions, ¹⁵³⁶ as are share-fishermen. ¹⁵³⁷ There is an exclusion which normally applies, but does not apply where the dismissal is for any one or more of a set of specified reasons or in any one or more of a set of specified situations ¹⁵³⁸; that is to say, the employee is normally excluded where he or she has not been continuously employed for the qualifying period at the effective date of termination of his employment. ¹⁵³⁹ The qualifying period is two years ¹⁵⁴⁰, and is one month in relation to dismissal on grounds justifying statutory medical suspension. ¹⁵⁴¹ There may also be an exclusion on the basis of state immunity, despite the potential conflict with art.6 of the European Convention of Human Rights. ¹⁵⁴²

Employments to which the unfair dismissal provisions are specifically extended or applied

40-216

There is a significant set of types of employment in the public service to which the unfair dismissal legislation is specifically extended or applied, partly in order to ensure that this legislation applies to such employments despite possible doubts whether the public servants concerned are employed under contracts of employment, ¹⁵⁴³ and partly in order to modify the application of the legislation in ways regarded as appropriate to the public service relationships in question. ¹⁵⁴⁴ The unfair dismissal legislation is applied in this way to parliamentary staff, both of the House of Lords ¹⁵⁴⁵ and of the House of Commons. ¹⁵⁴⁶ It is also applied to Crown employment, ¹⁵⁴⁷ in which are included members of the armed forces, ¹⁵⁴⁸ but subject to provision that its application to members of the armed forces may be modified (or withdrawn) by Order in Council, ¹⁵⁴⁹ and that any Crown employment may be excepted from the legislation by a ministerial certificate that such exception is necessary for the purpose of safeguarding national security. ¹⁵⁵⁰

Contracting-out of the unfair dismissal provisions

40-217

An agreement for contracting-out of unfair dismissal liability is normally void and of no effect, as is any agreement not to bring unfair dismissal procedures before an employment tribunal. ¹⁵⁵¹ There are certain limited exceptions to this rule. Formerly, an employer might obtain a waiver of unfair dismissal rights in respect of the expiry without renewal of a fixed-term contract of one year or more, ¹⁵⁵² but that facility was later withdrawn. ¹⁵⁵³ A surviving exception consists in the fact that the parties to a dismissal procedure agreement may jointly apply for an order recognising the agreement recognised as a valid substitute for the unfair dismissal provisions. ¹⁵⁵⁴ The Act sets out the matters of which the Secretary of State for Employment must be satisfied before he may give this recognition ¹⁵⁵⁵ and also provides for applications for the revoking of such orders where the agreement has ceased to fulfil the statutory requirements. ¹⁵⁵⁶ A second exception is a provision allowing effect to agreements to refrain from presenting or proceeding with a complaint about a dismissal which has actually occurred. ¹⁵⁵⁷ This power to make agreements compromising actions for unfair dismissal is subject to the proviso that some action must first have been taken by a conciliation officer. ¹⁵⁵⁸

^{1.} Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

^{1532.} For example, by the Public Interest Disclosure Act 1998—see below, para.40-233.

^{1533.} Employment Rights Act 1996 s.94, taken in conjunction with s.230(1) of Employment Rights Act 1996 (definition of “employee”). See above, paras 40-010—40-025, for definition of the contract of employment. As to the implicit exclusion of employees working abroad, see now Lawson v Serco Ltd [2006] UKHL 3, [2006] I.C.R. 250, in which the House of Lords allowed the appeals of certain claimants in a group of joined appeals, remitting their cases to the employment tribunal for rehearing, and further explicated the territorial scope of the right not be unfairly dismissed. Compare now Dhunna v Creditsights Ltd [2014] EWCA Civ 1238, [2014] I.C.R. 105.

^{1534.} See Margetts v Underwood (Zelah) [1973] I.T.R. 478. See above, para.40-014.

^{1535.} cf. Cole v Fred Stacey Ltd [1974] I.R.L.R. 73. See above, para.40-036.

^{1536.} Employment Rights Act 1996 s.200(1).

- 1537. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.199(2).
- 1538. The reasons are as specified by Employment Rights Act 1996 s.108(3) in relation to the qualifying period of employment.
- 1539. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.108(1). For the definition of “effective date of termination”, see below, paras 40-220—40-221. It is no longer necessary to distinguish between full-time and part-time employees, by reason of the Employment Protection (Part-time Employees) Regulations 1995 (SI 1995/31). The upper age limit of 65 or normal retirement age, which formerly applied, was abolished with effect from October 1, 2006 by the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations 2006 (SI 2006/1031) Sch.8 para.25. See also paras 40-174, 40-224.
- 1540. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.108(1) as amended by the Unfair Dismissal and Statement of Reasons for Dismissal (Variation of Qualifying Period) Order 2012 (SI 2012/989) with effect upon periods of employment beginning from April 6, 2012. For “continuously employed” see s.213 Employment Rights Act 1996; see also above, paras 40-164—40-167.
- 1541. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.108(2).
- 1542. Benkharbouche v Embassy of Sudan [2015] EWCA Civ 33, [2014] I.R.L.R. 301 (as opposed to EU-law based claims); Al-Malki v Reyes [2015] EWCA Civ 32, [2015] I.R.L.R. 289.
- 1543. As to which see above, para.40-035 (Crown employment).
- 1544. cf. in addition to the employments specifically mentioned in this paragraph, the provisions of s.134 of the Employment Rights Act 1996 relating to teachers in aided schools. The police service is still, however, outside the scope of the provisions: s.200(1) of Employment Rights Act 1996.
- 1545. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.194.
- 1546. s.195.
- 1547. s.191.
- 1548. s.192.
- 1549. s.192(3).
- 1550. s.193. The reviewability of such a certificate was considered in the case of Council of Civil Service Unions v Minister of the Civil Service (“The GCHQ case”) [1985] A.C. 374.
- 1551. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.203(1). See Sutherland v Network Appliance Ltd [2001] I.R.L.R. 12—the compromise agreement remains effective in respect of claims for damages for breach of contract. And contrast this position with the Employee Shareholder status, above, para.40-030.
- 1552. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.197(1).
- 1553. s.197(1) was repealed by s.18 of the Employment Relations Act 1999.
- 1554. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.110(1).
- 1555. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.110(3).
- 1556. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.110(4), (5).
- 1557. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.203(2)(e).
- 1558. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.203(2)(e); see BCCI v Ali [2001] I.C.R. 337 as to the effect of such agreements, known as ACAS COT3 compromise agreements. Compare now the alternative dispute resolution provisions of ss.9–10 of the Employment Rights (Dispute Resolution) Act 1998—see also para.40-264.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 40 - Employment ¹
Section 8. - Unfair and Discriminatory Dismissal
(a) - Unfair Dismissal
(ii) - Dismissal and Effective Date of Termination

The definition of dismissal

40-218

Dismissal is defined for the purposes of the unfair dismissal provisions so as to extend to certain types of situation, and to no others. The statutory definition is expressed to be exhaustive. ¹⁵⁵⁹ These situations are:

(a)

Where the contract of employment is terminated by the employer, whether it is so terminated by notice or without notice. ¹⁵⁶⁰

(b)

Where the contract is for a limited term ¹⁵⁶¹ and that term expires without being renewed "under the same contract". ¹⁵⁶²

(c)

Where the employee terminates the contract, with or without notice, in circumstances such that he or she is entitled to terminate it without notice by reason of the employer's conduct. ¹⁵⁶³ There was no corresponding provision in the original unfair dismissal legislation of 1971, but this provision declares the result of case law development. ¹⁵⁶⁴ Reference may be made to case law concerning both unfair dismissal and redundancy payments for indications as to when the employee's entitlement to claim constructive dismissal arises. ¹⁵⁶⁵

(d)

Where an employee under notice from his or her employer himself or herself gives notice which terminates earlier than the employer's notice is due to expire; and in that event the reason for dismissal is taken to be the reason for which the employer's notice was given. ¹⁵⁶⁶

40-219

The operation of this statutory definition of dismissal is affected at various points by the common law concerning the termination of the contract of employment. Events affecting the employer such as liquidation of an employing company, appointment of a receiver or dissolution of partnership will not as such constitute dismissal, ¹⁵⁶⁷ but will often have an effect on the contract of employment which will satisfy the definition of dismissal, or will entitle the employee to terminate his employment and claim constructive dismissal, as involving a unilateral termination of employment, a purported assignment of the contract of employment, or a repudiatory change in the terms and conditions of employment. ¹⁵⁶⁸ Similarly, suspension of employment by the employer by way of disciplinary action or by way of lay-off in adverse economic conditions will not as such constitute dismissal, but may involve a termination of the contract by the employer or a repudiation of it entitling the employee to accept the termination and then claim constructive dismissal. ¹⁵⁶⁹ On the other hand certain cases where there might at first sight appear to be a dismissal by the employer may fail to satisfy the definition of dismissal because the contract has been terminated under the doctrine of frustration by, for instance, the prolonged illness of the employee, ¹⁵⁷⁰ or because the employee has unilaterally terminated the contract ¹⁵⁷¹ or rendered it impossible of performance, ¹⁵⁷² or because there has been a termination by mutual agreement. ¹⁵⁷³ These alternatives to dismissal are firmly established as a matter of principle, but the tribunals and courts will not lightly allow them to operate to defeat claims of unfair dismissal. In Morton Sundour Fabrics Ltd v Shaw ¹⁵⁷⁴ it was held that a warning of impending dismissal (for redundancy) at an unspecified future date did not constitute a dismissal for statutory purposes.

The effective date of termination

40-220

The date at which dismissal is deemed to occur, and the date upon which the contract of employment is deemed to terminate are important in the application of the unfair dismissal provisions for the following reasons:

The “effective date of termination of employment” is used to establish:

- (a) whether the employee has served the qualifying period ¹⁵⁷⁵;
- (b) whether the employee presented his complaint in time ¹⁵⁷⁶;
- (c) whether the provisions concerning dismissal in connection with a lockout, strike or other industrial action are applicable ¹⁵⁷⁷;
- (d) the length of the employee’s period of continuous employment ¹⁵⁷⁸ for the purpose of calculating the amount of the basic award ¹⁵⁷⁹ of compensation for unfair dismissal ¹⁵⁸⁰; and
- (e) the calculation date of the employee’s “week’s pay” ¹⁵⁸¹ for the purpose of calculating the amount of basic award of compensation. ¹⁵⁸²

The effective date of termination of employment is defined ¹⁵⁸³ as:

(a)

in relation to an employee whose contract of employment is terminated by notice, the date on which the notice expires;

(b) in relation to an employee whose contract is terminated without notice, the date on which termination takes effect; in relation to an employee employed under a limited-term contract which expires without being renewed under the same contract, the date on which the termination takes effect.

(c)

40-221

❗ For certain above-mentioned purposes for which the definition applies, namely that of the initial qualifying period and that of the calculation of basic award of compensation, the effective date of termination is postponed ¹⁵⁸⁴ to the date when a duly given statutory minimum period of notice ¹⁵⁸⁵ would have expired. The application of the above statutory definition to termination by payment in lieu of notice depends upon the view taken of the juridical nature of a payment in lieu of notice, a matter considered in an earlier paragraph. ¹⁵⁸⁶ Where a dismissal is expressed in a notice or letter, it has been held that the termination does not take effect until the employee has read that notice or letter or had a reasonable opportunity to do so. ¹⁵⁸⁷ ❗ Where an employee is suspended without pay pending a domestic appeal against dismissal, it has been held that where the appeal is unsuccessful, the effective date of termination is that of the original dismissal. ¹⁵⁸⁸ If, however, the employee is contractually entitled to remuneration during such suspension, the effective date of termination is postponed until notification of the rejection of the appeal. ¹⁵⁸⁹ Where an employer wrongfully repudiates the contract of employment by wrongful dismissal, it has been held that even if the elective theory whereby wrongful repudiation requires acceptance to terminate the contract is applicable, ¹⁵⁹⁰ the effective date of termination for statutory purposes is nevertheless the date of the summary dismissal rather than the later date on which notice duly given on that date would have expired ¹⁵⁹¹ (subject only to the statutory extension for the statutory minimum period of notice). ¹⁵⁹²

¹ Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

¹⁵⁵⁹ Employment Rights Act 1996 s.95(1), the opening words.

¹⁵⁶⁰ Employment Rights Act 1996 s.95(1)(a). See above, para.40-192, for the question whether the employer can terminate the contract unilaterally in breach of contract. Also see Chesham Shipping Ltd v Rowe [1977] I.R.L.R. 391; Walker v Cotswold Chine Home School (1977) 12 I.T.R. 342; Tanner v DT Kean Ltd [1978] I.R.L.R. 110; Pambakian v Brentford Nylons Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 665 (hivingdown agreement); British Midland Airways Ltd v Lewis [1978] I.C.R. 782.

¹⁵⁶¹ Now styled a limited-term contract—see above, para.40-172; see Wiltshire CC v NATFHE [1980] I.C.R. 455; British Broadcasting Corp v Dixon [1979] Q.B. 546.

¹⁵⁶² s.95(1)(b). The concluding words are probably intended to exclude a renewal or re-engagement on different terms and conditions. cf. British Broadcasting Corp v Kelly-Phillips [1998] I.C.R. 587. That decision was followed, and the reasoning in it was applied, by the Court of Appeal in Bhatt v Chelsea and Westminster Healthcare NHS Trust [2000] C.L. 193.

1563. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.95(1)(c).

1564. See Sutcliffe v Hawker Siddeley Aviation Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 560.

1565. See above, para.40-193; and Western Excavating (ECC) Ltd v Sharpe [1978] I.C.R. 221; FC Gardner Ltd v Beresford [1978] I.R.L.R. 63; Robinson v Crompton Parkinson Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 401; Walker v Josiah Wedgwood Sons Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 744; Warner v Barbers Stores [1978] I.R.L.R. 109; Simmonds v Dowty Seals Ltd [1978] I.R.L.R. 211; Palmanor Ltd v Cedron [1978] I.C.R. 1008; Milthorn Toleman Ltd v Ford [1978] I.R.L.R. 306; British Aircraft Corp v Austin [1978] I.R.L.R. 332; Woods v WM Car Services Ltd [1981] I.C.R. 666; Pedersen v Camden LBC [1981] I.C.R. 674 (note).

1566. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.95(2).

1567. Contrast here ss.136(5), 139(4), (5) of Employment Rights Act 1996 in connection with redundancy—see below, para.40-252.

1568. See generally above, paras 40-178—40-182 (changes in the employing enterprise).

1569. See Powell Duffryn Wagon Co Ltd v House [1974] I.C.R. 123.

1570. See Marshall v Harland Wolff Ltd [1972] I.C.R. 101; Hebden v Forsey & Son [1973] I.C.R. 607; Egg Stores (Stamford Hill) Ltd v Leibovici [1977] I.C.R. 260; Hart v AR Marshall & Sons (Bulwell) Ltd [1977] 1 W.L.R. 1067, and see above, para.40-175.

1571. For the distinction between dismissal by the employer and “resignation” by the employee, see now Sandhu v Jan de Rijk Transport Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 430, [2007] I.C.R. 1137; distinguishing Sheffield v Oxford Controls Ltd [1979] I.C.R. 396.

1572. Hare v Murphy Bros Ltd [1974] I.C.R. 603. Contrast Forgings & Presswork Ltd v McDougall [1974] I.C.R. 532; and see above, para.40-175.

1573. See MacAlwane v Boughton Estates Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 470; Lees v Arthur Greaves Ltd [1974] I.C.R. 501; British Leyland (UK) Ltd v Ashraf [1978] I.C.R. 979; Midland Electric Manufacturing Co Ltd v Kanji [1980] I.R.L.R. 185; and Tracy v Zest Equipment Ltd [1982] I.C.R. 481. See above, para.40-173.

1574. (1966) 2 K.I.R. 1; see now Haseltine, Lake & Co v Dowler [1981] I.R.L.R. 25; International Computers Ltd v Kennedy [1981] I.R.L.R. 23.

1575. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.108(1)—see above, para.40-215.

1576. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.111(2)—see below, para.40-244.

1577. See s.238(5) of Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992.

1578. See above, para.40-164.

1579. See below, para.40-240.

1580. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.119(1) and (2).

1581. See below, para.40-255.

1582. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.226(6).

- 1583. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.97(1). See Hammerton Shipping Co Ltd v Borg [1977] 12 I.T.R. 54; and Robert Cort & Son Ltd v Charman [1981] I.C.R. 816. Compare Fitzgerald v University of Kent at Canterbury [2004] EWCA Civ 143, [2004] I.C.R. 737, in which it was held that a retrospective agreement did not validly alter the effective date of termination. But compare also now Palfrey v Transco Plc [2004] I.R.L.R. 916 EAT where a later agreement for payment in lieu of notice was held to have advanced the effective date of termination.
- 1584. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.97(2)–(5). See Dhami v Top Spot Night Club [1977] I.R.L.R. 231.
- 1585. See above, para.40-163; Fox Maintenance Ltd v Jackson [1978] I.C.R. 110. In Harper v Virgin Net Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 271, [2004] I.R.L.R. 390 it was held that the legislation did not bring about a further postponement of the effective date of termination to the later date at which a contractual notice period, longer than the statutory minimum notice period, would have expired.
- 1586. See above, para.40-181.
- 1587.  Brown v Southall & Knight [1980] I.C.R. 617. The decision was followed, and its doctrine was re-vindicated and elaborated, by the Court of Appeal and by the Supreme Court in Gisda Cyf v Barratt [2009] EWCA Civ 648, [2010] UKSC 41. See now also Sandle v Adecco UK Ltd [2016] I.R.L.R. 941 (EAT).
- 1588. Sainsbury Ltd v Savage [1981] I.C.R. 1.
- 1589. Drage v Governors of Greenford High School [2000] I.R.L.R. 314.
- 1590. See above, para.40-192.
- 1591. Robert Cort & Son Ltd v Charman [1981] I.C.R. 816; compare also BMK Ltd v Logue [1993] I.C.R. 601. In Lambert v Croydon College [1999] I.C.R. 409, the Employment Appeal Tribunal held that a compromise agreement (see above, para.40-173) for early retirement on grounds of ill-health could validly fix the effective date of termination of employment for statutory purposes, even though it fixed it at a date earlier than that on which the agreement was made.
- 1592. See above, para.40-168.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 40 - Employment ¹
Section 8. - Unfair and Discriminatory Dismissal
(a) - Unfair Dismissal
(iii) - Unfairness

Introduction

40-222

Normally, the fairness or unfairness of a dismissal is, under the statutory provisions ¹⁵⁹³ decided as a two-stage process. At the first stage, it is for the employer to show that he or she dismissed the employee for a substantial justificatory reason ¹⁵⁹⁴ and at the second stage it is for the tribunal to decide whether in the circumstances (including the size and administrative resources of the employer's undertaking) he or she acted reasonably in treating the reason as a sufficient reason for dismissing the employee. ¹⁵⁹⁵ In the ensuing paragraphs, these two stages are described in more detail and certain situations are described which are governed by special statutory rules ousting the two-stage test of fairness. ¹⁵⁹⁶ The principal such situations are concerned with:

- (1)
trade union membership and activity ¹⁵⁹⁷;
- (2)
dismissal during lock-out, strike or other industrial action ¹⁵⁹⁸;
- (3)
selection for redundancy ¹⁵⁹⁹;
- (4)
dismissal on the ground of pregnancy or childbirth or leave for family reasons ¹⁶⁰⁰;
- (5)
health and safety cases ¹⁶⁰¹;
- (6)
jury service ¹⁶⁰²; and

- (7)
dismissal on ground of assertion of statutory right. 1603

Substantial reasons for dismissal

40-223

It is provided 1604 that at the first stage 1605 of the determination whether a dismissal was fair or unfair, it is for the employer to show what was the reason or principal reason for the dismissal, 1606 and that it was a reason falling within a statutory list 1607 of substantial reasons justifying dismissal. 1608 The list is as follows:

- (1)
Reasons related to the capability 1609 or qualifications 1610 of the employee for performing work of the kind which he or she was employed to do. 1611 This may include supervening ill-health incapacitating the employee from carrying out his or her former work. 1612
- (2)
Reasons related to the conduct of the employee. 1613 These need not necessarily be reasons going to the lengths of justifying summary dismissal for misconduct at common law. 1614
- (3)
Redundancy of the employee. 1615 This is defined by reference to the definition of the term used in the redundancy payments legislation. 1616
- (4)
Contravention of a statutory duty if the employment is continued. 1617 This covers cases such as that where an employee employed as a driver is disqualified from driving or driving a particular type of vehicle by order of a court.
- (5)
Dismissal of an employee engaged expressly as a statutory replacement employee in order to make it possible for the replaced employee to resume his or her original work. 1618
- (6)
Any other substantial reason of a kind such as to justify the dismissal of an employee holding the position which that employee held. 1619 This is a residual catch-all category leaving the whole issue ultimately within the discretion of the tribunals and courts. That discretion has not been limited by decided cases; there is no reason to suppose, for instance, that this category need be construed ejusdem generis with the other, specific, categories. 1620

Special considerations apply to dismissals taking place because of the transfer of an undertaking within the meaning of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations. With effect from April 6, 2006, the existing Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations were revised and replaced by the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment)

Regulations 2006. ¹⁶²¹ The new Regulations contain provisions which clarify the circumstances under which it is unfair for employers to dismiss employees for reasons connected with a relevant transfer. ¹⁶²²

Retirement and unfair dismissal

40-224

Among the very significant new legal incidents which the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations 2006 ¹⁶²³ attached to the notion of “retirement” ¹⁶²⁴ was a special regime for “retirement” within the law of unfair dismissal. This special regime was created by introducing new provisions into the Employment Rights Act 1996; it was known as the “default retirement age” regime because it authorised employers, on certain specified conditions, to maintain a mandatory retirement age for their employees which by default would be that of 65. These provisions were repealed by the Employment Equality (Repeal of Retirement Age Provisions) Regulations 2011, ¹⁶²⁵ and the effect of that repeal, when coupled with the abolition of the previously existing age limits on claims for unfair dismissal which had accompanied the introduction of that special regime, is to expose the imposition of retirement upon an employee by an employer to the general law of unfair dismissal at whatever age it takes place. There is some official indication that employers may be able to maintain their own “employer-justified retirement age” regimes ¹⁶²⁶, but the scope of this facility has yet to be effectively tested in litigation. ¹⁶²⁷

Reasonableness of dismissal

40-225

If the employer shows that he or she has a substantial reason for dismissal within the provisions previously discussed, ¹⁶²⁸ that does not in itself establish the fairness or unfairness of the dismissal. Except in the special cases which have been enumerated, ¹⁶²⁹ it is necessary to the second stage of adjudication of fairness. At that stage, the issue of fairness depends upon whether the tribunal is satisfied that in the circumstances the employer acted reasonably in treating the reason shown to him or her as a sufficient reason for dismissing the employee. ¹⁶³⁰ The tribunals are able to take matters both of substance and procedure into account when deciding the issue of reasonableness. At the substantive level, the tribunals can consider the whole sequence of developments leading to a dismissal ¹⁶³¹ and can, in effect, apply their own standards of good employment practice in order to evaluate the dismissal. ¹⁶³² Moreover, it has long been recognised that the reasonableness of a dismissal also raises procedural considerations ¹⁶³³, the significance of those procedural considerations is now the subject of special statutory provisions concerning dispute resolution which are detailed in later paragraphs. ¹⁶³⁴ The statute specifically provides that the size and administrative resources of the employer’s undertaking shall be treated as circumstances relevant to the question of reasonableness. ¹⁶³⁵

Cases on “reasonableness”

40-226

Leading cases have provided important guidance for the application of this notion of “reasonableness”. The reasonableness of the dismissal must be judged on the basis of facts and circumstances known to the employer and acted upon by him or her at the time of the dismissal and not circumstances which subsequently come to light, ¹⁶³⁶ though those may affect the amount of compensation. ¹⁶³⁷ Nevertheless, in judging the reasonableness of a dismissal, an employment tribunal is entitled to have regard to an employer’s refusal to entertain the employee’s contractual right of appeal, as any evidence given in such an appeal would have been admissible before the tribunal in considering whether the employer’s real reason for dismissal could reasonably be treated as sufficient. ¹⁶³⁸ Moreover, an employer may be held to have acted unreasonably by failing to take the appropriate procedural steps in deciding to dismiss, although it cannot be said the employee would not have been dismissed but for the procedural defects, unless the employer could reasonably have concluded, when deciding to dismiss, that the procedural steps would have been utterly useless. ¹⁶³⁹ (Statutory provision was made that failure by an employer to follow a dismissal procedure should not be regarded by itself as making the employer's action unreasonable if the employer shows that it would have been decided to dismiss the employee even if the procedure had been followed ¹⁶⁴⁰; but that provision was subsequently repealed, ¹⁶⁴¹ so that the previously applicable case law is apparently restored to effect. ¹⁶⁴²)

Dismissal by reason of trade union membership, non-membership or Activity

40-227

The ordinary rules for determining the fairness of a dismissal ¹⁶⁴³ are overridden by a special provision ¹⁶⁴⁴ that a dismissal is to be regarded as unfair if the reason or principal reason for the dismissal was the employee's being or proposing to become a member of an independent trade union ¹⁶⁴⁵ or that he had taken or proposed to take part at any appropriate time in the activities of an independent trade union ¹⁶⁴⁶ or the employee's non-membership of, or refusal to become or remain a member of a trade union. ¹⁶⁴⁷ Where these reasons obtain, the law of unfair dismissal has a specially wide scope, ¹⁶⁴⁸ extending to employees who have not served a qualifying period. ¹⁶⁴⁹ These provisions provide the counterpart to the rights of employees in respect of trade union membership, nonmembership and activity provided during the currency of employment by ss.146–151 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992. ¹⁶⁵⁰ Where they apply, the calculation of the basic award of compensation is subject to a statutory minimum, ¹⁶⁵¹ and may obtain special interim relief pending determination of his or her complaint of unfair dismissal. ¹⁶⁵² That interim relief may consist of an order for the continuation of his contract of employment. ¹⁶⁵³

Dismissal during lock-out, strike or other industrial action

40-228

Where the date on which an employee is dismissed ¹⁶⁵⁴ falls during or at the institution of a lock-out by the employer ¹⁶⁵⁵ or while the employee was taking part in a strike or other industrial action ¹⁶⁵⁶ the ordinary provisions about the fairness of dismissal ¹⁶⁵⁷ are overridden by special provisions. ¹⁶⁵⁸ The law of unfair dismissal is in those cases totally excluded, there being no determination of fairness or unfairness, ¹⁶⁵⁹ save as follows: the law of unfair dismissal is not excluded if it is shown that one or more relevant employees have not been dismissed, ¹⁶⁶⁰ or have been offered re-engagement within three months of the dismissal complained of whilst the employee concerned had not had such an offer. ¹⁶⁶¹ The relevant employees are those directly interested in the trade dispute in the contemplation or furtherance of which the lock-out occurred, ¹⁶⁶² or those at the establishment at or from which the complainant was working taking part in the strike or other industrial action at the complainant's date of dismissal. ¹⁶⁶³ However, the foregoing proviso relating to selective dismissal or selective non-re-engagement does not operate in relation to the dismissal of those taking part in unofficial industrial action as statutorily defined, as employees dismissed while so doing have no right to complain of unfair dismissal. ¹⁶⁶⁴ Where the unfair dismissal provisions are not excluded they apply in the ordinary way, except that in cases of selective failure to re-engage, ¹⁶⁶⁵ the ordinary provisions apply to the failure to re-engage rather than to the original dismissal ¹⁶⁶⁶ (thus bringing into question the selection the employer makes by re-engaging some employees and not others). Where the unfair dismissal provisions are not excluded, ¹⁶⁶⁷ a dismissal or failure to reengage which has as its reason the employee's trade union membership or activity, or non-membership of a non-independent trade union, will be necessarily unfair as in the ordinary case of a dismissal on those grounds not occurring during a lock-out, strike or other industrial action. ¹⁶⁶⁸ Moreover, the Employment Relations Act 1999 ¹⁶⁶⁹ made significant changes to the law relating to unfair dismissal of striking workers. In summary, a new category of "protected industrial action" was created within the existing category of official industrial action, so that in defined situations within this new category, employees are to be regarded as unfairly dismissed if they are dismissed wholly or principally by reason of having taken protected industrial action. ¹⁶⁷⁰

Fairness in redundancy cases

40-229

The fact that an employee is redundant in the statutory sense ¹⁶⁷¹ is in itself a reason capable of establishing the dismissal as a fair one. ¹⁶⁷² Within that framework the area of overlap between the redundancy payments legislation ¹⁶⁷³ and the unfair dismissal provisions is regulated as follows. First, there are provisions rendering certain dismissals for redundancy automatically unfair. ¹⁶⁷⁴ These provisions apply to dismissals for redundancy where there has been selection between employees in a similar position and the selection was made either on the statutorily inadmissible grounds, such as those concerned with health and safety cases, with pregnancy or childbirth, or with assertion of statutory rights, ¹⁶⁷⁵ or on the statutorily defined grounds concerned with trade union membership, non-membership or activity. ¹⁶⁷⁶ Secondly, outside those special provisions, a dismissal for redundancy may also be unfair if the employer's decision to dismiss is judged unreasonable ¹⁶⁷⁷ as in all ordinary unfair dismissal issues. Thirdly, it seems clear that the presumption of redundancy applying for the purposes of the redundancy payments legislation ¹⁶⁷⁸ may operate to permit that a redundancy payment is due to the employee and yet that the dismissal is not a dismissal for redundancy for the purposes of the unfair dismissal legislation. ¹⁶⁷⁹ Fourthly, there is provision for the reduction of the amount of a basic award of compensation for unfair dismissal by the amount of any redundancy payment made by the employer or awarded by the tribunal in respect of the dismissal concerned. ¹⁶⁸⁰ Finally it should be noted that special considerations apply under the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 2006 where the dismissal is attributable to the transfer of an undertaking. ¹⁶⁸¹

Dismissal on grounds of pregnancy or leave for family reasons40-230

Under s.99 of the Employment Rights Act 1996 an employee is to be treated as unfairly dismissed if she is dismissed because she is pregnant or for any other reason connected with leave for family reasons as prescribed by regulations. In such cases, the normally applicable provisions concerning the qualifying period for unfair dismissal rights do not apply. ¹⁶⁸²

Dismissal in health and safety cases, or on the ground of assertion of statutory right40-231

Provision has been made and is now contained in the Employment Rights Act 1996 for dismissals to be treated as unfair dismissals in particular health and safety cases and in certain cases of dismissal on the ground of assertion of statutory right, as follows. In such cases, the normally applicable provisions concerning the qualifying period for unfair dismissal rights do not apply. ¹⁶⁸³

(1)

Health and safety cases

A dismissal is to be regarded as unfair if the reason for it was that the employee was involved in health and safety activities, or was performing representative functions with regard to health and safety, or brought health and safety hazards to the employer's attention, or absented himself or herself from work by reason of health and safety hazards, or took protective measures in circumstances of danger (in each case, subject to the particular conditions laid down in the statutory provision). ¹⁶⁸⁴

(2)

Assertion of statutory right

40-232

A dismissal is to be regarded as unfair if the reason for it was that the employee brought proceedings against the employer to enforce a relevant statutory right, or alleged that the employer had infringed such a right of his or hers; the statutory rights in question are, in effect, the individual employment protection rights conferred by the Employment Rights Act 1996 and by the provisions of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 concerning deductions from pay, trade union activities and time off. ¹⁶⁸⁵

Dismissal on grounds of public interest disclosure40-233

Under the provisions of the Public Interest Disclosure Act 1998, ¹⁶⁸⁶ a dismissal, for which the sole or principal reason is that the worker concerned made a protected public interest disclosure, may be taken to be an unfair dismissal within the meaning of the unfair dismissals legislation, thus coming within the jurisdiction of an Employment Tribunal as such. ¹⁶⁸⁷

Dismissal on grounds of refusal of Sunday working40-234

It is provided that where an employee who is a “protected shop worker” or “protected betting worker” or an “opted-out shop worker” or “opted-out betting worker” is dismissed, he or she is to be regarded as unfairly dismissed if the reason or principal reason for the dismissal was his or her refusal to do shop work or betting work on Sundays or on a particular Sunday. ¹⁶⁸⁸

Dismissal on grounds connected with parenthood and family responsibility40-235

As with the protections from detriment previously considered, ¹⁶⁸⁹ by a succession of enactments beginning with the Employment Relations Act 1999, ¹⁶⁹⁰ there have been conferred upon employees a series of protections against dismissal or selection for redundancy on grounds connected with various aspects of parenthood and family responsibility or with the exercise of rights relating to parenthood and family responsibility. As a brief summary of the effect of those enactments, an employee will be regarded as having been unfairly dismissed or selected for redundancy if the ground for the dismissal or selection for redundancy was that:

She is pregnant or has given birth to a child, or

She has exercised or has sought to exercise the rights to maternity leave or maternity pay, or

She or he has exercised or has sought to exercise the rights to parental leave, or

She or he has exercised or has sought to exercise the rights to time off for domestic reasons (to care for dependants), ¹⁶⁹¹ or

He has exercised or has sought to exercise the rights to paternity leave or paternity pay, or

She or he has exercised or has sought to exercise the rights to adoption leave or adoption pay, or the rights to paternity leave or paternity pay which apply to adoptive parents, ¹⁶⁹² or

She or he has exercised or has sought to exercise the rights which relate to flexible working. ¹⁶⁹³

-
- ^{1.} Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).
- ^{1593.} Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.98–100, 103–105. As to the impact of the Human Rights Act 1998 on the adjudication of unfairness, see X v Y (Employment: Sex Offender) [2004] EWCA Civ 662, [2004] I.R.L.R. 625.
- ^{1594.} Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98(1), see below, para.40-223.
- ^{1595.} Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98(4).
- ^{1596.} Compare also s.98(3A) Employment Rights Act 1996, and see below, para.40-224 as to the treatment of retirement under the law of unfair dismissal.
- ^{1597.} Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.152; see below, para.40-227.
- ^{1598.} Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 ss.237–239; see below, para.40-227.
- ^{1599.} Employment Rights Act 1996 s.105. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.153, see below, para.40-229.
- ^{1600.} Employment Rights Act 1996 s.99 and regulations there under. See below, para.40-230.
- ^{1601.} Employment Rights Act 1996 s.100. See below, para.40-230.
- ^{1602.} A new specially designated ground of unfair dismissal has been created by s.40 of the Employment Relations Act 2004, which, by inserting a new s.98B into the Employment Rights Act 1996, renders it unfair to dismiss an employee by reason of his or her being summoned for or being absent from work on jury service, unless the employer shows the likelihood of substantial injury to the undertaking being caused by the absence on jury service. This provision was effective from April 6, 2005.

- 1603. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.104. See below, para.40-232.
- 1604. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98.
- 1605. See above, para.40-222.
- 1606. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98(1)(a).
- 1607. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98(2), subject to s.98(2A) with regard to retirement, as to which see below, para.40-224.
- 1608. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98(1)(b).
- 1609. Defined by s.98(3)(a) Employment Rights Act 1996; compare Abernethy v Mott, Hay & Anderson [1974] I.C.R. 323; Turner v Wadham Stringer Ltd [1974] I.C.R. 277; Blackman v Post Office [1974] I.C.R. 151; Kraft Foods Ltd v Fox [1978] I.C.R. 311; Miller v Executors of JC Graham [1978] I.R.L.R. 309; Bristol-Meyers Co Ltd v Matlock [1978] 13 I.T.R. 158; Sutton & Gates v Boxall [1979] I.C.R. 67 EAT.
- 1610. Defined by s.98(3)(b) of Employment Rights Act 1996.
- 1611. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98(2)(a).
- 1612. cf. Merseyside and North Wales Electricity Board v Taylor [1975] I.C.R. 185. See Patterson v Messrs Bracketts [1977] I.R.L.R. 137; Spencer v Paragon Wallpapers Ltd [1976] I.R.L.R. 373; Liverpool AHA v Edwards [1977] I.R.L.R. 471; Finch v Betabake (Anglia) Ltd [1977] I.R.L.R. 470; Williamson v Alcan (UK) Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 104; Post Office v Jones [1977] I.R.L.R. 422; East Lindsey DC v Daubney [1977] I.R.L.R. 181.
- 1613. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98(2)(b). See, among the earlier leading authorities, Morrish v Henlys (Folkestone) Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 482; Wallace v Guy Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 119; St Anne's Board Mill Co Ltd v Brien [1973] I.C.R. 444; Shipside (Ruthin) Ltd v TGWU [1973] I.C.R. 503; Hilti (Great Britain) Ltd v Windridge [1974] I.C.R. 352; Atkin v Enfield Group Hospital Management Committee [1975] I.R.L.R. 217; Conway v Matthew Wright & Nephew Ltd [1977] I.R.L.R. 89; Singh v London County Bus Services [1976] I.R.L.R. 176; Trust Houses Forte Ltd v Murphy [1977] I.R.L.R. 186; Torr v British Railways Board [1977] I.C.R. 785; Redbridge LBC v Fishman [1978] I.C.R. 569; Horrigan v Lewisham LBC [1978] I.C.R. 15; West Yorkshire MDC v Platts [1978] I.C.R. 33; Mansard Precision Engineering Co Ltd v Taylor [1978] I.C.R. 828; Nottinghamshire CC v Bowley [1978] I.R.L.R. 252; Johnson Matthey Metals Ltd v Harding [1978] I.R.L.R. 247; Tesco Stores Ltd v Heap [1978] 13 I.T.R. 17; Boychuk v H. & J. Symons Holdings Ltd [1977] I.R.L.R. 395; Coward v John Menzies (Holdings) Ltd [1977] I.R.L.R. 428; British Labour Pump Co Ltd v Byrne [1979] I.C.R. 347; Monie v Coral Racing [1981] I.C.R. 109 CA; Weddell & Co Ltd v Tepper [1980] I.C.R. 286 CA; British Home Stores Ltd v Burchell [1980] I.C.R. 303 EAT; UCATT v Brain [1981] I.C.R. 542 CA; Whitbread & Co Plc v Mills (1988) I.R.L.R. 501.
- 1614. See above, paras 40-224 et seq.
- 1615. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98(2)(c)—see below, paras 40-229—40-251.
- 1616. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.235(3).
- 1617. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98(2)(d).
- 1618. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.106(2)–(3) (replacement of employee suspended from work on medical grounds—see above, para.40-085—or on maternity grounds or absent by reason of pregnancy or confinement).

- 1619. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98(1)(b).
- 1620. cf. RS Components Ltd v Irwin [1973] I.C.R. 535; Hollister v National Farmers Union [1979] I.C.R. 542.
- 1621. SI 2006/246. See above, para.40-179.
- 1622. See reg.7.
- 1623. SI 2006/1031.
- 1624. As to which see also paras 40-039, 40-215.
- 1625. SI 2011/1069 which took full effect on October 1, 2011.
- 1626. ACAS Working without the default retirement age-guidance for employers (March 2011).
- 1627. Compare, however, Seldon v Clarkson Wright and Jakes [2010] UKSC 16 from which some incidental guidance may be derived. The maintaining of a retirement age of 65 was subsequently held to have been proportionate on the facts: Seldon v Clarkson Wright & Jakes [2014] I.R.L.R. 748 EAT.
- 1628. i.e. ss.98(1), (2) of Employment Rights Act 1996.
- 1629. See above, para.40-222, nn.1589–1595.
- 1630. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98(4)–(6).
- 1631. See, for instance (a) in capability cases: Judge International Ltd v Moss [1975] I.R.L.R. 208; Abernethy v Mott, Hay & Anderson [1974] I.C.R. 323; Luckings v May & Baker Ltd [1974] I.R.L.R. 151; Tan v Berry Bros & Rudd Ltd [1974] I.R.L.R. 244; (b) in conduct cases: Winterhalter Gastronom Ltd v Webb [1973] I.C.R. 245; St Anne's Board Mill Co Ltd v Brien [1973] I.C.R. 444; Morrish v Henley's (Folkestone) Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 482; Shipside (Ruthin) Ltd v TGWU [1973] I.C.R. 503; Tiptools Ltd v Curtis [1973] I.R.L.R. 276; Hilti (Great Britain) Ltd v Windridge [1974] I.C.R. 352; Forgings & Presswork Ltd v MacDougall [1974] I.C.R. 532; Treganowan v Robert Knee & Co Ltd [1975] I.C.R. 405; Shortland v Chantrill [1975] I.R.L.R. 208; Atkin v Enfield Group Hospital Management Committee [1975] I.R.L.R. 217; (c) in redundancy cases: Rigby v British Steel Corp [1973] I.C.R. 160; Axe v British Domestic Appliances Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 133; Clarkson International Tools Ltd v Short [1973] I.C.R. 191; Vokes Ltd v Bear [1974] I.C.R. 1; Bessenden Properties Ltd v Corness [1974] I.R.L.R. 338; British Olivetti Ltd v Kay [1975] I.R.L.R. 29; Beardmore v Westinghouse Brake & Signal Co Ltd [1976] I.C.R. 49. See Khanum v Mid-Glamorgan AHA [1979] I.C.R. 4 EAT; Bailey v BP Oil (Kent Refinery) Ltd [1980] I.C.R. 642 CA; Weddell (W) & Co Ltd v Tepper [1980] I.C.R. 286 CA; UCATT v Brain [1981] I.C.R. 542 CA. The Court of Appeal in Turner v East Midland Trains Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 1470, [2013] 3 All E.R. 375 confirmed that in misconduct cases the “band of reasonable responses test” is to be regarded as the overarching one; and it was held that this test met the requirements of art.8 of the European Convention on Human Rights and hence ensured that the legislative provision in question was compliant with the Human Rights Act 1998.
- 1632. It has been held that the fact that tribunals reach opposite conclusions as to fairness on similar facts does not necessarily render either conclusion perverse: Gilham v Kent CC (No.2) [1985] I.C.R. 233. Compare now the decisions of the EAT in Haddon v Van den Bergh Foods Ltd [1999] I.R.L.R. 672; and of the Court of Appeal in Foley v Post Office [2000] I.C.R. 1283.
- 1633. Because of their bearing on the substantial issue—Dunning (Shopfitters) Ltd v Jacomb [1973] I.C.R. 448, 452F–H. See also Alidair v Taylor [1978] I.C.R. 445 CA; and Bailey v BP Oil (Kent Refinery) Ltd [1980] I.C.R. 642.
- 1634. See below, para.40-264. The provisions came into force on October 1, 2004.

- 1635. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98(4).
- 1636. Devis & Sons Ltd v Atkins [1977] I.C.R. 662; contrast the law of summary dismissal: see above, para.40-188.
- 1637. Devis & Sons Ltd v Atkins [1977] I.C.R. 662 and see below, para.40-240.
- 1638. West Midland Co-operative Society Ltd v Tipton [1986] I.C.R. 192.
- 1639. Polkey v Dayton Services Ltd [1988] I.C.R. 142; overruling British Labour Pump Co Ltd v Byrne [1979] I.C.R. 347. In Duffy v Yeomans & Partners Ltd [1995] I.C.R. 1, the Court of Appeal treated it as permissible for the employer to argue that consultation would have been pointless although the employer had not at or before the time of dismissal taken a decision about the utility of consultation.
- 1640. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98A(2) inserted by s.34 of Employment Act 2002 with effect from October 2004.
- 1641. By s.2 of the Employment Act 2008; see below, para.40-264.
- 1642. That is the view taken in the Explanatory Notes to the Employment Act 2008 at para.18.
- 1643. i.e. s.98(1), (3) and s.106(1)(2); see above, para.40-222.
- 1644. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.152(1). Section 152 of the 1992 Act has been amended by s.32 of the Employment Relations Act 2004 so as to make the dismissal of an employee unfair where it is for making use of the services of his union or refusing to accept certain specified inducements in respect of trade union membership or collective bargaining. This provision was brought into effect on October 1, 2004.
- 1645. As defined by ss.1, 5.
- 1646. s.152(1)(b). “Appropriate time” is defined by s.152(2). See Chant v Aquaboats Ltd [1978] I.R.L.R. 643; City of Birmingham DC v Beyer [1977] I.R.L.R. 211; Marley Tile Co Ltd v Shaw [1980] I.C.R. 72 CA.
- 1647. s.152(1)(c). Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978 s.58(3)–(12), which created an important exception in relation to union membership agreements, were repealed by s.11 of the Employment Act 1988.
- 1648. cf. above, para.40-215.
- 1649. s.154. See above, para.40-249. See also Goodwin (H) Ltd v Fitzmaurice [1977] I.R.L.R. 393; Smith v Hayle Town Council [1978] I.R.L.R. 413.
- 1650. See above, paras 40-115—40-116.
- 1651. s.156.
- 1652. ss.161–163 (see below, para.40-242). See London City Airport Ltd v Chacko [2013] I.R.L.R. 610 EAT.
- 1653. ss.164–166 (see below, para.40-242).
- 1654. See above, para.40-220 and Heath v JF Longman (Meat Salesman) Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 407.
- 1655. The terminology is not statutorily defined. See Express & Star Ltd v Bunday [1988] I.C.R. 379.
- 1656. There is no statutory definition, for this purpose, of “strike or other industrial action”. See Power Packing Casemakers Ltd v Faust [1983] I.C.R. 292.

- 1657. i.e. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.98, 104, 105.
- 1658. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 ss.237–238.
- 1659. s.238(1), (2).
- 1660. s.238(2)(a).
- 1661. s.238(2)(b).
- 1662. s.238(3)(a).
- 1663. s.238(3)(b).
- 1664. s.237(1), subject to s.237(1A) which lifts that exclusion in relation to certain specified grounds of dismissal (or selection for redundancy).
- 1665. i.e. in the case referred to in s.238(2)(b) and which fall outside the exclusion relating to unofficial industrial action which is imposed by s.237(1).
- 1666. s.239(3).
- 1667. i.e. in the cases referred to in s.238(2)(a) and (b).
- 1668. See above, para.40-227.
- 1669. s.16 and Sch.5.
- 1670. s.238A. The provisions of s.238A of the 1992 Act concerning “protected industrial action” have been amended by the Employment Relations Act 2004. Sections 27–28 of the 2004 Act, which, by amending s.238A and adding a new s.238B to the 1992 Act, increase the protections against the dismissal of employees taking official lawfully organised industrial action by extending the “protected period” from 8 to 12 weeks, by exempting days of lock-out from the 12-week protected period, and also defining more closely the actions which employers and unions should undertake by way of recourse to conciliation and mediation with regard to “protected industrial action”. These provisions were brought into effect on April 6, 2005.
- 1671. As defined by s.139(1), (2) of Employment Rights Act 1996, see below, para.40-251, a definition adopted for the purposes of the unfair dismissal legislation by s.235(3) of Employment Rights Act 1996. See Elliott v University Computing Co (Great Britain) Ltd [1977] I.C.R. 147; Higgs & Hill Ltd v Singh [1977] I.C.R. 193; Robinson v British Island Airways Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 304.
- 1672. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98(2)—see above, para.40-223.
- 1673. See below, paras 40-248 et seq.
- 1674. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.105, Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.153.
- 1675. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.105(1)–(3), (7); see below, paras 40-230—40-237.
- 1676. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.153, referring to s.152(1).
- 1677. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.98(4)–(6); see, as to the early and leading authorities, Axe v British Domestic Appliances Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 133; Clarkson International Tools Ltd v Short [1973] I.C.R. 191; Rigby v British Steel Corp [1973] I.C.R. 160; Vokes Ltd v Bear [1974] I.C.R. 1; Bessenden Properties Ltd v Corness [1977] I.C.R. 821 (Note); Cruikshank v Hobbs [1977] I.C.R. 725; Bristol Channel Ship Repairers Ltd v O’Keefe [1978] I.C.R. 691; Vickers Ltd v Smith [1977] I.R.L.R. 11; Moon v Homeworthy Furniture (Northern) Ltd [1977] I.C.R. 117; Kelly v

Upholstery & Cabinet Works (Amesbury) Ltd [1977] I.R.L.R. 91; North East Midlands Co-operative Society Ltd v Allen [1977] I.R.L.R. 212; Forman Construction v Kelly [1977] I.R.L.R. 468; Cox v Wildt Mellor Bromley Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 736; Thomas & Betts Manufacturing Co Ltd v Harding [1978] I.R.L.R. 213; Jowett v Earl of Bradford (No.2) [1978] I.C.R. 431; NC Watling & Co Ltd v Richardson [1978] I.C.R. 1049; Clyde Pipeworks Ltd v Foster [1978] I.R.L.R. 313; Williams v Compair Maxam Ltd [1982] I.C.R. 156; Polkey v Dayton Services Ltd [1988] I.C.R. 142.

- 1678. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.163(2) expressly excluded from unfair dismissal issues by s.7(6) of Industrial Tribunals Act 1996.
- 1679. Midland Foot Comfort Centre Ltd v Moppett [1973] I.C.R. 220.
- 1680. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.122.
- 1681. Compare above, para.40-176.
- 1682. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.108(3) and s.109(2).
- 1683. See above, para.40-215.
- 1684. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.100.
- 1685. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.104(4). See, for the scope of this provision, Menell v Newell and Wright Transport Contractors Ltd [1997] I.C.R. 1039.
- 1686. See above, para.40-154.
- 1687. See Employment Rights Act 1996 s.103A as inserted by s.5 of the 1998 Act.
- 1688. See Employment Rights Act 1996 s.101, and, for the provisions identifying protected and opted-out shop and betting workers, Employment Rights Act 1996 s.41. For the effect of opting-out notices upon contracts of employment, see s.42.
- 1689. See above, para.40-146.
- 1690. s.9 and Sch.4 Pt III.
- 1691. Maternity and Parental Leave Etc Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/3312) reg.20.
- 1692. Paternity and Adoption Leave Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/2788) reg.29.
- 1693. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.104C (as inserted by s.47(1), (4) of the Employment Act 2002) (though no corresponding extension appears to have been made to s.105 with regard to selection for redundancy).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 40 - Employment ¹
Section 8. - Unfair and Discriminatory Dismissal
(a) - Unfair Dismissal
(iv) - Remedies

Introduction

40-236

⚠ Under the unfair dismissal provisions of the Industrial Relations Act 1971 and of the Trade Union and Labour Relations Act 1974, the normal remedy for unfair dismissal tended to be the award of compensation by an industrial tribunal based upon the pecuniary loss sustained by the employee. ¹⁶⁹⁴ The tribunals were also empowered to recommend reinstatement or re-engagement where they judged it practicable for the employer to do so. ¹⁶⁹⁵ The provisions of the Trade Union and Labour Relations Act 1974 concerning remedies for unfair dismissal were replaced by a new set of provisions in the Employment Protection Act 1975. ¹⁶⁹⁶ Under the new provisions, as re-enacted in the 1978 Act, ¹⁶⁹⁷ and then in the 1996 Act, employment tribunals are empowered to order reinstatement or re-engagement and have extensive ancillary powers in relation to those orders. ¹⁶⁹⁸ ⚠ The remedy of compensation is to consist of a basic award as well as a compensation award. ¹⁶⁹⁹ Finally, the tribunals are given extensive powers of interim relief in cases concerning trade union membership, non-membership or activity and in certain cases concerning health and safety. ¹⁷⁰⁰

Orders for reinstatement

40-237

⚠ Where an employment tribunal upholds a complaint of unfair dismissal, it must explain to the complainant what orders of reinstatement or re-engagement it can make and must ask the complainant whether he or she wishes for such an order. ¹⁷⁰¹ An order may be made if (but only if) the complainant expresses that wish, ¹⁷⁰² and may within the discretion of the tribunal be either for reinstatement or re-engagement. ¹⁷⁰³ In exercising that discretion, the tribunal must first consider reinstatement, ¹⁷⁰⁴ taking into account the issues of whether the complainant wishes for reinstatement, ¹⁷⁰⁵ whether compliance would be practicable for the employer ¹⁷⁰⁶ and whether an order for reinstatement would be just in view of the employee's contribution to causing the dismissal. ¹⁷⁰⁷ In considering the issue of practicability of compliance, the tribunal must exclude the difficulty caused by the engagement of a permanent replacement for the dismissed employee unless the employer shows that this was the only way he or she could arrange for the work to be done, or that he or she engaged the replacement after the lapse of a reasonable period without having heard from the dismissed employee that he or she wished to be reinstated or re-engaged and that a permanent replacement had become the only reasonable alternative. ¹⁷⁰⁸ The reinstatement order is an order to treat the complainant in all respects as if he or she had not been dismissed ¹⁷⁰⁹ ⚠; the order must specify any amount payable by the employer for benefits (including remuneration) the employee would have received in the interim period, ¹⁷¹⁰ and any rights and privileges, including seniority and pension rights, to be restored to the employee, ¹⁷¹¹ and the date by which the order must be complied with. ¹⁷¹² The order must also require the employee to be treated as if he or she had benefited from an improvement in his or her terms and conditions of employment which he or she would have enjoyed if he or she had not been dismissed. ¹⁷¹³ This will certainly include pay awards occurring between dismissal and reinstatement; it is a matter of interpretation whether it includes the results of a promotion which would have occurred.

Orders for re-engagement

40-238

Where an employment tribunal, having followed the procedure described in the previous paragraph, decides not to make an order for reinstatement, it must consider whether to make an order for re-engagement and on what terms. ¹⁷¹⁴ It must take into account any wish of the complainant as to the nature of the order, ¹⁷¹⁵ whether compliance is practicable for the employer or a successor or associated employer, ¹⁷¹⁶ and whether an order would be just, and if so on what terms, in view of any contribution by the complainant to causing the dismissal. ¹⁷¹⁷ The order for re-engagement is an order for the complainant to be engaged by the employer, or by a successor or by an associated employer in some suitable employment. ¹⁷¹⁸ The order may be on such terms as the tribunal decides ¹⁷¹⁹ provided that the re-engagement must be on terms which are, so far as is reasonable practicable, as favourable as an order for reinstatement. ¹⁷²⁰ The order must specify the identity of the employer, ¹⁷²¹ the nature of and remuneration for the employment, ¹⁷²² the amount payable in respect of benefits, including arrears of pay, lost in the interim period, ¹⁷²³ and any seniority or pension rights to be restored to the employee. ¹⁷²⁴ The tribunals are thus given a very flexible power to achieve the effects of reinstatement in a case where reinstatement is not itself possible or appropriate.

Enforcement of orders for reinstatement or re-engagement

40-239

If an order is made for reinstatement or re-engagement and the employee is reinstated or re-engaged, but the terms of the order are not fully complied with, an employment tribunal must make an award of compensation for the loss sustained by the employee in consequence of the failure to comply with the order. ¹⁷²⁵ If there is no reinstatement or re-engagement in compliance with the order, the tribunal must make an ordinary award of compensation for unfair dismissal. ¹⁷²⁶ They may also be under a duty to make an additional award (for the failure to comply with the order). ¹⁷²⁷ This award must be between 26 and 52 weeks' pay. ¹⁷²⁸ The additional award (normal or higher as the case may be) must be made unless the employer satisfies the tribunal that it was not practicable to comply with the order. ¹⁷²⁹ This would seem to enable the employer to show that it has not turned out to be practicable to comply, rather than enabling him or her to reopen the question of whether the order should have been made in the first place. If the complainant himself or herself unreasonably prevents compliance with an order, his or her award of compensation will be reduced by reference to this failure to mitigate his or her loss by allowing the order to be complied with. ¹⁷³⁰ In general, then, non-compliance with orders for reinstatement or re-engagement attracts the remedy of compensation which may be enhanced by way of penalty for non-compliance; there is, however, no enforcement by way of general sanctions for contempt of court.

Compensation for unfair dismissal; the basic award

40-240

Under the Employment Rights Act 1996, an award of compensation for unfair dismissal must be made in any case where a complaint of unfair dismissal is upheld but no order for reinstatement or re-engagement is made. ¹⁷³¹ The compensation must consist of a basic award and a compensatory award. ¹⁷³² The basic award provides a fixed element of compensation for the employee's loss of his accrued rights and protection. It is initially calculated in virtually the same way as a statutory redundancy payment, ¹⁷³³ that is to say, it allows one and a half weeks' pay for each year of continuous employment over the age of 41, one week's pay for each such year between 22 and 40 and half a week's pay for each such year up to the age of 22. ¹⁷³⁴ The calculation is limited to the last

20 years of employment¹⁷³⁵ and to a week's pay not exceeding a stated limit.¹⁷³⁶ The basic award is limited to two weeks' pay in certain redundancy situations where no statutory redundancy payment is payable.¹⁷³⁷ There is also provision for the reduction of the basic award,¹⁷³⁸ whether or by reference to an unreasonable refusal by the employee to accept an offer of reinstatement by the employer¹⁷³⁹, or by reference to any conduct of the employee before the dismissal making it just and equitable to do so.¹⁷⁴⁰

Compensation for unfair dismissal; the compensatory award

40-241

Under the Employment Rights Act 1996, compensation for unfair dismissal must include, in addition to the basic award,¹⁷⁴¹ a compensatory award¹⁷⁴² assessed by reference to the loss sustained by the employee in consequence of the dismissal¹⁷⁴³ and attributable to action taken by the employer.¹⁷⁴⁴ The loss is ascertained subject to the common law rule concerning the employee's duty to mitigate his or her loss.¹⁷⁴⁵ The compensatory award is a modified version of the awards of compensation for unfair dismissal made under the earlier legislation,¹⁷⁴⁶ modified by limiting the loss attributable to loss of statutory redundancy rights to the amount by which an immediate or subsequent redundancy payment might have exceeded the basic award¹⁷⁴⁷; and on the other hand by reducing the compensation award by the amount by which a redundancy payment made by the employer in fact exceeds the basic award.¹⁷⁴⁸ These modifications are designed to ensure that the compensatory award will deal only with the marginal differences between the basic award and the employee's actual or potential redundancy rights or redundancy payments received. This suggests that the cases concerning the assessment of compensation under the old law of remedies for unfair dismissal¹⁷⁴⁹ are still applicable,¹⁷⁵⁰ except so far as they are concerned with the relationship between unfair dismissal compensation and redundancy rights and payments.¹⁷⁵¹ That suggests that compensatory awards will be concerned with loss of future earnings,¹⁷⁵² loss of pension rights,¹⁷⁵³ loss of rights based on continuity of service,¹⁷⁵⁴ pecuniary loss attributable to the manner of dismissal,¹⁷⁵⁵ and possibly also loss of death-in-service benefits.¹⁷⁵⁶ It is unclear how far a compensatory award is to be reduced by reference to damages for wrongful dismissal¹⁷⁵⁷ recovered at common law in respect of the same dismissal. An argument based upon the principle of collateral benefits might result in such a reduction.¹⁷⁵⁸ There was some authority for regarding the employee as having suffered no reckonable loss when the unfairness of the dismissal consisted in a procedural defect and when it is judged that the employee would still have been dismissed had the procedure been fair.¹⁷⁵⁹ However, the subsequent preference has clearly been¹⁷⁶⁰ to treat such issues as going to the reduction of compensation by reference to the contributory action of the employee, for which provision is made in relation to the compensatory¹⁷⁶¹ award. Those provisions are considered in the following paragraph. Provision was also made by s.3 of the Employment Act 2008 for the compensatory award to be reduced or increased by reference to non-compliance with a statutory code of practice concerning disciplinary and grievance procedures.¹⁷⁶² A compensatory award is normally subject to a stated upper limit,¹⁷⁶³ the limit being applied after any reduction by reference to the fault of the employee.¹⁷⁶⁴ Section 16 of the Enterprise and Regulatory Reform Act 2013 confers an additional power on employment tribunals to impose financial penalties on employers where the tribunal concludes that the employer has breached a worker's right, and that the breach has one or more aggravating factors.¹⁷⁶⁵

Reduction of compensation by reference to the contributory action of the employee

40-242

Under the Employment Rights Act 1996 it is provided that where a tribunal finds that a dismissal was to any extent caused or contributed to by any action of the complainant it shall reduce the amount of a compensatory¹⁷⁶⁶ award by such proportion as it considers just and equitable having regard to that finding. The corresponding provisions in the earlier legislation¹⁷⁶⁷ gave rise to controversy about their application, especially in cases of procedural unfairness,¹⁷⁶⁸ but this difficulty seems not to arise under the new provisions, referring as they do to any contribution by the employee to the dismissal itself (and not just to the reasons for its unfairness).¹⁷⁶⁹ The early case law suggests that this gives tribunals a very wide discretion to consider any relevant conduct on the part of the employee,¹⁷⁷⁰ and to reduce the compensation by proportions of up to 100 per cent,¹⁷⁷¹ though the assessment becomes more questionable as it comes near to 100 per cent. ¹⁷⁷²

Interim relief in cases concerned with trade union rights or health and safety

40-243

An employee who presents a complaint to an employment tribunal that he or she has been unfairly dismissed on the grounds of his membership of or taking part in the activities of an independent trade union (or his intention to join or take part) or of his or her non-membership or refusal to become or remain a member of a trade union, or in one of the statutorily defined health and safety cases, may apply to the tribunal for interim relief pending the determination of the complaint. ¹⁷⁷³ He or she must complain within seven days of the effective date of termination of employment ¹⁷⁷⁴ and must, in a claim relating to trade union membership or activity, present a supporting written certificate from an authorised official of the independent trade union concerned. ¹⁷⁷⁵ If when it hears the application for interim relief the tribunal finds it likely that the complaint will ultimately be upheld, the tribunal must make an interim order of reinstatement or re-engagement if the employer is willing for such an order and, if it is for re-engagement, the employee is also willing. ¹⁷⁷⁶ If the employer is not willing, the tribunal must make an order for the continuation of the contract of employment. ¹⁷⁷⁷ This is in effect an order continuing or reviving the contract of employment pending the hearing of the complaint, but only for the purpose of maintaining the employee's rights to remuneration and preserving his or her rights based upon the continuity of his or her employment. ¹⁷⁷⁸ It is thus not meant to require the employer to keep the employee actually at work, and is apparently not dependent for its effectiveness upon the employee's making himself or herself available for work. ¹⁷⁷⁹ An employee or employer can apply to a tribunal for a variation or revocation of an order for interim relief where there has been a change of circumstances since the order was made. ¹⁷⁸⁰ The tribunal must also make an order for compensation if the employer has failed to comply with the terms of an interim order for reinstatement or re-engagement, or of an order for the continuation of the contract of employment, and it must convert the former type of order into the latter type where the former type of order is not complied with. ¹⁷⁸¹

Procedure; time within which complaint must be made

40-244

The details of the procedure relating to complaints to employment tribunals under the unfair dismissal provisions ¹⁷⁸² are outside the scope of the present work, but attention is drawn to the provisions concerning the time within which complaint must be made. It is provided that an employment tribunal shall not consider a complaint of unfair dismissal unless it is presented before the end of the period of three months beginning with the effective date of termination or within such further period as the tribunal considers reasonable in a case where it was satisfied that it was not reasonably practicable for the complaint to be presented before the end of the period of three months. ¹⁷⁸³ A body of case law exists concerning the concept of "practicability" ¹⁷⁸⁴ but it is to be borne in mind that the initial cases were concerned with the earlier provision made under the Industrial Relations Act 1971 which took four weeks instead of three months, as the basic period of limitation. Provision was first made by the Employment Protection Act 1975 (and now found in the 1996 Act) to enable a complaint to be brought before a dismissal takes effect, once notice of dismissal has been given, ¹⁷⁸⁵ thus reversing by statute an earlier judicial ruling. ¹⁷⁸⁶

^{1.} Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

^{1694.} Trade Union and Labour Relations Act 1974 Sch.1 para.17(3)—see generally Norton Tool Co Ltd v Tewson [1972] I.C.R. 501.

- 1695. Trade Union and Labour Relations Act 1974 Sch.1 para.17(2).
- 1696. ss.71–80.
- 1697. ss.68–79.
- 1698.  Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.112–117: See now generally McBride v Scottish Police Authority [2016] UKSC 27, [2016] I.R.L.R. 633. see below, paras 40-237—40-240.
- 1699. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.118(2). Further provisions for “special awards” were repealed by the Employment Relations Act 1999 ss.33, 44 and Sch.9.
- 1700. See below, para.40-242.
- 1701. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.112(1), (2).
- 1702. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.112(3).
- 1703. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.113. As to the difference between reinstatement and re-engagement, see British Airways Plc v Valencia [2014] I.R.L.R. 683 EAT.
- 1704. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.116(1).
- 1705. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.116(1)(a).
- 1706. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.116(1)(b). See, for early authorities on the issue of practicability: Curtis v James Paterson (Darlington) Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 496; Bateman v British Leyland (UK) Ltd [1974] I.C.R. 403; Coleman v Magnet Joinery Ltd [1975] I.C.R. 46. But these decisions on the corresponding provisions of the 1974 Act may be of limited weight in the interpretation of the more recent provisions. See also Meridian Ltd v Gomersall [1977] I.C.R. 597.
- 1707. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.116(1)(c). cf. below, para.40-241—contribution to compensation.
- 1708. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.116(5), (6).
- 1709.  Employment Rights Act 1996 s.114(1). See McBride v Scottish Police Authority [2016] UKSC 27, [2016] I.R.L.R. 633.
- 1710. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.114(2)(a), subject to s.114(4) of Employment Rights Act 1996 (reduction of employer’s liability by reference to remuneration or payment in lieu of notice or ex gratia payments).
- 1711. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.114(2)(b).
- 1712. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.114(2)(c).
- 1713. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.114(3).
- 1714. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.116(2)–(4).
- 1715. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.116(3)(a).
- 1716. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.116(3)(b), subject to s.116(5) of Employment Rights Act 1996 (effect of engagement of permanent replacement).
- 1717. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.116(3)(c) (cf. below, para.40-241—contribution to the dismissal as a ground for reducing compensation).

- 1718. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.115(1).
- 1719. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.115(1).
- 1720. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.116(4) (except where the tribunal takes into account contributory fault under s.116(3)(c)).
- 1721. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.115(2)(a).
- 1722. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.115(2)(b), (c).
- 1723. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.115(2)(d) calculated according to s.115(3) of Employment Rights Act 1996.
- 1724. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.115(2)(e).
- 1725. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.117(1) and 124(3).
- 1726. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.117(3)(a)—see below, paras 40-240—40-242.
- 1727. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.117(3)(b), 117(4)(a).
- 1728. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.117(4)(b).
- 1729. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.117(3)(b) and s.117(4)(a) as qualified by s.117(7) of Employment Rights Act 1996 in the case where the employer has engaged a permanent replacement.
- 1730. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.117(8).
- 1731. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.112(4).
- 1732. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.118(1).
- 1733. See below, para.40-253.
- 1734. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.119(2). The lower age limit, which had previously applied, was, so far as it had continued to be applicable, abolished with effect from October 1, 2006 by the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations 2006 (SI 2006/1031) Sch.8 para.35. See also below, paras 40-174, 40-253. The period of continuous employment is calculated in accordance with ss.210–219 of Employment Rights Act 1996, see above, paras 40-164—40-167 applied subject to s.119(3) of Employment Rights Act 1996. The “week’s pay” is calculated in accordance with ss.220–229 of Employment Rights Act 1996. See Palmanor v Cedron [1978] I.C.R. 1008.
- 1735. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.119(3).
- 1736. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.227(1). The stated limit is periodically adjusted by statutory instrument.
- 1737. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.121.
- 1738. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.122.
- 1739. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.122(1).
- 1740. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.122(2), in order to overcome a problem of unjust enrichment commented upon by the House of Lords in Devis & Sons Ltd v Atkins [1977] I.C.R. 662, 672, 684, 685.
- 1741. See above, para.40-240.

- 1742. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.118 referring to ss.123, 124, 124A, 126, 127 of Employment Rights Act 1996.
- 1743. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.123(1) as qualified by s.123(2) of Employment Rights Act 1996. See W Devis & Sons Ltd v Atkins [1977] A.C. 931; Lifeguard Assurance Ltd v Zadrozny [1977] I.R.L.R. 56; Trend v Chiltern Hunt Ltd [1977] I.C.R. 612; Brittains Arborfield Ltd v Van Uden [1977] I.C.R. 211; DG Moncrieff (Farmers) v Macdonald [1978] I.R.L.R. 112; Help the Aged Housing Association (Scotland) Ltd v Vidler [1977] I.R.L.R. 104.
- 1744. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.123(1) as qualified by s.123(5) of Employment Rights Act 1996 (exclusion of effect of pressure on employer by the organising of industrial action).
- 1745. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.123(4). See Smith Kline & French Laboratories Ltd v Coates [1977] I.R.L.R. 220; Peara v Enderlin Ltd [1980] I.C.R. 804.
- 1746. See Trade Union and Labour Relations Act 1974 Sch.1 paras 17(3), 19.
- 1747. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.123(3).
- 1748. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.123(7).
- 1749. See above, para.40-214.
- 1750. The leading case was Norton Tool Co Ltd v Tewson [1972] I.C.R. 501. The principle in the Norton Tool case was upheld on the appeal to the House of Lords in Dunnachie v Kingston-upon-Hull City Council [2004] UKHL 36.
- 1751. A statement of the law in that particular area being found in Millington v Goodwin Ltd [1975] I.C.R. 104.
- 1752. See Donnelly v Feniger & Blackburn Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 68; York Trailer Co Ltd v Sparkes [1973] I.C.R. 518; British Olivetti Ltd v Kay [1975] I.R.L.R. 30; Shortland v Chantrill [1975] I.R.L.R. 208; see also on the effect of payment in lieu of notice: Cawthorn & Sinclair Ltd v Hedger [1974] I.C.R. 146; Everwear Candlewick Ltd v Isaac [1974] I.C.R. 525; Mullett v Brush Electrical Machines Ltd [1977] I.C.R. 829; Youngs of Gosport Ltd v Kendall [1977] I.C.R. 907; Green v J Waterhouse & Sons Ltd [1977] I.C.R. 759; Tidman v Aveling Marshall Ltd [1977] I.C.R. 506; Brownson v Hire Service Shops Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 517; Palmanor Ltd v Cedron [1978] I.C.R. 1008. Compare also GAB Robins (UK) Ltd v Triggs [2008] EWCA Civ 17, [2008] I.R.L.R. 317, deciding that this did not include loss of earnings attributable to incapacity brought about by repudiatory conduct on the part of the employer amounting to, and treated by the employee as, constructive dismissal.
- 1753. See Copson v Eversure Accessories Ltd [1974] I.C.R. 636; Smith Kline & French Laboratories Ltd v Coates [1977] I.R.L.R. 220; Hill v Sabco Houseware (UK) Ltd [1977] I.C.R. 888; Powermatic Ltd v Bull [1977] I.C.R. 469; Sweetlove v Redbridge AHA [1979] I.C.R. 477; Willment Bros v Oliver [1979] I.C.R. 378; Sturdy Finance v Bardsley [1979] I.C.R. 249; Manning v Wale (Export) Ltd [1979] I.C.R. 433; and Griffin v Plymouth Hospital NHS Trust [2014] EWCA Civ, [2014] I.R.L.R. 962.
- 1754. See Brook Bros Ltd v Preece [1974] I.C.R. 231; Hilti (Great Britain) Ltd v Windridge [1974] I.C.R. 352. These matters might, however, be regarded as subsumed into the basic award of compensation.
- 1755. See Vaughan v Weighpack Ltd [1974] I.C.R. 525.
- 1756. See Fox v British Airways Plc [2013] EWCA Civ 972, [2013] I.C.R. 1257.
- 1757. See above, paras 40-200—40-205.
- 1758. cf. Stocks v Magna Merchants Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 530 (common law)—see above, para.40-205.

Contrast Basnett v J & A Jackson Ltd [1976] I.C.R. 63.

- 1759. Earl v Slater Wheeler (Airlyne) Ltd [1972] I.C.R. 508; British United Shoe Machines Co Ltd v Clarke [1978] I.C.R. 70; Barley v Amey Roadstone Corp (No.2) [1978] I.C.R. 190.
- 1760. Compare, for instance, Smyth v Autocar Transporters Ltd [1975] I.C.R. 180 and see generally, below, para.40-241.
- 1761. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.123(6).
- 1762. Amending s.124A of the Employment Rights Act 1996; see below, para.40-264.
- 1763. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.124(1), subject to s.124(1A), (3)–(4), and to s.124A as inserted by s.39 of the Employment Act 2002, and as varied by statutory instrument from time to time.
- 1764. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.124(5).
- 1765. By inserting a new s.12A into the Employment Tribunals Act 1996.
- 1766. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.123(6).
- 1767. Trade Union and Labour Relations Act 1974 Sch.1 para.19(3), reproducing Industrial Relations Act 1971 s.116(3).
- 1768. See, for instance, Springbank Sand & Gravel Co Ltd v Craig [1974] I.C.R. 7; Maris v Rotherham Corp [1974] I.C.R. 435.
- 1769. The earlier legislation, see above, n.1759, caused the controversy concerned by requiring the employee's contribution to be to "the matters to which the complaint relates". See Nudds v W & J B Eastwood Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 171.
- 1770. Shortland v Chantrill [1975] I.R.L.R. 208; Jamieson v Aberdeen CC [1975] I.R.L.R. 348 Ct of Session; George Wimpey & Co Ltd v Cooper [1977] I.R.L.R. 205; Garner v Grange Furnishing Ltd [1977] I.R.L.R. 206; Kraft Foods Ltd v Fox [1978] I.C.R. 311; Hazells Offset Ltd v Lockett [1977] I.R.L.R. 430; Ladbroke Racing Ltd v Mason [1978] I.C.R. 49; DG Moncrieff (Farmers) v Macdonald [1978] I.R.L.R. 112; Brown's Cycles Ltd v Brindley [1978] I.C.R. 467; Moncur v International Paint Co Ltd [1978] I.R.L.R. 223. Compare now also Cumbria CC v Bates [2014] UKEAT 0039/13/JOJ (post-termination conduct).
- 1771. Smyth v Autocar Transporters Ltd [1975] I.C.R. 180. See also Courtney v Babcock & Wilcox (Operations) Ltd [1977] I.R.L.R. 30; contra, Kemp v Shipton Automation Ltd [1976] I.R.L.R. 305.
- 1772. Cooper v British Steel Corp [1975] I.C.R. 454; and Trend v Chiltern Hunt Ltd [1977] I.C.R. 612.
- 1773. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.161; Employment Rights Act 1996 s.128(1). See Barley v Amey Roadstone Co Ltd (No.2) [1978] I.C.R. 190.
- 1774. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.161(2); Employment Rights Act 1996 s.128(2). As to the "effective date of termination of employment", see above, paras 40-220—40-221.
- 1775. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.161(3). See Stone v Charrington & Co Ltd [1977] I.C.R. 248.
- 1776. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.163(4)–(6); Employment Rights Act 1996 s.129(5)–(7).
- 1777. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.163(6); Employment Rights Act 1996 s.129(9).

- 1778. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.164; Employment Rights Act 1996 s.130.
- 1779. This appears to be the effect of s.164(2). Employment Rights Act 1996 s.130(2).
- 1780. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.165; Employment Rights Act 1996 s.131.
- 1781. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.166; Employment Rights Act 1996 s.132.
- 1782. The procedural rules are contained in ss.6–15 of Employment Tribunals Act 1996 (As renamed by the Employment Rights (Dispute Resolution) Act 1998) and in the Employment Tribunals (Constitution and Rules of Procedure) Regulations as from time-to-time revised and amended.
- 1783. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.111(2).
- 1784. See among the earlier cases, Hammond v Haigh Castle & Co Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 148; Singh v Post Office [1973] I.C.R. 437; Westward Circuits Ltd v Read [1973] I.C.R. 301; Leigh v James Arnold Ltd [1973] I.T.R. 364; Dedman v British Building Appliances Ltd [1974] I.C.R. 53; Porter v Bandridge Ltd [1974] I.C.R. 943; Walls Meat Co Ltd v Khan [1979] I.C.R. 52; Riley v Tesco Stores Ltd [1980] I.C.R. 323. Palmer v Southend-on-Sea BC [1984] 1 All E.R. 945.
- 1785. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.111(3), (4).
- 1786. Penrose v Fairey Surveys Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 26.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 40 - Employment ¹
Section 8. - Unfair and Discriminatory Dismissal
(b) - Discriminatory and Victimising Dismissals

Introduction

40-245

Apart from the unfair dismissals legislation, there have been various other sets of legislative provisions dealing with particular kinds of discriminatory and victimising dismissals, major instances of which have been: (1) the Sex Discrimination Acts 1975 and 1986; (2) the Race Relations Act 1976; (3) the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974; (4) the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; (5) the Employment Equality (Religion or Belief) Regulations, the Employment Equality (Sexual Orientation) Regulations 2003, and the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations 2006. ¹⁷⁸⁷ Most of these provisions have been consolidated into the Equality Act 2010; the provisions in question are briefly summarised in the ensuing paragraphs.

Dismissals unlawful under the Equality Act 2010

40-246

Under the relevant provisions of the Equality Act 2010, the dismissal of an employee by an employer is unlawful if it is discriminatory ¹⁷⁸⁸ in the defined sense that it involves direct ¹⁷⁸⁹ or indirect ¹⁷⁹⁰ discrimination by reference to one or a combination of ¹⁷⁹¹ a specified set of “protected characteristics” ¹⁷⁹² consisting of age, ¹⁷⁹³ disability, ¹⁷⁹⁴ gender reassignment, ¹⁷⁹⁵ marriage or civil partnership, ¹⁷⁹⁶ pregnancy and maternity, ¹⁷⁹⁷ race, ¹⁷⁹⁸ religion or belief, ¹⁷⁹⁹ sex, ¹⁸⁰⁰ and sexual orientation. ¹⁸⁰¹ Under further provisions of the same Act, the dismissal of an employee by an employer is also unlawful if it constitutes victimisation ¹⁸⁰² in the defined sense that it takes place because the employee does a “protected act”, or because the employer believes that the employee has done or may do such an act, ¹⁸⁰³ defined as consisting of, inter alia, the bringing of proceedings under the Act or the taking of steps in connection with such proceedings, or otherwise the alleging of contravention of the Act. ¹⁸⁰⁴ A dismissal ¹⁸⁰⁵ which is unlawful under the provisions of the Act may be the subject of a complaint to an employment tribunal ¹⁸⁰⁶ which, if it upholds the complaint, may make an order declaring the rights of the parties, ¹⁸⁰⁷ an order for the payment of compensation, ¹⁸⁰⁸ formerly but no longer limited in the same way as compensation for unfair dismissal, or a recommendation that a particular course of action be taken by the respondent, ¹⁸⁰⁹ presumably including a recommendation for reinstatement or re-engagement. ¹⁸¹⁰ There are provisions to prevent double compensation under this Act and the unfair dismissal provisions in respect of the same dismissal. ¹⁸¹¹ The definition of discrimination rendered unlawful by this Act, and the scope of and exceptions to its employment provisions have been considered in earlier paragraphs ¹⁸¹² in relation to unlawful discrimination occurring during the period of employment.

Dismissals affected by the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974

40-247

It is provided by the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 ¹⁸¹³ that a conviction which has become spent, ¹⁸¹⁴ or any circumstances ancillary thereto, ¹⁸¹⁵ or any failure to disclose a spent conviction or any such circumstances shall not be a proper ground for dismissing a person from any office, profession, occupation or employment. ¹⁸¹⁶ There is no machinery provided for the enforcement of that provision, so it can have effect only as a qualification upon rights of summary dismissal arising at common law ¹⁸¹⁷ or as a factor tending to show the unfairness of a dismissal. ¹⁸¹⁸

¹. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

¹⁷⁸⁷. Respectively SI 2003/1660, SI 2003/1661 and SI 2006/1031, all of which were enacted in implementation of Directive 2000/78/EC.

¹⁷⁸⁸. s.39(2)(c).

¹⁷⁸⁹. s.13.

¹⁷⁹⁰. s.19.

¹⁷⁹¹. s.14.

¹⁷⁹². s.4.

¹⁷⁹³. s.5; as to which it should specially be noted that it is provided that dismissal because of age is not discriminatory if the employer shows that it is a proportionate means of achieving a legitimate aim: s.13(2).

¹⁷⁹⁴. s.6.

¹⁷⁹⁵. ss.7, 16.

¹⁷⁹⁶. s.8.

¹⁷⁹⁷. s.18.

¹⁷⁹⁸. s.9.

¹⁷⁹⁹. s.10.

¹⁸⁰⁰. s.11.

¹⁸⁰¹. s.12.

¹⁸⁰². s.39(4)(c) referring to s.27.

¹⁸⁰³. s.27(1).

¹⁸⁰⁴. s.27(2)–(5).

¹⁸⁰⁵. The term “dismissal” is not defined in the Act; compare the case law definition of that term under the unfair dismissal provisions—see above, paras 40-218—40-219.

¹⁸⁰⁶. s.120.

¹⁸⁰⁷. s.124(2)(a).

- 1808. s.124(2)(b).
- 1809. s.124(2)(c).
- 1810. Compare above, paras 40-237—40-238.
- 1811. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.126. See above, para.40-240.
- 1812. Above, paras 40-128—40-134.
- 1813. Which takes effect subject to the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 (Exceptions) Order 1975 (SI 1975/1023).
- 1814. Defined by s.1 of the Act. Section 56 of the Data Protection Act 1998 makes it a criminal offence to require job applicants or existing employees to make subject access requests in lieu of providing a normal criminal record check, which would not disclose spent convictions.
- 1815. Defined by s.4(5).
- 1816. s.4(3)(b).
- 1817. See above, paras 40-182 et seq.
- 1818. See above, paras 40-218 et seq. For a case where a conviction is old but not spent, see Torr v British Railways Board [1977] I.C.R. 785.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 40 - Employment ¹
Section 9. - Redundancy Payments and Procedure
(a) - Redundancy Payments ¹⁸¹⁹

Introduction

40-248

Part XI of the Employment Rights Act 1996, requires ¹⁸²⁰ employers to make “redundancy payments” where “an employee who has been continuously employed for the requisite period” (viz two years ¹⁸²¹) “(a) is dismissed by his employer by reason of redundancy, or (b) is laid off or kept on short-time” in specified circumstances for four or more consecutive weeks, or for a series of six or more weeks within a period of 13 weeks. ¹⁸²² The provisions of the Act are detailed, and the following is merely an outline of the main principles of the Act. ¹⁸²³ There is, moreover, some significant recent case-law concerning contractual redundancy pay arrangements, in particular addressing the question of whether and when “custom and practice” might give rise to specific contractual obligations. ¹⁸²⁴

Dismissal

40-249

The statutory definition of dismissal for the purposes of the redundancy payments legislation is basically the same as that applying for the purposes of the unfair dismissal legislation, considered in an earlier paragraph. ¹⁸²⁵ There are, however, some additional elements which are special to this legislation. There are, then, the same basic elements to the definition:

- (1)
 termination of the contract by the employer with or without notice ¹⁸²⁶;
- (2)
 expiry of a limited term contract without renewal ¹⁸²⁷;
- (3)
 termination by the employee in circumstances where the employer’s conduct entitles him or her to terminate without notice ¹⁸²⁸; or
- (4)
 employee giving notice to quit anticipating the expiry of a notice already given by the employer. ¹⁸²⁹

The case law considered in an earlier paragraph is applicable to these basic elements in the definition. ¹⁸³⁰

40-250

There are certain modifications to and extensions of this definition which are particular to the redundancy payments legislation:

(1)

If an employee is re-engaged in pursuance of an offer (which need not be in writing) made by the employer before the ending of the previous employment, and if the re-engagement takes effect within four weeks after the ending of the previous employment, the employee is, subject to the rule concerning trial periods, to be regarded as not having been dismissed. ¹⁸³¹ The rule concerning trial periods is that if the re-engagement is upon different terms, the employee may try the new employment for up to four weeks without foregoing his or her right to rely upon the ending of the previous employment as a dismissal. ¹⁸³² The trial period may alternatively be for such longer period as is agreed between the parties, before the new employment commences, for the purpose of retraining the employee. ¹⁸³³

(2)

It is provided that where an employee terminates his or her contract of employment without notice, being entitled to do so by reason of a lockout by his employer, the employee's action will not constitute a constructive dismissal on the part of the employer. ¹⁸³⁴ By an accident of drafting, it appears that the employee's action will constitute constructive dismissal if accompanied by notice. ¹⁸³⁵

(3)

Under s.136 of the 1996 Act, where in accordance with any enactment or rule of law any act on the part of an employer or any event affecting an employer (including his death) ¹⁸³⁶ operates to terminate a contract of employment, that act or event is to be treated as a termination of the contract by the employer, ¹⁸³⁷ and hence as a dismissal subject to the rules about re-engagement, and trial periods. ¹⁸³⁸ This provision would apparently apply, for instance, to frustration of the contract of employment by an event affecting the employer. ¹⁸³⁹

Redundancy

40-251

The concept of redundancy is statutorily defined; by s.139(1) of the 1996 Act a dismissal is by reason of redundancy if the dismissal is wholly or mainly attributable to:

(a)

the cessation or intended cessation of the business for which the employee was employed, either generally or in the place where the employee was so employed; or to the diminution or expected diminution of the requirements of that business for employees to carry out work of a particular kind either generally or in the place where the employee was employed.

(b)

The definition has been held to be exhaustive ¹⁸⁴⁰ (although it is not expressed to be exhaustive by the statute itself). The attributability of the dismissal to the statutory grounds for redundancy has been held to be a subjective matter, in the sense that there is no redundancy if the employer genuinely and without misdirecting himself or herself believes in the existence of a ground for dismissal falling outside the statutory definition of redundancy and genuinely acts upon that ground believed to be present. ¹⁸⁴¹ This question of attributability is in any case decided in the context of a presumption of redundancy which arises under and for the purposes of the redundancy payment legislation once there has been shown to be a dismissal. ¹⁸⁴² For the purposes of the statutory definition, the "place where the employee was employed" has been held to include the area within which he or she could be required to work under his contract of employment ¹⁸⁴³; but the courts will not imply an obligation of geographical mobility on the part of the employee unless there is some particular evidence of an implied term to that effect. ¹⁸⁴⁴ The second limb of the statutory definition, by referring to the need for work of a particular kind, defined redundancy in terms of the job itself rather than the employee himself or herself. Hence a marginal shift in the nature of the employer's requirements may create a situation in which there is no redundancy although the employee remains available to continue his or her work as originally defined. ¹⁸⁴⁵ Moreover it has been held that the employer may seek to impose variations in incidental terms and conditions of employment to reduce his labour costs, without thereby creating a redundancy in relation to an employee who is unwilling to accept such variations. ¹⁸⁴⁶ There is also a major statutory qualification upon the concept of redundancy in that an employee is not entitled to a redundancy payment if he unreasonably refuses an offer of renewal of contract or re-engagement which would have taken effect within four weeks of his or her dismissal and was an offer of the same employment as he previously had or of suitable employment in relation to him or her. ¹⁸⁴⁷ The same rule applies where the employee unreasonably terminates his or her employment during a trial period on new terms. ¹⁸⁴⁸ Decided cases give some slight assistance in applying this concept of unreasonable refusal of suitable employment. ¹⁸⁴⁹

Lay-off and short-time

40-252

If an employer lays an employee off work or places him or her on short-time in breach of his or her contract, ¹⁸⁵⁰ that is likely to constitute a dismissal for the purposes of the redundancy payments legislation, ¹⁸⁵¹ or to entitle the employee to terminate his employment and rely on the transaction as a constructive dismissal. ¹⁸⁵² However, special provision was thought necessary to prevent employers from avoiding liability for redundancy payments by repeated or prolonged exercise of rights to lay employees off work or put them on short-time. It is therefore provided that an employee who is laid off or kept on short-time to the specified extent and who complies with the statutory procedure is entitled to a redundancy payment. ¹⁸⁵³ The specified extent is four consecutive weeks or six weeks falling within a 13-week period. ¹⁸⁵⁴ An employee is laid off when he or she gets no pay of any kind from his employer for the week concerned because, although he or she is available for work, there is none for him or her to do. ¹⁸⁵⁵ A week counts as a week of short-time if, because of a shortage of work, the employee gets less than half a week's pay for that week. ¹⁸⁵⁶ The statutory procedure consists in the employee first serving on his or her employer a written notice of intention to claim a redundancy payment because of a lay-off or short-time. ¹⁸⁵⁷ The employer has the opportunity to contest liability by serving a written counter-notice asserting that there is a reasonable prospect of resumption of normal working. ¹⁸⁵⁸ The employee must follow up his or her notice of intention to claim by a notice to terminate his or her employment within a time limit which varies according to whether the employer has served a counter-notice or not. ¹⁸⁵⁹ This whole procedure is elaborate and not frequently invoked in practice.

Redundancy payments

40-253

Statutory redundancy payments are calculated according to the length of the employee's period of continuous employment. ¹⁸⁶⁰ There is a two years' minimum qualifying period of service, ¹⁸⁶¹ and the payments are calculated according to the following scale:

for each year of employment at age 41 or over, one-and-a-half weeks' pay; for each year of employment at age 22 or over but under 41, one week's pay; for each year of employment at under 22, half a week's pay. ¹⁸⁶²

Up to 20 years' past service may be counted for this purpose. ¹⁸⁶³

40-254

The period of continuous employment is basically ¹⁸⁶⁴ assessed in accordance with the provisions of the contracts of employment legislation, which have been considered in an earlier paragraph. ¹⁸⁶⁵ There are certain provisions which modify that method of assessment for the purposes of the redundancy payments legislation. Periods of employment abroad for which no employer's social security contributions were payable do not count, but do not break the continuity of employment. ¹⁸⁶⁶ A period of employment does not count in respect of which a redundancy payment was made to an employee who was later re-engaged, or whose contract of employment was renewed, by his or her employer or his or her employer's successor where a change of ownership of the business has occurred; moreover, continuity of employment is in such cases broken by the making of the earlier redundancy payment. ¹⁸⁶⁷ The other statutory concepts used in the calculation of redundancy payments, namely those of the "week's pay" and "normal working hours" are considered in the two following paragraphs.

The week's pay

40-255

The statutory week's pay which forms the basis of the calculation to a redundancy payment ¹⁸⁶⁸ is assessed in accordance with ss.220–229 of the 1996 Act. Under those provisions the calculation varies according to whether the employee has normal working hours. ¹⁸⁶⁹ If he or she does, and his or her pay does not vary within those hours with the amount of work done, his or her week's pay means his or her earnings for his or her normal weekly working hours. ¹⁸⁷⁰ If the employee has normal working hours but his or her pay varies within those with the amount of work done (as where he or she is paid by piece rates or commission ¹⁸⁷¹) his or her week's pay means the pay for his or her normal working hours at the average hourly rate ¹⁸⁷² prevailing during the last 12 weeks of employment. ¹⁸⁷³ If the employee has no normal working hours, his or her week's pay means his or her average weekly pay during the last 12 weeks of employment. ¹⁸⁷⁴ There is a limit, which is varied from time-to-time, upon the amount of the week's pay which can be taken into account for the purpose of calculating a redundancy payment. ¹⁸⁷⁵

Normal working hours

40-256

The calculation of the statutory week's pay, considered in the previous paragraph, depends upon whether the employee has normal working hours and, if so, what those hours are.¹⁸⁷⁶ The question of whether an employee has a pattern of normal working hours is partly¹⁸⁷⁷ determined by s.234 of the Employment Rights Act 1996¹⁸⁷⁸ which provides that an employee is deemed to have normal working hours where he or she is entitled to overtime pay when employed for more than a fixed number of hours in a week or other period.¹⁸⁷⁹ In such a case the basic rule is that the fixed number of hours shall be the normal working hours.¹⁸⁸⁰ If, however, there is a minimum working week which exceeds the number of hours without overtime, the minimum working week shall be the normal working hours.¹⁸⁸¹ This formula is intended to exclude voluntary overtime while including hours which, although paid at premium rates, are in fact part of the obligatory working week. The effect of this formula as judicially interpreted is that overtime working will count towards the normal working week if, but only if, it is obligatory upon the employers to provide it as well as upon the employees to work it.¹⁸⁸² The decided cases indicate a reluctance to regard overtime working as contractually obligatory upon the employee.¹⁸⁸³

Exclusions from the Act

40-257

This part of the 1996 Act applies to all¹⁸⁸⁴ employees¹⁸⁸⁵ who are not specifically excluded. But in many situations no claim to a statutory redundancy payment arises¹⁸⁸⁶: if the contract of employment was terminated by reason of redundancy where the employer was "entitled to terminate [it] without notice by reason of the employee's conduct"¹⁸⁸⁷; or if a collective agreement has been recognised by the Secretary of State for Employment as the basis of an order excluding the statutory provisions.¹⁸⁸⁸ Other categories excluded from the operation of the Act include: certain employees on fishing vessels,¹⁸⁸⁹ and public officers and civil servants.¹⁸⁹⁰ There was formerly provision for waiver of the statutory right in relation to the expiry of certain fixed-term contracts, but that has since been abolished.¹⁸⁹¹

Settlement of disputes: time within which claims must be made

40-258

Any question arising under the redundancy payments legislation as to the right of an employee to a redundancy payment, or as to the amount of a redundancy payment, is to be referred to and determined by an employment tribunal.¹⁸⁹² The description of the procedure relating to such applications is outside the scope of the present work. Suffice it to deal here with the time within which claims must be made. An employee is not entitled to a redundancy payment unless within six months of the ending of his or her employment¹⁸⁹³ the payment has been agreed and paid or the employee has claimed the payment by notice in writing to the employer or has referred a redundancy payments issue to an employment tribunal or presented a complaint of unfair dismissal to an employment tribunal.¹⁸⁹⁴ However, an employment tribunal may waive the time limits where the employee claims the payment or presents an issue or complaint to an employment tribunal within the following six months and where the employment tribunal thinks it just and equitable that the employee should receive a redundancy payment.¹⁸⁹⁵

¹. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

¹⁸¹⁹. See, generally, Grunfeld, The Law and Practice of Redundancy, 3rd edn (1989); Bourn, The Law of Redundancy (1983).

- 1820. The Act prevails over any provisions in a contract which are inconsistent with it: s.203 of Employment Rights Act 1996.
- 1821. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.155. On the meaning of “continuous employment” see below, para.40-254, and above, para.40-165. The requirement of “continuous employment” formerly excluded part-time employment but no longer does so by reason of SI 1995/31. See above, para.40-165.
- 1822. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.148–152.
- 1823. The redundancy payments’ legislation formerly made provision for rebates to employers from a Redundancy Fund, but that system of rebates was abolished by the Employment Act 1989.
- 1824. Shumba v Park Cakes Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 974, [2013] I.R.L.R. 800; Allen v TRW Systems Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1388; Peacock Stores v Peregrine [2014] UKEAT 0315/13/SM.
- 1825. See above, para.40-175.
- 1826. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.136(1)(a). See Burton Group Ltd v Smith [1977] I.R.L.R. 351 (under receiving notice); Pambakian v Brentford Nylons Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 665 (hiving-down agreement). Note here and generally the application of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations, as amended by the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (Amendment) Regulations 1987 (SI 1987/442).
- 1827. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.136(1)(b). See, for the definition of the “limited-term contract”, previously “fixed-term contract”, BBC v Ioannu [1975] I.C.R. 267. cf. North-East Coast Shiprepairers Ltd v Secretary of State for Employment [1978] I.C.R. 755. See British Broadcasting Corp v Dixon [1979] I.C.R. 281.
- 1828. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.136(1)(c) (the former requirement that the employee should terminate without notice being removed). See Priestner v Ball [1977] 12 I.T.R. 451; Wilson-Undy v Instrument & Control Ltd [1976] I.C.R. 881.
- 1829. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.142 (which qualifies the rule by setting up a special procedure enabling the employer to challenge the employee’s action on the merits).
- 1830. See above, para.40-218.
- 1831. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.138(1).
- 1832. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.138(2)–(5).
- 1833. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.138(3), (6).
- 1834. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.136(2).
- 1835. This results from the failure to adapt s.136(2) of Employment Rights Act 1996 to keep it in step with what is now s.136(1) of Employment Rights Act 1996, see above, n.1820.
- 1836. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.174. See Ranger v Brown [1978] I.C.R. 603.
- 1837. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.136(5).
- 1838. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.139(4), (5).
- 1839. See above, para.40-175.
- 1840. Hindle v Percival Boats Ltd [1969] 1 W.L.R. 174 (Lord Denning M.R. dissenting on this point).

cf. Delanair Ltd v Mead [1976] I.R.L.R. 340; Thomas v Jones [1978] I.C.R. 274; North-East Coast Shiprepairers Ltd v Secretary of State for Employment [1978] I.C.R. 755.

- 1841. Hindle v Percival Boats Ltd [1969] 1 W.L.R. 174 (Lord Denning M.R. dissenting on this point also).
- 1842. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.163(2). See Express Lift Co Ltd v Bowles [1977] I.C.R. 474.
- 1843. United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority v Claydon [1974] I.C.R. 128.
- 1844. O'Brien v Associated Fire Alarms Ltd [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1916; Rowbotham v Arthur Lee & Sons Ltd [1975] I.C.R. 109. Contrast Stevenson v Teesside Bridge and Engineering Ltd [1971] 1 All E.R. 296.
- 1845. Compare North Riding Garages Ltd v Butterwick [1967] 2 Q.B. 56; Vaux & Associated Breweries Ltd v Ward (1969) 7 K.I.R. 308; Robinson v British Island Airways Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 304; Ranson v G & W Collins Ltd [1975] I.C.R. 765. Compare now Safeway Stores Plc v Burrell [1997] I.C.R. 523.
- 1846. Chapman v Goonvean and Rostowrack China Clay Co Ltd [1973] I.C.R. 310; Johnson v Nottinghamshire Combined Police Authority [1974] I.C.R. 170; Lesney Products Ltd v Nolan [1977] I.C.R. 235.
- 1847. Employment Rights Act 1996 ss.141(1)–(3), 146(2). See also s.140(1) of Employment Rights Act 1996 (effect of employee's misconduct). See Allman v Rowland [1977] I.C.R. 201.
- 1848. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.141(4). Camela v Sheerlyn Productions Ltd [1976] I.C.R. 531.
- 1849. Carron Co v Robertson [1967] I.T.R. 484; Taylor v Kent CC [1969] 2 Q.B. 560; Collier v Smiths Dock Ltd [1969] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 222; Ingham v Bristol Piping Co Ltd [1970] I.T.R. 218; Morganite Crucible Ltd v Street [1972] I.C.R. 110; Kaye v Cooks (Finsbury) Ltd [1973] 3 All E.R. 434; Kane v Raine & Co [1974] I.C.R. 300; Rowbotham v Arthur Lee & Sons Ltd [1975] I.C.R. 109; Kennedy v Werneth Ring Mills Ltd [1977] I.C.R. 206; Forrester v Strathclyde Regional Council [1977] I.T.R. 424. But compare now Readman v Devon Primary Care Trust [2013] EWCA Civ 1110, [2013] I.R.L.R. 878.
- 1850. See above, para.40-089.
- 1851. See above, para.40-249.
- 1852. cf. Powell Duffryn Wagon Co Ltd v House [1974] I.C.R. 123.
- 1853. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.148.
- 1854. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.148(2).
- 1855. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.147(1).
- 1856. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.147(2).
- 1857. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.148(1).
- 1858. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.151(2).
- 1859. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.150(1), (2).
- 1860. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.162(1). See Stowe-Woodward Ltd v Beynon [1978] I.C.R. 609. The rules relating to the computation of "continuous employment" formerly excluded part-time employment but no longer do so by reason of SI 1995/31. See above, para.40-165.

- 1861. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.155.
- 1862. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.162(1), (2). The upper and lower age limits, which had previously applied, were, so far as they had continued to be applicable, abolished with effect from October 1, 2006 by the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations 2006 (SI 2006/1031) Sch.8 para.35. See also paras 40-174, 40-253.
- 1863. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.162(3).
- 1864. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.162(1)(a). See Wood v York City Council [1978] I.C.R. 840.
- 1865. See above, paras 40-164—40-167.
- 1866. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.215(2)–(5).
- 1867. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.214.
- 1868. See above, para.40-253.
- 1869. As to “normal working hours”, see the following paragraph.
- 1870. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.221(2). See Lake v Essex CC [1978] I.C.R. 657; Bullock v Merseyside CC [1978] I.C.R. 419; A. & B. Marcusfield v Melhuish [1978] I.R.L.R. 484 (regular bonus); Cole v Birmingham City DC [1978] I.C.R. 1004; Weevsmay v Kings [1977] I.C.R. 244 and cases cited at below, nn.1874, 1875.
- 1871. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.221(4).
- 1872. cf. Adams v John Wright & Sons (Blackwall) Ltd [1972] I.T.R. 191; Mole Mining Ltd v Jenkins [1972] I.C.R. 282.
- 1873. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.221(3).
- 1874. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.222.
- 1875. The limit is fixed by s.227(1)(c) of Employment Rights Act 1996, and is from time-to-time revised by regulations.
- 1876. See above, para.40-255.
- 1877. There is no exhaustive definition of all the cases where there are normal working hours. Compare Minister of Labour v Country Bake Ltd [1968] 5 K.I.R. 332.
- 1878. See Fox v C Wright (Farmers) Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 98.
- 1879. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.234(1), (2).
- 1880. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.234(1), (2).
- 1881. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.234(3). See Ogden v Ardphalt Asphalt Ltd [1977] 1 W.L.R. 1112.
- 1882. Tarmac Roadstone Holdings Ltd v Peacock [1973] I.C.R. 273. See ITT Components Group (Europe) v Kolah [1977] I.C.R. 740.
- 1883. Pearson v William Jones Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 1140; Turriff Construction Ltd v Bryant (1967) 2 K.I.R. 659; Loman and Henderson v Merseyside Transport Services Ltd (1967) 3 K.I.R. 726; The Darlington Forge Ltd v Sutton [1968] I.T.R. 196; Lynch v Dartmouth Auto Castings Ltd [1969] I.T.R. 273; Redpatch Dorman Long (Contracting) Ltd v Sutton [1972] I.C.R. 477; Gascol Conversions Ltd v Mercer [1974] I.C.R. 420. Contrast Armstrong Whitworth Rolls Ltd v Mustard

[1971] 1 All E.R. 598.

- 1884. Except for certain relatives of the employer, the Act applies to a domestic servant in a private household: s.161(1) of Employment Rights Act 1996. See Tomlinson v Dick Evans "U" Drive Ltd [1978] I.R.L.R. 77 (illegal contract).
- 1885. The term is defined in s.230(1).
- 1886. The upper age limits, which had formerly applied, were, so far as they had continued to be applicable, abolished with effect from October 1, 2006 by the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations 2006 (SI 2006/1031) Sch.8 para.30. See also paras 40-174, 40-253.
- 1887. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.140(1).
- 1888. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.157.
- 1889. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.199(2).
- 1890. See s.159 of Employment Rights Act 1996. (See above, para.40-035.)
- 1891. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.197, repealed by the Fixed-term Employees Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/2034) reg.11 and Sch.2.
- 1892. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.163. Section 7(2) of the Employment Act 2008 provided, with effect from April 6, 2009 (SI 2008/3232), for the insertion of a new s.163(5) into the Employment Rights Act 1992 which enables an Employment Tribunal to award compensation for financial loss which is sustained by the employee and is attributable to the non-payment of a redundancy payment to which he or she is entitled.
- 1893. See s.164(1) of Employment Rights Act 1996 referring to the "relevant date" and hence to s.235(1) of Employment Rights Act 1996 which refers to ss.145, 153 of Employment Rights Act 1996. See Watts v Rubery Owen Conveyancer Ltd [1977] I.C.R. 429.
- 1894. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.164(1). See Nash v Ryan Plant International Ltd [1977] I.C.R. 560.
- 1895. Employment Rights Act 1996 s.164(2), (3).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 40 - Employment ¹
Section 9. - Redundancy Payments and Procedure
(b) - Redundancy Procedure ¹⁸⁹⁶

Introduction

40-259

Part IV Ch.II of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 imposes procedural requirements upon employers in the handling of redundancies. The procedural obligations are of two types:

- (a)
the obligation to consult with representatives of recognised trade unions or of employees; and the obligation to give advance warning to the Department of Trade and Industry.
- (b)

These provisions, described in the next two paragraphs, represent an intention to give effect to the European Union Directive on the Approximation of the Laws of the Member States relating to Collective Redundancies. ¹⁸⁹⁷ They were further amended by the Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993 and give effect to an amending Directive of 1992. ¹⁸⁹⁸

Consultation with the representatives of recognised trade unions or of Employees

40-260

⚠ Significant changes to these consultation requirements have continued to be made by statutory instruments. ¹⁸⁹⁹ In brief summary, ¹⁹⁰⁰ requirements to consult in relation to proposed redundancies and proposed transfers of undertakings are no longer confined to consultation with the representatives of recognised trade unions; they are now requirements to consult, at the choice of the employer, either with the representatives of recognised trade unions or with elected representatives of the employees who are affected by the proposed redundancies or the proposed transfer. The requirement to consult in relation to proposed redundancies now attaches only where it is proposed to make 20 or more employees redundant within a period of 90 days or less. ¹⁹⁰¹ ⚠ The consultation must begin in good time, ¹⁹⁰² and certain minimum periods are laid down: it must begin within 45 days for 100 or more dismissals within a period of 90 days, and otherwise within 30 days. ¹⁹⁰³ The obligation to consult requires the employer to disclose prescribed information ¹⁹⁰⁴ about ways of avoiding the dismissals, reducing the numbers to be dismissed, and mitigating the consequences of the dismissals, and requires the employer to undertake that consultation with a view to reaching agreement with the appropriate representatives. ¹⁹⁰⁵ The employer may be held to be released from the provisions as to minimum periods of consultation and as to disclosure, consideration of representations and reply if he or she can show that it was not in the circumstances reasonably practicable for him or her to comply with those obligations. ¹⁹⁰⁶

40-261

The sanction for failure to comply with the duty to consult is the obtaining of a protective award by complaint to an employment tribunal. ¹⁹⁰⁷ The protective award is an award of entitlement to remuneration to the affected employees for periods up to a maximum of 90 days. ¹⁹⁰⁸ The entitlement to remuneration is subject to safeguards for both parties, in relation for instance to the employee's absence from work or the unavailability of work. ¹⁹⁰⁹ If an employee unreasonably refuses an offer from his or her employer of a new contract or renewal of the old contract, he or she will lose his entitlement to remuneration under the award. ¹⁹¹⁰ An employee may complain to an employment tribunal that he or she has not been paid the amount due under an award. ¹⁹¹¹ The tribunal shall if the complaint is well-founded order the employer to pay the amount due. ¹⁹¹²

40-262

A similar requirement of consultation with trade union or employee representatives now arises under the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 2006 ¹⁹¹³ in relation to the transfer of an undertaking or service provision change within the meaning of the regulations. ¹⁹¹⁴ The obligations to inform and consult arise in relation to affected employees both of the transferor and of the transferee employer. ¹⁹¹⁵ A recognised union, or employee representatives, may complain to an employment tribunal of failure on the part of either employer to inform or consult ¹⁹¹⁶ and may obtain an award of up to 13 weeks' pay for the affected employees. ¹⁹¹⁷

Notification of proposed redundancies to the Secretary of State

40-263

Under Pt IV Ch.II of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 as subsequently amended, an employer who proposes to dismiss 100 or more employees ¹⁹¹⁸ as redundant ¹⁹¹⁹ at one establishment ¹⁹²⁰ within 90 days or less, must give written notification of the proposal to the Secretary of State ¹⁹²¹ at least 90 days before the first of those dismissals takes effect. ¹⁹²² If the proposal is to dismiss 20 or more employees within 90 days or less, the notification must be given at least 30 days before the first of the dismissals. ¹⁹²³ The Collective Redundancies (Amendment) Regulations 2006 ¹⁹²⁴ amend s.193 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 to provide that, in addition to the existing requirements of that section, an employer proposing collective redundancies must notify the Secretary of State of his or her proposal before he or she gives notice to an employee to terminate an employee's contract of employment in respect of any of those dismissals. In a case where consultation with trade union or employee representatives is statutorily required ¹⁹²⁵ the notification must identify the representatives concerned and state the date when consultation began. ¹⁹²⁶ Where appropriate, a copy of the notification must go to the recognised union. ¹⁹²⁷ The sanction for failure to give the required notification to the Department is that the Secretary of State may institute criminal proceedings against the employer, who will be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale. ¹⁹²⁸ The purpose of the notification procedure was originally stated to be:

"... to enable the manpower services of the Department to take any necessary measures for re-deployment or re-training of the workers involved, to enable the Government to consider any further steps that may be needed to avoid or minimise the effects of the redundancy, and to provide documentary evidence in all but the smallest redundancies of the commencement of consultations." ¹⁹²⁹

1. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).
1896. See Freedland (1976) 5 I.L.J 24; Ewing (1993) 22 I.L.J. 176–178.
1897. Council Directive 75/129.
1898. s.34, implementing Council Directive 92/56.
1899. Beginning with the Collective Redundancies and Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (Amendment) Regulations 1995 (SI 1995/2587) with effect from October 26, 1995. See now also the Collective Redundancies and Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (Amendment) Regulations 2014 (SI 2014/16).
1900. The provisions summarised are those of Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.188 as subsequently amended. See also the Collective Redundancies and Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (Amendment) Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/1925), and the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 (Amendment) Order 2013 (SI 2013/763), in force from April 6, 2013, which shortened the relevant consultation periods and excluded the expiry of fixed term contracts from counting towards the numerical thresholds.
1901.  s.188(1). The restriction to “at one establishment” had been placed in doubt by USDAW v Ethel Austin Ltd (In Administration) [2014] EWCA Civ 142, [2014] 2 C.M.L.R. 45, but was subsequently confirmed by the CJEU in USDAW v Ethel Austin Ltd (C-80/14) EU:C:2015:291, [2015] 3 C.M.L.R. 32.
1902. s.188(1A).
1903. s.188(1A).
1904. s.188(4); note the new para.(f) as inserted by Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993 s.34(2)(a).
1905. s.188(2).
1906. s.188(7); and see also s.189(6) (onus of proof on employer). See, among the earlier leading authorities, Association of Patternmakers and Allied Craftsmen v Kirvin Ltd [1978] I.R.L.R. 318; Amalgamated Society of Boilermakers, Shipwrights, Blacksmiths & Structural Workers v George Wimpey (M E & C) Ltd [1977] I.R.L.R. 95; Clarks of Hove Ltd v Bakers’ Union [1978] I.C.R. 1076; UCATT v H Rooke & Son (Cambridge) Ltd [1978] I.C.R. 818; Hamish Armour v ASTMS [1979] I.R.L.R. 24; and USDAW v Leancut Bacon Ltd [1981] I.R.L.R. 295.
1907. See Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.189(1) (limitation period—s.189(5)). See, as to the making of the award, Susie Radin Ltd v GMB [2004] EWCA Civ 180, [2004] 2 All E.R. 279.
1908. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.189(4). See, as to length of award, Sir Alfred McAlpine & Son (Northern) Ltd v Foulkes [1977] I.C.R. 748; Talke Fashions Ltd v Amalgamated Society of Textile Workers and Kindred Trades [1977] I.C.R. 833.
1909. s.190.
1910. s.191.
1911. s.192(1), (2).

- 1912. s.192(3).
- 1913. With effect from April 6, 2006, the existing Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations were revised and replaced by the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 2006 (SI 2006/246).
- 1914. SI 2006/246 reg.13. The regulations do not apply to a takeover by transfer of share control: see reg.3(1) and above, para.40-179.
- 1915. SI 2006/246 reg.13(1).
- 1916. SI 2006/246 reg.15(1).
- 1917. SI 2006/246 reg.16(3).
- 1918. For the excluded classes of employees, see Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 ss.284, 285, 282(1).
- 1919. See above, para.40-251.
- 1920. See, for the meaning of this term, Kapur v Shields [1976] I.C.R. 26.
- 1921. That is to say, currently, the Department of Business, Innovation and Skills.
- 1922. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.193(1)–(6), subject to s.193(7) (reasonable practicability).
- 1923. Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s.193(2).
- 1924. SI 2006/2387.
- 1925. See above, para.40-260.
- 1926. s.193(6).
- 1927. s.100(1) subject to s.100(4), and s.100(6) (reasonable practicability).
- 1928. s.194.
- 1929. Consultative Document on the Employment Protection Bill (1974), para.66.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 40 - Employment ¹
Section 10. - Statutory Dispute Resolution Provisions

Statutory dispute resolution provisions

40-264

The Employment Act 2002, contained, inter alia, a set of provisions introducing new statutory dispute resolution procedures (ss.29–34 and Schs 2–4) which had a great potential impact on the law of the contract of employment. ¹⁹³⁰ However, the Employment Act 2008 repealed those provisions and replaced them with a set of provisions reflecting a different approach, for the adjustment of a large set of compensatory awards by reference to non-compliance with statutory codes of practice concerned with dispute resolution. ¹⁹³¹ Specific provision was made for such adjustment of compensatory awards for unfair dismissal ¹⁹³²; a code of practice on disciplinary and grievance procedures has been issued as the point of reference for that particular purpose. ¹⁹³³ In connection with the statutory dispute resolution provisions, reference should also be made to the right for workers to be accompanied by certain trade union officials or fellow workers at non-trivial disciplinary and grievance hearings. That right was originally conferred by ss.10–12 of the Employment Relations Act 1999. Section 37 of the Employment Relations Act 2004 amended s.10 of the 1999 Act, with effect from October 2004, in order further to clarify the role of the companion at such disciplinary and grievance hearings. Reference should also be made to the Employment Tribunals (Early Conciliation: Exemptions and Rules of Procedure) Regulations 2014, ¹⁹³⁴ which impose a duty to involve ACAS before the issuance of an Employment Tribunal Claim.

¹. Freedland, The Contract of Employment (2016). Freedland, The Personal Employment Contract (2003); Gaymer, The Employment Relationship (2001); Brodie, The Employment Contract: Legal Principles, Drafting, and Interpretation (2008) (on Scottish law, but largely applicable to English law); and, for a comparative perspective, Freedland and Kountouris, The Legal Construction of Personal Work Relations (2011).

¹⁹³⁰. These provisions were implemented and amplified by the Employment Act 2002 (Dispute Resolution) Regulations 2004 (SI 2004/752).

¹⁹³¹. s.3(1) inserting into the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 a new s.207A providing for the statutory codes of practice which may be issued under that Act to be admissible in evidence before and able to be taken into account by employment tribunals.

¹⁹³². s.3(2) amending s.124A of the Employment Rights Act 1996; see above, para.40-241.

¹⁹³³. ACAS Code of Practice 1—Disciplinary and Grievance Procedures (April 2009).

¹⁹³⁴. SI 2014/254.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts

Section 1. - Introduction

Three stages of development

41-001

The law relating to gaming, wagering and gambling contracts can be said to have developed in three stages. (1) The original common law position was that, in general, such contracts were valid, though this position was subject to significant qualifications.¹ (2) This common law position was reversed by a number of Gaming Acts of 1710, 1835, 1845 and 1892, originally with the object of restricting credit for gaming² and later for the purpose of invalidating contracts by way of gaming and wagering³ as well as certain transactions related to such contracts.⁴ (3) Part 17 of the Gambling Act 2005 came in to force on September 1, 2007⁵ and fundamentally changed the law with regard to gaming and wagering contracts as contained in the legislation which had governed it at the second stage of its development, described above. Section 334(1) of the 2005 Act repeals this legislation,⁶ though s.334(2) makes it clear that these repeals do not have retrospective effect.⁷ Section 356 repeats those repeals, as well as repealing the remaining provisions of the Gaming Acts of 1710 to 1892 which had not been repealed by earlier legislation.⁸ Section 356 also repeals (again without retrospective effect) a number of other Acts, including the Gaming Act 1968,⁹ s.16 of which had imposed further restrictions (going beyond those imposed by earlier Gaming Acts) on credit for gaming; though the policy of restricting such credit for gambling continues to be reflected in the 2005 Act.¹⁰ As none of the above repeals are retrospective, the legal effects of gambling transactions concluded before September 1, 2007 continue to depend on the now repealed legislation (and on the associated case law) which governed such transactions during the second of the stages of development described above. The passage of time has so much reduced the practical importance of this body of rules that its continued discussion in the present edition of this book can no longer be justified. Any reader who may still need guidance on the law as it stood before the coming into force of the 2005 Act is referred to paras 40–002 to 40–088 of the 30th edition of this book. Some of the old cases may, however, continue to provide useful illustrations of fact situations that could still give rise to problems under the law as it now stands under the 2005 Act. To this extent, such cases may still merit discussion even though their reasoning is obsolete, and their outcome would be different, under the present law.

Change of course

41-002

For the purposes of this Chapter, the most important of the changes made by the Gambling Act 2005 are (apart from the repeals listed in para.41-001 above) contained in its Part 17. This Part deals with the “Legality and Enforceability of Gambling Contracts” and reverses the approach of the law as it had stood at the second of the stages of development described in para. 41-001 above. In particular, s.335(1) lays down the general rule that “[t]he fact that a contract relates to gambling shall not prevent its enforcement.” This new general rule is, under the 2005 Act, subject to two exceptions discussed in paras 41–016 to 41–023 below. By way of further introduction to the ensuing discussion of the 2005 Act, a brief account must be given of the main elements of the structure of the Act, and of its terminology, so far as these matters relate to the legal effects of gambling contracts under the Act.

General scheme of the Gambling Act 2005

41-003

The main purpose of this Act is to create a new scheme for the regulation of gambling in Great Britain, supervised by a body (the Gambling Commission) created by the Act.¹¹ The scheme does not extend to transactions (such as contracts for differences) which are regulated under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000,¹² or to the National Lottery.¹³ The general principle underlying the Act is that commercial gambling which does not fall within either of the above exceptions is unlawful (so that the provision of facilities, or the use of premises, for gambling is an offence) unless a licence has been obtained from the appropriate local authority¹⁴ and the conditions of the licence have been complied with.¹⁵ It is also an offence under the Act to invite, cause or permit a child or young person to take part in commercial gambling¹⁶ and for a young person to engage in such gambling¹⁷ or to provide facilities for such gambling.¹⁸ The licensing requirements described above,¹⁹ and the offences resulting from failure to comply with them do not extend to “private”²⁰ gaming or betting or to certain other non-commercial gaming or betting.²¹

“Gambling”, “gaming” and “betting”

41-004

“Gambling” in the 2005 Act means gaming, betting and participating in a lottery.²² “Gaming” means playing (i.e. participating in) a game of chance (not including a sport) for a prize.²³ “Betting” is defined in s.9(1) to mean “making or accepting a bet on (a) the outcome of a race, competition or other event or process, (b) the likelihood of anything occurring or not occurring or (c) whether anything is or is not true.” The “events” (on which the outcome of the bet can depend) in some important respects resemble those which could, before the coming into force of the 2005 Act, be the subject of a wager (an expression which forms no part of the definition of “gambling” “gaming” or “betting” in the 2005 Act) within the definition which had been formulated and elaborated at common law for the purposes of the earlier Gaming Acts which are now repealed. Thus there can be a bet within s.9(1)(c) on the question “whether anything is true or not true”: for example, on which horse won the Derby last year²⁴; this point is explicitly made in s.9(2)(a) by which a “transaction that relates to the outcome of a race” (or certain other events) may be a “bet” within s.9(1) despite the fact that the race (etc) “has already occurred.”²⁵ The words of s.9(1)(c) (quoted above) do not mean that a contract by which A promises B to pay a sum of money to B for proving a particular hypothesis or establishing a specified fact would necessarily be regarded as a “bet” within the Act. It seems unlikely, for example, that a promise to make a payment to a geologist for establishing that oil or some other mineral was present at a particular location would be so regarded; and the same is probably true of a promise to pay a sum of money to any mathematician who succeeded in proving a particular hypothesis. But under the old law it had been decided in *Hampden v Walsh*²⁶ that a promise by the claimant, who believed that the earth was flat, to pay £500 to any person who could satisfactorily prove the curvature of the earth was a wager, since the claimant’s object was not to establish a scientific fact, but “to establish his own view in a marked and triumphant manner.”²⁷ Presumably a transaction of this kind would now be a “bet” within s.9(1)(c) of the 2005 Act. On the other hand, the concept of a “bet” within s.9 is in some respects wider than the concept of a wager under the old law. It seems that there could be a “bet” within s.9 on an occurrence which was not “uncertain” even in the restricted sense of the old law that the parties must “profess” to hold opposite views on it²⁸; under s.9 it would suffice that both parties simply professed ignorance on the matter in question. There is also nothing in s.9 to suggest that an event cannot be the subject of a “bet” within the section merely because the occurrence of the event was within the control of one of the parties; under the previous law it was doubtful whether such an event could be the subject of a wager.²⁹

“Bet”, “making a bet” and “betting”

41-005

The word “bet” and the phrase “making a bet” are not defined in the 2005 Act, so that the opening words of the definition in s.9(1) (quoted in para.41-004 above) are self-referential and unhelpful. It can be inferred from other provisions of the Act that the person “making” the bet must normally pay (or undertake to pay or deposit) a stake or be required to make a payment in order to participate in the bet ³⁰; and that a person “accepting” a bet undertakes that he will make a payment to the person “making” the bet if that person’s forecast or assertion on one of the events or states of affairs listed in s.9(1) (the relevant parts of which are quoted in para.41-004 above) turns out to be correct. In these respects, the concept of “making a bet” under the Act resembles that of a “wager” at common law: i.e., the essential nature of a “bet” is, like that of a “wager,” ³¹ a transaction by which one party promises to make a payment to (or to confer some other benefit on) another in the circumstances described in the words of s.9(1) quoted in para.41-004 above.

“Gambling” and “wagering”

41-006

⚠ There are, however, also differences between the concept of “gambling” under the 2005 Act and that of the earlier concept of a “wager.” On the one hand, “gambling” under the Act is narrower than “wagering” under the previous law in that “betting” (and hence “gambling” ³²) under the Act does not include activities regulated under s.22 of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ³³; contracts for differences (which could be wagers under the old law ³⁴) fall into this category, ³⁵ ⚠ as do so called “spread bets.” ³⁶ ⚠ On the other hand, the concept of “gambling” under the 2005 Act is in a number of respects wider than that of a wager under the judicially formulated definition of a wager under the old law. First, “betting” is defined ³⁷ to mean “making or accepting a bet”: these are alternative possibilities, so that there appears to be no scope under the Act for the previous rule that a contract could not be a “wager” if one party could not win or if one party cannot lose. ³⁸ Secondly, the concept of gambling under the 2005 Act is wider than that of a wager under the old law in that it includes participating in a lottery ³⁹ and in that the concept of betting includes pool betting. ⁴⁰ A third, related, point is that under the old law there was some support for the view that there could be only two parties to a wager, or that, if there were more than two, they had to be divided into two sides. ⁴¹ There is nothing in the 2005 Act to support the view that its concept of gambling is restricted by any such requirement.

Prizes

41-007

Section 339 of the 2005 Act provides that “participating in a competition or other arrangement under which a person may win a prize is not gambling for the purpose of this Act” ⁴² unless it is gaming, participating in a lottery or betting within specified other provisions of the Act. ⁴³ Where such “prize competitions” ⁴⁴ (e.g. between athletes) are governed by s.339, they are not subject to the regulatory regime of the Act and are legally enforceable quite apart from the provisions of its Part 17. ⁴⁵ They must be distinguished from “prize gaming” which is regulated by Part 13 of the Act. ⁴⁶ The essential features of prize gaming are that the size of the prize does not depend on the number of participants or on the stakes paid by them. ⁴⁷

Disguised bets

41-008

Under the old law relating to gaming and wagering contracts, attempts were sometimes made to pass off as valid contracts transactions which were in substance wagers; and the courts then had regard to the substance of the transaction, rather than to the form in which it was cast. For example, in Rourke v Short ⁴⁸ parties to an agreement for the sale of rags began, in the course of fixing the price, to argue about the price of a previous lot, the seller maintaining that it was lower than it was alleged to be by the buyer. It was agreed that if the seller was right, then the price of the present lot was to be twice as much as it would be if the buyer was right. This was held to be a wager (and could now be a bet) on the price of the previous lot. The court recognised that there could be a genuine bargain for the price of goods to be fixed by reference to that paid for a previous lot. But that was not the substance of the bargain here, “for the lower the former price was, the higher the present price was to be.” ⁴⁹ The purpose of such attempts to disguise or conceal the fact that a transaction was a wager was to give it the legal enforceability which, as a wager, it formerly lacked. To this extent, the reasoning of the old cases, and the motive for such attempts to disguise the nature of a transaction which is in substance a gambling contract, are obsolete, now that the effect of s.335(1) of the 2005 Act is that contracts relating to gambling are, in general, legally enforceable. But the reasoning of those cases may still be of practical importance when parties to a bet seek to disguise its true nature in order to avoid the power of the Gambling Commission “to void bet” ⁵⁰ under s.336 of the 2005 Act ⁵¹, and also where it is alleged that the contract is, by virtue of s.335(2) unenforceable by reason of its unlawfulness and this unlawfulness consists of failure to comply with provisions of the 2005 Act which apply to “gambling” or “gambling contracts”. ⁵² As under the old law, the question whether a transaction is a bet may also arise in a context that has nothing to do with its legal enforceability, in particular in the context of the rule that “winnings from betting” are not subject to capital gains tax. ⁵³ An attempt by parties for this purpose to disguise as a bet a contract which did not amount to “betting” within s.9 of the 2005 Act would no doubt be struck down by the courts.

Insurance

41-009

The concept of “gambling” under the 2005 Act is not in terms restricted (as it was in the previous law) to cases in which the party to whom money is to be paid on the outcome of the bet has no other “interest” in the contract than the sum or stake that he will win or lose. ⁵⁴ The existence of such an “interest” was formerly thought to be one reason why contracts of insurance were not wagers where the requirement of the insured’s having an “insurable interest” was satisfied. But under the law as it stood before the coming into force of the 2005 Act, a contract of insurance was not a wager merely because the requirement of insurable interest was not satisfied, since insurer and insured did not, for that reason alone, profess to hold “opposite views touching the issue of a future uncertain event” ⁵⁵ and even where, for this reason, the contract of insurance was not, in spite of lack of insurable interest, a wager, it was (and is) nevertheless void under section 4 of the Marine Insurance Act 1906 and might be illegal under the Marine Insurance (Gambling Policies) Act 1909. ⁵⁶ Neither of these enactments is repealed or amended by the 2005 Act, in spite of the fact that by section 4 of the 1906 Act a contract of marine insurance is “deemed to be a gaming or wagering contract” ⁵⁷ where “the assured has not an insurable interest as defined by this Act ...” ⁵⁸ and “every contract of marine insurance by way of gaming or wagering is void.” ⁵⁹ The invalidity of such a contract, however (even though it is not actually a wagering contract ⁶⁰), follows from its being “deemed to be a gaming or wagering contract” ⁶¹ (words which might be regarded as a reference to the now repealed legislation which invalidated contracts falling within this general category), ⁶² and from its being declared to be “void” by s.4 of the 1906 Act. The absence of any reference to this provision ⁶³ in the 2005 Act seems to indicate a legislative intention not (in that Act) to change the law with regard to insurance without interest, at any rate with regard to marine insurance, and probably with regard to insurance generally since the provisions of the 1906 Act are, where appropriate, regarded as applicable to contracts of insurance generally. ⁶⁴ It follows that insurance, even without interest, is not subject to the regulatory provisions which form the bulk of the 2005 Act. It also follows that the new rules which are laid down by that Act as to the “legality and enforceability of gambling contracts” ⁶⁵ (and which are discussed in paras 41–011 to 41–023 below) do not apply to contracts of insurance, even where such a contract is, for want of insurable interest, “deemed to be a gaming or wagering contract” by virtue of s.4(2) of the 1906 Act. The same is, a fortiori, true where the requirement of insurable interest is satisfied: for example, where the owner of an orchard insures “next year’s apple crop.” ⁶⁶ By parity of reasoning, it seems that the owner of a horse could insure the prize money which the horse might win; but if a person placed a bet on his own horse in a particular race, the contract would have been a wager under the old law ⁶⁷ and would be a bet within the 2005 Act.

¹ See below, para.41-010.

² Gaming Acts 1710 and 1835.

3. Gaming Act 1845, s.18.
4. Gaming Act 1892, s.1.
5. By virtue of Gambling Act 2005 (Commencement and Transitional Provisions) Order 2006, SI 2006/3272, art.2(4) (subject to certain transitional provisions not relevant to the ensuing discussion). Part 17 comprises ss.334–338 (out of the 362 sections) of the 2005 Act.
6. ss.334(1)(e) and 356 and Sch.17 also delete the references to s.18 of the Gaming Act 1845 and s.1 of the Gaming Act 1892 from s.412 of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (below, para.41-003).
7. s.334(2) provides: “The repeals in subsection (1) do not permit the enforcement of a right which is created, or which emanates from an agreement made, before this section comes into force.” Strictly speaking, before the repeals effected by subsection (1) came into force, no “rights” would be created or emanate from agreements of the kind in question.
8. s.356 (3)(a), (c), (d) and (e); s.356(4) and Sch.17.
9. s.356(3)(g); s.356(4) and Sch.17. Section 356 contains no express provision, comparable to that contained in s.334(2) (above n.7), denying it retrospective effect. With regard to the repeals made by s.356, their prospective nature follows from the general presumption against giving legislation retrospective effect. In Aspinall's Club Ltd v Al Zayat [2007] EWCA Civ 1001 the present point did not arise since, though the appeal was heard after s.16 of the 1968 Act had been repealed, this point could not affect the outcome (at [11]), presumably because the action had been begun before the repeal had come into force. The transaction which led to the litigation in the Al Zayat case had taken place on March 10, 2000.
10. Gambling Act 2005, ss.81, 177; “credit” is defined in s.81(4).
11. s.20.
12. s.10; see Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, s.412, as amended by Gambling Act 2005, s.334(1)(e), 356(4) and Sch.17.
13. Gambling Act 2005, s.15, except for the purposes of ss.42 and 335 (below, para.41-011): s.15(2).
14. s.2 gives a list of licensing authorities.
15. ss.33(1) and (2), 37(1) and (2).
16. s.46.
17. s.48.
18. s.50.
19. At nn.14 and 15.
20. s.296.
21. ss.297–302.
22. s.3.
23. s.6. For the purposes of the old law relating to gaming and wagering contracts, “gaming” was judicially defined to mean “the playing of any game for money or money’s worth” (Ellesmere v Wallace [1929] 2 Ch. 1, 55, but see also p.29) and included horse-racing (Applegarth v Colley (1842) 10 M. & W. 723) and presumably other kinds of racing and other kinds of contests.

- 24. cf. Pugh v Jenkins (1841) 1 Q.B. 631; Rourke v Short (1856) 5 E. & B. 904.
- 25. s.9(2)(a) refers back to s.9(1)(a), which uses the same words as s.9(2)(a) to describe the kinds of occurrences which can be the subject of a bet.
- 26. (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 189.
- 27. ibid., at 197.
- 28. This requirement is derived from the common law definition of a wager given in the judgment of Hawkins J. in Carlill v Carbolic Smoke Ball Co [1892] 2 Q.B. 484, 490, affirmed [1893] 1 Q.B. 256.
- 29. For the suggestion that on such facts there was, under the old law, no wager, see Ellesmere v Wallace [1929] 2 Ch. 1, 29; the suggestion was doubted in para.40-003 of the 30th edition of this book (bet between A and B that A will wear a red tie tomorrow).
- 30. See Gambling Act 2005, s.11(1) (“despite the fact that he does not deposit a stake in the normal way of betting”), 11(1)(b) (“required to pay”).
- 31. For the common law definition of a wagering contract, see Carlill v Carbolic Smoke Ball Co [1892] 2 Q.B. 484, 490, affirmed [1893] 1 Q.B. 256.
- 32. See Gambling Act 2005, s.3, defining “gambling” to mean (inter alia) “betting”.
- 33. ibid., s.10. Regulation 6(1) of the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013, SI 2013/3134 likewise provides that “These Regulations do not apply to a contract, to the extent that it is (a) for (i) gambling within the meaning of the Gambling Act 2005 ...”. For these Regulations, see above paras 14-040, 38-057 et seq.
- 34. e.g., Re Gieve [1899] 1 Q.B. 774; cf. Philip v Bennett (1901) 18 T.L.R. 129; Re The Futures Index [1985] F.L.R. 147; Chaikin and Moher, [1986] L.M.C.L.Q 390.
- 35.  Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art.85. See also the Contracts for Difference (Standard Terms) Regulations 2014, SI 2014/2012 as amended by Contracts for Difference (Standard Terms) (Amendment) Regulations 2017, SI 2017/112.
- 36.  Marginal note to Gambling Act 2005, s.10. The expression “spread bets” does not occur in the body of s.10. cf. WW Properties Investments Ltd v National Westminster Bank plc [2016] EWCA Civ 1142, [2017] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 87, where an entity which had borrowed money from a bank entered into four “interest rate hedging contracts” with the bank; the first three of these were called “Collars” while the fourth “was a Swap Agreement” ([2016] EWCA Civ 1142 at [2]). The purpose of these agreements was to hedge the borrower’s liabilities which, under the contract of loan, could rise in line with increases in Base Rate (at [23]). Although these four agreements were “contracts for difference” (at [24]), it was held that they were not wagers: contracts for differences would not be wagers: if they were entered into (as these contracts were) “for a commercial purpose such as hedging” (see at [28], citing Leggatt L.J. in City Index Ltd v Leslie [1992] 2 Q.B. 98, which had in turn been cited by Hobhouse J. in Morgan Grenfell and Co Ltd v Welwyn Hatfield District Council [1995] 1 All E.R. 1 (a decision that was approved in the WW Property case [2016] EWCA Civ 1142 at [42]); and relying on Financial Services Act 1986 s.63 and Sch.1 Pt 1 para.8 note 1). In Banco Santander Totta SA v Companjia de Carris de Ferro de Lisboa SA [2016] EWHC 465 (Comm), [2016] 4 W.L.R. 49 interest rate swaps were likewise found not to be void under Portuguese law as “games of chance”, though that finding was not strictly necessary to the outcome in that case. The sentence in the Main Work ending with this footnote was quoted with apparent approval by Vos L.J. in Nextia Properties Ltd v Royal Bank of Scotland plc [2014] EWCA Civ 740 at [24] (refusing leave to appeal from the decision of H.H.J. Behrens [2013] EWHC 3167 (QB)).

- 37. In s.9(1), above para.41-004.
- 38. This was the reason why the contract in Carlill v Carbolic Smoke Ball Co [1892] 1 Q.B. 256 had been held not to be a wager within the now repealed legislation referred to in para.41-001 above; cf. Kloekner & Co AG v Gatoil Overseas Inc [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 177, 192.
- 39. Gambling Act 2005, s.3(1).
- 40. Gambling Act 2005, s.12(1); contrast the text above at this note and at n.41 for the view that pool betting was not "wagering" under the previous law.
- 41. Ellesmere v Wallace [1929] 2 Ch. 1, 50.
- 42. In this respect, s.339 carries forward the policy of the third limb of the now repealed s.18 of the Gaming Act 1845.
- 43. i.e., ss.6 (gaming), 14 (lottery) and 9–11 (betting).
- 44. Marginal note to s.339.
- 45. Such as, in particular, s.335(1), below, para.41-011.
- 46. ss.288–294.
- 47. s.288.
- 48. (1856) 5 E. & B. 904; cf. Brogden v Marriott (1836) 3 Bing. N.C. 88; contrast Crofton v Colgan (1859) 10 Ir. C.L.R. 133.
- 49. (1856) 5 E. & B. 904, 912.
- 50. These words occur in the marginal note to Gambling Act 2005, s.336.
- 51. See paras 41-022, 41-023 below.
- 52. See paras 41-017 to 41-021.
- 53. Taxation of Chargeable Gains Act 1992, s.51(1).
- 54. For the rule that a contract was a wager (under the law before the 2005 Act came into force) only if neither party had "any other interest in that contract than the sum or stake that he will so win or lose", see Carlill v Carbolic Smoke Ball Co [1892] 2 Q.B. 484, 490, affirmed [1893] 1 Q.B. 256. Hence if the requirement of insurable interest (text below, after this note) was satisfied, a contract of insurance was not a wager.
- 55. For this requirement of a wagering contract (under the law before the coming into force of the 2005 Act), see Carlill v Carbolic Smoke Ball Co above, n.54, at 490.
- 56. This Act imposes criminal penalties on contracts made in violation of the prohibitions imposed by it. It does not specify the civil consequences of such violations but such contracts made in breach of these prohibitions are illegal as contracts prohibited by statute with penal sanctions.
- 57. Marine Insurance Act 1906, s.4(2). It followed from the use of the word "deemed" in s.4(2) that the contract was void where the insured had no insurable interest even though the contract was, for the reason given at n.55 above, not actually a wagering contract.
- 58. Marine Insurance Act 1906, s.4(2)(a); see also s.4(2)(b) ("interest or no interest policy").
- 59. ibid., s.4(1).

- 60. Above at n.55.
- 61. Above at n.57.
- 62. i.e., in particular, Gaming Act 1845, s.18, one of the repealed enactments referred to in para.41-001 above.
- 63. And to those of the 1909 Act, referred to at n.56 above.
- 64. cf. Locker & Woolf Ltd v W. Australian Insurance Co Ltd [1936] 1 K.B. 408 at 414.
- 65. Heading to Gambling Act 2005, Pt.17.
- 66. Thacker v Hardy (1878) 4 Q.B.D. 685, 695.
- 67. Carlill v Carbolic Smoke Ball Co [1892] 2 Q.B. 484, 492; affirmed [1893] 1 Q.B. 256.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts
Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts
(a) - Enforceability at common law

Wagers prima facie valid

41-010

The common law position was that wagers were valid and could thus be enforced by the winner. ⁶⁸ This rule was not much liked by the courts, who refused to enforce wagers on many grounds. Some wagers were illegal: these included wagers on unlawful games ⁶⁹; wagers that one of the parties would commit a legal wrong or do an immoral act; wagers which affected the interests and feelings of a third person so as to make a breach of the peace likely; and wagers which were “against sound policy.” ⁷⁰ On this last ground, the following wagers were held void: a wager that peace between England and France would be concluded by September 1797 ⁷¹; a wager on the life of Napoleon in time of peace ⁷²; a wager tending to cause public disorder ⁷³; a wager with voters in a constituency as to the outcome of an election in that constituency—an obvious cloak for bribery ⁷⁴; and a wager on the sex of a living person suspected to be masquerading as a man. ⁷⁵ The courts also sometimes simply refused to enforce a wager on the ground that it was an “idle wager” and that it was a waste of the court’s time to entertain an action on it. ⁷⁶ Thus the courts refused to enforce a wager “on the number of ways of nicking 7 on the dice” ⁷⁷; a wager made between persons who had no pecuniary interest in the matter that the next child of an unmarried woman would be a boy, ⁷⁸ and a wager on an abstract question of law in which the parties had only an academic interest. ⁷⁹

^{68.} Micklefield v Hipgin (1760) 1 Anst. 33; Good v Elliott (1790) 3 T.R. 693; Hussey v Crickitt (1811) 3 Camp. 168; Khodari v Tamimi [2010] EWCA Civ 1109 at [18].

^{69.} At common law, cock-fighting, card games (other than those of mere skill) and (probably) all games of chance were unlawful: Jenks v Turpin (1884) 13 Q.B.D. 505, 524.

^{70.} Good v Elliott (1790) 3 T.R. 693, 695.

^{71.} Lacaussade v White (1798) 2 Esp. 629 (as to recovery of money under illegal contracts, overruled in Vandyck v Hewitt (1800) 1 East 96).

^{72.} Gilbert v Sykes (1812) 16 East 150; because this might lead to his assassination (which would be “against sound policy” in time of peace) or to his preservation (which would be “against sound policy” in time of war).

^{73.} Eltham v Kingsman (1818) 1 B. & Ald. 683.

^{74.} Allen v Hearn (1785) 1 T.R. 56.

^{75.} Da Costa v Jones (1778) 2 Cowp. 729.

^{76.} Robinson v Mearns (1825) 6 D. & R.K.B. 26, 27.

- 77. Brown v Leeson (1792) 2 H.Bl. 43.
- 78. Ditchburn v Goldsmith (1815) 4 Camp. 152.
- 79. Henkin v Gerss (1810) 2 Camp. 408.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts
Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts
(b) - Enforceability under the Gambling Act 2005

Contracts relating to gambling generally enforceable: s.335(1)

41-011

⚠ The restrictions on the enforceability of wagering contracts which had been imposed by the legislative provisions referred to in para.41-001 above were removed by the repeal of those provisions by the 2005 Act, ⁸⁰ but these repeals did not, of themselves, restore the common law rule by which wagering contracts were, in general, legally enforceable. ⁸¹ ⚠ It was therefore necessary for the 2005 Act to contain a specific provision to this effect; s.335(1) accordingly provides that “[t]he fact that a contract relates to gambling shall not prevent its enforcement.” Three points must here be made about this provision.

“Shall not prevent”

41-012

The first arises from what is in substance the double negative contained in the phrase “shall not prevent.” Section 335(1) does not in terms say that contracts relating to gambling shall be legally enforceable. Instead, it lays down the general rule to this effect by providing that the fact that a contract is so related shall not prevent its enforcement. The reason for formulating the general rule of enforceability in this way is to make allowance for the fact that the enforcement of such a contract may be refused on some ground other than the fact that the contract relates to gambling. The significance of this point is further considered in the discussion in paragraphs 41-017 and 41-021 below of one of the exceptions to the general principle of enforceability laid down by the 2005 Act.

“Relates to gambling”

41-013

Secondly, section 335(1) refers to “the fact that a contract relates to gambling.” ⁸² This phrase is wide enough to cover, not only the gambling contract itself (also referred to in the Act as the, or a, “bet” ⁸³), but also associated transactions. Under the law as it stood before the 2005 Act, problems used to arise (and may continue to arise) out of associated transactions such as agency arrangements related to gambling, partnerships, stakeholders, securities and loans for gambling. Such transactions would all seem to be covered by the phrase “relates to gambling” and such related transactions will, in general, be enforceable by virtue of section 335(1). ⁸⁴

Legal effects other than enforceability

41-014

⚠ Thirdly, the only direct legal effect of section 335(1) is to make the contracts covered by it enforceable; but the enforceability of such contracts also has repercussions on a number of further legal effects which had, in relation to such contracts, given rise to problems under the previous law. Thus if money is paid or property deposited under a gambling (or related ⁸⁵) contract there is no longer any question of its being recoverable by the payor or depositor merely ⁸⁶ ⚠ because that contract is a gambling contract. The payment or deposit will simply have been made under a valid contract and any right to its return will depend on the terms of the contract, or on other rules of law governing the recoverability of payments or deposits made under a contract. The fact that a payment was made under a gambling contract which is now (by virtue of s.335(1)) enforceable also has repercussions on the law relating to gambling with stolen money. ⁸⁷ On the other hand, the legal enforceability of contracts related to gambling has not affected the statutory rule that “winnings from betting” are not subject to capital gains tax. ⁸⁸

Electronic Commerce

41-015

The EC Directive on Electronic Commerce ⁸⁹ provides that it is not to apply to “gambling activities which involve wagering a stake with monetary value in games of chance, including lotteries and betting transactions.” ⁹⁰ The Electronic Commerce (EC Directive) Regulations 2002, ⁹¹ which implement most of the Directive, likewise do not apply in respect of “(d) the following activities of information society services—(iii) betting, gaming or lotteries which involve wagering a stake with monetary value.” ⁹² These exceptions appear to refer only to the gambling contract itself, while the references in the Gambling Act 2005 to contracts “related to gambling” ⁹³ and to similar concepts ⁹⁴ have a wider scope. ⁹⁵

^{80.} Above, para.41-001.

^{81.} ⚠ See Interpretation Act 1978, ss.15, 16. For possible continued relevance of the common law rules stated in para.41-010 above to limits on the enforceability under the 2005 Act of contracts relating to gambling, see below, para.41-020. In WW Property Investments Ltd v National Westminster Bank PLC [2016] EWCA Civ 1142, [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 87 the Court of Appeal held that the “Collar” and “Swap” agreements were not wagers; the reasons for this conclusion are stated in para.41-006 above. But the Court went on to consider what the position would have been, if it had held that those agreements had been wagers, and in particular whether in that case whether they would then have been legally enforceable under the general rule of common law stated in para.41-010 of Vol.II of the Main Work, having regard also to common law exceptions to that general rule. The Court gave a negative answer to this question on the ground that the Collar and Swap Agreements were contracts for differences and that, in the light of the “comprehensive regime established by the Gambling Act [2005] and the FMSA [i.e. the Financial Services and Markets Act] 2000 there was in such a case no room for any common law rule” limiting the validity of gambling contracts by way of exception to the common law rule that such contracts were valid: see at [66]; and at [67] referring to the judgment of Vos L.J. in Nextia Properties Ltd v Royal Bank of Scotland plc [2014] EWCA Civ 740, especially at [22], refusing leave to appeal from the decision of H.H.J. Behrens [2013] EWHC 3167 (QB); for earlier proceedings in which Christopher Clarke J. had likewise refused leave to appeal from that decision, see the Nextia case [2014] EWCA Civ 740 at [1] to [4] and the WW Property case [2016] EWCA Civ 1142 at [20]. The judgment in the latter case also refers at [67] to “the Regulations made thereunder”, i.e. to the Financial Services and Markets 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001 (SI 2001/544, the relevant parts of which are cited in the WW Property case at [64]; Art.85 refers to “Contracts for differences”). It should be noted that this part of the judgment refers only to contracts subject to the “comprehensive regime” established by all this legislation. The same point is also reflected in the use of words such as “financial contracts”, “a contract of the kind in question” and “contracts such as the present” (at [66], where “section 35” is a misprint for “section 335”), all of which indicate that this part of the judgment has a restricted scope. It would not, for example, apply to a wager on the outcome of a sporting competition or of an election. In such cases there might still be room for common law rules recognising or limiting the validity of gambling contracts in ways considered in paras 41-011 and 41-020 (at n.117) of the Main Work. It remains true that even in such cases the repeal of the Gambling Act 1845 would not “revive the [common law] rule” (at [68]) which had existed before the repeal but it would not preclude the court from developing new rules which, as a matter of common law, restricted the legal validity of gambling contracts.

82. cf. Gambling Act 2005, s.337(1).

83. e.g., in ss.9 (above, paras 41-004, 41-005) and 336 (below, para.41-022).

84. See below, paras 41–025 to 41–027.

85. cf. above, para.41-013.

86.  The above assumption seems to underlie the claim for the return of money paid under the contracts in WW Property Investments Ltd v National Westminster Bank PLC [2016] EWCA Civ 1142, [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 87, as described in paras [18] and [19] of the report. That claim was based on the argument that the claim was invalid at common law; but the argument that the outcome continued to be governed by the common law as it stood before the legislation that was repealed by the Gambling Act 2005 (see Main Work, Vol.II, paras 41-001, 41-010) was rejected for the reasons given in para.41-011, n.81 above.

87. See below, paras 41–045 to 41–050.

88. Taxation of Chargeable Gains Act 1992, s.51(1); above, para.41-008.

89. 2000/31/EC.

90. art.1(5)(d).

91. SI 2002/2013.

92. reg.3(1)(d)(iii).

93. s.335(1).

94. See ss.336(2)(b) (“contract or other arrangement in relation to the bet”); 337(2) (“any part or aspect, of a betting transaction”). For such related transactions, see below, paras 41-026, 41–030 to 41–035.

95. See above, para.41-013 and the discussion of “related transactions” in paras 41-026 et seq. below.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts
Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts
(c) - Exceptions to Enforceability under the Gambling Act 2005

41-016

The general principle of the legal enforceability of contracts relating to gambling ⁹⁶ is, under the 2005 Act, subject to two significant exceptions. Enforcement may be refused on the ground of “unlawfulness”; and the Gambling Commission is given power to “void” certain bets. These exceptions are discussed in paragraphs 41-017 to 41-023 below.

^{96.} Above, para.41-011.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts
Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts
(c) - Exceptions to Enforceability under the Gambling Act 2005
(i) - “Unlawfulness”

Section 335(2)

41-017

Section 335(2) of the 2005 Act provides that “subsection (1) is without prejudice to any rule of law preventing the enforcement of a contract on the ground of unlawfulness (other than a rule of law relating specifically to gambling).”⁹⁷

Failure to comply with other provisions of the Act

41-018

The first question that arises from s.335(2) is its effect on cases in which the unlawfulness is due to failure to comply with other provisions of the Act, outlined above, such as its licensing requirements.⁹⁸ In one sense, those requirements might be said to consist of rules of law “relating specifically to gambling”⁹⁹ and so not to fall within the restriction on the enforceability of contracts contained in s.335(2). But it is submitted that this reasoning would be contrary to the policy of the Act in that it would allow a party to a gambling contract who had failed to comply with the Act (or with secondary legislation made under it) nevertheless to enforce the contract. Such a conclusion can, and should, be avoided by arguing that, in cases of this kind, the “unlawfulness” arises, not “specifically” (within the phrase italicised in para.41-017 above) because the transaction is a gambling contract, but because the making of the contract constitutes a form of activity which is prohibited, with penal sanctions, by law (in this case, by other provisions of, or made under, the Act itself). The purpose of the words italicised in para.41-017 above appears to be to exclude the argument that gambling contracts are “unlawful” as such because their enforcement would be contrary to public policy; for if this argument were accepted, section 335(2) would (if it did not contain the italicised words) wholly negate the validating effect on gambling contracts of section 335(1). The purpose of subsection (2) is, in the terms of the Explanatory Notes¹⁰⁰ to the Act, to ensure that subsection (1) “does not ... override any other rule that prevents enforcement on the ground of unlawfulness. Therefore gambling contracts may be void on the same basis as any other contract (for example, on the basis of lack of intention, mistake or illegality).” The common law rule that a contract may be void for illegality because it is one to engage in a form of activity that is prohibited by legislation with penal consequences is of general application in that it applies to all contracts, of whatever nature (including gambling contracts). The common law rule is therefore not covered by the words italicised in para.41-017 above, so that it will continue to restrict the enforceability of a contract by virtue of the preceding words of s.335(2), even though the contract in question is a gambling contract and is illegal by reason of its having been made in circumstances giving rise to an offence under the 2005 Act.

41-019

❗ It follows from the reasoning in para.41-018 above that, if a party to a gambling contract had, in making the contract, provided facilities for gambling without the requisite licence, or failed to comply with the terms of a licence which he held, and had so committed an offence under the Act, ¹⁰¹ then the contract would be affected by illegality and it would normally, though not necessarily, follow that, under the law relating to illegal contracts, ¹⁰² the person guilty of the illegality would not be able legally to enforce the gambling contract or a related transaction ¹⁰³ ; while the other party's rights to enforce such contracts would depend on the degree of his knowledge of, or complicity in, the failure. Conversely, if that other party committed the offence of cheating contrary to section 42 ¹⁰⁴ of the Act, then that other party would not be entitled to enforce the contract, though the victim of the offence might be able to do so. Where the gambling amounts to an offence because it is between the holder of a licence and a child or young person, ¹⁰⁵ any money paid (e.g. by way of stake) by the child or young person must be returned to the child or young person, ¹⁰⁶ even (it seems) to a young person who is himself guilty of an offence by gambling ¹⁰⁷; and the provider of the facilities for gambling "may not give a prize to the child or young person." ¹⁰⁸ It follows from this last provision that the contract under which the prize was to be given is not enforceable by the child or young person. A further possible ground of unlawfulness under the 2005 Act lies in the provision of credit for gambling. In this respect, the Act maintains the policy of some of the earlier gaming legislation, ¹⁰⁹ which it repeals, ¹¹⁰ of restricting the giving of such credit. Reference may here be made to three provisions of the 2005 Act which give effect to this policy. The Act provides, first, that an operating licence may restrict the giving of credit "in connection with the licensed activities" ¹¹¹; and secondly, that certain premises licences shall be subject to the condition that the licensee does not "give credit in connection with gambling authorised by the licence." ¹¹² Failure to comply with such a condition would be an offence under the Act. ¹¹³ Thirdly, it is an offence under the Act to supply, install or make available for use a gaming machine which is designed or adapted to permit money to be paid by means of a credit card. ¹¹⁴ In the first and second of the above situations, it follows that the licensee could not enforce the terms of the credit against the person to whom it had been granted; and it is arguable that the illegality of the loan would also infect the gambling transaction itself, on the ground that the object of the illegal loan was to encourage credit betting in circumstances in which it was the policy of the Act to discourage this form of activity. The latter argument could also be available in the third case, though it would not affect the legal relations between the card-holder and the issuer of the card (assuming the issuer to be a person other than the licensee). A premises licence must also be subject to the condition that the premises shall not be used for gambling on Christmas Day. ¹¹⁵ Such gambling would therefore be unlawful and gambling contracts relating to it would be legally unenforceable.

"Unlawfulness" on other grounds

41-020

Unlawfulness of a contract relating to gambling can also result from rules of law other than those contained in the 2005 Act: e.g. where the gambling was prohibited by such other rules, or where the event on which the outcome of a bet depended involved the commission of an illegal act, whether by one or more of the parties to the bet or by one or more of the participants in the gaming on which the bet was placed. In such cases, the contract would be invalid, not because it related to gambling, but because it could be said to encourage breaches of the law. It is submitted that the same reasoning could apply where the unlawfulness arose because the conduct in question, though not contrary to law, was contrary to public policy on grounds other than the mere fact that it related to gambling. This was the position at common law before the Gaming Acts of 1710, 1735, 1845 and 1892. As explained in paragraph 41-010 above, at common law wagers were generally valid but a wager could not be enforced if enforcement was "against sound policy" ¹¹⁶; e.g. because it tended to cause public disorder. ¹¹⁷ While the repeal by the Gambling Act 2005 of earlier legislation invalidating wagering contracts (and certain other contracts related to wagers) has not of itself restored the earlier common law rules, ¹¹⁸ it is submitted that the wording of section 335(2) leaves it open to the courts to develop grounds of public policy on which they could refuse to enforce contracts relating to gambling; and, again, the reason for any such refusal would be, not that the contract related to gambling, but that its enforcement would be contrary to public policy on some other ground. In relation to the example given above, ¹¹⁹ of a wager tending to cause public disorder, it should be emphasised that the first of the "licensing objectives" stated in section 1(a) of the 2005 Act is "preventing gambling from being a source of crime or disorder, being associated with crime or disorder or being used to support crime." It is submitted that a contract which tended to subvert any part of this objective should not be enforceable by virtue of section 335(1) but should be denied enforceability by virtue of section 335(2). In the case of most commercial gambling, a contract which had such a tendency would in all probability involve the breach of a condition of the relevant licence and so amount to an offence under the Act. But the scope of section 335 is quite general: it applies not only to commercial gambling, but also to gambling which is not subject to any licensing requirements, such as private and non-commercial gambling.¹²⁰ The court may thus not only enforce contracts relating to such gambling,¹²¹ but also refuse to enforce them on the ground of “unlawfulness” (not relating specifically to gambling).¹²²

Scope of s.335(2)

41-021

⚠ The grounds on which the courts may refuse to enforce a contract relating to gambling are by no means exhaustively stated in section 335(2). That subsection states only one such ground, i.e. unlawfulness (other than a rule of law relating specifically to gambling). Enforcement may also be refused on other grounds, such as the failure of the parties to reach agreement, lack of contractual intention, invalidating causes such as mistake, misrepresentation or duress and any other ground on which a contract may be void, voidable or unenforceable irrespective of its being a contract relating to gambling.¹²³ It has, for example, been held that a gambler could not recover winnings which were the result of his having cheated¹²⁴ ⚠ (in breach of an implied term¹²⁵ of the contract); and this was so whether or not his conduct amounted to the offence of “cheating” contrary to s.42 of the Act.¹²⁶ The Explanatory note to s.335 of the Act gives rise to some difficulty in that it includes among its illustrative list of rules that prevent “enforcement on the grounds of unlawfulness” not only “illegality” but also “lack of intention” and “mistake.”¹²⁷ It is, however, respectfully submitted that to regard “lack of intention” or “mistake” as illustrations of “unlawfulness” is, to say the least, unusual; and that it may be misleading when the exact legal effects of such factors fall to be considered. The possibility that enforcement may be refused on account of these factors, and other factors such as those listed in this paragraph, follows, not from the exception to enforceability (on the ground of “unlawfulness”) contained in section 335(2), but from the negative language of section 335(1).¹²⁸ Where the contract is affected by some invalidating cause such as those listed above in this paragraph, it simply does not fall within the scope of section 335(1). The same is true where the alleged contract is impugned for lack of contractual intention, e.g. because it contains an “honour” or similar clause, as appears to be common in the case of agreements between football pool promoters and participants in such betting.¹²⁹ In such cases there is simply no “contract” which could be made enforceable by virtue of section 335(1).

^{97.} Italics supplied.

^{98.} Above, para.41-003.

^{99.} Above, para.41-017 at n.96.

^{100.} See para.829 of the Explanatory Notes; for further discussion of this paragraph of the Notes, see below, para.41-021.

^{101.} Gambling Act 2005, ss.33(2), 37(2).

^{102.} See below, para.41-043 at n.263.

^{103.} ⚠ In Ritz Hotel Casino Ltd v Al Daher [2014] EWHC 2847 (QB) the question whether a person who had failed to comply with the restrictions on giving credit contained in s.81 of the 2005 Act could enforce the contract was said (at [40]) to depend on whether such enforcement would “contravene the policy and purpose” of these restrictions i.e., “to protect a player from wagering beyond the extent of his immediate ability to pay” (ibid.); it was further there said that the court “would and should be willing to decline to enforce the gaming contract and the cheque there given” if such a refusal would “satisfy that policy and purpose.” But if, in that case, there had (contrary to the actual decision: see below, n.110) been an unlawful giving of credit by the claimant casino, then the “policy and purpose” of the prohibition in s.81(4)(b) would, because of the special circumstances of that case, not “have required the court to dismiss the casino’s action upon the cheques” (at [44]). These special circumstances were that the defendant had been a member of, and had gambled at, the casino for 13 years before the occasion in question; that she was a person of “great” (at [43]) or “almost unimaginable” (at [116]) wealth (so that even losses running into of £2 million sustained on that occasion would not be “beyond the extent of [her] immediate ability to pay”; at [40] (quoted above); that she had in fact had an “irreproachable history of paying over 15 years” (at [43(iii)]); that the cheques given by her to the casino in payment of her losses were “always presented promptly” (at [4]), so that, even if the acceptance of the cheques amounted (contrary to the court’s conclusion) to the giving of unlawful “credit”, the period of such credit would have been short; and that “there was ... no deliberate setting out to break the law as to the giving of credit by the ... casino” (at [43(iv)]). This combination of circumstances can fairly be described as exceptional, so that it is submitted that, in general, the giving of credit contrary to s.81 would prevent the enforcement of the contract by the person guilty of the illegality. See also Ritz Hotel Casino Ltd v Al Geabury [2015] EWHC 2294 (QB), [2015] L.L.R. 860 where an action on a dishonoured cheque given by a gambler in exchange for chips (which he gambled away) succeeded as there had been no breach of the casino’s licence condition or of the Gambling Commission’s Code of Practice, and hence no illegality by reason of any violation of s.33 or 82 of the Gambling Act 2005.

- 104. For the territorial scope of s.42, see R. v Majeed [2012] EWCA Crim 1186, [2013] 1 W.L.R. 1041.
- 105. See above, para.41-003.
- 106. Gambling Act 2005, ss.58, 83(1)(a).
- 107. ibid., s.48.
- 108. ibid., s.83(1)(b).
- 109. Especially Gaming Act 1710, s.1 and Gaming Act 1968, s.16.
- 110. Above, para.41-001.
- 111. Gambling Act 2005, s.81(2)(a); see also s.81(2)(b). “Credit” in s.81 is stated in subs.(4)(b) to include acceptance by way of payment of “anything other than ... (ii) a cheque which is not postdated and for which full value is given ...”. In Ritz Hotel Casino Ltd v Al Daher [2014] EWHC 2847 (QB) the defendant had given the claimants cheques totalling £2 million in payment for chips which she had lost in the course of an evening’s gambling at the claimants’ casino; these cheques were promptly presented by the claimants but were dishonoured. It was held that the claimants were entitled to recover the balance of £1m remaining unpaid on the cheques as there had been no giving of “credit” (at [39]). The main reason for this conclusion seems to have been that the giving of the cheques had suspended the defendant’s liability to pay until the cheques were dishonoured and that at this stage “the debt [would become] immediately due and payable” (at [29]), where the reference in the Official Transcript to “section 16(2) of the 2005 Act” appears to be a misprint—either for s.16(2) of the Gaming Act 1968 or perhaps for s.81(4) of the Gambling Act 2005).
- 112. ibid., s.177(2)(a).
- 113. ibid., ss.33(1) and (2), 37 (1) & (2).
- 114. ibid., s.245.
- 115. ibid., s.183.
- 116. Good v Elliott (1790) 3 T.R. 693 at 695.
- 117. Eltham v Kingsman (1818) 1 B. & Ald. 683.

- 118. See Interpretation Act 1979, ss.15, 16.
- 119. At n.116.
- 120. See Gambling Act 2005, ss.33(1)(b)(v) and (vi), 37(7).
- 121. ibid., s.335(1).
- 122. ibid., s.335(2).
- 123. One party's right to enforce a contract may also be lost because the other party has rescinded the contract on account of the former party's failure to perform his part. But the application of this principle to gambling contracts can give rise to difficulty because of the aleatory nature of such contracts in which one party's duty to perform depends, generally, not on the other's performance of his undertaking, but on the occurrence of a chance and uncertain event: see further para.41-027 below.
- 124.  Ivey v Genting Casinos UK Ltd [2014] EWHC 3394 (QB) at [50], [51]. Ivey v Genting Casinos UK Ltd [2014] EWHC 3394 (QB) has been affirmed by a majority of the Court of Appeal: [2016] EWCA Civ 1093, [2017] 1 W.L.R. 679, where Arden and Tomlinson L.JJ., Sharp L.J. dissenting, also held that dishonesty was not a requirement of "cheating" for the purpose of s.42 of the Gambling Act 2005: see at [37], [40], [48] and [97].
- 125. The existence of such an implied term was admitted by the claimant: [2014] EWHC 3394 (QB) at [33].
- 126. See ibid. at [52].
- 127. Explanatory Note, para.829.
- 128. See above, para.41-011.
- 129. See Appleson v Littlewood [1939] 1 All E.R. 464; Guest v Empire Pools (1964) 108 S.J. 956; contrast in Scotland, Ferguson v Littlewood Pools Ltd, 1997 S.L.T. 309; and above, Vol.I, para.2-171.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts

Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts

(c) - Exceptions to Enforceability under the Gambling Act 2005

(ii) - Power “to void bet” ¹³⁰

Power to make orders where bet is “substantially unfair”

41-022

Section 336 of the 2005 Act empowers the Gambling Commission, ¹³¹ in the situations described below, ¹³² to make an order ¹³³ in relation to a bet if (and only if) the Commission is “satisfied that the bet was substantially unfair.” ¹³⁴ The power is exercisable in relation to a bet accepted by or through the holder of (a) a general operating licence, (b) a pool betting licence, or (c) a betting intermediary licence. ¹³⁵ It is thus restricted to commercial gambling and so does not, for example, extend to private and non-commercial gaming or betting. ¹³⁶ The effects of an order under section 336 are that (a) “any contract or other arrangement in relation to the bet is void,” and that (b) “any money paid in relation to the bet (whether by way of stake, winnings, commission or otherwise) shall be repaid to the person who paid it ...”. ¹³⁷ In deciding whether a bet is “unfair” the Commission is required to take account of a list of factors set out in section 336(4). The list is not intended to be exhaustive ¹³⁸; it includes “the fact that either party to the bet supplied insufficient, false or misleading information in connection with it,” ¹³⁹ or was convicted of the offence (created by s.42 of the Act) of cheating. ¹⁴⁰ An order under section 336 can, in general, be made only within six months of the beginning of the day on which the bet is determined ¹⁴¹ but this time limit does not apply where the order is made “taking into account the fact that a party to the bet was convicted of an offence under section 42 [i.e. the offence of cheating] in relation to it.” ¹⁴² Where the circumstance which makes the bet unfair would also amount to a factor vitiating the contract under general principles of law, a party to the contract could also rely on that circumstance even after the expiry of the six month period by way of defence to an action on the bet under section 335. This follows from the discussion in paras 41-017 and 41-021 above of “unlawfulness” and other grounds on which the court may refuse to enforce a contract relating to gambling. This reasoning would also apply where the contract was one in respect of which no order under section 336(1) could be made: e.g. because the contract related to private gaming or betting. The legal consequences of raising the defence of “unlawfulness” in ordinary legal proceedings would, however, differ from those of an order made by the Gambling Commission under s.336(1): for example, the legal consequences of the former course would not necessarily be either to make the contract “void” ¹⁴³ (as opposed to voidable) or lead to the repayment to the payor of money paid in pursuance of the contract ¹⁴⁴ nor would powers similar to those (described below ¹⁴⁵) exercisable by the Commission apply, even by analogy, where “unlawfulness” was relied on simply as a defence to an action on the contract. The powers in question are conferred on the Commission by s.337, which provides that an order under section 336(1) may relate to the whole or any part or aspect of a betting transaction ¹⁴⁶ and may make incidental provision about other parts of a transaction one part or aspect of which is made void by the order, ¹⁴⁷ and about related bets. ¹⁴⁸ Any order made by the Commission under section 336 is subject to appeal to the Gambling Appeals Tribunal ¹⁴⁹ from which a further appeal lies on a point of law to the High Court with leave of the Tribunal or the Court. ¹⁵⁰

Who may claim an order under s.336

41-023

An order under section 336 will no doubt normally be sought by the party to the contract who is prejudiced by the unfairness of the bet. But nothing in the section limits the power of the Commission to cases in which the order is sought by that person. On the contrary, section 338 suggests that the Commission may act on its own initiative in this respect. That section applies “where the Commission has reason to suspect that it may wish to make an order under section 336(1) in respect of a bet”¹⁵¹ and empowers the Commission in such a case to make an “interim moratorium” order by which an obligation to pay money in relation to the bet ceases to have effect for 14 days.¹⁵² It seems also to be possible for an order under section 336 to be made on the application of a third party who might be prejudiced by the enforcement of a bet under s.335 or by the retention of money paid under the bet on the ground of such enforceability. The view that at least some such third parties should have standing to seek an order under s.336 is supported by s.337(1) which provides that an appeal against an order under s.336(1) may be brought by “a party to a bet or to any contract or other arrangement in relation to the bet.” It would be strange if parties who were thus given a right of appeal against the order had no standing to seek the order in the first place. It is further arguable that an order under s.336 could be sought even by a third party who did not fall within the words quoted above from s.337(1).¹⁵³

^{130.} Marginal note to s.336.

^{131.} Created by Gambling Act 2005, s.20; above, para.41-003.

^{132.} After n.130.

^{133.} Gambling Act 2005, s.336(1).

^{134.} ibid., s.336(3).

^{135.} ibid., s.336(1).

^{136.} Within Part 14 of the 2005 Act (ss.295-302).

^{137.} ibid., s.336(2). “Stake” here seems to be intended to refer to the money paid (or “staked”) by the person making the bet to the person accepting it: see the definition of “stake” in s.353(1) and the marginal note to s.83 (“return of stakes to children”); see also the use of the word “stake” in the Directive and in the Regulations relating to “Electronic Commerce” which are referred to in para.41-015 above. Quaere whether “stake” in s.336(2) can also refer to the situation described in para.41-031 below in which money is deposited pursuant to a bet with a third party “stakeholder”, i.e., with a person who is not a party to the bet.

^{138.} See the words “in particular” in the opening phrase of s.336(4).

^{139.} s.336(4)(a).

^{140.} s.336(4)(d).

^{141.} s.336(5).

^{142.} s.336(6).

^{143.} s.336(2)(a).

^{144.} s.336(2)(b).

^{145.} At nn.142-144; and below, para.41-051.

^{146.} s.337(2).

- 147. s.337(3)(a).
- 148. s.337(3)(b).
- 149. Established by s.140.
- 150. s.143.
- 151. s.338(1).
- 152. s.338(2), (3); the time can be extended: s.338(4).
- 153. e.g. by the victim of a theft of money used by the thief for gambling: see below, paras 41-050, 41-051.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts
Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts
(d) - Distance and Off-Premises Contracts

Distance and off-premises contracts

41-024

The Consumer Protection (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013 ¹⁵⁴ provide that, where a contract for the supply of goods or services by a “trader” to a “consumer” ¹⁵⁵ is a “distance” ¹⁵⁶ or an “off-premises” ¹⁵⁷ contract, then the consumer has the “right to cancel” ¹⁵⁸ the contract within a “cancellation period”, ¹⁵⁹ the length of which is specified in the Regulations. The Regulations, however, do not extend to certain types of contract, the first of which is a contract “for ... gambling within the meaning of the Gambling Act 2005.” ¹⁶⁰ One consequence of so excepting such contracts from the scope of the Regulations is that the “right to cancel” ¹⁶¹ does not extend to such contracts. The assumption underlying the present exception is that the contract is valid apart from the Regulations. Under the Gambling Act 2005, this would normally be the case by virtue of the general rule, laid down in s.335(1), that the fact that a contract relates to gambling shall not prevent its enforcement. ¹⁶² But where that rule does not apply by reason of the “unlawfulness” of the contract ¹⁶³ or where, by reason of the bet’s being “substantially unfair” the contract made in relation to it becomes “void” in consequence of an order made by the Gambling Commission under s.336(1), ¹⁶⁴ the consumer does not need to cancel to escape liability under it. Moreover, the restitutionary consequences of his relying on such factors are then not those specified in the Regulations. ¹⁶⁵ They are, in the first of the above situations, those laid down by the general rules of law specifying the consequences of the “unlawfulness” ¹⁶⁶ and in the second, those specified in ss.336 and 337 of the 2005 Act. ¹⁶⁷

^{154.} SI 2013/3134 (“the 2013 Regulations”) as amended by Consumer Protection (Amendment) Regulations 2014, SI 2014/870.

^{155.} “Trader” and “consumer” are defined in reg.4 of the 2013 Regulations.

^{156.} “Distance contract” is defined in reg.5 of the 2013 Regulations. A contract made by, for example, exchange of posted letters, faxes or email messages, or in website trading could fall within this definition.

^{157.} “Off-premises” contract is defined in reg.5 of the 2013 Regulations. A contract made in the simultaneous presence of the trader and the consumer in a place which is not the business premises of the trader could fall within this definition.

^{158.} 2013 Regulations, reg.29.

^{159.} ibid., reg.30.

^{160.} ibid., reg.6(1)(a)(i).

^{161.} Above, at n.154.

- 162. Above, para.41-011.
- 163. Gambling Act 2005, s.335(2); above, para.41-017.
- 164. Above, para.41-022.
- 165. See reg.33(1)(b), cross-referring to regs 34 to 38.
- 166. See Vol.I, paras 16-194 et seq.
- 167. See para.41-022 above and paras 41-036 to 41-040 below.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts
Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts
(e) - Related Transactions
(i) - Introduction

Introduction

41-025

Before the coming into force ¹⁶⁸ of the rules now laid down in Part 17 of the Gambling Act 2005 as to the “legality and enforceability of gambling contracts,” ¹⁶⁹ the law as to gaming and wagering was to a considerable extent concerned with the legal effects, not only of the wagering contract itself, but also of a number of related transactions. These included the effects of a promise to pay a lost bet in consideration of the winner’s promise not to post the loser as a defaulter, the effects of payments or deposits made under the wagering contract, agency partnership and stakeholder arrangements made in relation to such a contract, loans for gambling and securities given in relation to wagering transactions. The overriding policy which governed the solution of problems of this kind under the legislation and case law which invalidated wagering contracts ¹⁷⁰ and related arrangements before the repeal of that legislation on the coming into force of the Gambling Act 2005, ¹⁷¹ was that the rules against the enforcement of wagers or related arrangements should not be undermined by allowing the winner by means of such related transactions to achieve indirectly what he could not achieve directly, i.e., to recover the amount of the lost bet from the loser. That policy is abandoned by the Gambling Act 2005, by s.335(1) of which the gambling contract itself is, as a general rule, legally enforceable. Two matters here call for further discussion. The first concerns the effect of that enforceability on related transactions of the kind described above: this topic will be discussed in paragraphs 41-026, 41-027, 41-030 to 41-032 and 41-034 to 41-035 below. The second concerns the effect on such transactions of the power of the Gambling Commission to “void [a] bet”: this topic will be discussed in paras 41-036 to 41-040 below.

¹⁶⁸. See above, para.41-001.

¹⁶⁹. Gambling Act 2005, heading to Pt 17.

¹⁷⁰. See above, para.41-001.

¹⁷¹. ibid.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts

Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts

(e) - Related Transactions

(ii) - Enforceability

Related transactions in general enforceable

41-026

⚠ It will be recalled ¹⁷² that s.335(1) of the 2005 Act provides that “The fact that a contract relates to gambling shall not prevent its enforcement.” The phrase “that a contract relates to gambling” is capable of referring to a range of contracts wider than the gambling contract itself. It can, for example, refer to a contract such as that considered in Hill v William Hill (Park Lane) Ltd, ¹⁷³ where a fresh promise by the loser of a bet to pay the amount of his losses to the winner in consideration of the winner's promise not to post him as a defaulter was not enforceable by the winner since such enforcement would have contravened s.18 of the Gaming Act 1845. The repeal of that section ¹⁷⁴ by the Gambling Act 2005 has subverted the reasoning of Hill's case; and the new contract that would now arise by an exchange of promises of the kind there made would be a contract relating to gambling and therefore, as a general rule, legally enforceable by virtue of s.335(1) of the 2005 Act. The same would be true of a fresh promise by the loser of a bet to pay his losses in consideration of the winner's promise not to sue the loser. Formerly, such a promise did not amount to consideration as it was a promise to not enforce a debt which was void (and, it was assumed, known to be so) ¹⁷⁵ but this reasoning, too, would be subverted by the 2005 Act, now that the original gambling contract is, as a general rule, legally enforceable. The same reasoning would, mutatis mutandis, apply where the winner made no promise to forbear, but simply forbore in fact, in response to the loser's fresh promise. In all these cases, the winner would now prima facie be entitled to enforce either the original gambling contract or the new contract as one that “relate[d] to gambling.” Many other contracts that formerly were, or might have been, void or unenforceable under the legislation that governed wagering contracts, would now fall within the description of “contracts relate[d] to gambling” within s.335(1) of the 2005 Act. These would include agency arrangements (such as the appointment of an agent to make or accept a bet), ¹⁷⁶ partnerships for betting and loans to enable the borrower either to engage in gambling or to pay lost bets. The fact that such contracts “relate” to gambling no longer prevents their enforcement: this follows from the repeal (by s.334 of the 2005 Act) of the legislation which formerly governed them and from the express provision of s.335(1) (of that Act) that “the fact a contract relates to gambling shall not prevent its enforcement.” This provision can, of course, only apply if the transaction relied upon by the person seeking enforcement has contractual force; and this requirement was held not to have been satisfied in Ritz Hotel Casino Ltd v Al Geabury ¹⁷⁷ ⚠ where a persistent gambler had entered into a “voluntary self-exclusion agreement” (VSE) with the casino by which he had excluded himself for life from gambling at the casino. In an action by the casino against him on a cheque which had been given to the casino in payment for chips, ¹⁷⁸ ⚠ he counterclaimed for damages for breach of the contract alleged to have been contained in the VSE. The claim was rejected by Simler J. on the ground that the VSE did not amount to a contract since the requirement of consideration was not satisfied. Her reason for this conclusion was that “nothing moved from the Defendant to the Claimant” ¹⁷⁹ ⚠ and that it was “difficult to see what consideration flows from the defendant when he enters a self exclusion agreement providing nothing in return”. ¹⁸⁰ ⚠ This reasoning, with respect, gives rise to some difficulty since it makes no reference to the generally accepted principle that, though consideration must move from the promisee, it need not move to the promisor. ¹⁸¹  Evidently the gambler was regarded as the promisee and the casino as the promisor, though it is not altogether clear what promise was made to the gambler by the promisor; presumably it was one to deny him the gambling facilities from which he had asked to be excluded. The loss of those facilities, even if only for a limited time, ¹⁸²  can plausibly be regarded as a detriment to the gambler (just as is the case where a promisee has, in response to the promise, given up smoking or drinking). The doctrine of consideration does not impose any further requirement that anything should “move to the Claimant” ¹⁸³  (i.e. to the casino). It could perhaps be argued that the gambler’s self-exclusion did not amount to consideration because the gambler’s signature of the VES form had not been requested by the casino; but that is not the ground given in the judgment in its short discussion of the consideration point. ¹⁸⁴

“Unlawfulness”

41-027

 It does not, however, follow from the reasoning of para. 41-026 above that such related transaction actually would be legally enforceable. Enforcement could, in particular be denied (by virtue of s.335(2) of the 2005 Act) on the ground of “unlawfulness”: e.g., where a loan gave the borrower credit in circumstances amounting to an offence under the 2005 Act ¹⁸⁵ or where it was illegal under other rules of law ¹⁸⁶ or where the purpose of an agency arrangement or of a partnership for betting was to enable a child or young person to become a principal party to a gambling contract in contravention of the restrictions imposed by 2005 Act on their participation in commercial gambling. ¹⁸⁷ All these examples serve merely to illustrate the wider principle that, in deciding whether a contract which “relate[d] to gambling” was legally enforceable, the fact of its being so related must simply be ignored. Whether the result of ignoring this fact was to make the related contract legally enforceable would depend on rules of law applicable to contracts generally, that is, irrespective of the type or category to which they belonged. The related contracts might be unenforceable or void because of some defect in their formation or other vitiating factor or because of a failure in performance on the part of the party claiming to enforce the other party’s obligation. An objection to enforcement on the last of these grounds would indeed be inappropriate where enforcement was sought of the main wagering contract itself, in view of the aleatory, as opposed to synallagmatic, ¹⁸⁸  nature of gambling contracts, under which one party’s liability does not depend on the performance by the other of his undertaking. But this reasoning would not apply to other contracts related to gambling, that is, to “related transactions” of the kind here under discussion.

“Voiding [a] bet”

41-028

The enforceability of a contract which “relates” to gambling may also be affected by an order, made under s.336 of the 2005 Act, ¹⁸⁹ to “void” a bet. This possibility is discussed, in the context of a number of the contractual relationships listed above, ¹⁹⁰ in paras 41-036 to 41-039 below.

¹⁷². Above, para.41-011.

¹⁷³. [1949] A.C. 530.

¹⁷⁴. Above, para.41-001.

¹⁷⁵. Hyams v Coombes (1912) 28 T.L.R. 413; Burrell & Son v Leven (1926) 42 T.L.R. 407; Poteliakhoff v Teakle [1938] 2 Q.B. 816; Goodson v Baker (1908) 98 L.T. 451 (contra) was hard to support. See also above, Vol.I, para.4-051.

176. For the terminology of “making” and “accepting” a bet, see Gambling Act 2005, s.9 (above, para.41-005).

177.  [2015] EWHC 2294 (QB), [2015] L.L.R. 860.

178.  cf. above, para.41-018 n.102.

179.  [2015] EWHC 2294(QB) at [137].

180.  ibid.

181.  See Vol.I, para.4-040.

182.  The self-exclusion form signed by the gambler was expressed to be “for life” but the VSE agreement was in fact revoked by mutual consent (see at [125]) of the parties to it less than a year after it had been made: see at [2(iii)], [3(ii)], [137].

183.  See above at n.172c.

184.  In the passage quoted at n.172c above, Simler J. relies on statements by Briggs J. in Calvert v William Hill Credit Ltd [2008] EWHC 454 (Ch), [2008] L.L.R. 583 at [175], [178], [180] to the effect that a voluntary self-exclusion agreement was “without consideration”; the decision was affirmed [2008] EWCA Civ 1427 where the same view is stated at [26]. No reason is given for this view either by Briggs J. or by the Court of Appeal but it should be pointed out that the judgments in the Calvert case dealt with a transaction concluded before the Gaming Act 2005 had come into force: (see [2008] EWCA Civ 1427 at [2], [13]) and when the earlier gambling (or gaming and wagering) legislation referred to in Vol.II, para.41-001 was still in force. The gambler would therefore be excluding himself from making bets that were void in law, while in the Al Geabury case he had excluded himself from transactions which, in general, were legally enforceable. This difference makes the argument that the gambler had provided consideration in the Al Geabury case more plausible (for the reason given in the Calvert case). This would not be the only situation in which the change in the law, making gambling contracts enforceable in law, could affect issues of consideration arising from gambling contracts or related transactions: see, for example, the discussions of Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548 in Vol.II, paras 41-047 and 41-048 and also in Vol.I, para.4-190.

185. Gambling Act 2005, ss.81, 177.

186. e.g. where a loan was made to enable the borrower to play an illegal game, as in M’Kinnell v Robinson (1838) 3 M. & W. 434.

187. Above, para.41-003.

188.  The expressions “aleatory” and “synallagmatic” are not often found in English law but they do occasionally occur: e.g. Re Schebsman [1944] Ch. 83 at 108; Foskett v McKeown [2001] 1 A.C. 102 at 135 (aleatory); Hong Kong Fir Shipping Co Ltd v Kawasaki Kisen Kaisha Ltd [1962] 2 Q.B. 26 at 65; United Scientific Holdings Ltd v Burnley B.C. [1978] A.C. 904, 928 (synallagmatic); Arnold v Britton [2015] UKSC 36, [2015] A.C. 1619 at [21] (“Given that a contract is a bilateral, or synallagmatic, arrangement ...”). For the latter expression, see also Vol.I, para.1-107. A contract may be bilateral without being synallagmatic: e.g. where A bargains for B’s promise rather than B’s performance. The point seems to be recognised (in relation, not to enforceability but to failure of consideration) in Fibrosa Spolka Akcyjna v Fairbairn, Lawson, Combe Barbour Ltd [1943] A.C. 32 at 48 (see the words “generally speaking”).

189. Above, para.41-022.

190. e.g., agency and partnership (above, para.41-026 at and after n.172).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts

Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts

(e) - Related Transactions

(iii) - Recovering back money paid

No right to recover back losses

41-029

Section 335(1) of the 2005 Act in terms deals only with the enforcement of contracts related to gaming; but it also indirectly affects the situation in which the claim is one, not for enforcing, but one for undoing, the contract, e.g. where it is one for the return to the claimant of money paid by him under the contract. Before s.335 came into force, it was settled that the loser of a bet could not rely on the invalidity of the wagering contract (under the repealed legislation referred to in para.41-001 above) as a ground for recovering back losses which he had paid. This rule was explained on various (with respect, not entirely convincing) grounds, such as that the loser had waived the benefit of the relevant legislation,¹⁹¹ or that he was regarded in law as having made a gift of the payment to the winner.¹⁹² Money paid under a contract relating to gambling will now continue to be irrecoverable by the payor, but on the different ground that it was paid pursuant to a valid contract.¹⁹³ Where the gambling contract is illegal or defective in some other way, the right to recover back money paid under it will be governed by the rules of law relating to the recovery of money paid under illegal or otherwise defective contracts in general. An overpayment by the loser was also formerly irrecoverable, but the reasoning of the authority which supported this view¹⁹⁴ is undermined by the repeal of earlier legislation by, and the enforceability of contracts related to gambling under, the 2005 Act.¹⁹⁵ There is now no reason why the normal rules relating to the recovery of overpayments under valid contracts (e.g., as a result of a mistake) should not apply to overpayments made under gambling contracts. There is nothing in Part 17 of the 2005 Act to affect the former rule that, where the winner knows when he receives the payment, that it is excessive and decides to keep it, he is guilty of theft.¹⁹⁶ There is also no reason to suppose that the 2005 Act has changed the former rule that, where the winner has cheated, money paid to him by the loser can be recovered back by the loser on the ground of fraud.¹⁹⁷ If the winner were convicted in the first of the above two situations of theft, or in the second of the new offence of cheating (created by s.42 of the 2005 Act), the court by or before which he was convicted could presumably make a compensation order against him.¹⁹⁸

^{191.} Bridger v Savage (1884) 15 Q.B.D. 363, 367; cf. Richards v Starck [1911] 1 K.B. 296 (losses paid in advance irrecoverable).

^{192.} Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548, 562, 577 (but see ibid. at 581, quoted in para.41-047 below at n.286).

^{193.} The above reasoning would apply to losses paid in advance, no less than to payments made after the determination of the bet. Under the old law, such payments could likewise not be recovered back, but for the different reason given at n.179 above.

^{194.} Morgan v Ashcroft [1938] 1 K.B. 49.

- 195. Above, para.41-001.
- 196. R. v Gilks [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1341.
- 197. For the English common law rule to the above effect, see Dufour v Ackland (1830) 9 L.J. (O.S.) K.B. 33. For a review of conflicting American decisions, see Berman v Riverside Casino Corp., 323 F. 2d 977 (1963), where it was alleged that loaded dice had been used in a Nevada casino.
- 198. Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000, s.130.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts
Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts
(e) - Related Transactions
(iv) - Deposits

Recovering back money or property deposited

41-030

The outcome of claims for the recovery of money deposited (as opposed to paid out and out) and of property deposited as security under a wager by one party to it with the other depended, before the 2005 Act, on a distinction between illegal and legal wagers.¹⁹⁹ This distinction has survived the Act in the sense that an illegal gambling contract is not now, any more than it was before the Act, legally enforceable.²⁰⁰ Hence claims for the recovery of such deposits will continue to fail under the general rule that money paid or property transferred under an illegal contract cannot be recovered back²⁰¹ but such claims may succeed in cases falling within an exception to that rule²⁰²: e.g., if the depositor repudiates the gambling contract in time.²⁰³ Where the gambling contract is not illegal (or affected by any other vitiating factor) the reasoning that the deposit was recoverable as it had been made to secure payment of a void debt²⁰⁴ no longer applies now that such a gambling contract is, as a general rule, legally enforceable by virtue of s.335(1) of the 2005 Act. Any right to recover the deposit would now depend on the terms of the contract and the general law relating to the recoverability of deposits; the fact that the contract related to gambling would, again,²⁰⁵ simply be ignored.

^{199.} For illegal wagers, see the authorities cited in n.190 below; for legal wagers, see the cases cited in n.192 below (recovery of deposit by loser) and Re Cronmire [1898] 2 Q.B. 383 (recovery of deposit by winner).

^{200.} Gambling Act 2005, s.335(2), above, para.41-017.

^{201.} See Vol.I, para.16-194.

^{202.} Tappenden v Randall (1801) 2 B. & P. 467; Aubert v Walsh (1810) 3 Taunt 277.

^{203.} See below, para.41-032 after n.198.

^{204.} Universal Stock Exchange v Strachan [1896] A.C. 166 (securities deposited by loser recoverable); contrast Strachan v Universal Stock Exchange (No.2) [1895] 2 Q.B. 696 (money deposited by loser irrecoverable after it had been appropriated by winner in discharge of loser's "indebtedness"; but such a deposit could have been recovered back if claimed by loser before such appropriation: Re The Futures Index [1985] F.L.R. 147).

^{205.} cf. above, para.41-027.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts
Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts
(e) - Related Transactions
(v) - Stakeholders

Stakeholder contracts

41-031

In relation to gambling, a stakeholder is a person with whom the parties to a bet deposit their stakes under a “tripartite contract” ²⁰⁶ to the effect that he will deliver the stakes of both of them to the winner on the determination of the bet. He is normally regarded as the agent of both parties to the bet. Each party authorises him to hold his own stake, to receive the other party’s and to dispose of the aggregate in accordance with the outcome of the bet. Under the Gambling Act 2005, such a contract would be a “contract relate[d] to gambling” within s.335(1). As such it would, in general, be enforceable by virtue of that subsection and of the repeal by s.334(1)(c) of s.18 of the Gaming Act 1845. ²⁰⁷ The restriction on the enforceability of contracts related to gambling discussed in paras 41-016 to 41-021 above could affect the stakeholder contract, no less than the gambling contract itself, so that the stakeholder contract could not be enforced if (for example) it were illegal. ²⁰⁸ It is also arguable that illegality of the principal gambling contract could infect the stakeholder contract and so make that contract illegal. ²⁰⁹

Illegal bets

41-032

Where the stakeholder contract was illegal, either in itself or because the bet to which it related was illegal, further problems can arise as to the right of the parties to the bet to recover back their stakes from the stakeholder. The starting principle is that a stake deposited in pursuance of such a contract is, in general, irrecoverable as money paid under an illegal contract. ²¹⁰ But this rule is subject to many exceptions, of which the one most likely to be relevant in the present context is that enabling a person who has paid money under an illegal contract to recover it back if he has demanded its return before execution of the illegal purpose. If the bet is illegal because it is a bet on the outcome of an illegal game, or on some other illegal activity, it can thus be recovered back if it is reclaimed by the payor before the game or activity has taken place. ²¹¹ According to one case, ²¹² it can be recovered back so long as the contract has not been executed by payment of the stake to the winner of the bet. But it is submitted that the decisive question ought to be whether the illegal purpose has been carried into effect, ²¹³ that the illegal purpose is the playing of the illegal game (or the accomplishment of the stipulated illegal act) and that the stake should be irrecoverable once the illegal game or activity has taken place. If the bet is illegal because of its intrinsic nature (e.g. because it is made in violation of a prohibition in the 2005 Act ²¹⁴), then it could be argued that the illegal purpose was not “executed” until the stake was paid over to the winner, so that, till then, the loser could recover it back from the stakeholder. ²¹⁵

Unfair bets

41-033

If the bet is “unfair”, an order in relation to it may be made under s.336(1) of the Gambling Act 2005. One consequence of such an order is that “any contract or other arrangement in relation to the bet is void”. ²¹⁶ The order can thus affect, not only the bet itself, but also the stakeholder contract. The effects of an order under s.336(1) on “other arrangement[s]” contract are considered in paras 41-036 to 41-040 below.

^{206.} Rockeagle Ltd v Alsop Wilkinson [1992] Ch. 47, 50 (where the stakeholder held a deposit under a contract for the sale of land). For stakeholder contracts, see also Bristol Alliance Nominee No. 1 Ltd v Neil Andrew Bennett [2013] EWCA Civ 1626, [2014] P. & C.R. DG 15, where an “escrow amount” paid under an agreement to surrender a lease was held by solicitors as stakeholders.

^{207.} Above, para.41-001.

^{208.} Gambling Act 2005, s.335(2) (“unlawfulness”).

^{209.} De Begnis v Armistead (1833) 10 Bing. 107; M’Kinnell v Robinson (1838) 3 M. & W. 435.

^{210.} Vol.I, para.16-194.

^{211.} Martin v Hewson (1855) 10 Ex. 737.

^{212.} Hastelow v Jackson (1826) 8 B. & C. 221.

^{213.} Vol.I, para.16-206.

^{214.} See above, para.41-003.

^{215.} cf. Barclay v Pearson [1893] 2 Ch. 154 (not a betting contract but a lottery; for the distinction between these concepts under the Gambling Act 2005, see ss.3, 9 and 14).

^{216.} Gambling Act 2005, s.336(2)(a).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts
Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts
(e) - Related Transactions
(vi) - Securities

When enforceable

41-034

Before the repeal of the former legislative provisions preventing the enforcement of wagering contracts and certain related transactions, ²¹⁷ a security (such as a cheque) given in payment of a lost bet had, between the parties to the bet, no greater validity than the principal contract. ²¹⁸ The position is different now that those provisions have been repealed ²¹⁹ and gambling contracts are, in general, legally enforceable. ²²⁰ Hence if the loser gives the winner a cheque in payment, the winner can bring an action against the loser not only on the gambling contract but also on the cheque as a contract which "relates to gambling." ²²¹ But if the original debt were incurred in relation to gambling which had been carried on in violation of restrictions on the giving of credit imposed by 2005 Act ²²² or by the terms of a licence held by the creditor (the winner of the bet), then the contract by which credit had been given would be illegal and thus unenforceable "on the ground of unlawfulness." ²²³ The related contract contained in the cheque would on the same ground not be enforceable by the winner against the loser of the bet. Cheques are now usually deprived of the quality of negotiability by being marked "account payee," ²²⁴ so that problems to which the transfer of negotiable securities given in payment of lost bets formerly gave rise ²²⁵ are now unlikely to occur. But where the payment was made by a negotiable bill of exchange, that bill, though not enforceable by reason of the illegality by the original payee, could be enforced by a "holder in due course," ²²⁶ i.e. by one who took the bill (provided that it was regular on its face and not overdue) for value, in good faith and without notice of the illegality ²²⁷; it can also be enforced by a holder who derives his title from a holder in due course. ²²⁸ However, once it is admitted that the bill is affected by illegality the holder cannot rely on the usual presumption that he is a holder in due course. ²²⁹ He must show that, subsequent to the illegality, value has in good faith been given either by him or by a previous holder through whom he derives title. ²³⁰ "In good faith" here means "without notice of the illegality." ²³¹

^{217.} See above, para.41-001.

^{218.} Richardson v Moncrieffe (1926) 43 T.L.R. 32.

^{219.} Above, para.41-001. Gambling Act 2005, s.334(1)(a) and (b); s.334(2) expressly provides that these repeals are not to have retrospective effect.

^{220.} ibid., s.335(1); above, para.41-011.

^{221.} Gambling Act 2005, s.335(1).

^{222.} ibid., ss.81, 177.

^{223.} ibid., ss.335(2); above, paras 41-017 to 41-021.

- 224. Bills of Exchange Act 1882, s.81A as inserted by Cheques Act 1992; Esso Petroleum Ltd v Milton [1997] 1 W.L.R. 938 at 946, 954.
- 225. Most of these problems arose, in the case of non-gaming wagers, by reason of s.18 of the Gaming Act 1845, and in the case of gaming wagers by reason of s.1 of the Gaming Act 1710, s.1 of the Gaming Act 1835 and s.16 of the Gaming Act 1968. For the repeal of all this legislation by the Gambling Act 2005, see above, para.41-001.
- 226. Bills of Exchange Act 1882, s.38(2).
- 227. ibid., s.29(1).
- 228. ibid., s.29(3); this subsection does not apply where the holder who derived title through a holder in due course is himself a party to any illegality affecting the bill.
- 229. Bills of Exchange Act 1882, s.30(2).
- 230. ibid.
- 231. Bills of Exchange Act 1882, s.90 (“in fact done honestly”) and cf. Tatem v Haslar (1889) 23 Q.B.D. 345, 348 (a case of fraud not of illegality). It is submitted that a person does not act “honestly” if he acts with notice of the illegality.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts
Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts
(e) - Related Transactions
(vii) - Loans

Loans related to gambling

41-035

The law with regard to the effects of loans related to wagering contracts was, before Part 17 of the Gambling Act 2005 came into force, largely concerned with the effects on such loans, and on the giving of securities in respect of them, of the Gaming Acts 1710 and 1835, of s.18 of the Gaming Act 1845, of the Gaming Act 1892 and of s.16 of the Gaming Act 1968. The repeal of all this legislation by the Gambling Act 2005 ²³² has made most of the discussion of these effects obsolete. Under the 2005 Act, such loans ²³³ will fall into the category of contracts related to gambling, so that, by virtue of s.335(1) of that Act, ²³⁴ the fact that they are so related no longer, as a general rule, prevents their enforcement. This is so whether the loan is made to enable the borrower to gamble or to enable him to pay losses incurred by gambling before the loan was made; it also no longer makes any difference ²³⁵ to the issue of enforceability whether the money lent is paid to the loser or directly to the winner, or whether the loan is subject to a stipulation that it is to be used for gambling or paying losses incurred by the borrower in gambling. The general rule that contracts related to gambling are legally enforceable is, however, under s.335(2) of the 2005 Act subject to the exception that enforcement of such contracts may be refused on the ground of "unlawfulness." ²³⁶ Thus if the gambling itself is carried on in contravention of the Act and amounts to an offence under it, the common law principle that a loan made to enable a person to play an illegal game is irrecoverable ²³⁷ will continue to apply. The same would be true if the gambling were illegal on some other ground: e.g. because it amounted to a bet on the outcome of a contest that was unlawful (such as dog fighting). It is assumed that, in the above cases, the lender, though not a party to the bet, is complicit in the illegality, at least to the extent of being aware of it. Further possibilities are that the loan itself amounted to the giving of credit in contravention of the 2005 Act ²³⁸ so as to make the lender guilty of an offence under it, or that the loan amounted to an offence under some other rule of law. The unlawfulness of the loan would then be a ground for refusing to enforce it.

^{232.} Above, para.41-001.

^{233.} In Carlton Hall Club Ltd v Laurence [1929] 2 K.B. 153 the claimant Club advanced chips to the defendant to enable him to play at billiards and poker and the defendant at the time of the advance gave the Club a cheque for the amount of the chips. This transaction was treated as a loan of money; and this characterisation of it was accepted in R. v Knightsbridge Crown Court, Ex p. Marcrest Properties Ltd [1983] 1 W.L.R. 300, rejecting the view taken in Cumming v Mackie, 1973 S.L.T. 242 that there was no "loan" if the cheque was given at the time of the loan. The Carlton Hall Club case is obsolete insofar as the outcome there depended on the now repealed Gaming Acts of 1710 and 1835 (see above, para.41-001) but it remains authoritative for the characterisation of the transaction as a loan, which would now be "related to gambling" within s.335(1) of the 2005 Act. See also the characterisation of a similar transaction as a loan to pay bets already lost in CHT Ltd v Ward [1965] 2 Q.B. 63, the actual decision in which is obsolete insofar as it depended on the now repealed Gaming Act 1892 (see above, para.41-001).

234. Above, para.41-011.

235. As it did before the coming into force of the Gambling Act 2005 (see para.41-001 above).

236. Above, paras 41-017 to 41-021.

237. M’Kinnell v Robinson (1838) 3 M. & W. 434.

238. See ss.81, 177.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts
Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts
(e) - Related Transactions
(viii) - “Voiding bet” and related transactions

Effect of order to “void bet” ²³⁹

41-036

Our concern here is with the effect on related transactions of the exercise by the Gambling Commission of its power under s.336(1) of the 2005 Act to make an order in relation to a bet on the ground that the bet was “substantially unfair.” ²⁴⁰ Section 336(2) states that, where such an order is made “(a) any contract or other arrangement in relation to the bet is void and (b) any money paid in relation to the bet (whether by way of stake, winnings, commission or otherwise) shall be repaid to the person who paid it ...” The words here quoted from paragraph (a) of this subsection appear to be wide enough to cover, not only the gambling transaction itself, but also a number of the related transactions discussed above. They would, for example cover (and so make void) fresh promises to pay the amount of a lost bet, agency arrangements related to gambling, partnerships for betting and stakeholder arrangements. All such arrangements could become void by virtue of an order under s.336 even though they were not themselves unfair: the section requires only the bet (and not any other contract or arrangement related to it) to be unfair to enable the Commission to make an order under it. A security given in payment of losses could likewise fall within s.336(2)(a) and so become void in consequence an order made under s.336(1).

41-037

In some situations, the consequences described in para.41-036 above are no doubt necessary to give effect to the policy of s.336, to except “unfair” bets from the general principle, stated in s.335(1), of the enforceability of contracts relating to gambling. It would, for example, make no sense if that exception made the bet void but left it open to the winner to enforce a fresh promise (of the kind considered in para.41-026 above) by the loser to pay his losses; or to allow the winner who could not sue the loser on the bet which had become void to sue the loser on a cheque given in payment of his losses (though such a claim might fail, even if s.336 did not apply to the cheque, on the principle that, between the parties, the cheque has no greater validity than the bet itself ²⁴¹). The principle of making “unfair” bets void might also be undermined if the victim of the unfairness were not entitled to the repayment of sums paid by him under the unfair bet before the order under s.336 had been made; this possibility accounts for the express provision of s.336(2)(b) (quoted in para.41-036 above), though it can be argued that a claim for such repayment might succeed at common law as one for the return of money paid under a void contract, apart from s.336(2)(b).

41-038

Other possible consequences of the effects of an order under s.336 on related transactions give rise to more difficulty. Some of these result from the breadth, or perhaps the obscurity, of the words of s.336(2)(a) which are quoted in para.41-036 above and which provide for the repayment of “any money paid in relation to the bet (whether by way of stake, winnings, commission or otherwise).” The first question that arises is what is here meant by the word “stake.” It seems that this word refers, not to a sum of money deposited with, or paid to, a third party as stakeholder, ²⁴² but to the sum paid by the person making, to the person accepting, the bet ²⁴³; and it is normally consistent with the policy of s.336 that a person who makes a bet and pays a stake in pursuance of it should, if the bet is “unfair”, be entitled to the return of the payment. But if this is the correct interpretation of “stake” in s.336(2)(a), one has next to ask what is there meant by “winnings.” It seems that this word refers to payments made by the other party to the bet, i.e. by the party “accepting” it, who will generally be the holder of a licence of the kind specified in s.336(1)(a) to (c). Since that party is more likely than the person “making” the bet to be responsible for the unfairness, it might at first sight seem strange that the former party (i.e., the party accepting the bet) should, as a result of that unfairness, become entitled to the recovery of winnings which he had paid to the other party. But the factors to be taken into account by the Commission in determining whether the bet was unfair refer to the supply of information by, and the state of mind or conduct of, either party ²⁴⁴ (e.g., to the fact that either has been convicted of cheating, contrary to s.42 of the 2005 Act ²⁴⁵). Hence where it is the maker of the bet who is responsible for the factor making the bet unfair, it would be appropriate for the acceptor of the bet to be entitled to the return of winnings that he had paid. Conversely, in such a situation it would not be appropriate for the maker of the bet to recover his “stake.” We shall see in para.41-040 below that it is open to the Commission to reach the appropriate result in both of these two situations.

41-039

In a number of further situations, the effect of an order under s.336 could give rise to inappropriate consequences insofar as the order made not only the gambling contract, but also related transactions, void. Three examples may be given to illustrate the point. (1) A may make and B accept a bet which was “unfair” by reason of factors for which B was responsible and A has, for the purpose of making the bet, used money borrowed from C in circumstances in which no “unfairness” affected the loan. At first sight, an order under s.336 could have the effect, not only of making the bet void, but also of extending this invalidity to the loan as an “arrangement in relation to the bet.” ²⁴⁶ But if, as a result of the order so far as it related to the unfair bet, A obtained repayment of the amount that he had lost and paid to B under the bet, ²⁴⁷ then there would be no good reason why A should not repay to C the money that A had borrowed from C to enable A to make the bet or to pay the amount lost under it. (2) Somewhat similar reasoning could apply where C had acted as stakeholder in relation to a bet between A and B which was unfair by reason of factors for which B was responsible; and where, on B’s having won the bet, C, who was not complicit in the unfairness, had paid A’s stake to B. Section 336(2)(b) provides that, if the bet becomes void as a result of an order under s.336, then “any money paid in relation to the bet ... shall be repaid to the person who paid it ...” ²⁴⁸ If these words refer to the payment from A to C then C would have to repay the money to A even though, in previously paying it to B, he had acted in accordance with his instructions from A and was not involved in the unfairness. The better solution would be to interpret the words quoted above as referring to the payment from C to B and to order its repayment to C, who would then be liable to account for it to A. (3) A third situation which could give rise to difficulty under s.336 is that in which the loser of an unfair bet makes a payment under it by a negotiable security; this situation can still arise although it has become uncommon now that cheques are generally marked “account payee” and hence not negotiable. ²⁴⁹ But where payment was made by a negotiable instrument and an order was made under s.336 on the ground that the bet was unfair, the instrument might, by virtue of the order become “void” ²⁵⁰ and such a result could cause prejudice to a third party to whom the instrument was transferred. It was this possibility which formerly gave rise to difficulty under the Gaming Act 1710 ²⁵¹ and was in part resolved by the Gaming Act 1835. ²⁵² Both these Acts are repealed by the Gambling Act 2005 ²⁵³ but we shall see ²⁵⁴ that it is open to the Gambling Commission to avoid the difficulty by other means when making an order under s.336 of the latter Act.

Flexibility of orders under s.336(1)

41-040

A number of the difficulties described in paragraphs 41-038 and 41-039 above can be averted by the Commission’s availing itself of powers which are conferred on it by s.337(2) and (3) of the 2005 Act and introduce considerable flexibility into the making of orders under s.336(1). Section 337(2) enables the Commission to make such an order “in relation to the whole, or any part or any aspect of, a betting transaction”; and s.337(3) enables the Commission to “make incidental provision, in particular ... about ... (b) the consequences of the order [under s.336(1)] for other aspects of a betting transaction one part or aspect of which becomes void under the order.” The expression “betting transaction” in these provisions seems to embrace not only what s.336 calls the “contract”²⁵⁵ or the “bet”²⁵⁶ but also what it calls “any ... other arrangement in relation to the bet.”²⁵⁷ (i.e., what in para.41-036 above is called a “related transaction”). The Commission’s powers under s.337(2) could, for example, be used in the case of an unfair bet between A and B made with money borrowed from C who was not complicit in the unfairness. The Commission would be enabled by s.337(2) to restrict its order under s.336(1) to the principal contract, and by s.337(3)(b) specifically to except the loan from the order. In this way it could avoid what in para.41-039 above was called the inappropriate result that could follow if the Commission simply made an order that the bet was unfair. Similarly, these powers could be used in the stakeholder example given in para.41-039 above: even if the interpretation of s.336(2)(b) there preferred²⁵⁸ were rejected, the Commission could restrict its order to the principal contract and except the stakeholder transaction from that order. The powers conferred by s.337(2) and (3)(b) could again be used to resolve the problem, described in para.41-039 above, which can arise where payment under an unfair bet was made by a negotiable security. The Commission could declare the principal contract void and the negotiable security unenforceable between the parties, but specify that the security was not to be “void” to the prejudice of third parties, whose rights could then be governed by the law applicable to negotiable securities which suffer from some defect that falls short of making them “void”.²⁵⁹ The same powers could also be used to resolve the difficulty that could arise in the situation described at the end of para.41-038 above in relation to claims for the repayment of money paid under a bet which is “unfair” within s.336 of the 2005 Act. It was there submitted that if the maker of a bet had been convicted of cheating, then the acceptor of the bet should be entitled to repayment of his winnings but it would not be appropriate to allow the maker (the cheat) to recover back his stake. While there may be no warrant in the words of s.336(2)(b)²⁶⁰ for such a distinction, it is submitted that an order in these terms could be made by the Commission under the powers conferred on it by s.337(2) and (3)(b), quoted above in this paragraph.

It is finally arguable that the results which can be reached under the provisions of s.337(2) and (3)(b) can also be reached, independently of them, by virtue of s.336(2) which provides that where “the Commission makes an order under subsection (1) in relation to a bet (a) any contract or²⁶¹ other arrangement in relation to the bet is void ...” But there are difficulties in relation to this argument which, at the very least, leave the point in doubt. In the first place, it is by no means clear whether the words just quoted refer to the content of an order under subsection (1) or to its legal consequences. The structure of s.336(2) gives some support to the latter view; certainly the provisions in para.(b) of subsection (2), with regard to the repayment of money paid, appear to be of the latter nature. Secondly, the argument appears to place too much reliance on the word “or”, especially where it occurs in a sentence that contains what is in substance a negative proposition. An order that a contract “is void” is of this negative nature: it tells us that the contract can not be enforced; and if a proposition which is negative (whether in form or in substance) links two objects with the conjunction “or”, then the negative prima facie refers to both objects (as in the sentence “I do not like oranges or lemons”). Thus it is arguable that an order under s.336(1) would, by virtue of s.336(2)(a), if that provision stood alone, have the effect of invalidating both “the contract” and “any other arrangement.” This seems to be the assumption underlying s.337(2) (quoted above) which gives the Commission the choice between making “an order under s.336(1) in relation to the whole, or any part or aspect of, a betting transaction.” If this choice were inherent in s.336(2)(a), then there would be no need for s.337(2).

^{239.} Marginal note to Gambling Act 2005, s.336.

^{240.} Above, para.41-022.

^{241.} See Richardson v Moncrieffe (1926) 43 T.L.R. 32, applying this principle under the old law of gaming and wagering contracts (above, para.41-001).

^{242.} Above, para.41-031.

^{243.} For the distinction between “making or accepting a bet”, see Gambling Act 2005, s.9; for the use of the word “stake” to refer to a payment made by the person “making” the bet, see ibid., s.83 (“return of stakes to children”) and the definition of “stake” in s.353(1); and cf. the use of the word “stake” in the Directive and Regulations cited in para.41-015 above.

244. See ibid., s.336(4).

245. ibid., s.336(4)(c).

246. ibid., s.336(2)(a).

247. ibid., s.336(2)(b).

248. ibid.

249. See above, para.41-034 at n.212.

250. Gambling Act 2005, s.336(2)(a).

251. s.1 of this Act had made the relevant securities “utterly void, frustrate and of none effect”.

252. s.1 of this Act provided that securities of the kind referred to in n.239 above should no longer be void, but that they should be “deemed and taken to have been given for an illegal consideration.” A bill of exchange so taken can be enforced by a holder in due course, i.e. by one who took the bill (provided that it was regular on its face and not overdue) for value, in good faith and without notice of the illegality: Bills of Exchange Act 1882, ss.29(1) and (2), 38(2); it can also be enforced by a holder who derives his title from a holder in due course: ibid., s.29(3).

253. Above, para.41-001.

254. In para.41-040 below.

255. In s.336(2)(a).

256. In s.336(1) and (3).

257. In s.336(2)(a).

258. See para.41-039 after n.236.

259. See Bills of Exchange Act 1882, s.29(2).

260. Quoted in para.41-036 above.

261. Italics supplied.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts
Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts
(f) - Gambling with chips

Before the Gambling Act 2005

41-041

Before the coming into force of Part 17 of the Gambling Act 2005, a number of legal problems arose from the common practice of using chips or tokens for the purpose of gambling in casinos and similar gambling establishments. These problems arose mainly under the Acts of Parliament which deprived wagering contracts and certain related transactions of legal validity; the reference to "money" in such legislation was generally extended by the courts so as to cover transactions in which payments under the contracts were made in chips or tokens ²⁶²; and one of the relevant Acts expressly referred to "cash or tokens." ²⁶³ It was also held that the supply of chips in a casino to a person making bets there did not amount to "valuable consideration" for the purpose of the rule that a recipient of stolen money was bound to make restitution of it to the victim of the theft unless the recipient had received the money in good faith and for valuable consideration. ²⁶⁴ One reason for this view was that the recipient's promise to allow the acquirer of the chips to gamble in the club and to pay his winnings did not amount to consideration since these promises were void under s.18 of the Gaming Act 1845. ²⁶⁵

After the Gambling Act 2005

41-042

The reasoning in para.41-041 above has been made obsolete by the coming into force of Part 17 of the Gambling Act 2005. Section 334 of that Act has repealed the legislation which had previously impaired the validity of wagering contracts and of certain related transactions, and s.335(1) has laid down the general rule that the fact that a contract relates to gambling shall not prevent its enforcement. Hence the purchase of chips to enable the buyer to gamble at (usually) the seller's establishment now stands legally on the same footing as the purchase of tokens from a department store to enable the purchaser of the tokens to exchange them for goods there. There was authority before the coming into force of Part 17 of the 2005 Act that, in a case of the latter kind, "an independent contract is made for the chips when the customer obtains them at the cash desk." ²⁶⁶ The consideration provided by the customer in such a case would be his payment (or promise to pay), while that provided by the store would be its promise to supply goods of the value of the tokens or the performance of that promise. The same reasoning would now apply to the purchase of chips from a casino by a person wishing to make bets there. ²⁶⁷ Now that contracts related to gambling are, as a general rule, legally enforceable, ²⁶⁸ there is (in general) no difficulty with respect to the consideration provided by the casino: it takes the form of its promise to allow its customer to gamble and to pay his winnings, or the performance of that promise. The "independent contract" ²⁶⁹ is, moreover, in general, legally enforceable as one that "relates to gambling." ²⁷⁰ Further problems with regard to such an "independent contract" may, however, arise in the two situations in which, under the 2005 Act, contracts related to gambling are not, or cease to be, legally enforceable. These situations are discussed in paras 41-043 and 41-044 below.

Unlawfulness

41-043

The circumstances in which a contract relating to gambling may be unenforceable, by virtue of s.335(2) of the Gambling Act 2005, on the ground of its “unlawfulness” are discussed in paras 41-017 to 41-021 above. The point to be made here is that the unlawfulness of the principal contract may infect the “independent” ²⁷¹ or collateral contract which arises when the person who wishes to bet with chips purchases them. If, for example, the bet were illegal by reason of its contravention of the Act or of some other rule of law, ²⁷² then the collateral contract might itself be illegal on the ground that its object was to facilitate the performance of an illegal act. ²⁷³ The exact effects of the illegality on the collateral contract would then depend on the general rules relating to illegal contracts. These rules would, for example, determine whether the contract could, in spite of the illegality, be enforced by a party who was innocent of it, ²⁷⁴ or even by a guilty party where the object of the rule of law giving rise to the illegality was to prohibit conduct rather than to invalidate contracts. ²⁷⁵ They would also determine in what circumstances money paid or property transferred in pursuance of the contract could be recovered back by the party who had made the payment or transfer. ²⁷⁶

Effect of order “to void bet” ²⁷⁷ on gambling with chips

41-044

The power of the Gambling Commission to make an order under s.336(1) of the Gambling Act 2005 in relation to a bet which is “substantially unfair” has been described in general terms in para.41-022 above, and the effects of such an order on transactions related to the bet is discussed in paras 41-036 to 41-040 above. Where chips are bought and used for the purpose of gambling, the contract under which they are so bought is such a related transaction. Under s.336(2)(a) of the Act, the effect of an order under s.336(1) is that “any contract or other arrangement in relation to the bet is void.” The words here italicised are capable of applying to the “independent” ²⁷⁸ or collateral contract under which the chips are bought, so that this contract, no less than the bet itself, becomes void as a result of the order under s.336(1). It is further provided by s.336(2)(b) that “any money paid in relation to the bet shall be repaid to the person who paid it.” Again the italicised words are wide enough to cover money paid for chips. Further flexibility is given by s.337 to the Commission when making an order under s.336(1). The Commission’s discretion in this respect is discussed in para.41-040 above. It will be recalled that under s.337(2) the Commission “may make an order under section 336(1) in relation to the whole, or any part or aspect of, a betting transaction.” The words here italicised are capable of referring to the contract relating to the purchase or use of chips. Under s.337(3)(b) the Commission may, in an order under s.336(1), “make provision about ... the consequences of the order for other parts or aspects of the betting transaction one part or aspect of which becomes void under the order.” It is not entirely clear whether the words here italicised would apply to the situation here under discussion since the effect of the order under s.336(1) would, by virtue of s.336(2)(a), appear to cover more than (in the words of s.337(3)(b)) “one part or aspect of” the betting transaction, i.e. both the bet itself and ²⁷⁹ the contract relating to the purchase and use of the chips. The point could, perhaps, be met by arguing that s.337(3)(b) is not restricted to cases in which the order under s.336(1) covered only one part of the betting transaction. Alternatively, and perhaps more plausibly, the Commission could, under s.337(2) order that only the main betting transaction was to be void and then rely on s.337(3)(b) to deal with the further consequences of the order on the contract relating to the purchase and use of chips. The Commission might wish to do this where it was the purchaser of the chips who was responsible for the unfairness which formed the basis for making an order under s.336(1). It could then make adjustments which it regarded as appropriate in view of the purchaser’s conduct in relation to the betting transaction as a whole.

²⁶². e.g., Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548, 575 (chips treated as a “mechanism for gambling with money”); Stuart v Stephen (1940) 56 T.L.R. 571; Crockfords Club Ltd v Mehta [1992] 1 W.L.R. 355.

²⁶³. Gaming Act 1968, s.16.

- 264. Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548; for such cases, see now below, paras 41-042, 41-051.
- 265. Above, Vol.I, para.4-016.
- 266. Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548 at 567; contrast ibid. at 562 (“only one contract”). And see Vol.I, para.4-016.
- 267. See Ritz Hotel Casino Ltd v Al Daher [2014] EWHC 2847 (QB) at [31]–[32], citing Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548 (above, para.41-041) and other cases on the point here under discussion decided before the coming into force of the Gambling Act 2005.
- 268. Gambling Act 2005, s.335(1); above, para.41-011.
- 269. Above, at n.254.
- 270. Gambling Act 2005, s.335(1).
- 271. Above, para.41-042 at n.254.
- 272. Above, paras 41-017 to 41-021.
- 273. M’Kinnell v Robinson (1836) 3 M. & W. 434.
- 274. Contrast Archbold’s (Freightage) Ltd v Spanglett’s Ltd [1961] 1 Q.B. 174 (innocent party’s claim upheld) with Re Mahmoud and Ispahani [1921] 2 K.B. 716 (innocent party’s claim rejected).
- 275. e.g. St. John Shipping Corp. v Joseph Rank Ltd [1957] 1 Q.B. 267. See also Ritz Hotel Casino Ltd v Al Daher [2014] EWHC 2847 (QB), discussed above in para.41-019 n.102.
- 276. See Vol.I, paras 16-194 to 16-210.
- 277. Marginal note to Gambling Act 2005, s.336.
- 278. See Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548 at 567; above, para.41-042 at n.254.
- 279. See para.41-040 above for the force of the word “or” in s.336(2)(b).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 41 - Gambling Contracts

Section 2. - Enforceability of Gambling Contracts

(g) - Gambling with Stolen Money

Loser using stolen money

41-045

Before the coming into force of Part 17 of the Gambling Act 2005 ²⁸⁰ (which deals with the “legality and enforceability of gambling contracts” ²⁸¹), it was settled that a loser who paid money lost under a wager could not recover back the amount so paid from the winner, in spite of the fact that the contract was void under s.18 of the Gaming Act 1845. ²⁸² That rule continues, in general, to apply after the coming into force of Part 17 of the 2005 Act, though for the different reason that, as a general rule, the gambling contract under which the money was paid is now legally enforceable. ²⁸³ But the further question can still arise whether, where the loser uses stolen money to make such a payment, the victim of the theft can recover the amount so paid from the winner. Because of the negotiable quality of money paid and received as currency, the victim cannot recover an equivalent sum from the winner if the winner has received the money in good faith, without notice of the theft, and for valuable consideration. Before the coming into force of Part 17 of the 2005 Act, the view had prevailed that no such valuable consideration had been provided by the winner; the reasons for this view are discussed in Vol.I, paras 4-016 and 4-017 above and 41-047 below. The effects on these reasons of Part 17 of the 2005 Act are discussed in paras 41-046 to 41-051 below.

Stolen money used to pay losses under illegal wagers

41-046

In the eighteenth century case of Clarke v Shee and Johnson ²⁸⁴ a clerk stole money from his employer and paid part of the amount so stolen to the defendant under a lottery which had been made illegal and void by the Lotteries Act 1772. Lord Mansfield held that the employer was entitled to recover from the defendant the amount of the stolen money which had been so paid to the defendant because that money was “his [the employer’s] property which has come into the hands of the defendant iniquitously and illegally and in breach of the Act of Parliament.” ²⁸⁵ The word “iniquitously” seems to indicate that the defendant was held liable because he had not received the money in good faith, his lack of good faith resulting either from his awareness of the circumstances in which the money had come into the hands of the thief or from his knowing participation in the violation of the Act of 1772. This reasoning is not affected by the Gambling Act 2005. Later discussion of the case treats it as authority for the view that the defendant had not provided any consideration for the payment in the shape of any promise which he had made to the thief, since that promise was illegal and void under the Act of 1772. ²⁸⁶ This reasoning, too, would not in a similar case be affected by the Gambling Act 2005 since the general principle contained in s.335(1), that contracts related to gambling are legally enforceable, is by s.335(2) stated to be “without prejudice to any rule of law preventing the enforcement of a contract on the ground of unlawfulness.” A contract now made in similar circumstances would still be illegal and void so that the defendant’s promise would not constitute any consideration for the receipt of the money. But if he had acted in good faith in relation both to the legality of the contract and to the provenance of the money, then he could be said to have provided consideration for the receipt of the money by accepting it in discharge of what he in good faith believed to be his legally enforceable claim against the loser; for this purpose it would be irrelevant that that claim was bad in law. ²⁸⁷ If his good faith extended only to the legality of the contract, but not to the provenance of the money, then he would be liable to restore the money to the victim of the theft even if he could be said to have provided consideration for its receipt. This follows from the fact that the recipient of stolen money can avoid liability to restore it only if he has received it in good faith and for valuable consideration.²⁸⁸

Stolen money used to pay losses under lawful wagers

41-047

In *Clarke v Shee and Johnson*²⁸⁹ the transaction in respect of which the stolen money had been paid was illegal and void and the payment had apparently been received in bad faith. But in *Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd*²⁹⁰ the reasoning of the earlier case was held to apply even though the stolen money had been used for the purpose of wagers which were not illegal but only void under s.18 of the Gaming Act 1845 and even though the defendant had received the stolen money in good faith. In that case one Cass, a salaried partner in a firm of solicitors, wrongfully withdrew money from the firm's client account and over a period of 10 months used money so stolen²⁹¹ to pay gambling losses incurred by him at the defendant's club. The club had acted in good faith, without notice of the fact that the money used by Cass had been stolen, and it would have been entitled (as against the victim of the theft) to retain the money if it had, in addition, been able to show that it had provided consideration for its receipt of the money. Three arguments were advanced by the Club in support of the view that it had provided such consideration. Its first argument was that it had provided consideration by allowing Cass to gamble and so promising to pay his winnings on bets which he won. This argument was rejected on the ground that the Club's promise was void under s.18 of the Gaming Act 1845; and this reasoning is in accord with the view that, prima facie, a void promise does not constitute consideration.²⁹² The Club's second argument was that it had provided consideration by actually paying such winnings to Cass. In cases unconnected with gaming, the law did, at least in some cases, regard the performance of a defective promise as consideration,²⁹³ even where the mere making of the promise would not be so regarded. But the Club's second argument, too, was rejected on the ground that any such payment to Cass was in law a gift to him.²⁹⁴ This may not be a very realistic view of the intention with which the Club made such payments²⁹⁵; and it may also, with respect, be doubted whether this is really an explanation of the rule, rather than a statement of its legal consequence. The Club's third argument was that it had provided consideration by supplying Cass with gaming chips. This argument was also rejected for reasons discussed in paras 4-016 and 4-017 of Volume I of this book, where a number of difficulties which arise in reconciling this rejection with rules which, in contexts other than that of the use of stolen money for gambling, determine the presence or absence of consideration, are discussed. It is, however, respectfully submitted that the view that the Club had provided no consideration for its receipt of the stolen money was justified by the context in which the question arose in the Lipkin Gorman case. The practical result of that view was twofold. The starting point was that, because the Club had provided no consideration for its receipt of the stolen money, it was liable to restore this money to the victims of the theft. But the House of Lords went on to recognise that claims for the restitution of money were subject to the defence of change of position²⁹⁶; that the Club had changed its position by allowing Cass to enter into a series of transactions which "by the laws of chance [yielded] the occasional winning bet"²⁹⁷; and that, although the Club was not legally liable to pay on bets won by Cass, such bets placed it, as a practical matter, under "an obligation which, in business terms it had to comply with."²⁹⁸ The Club was therefore held liable to restore only part of the stolen money that Cass had used in gambling there.²⁹⁹ The loss resulting from the theft was thus split between two innocent parties (the Club, which had received the stolen money in good faith, and the victim of the theft); and it was no doubt the desire of the House of Lords to reach such a loss-splitting conclusion which led to its rejection of the argument that the Club had provided valuable consideration for the payments to it of the stolen money, and to the recognition of the (partial) defence of change of position.

41-048

The reasoning of the Lipkin Gorman case,³⁰⁰ on the issue of whether the club had provided consideration for its receipt from Cass of the money that he had stolen, is now subverted by (a) the repeal of s.18 of the Gaming Act 1845 by s.334(1)(c) of the Gambling Act 2005 and (b) the provision of s.335(1) of the 2005 Act that "the fact that a contract relates to gambling shall not prevent its enforcement."³⁰¹ The effect of these changes in the law is that, on facts similar to those of the Lipkin Gorman case, the club would be bound by its promise to pay his winnings to Cass (unless the promise was defective for some reason other than that it related to gambling³⁰²). That promise, or its performance, would therefore constitute consideration for the payment of the stolen money to the club which, since it had received the money in good faith, would no longer be liable (as it had been in the Lipkin Gorman case) to restore the money to the victim of the theft. Since the club would no longer now be liable in restitution, no issue could arise as to any reduction of such liability on the ground of change of position. Hence the loss-splitting solution adopted by the House of Lords in the Lipkin Gorman case³⁰³ would no longer normally be open to the courts. It will be argued in para.41-051 below that it might be open to the Gambling Commission to reach a similar result in the exercise of its power, conferred by s.336 of the Gambling Act 2005 to “void [a] bet”; but this possibility is restricted to cases in which the bet is “substantially unfair”.³⁰⁴

Effect of order to “void bet”³⁰⁵

41-049

The further question arises whether the reasoning of the *Lipkin Gorman*³⁰⁶ case on the issue of consideration would still apply, after the coming into force of Part 17 of the Gambling Act 2005, in a case in which it was arguable that the bet was “unfair” so that the Gambling Commission could make an order in relation to it under s.336(1)³⁰⁷; if such an order were made, the contract or any other arrangement relating to the bet would be “void”,³⁰⁸ and any money which had been “paid in relation to the bet” would have to be “repaid to the person who paid it and repayment may be enforced as a debt due to that person.”³⁰⁹ It is submitted that the possibility of the Commission’s making such an order would not deprive the club’s promise to pay Cass his winnings (or the performance of that promise) of its potential of constituting consideration for the payment. The power to make the order is discretionary³¹⁰ so that there can be no certainty of its being exercised. The club’s promise may (by reason of the existence of that power) be of doubtful value but this is not sufficient to negative the possibility of its amounting to consideration.³¹¹ Moreover, the power to make an order under section 336 is, in general³¹² exercisable only for six months after the determination of the bet³¹³; and, if no attempt were made during that time to obtain such an order there would be no doubt that the club’s promise (unless it were otherwise defective) would then constitute consideration for the payment to it of the stolen money. Where the bet is indeed unfair, there may, however, be mechanisms under the Act by which the victim of the theft can, directly or indirectly, secure the return of the stolen money, or at least of part of it. These mechanisms are discussed in paras 41-050 and 41-051 below.

Application for order under s.336(1) by victim of the theft

41-050

It has been suggested in para.41-023 above that there is nothing in section 336 which expressly restricts the power to apply for an order under the section to the parties of the bet. If this is right, an application for such an order could be made by the victim of the theft. Under s.336(1), the effect of the order (in cases of the present kind) would be that any money paid in relation to the bet “shall be repaid to the person who paid it and repayment may be enforced as a debt by that person.”³¹⁴ The person entitled to repayment would indeed be the thief, since he would be the person who would have paid the (stolen) money “in relation to the bet (whether by way of ... stake ... or otherwise)”³¹⁵ to the winner; but the victim of the theft would then have a civil claim against the thief for the restitution of the stolen money. It is an open question whether such a claim would be a proprietary claim or a personal one (under which the victim of the theft would rank equally with the thief’s other creditors³¹⁶). In this respect, the victim’s claim against the thief could be less advantageous to the victim than the victim’s claim against the club was in the Lipkin Gorman case.³¹⁷ On the other hand, in a restitution claim by the victim of the theft against the thief the partial defence of change of position by the club, that prevailed in the Lipkin Gorman case,³¹⁸ would not be available to the thief since that defence is not available to a defendant who has changed his position in bad faith.³¹⁹ Nor would change of position by the club afford it a partial defence to an order to make repayment to the thief (if the bet is unfair) under section 336. Such repayment “may be enforced as a debt due to that person”³²⁰ (who would be the payor of the money to the Club, i.e. the thief); and in actions for the recovery of a debt there is no defence of change of position. In this respect the rights of the victim of the theft might at first sight seem to be more favourable to him, if he could invoke section 336, than the victim’s rights against the club were in the Lipkin Gorman case; for it is arguable that the victim could, under that section, get an order for the repayment to the thief of all the stolen money lost by the thief, and that the victim could then bring a restitution claim for the return of that money against the thief. But it will be argued in para.41-051 below that the Commission, in making an order under s.336(1) could so formulate the order as to reach a result substantially similar to that reached by the House of Lords in that case.

Flexibility of orders under s.336(1)

41-051

It was pointed out in para.41-040 above that s.337 of the Gambling Act 2005 gives considerable flexibility to the Gambling Commission when making an order in relation to an unfair bet under the powers conferred on it by s.336(1). In particular, s.337(2) empowers the Commission to make such an order “in relation to the whole, or any part or aspect of, a betting transaction”; and by s.337(3) such an order may make “incidental provision; in particular ... about ... (b) the consequences of the order for other parts or aspects of a betting transaction one part or aspect of which becomes void under the order.” The question here is whether the facts that the bet was made with stolen money, and that the victim has an interest in the recovery of that money, are a “part or aspect” of the betting transaction within these provisions. The circumstance that stolen money was used to make or pay a bet can scarcely be described as a “part” of the betting transaction; and, although it may be an “aspect” of that transaction, even this line of reasoning is not free from difficulty. Section 337(3)(b) seems to regard a “part or aspect” of the transaction as something that has the potential of becoming “void under the order” and the circumstance that stolen money was used by a party to the bet can hardly be something that so “becomes void.” The most plausible argument would seem to be that, under s.337(3)(b), the court could order that the payment made with stolen money was “void” and that the Commission could then, as one of the “consequences of the order” specify that the stolen money should be returned, not to the thief (as s.336(2)(b) would seem to require), but to the victim of the theft. This might in turn cause hardship to the other party to the bet if he had received the payment in good faith and for valuable consideration. One solution of this problem would be to say that the Commission’s discretion under s.337(3)(b) is sufficiently broad to allow it to take this hardship into account by ordering a partial return of the stolen money to the victim of the theft. This would lead to much the same result (though by a different route) as that which the House of Lords had reached in Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd ³²¹ by subjecting the victim’s right of recovery to the partial defence of change of position. For this purpose, the Commission might be able to take account of the degree of responsibility which the party to whom the stolen money had been paid pursuant to the debt bore for the circumstances making the bet “unfair.” ³²² It should be emphasised that the Commission’s power here under discussion exists only in relation to such “unfair” bets and, in general, only for six months after the result of the bet had been determined. ³²³

^{280.} Above, para.41-001.

^{281.} Gambling Act 2005, heading to Pt 17.

^{282.} Bridger v Savage (184) 15 Q.B.D. 363, 367; Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548, 562, 577; Hillside (New Media) Ltd v Baasland [2010] EWHC 3336 (Comm).

^{283.} Above, para.41-029.

^{284.} (1777) 1 Cowp. 197.

^{285.} ibid., at 199–200.

^{286.} Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548 at 563, 575.

^{287.} cf. Vol.I, para.4-053.

^{288.} See Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548, below, para.41-047, where the defendant was held liable, even though it had received the stolen money in good faith, because it had not provided “valuable” or “full” consideration for it: see at 570 and 560; above, Vol.I, para.4-016. For the effect of the Gambling Act 2005 on the reasoning of this case, see below, para.41-047.

- 289. (1771) 1 Cowp. 197; above, para.41-046.
- 290. [1991] 2 A.C. 548; see above, Vol.I, paras 4-016 and 4-017.
- 291. For the amounts involved, see below, n.287.
- 292. See above, Vol.I, para.4-186.
- 293. See above, Vol.I, para.4-188.
- 294. [1991] 2 A.C. 548, 562, 577.
- 295. See the phrase quoted at n.286 below.
- 296. See generally, above, Vol.I, para.29-186.
- 297. [1991] 2 A.C. 548, 582.
- 298. ibid., at 581.
- 299. The total amount of stolen money used by Cass in gambling at the Club was £222,908.98; the decision was that the Club was liable for no more than £154,695, this being the net amount lost by Cass (deducting his winnings from his losses) during the period of his having gambled with the stolen money (making allowance also for £20,050 attributable to his own money).
- 300. [1991] 2 A.C. 548, above para.41-047.
- 301. Above, para.41-011. The contract for the purchase of chips would also now generally be enforceable as a contract relating to gambling within s.335(1): above, para.41-042.
- 302. See Gambling Act 2005, s.335(2), above paras 41-017 to 41-022.
- 303. See above, para.41-047 after n.287.
- 304. Gambling Act 2005, s.336(3); above, para.41-022.
- 305. Marginal note to Gambling Act 2005, s.336.
- 306. [1991] 2 A.C. 548; above, para.41-047.
- 307. Above, paras 41-022, 41-023.
- 308. Gambling Act 2005, s.336(2)(a).
- 309. ibid., s.336(2)(b).
- 310. s.336(1) begins with the words “The Commission may make an order ...” (italics supplied).
- 311. cf. above, Vol.I, para.4-052.
- 312. i.e., subject to s.336(6), above para.41-022 (contract unfair because a party has been convicted of cheating, contrary to s.42 of the 2005 Act).
- 313. Gambling Act 2005, s.336(5).
- 314. Gambling Act 2005, s.336(2)(b).

- 315. ibid.
- 316. See FHR European Ventures LLP v Mankarious [2014] UKSC 45, [2014] 4 All E.R. 79 where, in the context of a principal's claim against his agent in respect of a bribe or secret profit received by the agent, Lord Neuberger P. at [1] distinguished between a "proprietary" claim and one for "equitable compensation" and said that the two main advantages of a claim of the former kind were that it gave the claimant priority over the debtor's unsecured creditors and a right to "trace and follow" the subject-matter of the claim in equity, whereas neither of these advantages would be available to a person entitled only to "equitable compensation." The claim in this case was held to be a proprietary one: see at [46]. For the distinction between the two kinds of remedies, see generally Vol.I, Chapter 29, section 4.
- 317. Above, para.41-047. For discussion of the remedy in Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548, see Armstrong DLW GmbH v Winnington Networks Ltd [2012] EWHC 10 (Ch), [2013] Ch. 156 especially at [71]–[75], where the judgment of Mr Stephen Morris Q.C. at [75] accepted counsel's submission that the Lipkin Gorman case was "in substance" one "of a 'proprietary restitutionary claim' and not a claim for restitution for unjust enrichment." It is not entirely clear whether this distinction is concerned with the basis of the claim as opposed to its legal nature, i.e. whether it is intended to make the same points as the distinction drawn by Lord Neuberger P. in FHR European Ventures LLP v Mankarious [2014] UKSC 45, [2014] 4 All E.R. 79 at [1], quoted in n.304 above, or as those drawn in the distinction (similar to Lord Neuberger's) in the text at and in n.304 above between "proprietary" and "personal" claims.
- 318. ibid.
- 319. Above, Vol.I, para.29-191.
- 320. Gambling Act 2005, s.336(2)(b).
- 321. [1991] 2 A.C. 548; above, para.41-047.
- 322. See Gambling Act 2005, s.336(4) given a list of such factors. The list is not exhaustive: see above, para.41-022.
- 323. See above, para.41-022.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 42 - Insurance

Section 1. - The Nature of Insurance ¹

Definition

42-001

! A contract of insurance is one whereby one party (the insurer) undertakes for a consideration to pay money or provide a corresponding benefit ² to or for the benefit of ³ the other party (the assured) upon the happening of an event which is uncertain, either as to whether it has or will occur at all, or as to the time of its occurrence, ⁴ where the object of the assured is to provide against loss or to compensate for prejudice caused by the event, or to make provision for some identified contingency, such as for the assured's old age (where the event is the reaching of a certain age by the assured) or for the benefit of others upon his death (where the event is the death of the assured). ⁵ It is these objectives which distinguish insurance from gaming or wagering. ⁶ When embodied in a document the contract is usually called a policy, but save in the case of marine and possibly life insurance, ⁷ an oral contract of insurance, though rare, is perfectly valid ⁸ and may indeed also be described as a policy. ⁹

Types of insurance contract

42-002

There are many ways in which an insurance contract may be classified. The nature and legal implications of an insurance contract may depend on the type of risk, the type of benefit to be paid, and the nature or circumstances of the assured. As regards the type of risk, insurance policies are broadly classified as non-marine and marine insurance. Marine insurance is defined in s.1 of the Marine Insurance Act 1906. Although it follows that non-marine insurance lies outside the scope of a marine insurance contract, a number of policies will include both marine and non-marine components. Within this broad division, policies may be sub-classified by reference to whether the risks insured against are, to take a few examples, death, personal accident, fire, theft, negligence, or motor accidents. As regards the type of benefit, one may characterise insurance contracts as either indemnity or contingency contracts. The nature and effect of an insurance policy may also depend on the position or means of the assured in that the policy may be regarded as a consumer policy or a commercial insurance. ¹⁰ The law's approach to construing and determining the operation of such contracts can depend on the nature of the contract itself. ¹¹

Indemnity insurance

42-003

! Most contracts of insurance are contracts of indemnity, whereby the insurer agrees to compensate the assured for the loss that the latter may sustain through the happening of the event upon which the insurer's liability may arise, ¹² but this is not necessarily so. If the object of the contract is indemnification (that is, the insurer's obligation does not arise unless and until the assured has sustained a loss), the contract remains one of indemnity even if it quantifies in advance the value of the potential loss, in which case the insurance is called "valued". ¹³ The agreed sum is deemed to be an indemnity even if in the particular circumstances it does not represent the true loss, ¹⁴ and the insurer can avoid payment on the grounds that the assured is seeking to recover more than an indemnity only if the discrepancy is so great as to make the contract a wager,¹⁵ or unless the assured knew of such discrepancy but failed to disclose it to the insurer or misrepresented the true position to the insurer.¹⁶ The loss which can be indemnified under such an insurance contract may be physical damage to property, financial loss or a legal liability. If a contract is one of indemnity insurance, there are at least three practical consequences in classifying an insurance contract as a contract of indemnity as opposed to a contingency insurance. First, the assured is entitled only to compensation for his loss. He is not entitled to receive or retain any benefits which result in the assured being over-compensated.¹⁷ Secondly, the assured's cause of action against the insurer arises upon the assured suffering the loss in question. Accordingly, once the "loss" has been sustained, subject to the terms of the contract, time then starts running for the purposes of the Limitation Act 1980. Thirdly, if the insurer refuses or fails to pay an indemnity as required by the contract, the insurer will not be liable to the assured for any damages above and beyond the amount of the indemnity. This is because the indemnity is itself regarded by the law as damages and the court cannot award damages for the late payment of damages.¹⁸ However, this third consequence changed upon the entry into force of ss.13A and 16A of the Insurance Act 2015 on May 4, 2017.¹⁹  This new legislation introduced into every insurance contract an implied term that the insurer must pay insurance claims within a reasonable time (allowing for investigation and assessment of the claim). If there is a breach of this implied term, the assured will have remedies (e.g. damages) available at common law (and otherwise) in addition to the payment of the claim under the policy and statutory interest.²⁰

Contingency insurance

42-004

Contracts such as life insurance²¹ and certain accident insurances providing for the payment of a specified sum upon the happening of an event or accident²² are not contracts of indemnity; they are often described as "contingency" policies; they do not possess the attributes of contracts of indemnity. The insurer's liability to provide the specified benefit to the assured is generally not dependent on the assured suffering a loss which is the equivalent in value of the specified benefit. Accordingly, the doctrine of indemnity, and related doctrines, such as subrogation, salvage and contribution, will not apply to contingency policies.²³

^{1.} See generally Legh-Jones, MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015); Clarke, The Law of Insurance Contracts, 6th edn (2009); Merkin, Colinvaux's and Merkin's Insurance Contract Law (Sweet & Maxwell).

^{2.} Prudential Insurance v Inland Revenue Commissioners [1904] 2 K.B. 658, 662. Money's worth is a corresponding benefit, as is any service which cannot logically be distinguished from the payment of money: see DTI v St Christopher Motorists Assn Ltd [1974] 1 W.L.R. 99, 106; Medical Defence Union v Dept of Trade [1980] Ch. 82, 94–95. What benefits fall within the latter category of service is not clear, but it is an exceptional category and the right to the proper consideration of a claim or of a request for a service does not fall within it: see CVG Siderurgica de Orinoco SA v London Mutual Steamship Owners Assn (The Vainqueur José) [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 557, 580; Medical Defence Union v Dept of Trade, above. See also Re Sentinel Securities Plc [1996] 1 W.L.R. 316, where it was held that a guarantee protection scheme (under which a company undertook to the customers of suppliers that, in the event of a supplier ceasing to trade because of financial failure, it would honour the supplier's guarantee of the goods supplied and installed) constituted insurance business; Re Digital Satellite Warranty Cover Ltd [2013] UKSC 7, [2013] 1 W.L.R. 605 at [18]–[19]. The insurer's undertaking is one by which he or she is obliged to provide the benefit to the assured in case the specified event occurs. If the undertaking is not obligatory (e.g. because it is discretionary), it is not an insurance contract (Medical Defence Union Ltd v Department of Trade [1980] Ch. 82; CVG Siderurgica del Orinoco SA v London Steamship Owners' Mutual Insurance Association Ltd (Vainqueur Jose) [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 557, 580).

3. For beneficiaries under life insurance see below, para.42-131.
4. Prudential Insurance v Inland Revenue Commissioners [1904] 2 K.B. 658; Fuji Finance Inc v Aetna Life Insurance Co Ltd [1997] Ch. 173, 188–189, 198, where it was held that the benefit payable must be contingent on the event uncertain; it is not necessary for the insurer to be exposed to a risk of loss.
5. See Tyrie v Fletcher (1777) 2 Cowp. 666; Wilson v Jones (1867) L.R. 2 Ex. 139, 150; Prudential Insurance v Inland Revenue Commissioners [1904] 2 K.B. 658; Gould v Curtis [1913] 3 K.B. 84. cf. Lucena v Craufurd (1806) 2 B. & P.N.R. 269, 302; Fuji Finance Inc v Aetna Life Insurance Co Ltd, above, at 198.
6. Wilson v Jones, above; Macaura v Northern Assurance [1925] A.C. 619, 627. See also, Newbury International v Reliance National Insurance Co [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 83, where a policy of "prize indemnity insurance" was held to be effectively a wager. The definition of insurance may be of great importance, for legislation imposes many requirements as to financial status, incorporation, etc. on persons carrying on insurance business. See below, para.42-064.
7. See Marine Insurance Act 1906 ss.1, 21, 22; Life Assurance Act 1774 s.2. cf. Eide UK Ltd v Lowndes Lambert Group Ltd [1999] Q.B. 199, 207–208. There are other statutes which require a written record of specified insurance contracts: see, e.g. Road Traffic Act 1988 s.147.
8. Murfitt v Royal (1922) 38 T.L.R. 334.
9. Re Norwich Equitable Fire (1887) 57 L.T. 341; Forsikringsaktieselskabet National v Att-Gen [1925] A.C. 639.
10. The Financial Conduct Authority's Handbook contains provisions which are specifically aimed at a "consumer" as opposed to a "commercial customer". See Insurance: New Conduct of Business Sourcebook (ICOBS), made pursuant to the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s.138, at <http://fsahandbook.info/FSA/html/handbook/ICOBS>.
11. See recently Tesco Stores Ltd v Constable [2007] EWHC 2088 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 302, [2008] EWCA Civ 362, [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 636.
12. Castellain v Preston (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 380; Leppard Excess Insurance Co Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 91, 95; see also the Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.1. The indemnity essentially is an undertaking by the insurer that the assured will not suffer loss caused by specified events or perils so that if such loss occurs, the insurer is in breach of his contract and is liable to the assured in unliquidated damages: Irving v Manning (1847) 1 H.L. Cas. 287; Firma C-Trade SA v Newcastle Protection and Indemnity Association [1991] 2 A.C. 1.
13. Goole Steam Towing Co v Ocean Marine [1928] 1 K.B. 589, 594.
14. Elcock v Thomson [1949] 2 K.B. 755.
15. Lewis v Rucker (1761) 2 Burr. 1167, 1171. For wagers, see above, Ch.41, and see below, paras 42-014—42-016.
16. Thames Mersey Marine v Gunford [1911] A.C. 529; Hoff v De Rougemont (1929) 34 Com. Cas. 291. See also Visscherij Maatschappij Nieuwe Onderneming v The Scottish Metropolitan Assurance Co Ltd (1922) 10 Ll.L. Rep. 579. For misrepresentation and non-disclosure, see below, paras 42-034, 42-035, 42-038.
17. Castellain v Preston (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 380, 386.
18. Ventouris v Mountain (The Italia Express) [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 281; Sprung v Royal Insurance (UK) Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 111; cf. Callaghan v Dominion Insurance Co Ltd [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 541. This characterisation of an indemnity has been adhered to of late in deference to precedent, and has been criticised in that it restricts the scope of recoverable damages: Clarke, The Law of Insurance Contracts, 6th edn (2009), para.30–9B1; Campbell [2000] L.M.C.L.Q. 42. See also Pride Valley Foods Ltd v Independent Insurance Co Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 120. See the Law Commission's Consultation Paper: Insurance Contract Law: Post Contract Duties and other Issues (LCCP No.201, December 2011). See below, para.42-105. In the award of interest against an insurer, the Court will generally allow interest to run, not from the date of the loss, but from the date by which the insurer should have considered the validity of the claim, taking into account the nature of the loss, the way the claim was presented and the circumstances which required investigation: Quorum A/S v Schramm (No.2) [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 179.

- 19.  These provisions of the Insurance Act 2015 were introduced by the Enterprise Act 2016 ss.28–30.
- 20.  s.13A. See Parliament's Explanatory Notes, para.264. See below para.42-111A.
- 21. Dalby v India and London Life (1854) 15 C.B. 365; Law v London Indisputable Life Policy Co (1855) 1 K. & J. 223; Gould v Curtis [1913] 3 K.B. 84, 95; Fuji Finance Inc v Aetna Life Insurance Co Ltd [1997] Ch. 173.
- 22. Theobald v Railway Passengers' Assurance (1854) 10 Exch. 45; Bradburn v Great Western Ry (1874) L.R. 10 Ex. 1.
- 23. See below, paras 42-113—42-117.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 42 - Insurance
Section 2. - Insurable Interest

In general

42-005

Indemnity insurance obviously requires the assured to have an interest in the subject matter of the insurance other than that created by the contract itself, for otherwise he will incur no loss through the happening of the event insured against, and so if the assured is without a legally recognised interest, the insurer will have a good defence to any claim under such a contract if he chooses to raise it. ²⁴ Contracts which are not contracts of indemnity do not, it would seem, require such an interest at common law to be enforceable as contracts of insurance. ²⁵ However, whether or not the contract is one of indemnity, if it is made without any legally recognised interest or any expectation of acquiring such an interest, it may well be void or unenforceable. ²⁶ The kind of interest which is legally recognised and required in indemnity insurance and by statute (called "insurable interest"), the persons who have to possess this interest, the provisions of the statutes in question, and the time when such interest is required, all raise difficulties which are considered separately below. ²⁷

Definition of insurable interest

42-006

There is no authoritative definition of insurable interest and it is probably impossible to give a general formula to cover all the recognised types of insurable interest. ²⁸ The insurable interest must be discernible from the assured's relationship with the subject matter of the insurance. That relationship may have a particular nature or certain manifestations which render the assured's interest insurable. For example, the assured may be prejudiced by the loss of or damage to the subject matter of the insurance (or may benefit from its preservation), because he has a legal or equitable right pertaining to the subject matter, or because he will thereby become subject to a liability by reason thereof or because he will thereby be deprived of an opportunity to earn income or a profit in respect of the subject matter. ²⁹ Quite apart from such considerations, it may be that the assured's insurable interest arises out of commercial convenience. ³⁰ There are no fixed criteria which will determine the existence of an insurable interest. Each interest and each case must be analysed on its own. The principles underlying the court's approach to determining an insurable interest in respect of one type of insurance does not necessarily apply in respect of other types of insurance. ³¹ However, if there has been a genuine attempt to protect an assured against a specified event by means of a particular type of insurance policy, the court will be reluctant to hold that the assured lacks an insurable interest. ³² There need not be a pecuniary element to the assured's relationship with the subject matter of the insurance.

The relevance of the risk of financial loss

42-007

An assured can insure against the risk of financial loss, whether it be a loss of income or profits or the loss associated with a monetary expense. The risk of financial loss may indicate an insurable interest for the purposes of other types of insurance. It is generally true that a person who would foreseeably suffer financial loss from the occurrence of an event has an insurable interest in the subject matter which it is sought to insure against that event, ³³ but this rule of thumb requires qualification. For example, the assured has an insurable interest in his own life, but can hardly be said himself to suffer financial loss by losing his life. ³⁴ The nature of the interest required for the purposes of the insurance will depend on the subject matter of the insurance, the nature of the cover provided and the loss against which the insurance has been obtained. ³⁵ Normally, the event must either cast upon the assured a legally binding liability, or it must affect a right of the assured which is recognised and protected by the courts. ³⁶ Where a person stands to incur a financial loss, the absence of a legal liability or the absence of harm to a legal or equitable right or expectation will militate against the existence of an insurable interest. For example, a father has no insurable interest in his daughter's personal liability in tort, ³⁷ nor does a person have an insurable interest in another's property in respect of which he merely hopes that he will have an interest in the future, ³⁸ or in his debtor's property over which he has no lien or similar right. ³⁹ Further, an assured has no interest entitling him to insure against an event if he does not seek directly to protect the very right to which he is legally entitled. If, for example, the assured is the sole owner of shares in a company, his interest lies in the shares and their value. The assured has no interest recognised by the law in the profits or assets of the company except insofar as they form the basis of the value of the shares, ⁴⁰ and hence the only way in which he may insure against loss occasioned by the destruction of the company's assets is by insuring against the resultant loss in value of the shares. ⁴¹ Similarly, if the assured is owed a debt by a company he may insure against default in paying the debt, but not against a loss of assets by that company, unless the existence of the debt itself created a proprietary interest in the assets. ⁴²

Types of insurable interest

42-008

! The following instances of insurable interest are supported by authority ⁴³:

(i)

Property insurance

Legal, ⁴⁴ equitable, ⁴⁵ joint ⁴⁶ or sole ⁴⁷ proprietary rights will give rise to an insurable interest; possession whether defeasible or not ⁴⁸ provided that the possessor has some liability or obligation to the bailor, owner or consignee will similarly give rise to an insurable interest. ⁴⁹ If the assured has an insurable interest in goods or property, he may insure against loss of profits consequent upon their loss or damage, ⁵⁰ or against other consequential loss, ⁵¹ provided that this cover is clearly stipulated in the contract. ⁵² The participation of contractors or subcontractors in construction works on the construction site is probably sufficient to endow them with an insurable interest in the property comprising the works. Once the contractors or sub-contractors leave the site, they will cease to have an insurable interest in the works themselves. Any liability which might arise prior to their departure from or by virtue of their presence on the works is emblematic of their relationship with the property and could be insured under a property policy or a liability policy. Any liability which arises thereafter is insurable only under a policy of liability insurance. ⁵³ !

(ii)

Liability insurance

All legally enforceable liabilities, ⁵⁴ whether based upon statutory duty, ⁵⁵ tort ⁵⁶ or contract, may represent an insurable interest. ⁵⁷ It is odd, however, to speak of insurable interest in the context of a liability policy. If the assured's liability is insured by the policy, and the assured is liable, it follows that the policy will respond, whether one speaks of an insurable interest or not. Contractual liability constitutes or gives rise to a reassured's insurable interest for the purposes of reinsurance contracts ⁵⁸ and gives the purchaser of goods to whom the risk but not the property has passed an insurable interest in them. ⁵⁹

(iii)

Life insurance

The assured has an insurable interest in the life of the assured himself ⁶⁰; the lives of those who are legally recognised as being of financial benefit to the assured, e.g. spouses ⁶¹; the lives of those who are bound by legally enforceable obligations to the assured, e.g. debtors, to the amount of the debt when the insurance is made ⁶²; the lives of employers, to the amount of any remuneration, etc. due under the contract of employment ⁶³; the lives of employees, to the value of the contracted employment ⁶⁴; the lives of partners ⁶⁵; and the lives of co-sureties ⁶⁶ as well as the debtor's life ⁶⁷; the lives of those to whom the assured is responsible; or the lives of those whose death or injury gives rise to an obligation on the part of the assured to indemnify another against the latter's liability for those lives. ⁶⁸ Beneficiaries under life insurances are considered later. ⁶⁹

Interest need not be stated

42-009

The nature of the assured's interest in the subject matter need not be stated in the contract of insurance, ⁷⁰ unless of course this information is required by an express term or the insurance is to be against loss of profits or other consequential loss. ⁷¹ If upon a claim being made the insurer does not admit that the assured had a valid insurable interest at the relevant date, ⁷² it is for the assured to prove his interest at such date. ⁷³ In cases of nicety the courts will lean towards a finding of valid interest. ⁷⁴

Insurance of another's interest

42-010

Subject to the ordinary rules of agency, ⁷⁵ and the provisions of the Life Assurance Act 1774 (which is not confined to life insurance), ⁷⁶ an agent without interest may effect an enforceable contract of insurance on behalf of a principal who has an insurable interest, and it seems that either the agent ⁷⁷ or the principal ⁷⁸ can sue on such a contract. In addition, certainly in cases of marine insurance ⁷⁹ and probably non-marine insurance, ⁸⁰ a principal can, after a loss, ratify a contract of insurance made by an agent without authority in order to claim for that loss. Subject again to the Life Assurance Act 1774, a person without any interest at all can insure provided he holds himself trustee for the person who does have an insurable interest. ⁸¹ Furthermore, an assured with an insurable interest may insure the interests of others as well as himself. ⁸² Thus, for example, a bailee liable only for negligence can fully insure the goods against any loss ⁸³; a carrier with a lien over goods may insure them for their full value ⁸⁴; a contractor may insure the entire contract works on site for their full value, so as to cover all other contractors and sub-contractors for any damage to the works ⁸⁵; and an owner of land subject to a lease may fully insure the property for the benefit of himself and the lessee. ⁸⁶ In the case of motor insurance, moreover, the owner of a vehicle can insure against third-party liability incurred in its use by others as well as himself. ⁸⁷ Whether interests other than those of the assured are covered depends upon the construction of the contract. ⁸⁸ The wording of the contract may, of course, limit the interests covered, ⁸⁹ but certainly in the case of an insurance by a bailee in respect of the goods bailed, the insurer must use precise words in order to limit the cover to the bailee's interest alone ⁹⁰ or else must establish that the bailee never had any intention of covering the bailor's interest. ⁹¹ For example, an insurance of the bailee's goods and those held by the bailee "in trust or on commission" covers the interest of the owners as well as the bailee, ⁹² whereas an insurance on goods held "in trust ⁹³ or on commission for which they (the assured) are responsible" covers only goods for which the assured is liable ⁹⁴ and only loss or damage for which he is responsible. ⁹⁵ Where the words in an insurance policy describe the assured by a particular class, and not by name, so that numerous persons might fall within that class, whether or not a particular person is insured under that policy depends on the intention of the named assured or the person who entered into the contract.⁹⁶

Joint and composite insurance

42-011

If the interests of all the assureds are such that in the event of an insured loss occurring, their loss is the same because their interests in the subject matter insured is the same, the insurance may be characterised as “joint”. The insurance is described as “composite” if the loss affects each of the assureds in different ways, which is often, but not always, manifested in the differing quantum of their losses.⁹⁷ A composite policy may be seen as embodying separate contracts for each interest insured.⁹⁸ The classic example of a composite insurance is that which covers the interests of the landlord and tenant of property.⁹⁹ Even if any or all of the assureds (such as a bailor and bailee of property) may recover under the policy in respect of the whole loss sustained by the subject matter insured, because their interest relates to the whole of the subject matter insured, their interests, whilst “pervasive”, may differ so as to characterise the insurance as composite.¹⁰⁰ The classification of the insurance as joint or composite is necessary to gauge the effect of a breach of duty or misconduct by one assured as regards his co-assured.¹⁰¹

Rights over the insurance money

42-012

If an assured voluntarily insures the interests of others as well as his own interest, he is only obliged to hand over the balance, if any, of the insurance money after meeting the loss for which he insured himself, but if there was any obligation on the assured to cover the other interests, then it would seem that the latter have first call on the insurance money.¹⁰² In any case where the assured receives more than the loss for which he insured himself because he covered interests other than his own, he must account to those interests,¹⁰³ but the latter have no rights to proceed against the insurer directly and, it seems, do not have proprietary rights to any recoveries in the assured's hands; the funds held by the assured are not trust property.¹⁰⁴

Statutes requiring insurable interest

42-013

Certain statutory provisions render contracts of insurance void or unenforceable for lack of interest, and where such provisions are applicable, the contract will be unenforceable whether or not the insurers raise the defence.¹⁰⁵ The relevant statutes are the Life Assurance Act 1774 and the Marine Insurance Act 1906.¹⁰⁶

Life Assurance Act 1774

42-014

Although directed primarily to life insurance, the Act covers a considerably wider field than its title suggests. Insurances of marine risks and of goods, however, are specifically excluded from the Act¹⁰⁷; and, as a matter of construction, all forms of indemnity insurance fall outside its scope.¹⁰⁸ A capital investment bond paying out a benefit on the death of a person has been held to be an insurance on the life of that person even though the same benefit was also payable on early surrender.¹⁰⁹ The Act renders void all the contracts to which it applies which are made by way of gaming or wagering or without insurable interest.¹¹⁰ It does not follow that merely because the policy is not a gaming or wagering contract, the assured has an insurable interest, although that will be a consideration.¹¹¹ The Act refers to “policies” and it may be that if the contract is not reduced to writing the Act has no effect,

¹¹² though the word “policy” has been used to describe even oral contracts. ¹¹³ Section 2 renders unlawful any policy to which the Act applies which does not contain the names of all persons interested; or for whose use or benefit, or on whose account, the same is made. ¹¹⁴ Thus, the intended beneficiary must have an interest and be named in the policy. ¹¹⁵ However, it may be that a trustee without interest, who insures for the benefit of someone with interest, can recover the whole amount insured. ¹¹⁶ Section 3 limits the amount recoverable to that representing the assured's own interest ¹¹⁷; this section appears inapposite to life insurance which is not an indemnity contract, except in cases where an assured's interest is measurable in money's worth. ¹¹⁸

The Marine Insurance Act 1906

42-015

This Act applies to marine insurance, which is defined essentially as a contract of indemnity insurance against “marine losses”. ¹¹⁹ The Act provides that any claim by an assured without an insurable interest at the relevant time is effectively unenforceable; it further renders void ¹²⁰ any such contract entered into without either interest and without the expectation of acquiring interest, and any contract of insurance containing a term obviating the requirement that the assured should prove his interest. Section 5 requires the assured to have an insurable interest in the marine adventure insured, in particular by standing in a “legal or equitable relation to the adventure” or any property within the adventure of a nature such that he may benefit by the safety of the subject matter insured or be prejudiced by its adversity. The existence of such a “legal or equitable relation” however is not essential to the existence of an insurable interest for the purposes of the Marine Insurance Act 1906. ¹²¹

Impact of the Gambling Act 2005

42-016

⚠ On September 1, 2007, the Gambling Act 2005 entered into force. ¹²² The Act makes no express reference to insurance contracts. Although the Act repealed the Gaming Act 1845, ¹²³ which applied to purported contracts of insurance, no express attempt was made by the Act to amend or repeal the Life Assurance Act 1774 or the Marine Insurance Act 1906. ¹²⁴ Insofar as either Act makes provision for the requirement of an insurable interest, the 2005 Act can have no effect. There is a distinction between the want of an insurable interest and a gaming or wagering policy. The lack of an insurable interest does not of itself render the insurance contract a gaming or wagering contract. A contract purportedly of insurance will be a gaming or wagering contract if the assured lacks an insurable interest at the relevant time and if the assured has no expectation of acquiring such an interest. ¹²⁵ ⚠ The question remains what impact the 2005 Act has on the statutory provisions in the 1774 and 1906 Acts rendering gaming policies void. In one sense, this may be an arid issue, given that the lack of an insurable interest of its own is currently sufficient to render the insurance contract unenforceable or void. It may be the case, albeit practically unlikely, that a contract of insurance supported by an insurable interest at the same time is still a gaming contract, although the courts can (erroneously) equate the two concepts. ¹²⁶ Section 335 of the 2005 Act provides that the fact that a contract relates to gambling shall not prevent its enforcement, but then states that this provision is “without prejudice to any rule of law preventing the enforcement of a contract on the grounds of unlawfulness (other than a rule relating specifically to gambling)”. Although there are clearly issues of the true statutory interpretation of this provision, it appears unlikely that the 2005 Act will affect s.1 of the Life Assurance Act 1774 or s.4 of the Marine Insurance Act 1906, given that the 2005 Act makes no express provision in respect of these statutes. Further, it is questionable whether the making of an insurance contract, even a purported insurance contract, is likely to constitute gambling for the purposes of the 2005 Act. ¹²⁷ Although the general definition of “gambling” and “betting” is potentially applicable to insurance contracts, ¹²⁸ s.10 of the 2005 Act provides that a “bet” does not include a bet the making or accepting of which is a regulated activity within the meaning of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 and the making of an insurance contract is a regulated activity. ¹²⁹

When interest is required

42-017

The interest of the assured in the subject matter of the insurance need not be present throughout the period of the cover. The time at which the interest must be shown to have existed, in order to enable the assured to recover, depends upon the terms and nature of the contract and statutory provisions. Express contractual terms relating to the time of interest are rare, but insurances which are contracts of indemnity, ¹³⁰ whether valued or unvalued, required the assured to have an interest at the time of loss, ¹³¹ whether or not he had an interest previously during the period of cover, save in the case of retrospective insurance “lost or not lost”, where the interest may be acquired after the loss. ¹³² Goods which are appropriated to the assured’s sale contract and the insurance contract after they have been damaged may be insured. ¹³³ The Life Assurance Act 1774 has been held to require the assured in contracts to which it applies ¹³⁴ to have an interest at the time of entering into the contract, ¹³⁵ so that if a policy governed by the Act is a contract of indemnity the assured may have to establish his interest at the time of the loss and at the time of making the contract. Furthermore, since the Act limits recovery to the amount of the assured’s interest ¹³⁶ and this interest is that existing at the date of the contract, ¹³⁷ it seems that only in cases where the subject matter of the insurance (as opposed to the interest therein) is by its nature variable can the assured recover the value of his interest at the time of the loss, if that is greater than the earlier value. ¹³⁸

^{24.} Anderson v Morice (1876) 1 App. Cas. 713; Macaura v Northern Assurance [1925] A.C. 619; Rogerson v Scottish Automobile and General (1930) 47 T.L.R. 46, 47.

^{25.} “There is nothing in the common law of England which prohibits insurance, even if no interest exists”: Williams v Baltic [1924] 2 K.B. 282, 288.

^{26.} See below, para.42-013.

^{27.} On January 14, 2008, the Law Commission published Issues Paper No.4 on insurable interest as part of its larger review of insurance contract law: http://www.lawcom.gov.uk/insurance_contract.htm.

^{28.} The most famous definition is that given in Lucena v Craufurd (1806) 2 B. & P.N.R. 269, 302, but this was criticised in Macaura v Northern Assurance [1925] A.C. 619, 627. See also Moran Galloway v Uzielli [1905] 2 K.B. 555, 563; and Mark Rowlands Ltd v Berni Inns Ltd [1985] 2 Q.B. 211, 228. For a consideration of the different senses in which “insurable interest” can be used, see Glengate-KG Properties Ltd v Norwich Union Fire Insurance Society Ltd [1996] 2 All E.R. 487.

^{29.} Deepak Fertilisers and Petrochemicals Corp v ICI Chemicals Polymers Ltd [1999] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 387 at [65]; O’Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 389, at [154]. The nature of the liability is important to determine whether or not the assured has an insurable interest in property or merely intended to insure the liability. If the liability arises out of the assured’s care or custody of the subject matter of the insurance, then there may be an insurable interest in the property (Petrofina (UK) Ltd v Magnaload Ltd [1984] Q.B. 127, 135; O’Kane v Jones, where a ship manager was held to have an insurable interest in the insured vessel); in other cases, the nature of the liability may be appropriate for no more than a liability insurance (Deepak). cf. Feasey v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada [2003] EWCA Civ 885, [2003] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 693.

^{30.} Hepburn v A Tomlinson (Hauliers) Ltd [1966] A.C. 451, 477, 481–482; O’Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 389.

^{31.} Feasey v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada [2003] EWCA Civ 885, [2003] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 693 .

^{32.} Feasey v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada [2003] EWCA Civ 885, [2003] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 693 .

- 33. Stockdale v Dunlop (1840) 6 M. & W. 224.
- 34. cf. Gould v Curtis [1913] 3 K.B. 84.
- 35. Glengate-KG Properties Ltd v Norwich Union Fire Insurance Society Ltd [1996] 2 All E.R. 487.
- 36. Stockdale v Dunlop (1840) 6 M. & W. 224; Moran Galloway v Uzielli [1905] 2 K.B. 555; Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.5(2). The definition in s.5(2) is not exhaustive: O’Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 389 at [145].
- 37. Vandepitte v Preferred Accident [1933] A.C. 70, 80: “natural love and affection does not give such an interest at law”.
- 38. Buchanan v Faber (1899) 4 Com. Cas. 223; aliter, a legal right depending upon an expectancy: Cook v Field (1850) 15 Q.B. 460.
- 39. Wolff v Horncastle (1798) 1 B.P. 316, 323; Moran Galloway v Uzielli [1905] 2 K.B. 555, 562, 563. It is, of course, possible to insure against the debtor’s insolvency caused by loss of his property: Waterkeyn v Eagle Star (1920) 5 Ll.L. Rep. 42, 43.
- 40. Macaura v Northern Assurance [1925] A.C. 619.
- 41. Paterson v Harris (1861) 1 B. & S. 336; Wilson v Jones (1867) L.R. 2 Ex. 139.
- 42. Moran Galloway v Uzielli [1905] 2 K.B. 555, 562.
- 43. See the “groups of cases” referred to by Waller L.J. in Feasey v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada [2003] EWCA Civ 885, [2003] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 693.
- 44. Lucena v Craufurd (1806) 2 Bos. & P.N.R. 269, 324; Ex p. Houghton (1810) 17 Ves. 251; North British and Mercantile v London, Liverpool and Globe (1877) 5 Ch. D. 569, 583; Castellain v Preston (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 380; Re Betty [1899] 1 Ch. 821.
- 45. Smith v Lascelles (1788) 2 T.R. 187, 188; Lucena v Craufurd (1806) 2 Bos. P.N.R. 269; Provincial Insurance v Leduc (1874) L.R. 6 P.C. 224; Samuel v Dumas [1924] A.C. 431, 443, 444, 450, 460.
- 46. Page v Fry (1800) 2 Bos. & P. 240; Robertson v Hamilton (1811) 14 East 522; Robinson v Gleadow (1835) 2 Bing.N.C. 156.
- 47. Inglis v Stock (1885) 10 App. Cas. 263, 270.
- 48. Boehm v Bell (1799) 8 T.R. 154, 161; Marks v Hamilton (1852) 7 Exch. 323; Goulstone v Royal (1858) 1 F. & F. 276.
- 49. North British v Moffat (1871) L.R. 7 C.P. 25, 30, 31; Macaura v Northern Assurance [1925] A.C. 619, 628.
- 50. Barclay v Cousins (1802) 2 East 544; Eyre v Glover (1812) 16 East 218; Royal Exchange v M’Swiney (1850) 14 Q.B. 646; Stockdale v Dunlop (1840) 6 M. & W. 224.
- 51. Inman SS Co v Bischoff (1882) 7 App. Cas. 670, 676. In order to insure against loss of profits or other consequential loss suffered by virtue of damage to the property, the assured need not have an interest in the property, but only in the profits or the subject matter lost: Glengate-KG Properties Ltd v Norwich Union Fire Insurance Society Ltd [1996] 2 All E.R. 487; cf. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.5.
- 52. Re Sun Fire and Wright (1834) 3 N. & M. 819; Re Wright and Pole (1834) 1 A. & R. 621; Mackenzie v Whitworth (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 142; affirmed on appeal (1875) 1 Ex. D. 36; Dixon v Whitworth (1879) 4 C.P.D. 371, 375.

53. ! Deepak Fertilisers and Petrochemicals Corp v ICI Chemicals & Polymers Ltd [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 387 at [65]; cf. National Oilwell (UK) Ltd v Davy Offshore Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 582, 611. See Legh-Jones, MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), para.1–161.
54. The policy may dictate that the liability of the assured may arise by virtue of his particular interest, in which case there must be a sufficient connection between the liability and the interest: see C.F. Turner v Manx Line Ltd [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 137, 143; Christmas v Taylor Woodrow Civil Engineering Ltd [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 407, 410–411. But see below, para.42-023, for considerations of public policy, etc. which may invalidate some such contracts.
55. British Cash and Parcel Conveyors v Lamson Store Service [1908] 1 K.B. 1006, 1014, 1015.
56. British Cash v Lamson [1908] 1 K.B. 1006, 1014, 1015.
57. Miller v Warre (1824) 1 C. & P. 237, 239; Stock v Inglis (1884) 12 Q.B.D. 564; Anderson v Morice (1876) 1 App. Cas. 713.
58. Re Law Guarantee Trust [1914] 2 Ch. 617, 631. However, the reinsurer may also have thereby an interest in the subject matter of the original or underlying insurance (see Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.9(1)). See also British Dominion General Insurance Co v Duder [1915] 2 K.B. 394, 400; Toomey v Eagle Star Insurance Co Ltd [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 516, 522–524; Charter Reinsurance Co Ltd v Fagan [1997] A.C. 313, 387, 392; see below, para.42-126.
59. Anderson v Morice (1876) 1 App. Cas. 713, 724. See Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.7(2).
60. Wainwright v Bland (1835) 1 Moo. & Rob. 481; M'Farlane v Royal London Friendly Society (1886) 2 T.L.R. 755.
61. Reed v Royal Exchange (1795) Peake (Add.Cas.) 70; Griffiths v Fleming [1909] 1 K.B. 805. But not other relatives in the absence of legal rights or obligations: Halford v Kymer (1830) 10 B. & C. 724; Shilling v Accidental Death (1858) 1 F. & F. 116; Harse v Pearl Life [1903] 2 K.B. 92 (mother); Att-Gen v Murray [1904] 1 K.B. 165 (son). See, however, Barnes v London, Edinburgh and Glasgow Life [1892] 1 Q.B. 864. cf. Howard v Refuge Friendly Society (1886) 54 L.T. 644, 646; Elson v Crookes (1911) 106 L.T. 462; and Goldstein v Salvation Army [1917] 2 K.B. 291.
62. Dalby v India and London Life (1854) 15 C.B. 365; Law v London Indisputable Life (1855) 1 K. & J. 223; Hebdon v West (1863) 3 B. & S. 579.
63. Hebdon v West (1863) 3 B. & S. 579; Turnbull v Scottish Provident (1896) 34 S.L.R. 146.
64. Simcock v Scottish Imperial (1902) 10 S.L.T. 286.
65. Griffiths v Fleming [1909] 1 K.B. 805, 815.
66. Branford v Saunders (1877) 25 W.R. 650. In the same case, a joint debtor has an insurable interest in the life of the other joint debtor.
67. Lea v Hinton (1854) 5 De G.M. & G. 823.
68. Feasey v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada [2003] EWCA Civ 885, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 693.
69. See below, para.42-131.
70. Mackenzie v Whitworth (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 142, 148; see also Crowley v Cohen (1832) 3 B. & Ad. 478, 485; Inglis v Stock (1885) 10 App. Cas. 263, 270, 274. See Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.26(2).

- 71. See below, para.42-128.
- 72. See below, para.42-017.
- 73. Macaura v Northern Assurance [1925] A.C. 619, 632.
- 74. Stock v Inglis (1884) 12 Q.B.D. 564, 571; affirmed (1885) 10 App. Cas. 263; Feasey v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada [2003] EWCA Civ 885, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 693.
- 75. See above, Ch.31.
- 76. See below, para.42-014.
- 77. Provincial Insurance v Leduc (1874) L.R. 6 P.C. 224, 244. An agent may sue on a policy in his own name, for his principal's loss, if the policy is issued in his own name, whether or not the principal's interest is noted; any recovery is held by the agent on behalf of his principal: The Transcontinental Underwriting Agency Srl v Grand Union Insurance Co Ltd [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 409. It is open to question whether the agent's ability to sue is limited to the situation where the contract is made in the agent's name. This principle applicable to insurance law does not obviate the requirement of an insurable interest: Sharp v Sphere Drake Insurance Plc (The Moonacre) [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 501, 516.
- 78. Browning v Provincial Insurance (1873) L.R. 5 P.C. 263, 272, 273.
- 79. See Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.86.
- 80. National Oilwell (UK) Ltd v Davy Offshore Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 582, 607–608; cf. Grover v Matthews [1910] 2 K.B. 401; Ferguson v Aberdeen Parish Council, 1916 S.C. 715.
- 81. Prudential Staff Union v Hall [1947] K.B. 685. Thus a seller in possession of the goods when the property and risk have passed may insure his buyer's interest: North British v Moffat (1871) L.R. 7 C.P. 25, 30, 31. The intention is necessary, for otherwise the contract is likely to be a wager: Tomlinson (Hauliers) Ltd v Hepburn [1966] A.C. 451, 480.
- 82. Castellain v Preston (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 380, 398. Indeed, the assured may insure another as an undisclosed principal, provided that the insurer is willing to contract with an undisclosed principal: Talbot Underwriting Ltd v Nausch Hogan & Murray (The Jascon 5) [2006] EWCA Civ 889, [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 195. If an assured does not insure the interest of another, that other person who is interested in the subject matter of the insurance may have recourse against the insurer under the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999. cf. Trident General Insurance Co Ltd v McNiece Bros Pty Ltd (1988) 165 C.L.R. 107 High Court of Australia. See also Married Women's Property Act 1882 s.11 (as to an insurance taken out by a married spouse) and Civil Partnership Act 2004 ss.70, 253 (as to an insurance taken out by a civil partner).
- 83. Waters v Monarch Fire and Life Assurance Co (1856) 5 E. & B. 870.
- 84. Tomlinson (Hauliers) Ltd v Hepburn [1966] A.C. 451.
- 85. Petrofina (UK) Ltd v Magnaload Ltd [1984] Q.B. 127; National Oil Well (UK) Ltd v Davy Offshore Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 582, 608–612. For an application of this principle in the context of a shipbuilding contract, see Stone Vickers Ltd v Appledore Ferguson Shipbuilders Ltd [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 288 (although the actual decision was reversed on appeal, on the basis that, as a matter of construction, the sub-contractor was not intended to have the benefit of the insurance: [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 578). See also Hopewell Project Management Ltd v Ewbank Preece Ltd [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 448.
- 86. Mark Rowlands Ltd v Berni Inns Ltd [1986] Q.B. 211; Lonsdale & Thompson Ltd v Black Arrow Group Plc [1993] 2 W.L.R. 815; cf. Talbot Underwriting Ltd v Nausch Hogan & Murray (The Jascon 5) [2006] EWCA Civ 889, [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 195.

- 87. See Williams v Baltic Insurance Association of London [1924] 2 K.B. 282; Tattersall v Drysdale [1935] 2 K.B. 174; and now Road Traffic Act 1988 s.148(7). See below, para.42-123.
- 88. Waters v Monarch Fire and Life Assurance Co (1856) 5 E. & B. 870; Tomlinson (Hauliers) Ltd v Hepburn [1966] A.C. 451. See, for example, Newcastle Protection and Indemnity Association v V Ships (USA) Inc [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 515.
- 89. North British v Moffat (1871) L.R. 7 C.P. 25; Engel v Lancashire and General (1925) 41 T.L.R. 408.
- 90. London and North Western Ry v Glyn (1859) 1 E. & E. 652, 663. cf. DG Finance Ltd v Scott [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 387, 392.
- 91. Tomlinson (Hauliers) Ltd v Hepburn [1966] A.C. 451, 473, 481.
- 92. Donaldson v Manchester Insurance (1836) 14 S. (Ct. of Sess.) 601; Waters v Monarch Fire and Life Assurance Co (1856) 5 E. & B. 870; Cochran v Leckie's Trustee (1906) 8 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 975.
- 93. This means "entrusted": Waters v Monarch Fire and Life, above; cf. Lake v Simmons [1927] A.C. 487; Rigby (Haulage) v Reliance Marine [1956] 2 Q.B. 468; Ramco (UK) Ltd v International Insurance Co of Hannover Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 675, [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 595 at [8].
- 94. North British v Moffat (1871) L.R. 7 C.P. 25; Ramco (UK) Ltd v International Insurance Co of Hannover Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 675, [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 595.
- 95. Engel v Lancashire and General (1925) 41 T.L.R. 408; Ramco (UK) Ltd v International Insurance Co of Hannover Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 675, [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 595.
- 96. Boston Fruit Co v British & Foreign Marine Insurance Co [1906] A.C. 336, 340–341; National Oilwell (UK) Ltd v Davy Offshore Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 582, 596–597; BP Exploration Operating Co Ltd v Kvaerner Oilfield Products Ltd [2004] EWHC 999 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 307.
- 97. Samuel & Co Ltd v Dumas [1924] A.C. 431; General Accident Fire & Life Assurance Corp Ltd v Midland Bank Ltd [1940] 2 K.B. 388, 404–406; New Hampshire Insurance Co v MGN Ltd [1997] L.R.L.R. 24; The State of the Netherlands v Youell [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 440; affirmed [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 236; Arab Bank Plc v Zurich Insurance Co [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 262. cf. DSG Ltd v QBE International Insurance Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 283.
- 98. Arab Bank Plc v Zurich Insurance Co [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 262. See also Panzer v Simcoe & Erie Insurance Co, 74 D.L.R. (4th) 197, 200 (1990) Sup. Ct. Canada. As regards the insurance of partnerships or corporate groups, see Brit Syndicates Ltd v Grant Thornton International [2008] UKHL 18; cf. HLB Kidsons v Lloyd's Underwriters [2007] EWHC 1951 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 237 at [80]–[97], [2008] EWCA Civ 1206, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 8, where the court construed a provision requiring notification by the "Assured" as not imposing an obligation on each individual insured where the claim was brought by a partnership.
- 99. General Accident Fire & Life Assurance Corp Ltd v Midland Bank Ltd [1940] 2 K.B. 388.
- 100. The State of the Netherlands v Youell, above. See also Tomlinson (Hauliers) Ltd v Hepburn [1966] A.C. 451; Petrofina (UK) Ltd v Magnaload Ltd [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 91, 95–96.
- 101. See below, paras 42-022, 42-042.
- 102. Dalgleish v Buchanan (1854) 16 D. (Ct. of Sess.) 332; Martineau v Kitching (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 436; Ferguson v Aberdeen, 1916 S.C. 715. The assured cannot, of course, deduct for losses for which he was not covered: Maurice v Goldsbrough [1939] A.C. 452.
- 103. Holland v Smith (1806) 6 Esp. 11; Re Emmett Ex p. Andrews (1816) 1 Mad. 573; Sideways v

Todd (1818) 2 Stark. 400; Armitage v Winterbottom (1840) 1 Man. & G. 130; Lea v Hinton (1854) 5 De G.M. & G. 823.

- 104. DG Finance Ltd v Scott [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 387, 392. In this case, the Court of Appeal held that the others whose interests were insured had no right to proceed directly against the insurer. However, the position might now be different under the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999. cf. Cochran v Leckie's Trustee (1906) 8 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 975; cf. Vandepitte v Preferred Accident [1933] A.C. 70, 79. If the insurance covers only the interest of the assured, others have no rights over the insurance money in law or equity: Re Law Guarantee Trust [1915] 1 Ch. 340; Re Harrington Motor [1928] Ch. 105. cf. Foskett v McKeown [1998] 2 W.L.R. 298 (rights of beneficiaries to policy proceeds where trustee without authority uses trust funds in payment of premium). Statutory provisions now protect third parties in liability and motor insurance cases. See below, paras 42-121—42-123.
- 105. Ancil v Manufacturer's Life [1899] A.C. 604; Gedge v Royal Exchange [1900] 2 Q.B. 214. cf. Smith v Ralph [1963] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 439.
- 106. The Gaming Act 1845, which had been applicable to contracts purportedly of insurance and had rendered contracts entered into by way of gaming or wagering, was repealed by ss.334 and 356 of and Sch.17 to the Gambling Act 2005, which entered into force on September 1, 2007 (SI 2006/3272).
- 107. Life Assurance Act 1774 s.4. A motor policy containing, inter alia, third-party liability cover has been held to be an insurance on goods: Williams v Baltic Insurance Association of London [1924] 2 K.B. 282; and so has an insurance against loss of money: Prudential Staff Union v Hall [1947] K.B. 282.
- 108. Mark Rowlands Ltd v Berni Inns Ltd [1985] Q.B. 211 (limiting the Act to insurances which provide for the payment of a specified sum upon the happening of an insured event). The view of the Court of Appeal in the Mark Rowlands case to the effect that the Act was not intended to apply to indemnity insurance was expressly approved by the Privy Council in Siu v Eastern Insurance Co Ltd [1994] 2 A.C. 199. See Feasey v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada [2003] EWCA Civ 885, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 693.
- 109. Fuji Finance Inc v Aetna Life Insurance Co Ltd [1997] Ch. 173 CA, holding that it was enough that a benefit was payable on an event which was sufficiently life or death related (as was the case here, since the policy came to an end on the death of the person, and the right to surrender was related to the continuance of life). Furthermore, even were it necessary for the benefit payable upon surrender to be different from the benefit upon death, the Court of Appeal saw no reason why the difference had to arise from the description or formula adopted for the purpose of fixing the benefit payable. It was sufficient that, given market fluctuations, in practice it was almost inevitable that the benefit payable on death would be different from the value payable on surrender (which would, itself, vary according to when surrender occurred).
- 110. s.1. For the purposes of s.1, the fact that some of the persons who are the subject of the insurance were not identifiable at the inception of the cover and might change over the period of the cover did not affect the insurable interest of the mutual insurer who had promised to indemnify the shipowner in respect of crew on board his vessels; Feasey v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada [2002] EWHC 868 (Comm), [2002] All E.R. (Comm) 492; affirmed [2003] EWCA Civ 885, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 693. For the time when the interest is required, see below, para.42-017. Married Women's Property Act 1882 s.11 provides that a married woman may take out a policy on her own life or on the life of her husband. Civil Partnership Act 2004 s.253 provides that a civil partner has an interest in the life of the other civil partner for the purposes of the Life Assurance Act 1774 s.1. See also Civil Partnership Act 2004 s.70.
- 111. Feasey v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada [2003] EWCA Civ 885, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 693 . O'Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 389 at [145].
- 112. Roebuck v Hammerton (1778) 2 Cowp. 737; Good v Elliott (1790) 3 T.R. 693, 706; Paterson v Powell (1832) 9 Bing. 320, 328.

- 113. See above, para.42-001.
- 114. Hodson v Observer Life (1857) 8 E. & B. 40; Evans v Bignold (1869) L.R. 4 Q.B. 622. Insurance Companies Amendment Act 1973 s.50 provides that s.2 of the 1774 Act does not invalidate a policy for the benefit of unnamed persons from time-to-time falling within a specified class if the class is stated with sufficient particularity so that the identity of all persons within the class can be established. In Feasey v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada [2003] EWCA Civ 885, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 693, the Court of Appeal applied a similar consideration in holding that the mere fact that the lives insured were identified by a class and not by name did not mean that the policy was invalidated by s.1 of the 1774 Act.
- 115. M'Farlane v Royal London Friendly Society (1886) 2 T.L.R. 755.
- 116. Collett v Morrison (1851) 9 Hare 162.
- 117. Feasey v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada [2003] EWCA Civ 885, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 693 .
- 118. Such as when a creditor takes out a policy on the life of his debtor: Clarke, The Law of Insurance Contracts, 6th edn (2009), para.3-2; cf. Fuji Finance Inc v Aetna Life Insurance Co Ltd [1997] Ch. 173 CA (investment account policy). The purpose of s.3 is to outlaw gaming: Feasey v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada [2002] EWHC 868 (Comm), [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm), 492; affirmed [2002] EWCA Civ 885, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 693. This purpose may have to be readdressed in light of the Gambling Act 2005. See below, para.42-016.
- 119. See s.1.
- 120. s.4. The parties to such a contract may be subject to criminal penalties: Marine Insurance (Gambling Policies) Act 1909.
- 121. Feasey v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada [2003] EWCA Civ 885, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 693 ; O'Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 389 at [145].
- 122. SI 2006/3272.
- 123. ss.334 and 356 and Sch.17.
- 124. Or indeed the Marine Insurance (Gambling Policies) Act 1909.
- 125.  See Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.4(2)(a); Legh-Jones, MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), paras 1–027, 1–039.
- 126. cf. Feasey v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada [2003] EWCA Civ 885, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 693 at [53].
- 127. See also above, para.41-009.
- 128. ss.3 and 9.
- 129. Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001 (SI 2001/544) arts 3, 4, 10, 64, 75 and Sch.1.
- 130. See above, para.42-003.
- 131. Anderson v Morice (1876) 1 App. Cas. 713. Apart from the statutory provision considered below, interest at any other time appears to be unnecessary: Williams v Baltic [1924] 2 K.B. 282, 291.
- 132. Sutherland v Pratt (1943) 11 M. & W. 296. cf. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.6(1), and see below, para.42-024.

133. It may be that the loss is sustained by the assured when he acquires his insurable interest by the fortuitous appropriation of damaged goods. See Wünsche Handelsgesellschaft International mbH v Tai Ping Insurance Co Ltd [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 8, where it was also held that goods which were missing could not be appropriated to the contract.

134. See above, para.42-014.

135. Dalby v India and London Life (1854) 15 C.B. 365. This was a case of life insurance, but there seems to be no reason why the same reasoning should not apply to other policies covered by the Act. See also Feasey v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada [2002] EWHC 868 (Comm), [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 492; affirmed [2003] EWCA Civ 885, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 693.

136. See above, para.42-014.

137. Dalby v India and London Life (1854) 15 C.B. 365. See above, n.133.

138. Barnes v London, Edinburgh and Glasgow Life [1892] 1 Q.B. 864, 867. cf. Griffiths v Fleming [1909] 1 K.B. 805, 810.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 42 - Insurance

Section 3. - The Event Insured Against

Event insured against

42-018

⚠ An insurer undertakes to pay money upon the happening of the event ¹³⁹ ⚠ or events stipulated in the contract. The nature of the event, the time and place of its occurrence and the nature of the loss suffered (in indemnity insurance) must be within the scope of the contractual definition.

¹³⁹.

⚠ The word "event" here refers to the "peril" insured against. In many policies, the word "event" may be used to refer to the originating cause of the peril. This, however, is not necessarily so, being a matter of construction of the contract. As to the meaning of the words "event", "occurrence", "cause" and "claim", see Kuwait Airways Corp v Kuwait Insurance Co SAK [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 664, 686 QB, [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 687 CA, [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 803, HL. Caudle v Sharp [1995] L.R.L.R. 433; Cox v Bankside Members Agency Ltd [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 26; Axa Reinsurance (UK) Plc v Field [1996] 1 W.L.R. 1026; Municipal Mutual Insurance Ltd v Sea Insurance Co [1998] C.L.C. 957; Brown v GIO Insurance Ltd [1998] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 201; Roberts Irving & Burns v Stone [1998] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 258; Spire Healthcare Ltd v Royal & Sun Alliance Insurance Plc [2016] EWHC 3278 (Comm), [2017] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 118. In Simmonds v Gammell [2016] EWHC 2515 (Comm), [2016] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 631 at [22]–[27], Sir Jeremy Cooke confirmed that in identifying an aggregating "event", it should be appropriate to the aggregating function, it should be a common factor which could properly be described as an event, and it should be causative of the losses claimed under the policy, which need not be proximate, but must not be too remote. Such words often define the application of monetary limits or excess or deductible clauses and must be construed having regard to the policy as a whole and applied having regard to the degree of unity of time, cause and location: Mann v Lexington Insurance Co [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1. See also Aioi Nissay Dowa Insurance Co Ltd v Heraldglan Ltd [2013] EWHC 154 (Comm), [2013] 2 All E.R. 231, where it was held that losses arising on a reinsurance contract in respect of liabilities incurred by reason of the attacks on the World Trade Center in September 2001 arose out of two events, not one. The words "related series of acts or omissions" have been interpreted to embrace several losses having a common causal relationship, meaning that the acts or events together resulted in each of the claims; the fact that claims might have the same underlying cause and were of a very similar nature was not sufficient to constitute a "related series" in Lloyd's TSB General Insurance Holdings v Lloyds Bank Group Insurance Co Ltd [2003] UKHL 48, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 623 at [27]–[29], [51]. See also AIG Europe Ltd v Woodman [2017] UKSC 18, [2017] 1 W.L.R. 1168.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 42 - Insurance

Section 3. - The Event Insured Against

(a) - The Nature of the Event

Nature of event

42-019

In construing contracts of insurance the courts apply four principles which have the effect of excluding the insurer's liability on the occurrence of particular events, even though such events prima facie may appear to fall within the contractual definition. These principles relate to uncertainty, inherent vice, wilful misconduct and public policy.

Uncertainty

42-020

⚠ Contracts of insurance are construed to cover events which are uncertain either as to their occurrence or as to the time of the occurrence. ¹⁴⁰ Losses occasioned to the subject matter in the ordinary course of affairs, ¹⁴¹ such as ordinary depreciation and wear and tear, do not therefore entitle the assured to recover unless an express stipulation enables him to do so, and simply to insure against "all risks" is not enough. ¹⁴² ⚠ The courts consider that it is extremely unlikely that an insurance contract will indemnify the assured against a loss or a peril, which is inevitable, that is which is not fortuitous. ¹⁴³ ⚠ Fortuity is to be determined at the time of the making of the contract or, possibly, the inception of the risk.

Inherent vice

42-021

Contracts of insurance are construed to cover losses arising from events that impinge upon the subject matter, and not those that arise from its very nature and condition. Losses arising from such an internal cause, termed "inherent vice", will not be covered ¹⁴⁴ unless there is an express stipulation to that effect, ¹⁴⁵ and again an insurance against "all risks" is not enough. ¹⁴⁶ "Inherent vice" refers to the risk of deterioration of the subject matter insured as a result of its natural behaviour or the inability of the subject matter insured to withstand the ordinary incidents of carriage or ordinary use without the involvement of an external fortuitous event. ¹⁴⁷ Of course, certain types of insurance by their nature cover instances of inherent vice, notwithstanding this general principle of construction. Life insurance, for example, covers death from disease and senility as well as from accident. ¹⁴⁸ Similarly, an insurance against loss caused by latent defects is regarded as cover for inherent vice. ¹⁴⁹

Wilful misconduct

42-022

Contracts of insurance are construed as protecting the assured against misfortune, and not against his own wilful misconduct. If the assured himself intentionally and without justification ¹⁵⁰ brings about the event insured against, then in the absence of express provision he will not be entitled to recover. ¹⁵¹ If the assured's deliberate act was itself the product of insanity, so that it could be said that the assured was labouring under such a defect of reason, from disease of the mind, as not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing or, if he did know it, that he did not know that what he was doing was wrong, the assured would not be disabled from recovering under the policy. ¹⁵² The disability from recovering is confined to the assured ¹⁵³ whose wilful misconduct (or that of a third party procured or connived at by the assured) caused the loss. ¹⁵⁴ Another assured with a separate interest in the same subject matter may recover to the extent of his interest, ¹⁵⁵ and loss caused by the wilful misconduct of third parties not procured or connived at by the assured is not within this rule, ¹⁵⁶ though loss through intentional acts of third parties may not be within the scope of the cover granted. ¹⁵⁷ Except in the case of marine insurance, ¹⁵⁸ losses caused by the wilful misconduct of the assured may be covered by express stipulation or necessary implication. In such cases, the assured or his estate may recover ¹⁵⁹ unless the misconduct is of such a kind that it would be contrary to public policy to allow this to happen. ¹⁶⁰ Losses caused by the negligence of the assured do not fall within the principles discussed in this paragraph ¹⁶¹, but the assured's conduct may be so reckless as to be regarded as wilful, ¹⁶² or considerations of public policy may arise so as to disentitle recovery even in the absence of any deliberate intention to cause loss. ¹⁶³

Public policy

42-023

❗ The assured will not be entitled to recover upon the occurrence of an event if it would be contrary to public policy to allow him to do so. ¹⁶⁴ Considerations of public policy are difficult to define, but it is clear that a person will not normally be permitted to recover, or be indemnified, under an insurance policy if to do so would allow him to benefit, directly or indirectly, from his own deliberate criminal conduct. ¹⁶⁵ Nor may a person enforce an insurance to indemnify him against a fine or other punishment imposed for committing a criminal offence, at least where the offence was committed deliberately or the assured's conduct is sufficiently anti-social. ¹⁶⁶ Similarly, a contract to indemnify a person against the consequences of an intentional and manifestly serious civil wrong or tort is void or at least unenforceable. ¹⁶⁷ Therefore, an assured who is liable to a third party by reason of his deceit could not recover under a contract of insurance against his legal liability. ¹⁶⁸ ❗ On the other hand, not all torts, even if committed deliberately, are unindemnifiable. The prohibition will depend on the seriousness of the act, whether it was committed intentionally and the anti-social nature of the act. ¹⁶⁹

❗ There must be turpitude and a sufficient degree of causation between the illegality and the claim under the policy before the assured will be disabled from pursuing a claim under an insurance contract by reason of illegality. ¹⁷⁰ The position is more difficult where recovery is sought in respect of a loss which has been caused unintentionally in the course of committing a criminal offence, since much may turn upon an assessment of the competing policy considerations at stake, but it is clear that there are at least some circumstances in which an assured will be denied recovery even though the loss was not caused on purpose. ¹⁷¹ It is not contrary to public policy for an employer to recover under a contract of insurance in respect of his vicarious liability to pay damages in respect of the oppressive or unlawful acts of his servants or agents. ¹⁷² Unlike the first three principles discussed above, moreover, public policy considerations will override even express stipulations providing for cover against the forbidden event. ¹⁷³ Save where an insurance policy is entirely void, however (as being illegal from the outset, or prohibited by statute), the inability of an original assured to recover under the policy on account of his unlawful conduct will not necessarily prevent third parties from enforcing the policy themselves, ¹⁷⁴ provided of course that the loss falls within the scope of the insurance cover. This is because the assured's inability to recover on the grounds of public policy is a personal disability. ¹⁷⁵ However, where the third party stands in the shoes of the assured under the Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Act 1930, ¹⁷⁶ public policy will defeat any claim made by that third party if the claim arises out of the assured's criminal conduct. ¹⁷⁷ The principles of public policy as they apply to insurance contracts have been cast into some doubt by the recent decision of the majority of the Supreme Court in Patel v Mirza, ¹⁷⁸ ❗ where it was held that a claim will not be enforced if it is contrary to the public interest, meaning that it would be harmful to the integrity of the legal system (or, possibly, certain aspects of public morality). The Supreme Court decided not to follow the reliance test adopted by the House of Lords in Tinsley v Milligan.¹⁷⁹

-
- ^{140.} The requirement of a fortuity will often be found to exist, even if the language of the policy does not expressly require it: see e.g. CA Blackwell (Contracts) Ltd v Gerling General Insurance Co [2007] EWHC 94 (Comm), [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 511, at [42]-[43]. See above, para.42-001; Bennett [2007] L.M.C.L.Q. 315.
- ^{141.} The Xantho (1887) 12 App. Cas. 503, 509. See also Promet Engineering (Singapore) Pte Ltd v Sturge (The Nukila) [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 146.
- ^{142.}  British & Foreign Marine Insurance Co Ltd v Gaunt [1921] 2 A.C. 41. cf. Harris v Poland [1941] 1 K.B. 462. An event may be fortuitous even if it is foreseeable: CA Blackwell (Contracts) Ltd v Gerling General Insurance Co [2007] EWHC 94 (Comm), [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 511 at [44]-[48]; Marina Offshore Pte Ltd v China Insurance Co (Singapore) Pte Ltd [2006] SGCA 28, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 66 at [56] Singapore Court of Appeal. In Quek Kwee Kee v American International Assurance Co Ltd [2016] SGHC 47, [2016] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 660 at [42]-[54], the Singapore High Court confirmed that the unexpected consequences of a voluntary act may constitute an "accident" under an insurance contract, i.e. a fortuity. See also Leeds Beckett University v Travelers Insurance Co Ltd [2017] EWHC 558 (TCC) at [199]-[208].
- ^{143.}  British & Foreign Marine Insurance Co Ltd v Gaunt, above, at 52, 57. In Soya GmbH v White [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 136, 149; affirmed on other grounds [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 122, Donaldson L.J. stated that it was "highly improbable" that the parties would insure an inevitability, but preferred to use the term "known certainty", rather than "inevitability", because it was commonly the case that inevitabilities were insured. It is suggested that this approach to construction should apply to all inevitabilities, known or unknown. The fundamental nature of insurance contracts is that they insure risks, not certainties. See also Leeds Beckett University v Travelers Insurance Co Ltd [2017] EWHC 558 (TCC) at [199]-[208]. Donaldson L.J. referred to the fact that overdue ships or cargoes can be insured, notwithstanding that the loss might already have occurred. However, such marine losses which have already occurred will only be insured if the vessel or cargo is insured "lost or not lost": see s.6(1), r.1, Sch.1 to the Marine Insurance Act 1906.
- ^{144.} Taylor v Dunbar (1869) L.R. 4 C.P. 206; Pink v Fleming (1890) 25 Q.B.D. 396; Wadsworth Ligherage v Sea Insurance (1929) 35 Com. Cas. 1; British & Foreign Marine Insurance Co Ltd v Gaunt [1921] 2 A.C. 41; Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.55(2)(c).
- ^{145.} See the illustrations considered by Sellers J. in Berk v Style [1956] 1 Q.B. 180; Overseas Commodities v Style [1958] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 546.
- ^{146.} See above, para.42-020.
- ^{147.} Soya GmbH v White [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 122, 126; Noten BV v Harding [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 283; Global Process Systems Inc v Syarikat Takaful Malaysia Berhad [2009] EWCA Civ 1398, [2010] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 221, [2011] UKSC 5, [2011] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 302 (disapproving Mayban General Insurance BHD v Alstom Power Plants Ltd [2004] EWHC 1038 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 609). In Global Process Systems, the Supreme Court held that a loss will be caused by an inherent vice, where the inherent vice is the sole cause of the loss.
- ^{148.} Though conversely an accident policy does not cover death by natural disease: Winspear v Accident Insurance (1880) 6 Q.B.D. 42; Isitt v Railway Passengers' (1889) 22 Q.B.D. 504.
- ^{149.} The Caribbean Sea [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 338, 347.
- ^{150.} Gordon v Rimmington (1807) 1 Camp. 123; National Oilwell (UK) Ltd v Davy Offshore Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 582 at 622 (as to meaning of "misconduct"). cf. Compania Maritima San Basilio SA v Oceanus Mutual Underwriting Association (Bermuda) Ltd (The Eurysthenes) [1977] 1 Q.B. 49; Manifest Shipping & Co Ltd v Uni-Polaris Insurance Co Ltd (The Star Sea) [2001] UKHL 1, [2001] 2 W.L.R. 170 concerning the assured's "privity" under Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.39(5). See also Genesisuk.net Ltd v Allianz Insurance Ltd [2014] EWHC 3676 (QB) at [20]-[21].

151. Thurtell v Beaumont (1824) 1 Bing. 339; Beresford v Royal [1938] A.C. 586, 595; Yorkshire Dale SS Co v Minister of War Transport [1942] A.C. 691, 704. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.55(2)(a) does not permit the policy to allow an assured to recover in respect of his own wilful misconduct: The State of the Netherlands v Youell [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 440; affirmed [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 236.
152. Porter v Zurich Insurance Co [2009] EWHC 376 (QB), [2010] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 373 at [17]-[24].
153. And his assigns. cf. British Equitable v GWR (1869) 48 L.J.Ch. 314. As to whose acts are to be attributed to the assured in respect of a clause excluding from cover the assured's deliberate acts, see, National Oilwell (UK) Ltd v Davy Offshore Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 582 at 620-621; KR v Royal & Sun Alliance Plc [2006] EWCA Civ 1454, [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 368.
154. Midland Insurance v Smith (1881) 6 Q.B.D. 561; Samuel v Dumas [1924] A.C. 431; see also Rankin v North Waterloo Farmers Mutual Insurance Co (1979) 25 O.R. (2d) 102 Can.
155. Provided he is innocent and so long as his recovery would not necessarily benefit the wrongdoer: Samuel v Dumas, above; Central Bank of India v Guardian Assurance (1936) 54 Ll.L. Rep. 247; Lombard Australia v NRMA Insurance [1969] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 575. See also The State of the Netherlands v Youell [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 440. See above, para.42-011. cf. Bains v Yorkshire Insurance, 38 D.L.R. (2d) 417 (1963); and compare the position as regards fraudulent claims. See below, para.42-098.
156. Shaw v Robberds (1837) 6 A. & E. 75, 84; Midland Insurance v Smith (1881) 6 Q.B.D. 561 (assured's wife); Letts v Excess Insurance (1916) 32 T.L.R. 361 (stranger); Lind v Mitchell (1928) 45 T.L.R. 54, 56 (assured's servants). See also, Schiffshypothekenbank zu Luebeck v Compton (The Alexion Hope) [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 311.
157. e.g. insurance against "collapse" of a building would not cover intentional demolition: Allen Billposting v Drysdale [1939] 4 All E.R. 113.
158. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.55(2)(a); The State of the Netherlands v Youell [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 440.
159. Moore v Woolsey (1854) 4 E. & B. 243; Beresford v Royal [1938] A.C. 586, 600.
160. See below, para.42-023.
161. Austin v Drewe (1815) 4 Camp. 360, 362; Busk v Royal Exchange (1818) 2 B. & Ald. 73; Cornish v Accident Insurance (1889) 23 Q.B.D. 453; Cole v Accident Insurance (1889) 5 T.L.R. 736; Trinder v Thames and Mersey Marine [1898] 2 Q.B. 114; Harris v Poland [1914] 1 K.B. 462; Yorkshire Dale SS Co v Minister of War Transport [1942] A.C. 691, 704; Walters v Whessoe and Shell Refining Co (1960) 6 Build. L.R. 30; Global Tankers Inc v Amercoat Europa NV (The Diane) [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 61, 66; Marcel Beller Ltd v Hayden [1978] 1 Q.B. 694; and see also Pentagon Construction (1969) Co Ltd v United States Fidelity & Guarantee Co [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 93. cf. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.55(2)(a).
162. See, e.g. Pipon v Cope (1808) 1 Camp. 434; as explained in Trinder v Thames and Mersey Marine [1898] 2 Q.B. 114, per Collins L.J. at 129. cf. Mutual of Omaha Insurance Co v Stats, 87 D.L.R. (3d) 169 (1978) Can; CNA Assurance Co v MacIsaac, 102 D.L.R. (3d) 160 (1979) Can; and also the approach in Gray v Barr [1971] 2 Q.B. 554, 567, 580 and 587. See also Dhak v Insurance Co of North America (UK) Ltd [1996] 1 W.L.R. 936 where it was held, in the context of a personal accident policy which covered bodily injury "caused by accidental means", that bodily injury which was the natural and direct consequence of a course of conduct embarked upon by an assured taking a calculated risk (in this case, excessive alcohol consumption) was not covered by the policy. In Patrick v Royal London Mutual Insurance Society Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 421, [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 85, the Court of Appeal considered a policy provision which excluded claims arising from "any wilful, malicious or criminal acts" and held that the insured will have acted wilfully if he was reckless as to the consequences of his act, i.e. if he does something knowing that it is risky or not caring whether it is risky or not.

163. See below, para.42-023.

164. As to illegality and public policy in the context of a marine war risks policy and the payment of ransom to recover detained property, see Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v Mountain [1997] 2 All E.R. 929; Masefield AG v Amlin Corporate Member Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 24, [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 630. For the effect of public policy/illegality on contracts in general, see Vol.I, Ch.16.

165. Amicable Assurance v Bolland (1830) 4 Bli.(N.S.) 194; Beresford v Royal [1938] A.C. 586; Euro-Diam Ltd v Bathurst [1988] 2 W.L.R. 517, 526. Thus, for example, an assured is precluded from recovery under his policy for the theft of his goods if he has evaded paying import duty on them (Geismar v Sun Alliance & London Ltd [1978] Q.B. 383); and a beneficiary under a life policy is precluded from benefiting from the policy if he murders the assured (Cleaver v Mutual Reserve [1892] 1 Q.B. 147; Davitt v Titcomb [1990] Ch. 110). At common law, the same rule probably applies for manslaughter (see Re Hall [1914] P. 1); but see now the Forfeiture Act 1982, which gives the court general discretion to permit a person who has unlawfully killed another to receive the benefits of, inter alia, that other's life assurance policy. (Re K (deceased) [1986] Ch. 180; Dunbar v Plant [1997] 4 All E.R. 289.) The Act, however, does not apply to murder: see s.5. Where the assured is insane within the M'Naghten rules, he may not have the requisite state of mind to debar him from his claim on the grounds of deliberate misconduct: Porter v Zurich Insurance Co [2009] EWHC 376 (QB), [2010] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 373.

166. See Askey v Golden Wine Co [1948] 2 All E.R. 35; cf. Osman v J Ralph Moss Ltd [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 313; Charlton v Fisher [2001] EWCA Civ 112, [2002] Q.B. 578 at [58], [60]. Such insurances which are contrary to public policy are totally void: Haseldine v Hosken [1933] 1 K.B. 822, 837. Public policy is unlikely to defeat a recovery where the insurance is compulsorily required by law (such as motor insurance): Lancashire CC v Municipal Mutual Insurance Ltd [1996] 3 All E.R. 545, 554. See Bristol Alliance Ltd Partnership v Williams [2011] EWHC 1657 (QB), [2012] R.T.R. 9.

167. Burrows v Rhodes [1899] 1 Q.B. 816, 828; Haseldine v Hosken [1933] 1 K.B. 822. A claim for an indemnity under an insurance policy will be defeated where the loss sustained is sufficiently caused by the illegal or tortious conduct: Delaney v Pickett [2011] EWCA Civ 1532, [31]-[37], [60], [73].

168.  It is an open question whether a contract to indemnify a person against the consequences of his libelling of another is enforceable at common law (see MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), para.30–010). However, under the Defamation Act 1952 s.11, such a contract is not "unlawful unless at the time of the publication that person knows that the matter is defamatory and does not reasonably believe there is a good defence to any action brought upon it". The implication is that an intentional defamation cannot be indemnified.

169.  Hardy v Motor Insurers' Bureau [1964] 2 Q.B. 745, 767-770. In Les Laboratoires Servier v Apotex Inc [2014] UKSC 55, [2015] A.C. 430 at [23]–[29], the Supreme Court said that generally the conduct should be criminal or quasi-criminal before public policy might be engaged.

170. Gray v Thames Trains Ltd [2009] UKHL 33, [2009] A.C. 1339 at [27]–[30], [51]–[54]; Delaney v Pickett [2011] EWCA Civ 1532, [2013] Lloyd's Rep I.R. 24 at [34]–[37]; Les Laboratoires Servier v Apotex Inc [2012] EWCA Civ 593, [2013] Bus. L.R. 80 at [77]–[78], [2014] UKSC 55, [2015] A.C. 430, at [22]–[29]; Sea Glory Maritime Co v Al Sagr National Insurance Co [2013] EWHC 2116 (Comm), [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 14 at [303].

171. See Gray v Barr [1971] 2 Q.B. 554, where an insured was denied any indemnity under his thirdparty “hearth and home” policy because (inter alia) the death he had unintentionally caused arose whilst threatening another with a gun (although acquitted of murder and manslaughter); but cf. Tinline v White Cross Insurance [1921] 3 K.B. 327; and James v British General [1927] 2 K.B. 311 (both approved in Gray v Barr), where assureds were not precluded from recovering under motor policies which included third-party risks, even though convicted of manslaughter in respect of the deaths caused by their driving. See also Charlton v Fisher [2001] EWCA Civ 112, [2002] Q.B. 578 at [58], [60].

172. Lancashire CC v Municipal Mutual Insurance Ltd [1996] 3 All E.R. 545, holding that there was nothing contrary to public policy per se in an insurance which, amongst other things, covered the vicarious liability of a chief constable to pay exemplary damages for wrongful arrest, malicious prosecution, and false imprisonment.

173. Beresford v Royal [1938] A.C. 586. The abolition of the crime of suicide in 1961 might well produce a different decision on the same facts today, although in the absence of a stipulation covering suicide, the insurance would still be unenforceable since the event would have resulted from the wilful act of the assured: see above, para.42-022.

174. Thus, assignees of a life insurance policy may be able to sue on the policy (Moore v Woolsey (1854) 4 El. & Bl. 243), at least if they provided valuable consideration for the assignment (see Beresford v Royal [1938] A.C. 586, 601, 605); and a person who is deliberately run down or injured by a motorist is not deprived of his statutory right against the motorist’s insurer (as to which, see below, para.42-123) by virtue of the motorist’s unlawful conduct: see Hardy v Motor Insurer’s Bureau [1964] 2 Q.B. 745; Gardner v Moore [1984] A.C. 548 (both cases arising in the context of the Motor Insurers’ Bureau scheme). See also Total Graphics Ltd v AGF Insurance Ltd [1997] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 599, 606; cf. Charlton v Fisher [2001] EWCA Civ 112, [2002] Q.B. 578; Bristol Alliance Ltd Partnership v Williams [2011] EWHC 1657 (QB), [2012] R.T.R. 9.

175. Total Graphics Ltd v AGF Insurance Ltd [1997] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 599, 606.

176. See, below, para.42-121.

177. Charlton v Fisher [2001] EWCA Civ 112, [2002] Q.B. 578.

178.  [2016] UKSC 42, [2016] 3 W.L.R. 399 at [101], [120], [174], [186].

179.  [1994] 1 A.C. 340. See above, paras 16-014A et seq.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 42 - Insurance
Section 3. - The Event Insured Against
(b) - The Time of the Event

The period of cover

42-024

Contracts of insurance may stipulate the time when the cover begins and ends but difficulties may arise in deciding whether the commencement or the termination dates stated in the contract are included in the period of cover. In accordance with ordinary rules of construction the courts seek to determine the intention of the parties from the terms of their contract but it seems that in cases of doubt the question is likely to be decided in favour of the assured.¹⁸⁰ Certain rules of construction should be noted. First, unless otherwise stipulated, "month" means calendar month.¹⁸¹ Secondly, a person becomes over N years of age on reaching his Nth birthday.¹⁸² Thirdly, a period "from" ¹⁸³ or "after" ¹⁸⁴ a named day excludes that day, and a period "until" a named day includes that day.¹⁸⁵ Lastly, in the absence of provisions to the contrary, an insurance contract does not apply retrospectively.¹⁸⁶

Event and loss during period of cover

42-025

Subject to the terms of the policy, the event insured against must happen during the period of the insurance ¹⁸⁷ and (in indemnity insurance ¹⁸⁸) the loss resulting from that event must, it seems, also occur in that period, ¹⁸⁹ though it is immaterial that the full extent of the loss is not known or made manifest until later, ¹⁹⁰ and generally, of course, the event and the loss coincide. Insurances against liabilities to third parties ¹⁹¹ are usually construed as contracts indemnifying against the incurring of a liability and not the discharge of that liability, so that only the facts giving rise to a liability ¹⁹² or the making of a claim against the assured ¹⁹³ need occur during the period. Those facts may be equated with the insured peril. ¹⁹⁴ The loss arising from those facts, namely a liability established by judgment, award or agreement, may not arise for a considerable period after the insured peril. Accordingly, in the case of liability insurance, it is the facts underlying the liability or the making of a claim against the assured, or the notification of a circumstance which might give rise to a claim, and not the establishment of that liability, which generally must occur during the relevant period, subject to the terms of the policy.

^{180.} Re North [1895] 2 Q.B. 264, 270.

^{181.} Law of Property Act 1925 s.61(a).

^{182.} Lloyds Bank v Eagle Star [1951] 1 T.L.R. 803.

^{183.} South Staffordshire Tramways v Sickness and Accident [1891] 1 Q.B. 402. cf. Cartwright v MacCormack [1963] 1 W.L.R. 18 (cover note).

- 184. Lester v Garland (1808) 15 Ves. 248.
- 185. Isaacs v Royal (1870) L.R. 5 Ex. 296; Hirdes GmbH v Edmund [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 546. Whether this third "rule" is inflexible may perhaps be doubted: see Re North [1895] 2 Q.B. 264.
- 186. Pritchard v Merchants' Life (1858) 3 C.B.(N.S.) 622; Oceanic SS Co v Faber (1907) 23 T.L.R. 673; Marine Insurance v Grimmer [1944] 2 All E.R. 197; Reinhart v Joshua Hoyle [1961] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 346. For a recent example of retrospective cover, see Wünsche Handelsgesellschaft International mbH v Tai Ping Insurance Co Ltd [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 8.
- 187. Buchanan v Faber (1899) 4 Com. Cas. 223; Oceanic v Faber (1907) 23 T.L.R. 673; Hutchins Brothers v Royal Exchange [1911] 2 K.B. 398; Reinhart v Joshua Hoyle [1961] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 346; Kelly v Norwich Union Fire Insurance Society Ltd [1990] 1 W.L.R. 139. cf. Soole v Royal Insurance Co Ltd [1971] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 332.
- 188. See above, para.42-003.
- 189. Hough v Head (1885) 55 L.J.Q.B. 43; Moore v Evans [1918] A.C. 185; Allis Chalmers Co v Fidelity Deposit (1916) 32 T.L.R. 263; Pennsylvania Insurance v Mumford [1920] 2 K.B. 537. Promet Engineering (Singapore) Pte Ltd v Sturge (The Nukila) [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 146; Mitsui Marine and Fire Insurance Co Ltd v Bayview Motors Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 1605, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 117.
- 190. Knight v Faith (1850) 15 Q.B. 649; Andersen v Marten [1908] A.C. 334, 339. cf. Frewin v Poland [1968] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 100; and Kuwait Airways Corp v Kuwait Insurance Co SAK [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 664, 686 QB, [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 687, CA, [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 803 HL.
- 191. See below, para.42-119.
- 192. Hood's Trustees v Southern Union General [1928] Ch. 793, 800, 801; Chandris v Argo Insurance [1963] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 65. cf. Ellerbeck Collieries v Cornhill Insurance [1932] 1 K.B. 401; Bosma v Larsen [1966] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 22; Soole v Royal Insurance Co Ltd [1971] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 332; County and District Property Ltd v Jenner & Sons Ltd [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 728; Walker v Pennine Insurance Co Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 139; affirmed [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 156. In Bolton MBC v Municipal Mutual Insurance Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 50, [2006] 1 W.L.R. 1492, the Court of Appeal held that in respect of a claim relating to mesothelioma under a public liability policy insuring against "injury" which took place during the policy period, the "injury" took place when the disease first occurred or manifested itself, not when the body was first exposed to asbestos. The position with respect to employees' liability policies was distinguished by the Supreme Court in BAI (Run Off) Ltd v Durham [2012] UKSC 14, [2012] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 371.
- 193. Many liability policies will attach to claims made during the policy period or to claims arising after the policy period provided notice of a circumstance which might give rise to a claim is given to the insurer during the policy period: HLB Kidsons v Lloyd's Underwriters [2007] EWHC 1951 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 237 at [23], [2008] EWCA Civ 1206, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 8; McManus v European Risk Insurance Co HF [2013] EWHC 18 (Ch), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 533. As to when a claim is made, see West Wake Price & Co v Ching [1957] 1 W.L.R. 45; J Rothschild Assurance Plc v Collyear [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 6; MJ Gleeson Group Plc v Axa Corporate Solutions Assurance SA [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 677 at [51]–[59].
- 194. cf. Yorkshire Water Services Ltd v Sun Alliance & London Insurance Plc [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 21, 28.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 42 - Insurance

Section 3. - The Event Insured Against

(c) - The Place of the Event

Place of event

42-026

A contract of insurance may refer to the place where the subject matter of the insurance is, or is to be, situated. ¹⁹⁵ In such cases it may be necessary to determine whether the cover extends to all goods at that place when a loss occurs, ¹⁹⁶ or only to goods at that place when the contract is made, ¹⁹⁷ and difficulties often arise over the definition of the place at which the goods are to be. ¹⁹⁸

^{195.} Dawsons v Bonnin [1922] 2 A.C. 413.

^{196.} Crowley v Cohen (1832) 3 B. & Ad. 478; Joyce v Kennard (1871) L.R. 7 Q.B. 78.

^{197.} Gorman v Hand-in-Hand (1877) Ir.R. 11 C.L. 224; Harrison v Ellis (1857) 7 E. & B. 465.

^{198.} e.g. Wulfson v Switzerland General (1940) 56 T.L.R. 701 (whilst in store at x); Leo Rapp v McClure [1955] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 292 (in warehouse); Overseas Commodities v Style [1958] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 546; John Martin Ltd v Russell [1960] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 554 (final warehouse); Crow's Transport v Phoenix Assurance [1965] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 139 (in transit); Firmin and Collins v Allied Shippers [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 633 (whilst in public warehouse); SCA (Freight) Ltd v Gibson [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 533 (whilst in the normal course of transit temporarily housed); Kuwait Airways Corp v Kuwait Insurance Co SAK [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 664 QB, [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 687 CA, [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 803 HL (definition of "any one location" in policy limit); Wünsche Handelsgesellschaft International mbH v Tai Ping Insurance Co Ltd [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 8 ("ex factory").

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 42 - Insurance

Section 3. - The Event Insured Against

(d) - The Nature of the Loss or Damage

Nature of loss

42-027

Contracts of insurance providing cover for loss or damage are construed so as to extend only to loss ¹⁹⁹ of or damage to the subject matter of the insurance itself. ²⁰⁰ Thus loss of profits ²⁰¹ and other consequential losses, such as loss of rents when a house is burnt down, ²⁰² or loss of salary after an accident ²⁰³ or loss in value of uninjured goods due to damage to other goods, ²⁰⁴ are not covered unless expressly stipulated. Furthermore, the word "loss" does not bear so wide a meaning as might be supposed. The fact that the assured is unlikely to recover the goods, as when they are in enemy territory though not seized by the enemy, ²⁰⁵ is not sufficient to establish a loss under cover for "all losses", ²⁰⁶ and the doctrine of constructive total loss in marine insurance has no application to other kinds of insurance. ²⁰⁷ Earlier suggestions that goods are not "lost" within the meaning of that word in a contract of insurance, when the assured intentionally parted with the property in them, although induced to do so by fraud, should be treated with caution. ²⁰⁸

Damage

42-028

Contracts of insurance may provide cover in respect of "damage to" the subject matter of the insurance. "Damage" is often construed as physical damage. ²⁰⁹ There are two elements to the notion of physical damage. First, there has to have been a physical alteration to the subject matter. ²¹⁰ This alteration may take place at the molecular level and may not be palpable without testing or analysis. ²¹¹ The alteration need not be permanent or irreparable. ²¹² Secondly, the physical alteration should result in a decrease in the value or in the impairment of the utility of the subject matter insured. ²¹³ It is not sufficient if a decrease in value results from the mere suspicion that there has been a physical alteration. ²¹⁴

Expenses incurred to prevent loss

42-029

If an assured incurs expense, sacrifices property or waives valuable rights ²¹⁵ in order to avert or minimise loss recoverable under the insurance contract, in the absence of a contractual provision to the contrary the assured may not be able to recover such expense, even though the insurer benefits as a result of such efforts. ²¹⁶ However, such expenses may be recovered if they may be said to be a loss caused by the event insured against. ²¹⁷ It is commonplace, particularly in marine policies, to include a provision ²¹⁸ allowing the assured to recover such expenses from the insurer.

199. The loss must be a real loss and not a notional loss (Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v Mountain [1997] 2 All E.R. 929, where the waiver of a contractual claim unenforceable because of illegality or duress did not constitute a damnifiable loss) nor a negligible loss (Glengate-KG Properties Ltd v Norwich Union Fire Insurance Society Ltd [1996] 2 All E.R. 487). See also McMahon v AGF Holdings (UK) Ltd [1997] L.R.L.R. 159.
200. Mitsui v Mumford [1915] 2 K.B. 27; Campbell v Denman (1915) 21 Com. Cas. 357; Moore v Evans [1918] A.C. 185. As to the meaning of damage, see, e.g. Promet Engineering (Singapore) Pte Ltd v Sturge (The Nukila) [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 146; Quorum A/S v Schramm [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 249 at [90]. See below, para.42-028.
201. Maurice v Goldsborough Mort [1939] A.C. 452, 461; Horbury Building Systems Ltd v Hampden Insurance NV [2004] EWCA Civ 418, [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 237 at [13]–[27].
202. Re Wright and Pole (1834) 1 A. & E. 621; Menzies v North British (1847) 9 D. (Ct. of Sess.) 694; Theobald v Railway Passengers (1854) 10 Exch. 45; Westminster Fire v Glasgow Provident (1888) 13 App. Cas. 699. But see City Tailors v Evans (1922) 38 T.L.R. 230.
203. Theobald v Railway Passengers, above.
204. Cator v Great Western (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 552.
205. Moore v Evans [1918] A.C. 185; Fooks v Smith [1942] 2 K.B. 508.
206. But see Webster v General Accident [1953] 1 Q.B. 520.
207. Moore v Evans, above; Scott v Copenhagen Reinsurance Co (UK) Ltd [2002] EWHC 1348 (Comm), [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 775; affirmed [2003] EWCA Civ 688, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 752. cf. Marine Insurance Act 1906 ss.60–63. As to the distinction between actual and constructive total loss in marine insurance law, see Fraser Shipping Ltd v Colton (The Shakir III) [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 586; Kastor Navigation Co Ltd v Axa Global Risks (UK) Ltd [2002] EWHC 2601 (Comm), [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 262; affirmed [2004] EWCA Civ 277, [2004] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 481.
208. cf. Eisinger v General Accident [1955] 1 W.L.R. 869. cf. Webster v General Accident [1953] 1 Q.B. 520. See Dobson v General Accident Fire & Life Assurance Corp Plc [1990] 1 Q.B. 274.
209. The precise definition will, of course, depend on the construction of the contract: Clarke, The Law of Insurance Contracts, 6th edn (2009), para.16–2C. See James Longly & Co v Forest Giles Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1242, [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 421 at [22]–[23]. In Cementation Piling and Foundations Ltd v Aegon Insurance Co Ltd [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 97, 102, it was held that an insurance against the cost incurred “in respect of physical damage” included the cost of rectifying the defect which caused the physical damage, but was not itself physical damage.
210. Promet Engineering (Singapore) Pte Ltd v Sturge (The Nukila) [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 146, 151.
211. Ranicar v Frigmobile Pty Ltd [1983] Tas. R. 113, 116 Tas Sup Ct; Quorum A/S v Schramm [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 249 at [90]. cf. the non-insurance decision in Bacardi-Martini Beverages v Thomas Hardy Packaging [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 62, 68–69; affirmed [2002] EWCA Civ 549, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 379 at [10]–[18], and the authorities referred to therein.
212. Ranicar v Frigmobile Pty Ltd, above.
213. Ranicar v Frigmobile Pty Ltd, above; McMullin v ICI Australian Operations Pty Ltd [1997] FCA 541, (1997) 72 F.C.R. 1 Aust Fed Ct.
214. Quorum A/S v Schramm [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 249.
215. Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v Mountain [1997] 2 All E.R. 929, 940, 951, 973.

- 216. Yorkshire Water Services Ltd v Sun Alliance and London Insurance Plc [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 21; Baker v Black Sea and Baltic General Insurance Co Ltd [1998] 2 All E.R. 833 (reinsurance); Astrazeneca Insurance Co Ltd v XL Insurance (Bermuda) Ltd [2013] EWHC 349 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 290 at [137], affirmed [2013] EWCA Civ 1660, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 509. cf. Clarke, The Law of Insurance Contracts, 6th edn (2009) para.28–8G. cf. Jan de Nul (UK) Ltd v Axa Royale Belge SA [2002] EWCA Civ 209, [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 583, 595.
- 217. See, for example, Berens v Rucker (1760) 1 Wm. Bl. 313, 315; Dent v Smith (1869) L.R. 4 Q.B. 414; Canada Rice Mills Ltd v Union Marine & General Insurance Co Ltd [1941] AC 55, 70, 71.
- 218. Known as a “sue and labour” clause in marine policies: see Aitchison v Lohre (1879) 4 App. Cas. 755; Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v Mountain [1999] Q.B. 674. See Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.78. As to where the purpose of the expense is avert or minimise both an insured loss and an uninsured loss, see Standard Life Assurance Ltd v Ace European Ltd [2012] EWHC 104 (Comm), affirmed [2012] EWCA Civ 1713, [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 415; cf. Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v Mountain [1999] Q.B. 674. As to when the right to recover under a sue and labour clause comes to an end, see Atlasnavios-Navegacao Lda v Navigators Insurance Co Ltd [2014] EWHC 4133 (Comm), [2015] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 151 at [335]–[344]; Suez Fortune Investments Ltd v Talbot Underwriting Ltd [2015] EWHC 42 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 651 at [283]–[305].

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 42 - Insurance
Section 4. - Utmost Good Faith and Fair Presentation of the Risk

Introduction

42-030

Insurance contracts have long been regarded as imposing on the parties to the contract obligations based upon what has been described as the “utmost good faith”. Such obligations are most commonly manifested by a duty upon the parties prior to the conclusion of the insurance contract, requiring them not only not to misrepresent material circumstances, but also to provide full disclosure of such circumstances. The nature of the obligation of utmost good faith has been such that it has been relied upon as supporting certain postcontractual duties. Such duties were imposed as a matter of the common law. In 1906, Parliament passed the Marine Insurance Act 1906, ss.17–20 of which codified the common law as it then stood, with an emphasis on the assured’s precontractual duty of disclosure. Even though the duty of disclosure was set out in the Marine Insurance Act 1906, the Courts had long recognised that ss.17–20 represented the common law applicable to non-marine insurance contracts, as well as to marine insurance contracts.²¹⁹ However, Parliament has recently enacted two statutes which modify the assured’s pre-contractual duty of utmost good faith, namely the Consumer Insurance (Disclosure and Representations) Act 2012 and the Insurance Act 2015.

Consumer Insurance (Disclosure and Representations) Act 2012

42-031

The 2012 Act was passed on March 8, 2012 and entered into force on April 6, 2013.²²⁰ This Act applies to consumer insurance contracts, which are contracts of insurance entered into between an insurer (being a person who carries on the business of insurance) and an individual who enters into the contract wholly or mainly for purposes unrelated to the individual’s trade, business or profession. The Act applies to consumer insurance contracts, and variations to consumer insurance contracts, where the contract or the variation was agreed after the Act comes into force.²²¹ The common law, and ss.17–20 of the Marine Insurance Act 1906, relating to the duties of utmost good faith applicable to consumer insurance contracts have been modified by the 2012 Act.²²²

Insurance Act 2015

42-032

The 2015 Act was passed on February 12, 2015 and will enter into force on August 12, 2016, at which time it will apply to insurance contracts, and variations to insurance contracts, agreed after the Act comes into force.²²³ Part 2 of the Act, which deals with the duty of disclosure on the part of the assured, applies to non-consumer insurance contracts.²²⁴ The common law, and ss.17–20 of the Marine Insurance Act 1906, relating to the duties of utmost good faith applicable to non-consumer insurance contracts will be modified by Pt 2 of the 2015 Act.²²⁵

- 219. HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v Chase Manhattan Bank [2003] UKHL 6, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 61 at [5], [42].
- 220. The Consumer Insurance (Disclosure and Representations) Act 2012 (Commencement) Order 2013 (SI 2013/450). The 2012 Act will be amended by the Insurance Act 2015 (ss.14(2), 14(4) and 21(6)) which the latter enters into force on August 12, 2016.
- 221. 2012 Act s.12(4). The 2012 Act will be amended by the Insurance Act 2015 (ss.14(2), 14(4) and 21(6)) when the latter enters into force on August 12, 2016.
- 222. 2012 Act ss.2(5), 11(1)–(2). Section 2(5) will be replaced by s.14(3) of the Insurance Act 2015, when the latter enters into force on August 12, 2016. Section 152 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 is also modified by this Act: s.11(3). See below, para.42-124.
- 223. 2015 Act ss.22, 23(2).
- 224. 2015 Act s.2. A “consumer insurance contract” has the same meaning as in the Consumer Insurance (Disclosure and Representations) Act 2012: s.1.
- 225. 2015 Act s.21(2)–(3). Section 152 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 is also modified by this Act: s.21(4).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 42 - Insurance

Section 4. - Utmost Good Faith and Fair Presentation of the Risk

(a) - Existing law applicable to non-consumer insurance contracts

Utmost good faith

42-033

! An insurance contract is a contract uberrimae fidei ²²⁶ !: it is a contract based on the utmost good faith and if the utmost good faith is not observed by either party the contract may be avoided by the other party. ²²⁷ ! The obligation to observe utmost good faith, moreover, is a continuing one, which does not cease on the conclusion or execution of the insurance contract, although the ambit of the duty in pre-contract and post-contract situations is not the same. ²²⁸ The reason for this principle of insurance law is that contracts of insurance are founded on facts which are nearly always in the exclusive knowledge of one party (usually the assured) and, unless this knowledge is shared, the risk insured against may be different from that intended to be covered by the party in ignorance. ²²⁹ The duty most commonly manifests itself as a duty to disclose material facts and not to misrepresent material facts at or before the making of the insurance contract. Although there have been suggestions in the past that the pre-contractual duty of disclosure is founded upon an implied term of the contract, ²³⁰ the weight of authority is to the effect that the duty to disclose, as well as the duty not to misrepresent, material facts are obligations imposed by law. ²³¹ Although there is a post-contractual aspect of this duty of good faith, the discussion which follows will concentrate on the duty of full disclosure which applies up to the conclusion of the insurance contract for non-consumer assureds.

The duty to disclose material circumstances

42-034

Subject to what follows, the duty is upon the assured, and insurer, ²³² to disclose every material circumstance to the other party. In the case of the assured, this requires that he disclose every circumstance which would influence the judgment of a prudent insurer in fixing the premium or in determining whether to take the risk. ²³³ The test of materiality, therefore, is not what the assured considers material, ²³⁴ nor what a reasonable assured would consider material, ²³⁵ but whether the circumstance would be taken into account by a prudent insurer when assessing the risk (even if it would not, of itself, have had a decisive effect on his decision whether to accept the risk and, if so, at what premium). ²³⁶ The materiality of the circumstances must be assessed by reference to the true facts, whether or not all such facts have been fully and accurately disclosed. ²³⁷ Where the insurer asks the assured to answer specific questions, the parties are taken to have agreed that the facts involved in answering the questions are material, ²³⁸ but this does not affect the duty to disclose material circumstances not covered by the questions, ²³⁹ unless the way they are drafted has this effect, ²⁴⁰ and except insofar as the failure to ask a particular question may make it difficult for the insurers afterwards to assert that the circumstances which would have been elicited were material. ²⁴¹ Indeed, the assured is not required to disclose every minute detail of every material circumstance, but rather only to disclose sufficient detail to allow the insurer to ask for more information, if he requires further facts on which to evaluate the risk. ²⁴² Materiality is a question of fact, but it has long been the practice to adduce expert evidence on the point from insurers, brokers and the like. ²⁴³ A circumstance is material for disclosure by the assured if the circumstance relates to the likelihood or the extent of loss which might be sustained by the insurer under the insurance contract, ²⁴⁴ whether the circumstance relates to the likelihood of the operation of an insured peril or renders the subject matter of the insurance more or peculiarly susceptible to a peril to be insured against, ²⁴⁵ or relates to matters of subrogation, or to the “moral hazard” of the assured. ²⁴⁶ Thus, so far as the assured is concerned, circumstances which diminish the risk need not be disclosed. ²⁴⁷ So far as the insurer's duty is concerned, a circumstance is material and must be disclosed to the assured if it is relevant to the nature of the risk sought to be covered, or to the recoverability of a claim under the policy which a prudent assured would take into account in deciding whether or not to place the risk with the proposed insurer. ²⁴⁸

Scope of duty of disclosure

42-035

The duty of disclosure extends only to circumstances which are within the knowledge of one party but not within the knowledge of the other. The assured must disclose what he knows, even though he does not appreciate that it is material. ²⁴⁹ An assured is deemed to know every circumstance which in the ordinary course of business ought to be known to him, ²⁵⁰ so that the assured may be liable to disclose circumstances known to someone acting on his behalf of which he is unaware. The kinds of situation in which the knowledge of an agent will so affect the position of the assured have been summarised ²⁵¹ as being: (i) where the agent, although not effecting the insurance on behalf of the assured, is relied upon by the assured for information concerning the subject matter of the insurance (sometimes referred to as an “agent to know”) ²⁵²; (ii) where the agent is in such a predominant position in relation to the assured that his knowledge can be regarded as the knowledge of the assured ²⁵³; and (iii) where the agent is used to effect the insurance (in which case the agent is required to disclose not just all material circumstances which the assured is bound to disclose, but also every material circumstance which ought to be known by the agent, or communicated to him, in the ordinary course of business). ²⁵⁴ However, the assured will not be adversely affected by the knowledge of his agent where the information concerns the agent's own fraud on his principal. ²⁵⁵ Where the assured is a private individual, or effects insurance otherwise than “in the course of business”, ²⁵⁶ it is his duty to disclose those circumstances which are known to him, not those which ought to be known to him. ²⁵⁷

Exceptions to the duty of disclosure

42-036

⚠ There are four traditional exceptions to the duty of disclosure (at least insofar as it rests on the assured's shoulders). First, the assured need not disclose any circumstance which diminishes the risk. ²⁵⁸ Secondly, the assured need not disclose circumstances which are either known to the insurer, or presumed to be known to him as matters of common notoriety or knowledge or which an insurer ought to know in the ordinary course of business. ²⁵⁹ Thirdly, the assured is not obliged to disclose circumstances where the insurer has waived disclosure of such circumstances. For example, if the insurer forbears to ask questions after disclosure of circumstances have put him on inquiry, he may be taken to have waived the right to disclosure of the circumstances which such inquiry would have disclosed ²⁶⁰ ⚠; but the doctrine is not applicable to circumstances which are so unusual or special that their nondisclosure would distort the presentation of the risk, since the duty to disclose would otherwise be undermined. ²⁶¹ Similarly, the question which the insurer may ask the assured (usually in a proposal form) may be so framed as to indicate that the insurer does not require further information on the matters in question, thus relieving the assured from doing more than answering the specific questions. ²⁶² Fourthly, an assured is not bound to disclose to the insurer circumstances, disclosure of which is rendered superfluous by the existence of a warranty in the policy. ²⁶³ There may be further exceptions to the duty of disclosure, for example where there is an express exemption granted by a statute. For example, under the provisions of the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974, an assured is specifically dispensed from any obligation to disclose “spent” convictions, or the circumstances ancillary to them, although this is subject to the Court's discretion to admit evidence of the conviction and so render the conviction a material circumstance requiring disclosure. ²⁶⁴ Further, where the assured is possessed of information which is subject to a privilege belonging to another person, the assured may be excused from disclosing such information.²⁶⁵ If however the information is subject to a privilege belonging to the assured itself, the assured remains obliged to disclose it to the insurer.²⁶⁶ Given the reciprocal nature of the duty of disclosure, it is likely that comparable exceptions are applicable to the insurer's duty of disclosure.²⁶⁷ In addition, circumstances relating to a person's race, nationality, religious belief or gender may not be disclosable, because an insurer is not permitted to assess the risk by reference to a person's race, nationality or religious belief after October 1, 2010 or gender after December 21, 2012. As the law currently stands, the insurer is permitted to assess risks by reference to age or disability.²⁶⁸

Time of disclosure

42-037

Full disclosure must be made and continue to be made up until the moment there is a concluded contract of insurance,²⁶⁹ and where the assent of the insurer is required for renewal, the duty exists for that renewal.²⁷⁰ Before the contract is made, any material circumstance which comes to light,²⁷¹ or any previous immaterial circumstance which becomes material through change of circumstances²⁷² must be disclosed. It seems that where a contract of insurance is made and then altered, only circumstances material to the alteration need to be disclosed up to the date of the alteration,²⁷³ although whether the whole contract or only the alteration is vitiated by the failure to disclose such circumstances is undecided.²⁷⁴ The materiality of a circumstance is judged by the circumstances existing at the time when the contract is concluded,²⁷⁵ so that, for example, failure to disclose a rumour which at the time would have been considered material is not excused by the fact that after the contract is made it proves unfounded.²⁷⁶ Conversely a circumstance which at the time would not have been considered material does not affect the validity of the contract even if after the contract is made it becomes material or even causes the loss.²⁷⁷ However, although once the contract is made there is normally no duty to disclose material circumstances which later occur or which previously were neither known nor ought to have been known,²⁷⁸ the continuing nature of the duty of good faith may impose upon an assured a limited obligation to inform the insurer of subsequently arising material facts where the terms of the insurance itself require the assured to give the insurer further information after inception of the risk.²⁷⁹

Misrepresentation

42-038

Apart from the ordinary rules relating to misrepresentation²⁸⁰ the principle of utmost good faith imports a duty not to misrepresent facts which are material in the sense discussed above.²⁸¹ The misrepresentation may be of fact or of belief, expectation, opinion or intention. A statement of belief, expectation or opinion may be true even if the belief, expectation or opinion is erroneous,²⁸² for the representation in such cases is only that the belief, expectation or opinion is then sincerely held.²⁸³ For some reason which has not been adequately explained, the representation of an intention is treated as an ordinary representation of fact and not in the same way as a representation of an opinion or belief.²⁸⁴ So long as the assured honestly entertains his opinion or belief, there need be no reasonable grounds for the opinion or belief.²⁸⁵ Changes of belief, opinion or intention after the contract has been made are immaterial, for, like non-disclosure, the duty only exists up to the moment when the contract is concluded²⁸⁶; until that time, of course, such changes must be communicated.²⁸⁷ Where a representation is made a substantial period of time before the conclusion of the insurance contract or during the negotiation of an earlier insurance contract, the assured will either be under a duty to correct the earlier representation if it has become untrue (which would be akin to a duty of disclosure and so would require the assured to be aware of the falsity of the representation),²⁸⁸ or the representation will be treated as a continuing representation so that if it is untrue at the time of the conclusion of the insurance contract in question, there will have been a misrepresentation.²⁸⁹ The right analysis awaits an authoritative decision of the Courts. It is clear, however, that not all representations will be treated as continuing.²⁹⁰

Partial non-disclosure

42-039

A statement, though true in itself, may be a misrepresentation because it does not tell the whole truth, and thereby gives a false impression. ²⁹¹ An ambiguous statement may be false if it is in fact understood in a false sense, though equally it could have been understood in a sense that was true. ²⁹² However, statements are considered as a whole and will not constitute misrepresentations if inaccurate only in trivial or immaterial particulars which do not colour the whole picture. ²⁹³

Honesty

42-040

As a general rule misrepresentation makes the contract voidable however innocent the representor may have been. ²⁹⁴ There is some authority that the misrepresentation has to be fraudulent to have this effect in respect of life insurance policies, ²⁹⁵ but such an exception is to be doubted. Even if this is so, an innocent misrepresentation may well also involve non-disclosure so that the contract may be avoided on the latter ground. ²⁹⁶

Inducement

42-041

⚠ The decision of the House of Lords in Pan Atlantic Insurance Co Ltd v Pine Top Insurance Co Ltd ²⁹⁷ established that an insurer cannot rely upon the misrepresentation or non-disclosure of a material circumstance to avoid the insurance contract if that misrepresentation or non-disclosure did not in fact induce the making of the contract on the terms accepted (in the sense in which “inducement” is used in the general law of misrepresentation). The insurer has to show that the misrepresentation or non-disclosure was an effective cause of his entering into the contract on the terms in fact agreed; he must show at least that but for the misrepresentation or non-disclosure he would not have entered into the contract on those terms; he does not have to show it was the sole effective cause. ²⁹⁸ ⚠ Whether the insurer has been induced is a question of fact, not one of degree; therefore, if the non-disclosure or misrepresentation had only a slight or trivial effect on the decision of the insurer (for example, if the insurer would have insisted on only slightly different terms), he will have been induced. ²⁹⁹ However, if the non-disclosed or misrepresented circumstance is deemed trivial by a prudent underwriter, the circumstance may not be material. If the insurer would merely have asked further questions of the assured had full and accurate disclosure been made, that would not be sufficient to constitute inducement. ³⁰⁰ There is said to be a presumption of inducement in the event that a material nondisclosure or misrepresentation is established. ³⁰¹ If there is such a presumption, it is not one of law, but an inference of fact. ³⁰² ⚠ It is unlikely that the Court will rely on such a presumption or inference if the underwriter who assessed the risk is called to give evidence. ³⁰³ In some cases, the materiality of the circumstance may be so obvious that the Court will readily infer that the insurer was induced to enter into the insurance contract by reason of the circumstance being withheld or misrepresented, but even in such cases the inference may be rebutted by evidence. ³⁰⁴ ⚠

Effect of non-disclosure or misrepresentation

42-042

⚠ Non-disclosure or misrepresentation by one party entitles the other party to avoid the contract, ³⁰⁵ and the avoidance takes effect ab initio. ³⁰⁶ Despite misgivings only recently expressed by the courts, an insurer confronted with a fraudulent claim is entitled to avoid the insurance contract. ³⁰⁷ In the event of a breach of the duty of utmost good faith, the innocent party has an unfettered right to avoid the insurance contract. There is no equitable discretion exercisable by the court which could restrain or set aside an otherwise effective avoidance of the contract.³⁰⁸ In any event, it would appear that a claim paid out by an insurer is recoverable if, after payment is made, a non-disclosure or misrepresentation comes to the notice of the insurer who then avoids the contract.³⁰⁹ In some cases, moreover, damages may be recoverable. An action for damages in deceit will lie for deliberate misrepresentation and, possibly, for deliberate concealment of material circumstances,³¹⁰ provided that there is a duty to speak.³¹¹ Damages will be recoverable if a misrepresentation (as opposed to a non-disclosure) is made negligently in breach of a duty of care³¹²; damages will be recoverable under the Misrepresentation Act 1967 if the misrepresentation is made without reasonable grounds.³¹³ Apart from this, however, no action for damages will lie³¹⁴, so that damages cannot be recovered for breach of the duty to disclose material circumstances.³¹⁵ It would seem that non-disclosure or misrepresentation by one joint assured enables the insurer to avoid the contract against the others as well.³¹⁶ However, if one co-assured under a composite, as opposed to a joint, insurance fails to disclose or misrepresents a material circumstance, the insurance contract with each innocent co-assured may not be avoided, unless the latter is implicated in a breach of the duty of the utmost good faith.³¹⁷

Affirmation and waiver by estoppel

42-043

! Non-disclosure or misrepresentation makes the contract voidable, not void, so that the aggrieved party has an election whether or not to avoid the contract.³¹⁸ Once the aggrieved party knows all the facts, he should inform the other party within a reasonable time if he elects to avoid the contract,³¹⁹ for otherwise his subsequent conduct may be taken to be either an affirmation of the contract, or as leading the other party to suppose that the contract is being affirmed and causing him to act accordingly.³²⁰ Thus where the aggrieved party does some act which is inconsistent with an intention to avoid the contract, such as paying a claim³²¹ or accepting further premiums³²² after acquiring the requisite knowledge, the right to avoid the contract will be lost. However, the aggrieved party will not have affirmed the contract and lost his right to avoid³²³ unless he has knowledge both of the facts concerning the nondisclosure or misrepresentation and of his resulting right to avoid³²⁴ !; constructive knowledge or being put on inquiry is not sufficient.³²⁵ Once the aggrieved party has made his election it is irrevocable.³²⁶ The insurer may also lose the right to avoid the insurance contract by estoppel if the insurer promises not to exercise the right to avoid, even if he does not have full knowledge of the circumstances giving rise to his right to avoid (provided that the promise carries with it some apparent awareness of the right to avoid),³²⁷ and if the assured relies on that promise to his detriment, and it would be inequitable to allow the insurer to resile from that promise.³²⁸

Modification of the duty by contract

42-044

! The duty to act in good faith in the manner discussed above is often modified by the contract. Thus there may be in the contract a condition precedent based on the accuracy of statements made during the negotiations or a warranty³²⁹ that such statements are true, and in such case it is no defence that the statement was immaterial or did not induce the making of the insurance contract.³³⁰ Conversely, the contract may expressly restrict the duty as, for example, by providing that the insurance is to be indisputable except on the ground of fraud,³³¹ or that the policy is voidable only if the assured is guilty of a fraudulent nondisclosure or misrepresentation,³³² ! or by defining the extent of disclosure required from the assured,³³³ or by excluding or limiting liability or restricting the remedies available for any breach.³³⁴ In either case the duty becomes pro tanto contractual,³³⁵ and stipulations which extend the duty are strictly construed against the party relying on them.³³⁶ However, the law will not permit any attempt to restrict or exclude liability for the assured's own fraud, although excluding or limiting liability for the fraud of the assured's agent is not prohibited as a matter of law.³³⁷

42-045

⚠ In the light of the harsh consequences which may sometimes be caused by the absolute nature of the obligations to disclose, and not misrepresent, material facts,³³⁸ the Association of British Insurers and Lloyd's of London issued a Statement of General Insurance Practice, to which their members were expected to adhere, with a view to mitigating the severity of the obligations in the case of private policies. There were also statements dealing separately with non-life policies, and long-term life policies.³³⁹ Since January 2005, the self-regulatory Statement of General Insurance Practice was replaced by the Financial Services Regulation, ICOB and in January 2008 by ICOBS,³⁴⁰ which currently provides that insurers must handle claims promptly and fairly, provide reasonable guidance to policyholders, not unreasonably reject a claim, and pay claims promptly after agreeing to a settlement.³⁴¹ The Regulation further provides that the rejection of a consumer policyholder's claim is unreasonable where, in the absence of any evidence of fraud, the ground relied on by the insurer is the non-disclosure of a material fact which the policyholder could not reasonably be expected to disclose or non-negligent misrepresentation.³⁴² ⚠

226.

⚠ See Vol.I, paras 7-155 et seq., and generally, Legh-Jones, MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), Chs 16–17; Clarke, The Law of Insurance Contracts, 6th edn (2009), Chs 22–23; MacDonald Eggers, Picken and Foss, Good Faith and Insurance Contracts, 3rd edn (2010); Hasson, "The Doctrine of Uberrima Fides in Insurance Law—A Critical Evaluation" (1969) 32 M.L.R. 615; Bennett [1999] L.M.C.L.Q. 165. For a somewhat looser duty arising when one insurer authorises another to write insurance on its behalf under a "binding authority" (which is not, strictly speaking, a contract uberrimae fidei), see Pryke v Gibbs Hartley Cooper [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 602. See, however, GMA v Storebrand and Kansa [1995] L.R.L.R. 333, 348–349, where scepticism was expressed as to whether contracts closely analogous to those of insurance could attract the duty of disclosure attached to contracts uberrimae fidei.

227.

⚠ These are the words used in the Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.17, which codifies, in relation to marine insurance, a principle applicable to all insurance contracts: Carter v Boehm (1766) 3 Burr. 1905, 1909; Duffell v Wilson (1808) 1 Camp. 401; London Assurance v Mansel (1879) 11 Ch. D. 363, 367; Re Bradley and Essex Accident [1912] 1 K.B. 415, 430; Rozanes v Bowen (1928) 32 Ll.L. Rep. 98, 102; Claude R Ogden & Co Pty Ltd v Reliance Fire Sprinkler Co Pty Ltd [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 52; HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v Chase Manhattan Bank [2003] UKHL 6, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 61 at [5], [42]; Dalecroft Properties Ltd v Underwriters [2017] EWHC 1263 (Comm) at [80].

228.

Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v Mountain [1997] L.R.L.R. 523; reversed on other grounds by the Court of Appeal: [1999] Q.B. 674; Manifest Shipping & Co Ltd v Uni-Polaris Shipping Co Ltd (The Star Sea) [2001] UKHL 1, [2001] 2 W.L.R. 170; The Mercandian Continent [2001] EWCA Civ 1275, [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 563; cf. Agapitos v Agnew (The Aegeon) [2002] EWCA Civ 247, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 42. See Soyer [2003] L.M.C.L.Q. 45.

229.

Carter v Boehm (1766) 3 Burr. 1905, 1909; London General Omnibus v Holloway [1912] 2 K.B. 72, 86.

230.

Moens v Heyworth (1842) 10 M. & W. 147, 157; Blackburn Low & Co v Vigors (1886) 17 Q.B.D. 553, reversed on other grounds (1887) 12 App Cas. 531, 536–537, 539.

231.

Bank of Nova Scotia v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Association (Bermuda) Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 238, 263.

232.

For consideration of the insurer's duty of good faith, see Banque Keyser Ullman SA v Skandia (UK) Insurance Co Ltd [1990] 1 Q.B. 664, 769–773; affirmed by the House of Lords on somewhat different grounds, but see [1991] 2 A.C. 249 at 268, 281–282; Bank of Nova Scotia v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Association (Bermuda) Ltd (The Good Luck) [1990] 1 Q.B. 818; reversed by the House of Lords on other grounds at [1992] 1 A.C. 233; Aldrich v Norwich Union Life Insurance Co Ltd [2000] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 1.

- 233. These are the words used in the Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.18(2), but the test is the same for all types of insurance: see Road Traffic Act 1988 s.151(9)(b); Berger v Pollock [1973] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 442; Lambert v Co-operative Insurance Society Ltd [1975] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 485; Marine Knitting Mills Property Ltd v Greater Pacific & General Insurance Ltd [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 631, 642 PC; Reynolds v Phoenix Assurance Co Ltd [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 440, 461; Pan Atlantic Insurance Co Ltd v Pine Top Insurance Co Ltd [1995] 1 A.C. 501. The materiality of a fact will depend on the nature of the insurance product: Johnson v IGI Insurance Co Ltd [1997] 6 Re L.R. 283.
- 234. Bates v Hewitt (1867) L.R. 2 Q.B. 595, 607; Joel v Law Union and Crown Insurance Co [1908] 2 K.B. 863, 884; Godfrey v Britannic Insurance [1963] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 515, 529; Roselodge v Castle [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 113.
- 235. Lambert v Co-operative Insurance Society Ltd [1975] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 485. Though note Longmore [2001] L.M.C.L.Q. 356, 365–368.
- 236. Pan Atlantic Insurance Co Ltd v Pine Top Insurance Co Ltd [1995] 1 A.C. 501 (rejecting the “decisive influence” test of materiality, but holding that an insurer cannot rely upon a material nondisclosure (or misrepresentation) as a ground for avoiding the contract if the non-disclosure (or misrepresentation) did not actually induce the making of the contract), as interpreted by the Court of Appeal in St Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Co (UK) Ltd v McConnell Dowell Constructors Ltd [1996] 1 All E.R. 96. On this basis, a circumstance can be “material” even if it actually decreases the risk, but this does not mean that such a circumstance would have to be disclosed because, in the absence of inquiry, Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.18(3)(a) specifically exempts the assured from having to disclose any circumstance which diminishes the risk: see St Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Co (UK) Ltd v McConnell Dowell Constructors Ltd, above, at 107.
- 237. Drake Insurance Plc v Provident Insurance Plc [2003] EWCA Civ 1834, [2004] Q.B. 601 at [75], [138]; Sea Glory Maritime Co v Al Sagr National Insurance Co [2013] EWHC 2116 (Comm), [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 14 at [163]–[166].
- 238. Anderson v Fitzgerald (1853) 4 H.L.C. 484, 503; London Assurance v Mansel (1879) 11 Ch. D. 363; Dawsons v Bonnin [1922] 2 A.C. 413; Glicksman v Lancashire and General [1925] 2 K.B. 593, 608; affirmed [1927] A.C. 139, 144; Kumar v Life Insurance Corp of India [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 147; Whitlam v Hazel [2004] EWCA Civ 1600, [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 168. As to the position where an agent of the insurer incorrectly fills in the proposal form, see Stone v Reliance Marine Insurance Co Ltd [1972] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 469.
- 239. Wainwright v Bland (1836) 1 M. & W. 32; Dawsons v Bonnin, above; Glicksman v Lancashire and General, above; Bond v Commercial Union (1930) 36 Ll.L. Rep. 107; Taylor v Eagle Star Insurance (1940) 67 Ll.L. Rep. 136; Schoolman v Hall [1951] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 139; Lee v British Law Insurance Co Ltd [1972] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 49; March Cabaret Club v London Assurance [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 169.
- 240. See below, para.42-035. For the effect of failing to answer a question, see Marcovitch v Liverpool Victoria (1912) 28 T.L.R. 188; Roberts v Avon [1956] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 240; Arterial Caravans Ltd v Yorkshire Insurance Co Ltd [1973] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 169; Roberts v Plaisted [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 341, 347–348; O'Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 389 at [237]–[239].
- 241. Newsholme Bros v Road Transport and General [1929] 2 K.B. 356, 362; McCormick v National Motor Accident (1934) 40 Com. Cas. 76, 78; Zurich General v Morrison [1942] 2 K.B. 53, 64; Doheny v New India Assurance Co Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 1705, [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 251 at [16]–[20].
- 242. Asfar & Co v Blundell [1896] 1 Q.B. 123, 129.

- 243. Ionides v Pender (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 531, 535; Glasgow Assurance v Symondson (1911) 16 Com. Cas. 109; Yorke v Yorkshire Insurance [1918] 1 K.B. 662, 669; Roselodge v Castle [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 113. The Court may well be able to assess materiality without the benefit of expert evidence: Bate v Aviva Insurance UK Ltd [2014] EWCA Civ 334, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 527 at [35].
- 244. Glasgow Assurance Corp Ltd v William Symondson and Co (1911) 16 Com. Cas. 109, 119–120; Société Anonyme d'Intermédiaires Luxembourgeois v Farex Gie [1995] L.R.L.R. 116, 149; O'Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 389 at [222]. See also MacDonald, Eggers, Picken and Foss, Good Faith and Insurance Contracts, 3rd edn (2010), paras 14.60–14.79; Permanent Trustee Australia Ltd v FAI General Insurance Co Ltd (2003) 77 A.L.J.R. 1070 at [32]–[33] High Court of Australia.
- 245. Sealion Shipping Ltd v Valiant Insurance Co [2012] EWHC 50 (Comm), [2012] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 252.
- 246. As to the disclosure of circumstances relating to the moral hazard, see Strive Shipping Corp v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Association (The Grecia Express) [2002] EWHC 203 (Comm), [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 88, 131; Brotherton v Aseguradora Colseguros SA [2003] EWCA Civ 705, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 746; Sharon's Bakery (Europe) Ltd v AXA Insurance UK Plc [2011] EWHC 210 (Comm), [2012] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 164. This may involve an assured having to disclose the fact that he has been dishonest in the past or has been convicted or charged with some offence impugning his honesty or competence or disclose any other fact affecting the "moral hazard": Inversiones Manriá SA v Sphere Drake Insurance Co Plc (The Dora) [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 69, 93; Insurance Corp of the Channel Islands Ltd v McHugh [1998] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 151; North Star Shipping Ltd v Sphere Drake Insurance Plc [2006] EWCA Civ 378, [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 183; ERC Frankona Reinsurance v American National Insurance Co [2005] EWHC 1381 (Comm), [2006] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 157. The assured indeed may be obliged to disclose that he has obtained another insurer's agreement to this or an earlier policy by reason of a breach of the duty of the utmost good faith: Aneco Reinsurance Underwriting Ltd (In Liquidation) v Johnson & Higgins [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 565. As regards subrogation, see Tate & Sons v Hyslop (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 368.
- 247. Carter v Boehm (1766) 3 Burr. 1905; Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.18(3)(a).
- 248. Banque Keyser Ullman SA v Skandia (UK) Insurance Co Ltd [1990] 1 Q.B. 665, 771–772. The decision of the Court of Appeal was subsequently affirmed by the House of Lords on somewhat different grounds, but the statement of the ambit of the duty was not dissented from: [1991] 2 A.C. 249, 268, 269, although Lord Jauncey was prepared to consider a test of materiality which was reciprocal to that applicable to the assured's duty of disclosure (281–282). See also Aldrich v Norwich Union Life Insurance Co Ltd [2000] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 1.
- 249. Joel v Law Union and Crown Insurance Co [1908] 2 K.B. 863, 883–884; Zeller v British Caymanian Insurance Co Ltd [2008] UKPC 4, [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. Plus 16.
- 250. Both at common law (Proudfoot v Montefiore (1867) L.R. 2 Q.B. 511) and statute: Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.18(1).
- 251. See Simner v New India Assurance Co Ltd [1995] L.R.L.R. 240; ERC Frankona Reinsurance v American National Insurance Co [2005] EWHC 1381 (Comm), [2006] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 157 at [122]–[124].
- 252. See, in particular, Fitzherbert v Mather (1785) 1 T.R. 12; Gladstone v King (1813) 1 M. & S. 35; Proudfoot v Montefiore (1867) L.R. 2 Q.B. 511; Blackburn Low Co v Vigors (1887) 12 App. Cas. 531. In order to determine whether a particular person is the assured's agent to know, it is necessary to analyse both the nature of the relationship between that person and the assured and the nature of the information in question: ERC Frankona Reinsurance v American National Insurance Co [2005] EWHC 1381 (Comm), [2006] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 157 at [132].
- 253. As to when an agent will be treated as being in such a position that his knowledge is attributed to his principal, see Simner v New India Assurance Co Ltd [1995] L.R.L.R. 240; PCW

Syndicates v PCW Reinsurers [1996] 1 All E.R. 774; Group Josi Re v Walbrook Insurance Co Ltd [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 345; and, more generally, Meridian Global Funds Management Asia Ltd v Securities Commission [1995] 2 A.C. 500.

254. See Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.19. The section does not operate by imputing the knowledge of the agent to the assured, but by requiring the agent to disclose the material circumstances, and enabling the insurer to avoid the contract if he does not: Société Anonyme D'Intermédiaires Luxembourgeois v Farrex Gie [1995] L.R.L.R. 116; PCW Syndicates v PCW Reinsurers [1996] 1 All E.R. 774. The duty on the agent is independent of that on the assured: HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v Chase Manhattan Bank [2003] UKHL 6, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 61 at [7]–[8], [50]–[54]. However, the section applies only to an agent who actually deals with the insurer, and makes the contract in question, and not to “intermediate” agents: PCW Syndicates v PCW Reinsurers, above; nor to an agent who earlier had been instructed to effect the insurance, but did not in fact place the insurance: Blackburn Low Co v Vigors (1887) 12 App. Cas. 531.
255. PCW Syndicates v PCW Reinsurers [1996] 1 All E.R. 774; Group Josi Re v Walbrook Insurance Co Ltd, above. Further, the agent's knowledge of any “irregularity” in the performance of his duty, short of fraud, will not be imputed to the assured, if it cannot be inferred that the agent would have informed the assured of that irregularity in the ordinary course of business: Kingscroft Insurance Co Ltd v Nissan Fire and Marine Insurance Co Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 371.
256. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.18(1).
257. Economides v Commercial Union Assurance Co Plc [1997] 3 W.L.R. 1066; cf. Group Josi Reinsurance Co Ltd v Walbrook Insurance Co Ltd [1996] 1 W.L.R. 1152, 1159.
258. Carter v Boehm (1766) 3 Burr. 1905, 1910; The Dora [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 69, 89–90; Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.18(3)(a).
259. Carter v Boehm (1766) 3 Burr. 1905; Foley v Tabor (1861) 2 F. & F. 663; Bates v Hewitt (1867) L.R. 2 Q.B. 595; London General Insurance Co v General Marine Underwriters' Association [1921] 1 K.B. 104; Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.18(3)(b). See also Aldridge Estates Investments Co Ltd v McCarthy [1996] E.G.C.S. 167; Marc Rich & Co AG v Portman [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 225, 231–232; Hua Tyan Development Ltd v Zurich Insurance Co Ltd (The Ho Feng 7) [2013] HKCA 414, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 1 at [16.14] (Hong Kong CA), [2014] HKCFA 72, [2015] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 14 (Hong Kong Court of Final Appeal). As to whether an insurer will be presumed to know information reasonably available by reason of searches on electronic databases, see Sea Glory Maritime Co v Al Sagr National Insurance Co [2013] EWHC 2116 (Comm), [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 14 at [170]–[179].
260.  Carter v Boehm (1766) 3 Burr. 1905; Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.18(3)(c); Ayrey v British Legal [1918] 1 K.B. 136; Becker v Marshall (1922) 12 Ll.L. Rep. 413, 414; Greenhill v Federal Insurance [1927] 1 K.B. 65; WISE (Underwriting Agency) Ltd v Grupo Nacional Provincial SA [2004] EWCA Civ 962, [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 483; Doheny v New India Assurance Co Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 1705, [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 251 at [16]–[20]; Aldridge v Liberty Mutual Insurance Europe Ltd [2016] EWHC 3037 (Comm) at [33]–[38]. As to the degree of knowledge required by the insurer to waive disclosure, see New Hampshire Insurance Co v Oil Refineries Ltd [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 462.
261. CTI v Oceanus Mutual [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 476, 497–498; Marc Rich & Co AG v Portman, above at 234.
262. e.g. “Have you or your driver during the past five years been convicted of any offence?” This would relieve the assured from disclosing older offences: Jester-Barnes v Licenses and General (1934) 49 Ll.L. Rep. 231, 237; see also Joel v Law Union and Crown Insurance Co [1908] 2 K.B. 863; Brewtnall v Cornhill (1931) 40 Ll.L. Rep. 166; Schoolman v Hall [1951] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 139; Bate v Aviva Insurance UK Ltd [2013] EWHC 1687 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 492; affirmed [2014] EWCA Civ 334, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 527; cf. McCormick v

- National Motor Accident* (1934) 40 Com. Cas. 76, 78. See also Roberts v Plaisted [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 341; O'Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 389 at [237]–[239]; Noblebright Ltd v Sirius International Corp [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 584; cf. James v CGU Insurance Plc [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 206, para.85.
263. Cantiere Meccanico Brindisino v Janson [1912] 2 K.B. 112, 116, [1912] 3 K.B. 452, 462; Inversiones Manria SA v Sphere Drake Insurance Co Plc (The Dora) [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 69, 92; O'Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm) at [240]; s.18(3)(d) of the Marine Insurance Act 1906. It is an open question whether this exception to the duty of disclosure applies to all warranties. It is likely that the notion of superfluity extends only to promissory warranties, rather than to descriptive warranties. It appears that there is no exception to the duty where the relevant circumstance relates to a policy exclusion (cf. International Lottery Management Ltd v Dumas [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 237 at [59]), unless of course disclosure would diminish the risk; see also Synergy Health (UK) Ltd v CGU Insurance Plc [2010] EWHC 2583 (Comm), [2011] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 500, at [183]–[184].
264. Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 s.4. See Reynolds v Phoenix Assurance Co Ltd [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 440; Inversiones Manria SA v Sphere Drake Insurance Co Plc (The Dora) [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 69, 80; Power v Provincial Insurance Plc [1998] R.T.R. 60; Joseph Fielding Properties (Blackpool) Ltd v Aviva Insurance Ltd [2010] EWHC 2192 (QB), [2011] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 238.
265. Quinn Direct Insurance Ltd v Law Society [2010] EWCA Civ 805, [2011] 1 W.L.R. 308.
266. March Cabaret Club & Casino Ltd v London Assurance [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 169; Quinn Direct Insurance Ltd v Law Society [2010] EWCA Civ 805, [2011] 1 W.L.R. 308, at [11].
267. cf. Banque Keyser Ullman SA v Skandia (UK) Insurance Co Ltd [1990] 1 Q.B. 665; affirmed [1991] 2 A.C. 249; Aldrich v Norwich Union Life Insurance Co Ltd [2000] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 1.
268. Equality Act 2010 ss.4–13, 28–29, 31 and Sch.3 Pt 5 paras 20–23, as amended by Equality Act 2010 (Amendment) Regulations 2012 (SI 2012/2992). See MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), paras 17–063–17–067.
269. Wake v Atty (1812) 4 Taunt. 493; British Equitable v GW Railway (1869) 20 L.T. 422; Allis Chalmers v Fidelity Deposit (1916) 32 T.L.R. 263; Looker v Law Union [1928] 1 K.B. 554; Berger v Pollock [1973] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 442; Hadenfayre v British National Insurance Soc [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 393, 398.
270. Pim v Reid (1843) 6 M. & G. 1, 25; Re Wilson and Scottish [1920] 2 Ch. 28.
271. British Equitable v GW Railway (1869) 38 L.J.Ch. 314; Canning v Farquhar (1886) 16 Q.B.D. 727; Allis Chalmers v Fidelity Deposit (1916) 114 L.T. 433; Looker v Law Union [1928] 1 K.B. 554.
272. Re Yager and Guardian (1912) 108 L.T. 38; Allis Chalmers v Fidelity Deposit, above; Looker v Law Union, above.
273. Sawtell v Loudon (1814) 5 Taunt. 359; Lishman v Northern Maritime (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 179; Niger v Guardian Assurance (1922) 13 Ll.L. Rep. 75.
274. The Court of Appeal has expressed the opinion (obiter) that it is only the alteration which is affected: Manifest Shipping & Co Ltd v Uni-Polaris Insurance Co Ltd (The Star Sea) [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 360, 370; affirmed [2001] UKHL 1, [2001] 2 W.L.R. 170 at [54]–[55]. If this is the case, there may be circumstances where the alteration is of such proportion effectively as to vitiate the whole contract. See also K/S Merc-Scandia XXXXII v Lloyd's Underwriters [2001] EWCA Civ 1275, [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 563 at [22(2)].
275. Lynch v Dunsford (1811) 14 East 494; Watson v Mainwaring (1813) 4 Taunt. 763; Seaton v Burnand [1900] A.C. 135.

- 276. Lynch v Dunsford, above. It is not open to the assured to disprove materiality by proving at the trial that the rumour is unfounded: Brotherton v Aseguradora Colseguros SA [2003] EWCA Civ 705, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 746.
- 277. Watson v Mainwaring, above; Associated Oil Carriers v Union Insurance [1917] 2 K.B. 184.
- 278. Benham v United Guarantee (1852) 7 Exch. 744; Whitwell v Autocar Fire and Accident (1927) 27 Ll.L. Rep. 418; but cf. Berger v Pollock [1973] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 442. In New Hampshire Insurance Co v MGN Ltd [1997] L.R.L.R. 24, it was held that the exercise of the insurer's contractual right of cancellation does not impose on the assured a continuing duty of disclosure. See also Iron Trades Mutual v Companhia de Seguros Imperio [1991] 1 Re. L.R. 213. Where, however, the insurer is asked to withdraw the notice of cancellation, with the effect of reinstating or continuing the cover, the duty may be engaged: Kingscroft Insurance Co Ltd v Nissan Fire & Marine Insurance Co Ltd (No.2) [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 603. However, if there is a "held covered" provision whereby the insurer is required to extend cover on agreement of an additional premium, the assured will be subject to a duty of disclosure: Overseas Commodities Ltd v Style [1958] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 546, 559; Liberian Insurance Agency Inc v Mosse [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 560, 568; Black King Shipping Corp v Massie (The Litsion Pride) [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 437, 511–2; New Hampshire Insurance Co v MGN Ltd, above.
- 279. As to the effect of provisions requiring post-contractual disclosure, see Hussain v Brown [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 627, 631; Kausar v Eagle Star Insurance Co Ltd [1997] C.L.C. 129; Swiss Reinsurance Co v United India Insurance Co Ltd [2005] EWHC 237 (Comm), [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 341 at [35]–[36]. See K/S Merc-Scandia XXXXII v Lloyd's Underwriters [2001] EWCA Civ 1275, [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 563 for a review of those situations where the duty of disclosure may arise after the insurance contract is made.
- 280. See Vol.I, Ch.7.
- 281. Everett v Desborough (1829) 5 Bing. 503, 518; Wainwright v Bland (1836) 1 M. & W. 32; Anderson v Fitzgerald (1853) 4 H.L.C. 484, 504; Dawsons v Bonnin [1922] 2 A.C. 413. Where the representation is made in answer to a question in a proposal form, the question must be construed objectively and any ambiguity will be construed by applying the contra proferentem principle: R&R Developments Ltd v Axa Insurance UK Plc [2009] EWHC 2429 (Ch), [2010] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 527.
- 282. Wheeldon v Hardisty (1857) 8 E. & B. 232; Anderson v Pacific Fire and Marine (1872) L.R. 2 C.P. 65.
- 283. Bowden v Vaughan (1808) 10 East 415; Jones v Provincial Insurance (1857) 3 C.B.(N.S.) 65.
- 284. St Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Co (UK) Ltd v McConnell Dowell Constructors Ltd [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 116, 127; Limit No.2 Ltd v AXA Versicherung AG [2007] EWHC 2321 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 330 at [46], reversed in part [2008] EWCA Civ 1231, [2009] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 396; cf. Benham v United Guarantee (1852) 7 Exch. 744; Grant v Aetna Insurance (1862) 15 Moo. P.C.C. 516; Weber and Berger v Employers' Liability (1926) 24 Ll.L. Rep. 321.
- 285. Economides v Commercial Union Assurance Co Plc [1997] 3 W.L.R. 1066; Rendall v Combined Insurance Co of America [2005] EWHC 678 (Comm), [2006] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 732; see Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.20(5); contra, Highland Insurance Co v Continental Insurance Co [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 109. There may be occasions where the opinion is expressed in such a way or such circumstances as to imply that there are reasonable grounds for the belief or opinion: cf. above, Vol.I, paras 7-006—7-012.
- 286. Benham v United Guarantee, above. cf. Notman v Anchor Assurance (1858) 4 C.B.(N.S.) 476, and see above, para.42-037.
- 287. Traill v Baring (1864) 4 De G.J. & S. 318; Canning v Farquhar (1886) 16 Q.B.D. 727; Re Marshall and Scottish Employers (1901) 85 L.T. 757. See also Limit No.2 Ltd v AXA Versicherung AG [2007] EWHC 2321 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 330 at [78]–[81], [2008]

- EWCA Civ 1231, [2009] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 396 at [22]–[28].
- 288. Traill v Baring (1864) 4 De G.J. & S. 318 at 330; With v O'Flanagan [1936] Ch. 575 at 583–585; Spice Girls Ltd v Aprilia World Service BV [2002] EWCA Civ 15, [2002] E.M.L.R. 27 at [51].
- 289. Smith v Kay (1859) 7 H.L.C. 750 at 769; Briess v Woolley [1954] A.C. 333 at 344, 349, 352–353, 358; Synergy Health (UK) Ltd v CGU Insurance Plc [2010] EWHC 2583 (Comm), [2011] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 500 at [159]–[163].
- 290. WPP Group Plc v Reichmann [2000] All E.R. (D) 1409 (Aug) at [62]–[63]; Limit No.2 Ltd v AXA Versicherung AG [2008] EWCA Civ 1231, [2009] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 396. See Vol.I, paras 7-021–7-022.
- 291. Re General Provincial Life (1870) 18 W.R. 396; Dent v Blackmore (1927) 29 Ll.L. Rep. 9.
- 292. Glicksman v Lancashire and General [1925] 2 K.B. 593.
- 293. Re Universal Non-Tariff Fire (1875) L.R. 19 Eq. 485; Dawsons v Bonnin [1922] 2 A.C. 413, 425. See Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.20(4); cf. Svenska Handelsbanken v Sun Alliance and London Insurance Plc [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 519, 561–562.
- 294. Golding v Royal London (1914) 30 T.L.R. 350, 351; Graham v Western Australian (1931) 40 Ll.L. Rep. 64, 66; Merchant's and Manufacturers' Insurance v Hunt [1941] 1 K.B. 295, 318; Whitlam v Hazel [2004] EWCA Civ 1600, [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 168 at [28]; cf. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.20. cf. Economides v Commercial Union Assurance Co Plc [1997] 3 W.L.R. 1066.
- 295. Anderson v Fitzgerald (1853) 4 H.L.C. 484, 504; Wheelton v Hardisty (1858) 8 E. & B. 232, 299; Thomson v Weems (1884) 9 App. Cas. 671, 683; Scottish Provident v Boddam (1893) 9 T.L.R. 385; Joel v Law Union [1908] 2 K.B. 863, 877.
- 296. British Equitable v Great Western Ry (1869) 38 L.J.Ch. 314; London Assurance v Mansel (1879) 11 Ch. D. 363; British Equitable v Musgrave (1887) 3 T.L.R. 630.
- 297. [1995] 1 A.C. 501.
- 298.  Assicurazioni Generali SpA v Arab Insurance Group (BSC) [2002] EWCA Civ 1642, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 131 at [62]; AXA Versicherung AG v Arab Insurance Group (BSC) [2017] EWCA Civ 96, [2017] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 216 at [138]. For cases where the following underwriters were induced to enter into a contract by reason of the decision of the leading underwriter to enter into the contract, see International Lottery Management Ltd v Dumas [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 237 at [72], [78]; Brotherton v Aseguradora Colseguros SA [2003] EWHC 1741 (Comm), [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 762.
- 299. Aldridge Estates Investments Co Ltd v McCarthy [1996] E.G.C.S. 167.
- 300. O'Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 389 at [235].
- 301. Pan Atlantic Insurance Co Ltd v Pine Top Insurance Co Ltd [1995] 1 A.C. 501; St Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Co (UK) Ltd v McConnell Dowell Contractors Ltd [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 116, 127; Svenska Handelsbanken v Sun Alliance and London Insurance Plc [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 519, 564; Gunns v Par Insurance Brokers [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 173, 176. In Marc Rich & Co AG v Portman [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 430, 442–442, the court suggested that the presumption should be relied upon where the underwriter cannot be called for good reason to give evidence and no reasonable supposition can be made that he acted imprudently; affirmed [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 225. See also Laker Vent Engineering Ltd v Templeton Insurance Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 62, [2009] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 704 at [69]–[70].
- 302.  Assicurazioni Generali SpA v Arab Insurance Group (BSC) [2002] EWCA Civ 1642, [2003]

Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 131; Aldridge v Liberty Mutual Insurance Europe Ltd [2016] EWHC 3037 (Comm) at [28].

303. Sea Glory Maritime Co v Al Sagr National Insurance Co (The Nancy) [2013] EWHC 2116 (Comm), [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 14 at [56], [116].

304.  Bate v Aviva Insurance UK Ltd [2014] EWCA Civ 334, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 527 at [35]; Aldridge v Liberty Mutual Insurance Europe Ltd [2016] EWHC 3037 (Comm) at [29].

305.  Morrison v Universal Marine (1872) L.R. 8 Exch. 197. See also above, para.42-033 n.223. If the contract is separable into distinct parts such that they represent separate insurances, the insurer's remedy of avoidance is likely to relate to that divisible part rather than the entire contract: Dalecroft Properties Ltd v Underwriters [2017] EWHC 1263 (Comm) at [99]-[100]. Misrepresentation Act 1967 s.2(2) provides that the court or arbitrator may declare the contract subsisting where a party would otherwise be entitled to rescind, so it is arguable that the right to avoid a contract of insurance for misrepresentation of a material fact now depends upon the discretion of the tribunal. However, dicta in Highland Insurance Co v Continental Insurance Co [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 109, 117 indicate that, in contracts of reinsurance at least, relief from avoidance will be wholly exceptional. It may be that the parties have agreed that the various sections constituting the policy are each separate insurance contracts, in which case a non-disclosure or misrepresentation might result in the avoidance of one section of the policy, as opposed to the entire policy (James v CGU Insurance Plc [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 206). There is, of course, a statutory right to avoid contracts of marine insurance for material misrepresentation: see Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.20.

306. Cornhill Insurance Co v Assenheim (1937) 58 Ll.L. Rep. 27, 31; Black King Shipping Corp v Massie (The Litsion Pride) [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 437, 514-516 (where even post-contract breaches of the duty of utmost good faith were held to be capable of entitling avoidance ab initio).

307. Galloway v Guardian Royal Exchange (UK) Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 209; Direct Line Insurance Plc v Khan [2001] EWCA Civ 1794, [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 364 at [29]; cf. Manifest Shipping & Co Ltd v Uni-Polaris Shipping Co Ltd (The Star Sea) [2001] UKHL 1, [2001] 2 W.L.R. 170; K/S Merc-Scandia XXXXII v Lloyd's Underwriters [2001] EWCA Civ 1275, [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 563; Agapitos v Agnew (The Aegeon) [2002] EWCA Civ 247, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 42; Bennett [1999] L.M.C.L.Q. 165.

308. Drake Insurance Plc v Provident Insurance Plc [2003] EWHC 109 (Comm), [2003] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 759 at [31]-[32]; Brotherton v Aseguradora Colseguros SA [2003] EWCA Civ 705; overruling Strive Shipping Corp v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Association (The Grecia Express) [2002] EWHC 203 (Comm), [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 88, 129. However, the Court of Appeal has expressed the opinion that the insurer cannot avoid the contract if the insurer acts in bad faith: Drake Insurance Plc v Provident Insurance Plc [2003] EWCA Civ 1834, [2004] Q.B. 601. See MacDonald Eggers [2003] L.M.C.L.Q. 249.

309. Holland v Russell (1863) 4 B. & S. 14; Cornhill Insurance Co v Assenheim (1937) 58 Ll.L. Rep. 27, 31. Moreover, in Magee v Pennine Insurance Co [1969] 2 Q.B. 507, a compromise of a claim was set aside on the grounds that the insurance had been procured by a misrepresentation. As to whether a settlement may be avoided if it was procured by a non-disclosure, there is conflicting authority: Callisher v Bischoffsheim (1870) L.R. 5 Q.B. 449; Miles v New Zealand Alford Estate Co (1886) 32 Ch. D. 266; Piper v Royal Exchange Assurance (1932) 44 Ll.L. Rep. 103, 117 (per Roche J.); Diggins v Sun Alliance and London Insurance Plc [1994] C.L.C. 1146; Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v Mountain [1997] L.R.L.R. 523, 600; reversed on other grounds [1997] 2 All E.R. 929. See also Direct Line Insurance Plc v Fox [2009] EWHC 386 (QB), [2009] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 1017.

310. Dalglisch v Jarvie (1850) 2 Mac. & G. 231, 243. The dishonest concealment of material facts, or the intentional or reckless making of misleading statements, may also amount to a criminal offence: see the Fraud Act 2006 ss.2-3 and ss.89-90, 93 of the Financial Services Act 2012; Financial Services Act 2012 (Misleading Statements and Impressions) Order 2013 (SI

- 2013/637) art.2. The predecessor to these provisions, s.397 of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, did not impose a wider duty of disclosure than that which subsists at common law and does not create an entitlement to damages or other civil relief: Aldrich v Norwich Union Life Insurance Co Ltd [2000] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 1. See also Road Traffic Act 1988 s.174(5). In respect of actions in deceit for fraudulent misrepresentation, see Vol.I, paras 7-047—7-072.
- 311. It is questionable if the duty of utmost good faith suffices for the purposes of the “duty to speak”. See Brownlie v Campbell (1880) 5 App. Cas. 925, 950; Society of Lloyd's v Jaffray [2002] EWCA Civ 1101, [2002] All E.R. (D) 399 at [29]; HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v Chase Manhattan Bank [2003] UKHL 6, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 61 at [21], [75].
- 312. The Court of Appeal has recently held that, in the usual case, there is no duty of care not to make negligent misstatements implicit in the relationship between insurer and assured: HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v Chase Manhattan Bank [2001] EWCA Civ 1250, [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 483 at [74]; reversed in part on other grounds [2003] UKHL 6, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 61.
- 313. Argo Systems FZE v Liberty Insurance Pte Ltd [2011] EWHC 301 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 61 at [41]–[45], [2011] EWCA Civ 1572, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 129 at [35]; cf. Highlands Insurance Co v Continental Insurance Co [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 109, 117–118.
- 314. Glasgow Assurance v Symondson (1911) 104 L.T. 254, 258.
- 315. Banque Keyser Ullman SA v Skandia (UK) Insurance Co Ltd [1990] 1 Q.B. 665, 773–805 (affirmed by the House of Lords on somewhat different grounds, though see [1991] 2 A.C. 249, 280); Bank of Nova Scotia v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Association (Bermuda) Ltd (The Good Luck) [1990] 1 Q.B. 818, 886–888, 890–902; reversed by the House of Lords on a different point: [1992] 1 A.C. 233. It is possible that interest might be recoverable as damages pursuant to the House of Lords' decision in Sempra Metals Ltd v Commissioners of Inland Revenue [2007] UKHL 34, [2007] 3 WLR 354; see Clarke [2008] J.B.L. 291.
- 316. General Accident Fire and Life v Midland Bank [1940] 2 K.B. 388, Direct Line Insurance Plc v Khan [2001] EWCA Civ 1794, [2002] Lloyd's Rep. 364 and see below, para.42-098—42-099.
- 317. New Hampshire Insurance Co v MGN Ltd [1997] L.R.L.R. 24. Arab Bank Plc v Zurich Insurance Co [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 262; First National Commercial Bank Plc v Barnet Devanney (Harrow) Ltd [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 43. See above, para.42-011.
- 318. Morrison v Universal Marine (1872) L.R. 8 Ex. 197; Mackender v Feldia AG [1967] 2 Q.B. 590. For a statement of the principles applicable to affirmation, see Moore Large & Co Ltd v Hermes Credit and Guarantee Plc [2003] EWHC 26 (Comm), [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 315.
- 319. McCormick v National Motor (1934) 40 Com. Cas. 76, 81, 82; Simon, Haynes v Beer (1946) 78 Ll.L. Rep. 337; Svenska Handelsbanken v Sun Alliance and London Insurance Plc [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 519, 569.
- 320. Hemmings v Sceptre Life [1905] 1 Ch. 365; Holdsworth v Lancashire and Yorkshire (1907) 23 T.L.R. 521; Ayrey v British Legal [1918] 1 K.B. 136; Liberian Insurance v Mosse [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 560.
- 321. Bilbie v Lumlie (1802) 2 East 469; Wing v Harvey (1854) 5 De G.M. & G. 265.
- 322. Scottish Equitable v Buist (1877) 4 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 1076; merely not returning premiums already paid does not amount to waiver: March Cabaret Club v London Assurance [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 169. As to whether the issuance of a policy may constitute an affirmation, see Morrison v The Universal Marine Insurance Co (1872) L.R. 8 Ex. 40; (1873) L.R. 8 Ex. 197; cf. Svenska Handelsbanken v Sun Alliance and London Insurance Plc [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 519, 569. As to the affirmatory effect of a contractual notice of cancellation, see Mint Security Ltd v Blair [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 188 at 198; WISE (Underwriting Agency) Ltd v Grupo Nacional Provincial SA [2004] EWCA Civ 962, [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 483. See also Scottish Coal Co Ltd

v Royal & Sun Alliance Insurance Plc [2008] EWHC 880 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. Plus 31.

323. The aggrieved party alternatively might be estopped from denying his affirmation of the contract: see below, para.42-086. As to when an insurer will be treated as knowing all the relevant facts by reason of the knowledge of an agent being imputed to him, compare Evans v Employers' Mutual Insurance Association Ltd [1936] 1 K.B. 505; and Malhi v Abbey Life Assurance Co Ltd [1996] L.R.L.R. 237. If the affirming conduct was that of an agent, rather than the aggrieved party himself, that agent himself must have the authority and capacity to affirm the contract: Tate & Sons v Hyslop (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 368, 374; Aldridge Estates Investments Co Ltd v McCarthy [1996] E.G.C.S. 167. See also Callaghan v Thompson [2000] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 125.

324.  Insurance Corp of the Channel Islands Ltd v McHugh [1997] L.R.L.R. 94, [1998] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 151. In Sea Glory Maritime Co v Al Sagr National Insurance Co [2013] EWHC 2116 (Comm), [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 14 at [126], it was held that an insurer is entitled to a reasonable time to conduct its enquiries before making an election to affirm the contract. As to the requirement of knowledge of the legal right to avoid in circumstances where the insurer is being advised by solicitors, see Moore Large & Co Ltd v Hermes Credit and Guarantee Plc [2003] EWHC 26 (Comm), [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 315 at [92]–[100]; Involnert Management Inc v Aprilgrange Ltd [2015] EWHC 2225 (Comm), [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 289 at [157]–[161].

325. Morrison v Universal Marine (1872) L.R. 8 Ex. 197; McCormick v National Motor (1934) 40 Com. Cas. 76; Simon, Haynes v Beer (1946) 78 Ll.L. Rep. 337; CTI v Oceanus Mutual [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 476; Hadenfayre v British National Insurance Society [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 393; Insurance Corp of the Channel Islands Ltd v McHugh [1997] L.R.L.R. 94, [1998] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 151.

326. Clough v London & NW Ry (1871) L.R. 7 Ex. 26, 34, 35.

327. IHC v Amtrust Europe Ltd [2015] EWHC 257 (QB).

328. See below, para.42-086.

329. See below, para.42-080. The Consumer Insurance (Disclosure and Representations) Act 2012 s.6, will abolish such warranties. The Law Commission has recommended a similar abolition for other types of insurances, Consultation Paper No.204, paras 15.11–15.12.

330. Newcastle Fire v Macmorran (1815) 3 Dow. 225; Anderson v Fitzgerald (1853) 4 H.L.C. 484, 503; Stebbing v Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Co Ltd [1917] 2 K.B. 433, 437; Condogianis v Guardian Assurance [1921] 2 A.C. 125, 129; Dawsons v Bonnin [1922] 2 A.C. 413; Mackay v London General (1935) 51 Ll.L. Rep. 201; Babatsikos v Car Owners' Mutual Insurance Co Ltd [1970] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 314; see, generally, Hasson (1971) 34 M.L.R. 29; Svenska Handelsbanken v Sun Alliance and London Insurance Plc [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 519, 551–553. Such terms are to be interpreted in accordance with established rules of construction and, unless the parties so intended, will not be interpreted as a continuing warranty: Hussain v Brown [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 627, 629.

331. Hemmings v Sceptre Life [1905] 1 Ch. 365; Anstey v British National Premium Life (1908) 24 T.L.R. 594, 871; Toomey v Eagle Star (No.2) [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 88, where it was held that it is possible in principle to include a provision excluding the right to rescind for material misrepresentation or non-disclosure, but that the clause in that case (which provided that the policy was “neither cancellable nor voidable by either party”) did not, on its proper construction, preclude rescission for a misrepresentation or non-disclosure made negligently. cf. Highland Insurance Co v Continental Insurance Co [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 109, 116–117; Pan Atlantic Insurance Co Ltd v Pine Top Insurance Co Ltd [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 101, 108–109, [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 496, 502–503 (both cases concerned an “errors and omissions” clause which purported to excuse inadvertent misrepresentations and non-disclosures). Regard should also be had to s.3 of the Misrepresentation Act 1967, which treats contractual provisions relieving a misrepresenter, from liability as invalid, unless reasonable; it is unlikely that such clauses will be struck down, at least from the assured's perspective, given the harshness of the remedy of avoidance as perceived by the court. See above, paras 7-146 et seq.

332.  Mutual Energy Ltd v Starr Underwriting Agents Ltd [2016] EWHC 590 (TCC), [2016] B.L.R. 312.
333. Sumitomo Bank Ltd v Banque Bruxelles Lambert SA [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 487, 495.
334. HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v Chase Manhattan Bank [2003] UKHL 6, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 61; Seashell of Lisson Grove Ltd v Aviva Insurance Ltd [2011] EWHC 1761 (Comm). As to the effect of innocent non-disclosure clauses, see Arab Bank Plc v Zurich Insurance Company [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 262; Kumar v AGF Insurance Ltd [1999] 1 W.L.R. 1747.
335. Anderson v Fitzgerald (1853) 4 H.L.C. 484, 496; Joel v Law Union [1908] 2 K.B. 863, 886; Stebbing v Liverpool and London Globe [1917] 2 K.B. 433, 437.
336. Thomson v Weems (1884) 9 App. Cas. 671, 682; Joel v Law Union, above.
337. HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v Chase Manhattan Bank [2001] EWCA Civ 1250, [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 483; reversed in part on other grounds [2003] UKHL 6, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 61.
338. For consideration of the harsh effects of the absolute obligation to disclose material facts, and recommendations for reform, see the Law Commission's Report No.104, Cmnd.8064 (1980). See also Australian Law Reform Commission Report No.91 (April 2001), Review of the Marine Insurance Act 1909; Derrington [2002] L.M.C.L.Q. 214; Insurance Contract Law Reform, Recommendations to the Law Commission, A Report of the Sub-Committee of the British Insurance Law Association, September 1, 2002; Law Commission's Consultation Paper No.182 on "Insurance Contract Law: Misrepresentation, Non-Disclosure and Breach of Warranty by the Insured" (July 2007); Law Commission's Consultation Paper No.204 on "The Business Insured's Duty of Disclosure and the Law of Warranties" (June 2012).
339. For the texts of the Statement of General Insurance Practice, see <http://www.abi.org.uk>.
340. See <http://fshandbook.info/FS/html/FCA/ICOBS>, effective April 1, 2013, made pursuant to ss.137A to 137F, 137T and 139A of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, as amended by s.24 of the Financial Services Act 2012. In Parker v National Farmers Union Mutual Insurance Society Ltd [2012] EWHC 2156 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 253 at [197], it was held that the obligations under ICOBS were not implied terms of the insurance contract. See also Bate v Aviva Insurance UK Ltd [2013] EWHC 1687 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 492 at [33]–[34]; affirmed [2014] EWCA Civ 334, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 527. A contravention of such rules by an authorised person may entitle a private person to claim damages for loss sustained pursuant s.138D(2) of the 2000 Act, introduced pursuant to an amendment by s.24 of the Financial Services Act 2012. See Goodman v Central Capital Ltd [2012] EWHC 8 (QB), [12].
341. ICOBS para.8.1.1. See Parker v National Farmers Union Mutual Insurance Society Ltd [2012] EWHC 2156 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 253 at [193]–[202]; Bate v Aviva Insurance UK Ltd [2013] EWHC 1687 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 492, affirmed [2014] EWCA Civ 334, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 527.
342.  ICOBS para.8.1.2. In Bate v Aviva Insurance UK Ltd [2013] EWHC 1687 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 492, [2014] EWCA Civ 334, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 527 at [48]–[49], the Court held that a fraudulent device used in the pursuit of a fraudulent claim was sufficient to attract the fraud exception; Ashfaq v International Insurance Co of Hannover Plc [2017] EWCA Civ 357, [2017] H.L.R. 29.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 42 - Insurance

Section 4. - Utmost Good Faith and Fair Presentation of the Risk

(b) - Existing law applicable to consumer insurance contracts

Consumer Insurance (Disclosure and Representations) Act 2012

42-046

⚠ On March 8, 2012, the Consumer Insurance (Disclosure and Representations) Act 2012 was passed. The 2012 Act applies to consumer insurance contracts agreed on or after April 6, 2013 or to variations to pre-existing contracts agreed on or after that date. ³⁴³ This Act has fundamentally altered the consumer assured's duty of utmost good faith as it applies up to the making of the insurance contract. A consumer is an individual who contracts wholly or mainly for purposes unrelated to the individual's trade, business or profession. ³⁴⁴ ⚠ The consumer assured's duty of utmost good faith and the insurer's remedies for breach of that duty are exhaustively set out in the Act. The previous law no longer applies to consumer assureds and the common law duty of disclosure no longer applies to such consumer assureds. By s.10, a term of a consumer insurance contract which would put the consumer in a worse position in respect of the disclosure and representations required of the consumer and the insurer's remedies than the consumer would be in by the provisions of the 2012 Act are of no effect. ³⁴⁵

The duty to take reasonable care not to misrepresent

42-047

Under s.2(2) of the 2012 Act, it is the duty of the consumer to take reasonable care not to make a misrepresentation to the insurer. Whether or not a consumer has taken reasonable care not to make a misrepresentation is to be determined in the light of all the relevant circumstances, including: the type of consumer insurance contract and its target market, any relevant explanatory material or publicity produced or authorised by the insurer; how clear and how specific the insurer's questions to the assured were; in the case of a failure to respond to the insurer's questions in connection with the renewal or variation of a consumer insurance contract, how clearly the insurer communicated the importance of answering those questions; and whether or not an agent was acting for the consumer. ³⁴⁶ The standard of care required by the assured's duty is that of a reasonable consumer. ³⁴⁷ A misrepresentation made dishonestly is always to be taken as showing a lack of reasonable care. ³⁴⁸

Basis of the contracts clauses

42-048

Insurance contracts in many instances contain provisions which warrant the truth of pre-contractual representations, for example contained in a proposal form, or which render the truth of such representations as conditions precedent to the insurer's liability under the insurance contract. Such provisions often take the form of a clause providing that the representations made by the assured form the "basis" of the insurance contract or are incorporated into the insurance contract, without identifying any particular representation. The effect of such a warranty (or condition precedent) is that if a pre-contractual representation coming within the basis of the contract clause is untrue, there is a breach of warranty (or condition precedent) and the insurer is discharged from liability from the date of the breach, which in many cases is the date of the inception of the cover or the conclusion of the contract. ³⁴⁹ The Consumer Insurance (Disclosure and Representations) Act 2012, by s.6, abolishes such warranties with respect to consumer insurance contracts. This prohibition, however, is unlikely to apply to specific warranties, i.e. warranties that specific representations of fact (e.g. that the assured has suffered no losses during the previous 12 months) are true, so that such warranties will remain valid. ³⁵⁰

The insurer's remedies

42-049

⚠ The insurer will have a remedy for a misrepresentation made by the consumer assured where the assured has breached its duty under s.2(2) and where the insurer shows that without the misrepresentation, that insurer would not have entered into the contract (or agreed to the variation) at all, or would have done so only on different terms. ³⁵¹ The insurer's remedies will depend on whether the misrepresentation is deliberate or reckless (in the sense that the assured knew that, or did not care whether, the representation was untrue or misleading and the representation was relevant to the insurer) or careless. The finding that an assured's breach of duty was deliberate or reckless may be supported by the presumptions allowed under s.5(5), in particular that the consumer knew that a matter about which the insurer asked a clear and specific question was relevant to the insurer. ³⁵² ⚠ If the misrepresentation was deliberate or reckless, the insurer may avoid the contract and retain the premium. If it was careless (i.e. lacking in reasonable care), and if the insurer would not have entered into the contract had the truth been told, the insurer may avoid the contract but must return the premium. If it was careless, and the insurer would have entered into the same contract had the truth been told but on different terms (other than as to premium), the insurer may require the contract to be treated as if it had been concluded on those terms. If the misrepresentation was careless, and the insurer would have entered into the same contract but at a higher premium, the claims payable under the contract will be proportionately reduced. ³⁵³ Contracting out is not permitted under the Act. ³⁵⁴

FCA Insurance Conduct of Business Sourcebook (ICOBS) ³⁵⁵

42-050

Under ICOBS, a "consumer" is any natural person who is acting for purposes which are outside his trade or profession. ³⁵⁶ ICOBS provides that insurers must handle claims promptly and fairly, provide reasonable guidance to policyholders, not unreasonably reject a claim, and pay claims promptly after agreeing to a settlement. ³⁵⁷ Further, ICOBS provides that, in respect of insurance contracts concluded on or before April 5, 2013, the rejection of a consumer policyholder's claim is unreasonable where, in the absence of any evidence of fraud, the ground relied on by the insurer is the non-disclosure of a material fact which the policyholder could not reasonably be expected to disclose or non-negligent misrepresentation. ³⁵⁸ In respect of insurance contracts concluded on or after April 6, 2013, the rejection of a consumer policyholder's claim is unreasonable where, in the absence of fraud, the ground relied on by the insurer is a misrepresentation which is not made in breach of the consumer's duty in s. 2(2) of the Consumer Insurance (Disclosure and Representations) Act 2012 or is such that the insurer would have entered into contract on the same terms even if no misrepresentation had been made. ³⁵⁹ It is worth noting that in consumer cases the approach of the Financial Ombudsman Service (FOS) ³⁶⁰ is to consider, first whether there has been a clear case of misrepresentation or non-disclosure inducing the conclusion of the insurance contract ³⁶¹ and, secondly, the policyholder's state of mind. ³⁶² The FOS will permit the insurer to avoid the policy in the case of a deliberate or reckless misrepresentation or non-disclosure, will require the insurer to pay the claim in respect of an innocent breach of duty, and in the case of an "inadvertent" breach will require the insurer to handle the claim on the basis of what contract the insurer would have entered into, if any, had full disclosure been made.

- 343. 2012 Act s.12(4); The Consumer Insurance (Disclosure and Representations) Act 2012 (Commencement) Order 2013 (SI 2013/450).
- 344.  2012 Act s.1. cf. Ashfaq v International Insurance Co of Hannover Plc [2017] EWCA Civ 357, [2017] H.L.R. 29 at [45]–[58]. The 2012 Act did not apply to the insurance contract in this case: at [15].
- 345. This provision does not apply to settlement contracts in respect of claims made under a consumer insurance contract: s.10(3).
- 346. 2012 Act s.3(2).
- 347. 2012 Act s.3.
- 348. 2012 Act s.3(5).
- 349. See above, para.42-044.
- 350. Explanatory notes to the 2012 Act, paras 41-42. Such warranties, to be valid, would have to be fair within the meaning of the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/2083) and, for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015, the Consumer Rights Act 2015 ss.62-66, as to which see paras 38-358—38-394.
- 351. 2012 Act s.4.
- 352.  Tesco Underwriting Ltd v Achunche, Unreported, July 7, 2016.
- 353. 2012 Act s.5 and Sch.1.
- 354. 2012 Act s.10.
- 355. See above, para.42-045.
- 356. ICOBS para.2.1.1(3).
- 357. ICOBS para.8.1.1. See Parker v National Farmers Union Mutual Insurance Society Ltd [2012] EWHC 2156 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 253 at [193]–[202]; Bate v Aviva Insurance UK Ltd [2013] EWHC 1687 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 492, affirmed [2014] EWCA Civ 334, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 527.
- 358. ICOBS para.8.1.2(1). In Bate v Aviva Insurance UK Ltd [2013] EWHC 1687 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 492, [2014] EWCA Civ 334, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 527, at [48]–[49], the Court held that a fraudulent device used in the pursuit of a fraudulent claim was sufficient to attract the fraud exception.
- 359. ICOBS para.8.1.2(2), 8.1.3.
- 360. The approach is set out in various of the FOS's publications (see <http://www.financialombudsman.org.uk>) and in an appendix to the Law Commission's Consultation Paper No.182 (see <http://www.lawcom.gov.uk>). The FOS may also apply the same approach to small businesses.
- 361. The FOS appears to apply a test which is more appropriate for misrepresentations, than nondisclosures, by focusing on the insurer's question and the assured's response.
- 362. At various points in its publications, the FOS appears to distinguish between five states of mind: fraudulent, deliberate, reckless, inadvertent and innocent.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 42 - Insurance
Section 4. - Utmost Good Faith and Fair Presentation of the Risk
(c) - Insurance Act 2015

The duty of the utmost good faith

42-051

The Insurance Act 2015 will enter into force on August 12, 2016 and will apply to contracts of insurance, and variations to contracts of insurance, agreed after the Act enters into force. ³⁶³ The 2015 Act makes a number of modifications to the duty of utmost good faith which applies to the contract of insurance at common law and under the Marine Insurance Act 1906. By s.14 of the 2015 Act, any rule of law permitting a party to an insurance contract to avoid the contract on the ground that the utmost good faith has not been observed by the other party is abolished. Section 17 of the 1906 Act (which declares the law applicable to non-marine insurance contracts as well as to marine insurance contracts) is therefore amended to provide that "A contract of marine insurance is a contract based upon the utmost good faith". Accordingly, the concept of utmost good faith is retained by the 2015 Act, but any remedy for failing to observe the utmost good faith is abolished and is replaced by remedies provided for by the 2015 Act, which apply only to a breach of the assured's precontractual duty of fair presentation. Any duty which applies after the conclusion of the contract (other than in respect of claims) or which applies to the insurer might still exist after the 2015 Act enters into force, but as matters stand there is no obvious remedy available for any such failures. In its explanatory notes, Parliament has indicated that "good faith will remain an interpretative principle". ³⁶⁴

The duty of fair presentation

42-052

By s.3(1) of the 2015 Act, the assured is under a duty to make a fair presentation of the risk before the insurance contract is entered into. There are four elements of the duty of fair presentation. First, the assured is obliged to disclose to the insurer every material circumstance which the assured knows or ought to know. Failing such full disclosure, the assured is obliged to disclose sufficient information to put a prudent insurer on notice that it needs to make further inquiries to reveal further material circumstances. ³⁶⁵ Secondly, the assured must provide such disclosure in a manner which is reasonably clear and accessible to a prudent insurer. ³⁶⁶ A fair presentation need not be contained in only one document or oral presentation. ³⁶⁷ Thirdly, the assured must ensure that every material representation of fact is substantially correct. A material representation of fact is substantially correct, if a prudent insurer would not consider the difference between what is represented and what is actually correct to be material. ³⁶⁸ Fourthly, the assured must ensure that every material representation of expectation or belief is made in good faith. ³⁶⁹ In many respects, the duty of fair presentation is substantially similar to the requirements of the existing law insofar as it governs the assured's pre-contractual duty of full and accurate disclosure. There are however some substantial changes effected by the 2015 Act. The two most substantial changes relate to the concept of knowledge as it applies to the assured and the insurer, and the remedies available to the insurer in the event of a breach of the assured's duty of fair presentation. ³⁷⁰

Materiality

42-053

The 2015 Act retains the test of materiality as applied under the existing law, namely that a circumstance or representation is material if it would influence the judgment of a prudent insurer in determining whether to take the risk and, if so, on what terms. ³⁷¹ This is the same test as is currently applied at common law and under ss.18(2) and 20(2) of the Marine Insurance Act 1906. ³⁷² However, the 2015 Act identifies certain facts which may be material, namely special or unusual facts relating to the risk, any particular concerns which led the assured to seek insurance cover for the risk, and anything which those concerned with the class of insurance and the field of insured activity in question would generally understand as being something that should be dealt with in a fair presentation of risks of the type in question. ³⁷³

Exceptions to the duty of disclosure

42-054

The exceptions to the assured's duty of disclosure as required by the duty to make a fair presentation are largely the same as apply under the existing law. ³⁷⁴ The assured is not obliged to disclose a circumstance, even if material, if it diminishes the risk, if the insurer knows, ought to know or is presumed to know the circumstance in question, or if the circumstance is something as to which the insurer waives information. ³⁷⁵ There is one exception which applies under the existing law, but which has been omitted by the 2015 Act: under the existing law, the assured is not obliged to disclose a circumstance if its disclosure is superfluous by reason of the presence in the policy of a promissory warranty. This exception has been removed by reason of the changes introduced by the 2015 Act to the law governing promissory warranties. ³⁷⁶

The assured's knowledge

42-055

Pursuant to the duty of fair presentation, the assured is in the first instance obliged to disclose every material circumstance which the assured knows (actual knowledge) or ought to know (constructive knowledge). ³⁷⁷ With respect to the assured's actual knowledge, if the assured is an individual, the assured knows only what is known to that individual or to the individual or individuals who are responsible for the assured's insurance (typically, an insurance broker). ³⁷⁸ If the assured is not an individual (such as a company or an unincorporated association), the assured knows only what is known to one or more individuals who are part of the assured's "senior management" or responsible for the assured's insurance. ³⁷⁹ The Act defines "senior management" to mean those individuals who play significant roles in the making of decisions about how the assured's activities are to be managed or organised. ³⁸⁰ In its explanatory notes to the Act, Parliament has said that in a corporate context the senior management is likely to include members of the board of directors but may extend beyond this, depending on the structure and management arrangements of the assured. ³⁸¹ However, the assured will not be taken to know information known to its insurance agent, where the insurance agent acquired the information in question through a business relationship with a person who is not connected with the contract of insurance. ³⁸² Furthermore, the assured will be taken to know a circumstance which the individual suspected and of which the individual would have had knowledge but for deliberately refraining from confirming or enquiring about such circumstance. ³⁸³ With respect to the assured's constructive knowledge, whether the assured is an individual or not, the assured ought to know that which should reasonably have been revealed by a reasonable search of information available to the assured (whether the search is conducted by making enquiries or by any other means) and includes information held within the assured's organisation or by any other person. ³⁸⁴ In this respect, the assured's constructive knowledge is apparently much broader than the assured's constructive knowledge under the existing law, where the assured was deemed to know only that which ought to have been known to the assured "in the ordinary course of business". ³⁸⁵

The insurer's knowledge

42-056

Pursuant to the duty of fair presentation, the assured is not obliged to disclose to the insurer a circumstance if the insurer knows it, ought to know it, or is presumed to know it. ³⁸⁶ An insurer knows something only if it is known to one or more of the individuals who participate in the decision whether or not to insure the risk on behalf of the insurer, namely the individual underwriters. ³⁸⁷ An insurer ought to know something only if an employee or agent knows it and ought reasonably to have passed on the relevant information to the underwriter in question or if the relevant information is held by the insurer and is readily available to the underwriter in question. In its explanatory notes, Parliament has suggested that an insurer ought to know information held by the claims department or reports produced by surveyors or medical experts for the purpose of assessing the risk and information which would be revealed to the underwriter in question by making a reasonable effort to search for such information as is available to the underwriter within the insurer's organisation, such as in the insurer's electronic records. ³⁸⁸ An insurer is presumed to know things which are common knowledge and things which an insurer offering insurance of the class in question to assureds in the field of activity in question would reasonably be expected to know in the ordinary course of business. ³⁸⁹ An insurer's knowledge will include its "blind-eye" knowledge. ³⁹⁰

The insurer's remedies for unfair presentation of the risk

42-057

! If there has been a breach of the duty of fair presentation and if the insurer has been induced by the breach in the sense that but for the breach the insurer would not have entered into the insurance contract at all or would have done so on different terms, the insurer is entitled to a remedy for that breach. ³⁹¹ By s.14(1), the 2015 Act abolished the avoidance of the insurance contract as the universal remedy for any breach of the duty of utmost good faith. In its place, where there has been a breach of the duty of fair presentation, the 2015 provides different remedies depending on (a) whether the breach was deliberate or reckless and (b), where the breach was not deliberate or reckless, the extent of the inducement. ³⁹² If the breach was deliberate (meaning that the assured knew that it was in breach of the duty) or reckless (meaning that the assured did not care whether or not it was in breach of the duty), the insurer is entitled to avoid the insurance contract and to retain the premium.

³⁹³ ! If the breach was neither deliberate nor reckless, and if the insurer would not have entered into the insurance contract at all, but for the breach, the insurer is entitled to avoid the insurance contract, but must also return the premium. ³⁹⁴ If the breach is neither deliberate nor reckless and, but for the breach, the insurer would have entered into the insurance contract on different terms, there are two remedies depending on whether the different terms relate to premium or not; these remedies are cumulative. ³⁹⁵ If they do not relate to premium, the insurer may treat the insurance contract as having been written on those different terms. ³⁹⁶ If the different terms relate to premium, and if the insurer would have charged a higher premium but for the breach, the insurer is entitled to reduce proportionately any amount to be paid on the claim. For example, if the insurer actually charged a premium of £1,000 but would have charged a premium of £2,000 but for the breach, a claim under the insurance contract which ordinarily would be quantified in the sum of £1,000,000 may be reduced by 50 per cent to £500,000. ³⁹⁷ There are similar remedies available where the breach of the duty of fair presentation relates to the agreement of a variation. ³⁹⁸

The insurer's election and waiver

42-058

The 2015 Act does not state in what circumstances the insurer may lose the right to the remedies stipulated by the Act by way of affirmation or estoppel. It is clear however that the remedial rights available to the insurer under the 2015 Act may be exercised if the insurer so chooses. The 2015 Act provides that the insurer "may" avoid or "may" reduce proportionately the amount of the recoverable claim and that the insurance contract will be treated as if written on the different terms the insurer would have agreed but for the breach of duty, “if the insurer so requires”.³⁹⁹ Accordingly, the insurer must elect to exercise any such remedial rights. The insurer may lose such rights by affirmation or estoppel in accordance with the principles explained above.⁴⁰⁰

Basis of the contract clauses

42-059

It has been a common feature of many commercial insurance contracts that pre-contractual representations of fact made by the assured to the insurer, often in a proposal form, are warranted to be true or that the policy contains conditions precedent to the liability of the insurer that such pre-contractual representations are true. Such warranties or conditions precedent may be express or may be introduced by provisions stating that the precontractual representations are the “basis” of the contract or are incorporated into the contract. The effect of such provisions is that if any pre-contractual representation which is the subject of such a warranty or condition precedent is untrue, the insurer is automatically discharged from all liability under the insurance contract as from the date of the breach of the warranty or condition precedent.⁴⁰¹ The 2015 Act renders such provisions as invalid in that s. 9(2) provides that a representation made by the assured cannot be converted into such a warranty (or presumably conditions precedent) by such means (including by means of a “basis of the contract” clause). This prohibition appears to be aimed at provisions which seek to convert, without discrimination, all or a large number of pre-contractual representations into a warranty by basis of the contract clauses or the like. As Parliament recognises in its explanatory notes, it should remain possible for insurers to include specific warranties relating to existing or past facts within their policies.⁴⁰²

Contracting out of the 2015 Act

42-060

Except in one instance, the 2015 Act recognises that the parties to the insurance contract may contract out of the provisions of the 2015 Act, for example providing for different duties of disclosure or different remedies for an unfair presentation of the risk. Where such a term of the insurance contract intends to contract out of the provisions of the 2015 Act and where a term (if valid) would put the assured in a worse position than it would be in under the provisions of the Act, in order to be effective, any such “disadvantageous” term purporting to contract out of the Act must satisfy two conditions (which are described as the “transparency requirements”).⁴⁰³ First, the insurer must take sufficient steps to draw the disadvantageous term to the assured’s attention before the insurance contract is agreed (or before the relevant variation is agreed).⁴⁰⁴ However, the assured may not rely on any failure to comply with this condition if the assured or its agent had actual knowledge of the disadvantageous term when the contract (or variation) was agreed.⁴⁰⁵ Second, the disadvantageous term must be clear and unambiguous as to its effect.⁴⁰⁶ In order to assess whether these conditions have been complied with, the characteristics of the assured of the kind in question and the circumstances of the transaction are to be taken into account.⁴⁰⁷ The exception referred to at the beginning of this paragraph relates to “basis of the contract” clauses which put the assured in a worse position than allowed by s.9 of the 2015 Act; such provisions are not permitted in any circumstances.⁴⁰⁸ The 2015 Act’s provisions relating to contracting out do not apply to contracts for the settlement of claims under an insurance contract.⁴⁰⁹

^{363.} 2015 Act ss.22, 23(2).

^{364.} Explanatory notes, para.117.

^{365.} 2015 Act s.3(3)-(4).

^{366.} 2015 Act s.3(3)(b).

- 367. 2015 Act s.7(1).
- 368. 2015 Act ss.3(3)(c), 7(5).
- 369. 2015 Act s.3(3)(c). See Economides v Commercial Union Assurance Co Plc [1997] 3 W.L.R. 1066.
- 370. See below, para.42-057.
- 371. 2015 Act s.7(3).
- 372. See above, para.42-034.
- 373. 2015 Act s.7(4).
- 374. See above, para.42-036.
- 375. 2015 Act s.3(5).
- 376. See below, para.42-080.
- 377. 2015 Act s.3(4)(a).
- 378. 2015 Act s.4(2).
- 379. 2015 Act s.4(3).
- 380. 2015 Act s.4(8)(c).
- 381. Explanatory notes, para.55.
- 382. 2015 Act s.4(4)-(5).
- 383. 2015 Act s.6(1).
- 384. 2015 Act s.4(6)-(7).
- 385. See above, para.42-035.
- 386. 2015 Act s.3(5)(b)-(d).
- 387. 2015 Act s.5(1).
- 388. 2015 Act s.5(2); Explanatory notes, para.64-65.
- 389. 2015 Act s.5(3). See North British Fishing Boat Insurance Co Ltd v Starr (1922) 13 Ll.L. Rep. 206, 210; cf. Greenhill v Federal Insurance Co Ltd [1927] 1 K.B. 65; Marc Rich & Co AG v Portman [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 430, 442; affirmed [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 225.
- 390. 2015 Act s.6(1).
- 391. 2015 Act s.8(1).
- 392. 2015 Act s.8 and Sch.1.
- 393.  2015 Act ss.8(2), 8(5) and Sch.1 para.2. As to what constitutes a deliberate non-disclosure, see Mutual Energy Ltd v Starr Underwriting Agents Ltd [2016] EWHC 590 (TCC), [2016] B.L.R. 312.

- 394. 2015 Act s.8(2) and Sch.1 para.4.
- 395. 2015 Act s.8(2) and Sch.1 paras 5-6. Paragraph 6 begins with the words “In addition”.
- 396. 2015 Act s.8(2) and Sch.1 para.5.
- 397. 2015 Act s.8(2) and Sch.1 para.6.
- 398. 2015 Act s.8(2) and Sch.1 paras 7-11.
- 399. 2015 Act Sch.1 paras 2, 4, 5, 6(1). As regards variations, see Sch.1 paras 8, 9(2), 9(3), 10(2), 10(3), 11(1).
- 400. See above, para.42-043 and below, para.42-086.
- 401. See above, para.42-044.
- 402. Explanatory notes, para.85.
- 403. 2015 Act s.16.
- 404. 2015 Act s.17(2).
- 405. 2015 Act s.17(5).
- 406. 2015 Act s.17(3).
- 407. 2015 Act s.17(4).
- 408. 2015 Act ss.9, 16(1).
- 409. 2015 Act s.16(4).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 42 - Insurance

Section 4. - Utmost Good Faith and Fair Presentation of the Risk

(d) - Post-contractual duty of utmost good faith

The post-contractual duty of utmost good faith: existing law

42-061

 The preceding discussion has concentrated on the duty of full disclosure which exists up to the time of the making of the insurance contract. There are, however, other aspects of the duty. For example, there is a "post-contractual" duty of disclosure in cases where the insurance contract is to be amended or renewed; in reality, in such cases, the pre-contractual duty of disclosure revives so that the insurer may exercise his underwriting judgment afresh with the benefit of material information. ⁴¹⁰ In other contexts, concerning the insurance contract's performance, the courts have held that there is a duty not to be fraudulent, but no wider duty. ⁴¹¹ Obviously, there is a duty not to present fraudulent claims, although the precise nature and ambit of this duty is presently uncertain; in particular, it is unclear whether it properly falls within the wider duty of utmost good faith. The duty not to make fraudulent claims, which at the least is recognised as a sui generis common law duty, is considered separately in the context of claims in general. ⁴¹² In addition, the parties should not perform the insurance contract, in contexts other than claims, fraudulently: for example, where the assured provides information to the insurer during the course of the risk. It may be that the doctrine of utmost good faith has a wider role to play, such as where a liability insurer or a reinsurer assumes a contractual right to act on behalf of the assured or reassured respectively, ⁴¹³ or possibly influencing the construction to be given to the terms of an insurance contract. ⁴¹⁴ There may be circumstances where, having regard to the duty of utmost good faith, the insurer will assume a duty to warn the assured that it is not complying with the relevant terms of the insurance contract in respect of claims.

⁴¹⁵

Post-contractual duty of utmost good faith: Insurance Act 2015

42-062

Although the 2015 Act does not remove the general post-contractual duty of utmost good faith insofar as it applies to insurance contracts, it does abolish any rule of law which allows the insurer to avoid the insurance contract for the breach of the duty of utmost good faith. ⁴¹⁶ Accordingly there is no remedy available for such failures to observe the utmost good faith, save insofar as the 2015 Act provides for alternative remedies. The only such remedy which the 2015 Act provides for in this post-contractual context are remedies for the assured's presentation of a fraudulent claim. ⁴¹⁷ The 2015 Act does not alter the law concerning what constitutes a fraudulent claim and whether or not a fraudulent claim represents a breach of duty; it only makes provision for the remedies for any such offending fraudulent claim. ⁴¹⁸

^{410.} For a survey of the post-contractual duty of disclosure, see K/S Merc-Scandia XXXXII v Lloyd's Underwriters [2001] EWCA Civ 1275, [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 563. It is now established that there is no general duty of disclosure in respect of claims: Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v

Mountain [1997] L.R.L.R. 523; reversed on other grounds by the Court of Appeal: [1999] Q.B. 674; Manifest Shipping & Co Ltd v Uni-Polaris Shipping Co Ltd (The Star Sea) [2001] UKHL 1, [2001] 2 W.L.R. 170.

411. Manifest Shipping & Co Ltd v Uni-Polaris Shipping Co Ltd (The Star Sea) [2001] UKHL 1, [2001] 2 W.L.R. 170; K/S Merc-Scandia XXXXII v Lloyd's Underwriters [2001] EWCA Civ 1275, [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 563; Agapitos v Agnew (The Aegeon) [2002] EWCA Civ 247, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 42.

412. See below, para.42-098.

413. Cox v Bankside Members Agency Ltd [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 437, 471-472; cf. Gan Insurance Co Ltd v Tai Ping Insurance Co Ltd (No 2 and 3) [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 667 at [68], [76].

414. Harrower v Hutchinson (1870) LR 5 Q.B. 584, 592.

415.  Ted Baker Plc v Axa Insurance UK Plc [2017] EWCA Civ 4097 at [69]–[90].

416. 2015 Act s.14.

417. 2015 Act s.12.

418. See below, paras 42-099—42-100.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 42 - Insurance

Section 5. - The Parties

The assured

42-063

The assured (often referred to as the “insured”) is a person who may enter into and bind himself by a contract may effect a valid contract of insurance, provided he has the necessary insurable interest in its subject matter. ⁴¹⁹ A minor will not be bound by an insurance contract that is not for his benefit ⁴²⁰, and in any event a minor is not bound by the assignment of an insurance contract as security for an unenforceable loan. ⁴²¹ The assured is usually identified in the insurance contract specifically or as a member of a class, although there is no reason why the assured cannot contract as an undisclosed principal, provided that the insurer has not manifested his unwillingness to contract with such principals. In such cases, however, there may be a duty of disclosure to identify the principal to the insurer, if it is material. ⁴²²

The insurer

42-064

Persons carrying on business as insurers are required by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ⁴²³ to be authorised by the Financial Conduct Authority and to comply with the regulatory regime instituted thereunder. ⁴²⁴ At common law, a contract of insurance with an insurer acting without statutory authorisation was void for illegality and therefore as unenforceable by an innocent assured as by the insurer himself. ⁴²⁵ Sections 26 and 28 of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 now provide statutory relief from the consequences of this rule, which includes a right to compensation and may include, subject to the discretion of the court, the enforcement of the contract. ⁴²⁶

Agents of the insurer

42-065

⚠ An insurer often employs local agents to solicit business. ⁴²⁷ ⚠ The extent of the authority of such agents varies widely and depends upon the facts of each case. In general, the authority is limited to issuing and receiving proposal forms, ⁴²⁸ but it may be extended, depending upon the circumstances, either expressly or impliedly, ⁴²⁹ or by holding out, ⁴³⁰ to embrace, for example, the granting of temporary cover, ⁴³¹ the acceptance of premiums ⁴³² or the receipt of notices. ⁴³³ Whether the knowledge of the agent is imputed to the insurer depends upon whether the agent is one to whom the principal looks for information of the kind in question, ⁴³⁴ and often insurers are estopped from denying that an agent has passed on information to them. ⁴³⁵ The insurer's agent is not, by reason of the agency alone, a party to the insurance contract. ⁴³⁶ ⚠

Broker

42-066

⚠ Persons seeking insurance frequently engage brokers, whose services are usually remunerated on a commission basis by the insurer,⁴³⁷ but who are nonetheless agents of the assured,⁴³⁸ though they may act for the insurer as well,⁴³⁹ in which case conflicts of interest may well arise.⁴⁴⁰ The broker will remain subject to a duty of care even if he has assumed responsibilities to another principal creating a potential conflict of interests.⁴⁴¹ The broker must act with reasonable care and skill,⁴⁴² ⚠ and if, for example, he fails to arrange a contract of insurance as instructed or fails to make full disclosure, it is no defence that the insurer could have escaped liability if the contract had been made, if as a matter of business the insurer would not have refused payment.⁴⁴³ Nor can the broker escape liability where his negligence does not in fact prejudice the assured's insurance cover, if by his negligence he has exposed the assured to the uncertainties of a dispute or litigation with the insurer.⁴⁴⁴ The broker will be responsible for the maintenance of records and accounts.⁴⁴⁵ The conduct of the business of insurance brokers is regulated by the Financial Conduct Authority pursuant to the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000.

Lloyd's

42-067

⚠ The members of Lloyd's who act as insurers, called underwriters, enter into insurance contracts as individual members,⁴⁴⁶ though for convenience they group themselves into syndicates, the head of each syndicate usually having authority to bind the other members of that syndicate. The syndicates are composed of individual and corporate members, whose capital provide the security of the policies written at Lloyd's. Lloyd's is an organisation governed by the Corporation of Lloyd's which operates pursuant to the Lloyd's Act 1982. Persons seeking to insure at Lloyd's cannot approach the underwriters directly, but must engage brokers, who are nonetheless agents of the assured, except for the purpose of receiving the premium.⁴⁴⁷ Pursuant to Pt XIX of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, Lloyd's is an authorised person and has permission to carry on regulated activities, including the arranging of deals in contracts of insurance written at Lloyd's and arranging deals in participation in Lloyd's syndicates.⁴⁴⁸ The Council of Lloyd's retains responsibilities under the Lloyd's Act for the governance of Lloyd's. By usage, underwriters and Lloyd's brokers deal with each other as principals, settling quarterly accounts between themselves relating to premiums due and money payable for claims, and this usage may affect the assured as regards the payment of premiums and claims if he has knowledge of it and acquiesces in its adoption.⁴⁴⁹ ⚠ It is also the practice at Lloyd's for Lloyd's brokers to collect claims on behalf of assureds when called upon to do so, and a Lloyd's broker is under a continuing duty to exercise reasonable care and skill to retain the information enabling him to advance the claim for as long as a reasonable broker would regard a claim as possible.⁴⁵⁰

^{419.} See above, paras 42-005 et seq. See New Hampshire Insurance Co v MGN Ltd [1997] L.R.L.R. 24, 56; Sumitomo Bank Ltd v Banque Bruxelles Lambert SA [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 487, 495. As to the insurance for the benefit of more than one assured, see above, paras 42-010—42-011.

^{420.} Clements v London, NW Ry [1894] 2 Q.B. 482.

^{421.} Nottingham Building Society v Thurston [1903] A.C. 6 (decided under the Infants Relief Act 1874, now repealed by the Minors' Contracts Act 1987); see above, paras 9-005—9-009.

^{422.} National Oilwell (UK) Ltd v Davy Offshore Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 582, 596-597; Talbot Underwriting Ltd v Nausch Hogan & Murray (The Jascon 5) [2006] EWCA Civ 889, [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 195.

^{423.} As amended by the Financial Services Act 2012. The "effecting" and "carrying out" of a contract of insurance is a regulated activity for the purposes of s.22 of the Act: the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001 (SI 2001/544) art.10. The expressions “effecting” and “carrying out” include the making and performance of insurance contracts (Bedford Insurance Co Ltd v Instituto de Resseguros do Brasil [1985] 1 Q.B. 966, 981-982; Bates v Barrow Ltd [1995] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 680, 689; Group Josi Reinsurance Co Ltd v Walbrook Insurance Co Ltd [1996] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 345, 369) and their negotiation which begins not later than the invitation to treat (R. v Wilson [1997] 1 All E.R. 119, 126; Re Great Western Assurance Co SA [1999] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 377). “Contract of insurance” is defined in art.3 of the Order. This probably includes a contract of reinsurance (Re NRG Victory Reinsurance Ltd [1995] 1 All E.R. 533; New Hampshire Insurance Co v Grand Union Insurance Co Ltd [1996] L.R.L.R. 102, 104 HK Ct of Appeal); note that “a reinsurance contract” is excluded from the definition of “qualifying contract of insurance” in art.3.

424. See McMeel [2005] L.M.C.L.Q. 186.

425. Phoenix General Insurance Co of Greece SA v Halvanon Insurance Co [1988] Q.B. 216 (where the Court of Appeal expressed an admittedly obiter view after full argument in order to resolve the uncertainty caused by the conflict between Bedford Insurance Co v Instituto de Resseguros do Brasil [1985] Q.B. 966; and Stewart v Oriental Fire and Marine Insurance Co [1985] Q.B. 988); Re Cavalier Insurance Co Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 430; DR Insurance Co v Seguros America Banamex [1993] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 120. See, however, the observations of Parker L.J. in Overseas Union Insurance Ltd v Incorporated General Insurance Ltd [1992] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 439, 444-445; and of the Court of Appeal in Fuji Finance Inc v Aetna Life Insurance Co Ltd [1997] Ch. 173. The Insurance Companies Act 1982 prohibited the effecting or carrying out of unauthorised insurance business within the UK, whether or not the proper law of the insurance contract is English law (DR Insurance Co v Central National Insurance Co [1996] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 74). The 1982 Act did not prohibit the insurance of UK risks offshore: Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Great Western Assurance Co SA [1997] Re L.R. 197. The fact that the contract of insurance is made outside the jurisdiction does not mean that insurance business is not conducted in the jurisdiction, if for example there is continuity or regularity of services provided within the jurisdiction, which are an integral part of the way in which the insurer conducts business: Re Great Western Assurance Co SA [1999] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 377. See also Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s.418.

426. See New Hampshire Insurance Co v Grand Union Insurance Co Ltd [1996] L.R.L.R. 102. As to the transitional effect of the statutory predecessor to ss.26 and 28 (s.132 of the Financial Services Act 1986, now repealed by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Consequential Amendments and Repeals) Order 2001 (SI 2001/3649) art.3); see Bates v Barrow Ltd [1995] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 680; Deutsche Rückversicherung AG v Walbrook Insurance Co Ltd [1996] 1 All E.R. 791.

427.  As to the regulatory requirements for the authorisation of agents and representatives, see s.39 of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 and art.25 of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001 (SI 2001/544). See Personal Touch Financial Services Ltd v Simplysure Ltd [2016] EWCA Civ 461 (private medical insurance).

428. Gale v Lewis (1846) 9 Q.B. 730; Linford v Provincial Horse and Cattle (1864) 34 Beav. 291.

429. Murfitt v Royal (1922) 38 T.L.R. 334. cf. Mackie v European Assurance (1869) 21 L.T. 102.

430. Willis, Faber v Joyce (1911) 27 T.L.R. 388. cf. Rossiter v Trafalgar Life (1859) 27 Beav. 377.

431. Murfitt v Royal, above.

432. Rossiter v Trafalgar Life, above; Linford v Provincial Horse and Cattle (1864) 34 Beav. 291; London and Lancashire Life v Fleming [1897] A.C. 499. cf. British Industry Life v Ward (1856) 17 C.B. 644.

433. Marsden v City and County (1865) L.R. 1 C.P. 232.

- 434. Blackburn v Vigors (1887) 12 App. Cas. 531, 537; Evans v Employers' Mutual Insurance Association Ltd [1936] 1 K.B. 505; Malhi v Abbey Life Assurance Co Ltd [1996] L.R.L.R. 237, 242–243.
- 435. Wing v Harvey (1854) 5 De. G.M. & G. 265; Golding v Royal London (1914) 30 T.L.R. 350; Lennard's Co v Asiatic Petroleum [1915] A.C. 705; Ayrey v British Legal [1918] 1 K.B. 136; Houghton v Northard, Lowe [1928] A.C. 1; Newsholme v Road Transport [1929] 2 K.B. 356. cf. Acey v Fernie (1840) 7 M. & W. 151; Bawden v London, Edinburgh and Glasgow [1892] 2 Q.B. 534; Biggar v Rock Life [1902] 1 K.B. 516; Keeling v Pearl Assurance Co (1923) 129 L.T. 573; St Margaret's Trust v Navigation and General (1949) 82 Ll.L. Rep. 752; Facer v Vehicle & General [1965] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 113; Stone v Reliance Mutual Insurance Co Ltd [1972] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 469; Woolcott v Excess Insurance Co Ltd [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 633, 638; approved on the point of law involved [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 231, 240–241.
- 436.  Temple Legal Protection Ltd v QBE Insurance (Europe) Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 453, [2009] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 544; PM Law Ltd v Motorplus Ltd [2016] EWHC 193 (QB), [2016] 1 Costs L.R. 143 at [58]
- 437. The broker will be entitled to commission if he was effective in achieving the result for the accomplishment of which the principal had promised to pay him: Harding Maughan Hambly Ltd v Compagnie Européenne de Courtage d'Assurances et de Reassurances SA [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 316. As to the broker's entitlement to claim commission from either the insurer or the assured, see Carvill America Inc v Camperdown UK Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 645, [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 457.
- 438. Empress Assurance v Bowring (1905) 11 Com. Cas. 107; Glasgow Assurance v Symondson (1911) 16 Com. Cas. 109; Rozanes v Bowen (1928) 32 Ll.L. Rep. 98; Anglo African Merchants Ltd v Bayley [1970] 1 Q.B. 311; North and South Trust Co v Berkeley [1971] 1 W.L.R. 470. In the latter two cases the right of the assured to see documents in the possession of the brokers (or the duty of the brokers in relation to such documents) is discussed. See also Roberts v Plaisted [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 341, 343; Pryke v Gibbs Hartley Cooper Ltd [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 602, 614–615; Searle v AR Hales & Co Ltd [1996] L.R.L.R. 68, 71. Aneco Reinsurance Underwriting Ltd (In Liquidation) v Johnson & Higgins [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 565. As to the scope of the broker's authority, see Pacific and General Insurance Co v Hazell [1997] L.R.L.R. 65. As to the relationship between assureds, producing brokers and placing brokers, see Prentis Donegan & Partners v Leeds & Leeds Co Inc [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 326.
- 439. Gale v Lewis (1846) 9 Q.B. 730; Edwards v Martin (1865) L.R. 1 Eq. 121; Equitable Life v General Accident, 1904 12 S.L.T. 348; Stockton v Mason [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 430. See also Goldschlager v Royal Insurance, 84 D.L.R. (3d) 355 (1978) Can.
- 440. Anglo African Merchants Ltd v Bayley [1970] 1 Q.B. 311; North and South Trust Co v Berkeley, above; Eagle Star Insurance Co Ltd v Spratt [1971] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 116; Excess Life Insurance Co v Fireman's Insurance Co of New York [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 599, 618–620. If the broker acts as agent for the insurer, he ceases to be the assured's broker and may be in breach of duty to the assured: Re Great Western Assurance Co SA [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 377, 386.
- 441. HIH Casualty & General Insurance Ltd v JLT Risk Solutions Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 710, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 278.
- 442.  Park v Hammond (1816) 6 Taunt. 495; Levy v Merchants' Marine (1885) 52 L.T. 263; Dickson v Devit (1916) 86 L.J.K.B. 315; Sarginson Bros v Keith Moulton (1943) 73 Ll.L. Rep. 104; General Accident v Minet (1943) 74 Ll.L. Rep. 1; Lyons v Bentley (1944) 77 Ll.L. Rep. 355; United Mills v Bray [1952] 1 T.L.R. 149; Osman v J Ralph Moss Ltd [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 313; London Borough of Bromley v Ellis [1971] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 97; O'Connor v BDB Kirby & Co [1972] 1 Q.B. 90; Warren v Henry Sutton & Co [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 276; McNealy v Pennine Insurance Co Ltd [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 18; The Superhulls Cover Case [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 431, 445; Harvest Trucking Co Ltd v Davis [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 638; Bates v Barrow Ltd [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 680, 689–691; Jones v Environcom Ltd [2010] EWHC 759 (Comm), [2011] EWCA Civ 1152; Ground Gilbey Ltd v Jardine Lloyd Thompson UK Ltd [2011] EWHC

- 124 (Comm), [2012] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 12; Eurokey Recycling Ltd v Giles Insurance Brokers Ltd [2014] EWHC 2989 (Comm), [2015] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 225, at [86]; RR Securities Ltd v Towergate Underwriting Group Ltd [2016] EWHC 2653 (QB); Jackson & Powell on Professional Negligence, 7th edn (2012), Ch.16. For an informative discussion of the scope of a broker's duty as to the collection and payment of premiums and claims proceeds, as to the making of claims, and as to the maintenance of records, see Equitas Ltd v Walsham Bros & Co Ltd [2013] EWHC 3264 (Comm), [2014] P.N.L.R. 8. As to the assumption of a duty of care, see European International Reinsurance Co Ltd v Curzon Insurance Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 1074, [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 793. For the possibility of contributory negligence by an assured, see Mint Security Ltd v Blair [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 188, 200; and by a sub-broker, see Tudor Jones v Crowley Colosso Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 619; Involnert Management Inc v Aprilgrange Ltd [2015] EWHC 2225 (Comm), [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 289 at [288]–[292]. As to the scope of damages recoverable from a negligent broker, see Aneco Reinsurance Underwriting Ltd v Johnson & Higgins Ltd [2001] UKHL 51, [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 157.
443. Fraser v Furman (Productions) Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 898; though damages may be awarded on the basis that a compromise would have been reached with the insurer (Everett v Hogg, Robinson & Gardner Mountain (Insurance) Ltd [1973] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 217), or be assessed by reference to the chance of recovering on the policy (Dunbar v A & B Painters Ltd [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 39).
444. FNCB Ltd v Barnet Devanney (Harrow) Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 459; Talbot Underwriting Ltd v Nausch Hogan & Murray Inc [2005] EWHC 2359 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 195 at [103]–[112] (Cooke J.); affirmed [2006] EWCA Civ 889, [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 195.
445. Johnston v Leslie & Godwin Financial Services Ltd [1995] L.R.L.R. 472; Equitas Ltd v Horace Holman & Co Ltd [2007] EWHC 903 (Comm), [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 567.
446. And they may be able to sue in their own name when the reputation of "Lloyd's" is put at risk: Scott v Tuff-Kote (Australia) Pty Ltd [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 103 NSW Supreme Ct. For a description of the business conducted at Lloyd's, see Society of Lloyd's v Robinson [1997] L.R.L.R. 1 at 7.8, [1999] 1 W.L.R. 756, 759–760.
447. See the cases cited in para.42-066. As to the relationship between the underwriters, brokers and assureds in the context of premium payable under a marine policy, see Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.53, Prentis Donegan & Partners v Leeds Leeds Co Inc [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 326; and JA Chapman & Co Ltd (In Liquidation) v Kadirga Denizcilik Ve Ticaret AS [1998] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 377; Heath Lambert Ltd v Sociedad de Corretaje de Seguros [2004] EWCA Civ 792, [2004] 1 W.L.R. 2820. As to the brokers' lien on the policy in respect of unpaid premium see Eide UK Ltd v Lowndes Lambert Group Ltd [1999] Q.B. 199; Heath Lambert Ltd v Sociedad de Corretaje de Seguros [2006] EWHC 1345 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 551.
448. As amended by the Financial Services Act 2012 s.40 and the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (PRA-regulated Activities) Order 2013 (SI 2013/556) art.2. See also the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001 (SI 2001/544) arts 56–58.
449.  See the discussion in Gilman and Merkin (eds), Arnould's Law of Marine Insurance and Average, 18th edn (2013), Ch.4 and Legh-Jones, MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), Ch.37.
450. Johnstone v Leslie & Godwin [1995] L.R.L.R. 472, holding also that the broker is under a duty not to destroy a policy held on behalf of his principal (which is the principal's property) or, where there is no policy, the slip (which belongs to the broker) without the consent of the principal. In Goshawk Dedicated Ltd v Tyser & Co Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 54, [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 566, the Court of Appeal held that there is an implied term in a contract of insurance between an assured and a Lloyd's underwriter that the Lloyd's broker will make available to the underwriter documents previously shown to the underwriter during the placement of the risk or the presentation of a claim; in addition, certain premium accounting documents would be disclosable to the underwriter.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 42 - Insurance

Section 6. - The Contract of Insurance

Formation of the contract

42-068

Apart from the doctrine of uberrima fides, ⁴⁵¹ normal principles of contract law apply to the formation of the contracts of insurance, ⁴⁵² though an offer by an insurer to insure may (in the absence of stipulations to the contrary) be subject to an implied condition that the risk does not materially change prior to acceptance. ⁴⁵³ There must, of course, be an unconditional acceptance by one party of the offer made by the other. ⁴⁵⁴ Thus where an insurer "accepts" a proposal subject to payment of the premiums, his acceptance is in truth either a counter-offer to be accepted by tendering that premium, or perhaps only an invitation to the assured to offer that premium to the insurer for his acceptance of it and the terms proposed. ⁴⁵⁵ If an offer is made and accepted on the basis that the insurer will not be liable unless the premium is paid within a specified time, it appears that a binding contract is made at once, though the insurer will escape liability if the premium is not paid. ⁴⁵⁶ As in contract generally, ⁴⁵⁷ one party may be taken to have contracted on terms of which he was only constructively aware, ⁴⁵⁷ and generally the insurer's proposal form, which the assured uses to give the insurer particulars of the risk, contains express reference to the insurer's terms and conditions. ⁴⁵⁸

The slip

42-069

In London, brokers commonly submit to underwriters a document called a slip which contains brief particulars of the risk, and each underwriter approached (if willing to accept the risk) initials the slip and puts against his initials the percentage of the risk he is willing to insure. Save for marine and possibly life insurance where, by statute, the contract must be embodied in a policy, ⁴⁵⁹ the slip itself constitutes a binding contract of insurance on which an underwriter may be sued even if no signed policy is subsequently issued. ⁴⁶⁰ The writing of a line on the slip by each underwriter gives rise to an independent binding contract with that underwriter (distinct from the contracts with the other underwriters) to the extent of the percentage written, from which neither party can resile even if the slip is never fully subscribed. ⁴⁶¹ By custom at Lloyd's, however, the percentage of risk accepted by any particular underwriter may be proportionately "written down" if the slip is oversubscribed on closing. ⁴⁶² Furthermore, where one or more underwriters are permitted under a "leading underwriter's clause" contained in the slip to make amendments to cover, they have (subject to the particular terms of the clause) actual authority to bind the other underwriters on the same slip, and act as their agents in doing so. ⁴⁶³ One consequence of each line on the slip giving rise to a distinct contract appears to be that a false statement made to a leading underwriter will not, in itself, permit the other (following) underwriters to avoid their own contracts for misrepresentation, ⁴⁶⁴ although the non-disclosure to the following underwriter of that misrepresentation may allow the following underwriter to avoid their respective contracts, ⁴⁶⁵ or the presentation of the risk to the following underwriter might have taken place on the assumption that a fair presentation had been made to the leading underwriter. ⁴⁶⁶

Open covers and declarations

42-070

The contract of insurance may be constituted by means of a declaration which is presented to the insurer pursuant to the terms of an open cover. ⁴⁶⁷ The open cover identifies the terms and conditions of the insurance and the scope of the risk which might be declared thereunder. Upon the presentation and acceptance of the declaration, provided that it falls within the scope of the risk permitted by the open cover, the contract is formed on the terms and conditions set out in the open cover. It may be that the open cover provides that the insurer is obliged to accept the declaration ⁴⁶⁸ or that the insurer is entitled to refuse or accept the declaration as he pleases. It is often the case that the assured can choose whether or not to declare a particular risk under the open cover. ⁴⁶⁹ Occasionally, it may be that the open cover provides that the assured is obliged to present all risks falling within the scope of the open cover to the insurer. Whether or not the insurer or the assured is obliged to accept or present the declaration will consequently determine the time at which the contract is made and at which the duty of disclosure of material facts ceases. ⁴⁷⁰

Cover notes

42-071

The assured may require cover from the moment when he offers to enter into a contract with an insurer who is usually willing to provide such preliminary protection. ⁴⁷¹ Such an engagement is usually set out in a “cover note” ⁴⁷² (though cover may, of course, be given informally), ⁴⁷³ and constitutes a separate contract. ⁴⁷⁴ The cover note usually incorporates by reference the terms and conditions of the insurer’s ordinary policy, but in the absence of such a reference, or of actual or constructive notice of those terms and conditions, the preliminary cover will not be subject to them. ⁴⁷⁵ The period of the preliminary cover commonly takes one of two forms: either a fixed length of time; or the period until the insurer indicates his decision whether or not to enter into a more permanent contract. ⁴⁷⁶ Since promptness may be of importance, an insurer may authorise local agents to grant temporary cover and issue cover notes on his behalf, and such authority has sometimes been implied. ⁴⁷⁷

Issue of policy

42-072

The contract of insurance may be embodied in a policy, but unless required by statute or contract, the contract may exist and be enforceable without a policy. The policy is the physical incarnation of the contract, but they should not be confused. ⁴⁷⁸ Where the contract pre-dates the issue of the policy, questions will arise as to whether the parties intended that the policy supersede the pre-existing contract. Even in cases where the policy supersedes the earlier contract, the court may have regard to the earlier contract (which may be in the form of a slip or an insurer’s cover note) with a view to construing the policy. ⁴⁷⁹ There is no longer a requirement that life or any other policies be stamped. ⁴⁸⁰ The Life Assurance Act 1774 ⁴⁸¹ makes it unlawful to make a policy without inserting the name of the persons interested in it, but does not specifically enact that a policy shall be made, although such a requirement might be implied. Marine insurance contracts must be embodied in a policy in accordance with the Marine Insurance Act 1906. ⁴⁸²

Renewal

42-073

⚠ If the event insured against occurs after the termination of the period of insurance, the assured cannot, of course, recover unless the contract has been renewed. The term “renewal” is used to denote both the extension of the original period of cover by the exercise of a right given to one party (almost invariably the assured) by the contract to extend the period of the cover without the assent of the other, and the making of a new contract through the agreement of both. It is important to distinguish the two types of renewal, since only in the former case will vitiating elements in the original contract, such as failure to make full disclosure, affect the extension, and conversely only in the latter case will a duty arise to make full disclosure at the time of the renewal.⁴⁸³ Life insurance usually gives the assured the right to renew automatically on the payment of a further premium at the end of the first period, and such renewal does not constitute a new contract,⁴⁸⁴  but contracts which provide for the tender of the renewal premium and its acceptance by the insurer,⁴⁸⁵ and those which provide for automatic renewal unless one party gives notice to the other,⁴⁸⁶  are of the other type.

Days of grace

42-074

Often the assured is given a period beyond the end of the original period of insurance during which the renewal premium may be paid. This period, termed “days of grace”, may be granted either by an express stipulation in the original contract, or by the terms of a renewal notice sent by the insurer to the assured. Whether the assured may recover for a loss occurring during this period depends upon the nature of the stipulation providing for the days of grace.⁴⁸⁷ If the insurer has a right not to accept the renewal premium, then prima facie he will not be liable for such a loss if he chooses not to renew.⁴⁸⁸ On the other hand, if the assured can renew as of right, then it seems that the insurer is liable if the premium is tendered before the days of grace expire,⁴⁸⁹ but each case must depend upon the provisions used.

Payment of premium

42-075

 The price for which the insurer agrees to insure is called the premium and is usually payable in money.⁴⁹⁰  Some contracts contain a term that the insurer shall not be on risk until the premium is paid⁴⁹¹ and such a term is effective,⁴⁹² but in its absence the insurer is bound before actual payment.⁴⁹³ The insurer can maintain an action for the premium if he comes on risk before it is paid,⁴⁹⁴ and this may be the case even where there is a term that he shall not be on risk until it is paid.⁴⁹⁵ Subject to the foregoing the assured is liable to pay the premium as soon as the contract is made⁴⁹⁶ and his failure to do so might, depending on the circumstances, amount to a repudiation of the contract open to acceptance by the insurer.⁴⁹⁷ The amount, manner and form of payment of the premium are, of course, to be decided by agreement between the parties as may be modified by their conduct,⁴⁹⁸ and an insurance “at a premium to be arranged”⁴⁹⁹ would, it seems, be a valid and enforceable contract and a reasonable premium would be payable,⁵⁰⁰ though in such a case the assured need make no payment by way of premium until the amount of a reasonable premium has been agreed or determined by the court.⁵⁰¹

Return of premium

42-076

 In some circumstances the assured may be able to recover the premium and generally his right to do so depends upon whether the insurer has ever been on risk.⁵⁰² In marine insurance recovery of the premium is governed by the Marine Insurance Act 1906⁵⁰³ but the wide rights of recovery provided therein have not been applied to non-marine insurance and it is unwise to assume that the same rules will be applied.⁵⁰⁴ It seems, however, that the assured can claim a refund of the premium if:

(a)

The contract is void for mistake of fact,⁵⁰⁵ even if the true facts make it illegal.⁵⁰⁶ Thus if a house is insured in the mistaken belief that it is still standing, or a life in the mistaken belief that the life assured is still living, ⁵⁰⁷ the premium may be recovered.

(b)

The contract is void for illegality, provided that the assured was not in pari delicto, ⁵⁰⁸ or withdrew before the risk (but for the illegality) would have commenced to run. ⁵⁰⁹ Where the assured enters into an unenforceable contract of insurance with an insurer acting without statutory authorisation, he has a statutory right to recover his premium. ⁵¹⁰

(c)

The insurer avoids the contract for innocent misrepresentation or nondisclosure not amounting to fraudulent concealment. ⁵¹¹ But, even where the assured has acted fraudulently, the insurer, if he seeks to avoid the contract, ⁵¹² will be entitled to retain the premium in the case of marine insurance by reason of s.84(1)(a) of the Marine Insurance Act 1906. ⁵¹³ In the case of non-marine insurance, however, as a matter of principle, there is no reason why the insurer should be entitled to retain the premium because the contract's avoidance is dependent on restitutio in integrum. ⁵¹⁴  The policy may provide that premium is not returnable in the event of a misrepresentation or non-disclosure even in the absence of fraud. ⁵¹⁵

(d)

The insurer is discharged from liability under the contract for breach of warranty occurring before he came on risk, ⁵¹⁶ or before renewal in the case of renewal premiums. ⁵¹⁷

(e)

The assured exercises his right of cancellation of a long-term insurance contract under the Financial Conduct Authority's Insurance Conduct of Business Sourcebook. ⁵¹⁸

(f)

The insurer exercises a contractual right of cancellation, in which case the assured may depending on the construction of the contract be entitled, or pursuant to an implied term, to a return of the balance of the premium in respect of that part of the risk which has not yet been run. ⁵¹⁹

Subject to the terms of the contract, once the insurer has been on risk, the risk is indivisible. If the assured cancels the contract prior to the expiry of the policy, at common law, the assured is not entitled to a return of premium in respect of that proportion of the risk that has not expired. ⁵²⁰ However, it has recently been held that in the event of the insurer's contractual cancellation of the policy, the assured may be entitled to a return of the premium pursuant to an implied term and the indivisible nature of the risk will not prevent that recovery. ⁵²¹

Construction of insurance contracts

42-077

 Insurance contracts are subject to the same approach to contractual construction as other contracts, namely that the words of the contract will be interpreted to divine their contextual meaning consistently with the sense and purpose of the policy, even if that is at odds with the literal meaning of the contract. ⁵²² The commercial purpose of the insurance contract, however, should not be lightly invoked to undermine the importance of the contractual language which the parties have chosen to

⚠ Therefore, where a word is used in an insurance policy which has a technical, legal connotation, the court will not necessarily infer that the parties intended that meaning and will inquire into the ordinary, commercial meaning to be ascribed to the word.⁵²⁴ On the other hand, if an insurance term has a settled judicially accepted meaning, the courts are loathe to apply a different interpretation.⁵²⁵ Similarly, the Court will assume that the parties intended to use words which had a special or peculiar meaning in the particular market or trade in that sense.⁵²⁶ If the insurance contract is based on a standard form of contract to which the parties have added special clauses, greater weight will be given to the special provisions, and, in the event of conflict or inconsistency between the general and special provisions, the latter will prevail.⁵²⁷ ⚠ There is one rule of construction applicable to ordinary contracts which applies with particular force in the context of insurance contracts, namely that verba chartarum fortius accipiuntur contra proferentem: i.e. where the contractual provision is ambiguous, the provision will be construed against the person who drafts or puts forward the provision, which in many (but not all) cases will be the insurer.⁵²⁸ The construction of contractual terms “against the insurer” is not limited to cases where the insurer has produced the wording. If the insurer seeks to rely on a provision, such as a condition precedent or warranty, so as to extinguish or reduce his basic obligations, the court will resist such a construction unless the contractual terms are especially clear.⁵²⁹ Having regard to the decision of the Supreme Court in Impact Funding Solutions Ltd v AIG Europe Insurance Ltd,⁵³⁰ ⚠ the fact that a provision in an insurance contract is expressed as an exception or exclusion does not necessarily mean that it should be approached with a pre-disposition to construe it narrowly or restrictively, at least insofar as it delineates the scope of the insurer’s primary obligation of indemnity, as opposed to excluding a liability or a remedy where the primary obligation would otherwise have rendered the insurer liable.

^{451.} See above, para.42-033.

^{452.} Canning v Farquhar (1886) 16 Q.B.D. 727; Rust v Abbey Life Assurance Co Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 334. For an example of a contract concluded by exchange of emails, see Allianz Insurance Co Egypt v Aigaion Insurance Co SA (No.2) [2008] EWCA Civ 1455, [2009] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 3. As to when a contract is concluded at Lloyd’s, see Jaglom v Excess Insurance Co Ltd [1971] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 171. For the application of agency principles of undisclosed principal and ratification where a named insured takes out insurance cover on behalf of another as well as himself, see National Oil Well (UK) Ltd v Davy Offshore Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 582, 592–602. See, also, Siu v Eastern Insurance Co Ltd [1994] 2 A.C. 199 PC, holding that the personal nature of an insurance contract does not, of itself, preclude the application of the doctrine of undisclosed principal to contracts of indemnity insurance. See also O’Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 389; Talbot Underwriting Ltd v Nausch Hogan & Murray [2005] EWHC 2359 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 195; [2006] EWCA Civ 889, [2006] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 195.

^{453.} Siu v Eastern Insurance Co Ltd [1994] 2 A.C. 199 PC.

^{454.} In Rust v Abbey Life Assurance Co Ltd, above, at 340, the Court of Appeal held that it was an inevitable inference from the assured’s retention of the policy document for seven months after receipt that she had accepted the insurer’s offer. See also Yona International Ltd v La Réunion Française Société Anonyme d’Assurances et de Réassurances [1996] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 84, 109–111; New Hampshire Insurance Co v MGN Ltd [1997] L.R.L.R. 24, 32–34, 54.

^{455.} New Hampshire Insurance Co v MGN Ltd [1997] L.R.L.R. 24, 32–34, 54. See also Re Yager & Guardian (1912) 108 L.T. 38.

^{456.} Roberts v Security Co [1897] 1 Q.B. 111; Equitable Fire and Accident v Ching Wo Hong [1907] A.C. 96; Harrington v Pearl Life (1914) 30 T.L.R. 613. But see the cases cited in para.42-066, above.

^{457.} Adie v Insurance Corp (1898) 14 T.L.R. 544; Rust v Abbey Life Assurance Co Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 334.

458. The contract of insurance is exempt from the stricture upon exemption clauses imposed by the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977: see s.1(2), Sch.1 para.1(a). See, however, see below, paras 42-087—42-088.
459. See Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.22; Life Assurance Act 1774 s.2. This is a formal or evidential requirement; the contract of marine insurance is concluded when the proposal is accepted by the insurer, by the signing of his line of the slip: Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.21; General Accident Fire & Life Assurance Corp v Tanter (The Zephyr) [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 58, 69. There are other statutes which require a written record of specified insurance contracts: see, e.g. Road Traffic Act 1988 s.147.
460. Thompson v Adams (1889) 23 Q.B.D. 361; Grover v Mathews [1910] 15 Com. Cas. 249; Re Yager and Guardian (1912) 108 L.T. 38; Eagle Star Insurance v Spratt [1971] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 116; The Zephyr [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 58. For the position where a policy wording differs from slip, see HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v New Hampshire Insurance Co [2001] EWCA Civ 735, [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 39 at [81]–[95], where the Court of Appeal held that there was no rule of law that the policy was conclusive evidence of the insurance contract. Identifying the terms and meaning of the contract depended on a process of construction and analysis of the relationship between the slip and the policy and determining the parties' intention (cf. Youell v Bland Welch & Co Ltd [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 127). See New Hampshire Insurance Co v MGN Ltd [1997] L.R.L.R. 24, 32–34, 53–54.
461. General Reinsurance Corp v Forsakringsaktiebolaget Fennia Patria [1983] Q.B. 856, where the Court of Appeal held, inter alia, that (at least on the evidence adduced in that case) there was no legally binding custom in the Lloyd's market, nor could a term be implied, giving the assured a right of cancellation prior to full subscription of the slip. See Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.24(2).
462. General Reinsurance Corp v Forsakringsaktiebolaget Fennia Patria, above. For the reasons for oversubscription, and the position which arises if a broker misstates the likely level of "writing down", see The Zephyr [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 58, [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 529.
463. Roadworks (1952) Ltd v JR Charman [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 99 (where it was held that the particular leading underwriter's clause under consideration even gave the leading underwriter authority to waive a contingent condition to which the entire cover had been subject); cf. Mander v Commercial Union Assurance [1998] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 93, 143–144. Similar authority may be given to a leading underwriter to settle claims: see Roar Marine Ltd v Bimeh Iran Insurance Co [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 423; Unum Life Insurance Co of America v Israel Phoenix Assurance Co Ltd [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 374; PT Buana Samudra Pratama v Marine Mutual Insurance Association (NZ) Ltd [2011] EWHC 2413 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 655.
464. Bank Leumi Le Israel BM v British National Insurance Co [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 71, though it was there accepted that following underwriters may well be able to take advantage of misrepresentations or non-disclosures to a lead underwriter if they had subscribed on the basis of trusting the skill and judgment of the leading underwriter, and assumed that he had, himself, subscribed only after considering full and accurate information about the risk; and cf. The Zephyr [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 58, 70.
465. Aneco Reinsurance Underwriting Ltd (In Liquidation) v Johnson & Higgins [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 565.
466. Brotherton v Aseguradora Colseguros SA [2003] EWHC 1741 (Comm), [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 762.
467. See Glencore International AG v Ryan [2001] EWCA Civ 2051, [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 574.
468. In the case of an open cover which obliges the insurer to accept declarations under it, the open cover is a standing offer whereby the insurer agrees to accept liability in respect of any declarations made within the terms of the cover; however, the insurer is not bound until the declaration—the acceptance of his offer—has been communicated to him: BP Plc v GE Frankona Reinsurance Ltd [2003] EWHC 344 (Comm), [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 537 at [82]–[87].

This is, however, subject to a contrary market practice: Limit No.2 Ltd v AXA Versicherung AG [2007] EWHC 2321 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 330 at [108]–[111], reversed in part [2008] EWCA Civ 1231, [2009] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 396. Such open covers are to be distinguished from “floating policies” as defined by Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.29, where the making of the declaration is not operative in binding the insurer: Glencore International AG v Ryan (The Beursgracht) [2001] EWCA Civ 2051, [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 335 at [26]–[32]; Hanwha Non-Life Insurance Co Ltd v Alba Pte Ltd [2011] SGHC 271, [2012] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 505 at [48] (Singapore High Court).

- 469. Where the assured is able to choose whether or not to declare a risk under an open cover and the insurer is bound to accept such declaration as is made by the assured, there is no obligation upon the assured to exercise care in his selection of the risks he chooses to declare: BP Plc v GE Frankona Reinsurance Ltd, above. As regards the insurer's obligations towards his reinsurer in deciding whether or not to accept a risk which would be ceded to the reinsurer, see Bonner v Cox Dedicated Corporate Member Ltd [2004] EWHC 2963 (Comm) at [255], [2005] EWCA Civ 1512, [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 152 at [85]–[111].
- 470. See HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v Chase Manhattan Bank [2001] EWCA Civ 1250, [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 483; reversing in part [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 30; reversed in part [2003] UKHL 6, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 61. See above, para.42-037.
- 471. In the case of motor insurance, the cover note must give the holder immediate protection; see Road Traffic Act 1988 s.143.
- 472. Thompson v Adams (1889) 23 Q.B.D. 361, 366; Re Yager and Guardian (1912) 108 L.T. 38, 40. Cover notes should be distinguished from brokers' cover notes, which if issued without the authority of the insurer, merely record the terms of the insurance contract agreed between the insurer and broker. Whilst brokers' cover notes might evidence the terms of the insurance contract, it is not itself a contractual document.
- 473. Murfitt v Royal (1922) 38 T.L.R. 334; Stockton v Mason [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 430.
- 474. Mackie v European Assurance (1869) 21 L.T. 102.
- 475. Re Coleman's Depositories [1907] 2 K.B. 798; Symington v Union Insurance (No.2) (1928) 142 L.T. 48; Queen Insurance v Parsons (1881) 7 App. Cas. 96.
- 476. See Mackie v European Assurance, above; Levy v Scottish Employers (1901) 17 T.L.R. 229. cf. Cartwright v MacCormack [1963] 1 W.L.R. 18.
- 477. Mackie v European Assurance (1869) 21 L.T. 102; Murfitt v Royal (1922) 38 T.L.R. 334; Stockton v Mason, above. See above, para.42-064, for the position of agents in insurance.
- 478. New Hampshire Insurance Co v MGN Ltd [1997] L.R.L.R. 24, 42 (per Potter J.), 58 (per Staughton L.J.). Note also the use of the words “contract” and “policy” in the Marine Insurance Act 1906. See also MA Clarke, The Law of Insurance Contracts, 6th edn (2009), para.1-1A.
- 479. HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v New Hampshire Insurance Co [2001] EWCA Civ 735, [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 39 at [81]–[95].
- 480. Finance Act 1970 s.32 and Sch.7 Pt I para.1(2)(b); Finance Act 1989 ss.173, 187 and Sch.17.
- 481. See above, para.42-014.
- 482. s.22. cf. Eide UK Ltd v Lowndes Lambert Group Ltd [1999] Q.B. 199, 207–208.
- 483. See above, paras 42-034—42-037 for the duty of disclosure.
- 484.  Pritchard v Merchant's Life (1858) 3 C.B.(N.S.) 622, 643; Phoenix Life v Sheridan (1860) 8 H.L.C. 745, 750; Stuart v Freeman [1903] 1 K.B. 47. cf. Legh-Jones, MacGillivray on Insurance

- Law, 13th edn (2015), paras 7–038—7–039.
- 485. Sun Fire v Hart (1889) 14 App. Cas. 98.
- 486.  Solvency Mutual v Froane (1861) 7 H. & N. 5. See Dalecroft Properties Ltd v Underwriters [2017] EWHC 1263 (Comm) at [85.2].
- 487. cf. Salvin v James (1805) 6 East 571; McKenna v City Life [1919] 2 K.B. 491.
- 488. Tarleton v Staniforth (1794) 5 T.R. 695; Simpson v Accidental Death (1857) 2 C.B.(N.S.) 257. Quaere whether the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 or, for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015, the Consumer Rights Act 2015 (see above, paras 38-358—38-394) might circumscribe the insurer's right of refusal: see below, paras 42-087—42-088.
- 489. Stuart v Freeman [1903] 1 K.B. 47; but see Pritchard v Merchants' Life (1858) 3 C.B.(N.S.) 622.
- 490.  Equitable Fire v Ching Wo Hong [1907] A.C. 96. The premium need not necessarily be money: Lion Insurance v Tucker (1883) 12 Q.B.D. 176, 187; Great Britain 100 Al v Wyllie (1889) 22 Q.B.D. 710, 722. If the insurer gives the assured (being an individual) credit for the premium, the Consumer Credit Act 1974 may regulate the transaction; see, further, Legh-Jones, MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), paras 7–019—7–021.
- 491. Roberts v Security Co [1897] 1 Q.B. 111; Equitable Fire v Ching Wo Hong, above; Re Yager and Guardian (1912) 108 L.T. 38; Looker v Law Union [1928] 1 K.B. 554. Subject, of course, to days of grace: see above, para.42-074. Premium warranties may be inserted into the contract, whereby the insurer is discharged from liability if the premium is not paid in accordance with the warranty: JA Chapman & Co Ltd (In Liquidation) v Kadirga Denizcilik Ve Ticaret AS [1998] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 377; Heath Lambert Ltd v Sociedad de Corretaje de Seguros [2004] EWCA Civ 792, [2004] 1 W.L.R. 2820.
- 492. Phoenix Life v Sheridan (1860) 8 H.L.C. 745.
- 493. Kelly v London and Staffordshire Fire (1883) 1 Cab. & El. 47, 48.
- 494. General Accident v Cronk (1901) 17 T.L.R. 233.
- 495. Municipal Mutual v Pontefract (1917) 116 L.T. 671. cf. Solvency Mutual v York (1858) 3 H. & N. 588. But see above, para.42-074 and the cases cited there.
- 496. General Accident v Cronk (1901) 17 T.L.R. 233; JA Chapman & Co Ltd (In Liquidation) v Kadirga Denizcilik Ve Ticaret AS [1998] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 377. As regards the position in respect of marine insurance, see Heath Lambert Ltd v Sociedad de Corretaje de Seguros [2004] EWCA Civ 792, [2004] 1 W.L.R. 2820.
- 497. cf. Salvin v James (1805) 6 East 571; Edge v Duke (1849) 18 L.J.Ch. 183; Kirby v Cosindit Societa per Azioni [1969] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 75. See also, Fenton Insurance Co Ltd v Gothaer [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 172, 180, where the view was expressed that one could rarely infer a repudiatory intention by reason merely of non-payment of balances under a reinsurance treaty (as opposed to persistent non-payment in the face of demands or protests). See also Figre v Mander [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 193; cf. Pacific and General Insurance Co v Hazell [1997] L.R.L.R. 65.
- 498. See London and Lancashire Life v Fleming [1897] A.C. 499; Daff v Midland Colliery (1913) 82 L.J.K.B. 1340.
- 499. Gliksten v State Assurance (1922) 10 Ll.L. Rep. 604.
- 500. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.31. cf. Kirby v Cosindit Societa per Azioni [1969] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 75

. There seems no reason why the rule for marine insurance should not be applied generally, since it accords with the analogous rule for the sale of goods. See, however, Canning v Farquhar (1886) 16 Q.B.D. 727; Re Yager and Guardian (1912) 108 L.T. 38; Murfitt v Royal Insurance (1922) 38 T.L.R. 334. In American Airlines v Hope [1973] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 233 the Court of Appeal decided as a matter of construction that the words "at additional premium to be agreed" in the particular context conferred no cover until agreement was reached.

- 501. Kirby v Cosindit Societa per Azioni, above.
- 502. Stevenson v Snow (1761) 3 Burr. 1237, 1240.
- 503. ss.82–84.
- 504. Wolenburg v Royal Co-operative Society (1915) 84 L.J.K.B. 1316.
- 505. Kelly v Solari (1841) 9 M. & W. 54.
- 506. Oom v Bruce (1810) 2 East 225; Hentig v Staniforth (1816) 5 M. & S. 122.
- 507. Pritchard v Merchant's Life (1858) 3 C.B.(N.S.) 622, 645.
- 508. Howarth v Pioneer Life (1912) 107 L.T. 155; British Workman's v Cunliffe (1902) 18 T.L.R. 502; Hughes v Liverpool Victoria [1916] 2 K.B. 482; Re Cavalier Insurance Co Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 430. Contrast Harse v Pearl Life [1904] 1 K.B. 558; Phillips v Royal London Mutual (1911) 105 L.T. 136.
- 509. Lowry v Bourdieu (1780) 2 Doug. 468; Busk v Walsh (1812) 4 Taunt. 290; Kearley v Thomson (1890) 24 Q.B.D. 742.
- 510. See Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss.26, 28. See above, para.42-063.
- 511. Feise v Parkinson (1812) 4 Taunt. 640, 641; Anderson v Thornton (1853) 8 Exch. 425; Anderson v Fitzgerald (1853) 4 H.L.C. 484, 507; Biggar v Rock Life [1902] 1 K.B. 516, 526. See above, paras 42-033—42-046.
- 512. See above, para.42-042.
- 513. HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v Chase Manhattan Bank [2003] UKHL 6, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 61 at [73], [88].
- 514.  Clarke v Dickson (1858) E.B. & E. 148; see also Vol.I, paras 7-123—7-130. There are conflicting authorities concerning the return of premium where a contract of non-marine insurance has been avoided: Whittingham v Thornburgh (1690) 2 Vern. 206; Feise v Parkinson (1812) 4 Taunt. 640, 641; Anderson v Thornton (1853) 8 Exch. 425; Anderson v Fitzgerald (1853) 4 H.L.C. 484, 507; Biggar v Rock Life Assurance Co [1902] 1 K.B. 516, 526; Joel v Law Union and Crown Insurance Co [1908] 2 K.B. 431, 440. See MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), para.8–030.
- 515. Thomson v Weems (1884) 9 App. Cas. 671; Kumar v Life Insurance Corp of India [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 147.
- 516. Thomson v Weems (1884) 9 App. Cas. 671, 682.
- 517. Sparenborg v Edinburgh Life [1912] 1 K.B. 195, 204. Contrast Annen v Woodman (1810) 3 Taunt. 299; Langhorn v Calogan (1812) 4 Taunt. 330.
- 518. Rule 7 of Insurance Conduct of Business Sourcebook (ICOBS), made pursuant to ss.137A to 137F, 137T and 139A of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, as amended by s.24 of the Financial Services Act 2012.

- 519. Re Drake Insurance Plc [2001] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 643, 646. In that case, the making of a claim did not vitiate the right to a return of premium at (649). cf. Swiss Reinsurance Co v United India Insurance Co Ltd [2005] EWHC 237 (Comm), [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 341.
- 520. Lynch v Dalzell (1729) 4 Bro.P.C. 431; Sadlers Co v Badcock (1743) 2 Atk. 554; Tyrie v Fletcher (1777) 2 Cowp. 666; Berman v Woodbridge (1781) 2 Doug.K.B. 781; Swiss Reinsurance Co v United India Insurance Co Ltd [2005] EWHC 237 (Comm), [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 341. Where the payment of premium by instalment during the currency of a marine policy is warranted and premium has not been paid with the effect that the insurer is discharged before the expiry of the policy term, the insurer still is entitled to the entire premium: JA Chapman & Co Ltd (In Liquidation) v Kadirga Denizcilik Ve Ticaret AS [1998] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 377. The Apportionment Act 1870, by s.6, does not apply.
- 521. Re Drake Insurance Plc [2001] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 643, 646–647.
- 522. Sirius International Insurance Co (Publ) v FAI General Insurance Ltd [2004] UKHL 54, [2004] 1 W.L.R. 3251 at [18]–[19]; Blackburn Rovers Football & Athletic Club Plc v Avon Insurance Plc [2005] EWCA Civ 423, [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 447 at [9]. In AXA Corporate Solutions SA v National Westminster Bank Plc [2010] EWHC 1915 (Comm), [2011] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 438, the Court construed the term “Terrorism exclusion (wording to be agreed)” to operate as an exclusion and did not require a further clause to be identified.
- 523.  Spire Healthcare Ltd v Royal & Sun Alliance Insurance Plc [2016] EWHC 3278 (Comm), [2017] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 118 at [11].
- 524. Wooldridge v Canelhas Comercio Importacao e Exportacao Ltda [2004] EWCA Civ 984, [2005] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 43 (“robbery”); cf. Dobson v General Accident Fire & Life Assurance Corp Plc [1990] 1 Q.B. 274 (“theft”).
- 525. See, e.g. Ramco (UK) Ltd v International Insurance Co of Hannover Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 675, [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 595 at [32]; AIG Europe (Ireland) Ltd v Faraday Capital Ltd [2006] EWHC 2707, [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 267 at [24]; reversed on other grounds [2007] EWCA Civ 1208, [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 454.
- 526. Gard Marine v Tunnicliffe [2011] EWHC 1658 (Comm), [2012] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 1.
- 527.  Milton Furniture Ltd v Brit Insurance Ltd [2015] EWCA Civ 671, [2016] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 192 at [24].
- 528. Tektrol Ltd v International Insurance Co of Hanover Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 845, [2005] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 132.
- 529. Tektrol Ltd v International Insurance Co of Hanover Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 845, [2005] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 132; Royal & Sun Alliance Insurance Plc v Dornoch Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 238, [2005] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 590; Blackburn Rovers Football & Athletic Club Plc v Avon Insurance Plc [2005] EWCA Civ 423, [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 447 at [9].
- 530.  [2016] UKSC 57, [2017] A.C. 73 at [35].

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 42 - Insurance
Section 7. - The Terms of the Insurance Contract

Classification of terms

42-078

Insurance contracts nearly always contain a number of terms and conditions which may be classified according to their effect as follows:

- (i)
terms which, if not fulfilled, entitle the insurer to treat himself as discharged from further liability under the contract;
- (ii)
terms which, if not fulfilled, entitle the insurer to refuse to pay a particular claim under the policy, but which do not affect the continued validity of the policy;
- (iii)
terms the breach of which gives the insurer the right to claim damages only;
- (iv)
terms which delimit the scope of the risk covered, failure to comply with which will take the insurer off risk while the breach continues;
- (v) innominate terms, which are neither an essential term which discharge the insurer from all liability under the contract or merely a term the breach of which results in damages, but terms which give the insurer different rights depending on the seriousness of the breach.

The most stringent of such terms are conditions precedent and warranties, which shall now be considered. These are to be contrasted with the terms of the policy which identify whether a particular event, loss or damage falls within the scope of cover afforded by the insurance contract. 531

Conditions precedent

42-079

 The term "condition precedent" often refers to a condition which, if not fulfilled, entitles the insurer to refuse payment under the insurance policy, without necessarily importing the right to treat the entire contract as discharged. So, a term, depending on its context, may be interpreted as a condition precedent to an insurer's liability (actual or contingent) in respect of a particular claim or under the entire policy ⁵³² or may be construed as a condition precedent to the attachment of the risk or the continuance of the insurance cover. ⁵³³ The use or absence of the words "condition precedent" are not determinative; nonetheless, the use of the term "condition precedent" to the insurer's liability will often be construed as such unless the term is used indiscriminately. ⁵³⁴ ! Typically, conditions precedent will be concerned with obligations which an assured must comply with after the loss has occurred, ⁵³⁵ but in principle it should be possible for such conditions to be concerned with obligations imposed upon the assured during the currency of the policy. ⁵³⁶ ! Moreover, what is described as a condition precedent in a policy may sometimes simply be construed as a collateral promise giving the insurer neither the right to treat the policy as terminated, nor even to refuse payment of the claim, when not complied with. ⁵³⁷ Indeed, a term may be classified as an innominate term and the insurer's rights upon its breach may be determined by the seriousness of that breach. ⁵³⁸ Ambiguities in conditions or warranties will usually be construed against the insurer. ⁵³⁹ Furthermore, conditions will be construed in the context of the commercial purpose of the policy, so that, for example, a condition requiring the assured to take reasonable precautions to prevent an accident, or to take all reasonable steps to safeguard any property insured, will usually be construed as requiring more than mere negligence upon the part of the assured before the condition is breached, particularly if the assured's negligence is an insured peril under the policy in question. ⁵⁴⁰

Promissory warranties and their effect: existing law

42-080

! A warranty is a promise by the assured that a particular thing shall or shall not be done in the future (a continuing or future warranty) or that a particular state of facts exists or does not exist (an existing fact warranty). ⁵⁴¹ Such a promissory warranty may be express in the policy or may be implied (usually as a matter of law). ⁵⁴² An express warranty should be written in the policy (assuming one exists). ⁵⁴³

! In addition to those expressly set out in the policy, warranties may arise from statements made by an assured in a proposal form, the accuracy of which is warranted in a declaration which is said to be

"the basis of the contract". ⁵⁴⁴ ! All such warranties must be exactly complied with, ⁵⁴⁵ and it is immaterial that a breach of warranty has no connection with the loss ⁵⁴⁶ or that it does not affect the risk ⁵⁴⁷ or has been remedied before the loss ⁵⁴⁸ or that it occurs without the fault of the assured. ⁵⁴⁹ In the case of continuing warranties, the insurer is discharged from any further liability under the contract as from the date the warranty is breached (thereby still allowing the assured to claim in respect of any loss occurring before the warranty was breached) and the discharge operates automatically without the insurer having to accept any repudiation or make any election. ⁵⁵⁰ In the case of existing fact warranties, the contract is effectively, although not technically, vitiated ab initio, since fulfilment of the warranty is a condition precedent to the attachment of the risk. ⁵⁵¹ Given the draconian nature of some warranties, such terms will be construed, in the absence of a clearly expressed provision, against being a continuing warranty ⁵⁵² and any ambiguity will be construed against the insurer, ⁵⁵³ and might be construed to be limited in their scope to a discrete part or section of the policy, rather than to the entire contract. ⁵⁵⁴ Further, a warranty may be construed to apply subject to implied exceptions. ⁵⁵⁵ When construing whether a statement in a proposal form gives rise to a continuing warranty or a warranty as to past or existing fact, there is no special principle of insurance law requiring answers to be read as importing promises as to the future. ⁵⁵⁶ The insurer will not be entitled to rely on a breach of warranty as a defence if non-compliance with the warranty is excused when, by reason of a change of circumstances, the warranty ceases to be applicable to the circumstances of the contract, or when compliance with the warranty is rendered unlawful by any subsequent law. ⁵⁵⁷ Further, the insurer will not be entitled to rely on a breach of warranty if the breach has been waived by the insurer. ⁵⁵⁸

Suspensive, delimiting or descriptive warranties

42-081

In order to evade the harsher effects of a breach of a promissory warranty, the courts have often resorted to construing a “warranty” not as a promissory warranty, but rather as a suspensive (or delimiting or descriptive) warranty. Such a warranty does not impose a promissory obligation on the assured; instead, it purports to delineate the risk being insured, much like an exclusion clause. A breach of a suspensive warranty does not entitle the insurer either to terminate the contract or sue for damages if not complied with ⁵⁵⁹; it merely means that the relevant loss or damage is not covered by the insurance policy if the loss or damage is sustained whilst the breach is operating; but the cover would be reinstated once the breach comes to an end or is remedied. Such a suspensive warranty is more likely to be found to exist where the term is not fundamental to the risk and where a breach of the term is not likely to alter or increase the risk after the breach lapses or has been rectified. ⁵⁶⁰

Warranties and the Insurance Act 2015

42-082

The 2015 Act will apply to all insurance contracts and variations agreed on or after August 12, 2016. ⁵⁶¹ The 2015 Act, by s.10, applies to “warranties”. Although it does not say so expressly, it appears to be aimed at promissory warranties. ⁵⁶² The effect of s.10 is to treat promissory warranties in both consumer and non-consumer insurance contracts in the same way as suspensive warranties. Thus, any rule of law that a breach of an express or implied warranty results in the discharge of the insurer’s liability under the insurance contract is abolished. ⁵⁶³ In place of such a rule of law, the 2015 Act provides that where there has been a breach of warranty, the insurer has no liability under the insurance contract in respect of any loss occurring, or attributable to something happening, after the breach of warranty but before the breach has been remedied. ⁵⁶⁴ Thus, the insurer will remain liable under the insurance contract where the loss occurred or was attributable to something happening before the breach of warranty or after the breach has been remedied. ⁵⁶⁵ The 2015 Act provides when a breach of warranty will be regarded as remedied. If the warranty is one which requires something to be done or not done or a condition to be fulfilled or something to be the case or not the case by an “ascertainable time” ⁵⁶⁶ and that requirement is not complied with, the breach will be remedied when the risk to which the warranty relates later becomes essentially the same as that originally contemplated by the parties. ⁵⁶⁷ In any other case, the breach of warranty will be remedied when the assured ceases to be in breach of warranty. The legislation recognises that there are some warranties which cannot be remedied, for example a specific warranty as to a past fact or event (such as a warranty that the assured has suffered no losses during the previous 12 months). ⁵⁶⁸ The insurer cannot rely on a breach of warranty as a defence where by reason of a change of circumstances the warranty ceases to be applicable to the circumstances of the contract, compliance with the warranty is rendered unlawful by any subsequent law, or the insurer waives the breach of warranty. These exceptions are the same as that provided for under the existing law. ⁵⁶⁹ As discussed above, “basis of the contract” clauses are no longer permitted. ⁵⁷⁰

Contracting out of the Insurance Act 2015 provisions applicable to warranties

42-083

In respect of consumer insurance contracts, it is not open to the parties to contract out of the provisions of the 2015 Act applicable to warranties where the contractual provision would put the consumer in a worse position than the consumer would be in by virtue of the 2015 Act. ⁵⁷¹ However, this prohibition does not apply to contracts for the settlement of claims under a consumer insurance contract. ⁵⁷² “Basis of the contract” clauses cannot be agreed in any circumstances. ⁵⁷³ Similarly, in respect of non-consumer insurance contracts, the parties are not permitted to agree a contractual provision which would put the assured in a worse position than allowed by s.9 (which abolishes “basis of the contract” clauses). ⁵⁷⁴ Other than the prohibition against “basis of the contract” clauses, it is open to the parties to a non-consumer insurance contract to contract out of the 2015 Act insofar as it is applicable to warranties by a provision in their insurance contract which puts the assured in a worse position by the insurer, provided that the insurer takes sufficient steps to draw the assured’s or his agent’s attention to the provision in question and the provision is clear and unambiguous as to its effect. ⁵⁷⁵

Terms not relevant to the actual loss

42-084

When it enters into force, s.11 of the Insurance Act 2015 will introduce an entirely new restriction upon the ability of insurers to rely on certain terms of the insurance contract as a defence to an insurance claim. The terms to which this restriction will apply are, subject to one exception, all terms, including warranties, ⁵⁷⁶ compliance with which would tend to reduce the risk of loss of a particular kind, loss at a particular location or loss at a particular time. The exception is a term which defines the risk as a whole. Presumably, this exception would apply to a policy exclusion which provides that an insurer is not liable for losses caused by certain specified excluded perils; but it may not be so limited. If the contract term is one compliance with which would tend to reduce the risk of loss as described, the insurer may not rely on noncompliance with such a term to exclude, limit or discharge its liability under the insurance contract in answer to a claim under the insurance contract in respect of a loss, if the assured shows that the non-compliance with the term could not have increased the risk of the loss which actually occurred in the circumstances in which it occurred. ⁵⁷⁷ If for example the insurance contract contains a warranty or condition that the insured property will be secured by a specified type of lock or alarm and if the property was damaged by flood or fire, it is likely that the assured could show that a failure to secure the property with the specified lock could not have increased the risk of loss by flood or fire. ⁵⁷⁸ It is not open to the parties to a consumer insurance contract to contract out of the effect of s.11 if such a contract would put the assured in a worse position than that allowed under s.11. ⁵⁷⁹ It is open to the parties to a non-consumer insurance contract to contract out of the effect of s.11 by a provision which puts the assured in a worse position than that allowed under s.11, provided that the transparency requirements of the Act are complied with. ⁵⁸⁰

FCA Insurance: Conduct of Business Sourcebook (ICOBS)

42-085

⚠ In the case of policies taken out by individuals in a private capacity, the harsh effects of these rules ⁵⁸¹ were to some extent mitigated by the Statement of General Insurance Practice. ⁵⁸² Since January 2008, the Financial Services Authority Regulation, ICOBS, provides that insurers must handle claims promptly and fairly, provide reasonable guidance to policyholders, not unreasonably reject a claim, and pay claims promptly after settlement, ⁵⁸³ and that it is unreasonable for an insurer to reject a consumer policyholder's claim on the ground of breach of warranty or breach of condition, unless there is evidence of fraud or unless the circumstances of the claim are connected to the breach of warranty or condition and the warranty was material to the risk and was drawn to the policyholder's attention before the conclusion of the contract. ⁵⁸⁴ ⚠

Waiver

42-086

⚠ The insurer may, of course, waive any breach of condition or warranty either expressly or by conduct. ⁵⁸⁵ ⚠ The insurance contract itself may restrict or exclude the remedies available for a breach of warranty. ⁵⁸⁶ There are generally said to be two (principal) types of waiver: waiver by election and waiver by estoppel. The former arises where the insurer, with full knowledge of the facts, ⁵⁸⁷ acts unequivocally in a manner consistent only with an intention to continue with the contract, ⁵⁸⁸ as, for example, where he accepts premiums, ⁵⁸⁹ or possibly where he renews the contract. ⁵⁹⁰ However, waiver by election is inapplicable to cases where the insurer's liability is automatically discharged by a breach of warranty or a condition precedent. ⁵⁹¹ It has been held by the Court of Appeal that a breach of warranty or a breach of a condition precedent may be waived only by estoppel. This will be so where the insurer promises to the assured, by words or by conduct, that he will not act upon the assured's breach, and the assured so alters his position in reliance upon this promise as to make it unjust for the insurer to go back upon it. In this situation (unlike a waiver by election), an insurer may lose the right to treat himself as discharged from liability before he has full knowledge of the circumstances and of his right to treat himself as discharged.⁵⁹²

Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999⁵⁹³

42-087

⚠ Although insurance contracts are excluded from the ambit of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977,⁵⁹⁴ the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (which implement Council Directive 93/13 and apply to consumer contracts concluded after October 1, 1999 and before October 1, 2015⁵⁹⁵)⁵⁹⁶ do embrace insurance contracts. The 1999 Regulations replaced the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1994, which applied to consumer contracts concluded after July 1, 1995.⁵⁹⁷ The Regulations provide that unfair terms included in a contract with a consumer⁵⁹⁸ ⚠ by a seller or supplier⁵⁹⁹ are not binding on the consumer.⁶⁰⁰ A contract term which has not been individually negotiated is to be regarded as unfair if, contrary to the requirement of good faith,⁶⁰¹ it causes a significant imbalance in the parties' rights and obligations arising under the contract to the detriment of the consumer.⁶⁰² If the contract is capable of continuing in existence without the offending unfair term, it is to continue to bind the parties, albeit that the unfair term is not to be binding upon the consumer.⁶⁰³ Furthermore, terms reduced to writing must be in plain, intelligible language, and if there is any doubt about the meaning of a term, the interpretation most favourable to the consumer must prevail.⁶⁰⁴ Despite the apparent width of these provisions, it is to be borne in mind that many of the severer aspects of insurance law (such as the absolute nature of the obligation to disclose material facts⁶⁰⁵) derive from the general principles of insurance law, rather than specific terms in the insurance contract. The Regulations therefore will not apply to such principles of law.⁶⁰⁶ Furthermore, the Regulations specifically provide that assessment of the unfair nature of terms shall not relate to the definition of the main subject matter of the contract, nor to the adequacy of the price and remuneration on the one hand, as against the services or goods supplied in exchange on the other.⁶⁰⁷ Thus, terms of the insurance which define or circumscribe the insured risk will not directly be subject to assessment as fair or unfair.⁶⁰⁸ However, conditions concerned with, for example, the assured's obligations following the occurrence of a loss should be subject to assessment.

Consumer Rights Act 2015

42-088

⚠ The Consumer Rights Act 2015 enters into force on October 1, 2015 and applies to contract made on or after that date.⁶⁰⁹ ⚠ The Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 are revoked, remaining applicable only to contracts made before October 1, 2015.⁶¹⁰ By s.62(1)–(5) of the 2015 Act, a term of a consumer contract is not binding on the consumer if it is unfair, although the consumer may choose to rely on it. A term of a consumer contract is unfair if, contrary to the requirement of good faith, it causes a significant imbalance in the parties' rights and obligations under the contract to the detriment of the consumer, taking into account the nature and terms of the contract and all of the circumstances existing when the term was agreed.⁶¹¹ However, a term of a consumer contract will not be assessed for unfairness if it specifies the main subject matter of the contract or if the assessment concerns the appropriateness of the price payable under the contract for the services provided,⁶¹² ⚠ provided that the term is transparent (meaning it is both legible if in writing and expressed in plain and intelligible language) and prominent (meaning that it is brought to the consumer's attention in such a way that an average—reasonably well-informed, observant and circumspect—consumer would be aware of the term).⁶¹³ The Act contains certain restrictions as to a term which purports to exclude or restrict liability for negligence; however, such restrictions do not apply to insurance contracts.⁶¹⁴

⁵³¹ See below, paras 42-102—42-103.

532. See, e.g. Kazakstan Wool Processors (Europe) Ltd v Nederlandsche Credietverzekering Maatschappij NV [2000] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 371.
533. See, e.g. Zeus Tradition Marine Ltd v Bell (The Zeus) [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 587.
534.  George Hunt Cranes Ltd v Scottish Boiler and General Insurance Co Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1964, [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 178; HLB Kidsons v Lloyd's Underwriters [2007] EWHC 1951 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 237 at [51]–[54]. See also Denso Manufacturing UK Ltd v Great Lakes Reinsurance (UK) Plc [2017] EWHC 391 (Comm), [2017] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 240 at [22]–[40].
535. Such as timely notification. See, generally, below, paras 42-093. As to a claims control clause in a reinsurance policy, see Eagle Star Insurance Co Ltd v Cresswell [2004] EWCA Civ 602, [2004] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 244.
536.  See, e.g. Jones v Provincial Insurance Co Ltd (1929) 35 Ll.L. Rep. 135; Brown v Zurich General Accident Co [1954] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 243; and the observations in Legh-Jones, MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), paras 10-010–10-011.
537. See, e.g. Stoneham v Ocean Railway and General (1887) 19 Q.B.D. 237; Re Bradley and Essex and Suffolk Accident Indemnity Society [1912] 1 K.B. 415.
538. Alfred McAlpine Plc v BAI (Run-off) Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 437, where the Court of Appeal held that a breach of an innominate term might result in the entire policy being repudiated or the liability for the claim being defeated or might have other serious consequences. See also Trans-Pacific Insurance Co (Australia) Ltd v Grand Union Insurance Co Ltd (1989) 18 N.S.W.L.R. 675; K/S Merc-Scandia XXXXII v Lloyd's Underwriters [2001] EWCA Civ 1275, [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 563. That there is a separate class of innominate terms, the breach of which will entitle the insurer to decline the claim as opposed to terminate the contract, is now in doubt, given the Court of Appeal's decision in Sirius International Insurance Corp v Friends Provident Life & Pensions Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 601, [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 517, although (putting aside the good sense of that decision) it must be questioned whether the Court of Appeal was free to overrule the court's decisions in Alfred McAlpine v BAI and K/S Merc-Scandia v Lloyd's Underwriters.
539. Re Bradley and Essex and Suffolk Accident Indemnity Society [1912] 1 K.B. 415; S & M Hotels Ltd v Legal and General Assurance Society Ltd [1972] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 157; Tektrol Ltd v International Insurance Co of Hanover Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 845, [2005] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 132; Royal & Sun Alliance Insurance Plc v Dornoch Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 238, [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 544. See also Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 reg.7 and the Consumer Rights Act 2015 s.64 (below, paras 42-087–42-088) and Re Drake Insurance Plc [2001] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 643, 649.
540. Fraser v BN Furman (Productions) Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 898 (where a condition in an employers' liability policy requiring the assured to take reasonable precautions to prevent an accident was construed as applying only where inadequate measures are taken by the assured in the face of a recognised danger, without caring whether or not it was averted); Sofi v Prudential Insurance Co Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 559 (applying a similar approach to a property insurance, where the policy required all reasonable steps to be taken to safeguard the property). In Gunns v Par Insurance Brokers [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 173, 177, it was suggested that this approach should apply to all types of insurance policy. It has been held in Amey Properties Ltd v Cornhill Insurance Plc [1996] L.R.L.R. 259 that, in the case of motor policies, a condition requiring a vehicle to be kept in good repair will not have been satisfied if the insurer proves the assured simply to have been negligent in the upkeep of his vehicle. See also Frans Maas (UK) Ltd v Sun Alliance and London Insurance Plc [2003] EWHC 1803 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 484; The Board of Trustees of the Tate Gallery v Duffy Construction Ltd (No.2) [2007] EWHC 912 (TCC), [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 159; cf. Milton Furniture Ltd v Brit Insurance Ltd [2014] EWHC 965 (QB), [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 540 at [157]–[172], [2015] EWCA Civ 671. It may be that (unless the context or wording compels a contrary conclusion) the word "reasonable" will be interpreted more leniently to the assured in respect of obligations to safeguard the subject matter of the insurance than in respect of obligations to maintain, although the distinction will often be blurred: Hayward v Norwich Union Insurance Ltd [2000] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 382.

541. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.33. See Bank of Nova Scotia v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Association (Bermuda) Ltd (The Good Luck) [1992] 2 A.C. 233, a marine insurance case. It is generally assumed that the law of warranties is the same for marine and non-marine insurance: see, e.g. Bank of Nova Scotia v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Association (Bermuda) Ltd (The Good Luck) [1992] 2 A.C. 233, 262–264; HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v New Hampshire Insurance Co [2001] EWCA Civ 735, [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 39 at [122].
542. For example, certain marine insurance policies have implied into them a warranty of seaworthiness and a warranty of legality (Marine Insurance Act 1906 ss.39–41). There is no equivalent warranty of legality implied into non-marine insurance contracts as a matter of law: Euro-Diam Ltd v Bathurst [1988] 2 W.L.R. 517.
543.  Legh-Jones, MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), paras 10–026–10–027.
544.  See, e.g. Thomson v Weems (1884) 9 App. Cas. 671; Dawsons Ltd v Bonnin [1922] 2 A.C. 413; Provincial Insurance v Morgan [1993] A.C. 240. The truth of the circumstances warranted may be qualified by that which is known to the assured: Arab Bank Plc v Zurich Insurance Co [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 262, 283; International Lottery Management Ltd v Dumas [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 237 at [65]. See also Zeller v British Caymanian Insurance Co Ltd [2008] UKPC 4, [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 545; Genesis Housing Association Ltd v Liberty Syndicate Management Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1173, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 318; Aldridge v Liberty Mutual Insurance Europe Ltd [2016] EWHC 3037 (Comm) at [119]; Ashfaq v International Insurance Co of Hannover Plc [2017] EWCA Civ 357, [2017] H.L.R. 29 at [58]–[59].
545. Pawson v Watson (1778) 2 Cowp. 785; De Hahn v Hartley (1786) 1 T.R. 343.
546. Maynard v Rhode (1824) 1 C. & P. 360; Glen v Lewis (1853) 8 Exch. 607; Foley v Tabor (1861) 2 F. & F. 663.
547. Newcastle Fire v Macmorran (1815) 3 Dow. 255; Dawsons v Bonnin [1922] 2 A.C. 413. cf. HIH Casualty & General Insurance Ltd v New Hampshire Insurance Co [2001] EWCA Civ 735, [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 161.
548. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.34(2).
549. Philips v Baillie (1784) 3 Doug. K.B. 374; Worsley v Wood (1796) 6 T.R. 710. Note, however, that a condition requiring all reasonable precautions to be taken may be construed as applying only to the assured himself, and not to neglects or defaults of his employees: Fraser v BN Furman (Productions) Ltd [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1; Duncan Logan (Contractors) v Royal Exchange Assurance Group, 1973 S.L.T. 192.
550. Bank of Nova Scotia v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Association (Bermuda) Ltd (The Good Luck) [1992] 2 A.C. 233.
551. Thomson v Weems (1884) 9 App. Cas. 671, 683–684.
552. Hussain v Brown [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 627. cf. Cornhill Insurance Plc v DE Stamp Felt Roofing Contractors Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 395, [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 648 at [20].
553. Pratt v Aigaion Insurance Co SA [2008] EWCA Civ 1314, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 225; AC Ward & Sons Ltd v Catlin (Five) Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 1098, [2010] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 301; Amlin Corporate Member Ltd v Oriental Assurance Corporation (The Princess of the Stars) [2013] EWHC 2380 (Comm), [2013] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 523 at [30], [2014] EWCA Civ 1135, [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 561 at [43]–[45].
554. Printpak v AGF Insurance Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 542. cf. International Management Group

(UK) Ltd v Simmonds [2003] EWHC 177 (Comm), [2004] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 247, [118].

555. See, e.g. GE Frankona Reinsurance Ltd v CMM Trust No 1400 (The Newfoundland Explorer) [2006] EWHC 429 (Admlty), [2006] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 704; Pratt v Aigaion Insurance Co SA [2008] EWCA Civ 1314, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 225. Further exceptions are provided for in Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.34(1).
556. Hussain v Brown [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 627, where the answer yes to a question "Are the premises fitted with any system of intruder alarm?" was held not to constitute a continuing warranty that the premises would be fitted with such an alarm.
557. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.34(1). cf. Agapitos Laiki Bank (Hellas) SA v Agnew (No.2) [2002] EWHC 1558 (Comm), [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 54 at [59]; Sugar Hut Group Ltd v Great Lakes Reinsurance (UK) Plc [2010] EWHC 2636 (Comm), [2011] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 198 at [42].
558. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.34(3). See below, para.42-086.
559. See, e.g. CTN Cash and Carry Ltd v General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corp Plc [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 299. See also Farr v Motor Traders Mutual Society [1920] 3 K.B. 669; Roberts v Anglo-Saxon Insurance Co (1927) 27 Ll.L. Rep. 313; Morgan v Provincial Insurance Co [1932] 2 K.B. 70. For an illustration of the expression "warranty" apparently even being used to refer to a term the breach of which sounds in damages only, see W. & J. Lane v Spratt [1970] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 480, 487, 493.
560. De Maurier (Jewels) Ltd v Bastion Insurance Co Ltd [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 550, 558–559; Svenska Handelsbanken v Sun Alliance and London Insurance Plc [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 519, 551–553. It appears the court will be inclined to construe a term as a suspensive condition if it purports to impose a continuing obligation on the assured: Kler Knitwear Ltd v Lombard General Insurance Co Ltd [2000] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 47. See also Toomey v Banco Vitalicio de Espana sa de Seguros y Reaseguros [2003] EWHC 1102 (Comm); affirmed [2004] EWCA Civ 622, [2004] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 354 at [40]–[46]; Sugar Hut Group Ltd v Great Lakes Reinsurance (UK) Plc [2010] EWHC 2636 (Comm), [2011] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 198.
561. See above, para.42-032.
562. Explanatory notes, paras 86–87, 92. Further, 2015 Act s.10(7) amends ss.33–34 of the Marine Insurance Act 1906, which applies to promissory warranties.
563. 2015 Act s.10(1).
564. 2015 Act s.10(2).
565. 2015 Act s.10(4).
566. Parliament's explanatory notes, para.91, refer to this as a "deadline".
567. 2015 Act ss.10(5)(a), 10(6).
568. Explanatory notes, para.89. See 2015 Act s.10(4)(b).
569. 2015 Act ss.10(3). See Marine Insurance Act 1906 ss.34(1) and (3). See above, para.42-080 and below, para.42-086.
570. See above, paras 42-048, 42-059.
571. 2015 Act s.15(1).
572. 2015 Act s.15(3).
573. Consumer Insurance (Disclosure and Representations) Act 2012 ss.6, 10(1)–(2). This

- prohibition does not apply to contracts for the settlement of claims under a consumer insurance contract: s.10(3). See above, para.42-048.
- 574. 2015 Act s.16(1).
- 575. 2015 Act ss.16–17. See above, para.42-060.
- 576. 2015 Act s.11(4). See explanatory notes, paras 95, 98.
- 577. 2015 Act ss.11(1)–(3).
- 578. Explanatory notes, para.96.
- 579. 2015 Act s.16(1).
- 580. 2015 Act s.17. See above, para.42-060.
- 581. For criticism of insurers' avoidance of liability in reliance upon the assured's breach of warranty, see Hasson (1971) 34 M.L.R. 29; Law Commission Report, Non-Disclosure and Breach of Warranty, Cmnd. 8064 (1980); Merkin (1981) L.M.C.L.Q. 347; Clarke [2007] L.M.C.L.Q. 474.
- 582. See above, para.42-045.
- 583. ICOBS para.8.1.1. In Parker v National Farmers Union Mutual Insurance Society Ltd [2012] EWHC 2156 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 253 [196]–[197], it was held that the standards of conduct in ICOBS were not implied terms of the contract but that their breach gave rise to a civil action for damages. See Goodman v Central Capital Ltd [2012] EWHC 8 (QB), [12]; Bate v Aviva Insurance UK Ltd [2013] EWHC 1687 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 492, affirmed [2014] EWCA Civ 334, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 527; s.138D(2) of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000.
- 584.  ICOBS para.8.1.2(3). ICOBS may be viewed at the FSA's website: <http://fshandbook.info/FS/html/FCA/ICOBS>, effective April 1, 2013. As to the fraud exception, see Bate v Aviva Insurance UK Ltd [2013] EWHC 1687 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 492; affirmed [2014] EWCA Civ 334, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 527. See also Ashfaq v International Insurance Co of Hannover Plc [2017] EWCA Civ 357, [2017] H.L.R. 29.
- 585.  For waiver generally, and the different senses in which the word is used, see above, Vol.I, paras 24-007–24-010. See also the discussion in MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), paras 10–103–10–126.
- 586. Seashell of Lisson Grove Ltd v Aviva Insurance Ltd [2011] EWHC 1761 (Comm).
- 587. Ayrey v British Legal [1918] 1 K.B. 136; Scottish Equitable v Buist (1877) 4 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 1076; Russell v Thornton (1860) 6 H. & N. 140; see also Melik Co Ltd v Norwich Union [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 523.
- 588. Compagnia Tirrena Di Assicurazione SpA v Grand Union Insurance Co Ltd [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 143; Fortisbank SA v Trenwick International Ltd [2005] EWHC 399 (Comm), [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 464.
- 589. Wing v Harvey (1854) 5 De G.M. & G. 265; Ayrey v British Legal, above; Compagnia Tirrena Di Assicurazione SpA v Grand Union Insurance Co Ltd, above.
- 590. Sulphur Pulp v Faber (1895) 1 Com. Cas. 146; Handler v Mutual Reserve Fund (1904) 90 L.T. 192; Barrett Bros (Taxis) Ltd v Davies [1966] 1 W.L.R. 1334.
- 591. Brownsville Holdings Ltd v Adamjee Insurance Co Ltd (The Milasan) [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 458, 467; HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v Axa Corporate Solutions [2002] Lloyd's Rep.

I.R. 325; affirmed [2002] EWCA Civ 1253, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 1; Kosmar Villa Holidays Plc v Trustees of Syndicate 1243 [2008] EWCA Civ 147, [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 489; Argo Systems FZE v Liberty Insurance Pte Ltd [2011] EWCA 1572, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 129; cf. Bhopal v Sphere Drake Insurance Plc [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 413. See also Soyer [2002] L.M.C.L.Q. 199, 208–209.

- 592. Argo Systems FZE v Liberty Insurance Pte Ltd [2011] EWCA 1572, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 129. See also above, Vol.I, paras 24-007 et seq. There remains one unexplained aspect of a waiver of a breach of warranty: s.34(3) of the Marine Insurance Act 1906 provides that the insurer may waive a breach of warranty, but when the 1906 Act was passed, there was no concept of a waiver by equitable estoppel. This suggests that the draftsman of the Act had some other species of waiver in mind.
- 593. SI 1999/2083. For a comprehensive discussion, see above, Ch.38.
- 594. Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 Sch.1 para.1.
- 595. See next paragraph.
- 596. SI 1999/2083 reg.1.
- 597. SI 1994/3159 reg.1.
- 598.  A "consumer" is any natural person who, in contracts covered by the Regulations, is acting for purposes which are outside his trade, business or profession: reg.3(1), 1999 Regulations; reg.2(1), 1994 Regulations. See Ashfaq v International Insurance Co of Hannover Plc [2017] EWCA Civ 357, [2017] H.L.R. 29 at [45]–[58].
- 599. A "seller or supplier" is any person (natural or legal) who, in making a contract to which the Regulations apply, is acting for purposes relating to his trade, business or profession, whether publicly or privately owned.
- 600. 1999 Regulations reg.8(1); 1994 Regulations reg.5(1). If the term is capable of being both fair and unfair depending on the circumstances, it may be that the term will be binding only to the extent that the term is fair: Bankers Insurance Co Ltd v South [2003] EWHC 380 (QB); cf. The Hollandia [1983] 1 A.C. 565, 575 (concerning the interpretation of "clause, covenant or agreement" being void under art.III r.8 of the Hague Rules).
- 601. Lacey's Footwear (Wholesale) Ltd v Bowler International Freight Ltd [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 369, 385.
- 602. 1999 Regulations reg.5(1); 1994 Regulations reg.4(1). In Parker v National Farmers Union Mutual Insurance Society Ltd [2012] EWHC 2156 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 278, at [189]–[190], it was held that a condition requiring the provision of information was not unfair.
- 603. 1999 Regulations reg.8(2); Regulations reg.5(2).
- 604. 1999 Regulations reg.7; 1994 Regulations reg.6. See Re Drake Insurance Plc [2001] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 643, 649. In AJ Building and Plastering Ltd v Turner [2013] EWHC 484 (QB), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 629, at [53], the Court said that there was no material difference between this principle of construction and the contra proferentem principle. See also art.31 and Annex II of the Third Life Assurance Directive (92/96) which specifies certain information, both about the insurer and about the life assurance policy, which must be communicated to the proposed policy-holder in a clear and accurate manner, and in writing, before the contract is concluded, and further information which must be provided during the term of the contract. This Directive was implemented by the Insurance Companies (Third Insurance Directives) Regulations 1994 (SI 1994/1696).
- 605. See above, para.42-034.

- 606. Direct Line Insurance Plc v Khan [2001] EWCA Civ 1794, [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 364.
- 607. 1999 Regulations reg.6(2); 1994 Regulations reg.3(2). Terms delimiting the scope of cover, such as the description of the insured perils or exceptions to cover, should not (if expressed in plain intelligible language) fall for consideration as fair or unfair: cf. Bankers Insurance Co Ltd v South [2003] EWHC 380 (QB).
- 608. para.19 of the Preamble, which has not been included in the Regulations, although reg.6(2) of the 1999 Regulations; reg.3(2) of the 1994 Regulations deals with such terms with respect to all contracts.
- 609.  See Consumer Rights Act 2015 (Commencement) (England) Order 2015 (SI 2015/000) and above, Ch.38. As to the meaning of “consumer”, cf. Ashfaq v International Insurance Co of Hannover Plc [2017] EWCA Civ 357, [2017] H.L.R. 29 at [45]–[58].
- 610. 2015 Act s.75, Sch.4 para.34.
- 611. 2015 Act Sch.2 lists a number of terms which may be assessed as unfair: see s.63.
- 612.  See Van Hove v CNP Assurances SA (C-96/14) [2015] 3 C.M.L.R. 31 at [34]–[35].
- 613. 2015 Act s.64.
- 614. 2015 Act ss.65, 66(1)(a).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 42 - Insurance

Section 8. - Assignment

Assignment of the policy

42-089

⚠ In principle, contracts of insurance, whether or not contracts of indemnity, are choses in action ⁶¹⁵; and, as such, the assured has rights which (subject to what follows) may be assigned at law under the provisions of s.136 of the Law of Property Act 1925, or in equity in any of the ways in which contractual rights may be so assigned. ⁶¹⁶ ⚠ Two sorts of restriction, however, upon the assignability of policies must be noted. First: subject to any contrary stipulation, a policy cannot normally be assigned without the consent of the insurer ⁶¹⁷; though, if it is assigned without any such consent, it seems that the policy is only voidable, and therefore remains in force until avoided by the insurer. ⁶¹⁸ In practice, most policies will contain express provisions dealing with assignment. Secondly: if the contract is one of indemnity, the assignment of the policy must accompany the transfer of an interest in the subject matter of the insurance, ⁶¹⁹ since a policy which is assigned after a transfer of the subject matter will have ceased to be in force. ⁶²⁰ There is nothing objectionable in the assured assigning a policy to another person who has an insurable interest in the subject matter insured (such as a mortgagee), but a policy which is assigned prior to the assignment of the subject matter to a person with no insurable interest in the subject matter will thereby become void. ⁶²¹ A partial equitable assignment of an insurance policy occurs when it is taken out pursuant to a covenant to insure contained in a mortgage. If the policy is effected in the name of the mortgagor, the mortgagee has a charge to secure repayment of the mortgage debt, which takes effect by way of assignment; if it is effected in the name of the mortgagee, the mortgagees' interest remains by way of charge, and he is accountable to subsequent mortgagees or the mortgagor for any surplus. ⁶²²

Position of assignees

42-090

When a policy is effectively transferred, the assignee takes the policy subject to equities, so that the insurer will still be able to rely on any misrepresentation or non-disclosure by the assignor which took place before assignment. ⁶²³ Where, however, an assignee has taken an assignment of the policy by way of security, it is unclear whether the insurer can rely upon breaches of duty by the assignor after assignment. There are cases which suggest that the assignee is not affected by an assignor's post-assignment breaches, ⁶²⁴ but recent authority suggests the contrary. ⁶²⁵ If the assignment is absolute, the assignee will be bound by and entitled to observance of the policy conditions so that any conduct on the part of the assignor which otherwise would render the contract voidable, will not affect the contract to the prejudice of the assignee. Where only the benefit of the contract has been assigned, if the assignor acts in breach of the duty of utmost good faith or of a warranty or condition precedent after the assignment, the insurer still may hold the contract as avoided or discharged respectively. ⁶²⁶

Assignment of a right under or the proceeds of the policy

42-091

Quite separately from assigning the policy itself, it is possible to assign the right to recover under the policy or the proceeds of the policy either before or after a loss has occurred.⁶²⁷ Where the loss has already occurred, the assignment can simply operate as an assignment of the existing right to an indemnity or the proceeds⁶²⁸; but in the case of an assignment of proceeds prior to any loss arising, it would seem that it operates in equity as an assignment of a future chose in action,⁶²⁹ and therefore being an agreement to assign requires consideration to be enforceable by the assignee.⁶³⁰ Since, in either case, the assignment is not of the policy itself, the consent of the insurer is not required,⁶³¹ and it is irrelevant that the assignment is not accompanied by the transfer of an interest in the subject matter of the insurance⁶³²; but the corollary is that the insurer may rely upon breaches of condition or duty by the assignor after as well as before assignment, and even after the loss itself.⁶³³ Whether there has been an assignment of the policy or an assignment of the right to its proceeds may in some cases be a fine question of construction.

^{615.} Re Moore (1878) 8 Ch. D. 519, 520; Castellain v Preston (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 380, 388.

^{616.}  Raiffeisen Zentralbank Österreich AG v Five Star Trading LLC [2001] EWCA Civ 68, [2001] 2 W.L.R. 1344. For general principles of assignment, see above, Vol.I, Ch.19. Marine policies are assignable at law merely by indorsement or in any other customary manner: see Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.50. For life insurance policies, see below, para.42-131; Legh-Jones, MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), paras 26-070—26-113.

^{617.} Special rules govern life assurance policies (see Policies of Assurance Act 1867), and policies of marine insurance (see Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.50(1)).

^{618.} Doe d Pitt v Laming (1814) 4 Camp. 73, 75.

^{619.} Lloyd v Fleming (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 299; North of England Oil and Cake Co v Archangel Marine (1875) 10 Q.B. 249; though a contemporaneous agreement to transfer the subject matter may suffice (North of England Oil and Cake Co v Archangel Marine, above, at 253). For a transfer of the subject matter accompanied by an agreement to assign, see Powles v Innes (1843) 11 M. & W. 10.

^{620.} See Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.51. cf. Dodson v Peter H Dodson Insurance Services [2001] 1 W.L.R. 1012, where a motor insurance policy was held to continue to provide liability cover even though the car which the policy insured had been sold.

^{621.} Lynch v Dalzell (1729) 4 Bro. P.C. 431.

^{622.} Colonial Mutual Insurance Co Ltd v ANZ Banking Group (New Zealand) Ltd [1995] 1 W.L.R. 1140 PC.

^{623.} William Pickersgill & Sons Ltd v London and Provincial Marine and General Insurance Co Ltd [1912] 3 K.B. 617. The position is otherwise if, as a matter of construction, the third party has an original interest in the subject matter of the policy which has not been derived by assignment: Samuel & Co v Dumas [1924] A.C. 431. See Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.50(2).

^{624.} Burton v Gore District Mutual Fire Insurance (1865) 12 Gr. 156; Central Bank of India v Guardian Assurance Co (1936) 54 Lloyd's Rep. 247, 259–260.

^{625.} Black King Shipping Corp v Massie (The Litsion Pride) [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 437, 517–519, where mortgagees were affected by the assignor's breach of good faith in making a fraudulent claim after the loss had occurred (although the judgment appears to treat the mortgagees as assignees of the proceeds of the policy). For the effect upon assignees of a deliberate act of the assured and of public policy, see above, paras 42-022—42-023.

^{626.} Bank of Nova Scotia v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Association (Bermuda) Ltd (The Good Luck) [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 514, 546–547, [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 238, 264.

- 627. Raiffeisen Zentralbank Österreich AG v Five Star Trading LLC [2001] EWCA Civ 68, [2001] 2 W.L.R. 1344.
- 628. Lloyd v Fleming (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 299, 302–303.
- 629. Re Turcan (1889) 40 Ch. D. 5.
- 630. Tailby v Official Receiver (1888) 13 App. Cas. 523.
- 631. Re Turcan (1889) 40 Ch. D. 5; McPhillips v London Mutual Fire Insurance Co (1896) 23 A.R. 524.
- 632. Lloyd v Fleming (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 299; McPhillips v London Mutual Fire Insurance Co (1896) 23 A.R. 524.
- 633. Black King Shipping Corp v Massie (The Litsion Pride) [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 437, 517–519. Bank of Nova Scotia v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Association (Bermuda) Ltd (The Good Luck) [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 514, 546–547, [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 238, 264.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 42 - Insurance

Section 9. - Claims

Contractual provision

42-092

In a simple contract of insurance the assured becomes entitled to payment upon the occurrence of the event insured against. ⁶³⁴ The law does not imply any terms requiring the assured to give notice or to furnish details of the event or his loss, ⁶³⁵ save in the case of a constructive total loss in marine insurance, when the assured must give notice of abandonment. ⁶³⁶ It is, however, the general practice for insurance contracts to contain terms stipulating the steps which the assured must take after the occurrence of the event insured against, ⁶³⁷ and it is a matter of construction in each case ⁶³⁸ as to whether such terms are conditions precedent to the liability of the insurer, ⁶³⁹ innominate terms the breach of which (if sufficiently serious) will entitle the insurer to terminate the contract or decline the claim, ⁶⁴⁰ or only collateral terms not enabling the insurer to escape liability but merely entitling him to recover or set off any damages suffered by the breach. ⁶⁴¹ In the absence of clear words, the courts are reluctant to construe provisions as conditions precedent. ⁶⁴² Where such provisions are included in consumer insurance contracts, assuming they have not been separately negotiated, they may fall foul of the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 or, for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015, the Consumer Rights Act 2015, ⁶⁴³ if they, contrary to the requirement of good faith, cause an imbalance in the parties' position to the detriment of the consumer. ⁶⁴⁴

Notice of loss

42-093

⚠ Often the contract stipulates the time and manner in which, and the persons to whom, the assured must notify the event or loss. ⁶⁴⁵ ⚠ If drafted precisely the provision will enable the insurer to escape liability even if the breach occurred through no fault of the assured, ⁶⁴⁶ or has not even prejudiced the insurer. ⁶⁴⁷ This is regularly achieved by the agreement of a notice provision as a condition precedent to the insurer's liability to pay a claim. ⁶⁴⁸ ⚠ Alternatively, the courts may construe the provision as an innominate term, the consequences of the breach of which will depend on the seriousness of that breach. ⁶⁴⁹ However, it seems that even a provision requiring notice to be given "immediately" will only be construed as meaning within a reasonable time and without unjustifiable delay, ⁶⁵⁰ ⚠ and it seems that if the insurer has received the required information from another source, at least an authoritative source, he cannot rely upon the failure of the assured to furnish it. ⁶⁵¹ ⚠ Where notification is required of the possibility or likelihood of a loss, and where the circumstances giving rise to the potential loss are fluid, the assessment of that possibility or likelihood should not be coloured by hindsight. ⁶⁵² There is no rule of law which relieved an assured of the obligation to comply with policy provisions concerning the notification of a claim or loss where the insurer had earlier repudiated liability under the policy on other grounds. ⁶⁵³

Details of loss

42-094

⚠ In the absence of fraud, minor inaccuracies in detailing the nature and extent of the loss will not usually prevent the assured from altering the sum claimed or from recovering under the contract, ⁶⁵⁴ but again, if drafted precisely, a provision requiring these particulars can have this effect (especially by way of a condition precedent). ⁶⁵⁵ The assured may be required by the contract to give assistance to the insurer in substantiating the loss or dealing with claims made by third parties against the assured. ⁶⁵⁶ ⚠

Arbitration

42-095

Insurance contracts often provide for arbitration in the case of disputes and such provisions may validly make arbitration a condition precedent to the insurer's liability. ⁶⁵⁷ The arbitration clause in the policy is treated as separable from the insurance contract ⁶⁵⁸ so that if the contract is void or avoided ab initio, the arbitration clause will generally survive and bind the parties to resolve their dispute by arbitration, unless the arbitration agreement may be avoided. ⁶⁵⁹ There is implied into an arbitration agreement a term that the parties will keep confidential the resulting arbitration award, unless it is necessary to disclose the award to a third party in order to enforce or protect the legal rights of one of the parties. ⁶⁶⁰ Arbitration, if commenced after January 30, 1997, is governed by the Arbitration Act 1996. ⁶⁶¹ The 1996 Act ⁶⁶² extends the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 to arbitration agreements and provides that a term of the contract which amounts to an arbitration agreement is unfair for the purposes of the 1999 Regulations to the extent that it relates to a claim for a pecuniary remedy not exceeding £5,000. ⁶⁶³

Jurisdiction

42-096

Where a dispute arises between the insurer and the assured, the country in which suit may or must be brought will be determined in accordance with: (i) Regulation (EU) 1215/2012 of the European Parliament and Council which applies in respect of EU Member States and proceedings instituted on or after January 15, 2015 ⁶⁶⁴; (ii) EC Council Regulation 44/2001 (Brussels I Regulation) which applies in respect of the EU Member States and proceedings instituted before January 15, 2015 ⁶⁶⁵; (iii) the Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments Act 1991, which applies to the Contracting States to the Lugano Convention ⁶⁶⁶; or (iv) in all other cases, in accordance with the non-Regulation and non-Convention rules in each Member or Contracting State. ⁶⁶⁷ Articles 10 to 16 of Regulation 1215/2012 determine where suit may be brought where the defendant insurer or assured is domiciled in a Member State. These provisions generally allow the assured to sue the insurer in a Member State where the insurer or the assured is domiciled, or where the insurer is a co-insurer in a Member State where the leading insurer is sued. ⁶⁶⁸ Where the insurance contract insures immovable property or liability, the insurer may additionally be sued in the Member State where the harmful event occurred ⁶⁶⁹; in the case of liability insurance, the insurer may also be sued in the Member State by being joined in the proceedings by which the assured is sued by a third party. ⁶⁷⁰ By contrast, Regulation 1215/2012 requires the insurer to sue the assured only in the Member State where the assured is domiciled. ⁶⁷¹ A third party, such as a person to whom the assured is liable, may sue the insurer in the Member States where the insurer or the assured is domiciled in the Member State where the harmful event occurred or as a co-defendant in proceedings instituted by the third party against the assured. ⁶⁷² The insurance contract may provide that any dispute under the contract be submitted to the courts of a particular country. By arts 15(5) and 16, ⁶⁷³ such agreements will be enforced in respect of marine and aviation policies and insurance contracts in respect of "large risks", ⁶⁷⁴ provided that there has been a consensual agreement to the jurisdiction and that the formal requirements are satisfied. ⁶⁷⁵ Jurisdiction agreements in other types of policy will be enforced in the more limited circumstances set out in art.13. ⁶⁷⁶ Reinsurance contracts are not governed by arts 8 to 14, but are treated as normal commercial contracts and are dealt with under the general provisions of the Regulation. ⁶⁷⁷

Choice of law

42-097

Where an English arbitration tribunal or court is properly seised of a dispute, the choice of law is determined by the application of the Contracts (Applicable Law) Act 1990 which incorporates the Rome Convention 1980. ⁶⁷⁸ Where contracts insure risks in the territories of EEA States and the contracts were concluded before December 17, 2009, the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Law Applicable to Contracts of Insurance) Regulations 2001 apply to determine the applicable law. ⁶⁷⁹ The law applicable to contracts of insurance concluded on or after December 17, 2009 is determined in accordance with Regulation (EC) 593/2008 on the law applicable to contractual obligations (the Rome I Regulation). ⁶⁸⁰ Article 7 of the Rome I Regulation makes provision for insurance contracts covering a “large risk” wherever the risk is located and all other insurance contracts covering risks situated within the territory of a Member State. ⁶⁸¹

Fraudulent claims

42-098

⚠ There appear to be three species of “fraudulent claim”, ⁶⁸² ⚠ namely: (a) a fraudulent claim for a loss, which is non-existent; (b) a fraudulent claim for a loss, which is itself genuine, but which is excluded or not covered by the insurance policy; (c) a fraudulent claim for a loss which is otherwise genuine and covered by the policy but which is exaggerated. ⁶⁸³ ⚠ Each of these will attract the same remedy. The precise definition of a fraudulent claim has not been authoritatively stated, although it is likely to require proof of the elements of deceit (other than inducement). ⁶⁸⁴ ⚠ In order to be fraudulent, the claim must be substantially fraudulent, that is if the fraudulent element of the claim was de minimis, the assured would not bear the legal consequences of a fraudulent claim. ⁶⁸⁵

⚠ Mere exaggeration is not conclusive evidence of fraud, ⁶⁸⁶ ⚠ though it affords strong evidence of fraud if the claim is out of all proportion to the true loss, ⁶⁸⁷ ⚠ as does gross negligence. ⁶⁸⁸ ⚠ The availability of the remedy for a fraudulent claim does not depend on actual inducement of the insurer, so that the fraud does not have to be successful; the mere making of the fraudulent claim is sufficient to engage the appropriate remedy. ⁶⁸⁹ ⚠ In order for the fraudulent claim rule to apply, the fraud must be material to the recoverability of the claim under the insurance policy or, in other words, to the insurer’s liability under the policy. That is, if the insurer would be liable to indemnify the assured in respect of the claim, absent any lie, the making of such a lie is necessarily collateral and will not constitute a fraudulent claim in itself. This was the finding of the Supreme Court in Versloot Dredging

BV v HDI Gerling Industrie Versicherung AG, ⁶⁹⁰ ⚠ overriding earlier authorities. ⁶⁹¹ ⚠ The fraud of the assured will preclude his trustee in bankruptcy, ⁶⁹² ⚠ and any joint assured, from recovering, and the same appears to be true for an assignee of the policy. ⁶⁹³ ⚠ Where, however, the contract is a composite one insuring several parties for their different interests, an innocent assured is not prejudiced by another’s fraud. ⁶⁹⁴ ⚠ The assured, although himself innocent, may be affected by a claim presented fraudulently by his agent insofar as the latter was acting within the scope of his authority. ⁶⁹⁵ ⚠ The duty of utmost good faith does not impose any duty to disclose or not to misrepresent material facts in connection with a claim wider than the duty not to present a fraudulent claim. ⁶⁹⁶ ⚠

Remedy for fraudulent claims: existing law

42-099

⚠ It is axiomatic that if the assured presents a fraudulent claim, the claim will fail. ⁶⁹⁷ If, it is the case, albeit it is not entirely clear, that, the duty not to present fraudulent claims is a breach of the duty of utmost good faith, the insurer would be entitled to avoid the insurance contract ab initio. ⁶⁹⁸ However, the harshness of the remedy of avoidance has led recently to a fundamental reappraisal of the circumstances in which the contract of insurance might be avoided. Lord Hobhouse in Manifest Shipping Co Ltd v Uni-Polaris Shipping Co Ltd (The Star Sea) ⁶⁹⁹ was sceptical as to whether the remedy of avoidance was applicable to a fraudulent claim. In Versloot Dredging BV v HDI Gerling Industrie Versicherung AG, Lords Sumption and Hughes were similarly sceptical. ⁷⁰⁰ ⚠ Mance L.J. in Agapitos v Agnew (The Aegeon) ⁷⁰¹ considered that the common law had its own rule for the presentation of fraudulent claims, quite apart from the duty of utmost good faith and held that the remedy appropriate in the event of a fraudulent claim is the forfeiture of benefit under the policy (although the scope of that remedy remains undecided). ⁷⁰² It has been held by the Court of Appeal that it is an implied term of the contract of insurance that the making of a fraudulent claim will result in the assured forfeiting all benefit under the policy, ⁷⁰³ and not just the benefit which attaches to the fraudulent claim or fraudulent part of the claim. ⁷⁰⁴ ⚠ Nevertheless, it has been subsequently suggested by the Court of Appeal that forfeiture is limited to the fraudulent claim itself (including the non-fraudulent parts of the claim) or, less likely, only prospective benefit under the policy. ⁷⁰⁵ ⚠ In Versloot Dredging BV v HDI Gerling Industrie Versicherung AG, ⁷⁰⁶ ⚠ the Supreme Court appeared to assume that forfeiture of the insurance claim (including the genuine parts of the claim)—as opposed to the forfeiture of any other benefit under the policy—was the consequence of a fraudulent claim. As is evident from this discussion, the law is in an uncertain state. ⁷⁰⁷ If, however, the insurance contract contains a clause permitting the insurer to avoid the contract in the event of a fraudulent claim, avoidance pursuant to the clause is likely to be effective. ⁷⁰⁸

Remedy for fraudulent claims under the Insurance Act 2015

42-100

The Insurance Act 2015 applies to insurance contracts and variations agreed on or after August 12, 2016. ⁷⁰⁹ The 2015 Act, by s.12, clarifies the uncertain state of the law as explained in the previous paragraph. The 2015 Act does not identify what constitutes a fraudulent claim, leaving such matters to the common law. ⁷¹⁰ Under s.12, where there has been a fraudulent claim, the insurer has two distinct remedies, both of which he may exercise. First, the insurer is not liable to pay the claim and the insurer may recover from the assured any sums paid by the insurer to the assured in respect of the claim. ⁷¹¹ Where the insurance claim comprises both fraudulent and honest parts, it is not clear whether this means that the insurer is absolved from paying the entire claim tainted by fraud, even the genuine parts of the claim, or whether the insurer is absolved from paying only the fraudulent part of the claim. It seems likely that the insurer will not be liable to pay any part of the claim tainted by fraud, including those parts which are genuine. ⁷¹² Second, the insurer may by notice to the assured treat the insurance contract as having been terminated with effect from the time of the fraudulent act. If the insurer does terminate the insurance contract in this way, he may refuse all liability to the assured under the insurance contract in respect of a “relevant event” (namely, the event which gives rise to the insurer’s liability under the insurance contract such as the occurrence of a loss, the making of a claim or the notification of a potential claim, depending on the terms of the contract) occurring after the time of the fraudulent act and he may retain all premiums paid under the contract. Nevertheless, in the case of such termination, the insurer’s obligations with respect to a “relevant event” before the time of the fraudulent act will remain unaffected. ⁷¹³ The parties may contract out of the effect of s. 12, but in the case of a consumer insurance contract, any such contracting out is not permitted if it would put the assured in a worse position; in the case of a non-consumer insurance contract, any such contracting out which puts the assured in a worse position would be effective provided that the transparency requirements of the 2015 Act are complied with. ⁷¹⁴

The burden of proof

42-101

The burden is upon the assured to prove on the balance of probabilities that his loss or the event was proximately caused by perils insured against. ⁷¹⁵ Thus under an “all risks” insurance the assured must establish that the loss was due to a fortuitous event, ⁷¹⁶ and similarly where there is a claim for loss by perils of the sea, ⁷¹⁷ and though theoretically there is no need to go further and prove the exact nature of the casualty, ⁷¹⁸ in practice this generally has to be done. ⁷¹⁹ The burden of proving that the assured caused the loss deliberately lies on the insurer, ⁷²⁰ but where the assured has to establish an accident, he will, of course, fail if the evidence is equally consistent with his wilful misconduct. ⁷²¹

Proof of insured and excepted perils

42-102

⚠ The assured must bring himself within the scope of the perils insured against but when, as is usual, these are expressed in general terms and then made subject to specific exceptions which do not qualify the whole of the general undertaking but merely exclude certain forms of the perils, leaving part of the general undertaking unqualified, it seems that it is sufficient for the assured to adduce evidence to bring the loss or the event within the scope of the general undertaking, and it is then for the insurer to prove on a balance of probabilities that the loss or the event resulted from one of the specific excepted causes. ⁷²² ⚠ When, however, the whole of the general undertaking is qualified, the assured cannot bring himself within the cover, unless he shows that the loss or the event resulted from the perils so limited. ⁷²³ In each case it is a question of construction ⁷²⁴ whether there is a general promise subject, to a degree, to exceptions, or only a limited and qualified promise; and though perhaps illogical, the courts are inclined to treat as cases falling into the former category contracts where the excepted perils are described as such ⁷²⁵ or as conditions precedent ⁷²⁶ or warranties. ⁷²⁷ It is, of course, open to the parties to make provision in the contract as to the incidence of the burden of proof on any issue that may arise between them. ⁷²⁸

Causation

42-103

⚠ The courts seek the “proximate”, “direct”, ⁷²⁹ “dominant”, ⁷³⁰ “operative and efficient” ⁷³¹ cause of the loss or an event in order to determine whether it was caused by an insured or an excepted peril, though by the use of apt words in the contract, such as “directly or indirectly”, ⁷³² ⚠ it is, of course, possible to include or exclude losses or events not caused proximately by the perils insured or excepted. The application of this doctrine of proximate cause cannot be reduced to rigid rules and its application is really a matter of common sense rather than logic. ⁷³³ The doctrine of causation applied to insurance contracts is the same as that applied in the realm of tort or other breach of duty. ⁷³⁴ The peril insured against or excepted must operate, ⁷³⁵ and the loss or the event must be such as can fairly be attributed to that operation. ⁷³⁶ Thus loss caused by trying to avert a peril which has not yet begun to operate is not a loss caused by that peril, ⁷³⁷ whereas loss caused by trying to minimise the effects of an operating peril is regarded as being proximately caused by that peril. ⁷³⁸ Similarly, death through disease attributable to an accident ⁷³⁹ or through an operation necessitated by an accident ⁷⁴⁰ is generally regarded as caused by the accident, whereas losses merely facilitated by an insured peril, as where an air raid facilitates theft, ⁷⁴¹ are not caused by that peril.

Multiple causes

42-104

There may be more than one cause which contributes to a loss. Where the causes are concurrent and it is their combination which procures the loss, ⁷⁴² then the loss will be covered by the insurance, if at least one of the causes is a peril insured against,⁷⁴³ unless one of the causes is an excepted peril, in which case there is no cover.⁷⁴⁴ Where the loss is caused by a peril which itself inevitably is attributable to another peril, the loss will generally be covered if the peril first in time is insured against, and excluded if the first peril is excepted.⁷⁴⁵

The amount recoverable

42-105

⚠ A claim under a contract of insurance which is a contract of indemnity is a claim for unliquidated damages even, it seems, when the contract is a valued one.⁷⁴⁶ ⚠ The amount recoverable, or the “measure of indemnity”, will depend on the nature (and terms) of the insurance contract. Losses under contingency policies and insurances against financial loss or liability will be readily calculated. As regards property policies, for the purposes of measuring the indemnity under the policy, there are two types of losses, namely a total loss and a partial loss. A total loss generally refers to the irretrievable deprivation of possession of the property (e.g. theft or confiscation) or to the physical destruction of the property.⁷⁴⁷ In the realm of marine insurance, there is an additional category of total loss, namely a “constructive total loss”, which applies commercial considerations to establishing the existence of a total loss.⁷⁴⁸ A partial loss is any loss other than a total loss. A partial loss is often measured by reference to a depreciation in value or the cost of reinstatement or repair.⁷⁴⁹ ⚠ The measure of damages in the case of valued contracts⁷⁵⁰ raises few difficulties. If there is a total loss the assured recovers the agreed value, and if there is a partial loss the assured recovers a proportion (which reflects the depreciation in the actual value) of the agreed value or, where appropriate, the cost of repair or reinstatement.⁷⁵¹ The measure of indemnity under the unvalued contracts is the value⁷⁵² at the date⁷⁵³ and place⁷⁵⁴ of the loss, and, if available, the market value will prima facie be the amount recoverable, but otherwise the cost of restoration may provide the basis for the indemnity,⁷⁵⁵ ⚠ and this latter basis is usually used for cases of partial loss.⁷⁵⁶ In marine insurance rules have been worked out to make an adjustment for “new for old”⁷⁵⁷ but there are no settled rules for this in non-marine insurance.⁷⁵⁸ ⚠ The policy may contain a policy limit, often referred to as the “the sum insured”. This does not represent the sum which the assured will receive in the event of a loss. The assured will recover the amount of his loss, subject to the ceiling imposed by the limit.⁷⁵⁹ However, subject to the terms of the policy, it will be presumed that the policy limit will apply to each of successive losses under the policy and not to the aggregate of those losses, even if the aggregate exceeds the policy limit.⁷⁶⁰ It may be that the policy will provide that the limit will apply to aggregated losses.⁷⁶¹ In such cases, where the assured has a number of claims to be presented under the policy, the assured, not the insurer, has the right to determine the sequence in which the claims are presented against the insurer.⁷⁶² Where two or more assureds, or third parties deriving title to sue, present claims under the one policy and there is insufficient cover to indemnify all the claimants, the available cover shall respond to each claim in the order it is established under the policy⁷⁶³ and if each of the claims are established at the same time, the claims must be satisfied on a pro rata basis.⁷⁶⁴

Indemnification aliunde

42-106

The insurer is liable to pay a claim against him irrespective of any rights which the assured may have against others in respect of the loss⁷⁶⁵ and in the absence of stipulation to the contrary, before payment⁷⁶⁶ he has no right⁷⁶⁷ nor is obliged⁷⁶⁸ to call upon the assured to reduce the loss by enforcing such rights. If, however, before payment by the insurer under a contract of indemnity, the loss (which in a valued policy is taken to be the amount of the valuation)⁷⁶⁹ is extinguished by the assured enforcing such rights⁷⁷⁰ or by a voluntary payment by a third party intended to have this effect,⁷⁷¹ the insurer's liability is extinguished, since there is nothing left to indemnify.⁷⁷² Similarly, if the loss is reduced the insurer's liability is limited to the balance of the loss remaining.⁷⁷³

Express provisions permitting less than a full indemnity

42-107

Contracts of insurance which are contracts of indemnity often contain three kinds of provisions which may prevent the assured from recovering more than a certain proportion of the amount insured, viz rateable proportion provisions, those dealing with underinsurance, and excess clauses.

Rateable proportion clauses

42-108

These clauses are designed to prevent the assured who has insured with other insurers from recovering his loss in full from one of them, leaving that one to obtain contribution from the others. ⁷⁷⁴ Such clauses apply only if the same loss is insured by each insurer. ⁷⁷⁵ They usually provide that where there are other insurances, the assured can only recover a rateable proportion under the insurance in question ⁷⁷⁶; but they can go so far as to relieve the insurers from all liability when the assured is entitled to recover under another policy, ⁷⁷⁷ though this latter category is construed strictly against the insurers by the courts, ⁷⁷⁸ and the burden in either case is upon the insurers to show that the assured is in fact so entitled. ⁷⁷⁹ There has been no authoritative statement as to how a rateable proportion should be calculated. ⁷⁸⁰

Underinsurance

42-109

The assured may not insure the subject matter fully, and by so doing may pay less by way of premium than he would otherwise. In marine insurance the assured is deemed to be his own insurer for the balance uninsured, ⁷⁸¹ so that on a partial loss he has to bear his proportion of the loss even if it is less than the amount for which he has insured. This rule does not apply in non-marine insurance, ⁷⁸² and in order to prevent the assured from receiving a full indemnity on the occurrence of a partial loss, despite not having paid the premium for complete cover, the insurers often insert a provision making this rule applicable. ⁷⁸³ The provision is often known as the "subject to average" or "average" clause. ⁷⁸⁴

Excess clauses

42-110

Often (and notoriously in motor insurance) ⁷⁸⁵ the insurer stipulates that the assured must bear the amount of any loss up to a specified figure, the insurer only being liable for the excess (if any) over that figure. ⁷⁸⁶

Reinstatement

42-111

⚠ The insurer's normal liability is to pay money; but the contract may give him an option either to pay or to reinstate the loss or damaged property. ⁷⁸⁷ ⚠ Once the insurer has made his election he is bound by it. ⁷⁸⁸ If he has elected to reinstate, the contract is treated as if it had always been a contract to reinstate without the option of payment. ⁷⁸⁹ It follows that the insurer is not bound to expend the sum insured and equally cannot limit his expenditure to that sum, and he will be liable in damages if he fails to restore the damaged property, even though restoration proves more expensive than he expected. ⁷⁹⁰ The assured must allow the insurer to take possession of the property to reinstate it, ⁷⁹¹

and the insurer must bear any loss or damage to the property while he is in possession.⁷⁹² By the Fires Prevention (Metropolis) Act 1774,⁷⁹³ the insurer under a fire policy may in certain circumstances be obliged to apply the insurance moneys to the reinstatement of the damaged premises.⁷⁹⁴ Where the policy provides for reinstatement and if the insurer initially declines the claim, any policy requirement that the reinstatement should be undertaken by the assured with reasonable despatch will be enforced only once the insurer has confirmed that he will provide an indemnity.⁷⁹⁵

Late payment of insurance claims

42-111A

⚠ At common law, if the insurer unreasonably failed to pay an insurance claim within a reasonable time, the assured had no remedy over and above the entitlement to an insurance indemnity and statutory interest.⁷⁹⁶ ⚠ This was the result of a peculiarity of insurance law in that the claim for an indemnity is, as a legal fiction, a claim for unliquidated damages for breach of contract by the insurer (the breach being constituted by the assured's suffering an insured loss),⁷⁹⁷ ⚠ and in that a contracting party is not entitled to recover damages for the late payment of damages.⁷⁹⁸ ⚠ In addition, the Court held that there was no implied term in the insurance contract obliging the insurer to assess and pay an insurance claim with reasonable diligence and due expedition.⁷⁹⁹ ⚠ In order to address the perceived unfairness with this state of the law, the Enterprise Act 2016 ss.28–30 were passed so as to amend the Insurance Act 2015 (by the addition of ss.13A and 16A). This legislation entered into force on May 4, 2017 and introduces into every insurance contract an implied term that the insurer must pay insurance claims within a reasonable time (allowing for investigation and assessment of the claim).⁸⁰⁰ ⚠ If there is a breach of this implied term, the assured will have remedies (e.g. damages) available at common law (and otherwise) in addition to the payment of the claim under the policy and statutory interest.⁸⁰¹ ⚠ By s.13A(4), if the insurer shows there are reasonable grounds for disputing the claim, there is no breach of the implied term while the dispute is continuing. Insofar as any term of the insurance contract puts the assured in a worse position as regards the implied term provided for in s.13A, such term is invalid insofar as consumer insurances are concerned and insofar as any breach of the implied term by the insurer is deliberate or reckless. Otherwise, such a term is valid if it satisfies the transparency requirements of the Insurance Act 2015.

⁸⁰² ⚠

^{634.} Ordinarily, the sum payable under an insurance contract is payable to the assured himself. However, the contract may provide that the “loss payee”, that is the person who is to receive the insurance proceeds, is a person other than the assured (e.g. a bank). At common law, the loss payee, not being privy to the contract, had no right to enforce this contractual provision, relying on the assured to enforce the insurer's contractual undertaking. However, with the passage of the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999, the loss payee is likely to be able to enforce this contractual right directly against the insurer, subject of course to the terms of the policy.

^{635.} Rankin v Potter (1873) L.R. 6 H.L. 83.

^{636.} Marine Insurance Act 1906 ss.61–62.

^{637.} Wilkinson v Car and General (1913) 110 L.T. 468; Terry v Trafalgar Insurance Co Ltd [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 524, where it was unsuccessfully argued that a condition prohibiting admissions of liability without the consent of the insurers was contrary to public policy.

^{638.} Stoneham v Ocean Accident (1887) 19 Q.B.D. 237; Re Coleman's Depositories [1907] 2 K.B. 798; see above, paras 42-077–42-078.

639. e.g. Elliott v Royal Exchange (1867) L.R. 2 Ex. 237; Cassel v Lancashire and Yorkshire Accident (1885) 1 T.L.R. 495; Cox v Orion Insurance Co Ltd [1982] R.T.R. 1; Hamptons Residential Ltd v Field [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 248.
640. Alfred McAlpine Plc v BAI (Run-off) Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 437. The possibility of declining a claim for a breach of an innominate term is unlikely since the Court of Appeal's decision in Sirius International Insurance Corp v Friends Provident Life & Pensions Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 601, [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 517.
641. e.g. Stoneham v Ocean Accident (1887) 19 Q.B.D. 237; Re Bradley and Essex Accident [1912] 1 K.B. 415.
642. Jones and James v Provincial (1929) 46 T.L.R. 71, 73; Alfred McAlpine Plc v BAI (Run-off) Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 437. However, if the condition precedent is express and unequivocal, then the Court will construe it accordingly: Bass Brewers Ltd v Independent Insurance Co Ltd, 2002 S.L.T. 512; AXA Insurance UK Plc v Thermonex [2012] EWHC B10 (Merc), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 323. See above, para.42-078.
643. See above, paras 38-358—38-394.
644. See above, paras 42-087—42-088.
645. ! Hamptons Residential Ltd v Field [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 248; Layher Ltd v Lowe [1997] 58 Con. L.R. 42, where it was held that an assured was not obliged, under a clause requiring the assured to notify the insurer of an occurrence "likely" to give rise to a claim, to notify the insurer of the mere possibility of a claim; Alfred McAlpine Plc v BAI (Run-off) Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 437; J Rothschild Assurance Plc v Collyear [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 6; Zurich Insurance Plc v Maccaferri Ltd [2016] EWCA Civ 1302, [2017] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 200. In Tioxide Europe Ltd v Commercial Union Assurance Co Plc [2005] EWCA Civ 928, [2006] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 31, the relevant notice was given to the wrong addressee. For an example of a clause which exercised the court's powers of interpretation, see Royal & Sun Alliance Insurance Plc v Dornoch Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 238, [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 544; cf. AIG Europe (Ireland) Ltd v Faraday Capital Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 1208, [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 454. See also William McIlroy (Swindon) Ltd v Quinn Insurance Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 825, [2012] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 241.
646. Cassel v Lancashire and Yorkshire Accident (1885) 1 T.L.R. 495; Adamson v Liverpool and London [1953] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 355; CVG Siderurgica Orinoco SA v London Steamship Owners Mutual Insurance Assn Ltd (The Vainqueur José) [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 357; Walker v Pennine Insurance Co Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 139; affirmed [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 156.
647. Pioneer Concrete (UK) Ltd v National Employers' Mutual General Insurance [1985] 2 All E.R. 395. The reasoning in the Pioneer Concrete case was expressly approved by the Privy Council in Motor and General Insurance Co Ltd v Pavy [1994] 1 W.L.R. 462, 469 as fully and correctly stating the law. See also Total Graphics Ltd v AGF Insurance Ltd [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 599, 608.
648. ! HLB Kidsons v Lloyd's Underwriters [2007] EWHC 1951 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 237 at [51]–[54], [2008] EWCA Civ 1206, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 8; Involnert Management Inc v Aprilgrange Ltd [2015] EWHC 2225 (Comm), [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 289 at [225]–[243]. As to the construction of a provision requiring notification of a circumstance "which may give rise to a claim", see also Laker Vent Engineering Ltd v Templeton Insurance Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 62, [2009] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 704 at [78]–[81]; AXA Insurance UK Plc v Thermonex [2012] EWHC B10 (Merc), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 323.
649. Alfred McAlpine Plc v BAI (Run-off) Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 437.
650. ! Williams v Lancashire and Yorkshire Accident (1902) 51 W.R. 222. In Zurich Insurance Plc v Maccaferri Ltd [2016] EWCA Civ 1302, [2017] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 200 at [31]–[32], the Court of Appeal held that "'Immediately' itself does not mean instantaneously but 'with all reasonable speed considering the circumstances of the case”. As to the impact of prejudice in determining what is a reasonable time, see Shinedean Ltd v Alldown Demolition (London) Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 939, [2006] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 846. For a recent decision on the meaning of “as soon as practicable”, see HLB Kidsons v Lloyd's Underwriters [2007] EWHC 1951 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 237 at [60], [2008] EWCA Civ 1206, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 8. In Denso Manufacturing UK Ltd v Great Lakes Reinsurance (UK) Plc [2017] EWHC 391 (Comm), [2017] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 240 at [55]–[56], the Court considered the meaning of “as soon as” and “without delay” in a different context.

651.

❗ Barrett Bros (Taxis) Ltd v Davies [1966] 1 W.L.R. 1334. cf. The Vainqueur José [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 357; The Mozart [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239. This decision has been confined and questioned in reinsurance disputes (CNA International Reinsurance Co Ltd v Companhia de Seguros Tranquilidade SA [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 289, 302–303). Under the Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Act 2010 s.9(2), it is provided that anything done by the third party which, if done by the insured, would have amounted to or contributed to fulfilment of the condition is to be treated as if done by the insured. This would include notification obligations. However, under ss.9(3) and (4), any condition requiring the insured to provide information or assistance to the insurer—other than notification of the existence of a claim—need not be fulfilled if the insured no longer exists.

652.

Clothing Management Technology Ltd v Beazley Solutions Ltd [2012] EWHC 727 (QB), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 571, [44].

653.

Nasser Diab v Regent Insurance Co Ltd [2006] UKPC 29, [2007] 1 W.L.R. 797.

654.

Mason v Harvey (1853) 8 Exch. 819. As to the adequacy of particulars provided by the assured, see Super Chem Products Ltd v American Life and General Insurance Co Ltd [2004] UKPC 2, [2004] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 446 at [28]–[30].

655.

Hiddle v National Fire of New Zealand [1896] A.C. 372; Welch v Royal Exchange [1939] 1 K.B. 294. The effect of such provisions may be mollified for consumers by the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 or, for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015, the Consumer Rights Act 2015: see above, paras 42-087–42-088.

656.

❗ Braunstein v Accidental Death (1861) 1 B. & S. 782; Manby v Gresham Life (1861) 4 L.T. 347; Gan Insurance Co Ltd v Tai Ping Insurance Co Ltd (Nos 2 and 3) [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 667. cf. All Leisure Holidays Ltd v Europäische Reiseversicherung AG [2011] EWHC 2629 (Comm), [2012] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 193, [27]–[29]. See also Porter v Zurich Insurance Co [2009] EWHC 376 (QB), [2010] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 373 at [124]–[130]. See also Ted Baker Plc v Axa Insurance UK Plc [2017] EWCA Civ 4097 In Widfree Ltd v Brit Insurance Ltd [2009] EWHC 3671 (QB), [2010] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 477, the Court held that a condition precedent requiring the assured to provide such information as the insurers may reasonably require, should be construed to extend only to information which was in the insured's power to provide when the insurer requested the information.

657.

Scott v Avery (1856) 5 H.L.C. 811; Jureidini v National British [1915] A.C. 499, 504; Atlantic v Louis Dreyfus [1922] 2 A.C. 250, 255; Czarnikow v Roth, Schmidt [1922] 2 K.B. 478, 488; Callaghan v Dominion Insurance Co Ltd [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 541, 545 (where the agreement which required only disputes on quantum to be referred to arbitration, provided that the award would be a condition precedent to a right of action against the insurer). In William McIlroy Swindon Ltd v Quinn Insurance Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 825, [2012] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 241, the Court of Appeal construed a clause in a public liability insurance contract requiring the reference of a dispute “in respect of a claim” to arbitration as applying only to claims which can arise only upon or after the public liability in question has been established by the ascertainment of both liability and quantum: see below, para.42-119.

658.

Arbitration Act 1996 s.7.

659.

Harbour Assurance Co (UK) Ltd v Kansa General International Insurance Co Ltd [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 455.

- 660. Insurance Co v Lloyd's Syndicate [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 272. See also Hassneh Insurance Co v Mew [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 243; Ali Shipping Corp v Shipyard Trogir [1998] 2 All E.R. 136.
- 661. Arbitrations commenced before January 30, 1997 are governed by the Arbitration Acts 1950, 1975 and 1979. By the 1996 Act, international insurance arbitration agreements now may exclude the court's jurisdiction in respect of any appeal on a point of law, whereas previously such agreements were ineffective (Arbitration Act 1979 ss.3 and 4). Such exclusion agreements relating to "domestic" arbitrations are effective if agreed after the commencement of proceedings (Arbitration Act 1996 s.87(1)).
- 662. ss.89–91. The Regulations apply whatever the applicable law of the contract: s.89(3). The Arbitration Act 1996 will be amended to accommodate the Consumer Rights Act 2015, instead of the 1999 Regulations, when the 2015 Act enters into force: s.75, Sch.4 paras 30–33.
- 663. This limit was fixed by the Unfair Arbitration Agreements (Specified Amount) Order 1999 (SI 1999/2167).
- 664. Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments (Amended) Regulations 2014 (SI 2014/2947) reg.1.
- 665. By the Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments Order 2001 (SI 2001/3929), the Regulation entered into force on March 1, 2002. Prior to this date, the Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments Act 1982, incorporating the Brussels Convention on Jurisdiction and the Enforcement of Judgments in Civil and Commercial Matters 1968, as amended, and the Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments Act 1991 applied.
- 666. See the Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments Act 1991, as amended by the Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments Order 2001 (SI 2001/3929). A new Lugano Convention was signed on October 30, 2007, designed to harmonise the rules applicable under the Lugano Convention and Regulation 44/2001: see the Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments Regulations 2009 (SI 2009/3131).
- 667. In England and Wales, such rules are found in CPR r.6.37 and Practice Direction 6B.
- 668. Regulation 1215/2012 art.11. See New Hampshire Insurance Co v Strabag Bau AG [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 361; Tradigrain SA v SIAT SpA [2002] EWHC 106 (Comm), [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 553. See also arts 8 to 11 of the 2007 Lugano Convention.
- 669. Regulation 1215/2012 art.12.
- 670. Regulation 1215/2012 art.13(1).
- 671. Regulation 1215/2012 art.14(1). Under art.14(1) of the Regulation (art.12 of the 2007 Convention), the insurer must sue the assured in the state of domicile of the assured, whether or not the insurer is domiciled in a Member State: Jordan Grand Prix Ltd v Baltic Insurance Group [1999] 1 All E.R. 289. As to the scope of art.12, see also National Justice Compania Naviera SA v Prudential Assurance Co Ltd (The Ikarian Reefer) (No.2) [2000] 1 W.L.R. 603.
- 672. Regulation 1215/2012 arts 11–13. See Case 463/06 FBTO Schadeverzekeringen NV v Odenbreit [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 354; Mapfre Mutualidad Compania de Seguros y Reaseguros SA v Keefe [2015] EWCA Civ 598.
- 673. Lugano Convention 2007 arts 13(5) and 14. See Charman v WOC Offshore BV [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 378, [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 551; Tradigrain SA v SIAT SpA [2002] EWHC (Comm) 106, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 553.
- 674. "Large risks" are defined in Directive 2009/138/EC of the European Parliament and Council.
- 675. See art.23 of the Regulation (art.23 of the 2007 Convention). See AIG Europe (UK) Ltd v Anonymous Greek Insurance Co of General Insurances (The Ethniki) [2000] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 343. As an example of a case where the Court has had to decide whether the parties have chosen a particular jurisdiction from a variety listed in the open cover, see Tradigrain SA v SIAT

SpA [2002] EWHC (Comm) 106, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 553.

676. 2007 Convention art.13.

677. Fisher v Unione Italiana de Riassicurazione SpA [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 215; Agnew v Lansförsäkringsbolagens AB [2000] 1 All E.R. 737; AIG Europe (UK) Ltd v Anonymous Greek Insurance Co of General Insurances (The Ethniki) [2000] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 343; Group Josi Reinsurance Co SA v Universal General Insurance Co (C-412/98) [2001] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 483.

678. Incorporating the Convention on the Law Applicable to Contractual Obligations 1980. See Gan Insurance Co Ltd v Tai Ping Insurance Co Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 472. See above, Vol.I, Ch.30.

679. SI 2001/2635. As amended by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Law Applicable to Contracts of Insurance) (Amendment) Regulations 2001 (SI 2001/3542). See Crédit Lyonnais v New Hampshire Insurance Co [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1; American Motorists Insurance Co v Cellstar Corp [2003] EWCA Civ 206, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 295 (a case concerning a composite policy); Travelers Casualty & Surety Co of Europe Ltd v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada (UK) Ltd [2004] EWHC 1704 (Comm), [2004] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 846. The Regulations do not apply to contracts of reinsurance (art.3(1)). By the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Law Applicable to Contracts of Insurance) Regulations 2009 (SI 2009/3075), the 2001 Regulations do not apply to contracts of insurance concluded on or after December 17, 2009.

680. See above, Vol.I, Ch.30.

681. art.7. See above, Vol.I, paras 30-252—30-276. As to "large risks" and where a risk is situated, see Council Directive 73/239/EEC and Council Directive 88/357/EEC, as amended by Directive 2005/68/EC.

682.  In Agapitos v Agnew (The Aegeon) [2002] EWCA Civ 247, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 42 at [15]–[18] the Court of Appeal considered that an originally honest claim which was subsequently appreciated as unfounded or exaggerated would be a fraudulent claim and that the deliberate suppression of a valid defence would render a claim fraudulent. See also Versloot Dredging BV v HDI Gerling Industrie Versicherung AG [2016] UKSC 45, [2016] 3 W.L.R. 543 at [96]. A fraud committed in performance of a contract of compromise of an insurance claim will not be a fraudulent claim attracting the remedies discussed in this paragraph: Direct Line Insurance Plc v Fox [2009] EWHC 386 (QB), [2009] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 1017.

683.  As to exaggerated claims, see Versloot Dredging BV v HDI Gerling Industrie Versicherung AG [2016] UKSC 45, [2016] 3 W.L.R. 543 at [25]–[26], [36], [51], [92]–[93].

684.  Lek v Mathews (1927) 29 Ll.L. Rep. 141; Aviva Insurance Ltd v Brown [2011] EWHC 362 (QB), [2012] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 211 at [61]–[73], although in this case it was submitted that there was an additional requirement of dishonesty within the meaning discussed in Twinsectra Ltd v Yardley [2002] UKHL 12, [2002] 2 A.C. 164; such an additional requirement would appear to go beyond the bounds of the authorities. There is also a question whether the fraudulent claim can be constituted by a non-disclosure, as well as by a misrepresentation: Marc Rich Agriculture Trading SA v Fortis Corporate Insurance NV [2004] EWHC 2632 (Comm), [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 396; Aviva Insurance Ltd v Brown [2011] EWHC 362 (QB), [2012] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 211 at [64].

685.  Galloway v Guardian Royal Exchange (UK) Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 209; Tonkin v UK Insurance Ltd [2006] EWHC 1120 (TCC), [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 283 at [176]–[178]; Aviva Insurance Ltd v Brown [2011] EWHC 362 (QB), [2012] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 211 at [76]–[77].

686.  London Assurance v Clare (1937) 57 Ll.L. Rep. 254, 268; Orakpo v Barclays Insurance Services Co Ltd [1995] L.R.L.R. 443 at 451.

- 687. ! Chapman v Pole (1870) 22 L.T. 306; Herman v Phoenix Assurance Co Ltd (1924) 18 Ll.L. Rep. 371; Dome Mining Corp Ltd v Drysdale (1931) 41 Ll.L. Rep. 109; Central Bank of India Ltd v Guardian Assurance Co Ltd (1936) 54 Ll.L. Rep. 247; Shoot v Hill (1936) 55 Ll.L. Rep. 29.
- 688. ! Goodman v Harvey (1836) 4 Ad. & El. 870.
- 689. ! Versloot Dredging BV v HDI Gerling Industrie Versicherung AG [2016] UKSC 45, [2016] 3 W.L.R. 543 at [28]–[36], although Lord Sumption in that case appeared to curtail the principle underlying the fraudulent claim rule to the fact that inducement was not required.
- 690. ! [2016] UKSC 45, [2016] 3 W.L.R. 543, at [36], [39], [92]–[93], [100]–[103], [109]. See also K/S Merc-Scandia XXXXII v Lloyd's Underwriters [2001] EWCA Civ 1275, [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 563 at [35].
- 691. ! Agapitos v Agnew (The Aegeon) [2002] EWCA Civ 247, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 42 at [38].
- 692. ! Re Carr and Sun Insurance (1897) T.L.R. 186.
- 693. ! Black King Shipping Corp v Massie (The Litsion Pride) [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 437, 517–519.
- 694. ! General Accident, Fire and Life Assurance Corp Ltd v Midland Bank Ltd [1940] 2 K.B. 388; Lombard Australia v NRMA Insurance [1969] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 575. See also Woolcott v Sun Alliance and London Insurance Ltd [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 629. New Hampshire Insurance Co v MGN Ltd [1997] L.R.L.R. 24; Arab Bank Plc v Zurich Insurance Co [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 262.
- 695. ! Savash v CIS General Insurance Ltd [2014] EWHC 375 (TCC), [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 471 at [55]–[59].
- 696. ! Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v Mountain [1997] L.R.L.R. 523; reversed on other grounds [1997] 2 All E.R. 929; Manifest Shipping & Co Ltd v Uni-Polaris Insurance Co Ltd (The Star Sea) [2001] UKHL 1, [2001] 2 W.L.R. 170. See also Alfred McAlpine Plc v BAI (Run-off) Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 437, where it was held that mere negligence in supplying details of claim pursuant to a notice provision in the policy did not constitute a breach of the obligation of utmost good faith.
- 697. Manifest Shipping & Co Ltd v Uni-Polaris Shipping Co Ltd (The Star Sea) [2001] UKHL 1, [2001] 2 W.L.R. 170 at [62].
- 698. Manifest Shipping & Co Ltd v Uni-Polaris Shipping Co Ltd (The Star Sea), above; affirming [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 360; K/S Merc-Scandia XXXXII v Lloyd's Underwriters [2001] EWCA Civ 1275, [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 563. See above, para.42-042. See also Goulstone v Royal (1858) 1 F. & F. 276; Britton v Royal (1866) 4 F. & F. 905, 909; Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v Mountain [1997] L.R.L.R. 523; reversed on other grounds by the Court of Appeal: [1999] Q.B. 674. The duty not to make a fraudulent claim persists even after the insurer wrongfully repudiates the policy (Transthene Packaging Co Ltd v Royal Insurance (UK) Ltd [1996] L.R.L.R. 32, 43) but not after the commencement of litigation (Agapitos v Agnew (The Aegeon) [2002] EWCA Civ 247, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 42 at [52]).
- 699. [2001] UKHL 1, [2001] 2 W.L.R. 170. Lord Hobhouse does not appear to have come to any conclusion concerning the availability of the remedy of avoidance. Lords Clyde and Scott left the question open.
- 700. ! [2016] UKSC 45, [2016] 3 W.L.R. 543, at [8], [67].

- 701. [2002] EWCA Civ 247, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 42 at [45].
- 702. In The Aegeon, at [21], [35] and [45], the Court of Appeal expressed a preference for the forfeiture to be prospective applying to all claims or benefits which had not yet accrued at the date of the fraudulent claim. There were earlier dicta that the forfeiture extended to all benefit under the policy, including entitlements which had already accrued (see Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v Mountain [1997] L.R.L.R. 523, 592-595). In many cases there is an express provision in the policy that in the event of the presentation of a fraudulent claim "the policy shall become void and all claims hereunder shall be forfeited".
- 703. Diggins v Sun Alliance and London Assurance Plc [1994] C.L.C. 1146; Orakpo v Barclays Insurance Services [1995] L.R.L.R. 443 (disapproved by the Court of Appeal in K/S Merc-Scandia XXXXII v Lloyd's Underwriters, in reliance on the judgment of the obiter dicta of Lord Hobhouse in The Star Sea). As to forfeiture clauses, see Insurance Corp of the Channel Islands Ltd v McHugh [1997] L.R.L.R. 94; cf. Fagnoli GA Bonus Plc [1997] C.L.C. 653.
- 704.  Orakpo v Barclays Insurance Services, above; Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v Mountain, above; Galloway v Guardian Royal Exchange (UK) Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 209; Aviva Insurance Ltd v Brown [2011] EWHC 362 (QB) is reported at [2012] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 211.
- 705.  Agapitos v Agnew (The Aegeon) [2002] EWCA Civ 247, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 42; Axa General Insurance Ltd v Gottlieb [2005] EWCA Civ 112, [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 369; Churchill Car Insurance v Kelly [2007] EWHC 18 (QB), [2007] R.T.R. 26.
- 706.  [2016] UKSC 45, [2016] 3 W.L.R. 543.
- 707. Interpart Comercio e Gestao SA v Lexington Insurance Co [2004] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 690; Marc Rich Agriculture Trading SA v Fortis Corporate Insurance NV [2004] EWHC 2632 (Comm), [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 396. See the Law Commission's Consultation Paper: Insurance Contract Law: Post Contract Duties and other Issues (LCCP No.201, December 2011).
- 708. Joseph Fielding Properties (Blackpool) Ltd v Aviva Insurance Ltd [2010] EWHC 2192 (QB), [2011] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 238 at [88]-[99].
- 709. See above, para.42-032.
- 710. Explanatory notes, para.100.
- 711. 2015 Act s.12(1)(a)-(b).
- 712. See above, para.42-099; Agapitos v Agnew (The Aegeon) [2002] EWCA Civ 247, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 42; Axa General Insurance Ltd v Gottlieb [2005] EWCA Civ 112, [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 369.
- 713. 2015 Act s.12(1)(c), (2)-(4).
- 714. 2015 Act ss.15-17. See above, para.42-060.
- 715. British and Foreign Marine v Gaunt [1921] 2 A.C. 41, 58; Regina Fur v Bossom [1958] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 425; Richard Aubrey Film Productions v Graham [1960] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 10; see also Fuerst Day Lawson Ltd v Orion Insurance Co Ltd [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 656; Rhesa Shipping Co SA v Edmunds [1985] 1 W.L.R. 948; Kastor Navigation Co Ltd v Axa Global Risks (UK) Ltd [2002] EWHC 2601 (Comm), [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 262 at [63]; affirmed, [2004] EWCA Civ 277, [2004] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 481. Where there are a number of insured perils, only one insured peril need be proved: Kuwait Airways Corp v Kuwait Insurance Co SAK [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 803.
- 716. British and Foreign Marine v Gaunt [1921] 2 A.C. 41.
- 717. The Tropaioforos [1960] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 469; The Gold Sky [1972] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 187; The

- Vainqueur [1973] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 275 (US); affirmed [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 494.
- 718. British and Foreign Marine v Gaunt, above.
- 719. Regina Fur v Bossom [1958] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 425.
- 720. London Assurance v Clare (1937) 57 Ll.L. Rep. 254; Slattery v Mance [1962] 1 Q.B. 676; though generally the assured has the right and duty to begin at the trial of his claim, even if the substantial issue is fraud: Grunther Industrial Developments v Federated Employers Insurance Association Ltd [1973] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 394; affirmed [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 259; S and M Carpets (London) Ltd v Cornhill Insurance Co Ltd [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 667; affirmed [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 423; Watkins & Davis v Legal General Assurance Co Ltd [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 674; Broughton Park Textiles (Salford) Ltd v Commercial Union Assurance [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 194; Polvitte v Commercial Union Assurance [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 379. Where the insurer alleges fraud or wilful misconduct, the standard of proof remains the civil standard, although the difficulty in satisfying the court will be greater in proportion to the seriousness of the insurer's charge: Hornal v Neuberger Products Ltd [1957] 1 Q.B. 247, 258; The Zinovia [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 264; Re H [1996] A.C. 563, 586-587; Re D [2008] UKHL 33.
- 721. Regina Fur v Bossom [1958] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 425 at 434. cf. Slattery v Mance, above; with The Tropaioforos [1960] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 469.
- 722.  Munro Brice v War Risks Association [1918] 2 K.B. 78; reversed on facts [1920] 3 K.B. 94. cf. Motor Union v Boggan (1923) 130 L.T. 588, 591; Greaves v Drysdale (1935) 53 Ll.L. Rep. 16; reversed on facts (1936) 55 Ll.L. Rep. 95; Pan American World Airways v Aetna [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 207 US; affirmed [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 77; Leeds Beckett University v Travelers Insurance Co Ltd [2017] EWHC 558 (TCC) at [199]–[208].
- 723. Munro Brice v War Risks Association, above. See Hurst v Evans [1917] 1 K.B. 352, which can hardly be reconciled with Greaves v Drysdale, above. Where the assured and the insurer put forward rival explanations as to the cause of the loss, if the Court is in doubt as to the probable cause, it may reject the assured's claim on the ground that it has failed to discharge the onus of proof: European Group Ltd v Chartis Insurance UK Ltd [2012] EWHC 1245 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 117 at [78]–[81]; Nulty v Milton Keynes Borough Council [2013] EWCA Civ 15, [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 243.
- 724. Gorman v Hand-in-Hand (1877) Ir. R. 11 C.L. 224. In Kuwait Airways Corp v Kuwait Insurance Co SAK [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 803 the House of Lords held that an extension of cover by reference to a list of perils "other than" a specified peril was not an exclusion.
- 725. American Tobacco v Guardian (1925) 69 S.J. 621; Re National Benefit (1933) 45 Ll.L. Rep. 147.
- 726. Gorman v Hand-in-Hand (1877) Ir.R. 11 C.L. 224.
- 727. Macbeth v King (1916) 115 L.T. 221; Bond Air Services v Hill [1955] 2 Q.B. 417.
- 728. Levy v Assicurazioni Generali [1940] A.C. 791.
- 729. Becker, Gray v London Assurance [1918] A.C. 101, 114.
- 730. Leyland v Norwich Union [1918] A.C. 350, 363; Gray v Barr [1971] 2 Q.B. 554, 567; Naviera de Canarias SA v Nacional Hispanica Aseguradora SA [1978] A.C. 853, 865, 881; Marcel Beller Ltd v Hayden [1978] 1 Q.B. 694.
- 731. Leyland v Norwich Union, above, at 369, 370; Samuel v Dumas [1924] A.C. 431, 447. See also Suez Fortune Investments Ltd v Talbot Underwriting Ltd [2015] EWHC 42 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 651, at [283]–[297].

- 732. ! Coxe v Employers Liability [1916] 2 K.B. 629; American Tobacco v Guardian (1925) 69 S.J. 621; Oei v Foster and Eagle Star Insurance [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 170. cf. Smith v Accident Insurance (1870) L.R. 5 Ex. 302; ARC Capital Partners Ltd v Brit Syndicates Ltd [2016] EWHC 141 (Comm), [2016] 4 W.L.R. 18.
- 733. Yorkshire Dale SS Co v Minister of War Transport [1942] A.C. 691, 706; Boiler Inspection Co v Sherwin-Williams [1951] A.C. 319, 333, 334. Many examples of the application of the doctrine are to be found in Ivamy, General Principles of Insurance Law, 6th edn (1993), Ch.38.
- 734. Lloyds TSB General Insurance Holdings Ltd v Lloyds Bank Group Insurance Co Ltd [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 13, 23 Q.B.D., [2001] EWCA Civ 1643, [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 113 at [42]; reversed on other grounds [2003] UKHL 48, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 623.
- 735. Kacianoff v China Traders [1914] 3 K.B. 1121; Becker, Gray v London Assurance [1918] A.C. 101.
- 736. Fitton v Accidental Death (1864) 17 C.B.(N.S.) 122; Re Etherington and Lancashire and Yorkshire Accident [1909] 1 K.B. 591.
- 737. Knight of St Michael [1898] P. 30; Yorkshire Water v Sun Alliance & London Insurance [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 21 (where the assured unsuccessfully sued for the recovery of expenses incurred to prevent the incurring of insured liabilities on the alternative grounds that the event which would result in the insured liability had already occurred, although the insured peril had not yet operated, and that it was an implied term of the policy that such expenses would be indemnified).
- 738. Johnston v West of Scotland (1828) 7 S. (Ct. of Sess.) 52; Stanley v Western Insurance (1868) L.R. 3 Ex. 71; Symington v Union Insurance of Canton (1928) 97 L.J.K.B. 646.
- 739. Isitt v Railway Passengers (1889) 22 Q.B.D. 504; Mardorf v Accident Insurance [1903] 1 K.B. 584; Re Etherington and Lancashire and Yorkshire Accident [1909] 1 K.B. 591; Fidelity and Casualty Co of New York v Mitchell [1917] A.C. 592. But cf. Cawley v National Employers' Accident (1885) 1 T.L.R. 255; and Jason v Batten (1930) Ltd [1969] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 281. Indeed, a failure reasonably to attempt to minimise such loss may interfere with the chain of causation and deprive the assured of an indemnity for some or all of his loss: National Oilwell (UK) Ltd v Davy Offshore Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 582, 618-619; The State of The Netherlands v Youell [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 440; affirmed [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 236; See also Strive Shipping Corp v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Association (The Grecia Express) [2002] EWHC 203 (Comm), [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 88, 159-162.
- 740. Fitton v Accidental Death (1864) 17 C.B.(N.S.) 122.
- 741. Winicofsky v Army and Navy (1919) 35 T.L.R. 283. See also Marsden v City and Country (1865) L.R. 1 C.P. 232; Liverpool and London War Risks v Ocean SS Co [1948] A.C. 243; Costain-Blankevoort (UK) Dredging Co Ltd v Davenport (The Nassau Bay) [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 395. cf. Tappoo Holdings Ltd v Stuchbery [2006] FJSC 1, [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 34, where the Supreme Court of the Fiji Islands held that loss and damage caused by looters amidst the breakdown of law and order following the armed seizure of Parliament constituted an "insurrection" which was excluded by the relevant policy.
- 742. There must first be a finding that the loss is attributable to concurrent causes: Handelsbanken Norwegian Branch of Svenska Handelsbanken AB v Dandridge (The Aliza Glacial) [2002] EWCA Civ 577, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 421 at [47]-[48]. If it is possible to attribute a discrete part of the loss to one concurrent cause and another part to the other concurrent cause, then the loss will be recoverable to the extent that it is attributable to a peril insured against. If however, both causes would have independently procured the same loss, the loss will be covered if one of the perils is insured against, unless the other is excepted. See Clarke, The Law of Insurance Contracts, 6th edn (2009), para.25-6B.
- 743. Dudgeon v Pembroke (1877) 2 App. Cas. 284, 297; Reischer v Bornwick [1894] 2 Q.B. 548, 551; Lloyd Instruments Ltd v Northern Star Insurance Co (The Miss Jay Jay) [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 32. See also Reynolds v Accidental Insurance (1870) 22 L.T. 820; Winspear v Accidental Insurance (1880) 6 Q.B.D. 42; and Lawrence v Accident Insurance (1881) 7 Q.B.D. 216; Seashore Marine SA v Phoenix Assurance Plc [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 51 at [94]-[95]; Kiriacoulis Lines SA v Compagnie D'Assurances Maritime Aeriennes et Terrestre (Camat) (The Demetra K) [2002] EWCA Civ 1070, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 581 at [18].

744. Saqui v Stearns [1911] 1 K.B. 426; Lawrence v Accident Insurance, above; Wayne Tank Co Ltd v Employers' Liability Assurance Corp Ltd [1974] Q.B. 57; see also Seddon v Binions [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 382; Midland Mainline Ltd v Eagle Star Insurance Co Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 1042, [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 604. cf. Kuwait Airways Corp v Kuwait Insurance Co SAK [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 664, [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 687, [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 803.

745. It may be too early to say that this is a rule of law, as the inquiry into proximate cause is one concerned with fact; nevertheless there are several decisions of the courts which follow the pattern of this proposition (e.g. P Samuel & Co Ltd v Dumas [1924] A.C. 431), but there are those which run counter (e.g. Cory & Son v Burr (1883) 8 App. Cas. 393). It is submitted to be a sensible formulation of the doctrine of successive proximate causes, as proposed by Clarke, The Law of Insurance Contracts, 6th edn (2009), paras 25-5 and 25-7. In Atlasnavios-Navegacao Lda v Navigators Insurance Co Ltd [2014] EWHC 4133 (Comm), [2015] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 151 at [233]-[247], Flaux, J considered such an approach to be too mechanistic.

746.  Jabbour v Custodian of Israeli Absentee Property [1954] 1 W.L.R. 139. Accordingly, the assured may not recover as damages any losses occasioned as a result of the insurer's failure to pay other than that which was to be indemnified under the policy: Ventouris v Mountain (The Italia Express) [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 281; Sprung v Royal Insurance (UK) Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 111; Callaghan v Dominion Insurance Co Ltd [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 541; contra Grant v Co-operative Insurance Society Ltd (1983) 134 N.L.J. 81; Transthene Packaging Co Ltd v Royal Insurance (UK) Ltd [1996] L.R.L.R. 32, 41. The assured's entitlement to damages may be different if the insurer is in breach of other obligations under the insurance contract: Transthene Packaging Co Ltd v Royal Insurance (UK) Ltd, above; cf. Sprung v Royal Insurance (UK) Ltd, above; Tonkin v UK Insurance Ltd [2006] EWHC 1120 (TCC), [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 283 at [34]-[39]. Upon the entry into force of ss.13A and 16A of the Insurance Act 2015 on May 4, 2017, the assured is entitled to recover damages for the late payment of a claim under an insurance contract in breach of a term implied by s.13A requiring the insurer to pay insurance claims within a reasonable time. In non-consumer insurance contracts, it is open to the parties to agree to a modification of this implied term to the insurer's benefit subject to the restrictions imposed by s.16A of the 2015 Act and the transparency requirements of the Insurance Act 2015. See below, para.42-111A.

747. Scott v Copenhagen Reinsurance Co (UK) Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 688, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 752 at [22], [34]-[40]. The fact that there is a "mere chance" of recovery of the property does not mean that there has been no loss: at [40].

748. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.60. The doctrine of constructive total loss does not apply to nonmarine insurance: Moore v Evans [1917] 1 K.B. 458; Scott v Copenhagen Reinsurance Co (UK) Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 688, [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 752.

749.  Prattley Enterprises Ltd v Vero Insurance New Zealand Ltd [2016] NZSC 158, [2017] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 175 at [38]-[43].

750. The policy may be in part a valued policy and in part an unvalued policy: Grimaldi Ltd v Sullivan [1997] C.L.C. 64.

751. Elcock v Thomson [1949] 2 K.B. 755; Kusel v Atkin [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 749. As to the relationship between depreciation in value and the reasonable cost of repair, see Coles v Hetherton [2012] EWHC 1599 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 9 at [31].

752. This value does not include loss of profits or other consequential losses unless specifically insured: see above, para.42-027.

- 753. Hercules Insurance v Hunter (1835) 14 S. (Ct. of Sess.) 147; Chapman v Pole (1870) 22 L.T. 306; Re Wilson and Scottish Insurance [1920] 2 Ch. 28; Leppard v Excess Insurance Co Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 91; Tonkin v UK Insurance Ltd [2006] EWHC 1120 (TCC), [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 283 at [20]-[25].
- 754. Rice v Baxendale (1861) 7 H. & N. 96, 101.
- 755.  Westminster Fire v Glasgow Provident (1888) 13 App. Cas. 699, 713; Exchange Theatre Ltd v Iron Trades Mutual Insurance Co [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 674, 688-689; affirmed [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 149. cf. Anderson v Commercial Union, 1998 S.L.T. 826, where it was held that whilst the insurer was bound to indemnify the assured against the costs of repair, he was not obliged (absent a clause) to indemnify the assured as and when such costs were incurred. In Great Lakes Reinsurance (UK) SE v Western Trading Ltd [2016] EWCA Civ 1003, [2016] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 643 at [40], the Court of Appeal held that where real property is destroyed the measure of indemnity to which the insured is entitled will depend on: (i) the terms of the policy; (ii) the interest of the insured in, or its obligations in respect of, the property insured; and (iii) the facts of the case including, in particular, the intention of the insured at the time of the loss. If the insured has a limited interest in the property it will be material to consider whether the subject matter of the insurance is the whole interest in the property insured and not solely that of the insured himself and, if it is the whole interest, whether the insured is accountable to others for any sum received in excess of his interest. At [67]-[75], the Court held that where no reinstatement costs had yet been incurred, whether or not the cost of reinstatement was the correct measure of indemnity depended on whether the insured had a fixed, settled and genuine intention to reinstate. See also Prattley Enterprises Ltd v Vero Insurance New Zealand Ltd [2016] NZSC 158, [2017] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 175 at [38]-[43].
- 756. Scottish Amicable v Northern Assurance (1883) 11 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 287, 295; Pleasurama v Sun Alliance [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 389, 393. However, the position may vary depending on the practicability of doing the repairs and the genuineness of the assured's intentions to undertake them or to sell: Glad Tidings v Wellington Fire Insurance Co, 46 D.L.R. (2d.) 475 (1964); Reynolds v Phoenix Assurance Co [1978] Lloyd's Rep. 440; Leppard v Excess Insurance Co Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 91. See also Gleniffer Finance Corp v Bamar Wood and Products [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 49.
- 757. See Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.69(1). As to claims for partial losses under the Marine Insurance Act 1906 ss.69 and 77; see Manifest Shipping & Co Ltd v Uni-Polaris Insurance Co Ltd (The Star Sea) [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 651, 664-666, [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 360; affirmed [2001] UKHL 1, [2001] 2 W.L.R. 170; Kusel v Atkin [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 749.
- 758.  Prattley Enterprises Ltd v Vero Insurance New Zealand Ltd [2016] NZSC 158, [2017] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 175 at [38]-[43]. cf. Vance v Forster (1841) Ir. Circ. Rep. 47; Castellain v Preston (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 380, 400.
- 759. Leppard v Excess Insurance Co Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 91, 95. See also Kyzuna Investments Ltd v Ocean Marine Mutual Insurance Association (Europe) [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 505, where it was held that the words "sum insured" did not represent the insured value for the purposes of Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.27(2). The principles applicable to determining whether a policy of marine insurance is a valued or unvalued policy are generally applicable to non-marine insurance policies: Quorum A/S v Schramm [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 249; Thor Navigation Inc v Ingosstrakh Insurance Co Ltd [2005] EWHC 19 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 547.
- 760. South Staffordshire Tramways Co Ltd v Sickness & Accident Assurance Association Ltd [1891] 1 Q.B. 402; Re Law Car and General Insurance Corp Ltd [1913] 2 Ch. 103, 118. See also Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.77. In Ridgecrest NZ Ltd v IAG New Zealand Ltd [2014] NZSC 117, [2015] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 34 at [48]-[52] the New Zealand Supreme Court held that the doctrine of merger (by which the assured is not entitled to recover an indemnity for unrepaired damage amounting to a partial loss where it is followed by a total loss) did not apply, as a matter of law, to non-marine insurance.

- 761. Where there is a danger of the policy limit being exhausted, it is important to be able to identify to what event, peril or cause the limit will apply: Kuwait Airways Corp v Kuwait Insurance Co SAK [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 664, 686; affirmed [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 687, [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 803; Caudle v Sharp [1995] L.R.L.R. 433; Cox v Bankside Members Agency Ltd [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 26; Axa Reinsurance (UK) Plc v Field [1996] 1 W.L.R. 1026; Mann v Lexington Insurance Co [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1; Standard Life Assurance Ltd v Oak Dedicated Ltd [2008] EWHC 222 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 552 ("and/or claimant"); Aioi Nissay Dowa Insurance Co Ltd v Heraldglen Ltd [2013] EWHC 154 (Comm), [2013] 2 All E.R. 231.
- 762. Cox v Deeny [1996] L.R.L.R. 288, 298-299.
- 763. Cox v Bankside Members' Agency Ltd [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 437.
- 764. Cox v Deeny [1996] L.R.L.R. 288, 299.
- 765. Cullen v Butler (1816) 5 M. & S. 461; Quebec v St Louis (1851) 7 Moo. P.C. 286; Dickensen v Jardine (1868) L.R. 2 C.P. 639, 644; North British v London, Liverpool and Globe (1877) 5 Ch. D. 569; Collingridge v Royal Exchange (1877) 3 Q.B.D. 173, 176, 177. cf. Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v Mountain [1997] 2 All E.R. 929, where the Court of Appeal held that the fact that the waiver of contractual claims was ineffective as a matter of law meant that no damnable loss was suffered.
- 766. For the position after payment see below, paras 42-112—42-117.
- 767. Dickensen v Jardine, above; Collingridge v Royal Exchange, above; Darrell v Tibbetts (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 560.
- 768. West of England Fire v Isaacs [1897] 1 Q.B. 226.
- 769. Bruce v Jones (1863) 1 H. & C. 769; Goole and Hull Steam Towing Co v Ocean Marine [1928] 1 K.B. 589. See above, para.42-003.
- 770. Bruce v Jones (1863) 1 H. & C. 769.
- 771. Godsall v Boldero (1807) 9 East 72 (overruled by Dalby v Indian and London Life (1854) 15 C.B. 365 on the grounds that the insurance was not one of indemnity so that the principles discussed did not apply). See also Colonia Versicherung AG v Amoco Oil Co [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 261, 270-271.
- 772. Law v London Indisputable Life (1855) 1 K. & J. 223, 228; Burnand v Rodocanachi (1882) 7 App. Cas. 333, 339.
- 773. Bruce v Jones (1863) 1 H.C. 769; Goole and Hull Steam Towing Co v Ocean Marine [1928] 1 K.B. 589.
- 774. North British v London, Liverpool and Globe (1877) 5 Ch. D. 569; Commercial Union Assurance Co Ltd v Hayden [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1; Legal and General Assurance Society Ltd v Drake Insurance Co Ltd [1992] Q.B. 887; Drake Insurance Plc v Provident Insurance Plc [2003] EWHC 109 (Comm), [2003] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 759, [2003] EWCA Civ 1834, [2004] Q.B. 601 and see below, para.42-117.
- 775. If the loss is divisible over policies covering successive years, the same loss may have been insured by both insurers and the rateable proportion clause might apply: International Energy Group Ltd v Zurich Insurance Plc [2015] UKSC 33, [2015] 2 W.L.R. 1411 at [58]-[64]; Phillips v Gunner [2003] EWHC 1084, [2004] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 426 at [22]-[23].
- 776. Phillips v Gunner [2003] EWHL 1084, [2004] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 426 at [22]-[23].
- 777. See Gale v Motor Union [1928] 1 K.B. 359; Weddell v Road Transport and General [1932] 2 K.B. 563; National Employees Mutual General Insurance Assn Ltd v Haydon [1980] 2 Lloyd's

Rep. 149.

- 778. National Employees Mutual General Insurance Assn Ltd v Hayden [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 149. cf. Portavon Cinema v Price (1939) 161 L.T. 417.
- 779. Jenkins v Deane (1933) 103 L.J.K.B. 250, 255.
- 780. cf. Weddell v Road Transport and General [1932] 2 K.B. 563; Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.80(1); Commercial Union Assurance Co Ltd v Hayden [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1; O'Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 389. See also American Surety Co v Wrightson (1910) 27 T.L.R. 91.
- 781. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.81.
- 782. Sillem v Thornton (1854) 3 E. & B. 868; Joyce v Kennard (1871) L.R. 7 Q.B. 78; Fifth Building Society v Traveller Insurance (1893) 9 T.L.R. 221; Newman v Maxwell (1899) 80 L.T. 681; Anglo-Californian Bank v London Marine and General (1904) 10 Com. Cas. 1.
- 783. Carreras v Cunard SS Co [1918] 1 K.B. 118, 122. cf. Crowley v Cohen (1832) 3 B. & Ad. 478.
- 784. Acme Wood Flooring v Marten (1904) 20 T.L.R. 229.
- 785. See below, paras 42-123 et seq.
- 786. See Re Law Guarantee Trust [1914] 2 Ch. 617, 645; Beacon Insurance v Langdale [1939] 4 All E.R. 204. cf. Trollope & Colls Ltd v Haydon [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 244. The excess clause is often called a "deductible" in commercial insurances. For the effect of such a clause on the assured's obligations to account to his insurer by way of subrogation, see Lord Napier and Ettrick v Hunter [1993] 2 W.L.R. 42, and see below, para.42-114.
- 787.  Prattley Enterprises Ltd v Vero Insurance New Zealand Ltd [2016] NZSC 158, [2017] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 175 at [38].
- 788. Times Fire v Hawke (1858) 1 F. & F. 406.
- 789. Brown v Royal (1859) 1 E. & E. 853, 858. As the clause is for the insurer's benefit, the assured cannot demand reinstatement if the insurer elects to pay: see Leppard v Excess Insurance Co Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 91.
- 790. Brown v Royal, above, at 860; cf. Anderson v Commercial Union (1885) 55 L.J.Q.B. 146.
- 791. Bisset v Royal Exchange (1821) 1 S. (Ct. of Sess.) 174.
- 792. Waring & Gillow v Doughty, The Times, February 21, 1922.
- 793. s.83.
- 794. See below, para.42-130.
- 795. Western Trading Ltd v Great Lakes Reinsurance (UK) Plc [2015] EWHC 103 (QB) at [127]–[129].
- 796.  The Italia Express [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 281; Sprung v Royal Insurance (UK) Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 111; Callaghan v Dominion Insurance Co Ltd [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 541; Tonkin v UK Insurance Ltd [2006] EWHC 1120 (TCC), [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 283 at [34]–[38]; Turville Heath Inc v Chartis Insurance UK Ltd [2012] EWHC 3019 (TCC), (2012) 145 Con L.R. 163 at [36].
- 797.  Grant v Royal Exchange Assurance Co (1816) 5 M. & S. 439, 442; Swan and Cleland's

Graving Dock and Slipway Co v Maritime Insurance Co [1907] 1 K.B. 116, 123–124; William Pickersgill & Sons Ltd v London and Provincial Marine & General Insurance Co Ltd [1912] 3 K.B. 614, 622; Seele Austria GmbH & Co KG v Tokio Marine Europe Insurance Ltd [2009] EWHC 2066 (TCC) at [50]–[52].

798.

! President of India v Lips Maritime Corp [1988] 1 A.C. 395, 424–425.

799.

! Insurance Corp of the Channel Islands Ltd v McHugh [1997] L.R.L.R. 94, 136–138.

800.

! What constitutes a reasonable time depends on all of the circumstances of the case, including the type, size and complexity of the claim, compliance with statutory or regulatory rules or guidance and factors beyond the control of the insurer (s.13A(3)).

801.

! Parliament's Explanatory Notes, para.264. See also s.13A(5) of the 2015 Act. By amendment to the Limitation Act 1980 s.5, introduced by the Enterprise Act 2016 s.30, a claim for breach of the implied term may not be brought after the expiration of one year from the date on which the insurer has paid all the sums due under the insurance contract.

802.

! Insurance Act 2015 s.16A. As to the transparency requirements, see Vol.II, para.42-060.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 42 - Insurance
Section 10. - The Rights of the Insurer upon Payment

Rights of insurer

42-112

If the contract of insurance is not one of indemnity, ⁸⁰³ then in the absence of a right to rescind the contract or of express contractual rights the insurer has no right to recoup from the assured or other persons any of the money paid under the contract. ⁸⁰⁴ On the other hand, if the insurance cover is intended to indemnify the assured, the insurer may be entitled, apart from express contractual provisions, to exercise three distinct rights. These rights are salvage, subrogation, and contribution.

Salvage

42-113

⚠ In both marine and non-marine insurance, if the subject matter is lost ⁸⁰⁵ or totally destroyed, and the insurer pays to the assured a sum representing an indemnity for the total loss of the subject matter, the assured may be required to abandon his interest in the subject matter to the insurer. ⁸⁰⁶
 ⚠ If the subject matter is subsequently found or becomes of value, the insurer benefits to the extent of such interest. ⁸⁰⁷ If the insurer takes the money value of such interest (which may be given as a credit against the claim) rather than the subject matter of the insurance itself, the value will be the market value of the property as at the time of its recovery rather than its insured value (if there is one). ⁸⁰⁸ In marine insurance these principles apply to circumstances in which the subject matter has not actually been lost or destroyed, but in which it is not commercially worthwhile or not foreseeably likely to recover or restore it. ⁸⁰⁹ In such circumstances of “constructive total loss”, the assured may offer to abandon his interest in the subject matter to the insurer who may accept the abandoned interest and who then pays as for a total loss. ⁸¹⁰ The doctrine of constructive total loss applies only to marine insurance. ⁸¹¹

Subrogation ⁸¹²

42-114

⚠ If the insurer does pay under a valid ⁸¹³ insurance contract, even if he is under no legal liability to do so, ⁸¹⁴ ⚠ and the assured then receives a payment or benefit in respect of the loss, ⁸¹⁵ which together with the insurance money exceeds the loss insured against, again taken to be the valuation in a valued policy, ⁸¹⁶ he must (subject to any terms in the contract to the contrary) by the doctrine of subrogation account to the insurer for the excess up to the amount that the insurer has paid. ⁸¹⁷ Not only does the insurer have an action in money had and received against the assured to recover the amount payable to the insurer, ⁸¹⁸ but the insurer also has an equitable proprietary interest in the money received from the third party by the assured. ⁸¹⁹ The proprietary interest takes the form of an equitable lien over the fund of money received by the assured, and it is enforceable against the fund to secure repayment of the amount payable to the insurer so long as the fund is traceable and has not been acquired by a bona fide purchaser for value without notice. ⁸²⁰ The insurer, however, does not have a proprietary interest in the assured's cause of action against a third party in respect of the loss which has been indemnified by the insurer. ⁸²¹ The assured's obligation to account to his insurer arises once he is indemnified in respect of the particular loss against which he has insured: if, therefore, the assured has agreed to bear a part of a loss himself, the assured may have to account to the insurer before he receives a complete indemnity against his overall loss. ⁸²² The doctrine of subrogation applies to voluntary payments ⁸²³ so long as the gift was not intended to benefit the assured beyond the insurance money. ⁸²⁴

Subrogation: rights of action

42-115

⚠ Similarly, the insurer, once he has paid under the insurance, ⁸²⁵ is entitled to the benefit of all rights possessed by the assured in respect of the loss insured against. ⁸²⁶ Thus the insurer is entitled to enforce the assured's right of action against tortfeasors who have caused the loss ⁸²⁷ or against persons who are contractually bound to compensate the assured in damages for the loss, ⁸²⁸ and such parties cannot raise as a defence or in mitigation of damages the fact that the assured has been indemnified by the insurer. ⁸²⁹ An insurer, however, is not entitled to sue one co-insured in the name of another co-insured where the former is covered under the policy for the loss, ⁸³⁰ ⚠ although it may be that this is dependent on any contract between the assured and the co-assured excluding a right of action ⁸³¹, nor can he sue a person for whose joint benefit the insurance has been effected if it was intended by the assured and that other person that any loss should be recouped solely from the insurance moneys. ⁸³² ⚠ The rights to which the insurer is subrogated ⁸³³ are those of the assured so that they must be exercised in the name of the assured ⁸³⁴ unless they are assigned at law to the insurer, ⁸³⁵ and the assured can be compelled to allow the insurer the use of his name against an indemnity as to costs. ⁸³⁶ Where the contract does not provide for a full indemnity it seems that the insurer (in the absence of provisions to the contrary) cannot prevent the assured from exercising the rights himself so long as he acts in good faith, ⁸³⁷ and he may deduct his reasonable expenses of recovery before accounting to the insurer, ⁸³⁸ but otherwise it seems that the insurer can, if he wishes, restrain the assured from so doing. ⁸³⁹ Where the insurer recovers funds which are in excess of the amount to which the insurer is entitled pursuant to his right of subrogation, the insurer will hold that excess on trust for the assured so that the assured will have an equitable proprietary interest in that excess. ⁸⁴⁰

Duty of assured

42-116

The assured is under a duty to do nothing which prejudices the insurer's rights of subrogation, ⁸⁴¹ and thus if he releases or compromises with persons who are under a liability to him in respect of the loss insured against, he will be liable to the insurer for the full value of the rights released or compromised. ⁸⁴² Indeed it may be that even before a loss has occurred the assured is possibly under a similar duty not to contract so as to diminish or exclude rights to which the insurer would otherwise become subrogated upon paying for a loss. ⁸⁴³

Contribution

42-117

There is nothing to prevent an assured from taking out as many insurances as he chooses against the same risks, and he may claim payment from his insurers in such order as he chooses, ⁸⁴⁴ though, once he has received a full indemnity, other insurers will be under no liability (for there will be nothing left to indemnify). ⁸⁴⁵ If the assured receives more than a full indemnity, he will hold the excess on trust for the insurers. ⁸⁴⁶ It also seems that, in cases where the Life Assurance Act 1774 applies, once the assured has insured to the full extent of his interest any further insurances will be void and illegal. ⁸⁴⁷ Although it is no defence to an insurer against whom a claim is made that other insurers are liable in respect of the same loss, such an insurer has, upon payment, an equitable ⁸⁴⁸ right to require contribution from the other insurers so that the payment is borne fairly by all. ⁸⁴⁹ This right exists only between insurers who have covered, by enforceable contracts of insurance, ⁸⁵⁰ the same interest ⁸⁵¹ in the same subject matter ⁸⁵² and against the same perils. ⁸⁵³ The right to contribution arises as between the insurers upon the occurrence of the loss, because it is at that point that the insurers each become liable to indemnify the assured in respect of the loss. ⁸⁵⁴ The nature and extent of all the provisions of the cover need not be the same, provided that each contract is alike in covering the actual loss that has occurred. ⁸⁵⁵ Where both policies in question contain exclusions in respect of losses covered by other insurances, the exclusions will cancel each other out and will be ineffective. ⁸⁵⁶ Where (as will frequently be the case in practice) the relevant insurance policies contain “rateable proportion” clauses, making each insurer liable only for its rateable proportion of any loss or damage, despite earlier authority, it would seem that the right of contribution will still exist as between those insurers, even if one insurer mistakenly pays the entire claim in ignorance of the existence of another policy. ⁸⁵⁷ The amount of the contribution recoverable will depend on calculating the insurers’ respective proportionate shares, although the precise method of calculation has still not been authoritatively determined. ⁸⁵⁸

^{803.} See above, paras 42-003—42-004.

^{804.} Simpson v Thompson (1877) 3 App. Cas. 279, 284; cf. Edwards v Motor Union [1922] 2 K.B. 249, 252.

^{805.} See above, paras 42-027 and 42-105.

^{806.} ! Rankin v Potter (1873) L.R. 6 H.L. 83; Kaltenbach v Mackenzie (1878) 2 C.P.D. 467, 471; Dane v Mortgage Insurance [1894] 1 Q.B. 54; Holmes v Payne [1930] 2 K.B. 301. See Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.79(1). But cf. Legh-Jones, MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), paras 24–006—24–010. It has been held, with respect to a marine insurance policy, that the insurer’s election to take over the insured property will endow him with a beneficial interest under a trust pending the completion of all legal formalities for the transfer of ownership: Dornoch Ltd v Westminster International BV (The W D Fairway) [2009] EWHC 889 (Admlty), [2009] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 191.

^{807.} Oldfield v Price (1860) 2 E. & F. 80; Rankin v Potter, above; Kaltenbach v Mackenzie, above. It may be that this benefit accrues to the insurer as an instance of subrogation.

^{808.} Kuwait Airways Corp v Kuwait Insurance Co SAK (No.2) [2000] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 252.

^{809.} Marine Insurance Act 1906 ss.60–63. In Fraser Shipping Ltd v Colton (The Shakir III) [1997] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 586, 591–593, it was held that if the insured vessel was salvageable even at exorbitant costs, the vessel was constructively, not actually, lost.

^{810.} Royal Boskalis Westminster NV v Mountain [1997] L.R.L.R. 523, 554–558; Kastor Navigation Co Ltd v AGF MAT [2002] EWHC 2601 (Comm), [2003] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 296, [2004] EWCA Civ 277, [2004] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 119.

^{811.} Moore v Evans [1917] 1 K.B. 458; Scott v Copenhagen Reinsurance Co (UK) Ltd [2002] EWHC 1348 (Comm), [2002] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 775; affirmed [2003] EWCA Civ 688, [2003] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 752.

^{812.} For a useful monograph on the doctrine, see Mitchell and Watterson, Subrogation—Law and Practice (2007), Ch.10.

^{813.} Edwards v Motor Union [1922] 2 K.B. 249.

^{814.} ! King v Victoria Insurance [1896] A.C. 250; BUPA Australia Pty Ltd v Shaw [2013] VSC 507, [2014] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 151 (Sup Ct Victoria); MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), para.24–032; cf. Scottish Union & National Insurance Co v Davis [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1.

- 815. Castellain v Preston (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 380; Law, Fire v Oakley (1888) 4 T.L.R. 309; Ironfield v Eastern Gas Board [1964] 1 W.L.R. 1125n. This right of subrogation, however, does not extend to the purchase price received by the assured for the sale of the subject matter insured in circumstances where the insurer chooses not to exercise salvage rights in respect of the subject matter: Dornoch Ltd v Westminster International BV (The W D Fairway) (No.3) [2009] EWHC 1782 (Admlty), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 191 at [14]–[17].
- 816. Thames and Mersey Marine v British and Chilean SS Co [1916] 1 K.B. 30.
- 817. Commercial Union v Lister (1874) L.R. 9 Ch. 483; Darrell v Tibbetts (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 560; Castellain v Preston, above; Thames and Mersey Marine v British and Chilean SS Co, above; Yorkshire Insurance v Nisbet [1962] 2 Q.B. 330. But cf. The Commonwealth [1907] P. 216, where a system of apportionment was applied to a marine policy where the sum insured was less than the agreed value; and L. Lucas Ltd v ECGD [1974] 1 W.L.R. 909 where a system of apportionment was stipulated in the contract.
- 818. Yorkshire Insurance v Nisbet [1962] 2 Q.B. 330.
- 819. Lord Napier and Ettrick v Hunter [1993] 2 W.L.R. 42. See also Bristol & West Building Society v May May & Merrimans [1998] 1 W.L.R. 336; Arab Bank Plc v John D Wood [2000] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 173. For the position where the assured is paid by his insurer after having received a payment from a third party, see Stearns v Village Main Reef Gold Mining Co Ltd (1905) 10 Com. Cas. 89.
- 820. Lord Napier and Ettrick v Hunter [1993] 2 W.L.R. 42.
- 821. Re Ballast Plc; St Paul Travellers Insurance Co Ltd v Dargan [2006] EWHC 3189 (Ch), [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 4 at [87]–[109].
- 822. Re Ballast Plc, above distinguishing between the part of a loss sustained by an assured above a monetary limit in a policy (which the assured can recoup in full before accounting to the insurer) and the loss sustained below an excess in the policy (which the assured can recoup only after fully accounting to the insurer for the money paid under the policy). This is occasionally referred to as the “top-down” principle, namely that any recoveries from third parties are applied to the uppermost layer of the loss first and the bottom-most last.
- 823. Stearns v Village Main Reef Gold Mining Co Ltd (1905) 10 Com. Cas. 89.
- 824. Burnand v Rodocanachi (1882) 7 App. Cas. 333. cf. Merrett v Capitol Indemnity Corp [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 169. See also Colonia Versicherung AG v Amoco Oil Co [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 261, where the Court of Appeal confirmed that the assured need not account for the voluntary payment only if the donor intended to benefit the assured to the exclusion of the insurer and rejected the suggestion that the insurer may be subrogated only if the donor had to intend to benefit the insurer.
- 825. City Tailors v Evans (1921) 91 L.J.K.B. 379, 385; Edwards v Motor Union [1922] 2 K.B. 249. If the parties agree that the insurer can exercise rights of subrogation prior to payment under the policy, such a term will not be given effect: Rathbone Brothers Plc v Novae Corporate Underwriting [2013] EWHC 3457 (Comm), [2014] Lloyd's Rep IR 203 at [60]–[61], [2014] EWCA Civ 1464, [2015] Lloyd's Rep IR 95 at [109].
- 826. Castellain v Preston (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 380, 388. In Lord Napier and Ettrick v Hunter [1993] 2 W.L.R. 42, the House of Lords left open for further consideration whether an insurer has an equitable proprietary interest in the assured's cause of action. See also Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.79.
- 827. King v Victoria Insurance [1896] A.C. 250; Horse, Carriage and General v Petch (1916) 33 T.L.R. 131. But cf. Morris v Ford Motor Co Ltd [1973] Q.B. 792. The assured may maintain an action against the tortfeasor for the full amount of his claim notwithstanding that he has already been paid by his insurers: see Hobbs v Marlowe [1978] A.C. 16.

- 828. North British v London, Liverpool and Globe (1877) 5 Ch. D. 569. The insurer is entitled to enforce by way of subrogation the assured's right to a contractual indemnity, rather than pursuing a right of contribution, because the contractual indemnity is not coordinate with the insurer's secondary liability to indemnify: Caledonia North Sea Ltd v British Telecommunications Plc [2002] UKHL 4, [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 261 at [14]–[16].
- 829. Mason v Sainsbury (1782) 3 Doug. 61; Clark v Blything (1823) 2 B. & C. 254; Yates v Whyte (1838) 4 Bing. N.C. 272; Bradburn v GW Ry (1874) L.R. 10 Ex. 1; Nichols v Scottish Union (1885) 2 T.L.R. 190; King v Victoria Insurance [1896] A.C. 250; Parry v Cleaver [1970] A.C. 1; The Yasin [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 45. Brown v Albany Construction Co [1995] N.P.C. 100; Europe Mortgage Co v Halifax Estate Agencies [1996] E.G.C.S. 84; FNCB Ltd v Barnet Devanney (Harrow) Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 43; Caledonia North Sea Ltd v British Telecommunications Plc [2002] UKHL 4, [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 261. As to the award of interest on damages where the assured has been indemnified by the insurer, see H Cousins & Co Ltd v D. & C. Carriers Ltd [1971] 2 Q.B. 230.
- 830.  Petrofina (UK) Ltd v Magnaload Ltd [1984] Q.B. 127; Stone Vickers Ltd v Appledore Ferguson Shipbuilders Ltd [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 288; reversed on appeal, however, on the basis that, as a matter of construction, the sub-contractor was not intended to be covered by the policy: [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 578; National Oil Wells (UK) Ltd v Davy Offshore Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 582. cf. Woodside Petroleum Development Pty Ltd v H & R-E & W Pty Ltd (1999) 20 W.A.R. 380 Full Ct, WA; Cape Distribution Ltd v Cape Intermediate Holdings Plc [2016] EWHC 1786 (QB). The corollary is that the insurer may exercise rights of subrogation against a co-assured where the co-assured is not entitled to cover under the policy, subject to any express or implied terms in the policy and subject to the terms of any contract between the co-assureds: In Rathbone Brothers Plc v Novae Corporate Underwriting [2013] EWHC 3457 (Comm), [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 203, reversed [2014] EWCA Civ 1464, [2015] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 95. See also Gard Marine & Energy Ltd v China National Chartering Co Ltd [2017] UKSC 35, [2017] 1 W.L.R. 1793 at [109]–[126], [131]–[146]; contra at [48]–[57], [89], [99]–[103].
- 831. Tyco Fire & Integrated Solutions (UK) Ltd v Rolls-Royce Motor Cars Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 286, [2008] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 584. See, however, Ward, "Joint names insurance and contracts to insure: untangling the threads" [2009] L.M.C.L.Q. 239, 242–245. See also Gard Marine & Energy Ltd v China National Chartering Co Ltd (The Ocean Victory) [2013] EWHC 2199, [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 59 at [199]–[204], reversed [2015] EWCA Civ 16, [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 381.
- 832.  Mark Rowlands Ltd v Berni Inns Ltd [1986] Q.B. 211; Fresca-Judd v Golovina [2016] EWHC 497 (QB), [2016] 4 W.L.R. 107. cf. Woolwich Building Society v Brown [1996] C.L.C. 625, where it was held that an insurer who had paid the assured building society under a mortgage indemnity insurance was entitled, by way of subrogation, to sue the defaulting mortgagor in the name of the building society, since the insurance against the mortgagor's non-payment was not for the joint benefit of mortgagee and mortgagor in the relevant sense contemplated in the Rowlands case. The Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999 may well improve the position of the beneficiary.
- 833. If, therefore, an assured has himself sued to recover his uninsured losses from a tortfeasor, the insurer may not thereafter bring a separate action in the name of the assured for the balance of the claim: see Buckland v Palmer [1964] 1 W.L.R. 1109. The CA in that case did contemplate circumstances where an insurer might be able to pursue the rest of the claim by resurrecting the assured's original action; but it seems this will rarely be permitted: see Hayler v Chapman [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 490 CA.
- 834. Symons v Mulkern (1882) 46 L.T. 763; Dickensen v Jardine (1868) L.R. 3 C.P. 639, 644; cf. Oriental Fire and General Insurance Co Ltd v American President Lines Ltd [1968] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 372; Smith (Plant Hire) Ltd v DL Mainwaring [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 244.
- 835. Cia Columbiana de Seguros v Pacific Steam Navigation [1965] 1 Q.B. 101.

- 836. Duus Brown v Binning (1906) 11 Com. Cas. 190; Edwards v Motor Union [1922] 2 K.B. 249, 254. But cf. Morris v Ford Motor Co Ltd [1973] Q.B. 792.
- 837. Commercial Union v Lister (1874) L.R. 9 Ch. 483. cf. Page v Scottish Insurance (1929) 140 L.T. 571, 576.
- 838. Assicurazioni v Express Assurance [1907] 2 K.B. 814. Such expenses may be deducted only if the recoveries were made after the insurance proceeds were paid, when the insurer's rights of subrogation crystallise. It does not matter that such expenses were incurred in unsuccessful litigation, provided that they were reasonably spent: England v Guardian Insurance Ltd [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 481.
- 839. Law, Fire v Oakley (1888) 4 T.L.R. 309. Most contracts of insurance contain express provisions giving the insurer the right to conduct proceedings, etc.
- 840. Lonrho Exports Ltd v Export Credit Guarantee Department [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 649, 661–663; cf. Lord Napier and Ettrick v Kershaw [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 197.
- 841. The question whether this duty extends to the insurer's right of contribution was not decided in O'Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 389 at [252]–[253].
- 842. West of England v Isaacs [1897] 1 Q.B. 226; affirming [1896] 2 Q.B. 377; Phoenix Assurance v Spooner [1905] 2 K.B. 753; Horse, Carriage and General v Petch (1916) 33 T.L.R. 131; Boag v Standard Marine [1937] 2 K.B. 113; Faircharm Investments Ltd v Citibank International Plc [1998] Lloyd's Rep. Bank 127. In BUPA Australia Pty Ltd v Shaw [2013] VSC 507, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 151 (Sup Ct Victoria), the Court ordered equitable compensation to the insurer for breach of the assured's obligation. In the United States it has been held that where the third party knows that the assured has been paid by the insurers, a release of the assured's rights is void as being a fraud on the insurers. See, for example, Monmouth County Fire v Hutchinson (1870) 21 N.J.Eq. 107.
- 843. See Boag v Standard Marine [1937] 2 K.B. 113, 124; Canadian Transport v Court Line [1940] A.C. 934. Sed quaere. Failure to disclose that the assured is accustomed to make such contracts may amount to non-disclosure: Tate v Hyslop (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 368, 377. cf. Marc Rich & Co AG v Portman [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 430, 440; affirmed [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 225.
- 844. Godin v London Assurance (1758) 1 Burr. 489; Newby v Reed (1763) 1 Wm.Bl. 416; Rogers v Davis (1777) 2 Park (8th edn) 601; North British v London, Liverpool and Globe (1877) 5 Ch. D. 569, 583, 587. In cases of "valued" policies the order in which the claims are made may affect the amount finally recoverable: see Bruce v Jones (1863) 1 H. & C. 769. See also Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.32.
- 845. See above, para.42-106.
- 846. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.32(1)(d).
- 847. See above, para.42-014, and Hebdon v West (1863) 3 B. & S. 579; Simcock v Scottish Imperial (1902) 10 S.L.T. 286.
- 848. American Surety Co v Wrightson (1910) 27 T.L.R. 91, 93. The right of contribution may also arise under s.80 of the Marine Insurance Act 1906. As to the availability of a contribution under the Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978, see O'Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 389 at [188]; Greene Wood & McClean LLP v Templeton Insurance Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 65, [2009] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 505, [2010] EWHC 2679 (Comm), [2011] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 557. cf. Bovis Construction Ltd v Commercial Union Assurance Co Plc [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 416.
- 849. Newby v Reed (1763) 1 Wm.Bl. 416; North British v London, Liverpool and Globe (1877) 5 Ch. D. 569; Sickness and Accident v General Accident (1892) 19 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 977; American Surety Co v Wrightson (1910) 27 T.L.R. 91, 93; Commercial Union Assurance Co v Hayden

- [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1. See Mitchell, The Law of Contribution and Reimbursement (2003). In International Energy Group Ltd v Zurich Insurance Plc [2015] UKSC 33, [2015] 2 W.L.R. 1471, the Supreme Court held that there may be rights of contribution between insurers insuring different periods of time, in respect of the same loss ([58]–[64]).
850. Woods v Co-operative Insurance, 1924 S.C. 692; Jenkins v Deane (1933) 103 L.J.K.B. 250; Monksfield v Vehicle and General Insurance Co Ltd [1971] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 139. In Legal and General Assurance Society Ltd v Drake Insurance Co Ltd [1992] Q.B. 887, a majority of the Court of Appeal (Ralph Gibson L.J. dissenting) overruled the Monksfield case, expressing the view that, provided the second policy was in force at the time of the loss, an insurer could obtain contribution from the second insurer even if the assured would no longer have been able to claim on that second policy himself (because of a failure to notify the claim in accordance with a condition precedent to liability under the policy). See now, however, Eagle Star Insurance Co v Provincial Insurance Plc [1993] 3 All E.R. 1, where the Privy Council (in applying the principle of contribution to a case where both insurers were statutorily liable to a third party) disapproved Legal and General v Drake Insurance. The decision in Legal and General stands as binding precedent, subject to any contrary decision of the House of Lords and, in any event, is to be preferred, because its reasoning rests on an analysis of a right to contribution which is consistent with the liability of the insurer to the assured. See O'Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 389 at [196]–[203].
851. Scottish Amicable v Northern Assurance (1883) 11 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 287; Nichols v Scottish Union (1885) 2 T.L.R. 190; Portavon Cinema v Price (1939) 161 L.T. 417.
852. North British v London Liverpool and Globe (1877) 5 Ch. D. 569; American Surety Co v Wrightson (1910) 27 T.L.R. 91; Boag v Standard Marine [1937] 2 K.B. 113.
853. American Surety Co v Wrightson, above.
854. Legal and General Assurance Society Ltd v Drake Insurance Co Ltd [1992] Q.B. 887, 892; O'Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 389; contra Eagle Star Insurance Co Ltd v Provincial Insurance Plc [1994] 1 A.C. 130. See also Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.80. Accordingly, if after the occurrence of an insured loss, one insurer agreed with the assured that their insurance contract be cancelled, that cancellation would be ineffective to deprive the other insurer of his right of contribution, even though the cancellation would be effective to deprive the assured of any rights against the insurer under the cancelled contract (O'Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 389). The position will be different in the event that one of the insurance contracts has been avoided for a breach of the duty of the utmost good faith, in which case the other insurer will have no right of contribution (Legal and General Assurance Society Ltd v Drake Insurance Co Ltd, above). cf. Bolton MBC v Municipal Mutual Insurance Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 50, [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 173, [42].
855. See North British v London, Liverpool and Globe (1877) 5 Ch. D. 569.
856. Weddell v Road Transport & General Insurance Co Ltd [1932] 2 K.B. 563. The position is more complex where one policy contains an "other insurance" exclusion and the other policy contains a rateable proportion clause: National Farmers Union Mutual Insurance Society Ltd v HSBC Insurance (UK) Ltd [2010] EWHC 773 (Comm), [2011] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 86. See above, para.42-108.
857. Drake Insurance Plc v Provident Insurance Plc [2003] EWCA Civ 1834, [2004] Q.B. 601, doubting Legal and General Assurance Society Ltd v Drake Insurance Co Ltd, above (holding that, because the insurer who pays the entirety of the loss is legally liable to the assured to pay only its due proportion, the payment as to the balance is a voluntary payment made without legal obligation, and therefore outside the scope of the equitable doctrine of contribution).
858. The two most acceptable methods are: (a) the independent liability method, which calculates the proportions by reference to the amounts for which each insurer would be liable to the assured under their respective policies for the particular loss; and (b) the maximum liability method, which calculates the proportions by reference to the maximum amounts for which each insurer would be liable to the assured for any loss under their respective policies. See Commercial Union Assurance Co Ltd v Hayden [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1; O'Kane v Jones [2003] EWHC 2158 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 389.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 42 - Insurance
Section 11. - Specific Types of Insurance Contract

Introduction

42-118

The principles so far discussed in ss.1–10 above are applicable to contracts of insurance in general. Below are outlined the peculiar features of the specific types of insurance contract most commonly encountered. The reader should consult the specialist books referred to in the footnotes for more detailed consideration of these features and the problems to which they give rise.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 42 - Insurance
Section 11. - Specific Types of Insurance Contract
(a) - Liability Insurance ⁸⁵⁹

General characteristics

42-119

⚠ Under contracts of liability insurance, the insurer undertakes to indemnify the assured against legal liability to third persons. Proof of liability is usually a condition precedent to the assured's right to recover, but proof of payment to the third party is not required in the absence of a stipulation to that effect. ⁸⁶⁰ Detailed provisions usually give the insurer the right to contest or to compromise the assured's liability, ⁸⁶¹ since otherwise the insurer cannot use his ordinary rights of subrogation without first paying the assured the full amount of his estimated loss. ⁸⁶² The terms of the policy usually indemnify the assured against the costs of his defence. ⁸⁶³ Often liability insurance excludes contractual as opposed to tortious liability, and it may be that even where both exist in respect of the same damage to the same person, the insurer is protected. ⁸⁶⁴ ⚠ However, if a policy covers an assured against all sums which he may become liable at law to pay as damages, the natural and ordinary meaning of "liable at law" includes contractual liability. ⁸⁶⁵ "Liability" for these purposes exists when it has been established by judgment, award or agreement. ⁸⁶⁶ The establishment of loss by a judgment or settlement does not automatically establish the existence or basis of such legal liability; it is still open to the insurer to challenge that there was an actual legal liability, in which case it is for the assured to prove that there was such an actual legal liability. ⁸⁶⁷ The actual cause of the liability must be established in order to determine whether the liability falls within the insured perils of the policy; the manner in which the claim is brought against the assured is not determinative. ⁸⁶⁸ Liability policies place much importance on notification provisions, by which the assured will inform the insurer either of a claim or a circumstance which might give rise to a claim. The purpose of such provisions is to give the insurer the opportunity to investigate the claim or require the assured to defend the claim. It also serves as a mechanism to attach the policy under which notice was given to a claim arising subsequently to the expiry of the policy. ⁸⁶⁹

Employers' liability

42-120

⚠ The Employers' Liability (Compulsory Insurance) Act 1969 requires employers ⁸⁷⁰ carrying on business in the United Kingdom to maintain insurance against liability for bodily injury or disease sustained by their employees. ⁸⁷¹ The 1969 Act requires employers to take out an "approved policy" against such liability. Regulations ⁸⁷² made under this Act prescribe the amount of insurance required, make provision for the issue of insurance certificates and their display at places of work and have extended the requirement to insure so as to protect employees who are only temporarily in this country. The Regulations prohibit certain conditions being included in the policy which would otherwise entitle the insurer to be discharged from liability in the event of breach. ⁸⁷³ ⚠ The Act does not impose any civil liability upon an employing company or its directors, for the consequences of a failure to insure. ⁸⁷⁴ ⚠

Statutory assignment

42-121

⚠ The Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Act 1930 enables the third party, in the event of the insolvency of the assured, ⁸⁷⁵ to claim against the insurer; but the third party cannot proceed directly against the insurer until the existence and extent of the liability of the assured has been ascertained by judgment or agreement. ⁸⁷⁶ If two or more third party claimants obtain judgments against an insolvent assured, their respective statutory rights to claim directly from his insurer take effect in the order in which the extent of the assured's liability to the third parties was ascertained: there is no mechanism, either under the general law or under the Act, to enable rateable division of the proceeds of the insurance policy between the third party claimants, except where their judgments are simultaneous. ⁸⁷⁷ The third party can have no better right against the insurer than the assured had, and the insurer is entitled to raise against the third party any defence under the contract which he could have raised against the assured. ⁸⁷⁸ ⚠ The parties cannot effectively contract out of the Act by purporting, directly or indirectly, to avoid the insurance or to alter the rights of the parties under it on insolvency ⁸⁷⁹; nor can the rights of the third party be defeated by an agreement made between the insurer and the insolvent assured after the liability has been incurred to the third party. ⁸⁸⁰ The cause of action under the Act will become time-barred unless the third party, himself, commences proceedings within six years of the assured's cause of action against the insurer having accrued; and this is so even if the assured has already commenced proceedings against the insurer within the limitation period. ⁸⁸¹

The Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Act 2010

42-122

⚠ The 1930 Act is soon to be replaced by the Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Act 2010. ⁸⁸² The 2010 Act entered into force on August 1, 2016. ⁸⁸³ ⚠ Under s.1(2) of the 2010 Act, the insured's rights under a contract of liability insurance are transferred to a third party claimant where the insured is insolvent and is liable to that third party, and where either the liability was incurred or the insolvency took place after the Act's commencement. The rights are transferred only up to the limits of the insurance contract. ⁸⁸⁴ The Act applies irrespective of any connection with the United Kingdom. ⁸⁸⁵ Subject to the insurer's own insolvency, the third party cannot enforce the insured's liability against the insured to the extent that the insured's rights under the insurance contract are transferred to the third party. ⁸⁸⁶ The insurer is entitled to exercise rights of set off with respect to the insured's liability. ⁸⁸⁷ By s.9(2), conditions in the insurance policy may be performed by the third party claimant. By s.9(5), the transfer of rights under the policy is not subject to a condition requiring prior discharge by the insured of the insured's liability to the third party claimant. ⁸⁸⁸ Accordingly, "pay to be paid" clauses cannot be relied on by the insurer in answer to a claim under the 2010 Act. By s.17, provisions which purport to terminate the policy on the insured's insolvency are ineffective. The 2010 Act permits the third party claimant to institute proceedings against the insurer seeking a declaration as to the insurer's liability to the insured or the insured's liability to the third party, before the insured's liability to the third party is established by judgment, award or agreement even if there is a dispute as to whether the third party claim, if proved and established, falls within the scope of cover afforded by the policy. ⁸⁸⁹ ⚠ However, any such declaration cannot be enforced prior to the establishment of the insured's liability. In such proceedings, the insurer can rely on any defence available to the insured. ⁸⁹⁰ The 2010 Act contains extensive provisions as to the third party claimant's rights to information concerning the insurance policy and claims made thereunder. ⁸⁹¹

⁸⁵⁹. See Legh-Jones, MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), Ch.30; Clarke, The Law of Insurance Contracts, 6th edn (2009), s.17-4; Simpson, Professional Negligence and Liability (Informa).

- 860. Johnston v Salvage Association (1887) 19 Q.B.D. 458, 460; Lancashire Insurance v IRC [1899] 1 Q.B. 353, 359; Brice v Wackerbarth [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 274.
- 861. As to the effect of clauses requiring the insurer's consent to any settlement of the assured's liability and/or prohibiting admissions of liability, see Gan Insurance Co Ltd v Tai Ping Insurance Co Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1042, [2001] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 291; Beazley Underwriting Ltd v Al Ahleia Insurance Co [2013] EWHC 677 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 561.
- 862. See above, para.42-115.
- 863. See, e.g. Forney v Dominion Insurance Co Ltd [1969] 1 W.L.R. 928. As to cases where defence costs are incurred in respect of both an insured liability and a non-insured liability, see New Zealand Forest Products Ltd v New Zealand Insurance Co Ltd [1997] 1 W.L.R. 1237; John Wyeth & Brothers Ltd v Cigna Insurance Co of Europe SA/NV [2001] EWCA Civ 175, [2001] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 420, 454. In the absence of a contractual provision providing such cover, there is no entitlement to defence costs under a liability insurance policy: Astrazeneca Insurance Co Ltd v XL Insurance (Bermuda) Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1660, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 509.
- 864.  See Dominion Bridge Co v Toronto General, 32 D.L.R. (2d) 374 (1962). See also Foundation of Canada Engineering Corp Ltd v Canadian Indemnity Co [1977] 2 W.W.R. 75 Can. In Cape Distribution Ltd v Cape Intermediate Holdings Plc [2016] EWHC 1786 (QB), [2017] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 1 at [161]–[163] the Court held that the contractual liability exclusion applied only to claims which could be made only in contract.
- 865. Aswan Engineering Establishment Co Ltd v Iron Trades Mutual Insurance Co Ltd [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 289. cf. Smit Tak Offshore Services v Youell [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 154; Tesco Stores Ltd v Constable [2007] EWHC 2088 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 302, [26], [30]–[31], [2008] EWCA Civ 362, [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 636 (where it was held that a public liability policy did not cover contractual liability); MJ Gleeson Group Plc v Axa Corporate Solutions Assurance SA [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 677. If the policy insures against the assured's legal liability to pay "as damages" to third parties, this suggests that compensation must be payable by reason of the assured's wrongdoing: Bartoline Ltd v Royal & Sun Alliance Insurance Plc [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 423; and a claim for restitution may not be covered: Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co v Youell [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 136, 141. Certain types of liability policies may be subject to certain restrictions if not prohibition. As regards "directors and officers" liability insurance, see Companies Act 2006 ss.232–234.
- 866. Post Office v Norwich Union Fire Insurance Society [1967] 2 Q.B. 363; Bradley v Eagle Star [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 465; Yorkshire Water v Sun Alliance & London Insurance Ltd [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 21. In Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Co v Bovis Lend Lease Ltd [2004] EWHC 2197 (Comm), [2005] Lloyd's Rep. 74, the court held that a liability will not be established by a settlement agreement where that settlement agreement does not identify the specific cost of discharging the liability in question. Accordingly, where under a global settlement agreement, the assured agreed to receive, not pay, a single sum in settlement of all claims and counterclaims, the assured's liability for the counterclaims was held not to have been established and extrinsic evidence could not be adduced for that purpose. This proposition is questionable. The decision in Lumbermens was subjected to a disapproving critique in Enterprise Oil Ltd v Strand Insurance Co Ltd [2006] EWHC 58 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 500 at [150]–[175]; AIG Europe (Ireland) Ltd v Faraday Capital Ltd [2006] EWHC 2707, [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 267 at [69]–[71]; reversed on other grounds [2007] EWCA Civ 1208, [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 454. If the assured settles a claim made against him, it may be open to the insurer to defend the claim under the policy on the ground that there had been no legal liability: Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co v Youell [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 136; Beazley Underwriting Ltd v Travelers Companies Inc [2011] EWHC 1520 (Comm), [2012] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 78; cf. Commercial Union Assurance Co Plc v NRG Victory Reinsurance Ltd [1998] 2 All E.R. 434 (reinsurance).
- 867. Astrazeneca Insurance Co Ltd v XL Insurance (Bermuda) Ltd [2013] EWHC 349 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 290 at [38]–[39], [96]; affirmed [2013] EWCA Civ 1660, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 509.

- 868. West Wake Price & Co v Ching [1957] 1 W.L.R. 45; Thornton Springer v NEM Insurance Co Ltd [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 486. This is so, even if the policy uses the word “alleging” in order to describe the insured peril (MDIS Ltd v Swinbank [1999] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 516), although it will always be a question of construction. As to the effect of a judgment obtained by a claimant against the assured, see Omega Proteins Ltd v Aspen Insurance UK Ltd [2010] EWHC 2280 (Comm), [2011] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 183; cf. London Borough of Redbridge v Municipal Mutual Insurance Ltd [2001] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 545, 550–551; cf. Cheltenham & Gloucester Plc v Sun Alliance and London Insurance Plc Unreported May 30, 2001 Inner House, Ct of Sess; cf. Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada v Lincoln National Life Insurance Co [2004] EWCA Civ 1660, [2005] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 606.
- 869. HLB Kidsons v Lloyd’s Underwriters [2007] EWHC 1951 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 237 at [22]–[23], [2008] EWCA Civ 1206, [2009] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 8.
- 870. s.3 exempts certain employers such as state corporations and local government authorities.
- 871. s.2 excludes from the definition of “employee” persons who are employed by close relatives. As to the boundary between the 1969 Act and the Road Traffic Act 1988 s.145(4A), see AXA Insurance UK Plc v Norwich Union Insurance Ltd [2007] EWHC 1046 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 122. As to the insurance of the employers’ liability for exposing an employee to the risk of harm from asbestos, see International Energy Group Ltd v Zurich Insurance Plc UK [2013] EWCA Civ 39, [2013] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 379 reversed in part [2015] UKSC 33, [2015] 2 W.L.R. 1471; BAI (Run Off) Ltd v Durham [2012] UKSC 14, [2012] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 371.
- 872. Employers’ Liability (Compulsory Insurance) Regulations 1998 (SI 1998/2573, amended SI 2004/2882). As to reg.3, see R (on the application of Geologistics Ltd) v Financial Services Compensation Scheme [2003] EWCA Civ 1877, [2004] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 336 at [20]–[22].
- 873.  reg.2. See Amlin UK Ltd v Geo-Rope Ltd [2016] CSOH 165, [2017] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 277.
- 874.  Richardson v Pitt-Stanley [1995] Q.B. 123; Campbell v Gordon [2016] UKSC 38, [2016] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 591. The Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999 may grant rights of recourse to third parties in so far as they are contemplated by the insurance contract. See Amlin UK Ltd v Geo-Rope Ltd [2016] CSOH 165, [2017] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 277 at [25]–[27].
- 875. Re Compania Merabello San Nicholas SA [1973] Ch. 75.
- 876. Post Office v Norwich Union Fire [1967] 2 Q.B. 363. Although doubts have occasionally been expressed about the reason for this requirement (see, e.g. Poclain SA v SCAC SA [1986] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 404, 407), it has been affirmed by the House of Lords: see Bradley v Eagle Star [1989] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 465. See also Sea Voyager Maritime Inc v Bielecki [1999] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 356; William McIlroy (Swindon) Ltd v Quinn Insurance Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 825, [2012] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 241. As to the nature of the liability to which the Act applies, see T & N Ltd (in administration) v Royal & Sun Alliance Plc [2003] EWHC 1016 (Ch), [2004] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 106; In the matter of OT Computers Ltd (in administration) [2004] EWCA Civ 653, [2004] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 331; Freakley v Centre Reinsurance International Co [2005] EWCA Civ 115, [2005] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 303.
- 877. Cox v Bankside Members’ Agency Ltd [1995] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 437; Cox v Deeny [1996] L.R.L.R. 288, 299; Teal Assurance Co Ltd v WR Berkley Insurance (Europe) Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 1570, [2012] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 315, [2013] UKSC 57, [2014] Lloyd’s Rep. I.R. 56.
- 878.  Farrell v Federated Employers’ Assurance Association [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1400; CVG Siderurgica de Orinoco SA v London Mutual Steamship Owners Assn Ltd (The Vainqueur José) [1979] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 557; Socony Mobil Oil Inc v West of England Shipowners Mutual Assurance (The Padré Island) [1984] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 408; Pioneer Concrete (UK) Ltd v National Employers’ Mutual General Insurance [1985] 2 All E.R. 395; Centre Reinsurance International Co v Curzon Insurance Ltd [2004] EWHC 200 (Ch), [2004] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 28. As to the availability of a set off to the insurer in respect of the insurer’s claims against the assured, see the conflicting decisions in McCormick v National Motor and Accident (1934) 40 Com. Cas. 76; Murray v Legal and General Assurance Society [1970] 2 Q.B. 495; Cox v Bankside Members Agency Ltd [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 437, 451; Denso Manufacturing UK Ltd v Great Lakes Reinsurance (UK) Plc [2017] EWHC 391 (Comm), [2017] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 240 at [142]–[152]. For the position as regards motor insurance (see below, para.42-123) and public policy (see above, para.42-023), see Charlton v Fisher [2001] EWCA Civ 112, [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 769.

- 879. s.1(3). See also, s.2(1). An insurance containing a clause requiring the assured to have paid the third party before he becomes entitled to an indemnity under the insurance does not fall foul of s.1(3)—even though its effect is to prevent the third party having a cause of action against the insurer on the assured's insolvency—since such a clause does not avoid the policy or alter the rights of the parties under it: Firma C-Trade SA v Newcastle Protection and Indemnity Association [1991] 2 A.C. 1.
- 880. s.3.
- 881. Lefevre v White [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 569.
- 882. Amendments have been made to the 2010 Act by the Insurance Act 2015 ss.19-20 and Sch.2.
- 883.  Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Act 2010 (Commencement) Order 2016 (SI 2016/550). See also Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Regulations 2016 (SI 2016/570).
- 884. s.8.
- 885. s.18.
- 886. s.14.
- 887. s.10. Though note International Energy Group Ltd v Zurich Insurance Plc [2015] UKSC 33, [2015] 2 W.L.R. 1471, [93], [97].
- 888. Although this is subject to an exception in respect of claims under a marine insurance policy other than in respect of death or personal injury: s.9(6).
- 889.  BAE Systems Pension Funds Trustees Ltd v Royal & Sun Alliance Insurance Plc [2017] EWHC 2082 (TCC) at [15]–[24].
- 890. s.1(3)-(4), 2(2)-(4). As to time bar defences, see ss.2(5) and 12.
- 891. s.11 and Sch.1.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 42 - Insurance
Section 11. - Specific Types of Insurance Contract
(b) - Motor Insurance ⁸⁹²

Road Traffic Act 1988

42-123

⚠ The Road Traffic Act 1988 ⁸⁹³ requires persons who control ⁸⁹⁴ the use ⁸⁹⁵ ⚠ of motor vehicles on the road or other public place ⁸⁹⁶ ⚠ to maintain insurance ⁸⁹⁷ against liability for death or injury to third parties (including passengers ⁸⁹⁸ in the vehicle) arising out of such use ⁸⁹⁹ and also against the liability (imposed by the Act) ⁹⁰⁰ to pay for emergency medical treatment for injuries (including fatal injuries) arising out of such use. With effect from December 31, 1988, insurance against liability for damage to the property of a third party has also been compulsory. ⁹⁰¹ The Act does not require the personal liability of everyone using the vehicle to be covered so long as the insurance covers the use by the person in question ⁹⁰²; thus an insurance by an employer which covers his liability for use by his employees is sufficient, ⁹⁰³ though if the insurance specifies the persons or classes of persons who are covered, such persons are given a statutory right to seek indemnity from the insurer, although not strictly parties to the contract of insurance. ⁹⁰⁴ The Act does not require insurance, inter alia, against contractual liability, against liability for death or injury sustained by persons in the employment of a person insured in accordance with the foregoing requirements, where the injury arises out of and in the course of that employment, or against damage to the vehicle insured; or cover in excess of £1,000,000 in respect of property damage arising out of any one accident. ⁹⁰⁵ An insurance is ineffective for the purposes of the Act unless a certificate of insurance in prescribed form is delivered by the insurer to the assured. ⁹⁰⁶ Failure to insure in accordance with the statutory requirements not only constitutes a criminal offence ⁹⁰⁷ but also a breach of a statutory duty which may give rise to liability in damages to persons thereby prejudiced. ⁹⁰⁸

Rights of third parties

42-124

⚠ The Act entitles the third party to make a direct claim upon the insurer upon obtaining judgment against the person insured, ⁹⁰⁹ ⚠ so long as notice ⁹¹⁰ of the bringing of proceedings has been given to the insurer before or within seven days after their commencement and there has been no stay of execution pending an appeal. ⁹¹¹ In order that the third party may make a direct claim against the insurer, the assured's liability to the third party must be covered by the terms of the policy. ⁹¹² This right is not available, however, if before the event giving rise to the death, injury or damage the insurance was cancelled (and the certificate dealt with in accordance with the Act) ⁹¹³ or if the insurer in an action commenced before or within three months ⁹¹⁴ of the commencement of the action by this third party has obtained a declaration that he is entitled (apart from any provision in the insurance) to avoid the insurance for non-disclosure or misrepresentation. ⁹¹⁵ In addition to the foregoing, the Act renders ineffective any provisions of the insurance restricting the cover by reference to such matters as the characteristics of the vehicle or the driver, ⁹¹⁶ though the insurer can recover from the person insured any payments made to third parties which but for the provision he would not have been obliged to make. Similarly provisions relieving the insurer by reason of some act or omission after the event giving rise to a claim under the insurance are ineffective ⁹¹⁷ as are other rights to avoid or cancel the insurance unless falling within the qualifications to the rights of the third party outlined above. ⁹¹⁸ Finally, it should be noted that the Act also renders ineffective any prior agreement or understanding between the user of a vehicle and a passenger whereby the liability of the user is restricted or excluded or the enforcement of such liability is made subject to conditions. ⁹¹⁹ European Council Directives ⁹²⁰ require Member States to ensure that insurance coverage exists for civil liability for personal injuries and property damage arising as a result of the use of motor vehicles. The intention of the Directives is to ensure that the victims of motor accidents are able to prosecute and establish their claims in comparable ways in each Member State. ⁹²¹ By the European Communities (Rights against Insurers) Regulations 2002, ⁹²² where a person has a cause of action in tort against a person insured under a policy complying with s.145 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 arising out of an accident involving the insured vehicle, the claimant may, without prejudice to his right against the insured person, issue proceedings directly against the insurer immediately and the insurer shall be liable to the claimant to the extent that he is liable to the insured person.

Third parties and uninsured drivers

42-125

❗ In 1945 the Motor Insurers' Bureau (MIB) entered into an agreement with the Minister of Transport under which the MIB undertook (subject to the terms of the agreement) to satisfy any judgment in respect of a liability compulsorily insurable under the Act against any person or persons and whether or not covered by a contract of insurance, where the judgment was not satisfied in full within seven days from the date when it became enforceable. The current agreement dated August 13, 1999 (and called "Compensation of Victims of Uninsured Drivers"), is between the MIB and the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, and applies to claims arising on or after October 1, 1999. It is effectively based upon the original 1945 agreement, with subsequent agreements in 1946, 1971, 1972 and 1988. A more complex scheme (first introduced in 1969) covers the position of untraced drivers. This is now governed by the Untraced Drivers Agreement dated February 14, 2003, the immediate predecessor to which was the 1996 Agreement. The MIB's liability under the 2003 Agreement is dependent on establishing that the untraced driver would have been liable to the victim and that that liability is of a kind required to be covered by compulsory insurance under the Road Traffic Act 1988. ⁹²³ The MIB and the Secretary of State entered into supplementary agreements dated November 7, 2008 in respect of uninsured drivers and dated December 30, 2008,

April 15, 2011 and April 30, 2013 in respect of untraced drivers. ⁹²⁴ ❗ It is the publicly declared policy of the MIB not to take the point that there is no privity of contract between the MIB and persons seeking to enforce the undertaking of the MIB. ⁹²⁵ If the claimant knew or "ought to have known" that the driver was uninsured, the MIB will not be liable. ⁹²⁶ Further, the liability of the MIB is subject to the following principal conditions precedent ⁹²⁷: that notice of bringing, or intention to bring, legal proceedings against an insured person is given to the MIB before or within 14 days after the commencement or seven days after the service or notification of the proceedings ⁹²⁸; that the MIB is supplied with any information it reasonably requires; that the claimant has demanded relevant information from the relevant driver in accordance with s.154 of the Road Traffic Act 1988; that (if required to do so by the MIB) the claimant take steps to obtain judgment against all responsible tortfeasors; and that any judgments obtained should be assigned to the MIB. The liability of the MIB is not affected by the fact that the uninsured motorist deliberately injured the person seeking recovery.

⁹²⁹

⁸⁹². See Legh-Jones, MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), Ch.31.

⁸⁹³. Replacing the Road Traffic Act 1972, as amended by (inter alia) the Motor Vehicle (Compulsory Insurance) (No.2) Amendment Regulations 1973 (SI 1973/2143); SI 1974/791 (extending compulsory motor-vehicle insurance to cover liabilities arising out of use in other European Community countries); and the Motor Vehicles (Compulsory Insurance) Regulations 1987 (SI 1987/2171) (extending compulsory insurance to cover liability for damage to the property of a third party); and the Motor Vehicles (Compulsory Insurance) Regulations 1992 (SI 1992/3036)

(ensuring that cover extends to the entire Community and affords cover no less than the law required than by the relevant Member States). The 1973, 1985 and 1992 Regulations each seek to implement EC Directives 72/166, 85/5 and 90/232. The 1988 Act came into force (subject to the transitory provisions in Sch.5 to the Road Traffic (Consequential Provisions) Act 1988) on May 15, 1989: see Road Traffic Act 1988 s.197.

894. See Monk v Warbey [1935] 1 K.B. 75, 80; Lloyd v Singleton [1953] 1 Q.B. 357; Kelly v Cornhill Insurance [1964] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1; Newbury v Davis [1974] R.T.R. 367.

895.  "Use" connotes control, management or operation: Brown v Roberts [1965] 1 Q.B. 1; and has been held to include the owner of a parked vehicle which owing to its condition could only be moved and not driven: Elliott v Grey [1960] 1 Q.B. 367; but there is no use if the vehicle is completely immovable: Thomas v Hooper [1986] R.T.R. 1. In UK Insurance Ltd v Holden [2017] EWCA Civ 259, [2017] 3 W.L.R. 450 at [68]–[69], the Court of Appeal held that the repair of a car, which the owner was driving but due to disrepair could not be lawfully and safely driven, and which the owner wished to effect as soon as possible in order to be able to drive the car lawfully and safely, was "use" of the car. See also: Leathley v Tatton [1980] R.T.R. 21; B (A Minor) v Knight [1981] R.T.R. 136; Stinton v Stinton [1995] R.T.R. 167; Hatton v Hall [1997] R.T.R. 212. In O'Mahoney v Joliffe [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 321, the Court of Appeal held that a pillion passenger on a motorcycle who had agreed on a joint venture to go for a drive was a "user" within the meaning of the 1972 Uninsured Drivers Agreement (see below, para.42-125) and that "user" had the same meaning under the 1988 Act. See Vnuk v Zavarovalnica Triglav dd (C-162/13) [2015] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 142. In Sahin v Havard [2016] EWCA Civ 1202, [2017] 1 W.L.R. 1853 at [20], the Court of Appeal held that permitting the use of a vehicle is not the same as using the vehicle such that the liability of someone who permits another to use a vehicle without an insurance policy is not a liability which is itself required to be insured under s.145 and is not therefore a liability which an insurer is obliged to satisfy under s.151.

896.  s.192(1); Lister v Romford Ice and Cold Storage Co [1957] A.C. 555. The House of Lords held that a car park was not a "road": Clarke v General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corp Plc [1998] 1 W.L.R. 1647. The legislation was amended to extend to "other public place" by the Motor Vehicles (Compulsory Insurance) Regulations 2000 (SI 2000/726). In UK Insurance Ltd v Holden [2016] EWHC 264 (QB), [2016] 4 W.L.R. 38; [2017] EWCA Civ 259, [2017] 3 W.L.R. 450 at [44], the Court held that a motor insurance policy might extend beyond roads, if there was no express limitation in the policy to use on roads. The Court also discussed whether "roads" under the Road Traffic Act 1988 s.145(3) meant "public roads".

897. See ss.144 and 146 for alternative schemes for deposits and securities and for the classes of persons exempted from the provisions of the Act.

898. See Farrell v Whitty (C-356/05) [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 525; Drozdovs v Baltikums AAS (C-277/12) [2014] R.T.R. 14; Haasová v Petrik (Note) (C-22/12) [2014] R.T.R. 15.

899. In Dunthorne v Bentley [1996] R.T.R. 428, the Court of Appeal held that the plaintiff's injuries were caused by the defendant who, having run out of petrol had left her car to seek assistance, ran in front of the plaintiff's car, and that the injuries arose out of the defendant's use of her vehicle. In Dodson v Peter H Dodson Insurance Services [2001] 1 W.L.R. 1012, a motor insurance policy was construed as continuing to provide an indemnity against the driver's liabilities even though the principal vehicle which had been insured under the policy had been sold. cf. Slater v Buckinghamshire CC [2004] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 432. In AXN v Worboys [2012] EWHC 1730 (QB), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 207 the Court held that the liability of an insured taxi driver who administered poison and carried out sexual assaults on his passengers did not arise out of the use of a motor vehicle on the road or other public place, because such acts broke the chain of causation.

900. See ss.157 and 158.

901. Road Traffic Act 1988 s.145(3)(a).

902. Ellis v Hinds [1947] K.B. 475; see also Baugh v Crago [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 563. Nor does it require cover in respect of liability to a person driving the vehicle: Cooper v MIB [1985] Q.B. 575

903. See n.846, above.

904. s.148(7); Tattersal v Drysdale [1935] 2 K.B. 174; Austin v Zurich [1945] 1 K.B. 250, 255.

905. Road Traffic Act 1988 s.145(4), as amended by the Motor Vehicles (Compulsory Insurance) Regulations 2007 (SI 2007/1426). As to the boundary between the Employers Liability (Compulsory Insurance) Act 1969 and the Road Traffic Act 1988 s.145(4A), see AXA Insurance UK Plc v Norwich Union Insurance Ltd [2007] EWHC 1046 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 122.

906. s.147.

907. s.143(2). The offence is an absolute one: Baugh v Crago [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 563.

908. Monk v Warbey [1935] 1 K.B. 75; Martin v Dean [1971] 2 Q.B. 208. In Norman v Aziz [2000] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 52, a civil right to damages for breach of s.143(1)(b) of the 1988 Act was held to exist in favour of a victim against the owner of a vehicle who allowed an uninsured driver to use that vehicle; the existence of the Motor Insurers Bureau uninsured drivers agreement (see below, para.42-124) and the relevant EC Directive had no effect on this cause of action. The defendant to a claim for damages for personal injury is not entitled to counterclaim for a breach of this statutory duty for purely economic losses in connection with the defendant's liability to the claimant, as opposed to the defendant's own injuries: Bretton v Hancock [2005] EWCA Civ 404, [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 454 at [42]-[50].

909.  This is so, even if the third party claimant has obtained judgment against the insured as an "unknown" or "unnamed" driver: Cameron v Hussain [2017] EWCA Civ 366, [2017] R.T.R. 23.

910. As to the requirements of the notice to be given, see Wylie v Wake [2001] P.I.Q.R. P. 186.

911. ss.151-152. With effect from December 31, 1988, an insurer is bound, subject to certain exceptions, to satisfy a judgment obtained even against a person not insured by the policy if it relates to a liability required to be covered: see Road Traffic Act 1988 s.151(2)(b). In Churchill Insurance Co Ltd v Fitzgerald [2012] EWCA Civ 1166, [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 137 the Court of Appeal considered s.151(8) of the Road Traffic Act 1988, by which the insurer is entitled to recover the amount of the judgment from the assured who caused or permitted the use of the vehicle which gave rise to the liability.

912. s.151(2)(a). In EUI Ltd v Bristol Alliance Ltd Partnership [2012] EWCA Civ 1267, [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 351 the Court of Appeal held that the third party could not recover from the motor insurer in circumstances where the damage to property to which the third party's claim related arose by reason of the assured's deliberate act, which was expressly excluded from cover under the motor policy. See also Stych v Dibble [2012] EWHC 1606 (QB), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 80; AXN v Worboys [2012] EWHC 1730 (QB), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 207.

913. s.152(1)(c).

914. If the insurer starts proceedings after the proceedings by the third party have been started, then to take advantage of this provision, he must give the claimant in the action by the third party notice specifying the non-disclosure or misrepresentation relied upon and (if required) make such claimant a party to his action: s.152(2); Cross v British Oak Insurance Co Ltd [1938] 2 K.B. 167; Zurich v Morrison [1942] 2 K.B. 53.

915. s.152(2), as amended by the Insurance Act 2015 s.21(4).

916. s.148.

917. s.148.

- 918. s.152. cf. Matadeen v Caribbean Insurance Co Ltd [2002] UKPC 69, [2003] 1 W.L.R. 670.
- 919. s.149.
- 920. Directives 72/166, 84/5, 88/357, 90/232, 2000/26 and 2005/14.
- 921. Criminal Proceedings against Ruiz Bernáldez (C-129/94) [1996] All E.R. (EC) 741.
- 922. SI 2002/3061.
- 923. Applicants for compensation under these agreements cannot rely on the doctrine of direct effect as against the MIB in the event that there is any shortfall in the cover provided by them (including issues of time limitation) as against the cover required to be legislated by the United Kingdom by the EC Directives, because the MIB is not an emanation of the state: Byrne v Motor Insurers Bureau [2007] EWHC 1268 (QB), [2007] 3 All E.R. 499 at [48]-[63] affirmed [2008] EWCA Civ 574, [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. Plus 30; cf. Evans v Motor Insurers' Bureau [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 30; Farrell v Whitty (C-356/05) [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 525 ECJ. However, Francovich damages might be recoverable from the Secretary of State for any failure to implement the Directive (Byrne v Motor Insurers Bureau [2007] EWHC 1268 (QB), [2007] 3 All E.R. 499 at [78] affirmed [2008] EWCA Civ 574, [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 705; Delaney v Secretary of State for Transport [2014] EWHC 1785 (QB), [2014] R.T.R. 25; cf. Moore v Secretary of State for Transport [2007] EWHC 879 (QB), [2007] P.I.Q.R. P24). Further, in Evans v Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions [2001] EWCA Civ 32, [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 1 at [4], the Court of Appeal indicated that the victim might have the right to enforce the Agreement pursuant to the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999. Clause 31(5) of the Untraced Drivers Agreement dated February 14, 2003, confirms that the Agreement is intended to benefit the victim. As to the level of compensation obtainable under the agreements, see Evans v Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (C-63/01) [2004] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 391 ECJ. As to the relationship between the MIB and the Secretary of State, see Sharp v Pereira [1999] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 242.
- 924.  In Moreno v Motor Insurers' Bureau [2016] UKSC 52, [2017] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 99 at [39], the Supreme Court held that the Motor Vehicles (Compulsory Insurance) (Information Centre and Compensation Body) Regulations 2003 (SI 2003/37) proceed on the basis that a victim's entitlement to compensation will be measured on a consistent basis, by reference to the law of the state of the accident, whichever of the routes to recovery provided by the Directives he or she invokes. In so doing, the Court overruled Jacobs v Motor Insurers' Bureau [2010] EWCA Civ 1208, [2011] 1 All E.R. 844. See also Wigley-Foster v Wilson [2016] EWCA Civ 454, [2016] 1 W.L.R. 4769.
- 925. Carswell v Secretary of State for Transport [2010] EWHC 3230 (QB), [2011] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 644, at [57]-[63]; cf. Hardy v Motor Insurers' Bureau [1964] 2 Q.B. 745; Gurtner v Circuit [1968] 2 Q.B. 587; Albert v Motor Insurers' Bureau [1972] A.C. 301; Persson v London Country Buses [1974] 1 W.L.R. 569; Porter v Addo [1978] R.T.R. 503; Phillips v Rafiq [2006] EWHC 1461 (QB) at [12]; affirmed [2007] EWCA Civ 74, [2007] 1 W.L.R. 1351.
- 926. In White v White [2001] UKHL 9, [2001] 1 W.L.R. 481, the House of Lords construed the words "ought to have known" by reference to Directive 84/5 and held that the agreement excused the MIB where the claimant actually knew or deliberately refrained from making inquiries, but not where the claimant's ignorance was occasioned by mere negligence or carelessness. cf. Delaney v Pickett [2011] EWCA Civ 1532 at [44]-[49], [67], [75]. In Pickett v Motor Insurers Bureau [2004] EWCA Civ 6, [2004] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 513, the Court of Appeal considered whether the MIB was liable under the 1988 Agreement where the claimant, who was also the owner of, but a passenger in, the vehicle, knew that the vehicle was uninsured. The court held that the claimant had not withdrawn her consent to be carried in the vehicle because she had not unambiguously required the vehicle to be stopped so that she could get out, thus permitting the MIB to rely on an exception to liability. The 1999 Agreement provides that the relevant knowledge is that of the claimant as opposed to the person suffering the relevant injury, whereas the 1988 Agreement applied the relevant exception to the knowledge of the person who suffered the injury. This distinction proved to be critical in Phillips v Rafiq [2006] EWHC

1461 (QB), [2007] EWCA Civ 74, [2007] 1 W.L.R. 1351, where the deceased's wife brought the proceedings and was entitled to maintain the claim against the MIB even though her husband was aware that the driver was uninsured. Where the third party claimant is himself an insured, see Churchill Insurance Co Ltd v Wilkinson [2010] EWCA Civ 556, [2010] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 591.

927. See the 1999 Agreement cl.9-5.

928. Where a policy of insurance actually exists, the claimant should notify the insurer within seven days of having commenced proceedings against the driver.

929. Hardy v Motor Insurers' Bureau [1964] 2 Q.B. 745; Gardner v Moore [1984] A.C. 548.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 42 - Insurance
Section 11. - Specific Types of Insurance Contract
(c) - Reinsurance ⁹³⁰

General characteristics

42-126

! An insurer may take out insurance in respect of the risk covered by the original insurance. ⁹³¹ Such a contract of reinsurance is quite separate from the underlying contract of insurance, ⁹³² so that there is no privity of contract between the insured and the reinsurer, ⁹³³ though the contract of reinsurance will often provide (by the use of general words such as “all terms, clauses and conditions as original”) for the terms and conditions of the underlying insurance to be incorporated into the reinsurance. The fact that the reinsurer and reassured intended the reinsurance cover to be “back-to-back” with the original direct insurance policy will be a persuasive aid to construing the scope of cover afforded by the reinsurance policy, ⁹³⁴ but it will not be sufficient to override a sufficiently explicit term of the reinsurance contract which alters or restricts the scope of cover compared to that afforded by the original policy. ⁹³⁵ ! In the event of an attempt so to incorporate the general terms and conditions of the underlying insurance, difficult questions may arise as to which of the terms are appropriate for incorporation, ⁹³⁶ and how to construe the terms if the contracts of insurance and reinsurance are governed by the laws of different countries. ⁹³⁷ The contract of reinsurance will also be governed by the same rules as apply to the underlying insurance, so that, for example, the duty of utmost good faith will apply so as to require the reinsured to disclose all material facts to the reinsurer and to make a fair and substantially accurate presentation of the risk, ⁹³⁸ and, if the underlying insurance is a marine policy, the reinsurance contract must itself be embodied in a policy in the form required by the Marine Insurance Act 1906. ⁹³⁹ The restrictions imposed by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (and the statutory instruments made thereunder) on the carrying on of insurance business apply to reinsurance. ⁹⁴⁰

Liability of the reinsurer

42-127

Subject to contrary stipulation, a reinsurer is only obliged to reimburse the reinsured if the latter was legally liable on the underlying insurance, ⁹⁴¹ so that the reinsurer may take against the reinsured all the defences which were available to the reinsured against the insured. ⁹⁴² If, however, the reinsured's liability has been established by judgment or award, that judgment or award will be evidence of that liability for the purposes of the reinsurance contract. The ascertainment of loss by a judgment or settlement does not automatically establish such actual legal liability or the basis of such liability; it is still open to the reinsurer to challenge that there was an actual legal liability, in which case it is for the reinsured to prove that there was such an actual legal liability. ⁹⁴³ Because of the impractical restriction which this places on the bona fide settlement of claims by the insured on the underlying policy, it is very common for reinsurance contracts to include a “follow the settlements” clause so as to make strict proof by the reinsured of his legal liability to the insured unnecessary. ⁹⁴⁴ The effect of such a clause is to bind the reinsurer to indemnify the reinsured in respect of a settlement made with the insured provided the claim as recognised by the reinsured falls within the risks covered by the reinsurance as a matter of law, and provided also the reinsured has acted honestly and taken all proper and businesslike steps in making the settlement.⁹⁴⁵ Moreover, the burden is upon the reinsurer to prove that one or other exception to its obligation to follow the reinsured's settlements is made out.⁹⁴⁶ It seems, however, that the inclusion of a "claims co-operation" clause in the reinsurance contract (providing that the reinsured should cooperate with the reinsurer and not make a settlement without the approval of the reinsurer)⁹⁴⁷ will effectively emasculate a "follow the settlements" clause, since it has been held that, as a matter of construction, the combined effect of the clauses is to require the reinsurer to follow only those settlements which the reinsurer has himself approved.⁹⁴⁸ In Hill v Mercantile & General Reinsurance Co Plc,⁹⁴⁹ a "follow settlements" clause which provided for all loss settlements by the reinsured to be binding on its reinsurers:

"... providing such settlements are within the terms and conditions of the original policies and/or contracts ... and within the terms and conditions of this reinsurance" was held by the House of Lords to contemplate a distinction between the facts generating a particular claim, and the legal extent of the respective covers. Although the reinsurers could be bound by the reassured's honest conclusions as to the former, it would not be bound by its determination of the latter, since this would enable the reinsured to bind its reinsurers to a definition of cover different from that which they had contracted to accept. It should be noted that the Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Act 1930 does not apply to reinsurance contracts.⁹⁵⁰

^{930.} Butler and Merkin's Reinsurance Law (Sweet & Maxwell); O'Neill and Woloniecki, The Law of Reinsurance in England and Bermuda, 3rd edn (2010), MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), Ch.35; Edelman and Burns, The Law of Reinsurance, 2nd edn (2013).

^{931.} Mackenzie v Whitworth (1875) 45 L.J.Q.B. 233; Phoenix General Insurance Co v Halvanon Insurance Co [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 599, 607, [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 552, 563. See, Toomey v Eagle Star [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 429, emphasising that reinsurance is the insurance of an insurable interest in the subject matter of the original insurance, and not inherently a form of liability insurance. The reinsurer may himself reinsure, the reinsurance of a contract of reinsurance being commonly, though not universally, known as a retrocession: see Commonwealth Insurance Co of Vancouver v Sprinks [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 67, 87-88.

^{932.} Re Law Guarantee Trust and Accident Society [1914] 2 Ch. 617, 647-648; English Insurance Co v National Benefit Assurance Co [1929] A.C. 114, 124; Phoenix General Insurance Co v Halvanon Insurance Co [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 599, 614.

^{933.} British Dominions General Insurance Co Ltd v Duder [1915] 2 K.B. 394. See also Excess Insurance Co Ltd v Mander [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 119; See also The Federal Mogul Asbestos Personal Injury Trust v Federal-Mogul Ltd [2014] EWHC 2002 (Comm), [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 671; Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.9(2).

^{934.} Groupama Navigation et Transports v Catatumbo CA Seguros [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 350; WASA International Insurance Co Ltd v Lexington Insurance Co [2008] EWCA Civ 150, [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 510, [2009] UKHL 40, [2009] 3 W.L.R. 575.

^{935.}  GE Reinsurance v New Hampshire [2003] EWHC 302 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 404. See also Metlife Insurance Ltd v RGA Reinsurance Company of Australia Ltd [2016] NSWSC 980; [2017] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 160 at [57] (NSWSC).

^{936.} See, e.g. Pine Top Insurance Co Ltd v Unione Italiana Anglo-Saxon Reinsurance Co Ltd [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 476; and Trygg Hansa Insurance Co Ltd v Equitas Ltd [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 439 (with respect to Arbitration Act 1996 s.6) where an arbitration clause in the contract of insurance was held not to be incorporated into the reinsurance. See also AIG Group (UK) Ltd v Ethniki [1998] 4 All E.R. 301 (jurisdiction clause); American International Marine Agency of New York Inc v Dandridge [2005] EWHC 829 (Comm), [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 643 ("follow the leader" clause). The principles governing the incorporation into the reinsurance contract of provisions found in the original insurance contract were helpfully explained in HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v New Hampshire Insurance Co [2001] EWCA Civ 735, [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 39. For a case where the terms of the underlying insurance are summarised in the reinsurance contract itself, see Toomey v Banco Vitalicio De Espana SA de Seguros y Reaseguros [2004] EWCA Civ 622, [2005] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 423.

- 937. See, e.g. Forsikringsaktieselskapet Vesta v Butcher [1989] A.C. 852, holding in the context of a back to back reinsurance, that the provision there incorporated into a reinsurance governed by English law should, in the absence of any express provision to the contrary, be regarded as having the same effect as it did in the underlying insurance from which it was incorporated, notwithstanding that the latter was governed by Norwegian law. See recently Amlin Corporate Member Ltd v Oriental Assurance Corp [2012] EWHC 540 (Comm), affirmed [2012] EWCA Civ 1341, [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 131.
- 938. See, e.g. CTI v Oceanus Mutual Underwriting Association (Bermuda) Ltd [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 476; Highlands Insurance Co v Continental Insurance Co [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 109; Mander v Commercial Union Assurance Co Plc [1998] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 93.
- 939. Imperial Marine v Fire Insurance Corp (1879) 4 C.P.D. 166.
- 940. DR Insurance Co v Seguros America Banamex [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 120. Re NRG Victory Reinsurance Ltd [1995] All E.R. 533 (holding, also, that retrocessions are "insurance" business for the purposes of the Insurance Companies Act 1982). See also New Hampshire Insurance Co v Grand Union Insurance Co Ltd [1996] L.R.L.R. 102.
- 941. Assicurazioni Generali SpA v CGU International Insurance Plc [2003] EWHC 1073 (Comm), [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 725, [2004] EWCA Civ 429, [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 457. The reinsurance contract, however, may not be an insurance of the reinsured's liability; the subject matter of the reinsurance contract may be the same as the insurance contract: Toomey v Eagle Star Insurance Co Ltd [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 516, 522-524; Charter Reinsurance Co Ltd v Fagan [1997] A.C. 313, 387, 392; Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.9(1); cf. Commercial Union Assurance Co Plc v NRG Victory Reinsurance Ltd [1998] 2 All E.R. 434, 448; Travellers Casualty & Surety Co of Europe Ltd v Commissioners of Customs and Excise [2006] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 63 (VAT Tribunal). See the discussion in O'Neill and Woloniecki, The Law of Reinsurance in England and Bermuda, 3rd edn (2010), paras 1-23—1-30. In an excess of loss reinsurance, the contract may provide for reimbursement of losses in excess of an ultimate net loss which is to be determined by reference to the sum actually paid in settlement of losses. In Charter Reinsurance Co Ltd v Fagan, above, however, it was held that, on a proper construction of the policies before the court, this did not mean that payment of the relevant losses by the reassured was a condition precedent to the liability of the reinsurer to reimburse him. Liability under the reinsurance contract is dependent on the establishment of the insurer's liability and not payment by the insurer: Re Eddystone Marine Insurance Co [1892] Ch. 423.
- 942. Chipendale v Holt (1895) 65 L.J.Q.B. 104.
- 943. Astrazeneca Insurance Co Ltd v XL Insurance (Bermuda) Ltd [2013] EWHC 349 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 290 at [39], [96]; affirmed [2013] EWCA Civ 1660, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 509. It has been suggested that there is an implied term that if the judgment is of a foreign court of competent jurisdiction, the court will treat that as decisive, unless the judgment was manifestly perverse or was obtained in breach of a jurisdiction clause or if the reinsured had failed to take proper defences: Commercial Union Assurance Co Plc v NRG Victory Reinsurance Ltd [1998] 2 All E.R. 434. In Astrazeneca Insurance Co Ltd v XL Insurance (Bermuda) Ltd [2013] EWHC 349 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 290 at [62]-[65] Flaux, J. did not follow this obiter suggestion. The Court of Appeal affirmed this decision: [2013] EWCA Civ 1660, [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 509.
- 944. See, e.g. Excess Liability Insurance Co Ltd v Mathews (1925) 31 Com. Cas. 43.
- 945. Insurance Co of Africa v SCOR (UK) Reinsurance Ltd [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 312. However, the clause will not bind the reinsurer where the settlement involves the reassured waiving or failing to consider a policy defence: Assicurazioni Generali SpA v CGU International Insurance Plc

[2003] EWHC 1073 (Comm), [2003] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 725; affirmed [2004] EWCA Civ 429, [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 457. The clause does not bind the reinsurer to judgments: Amlin Corporate Member Ltd v Oriental Assurance Corp [2012] EWHC 540 (Comm), affirmed [2012] EWCA Civ 1341, [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 131. For the scope of the first proviso (that the claim falls within the risks covered by the reinsurance), and its impact upon the second proviso, in a situation where the reinsurance is subject to the same terms and conditions as the underlying insurance, cf. Insurance Co of the State of Pennsylvania v Grand Union Insurance Co [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 208; and Hiscox v Outhwaite (No.3) [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 524. The clause does not require the reinsurer to indemnify the reinsured in respect of his costs of investigating, settling and defending claims under the underlying insurance nor will a term be implied to such effect: Baker v Black Sea & Baltic General Insurance Co Ltd [1998] 2 All E.R. 833. As to the reinsurer's right of inspection of the reinsured's records of his settlement of the underlying claim, see Pacific & General Insurance Co Ltd (In Liquidation) v Baltica Insurance Co (UK) Ltd [1996] L.R.L.R. 8; Commercial Union Assurance Co v Mander [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 540. See also Aegis Electrical and Gas International Services Ltd v Continental Casualty Co [2007] EWHC 1762 (Comm), [2008] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 17. For twin decisions concerning the application of different aspects of the follow settlements clause, see Tokio Marine Europe Insurance Ltd v Novae Corporate Underwriting Ltd [2013] EWHC 3362 (Comm), [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 490 and [2014] EWHC 2105 (Comm), [2014] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 638.

946. Insurance Co of the State of Pennsylvania v Grand Union Insurance Co, above; Charman v Guardian Royal Exchange Assurance Plc [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 607.

947. On the construction of this provision, see Gan Insurance Co Ltd v Tai Ping Insurance Co Ltd [2001] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 291, [2001] EWCA Civ 1042, [2002] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 612; Beazley Underwriting Ltd v Al Ahleia Insurance Co [2013] EWHC 677 (Comm), [2013] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 561.

948. Insurance Co of Africa v SCOR (UK) Reinsurance Ltd [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 312.

949. [1996] 1 W.L.R. 1239.

950. s.1(5).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 42 - Insurance
Section 11. - Specific Types of Insurance Contract
(d) - Insurance against Financial Loss ⁹⁵¹

Types of financial loss insurance

42-128

! The essential characteristic of an insurance against financial loss is that it indemnifies the assured against his economic loss. Economic loss may take the form of a loss of anticipated profits, ⁹⁵² the incurring of an expense or additional expense, ⁹⁵³ the loss of an advance, ⁹⁵⁴ the loss of a source of revenue ⁹⁵⁵ or the waste of an expense. Such insurance contracts are often referred to as “consequential loss” policies. Tailored policies have been developed to protect the assured against specific types of loss caused by specific perils and include guarantee (or credit) insurance, fidelity insurance, business interruption insurance and insurance guaranteeing the assured's warranty of performance. Insurance policies against financial loss often afford an indemnity only if the loss itself arises by reason of damage to property ⁹⁵⁶; in some cases, the assured must have an interest in the property. ⁹⁵⁷ If consequential loss alone is to be insured, and there is no reason in principle why such losses cannot be insured, the draftsmen of the policy should be assiduous in making their intention clear.

Guarantee insurance

42-129

Guarantee insurance, whereby the assured is indemnified against loss caused by the non-payment of a debt, closely resembles guarantee by way of surety. A fine distinction is drawn between them, ⁹⁵⁸ but in practice the distinction is probably negligible. ⁹⁵⁹ Fidelity policies, whereby the assured is indemnified against breaches of his contract of employment by an employee, are also regarded as guarantee policies. ⁹⁶⁰

^{951.} See MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), Ch.33.

^{952.} Maurice v Goldsborough, Mort & Co [1939] A.C. 452.

^{953.} Henry Booth v Commercial Union Assurance Co (1923) 14 Ll.L. Rep. 114; cf. Polikoff v North British and Mercantile Insurance Co Ltd (1936) 55 Ll.L. Rep. 279.

^{954.} e.g. a mortgagee indemnity policy: Svenska Handelsbanken v Sun Alliance and London Insurance Plc [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 519.

^{955.} Farmers Co-operative Ltd v National Benefit Assurance Co Ltd (1922) 13 Ll.L. Rep. 530; Agra Trading Ltd v McAuslin (The Frio Chile) [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 182.

^{956.} Agra Trading Ltd v McAuslin (The Frio Chile) [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 182; cf. Pilkington United Kingdom Ltd v CGU Insurance Plc [2004] EWCA Civ 23, [2004] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 891.

957. Glengate-KG Properties Ltd v Norwich Union Fire Insurance Society Ltd [1996] 2 All E.R. 487.

958. Trade Indemnity Co v Workington Harbour Board [1937] A.C. 1; Seaton v Heath [1899] 1 Q.B. 782; reversed on other grounds [1900] A.C. 135; Re Denton's Estate [1904] 2 Ch. 178. See also below, Ch.45.

959. Except for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001 (SI 2001/544) and associated statutory instruments made under the 2000 Act; see above, para.42-064. See also Travellers Casualty & Surety Co of Europe Ltd v Commissioners of Customs and Excise [2006] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 63 (VAT Tribunal).

960. The term "Guarantee Insurance" has also been used to describe a policy covering the assured's liability under a guarantee: Global Tankers Inc v Amercoat Europa NV [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 61.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 42 - Insurance
Section 11. - Specific Types of Insurance Contract
(e) - Fire Insurance ⁹⁶¹

Special features

42-130

! Insurance against fire is governed by the general principles of insurance, but presents certain recurrent problems, in particular that of causation, in that fire may be accompanied by explosion or pilfering, which may be the cause or effect of the fire and may themselves be excepted perils. The law is complex and in some respects archaic, and the reader is referred to the specialised works of reference for guidance. ⁹⁶² ! Where premises are damaged by fire, reinstatement may be specifically required by statute. In certain circumstances the insurer may be obliged, by virtue of the Fires Prevention (Metropolis) Act 1774, ⁹⁶³ to apply the insurance moneys to the restoration of the damaged premises. Unlike the case of reinstatement under the contract of insurance, ⁹⁶⁴ the insurer may limit his expenditure to the sum insured.

^{961.} See MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), Ch.28.

^{962.} ! See MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), Ch.28.

^{963.} s.83.

^{964.} See above, para.42-111.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 42 - Insurance
Section 11. - Specific Types of Insurance Contract
(f) - Life Insurance ⁹⁶⁵

Life insurance

42-131

! Everyone has an insurable interest in his own life, and may under certain circumstances acquire an insurable interest in the life of another. ⁹⁶⁶ Suicide of the assured was formerly an exception to the risk under a life policy even where the contract was expressed to extend to suicide. ⁹⁶⁷ Since the abolition of the crime of suicide ⁹⁶⁸ the rule no longer applies; however, in certain circumstances suicide may still be a bar to recovery under a life policy. ⁹⁶⁹ Since the insurer is bound to pay the sum insured at some date, apart from the operation of excepted perils, life policies are frequently treated as securities. ⁹⁷⁰ The assignment of life policies is therefore a matter of some importance, and most of the cases relating to the assignment of insurance contracts have been decided in this field. The principles of assignment in the context of insurance have been discussed above. ⁹⁷¹ In the case of life assurance, the assured also has power to nominate as beneficiary, the spouse, civil partner or children of the assured, pursuant to s.66 of the Friendly Societies Act 1974 or s.11 of the Married Women's Property Act 1882, thus creating a direct right of enforcement against the insurer, by virtue of a trust. ⁹⁷²

^{965.} See MacGillivray on Insurance Law, 13th edn (2015), Ch.26.

^{966.} See above, para.42-008.

^{967.} Beresford v Royal [1938] A.C. 586.

^{968.} Suicide Act 1961.

^{969.} See above, para.42-023. cf. Dunbar v Plant [1997] 4 All E.R. 289 (beneficiary aided and abetted the assured's suicide).

^{970.} cf. Fuji Finance Inc v Aetna Life Insurance Co Ltd [1997] Ch. 173.

^{971.} See above, paras 42-089—42-091.

^{972.} See Rooney v Cardona, The Times, March 4, 1999. As to civil partners, see Civil Partnership Act 2004 ss.70, 253, 261(1) and Sch.27 para.52.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 42 - Insurance
Section 11. - Specific Types of Insurance Contract
(g) - Marine Insurance

Marine Insurance Act 1906

42-132

Marine insurance is governed by the Marine Insurance Act 1906, the general provisions of which differ in certain respects from the general law applicable to all other forms of insurance contracts. The 1906 Act applies to contracts of marine insurance, which are defined as contracts under which the insurer undertakes to indemnify the assured against “marine losses”. ⁹⁷³ Accordingly, a contingency policy cannot be a marine policy for these purposes. Marine losses are property losses, financial losses or liabilities, which occur incidentally to a “marine adventure”, namely those situations where insurable property (especially, a ship, offshore rigs or platforms, or cargo) is exposed to maritime perils. ⁹⁷⁴ As noted in this chapter, although there are many similarities between the law governing marine insurance and non-marine insurance, there are important differences. The reader should consult the standard works on the subject. ⁹⁷⁵

^{973.} Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.1.

^{974.} Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.3.

^{975.} Gilman and Merkin, Arnould's Law of Marine Insurance and Average, 18th edn (2013); Ivamy, Chalmers' Marine Insurance Act 1906, 10th revised edn (2007); Rose, Marine Insurance: Law and Practice, 2nd edn (2012); Bennett, The Law of Marine Insurance, 2nd edn (2006).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition

Section 1. - Introduction

Scope and plan of the chapter

43-001

The way in which the common law treats agreements in restraint of trade is dealt with in Vol.I of this work. ¹ The present chapter considers the ways in which agreements may be affected by the competition law applicable in the United Kingdom. The chapter first describes Council Regulation 1/2003, which significantly changed the way in which the European Union ("the EU") competition rules are enforced; it then explains the relationship between the EU competition rules and the provisions of domestic law. The competition rules of the EU themselves are described in section 2 of this chapter, and the domestic system of law contained in the Competition Act 1998 is explained in section 3. Brief mention will also be made in section 3 of the Enterprise Act 2002, as amended by the Enterprise and Regulatory Reform Act 2013, which provides for the possibility of "market investigations" by the Competition and Markets Authority and for criminal sanctions, including imprisonment, to be imposed upon individuals responsible for cartel activity.

Council Regulation 1/2003

43-002

The way in which arts 101 and 102 ² of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union ("TFEU") are applied in practice was fundamentally changed as a result of the application of Regulation 1/2003 from May 1, 2004. ³ The European Commission has since 1962 been the principal institution charged with the enforcement of the competition provisions of the TFEU as a result of powers conferred upon it by Council Regulation 17. ⁴ That Regulation provided for the notification of agreements to the Commission which had exclusive competence to grant an "individual exemption" under art.101(3) to an agreement that infringed art.101(1). However, it became increasingly clear that a centralised system of enforcement was no longer appropriate for the effective application of the competition rules, especially with the enlargement of the European Union to 25 Member States on May 1, 2004 (and subsequently to 28). Regulation 1/2003, which also applies from May 1, 2004, introduced significant changes to the enforcement of arts 101 and 102. The system of notification of agreements for individual exemption was abolished and in its place art.101, in its entirety, and art.102 are directly applicable without prior decision of the Commission. The Commission shares the competence to apply arts 101 and 102 with national competition authorities and national courts. ⁵

Relationship between the EU competition rules and the provisions of domestic law

43-003

! One of the main principles behind the reforms leading to the enactment of the Competition Act 1998 in the UK was the desire to harmonise domestic law with the EU competition rules in order to reduce the costs incurred by the business community in complying with the previous domestic regime, which was formulated in very different terms from arts 101 and 102. The extent to which the provisions of the Competition Act must be interpreted consistently with EU law is considered below at paras 43-140 and 43-142. Many agreements which fall within art.101 TFEU will also infringe the Ch.I prohibition in the 1998 Act; similarly conduct which is unlawful under art.102 of the Treaty will also fall within the Ch.II prohibition. There may, however, be a small number of cases where, notwithstanding the modelling of the Ch.I and II prohibitions upon arts 101 and 102, different outcomes would be achieved under the EU and the domestic rules. With effect from May 1, 2004, art.3 of Regulation 1/2003 determines the relationship between the EU competition rules and the provisions of domestic competition law. Where national competition authorities and national courts apply national competition law to agreements and conduct that may affect trade between Member States, they must also apply arts 101 and 102.⁶ If an agreement affects trade between Member States but does not fall within art.101(1) or satisfies the conditions in art.101(3), it is not possible to apply stricter domestic competition law to it.⁷ However, where conduct affects trade between Member States but does not infringe art.102, Member States are not precluded from imposing stricter national competition laws or sanctions on such conduct.⁸ It is also possible for a Member State to apply stricter national rules, both in relation to agreements and to conduct, where those rules predominantly pursue an objective different from that pursued by arts 101 and 102 of the Treaty.⁹ Clearly the substance of this paragraph may require fundamental change following withdrawal by the United Kingdom from the European Union pursuant to the referendum of June 23, 2016.¹⁰

^{1.} Vol.I, paras 16-085 et seq.

^{2.} Arts 101 and 102 TFEU were previously arts 85 and 86 of the European Economic Community Treaty and subsequently arts 81 and 82 of the European Community Treaty. Much of the relevant case law and literature, of course, refers to the articles by their former numbers; however, the text below will always refer to the current ones.

^{3.} [2003] O.J. L1/1.

^{4.} [1962] O.J. 204/62, [1962] O.J.Sp.Ed. 87.

^{5.} See below, paras 43-065—43-076.

^{6.} Regulation 1/2003 art.3(1).

^{7.} Regulation 1/2003 art.3(2).

^{8.} Regulation 1/2003 art.3(3).

^{9.} Regulation 1/2003 art.3(3).

^{10.}  For a general note on “Brexit”, see above, paras 1-013A et seq.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition
Section 2. - Competition Rules Under the TFEU
(a) - In General

Purpose of this section

43-004

The purpose of this section is to give a brief outline of the rules on competition law under the TFEU insofar as they may affect contractual rights and obligations. Specialised works should be consulted for a fuller treatment. ¹¹

Article 101

43-005

The principal provision of the TFEU likely to affect contracts is art.101 ¹² which has been part of the law of the United Kingdom since January 1, 1973. ¹³ Article 101(1) prohibits all agreements between undertakings, decisions by associations of undertakings and concerted practices which may affect trade between Member States and which have as their object or effect the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition within the internal market. Article 101(2) provides that any agreement or decision prohibited under art.101(1) "shall be automatically void". ¹⁴ Article 101(3) provides that, in certain circumstances, the prohibition in art.101(1) "may be declared inapplicable" either to individual agreements on their particular merits ¹⁵ or by the application of block exemptions covering certain common types of agreement. ¹⁶

Article 102

43-006

Contractual obligations may also be affected by art.102 TFEU which applies to one or more undertakings which hold a dominant position within the internal market and which prohibits any abuse by such an undertaking of its dominant position, in so far as it may affect trade between Member States. Certain terms in agreements between dominant firms and their customers have been held to constitute abusive conduct and are therefore unenforceable by the dominant firm. ¹⁷

Direct effect

43-007

Both arts 101 and 102 have direct effect, ¹⁸ which means that they create rights which can be enforced in the national courts of the Member States and which those courts must protect. ¹⁹ The implications of the direct effect of TFEU provisions are discussed below. ²⁰

Principal sources of law

43-008

⚠ Apart from the relevant provisions of the Treaty, there is a considerable body of secondary legislation, in particular the block exemptions ²¹ promulgated by the EU institutions. ²² The European Commission, which, together with the national competition authorities and national courts, is responsible for the enforcement of the competition law provisions of the Treaty, also publishes official notices and announcements giving guidance on matters of interpretation. ²³ ⚠ In addition to this legislation there are the decisions of the European Commission concerning particular agreements and conduct, and the jurisprudence of the General Court (formerly the Court of First Instance of the European Communities) and the European Court of Justice. ²⁴

Supremacy of EU law

43-009

Generally EU law takes precedence over the domestic law of the United Kingdom. ²⁵ It follows that in certain circumstances rights which would be valid under domestic law may not be exercised where such exercise would be contrary to the provisions and objectives of the Treaty. ²⁶ In Irish Sugar v Commission ²⁷ the General Court stressed that it was immaterial whether the grant of the price rebates in dispute in that case was compatible with Irish law given the supremacy of EU law and the direct effect of art.102. The English courts take judicial notice of the TFEU, the contents of the Official Journal of the European Union ²⁸ and the judgments of the General Court and the Court of Justice. ²⁹

European Economic Area

43-010

The European Economic Area, first established in 1994, now comprises all the 28 states of the European Union and the EFTA states other than Switzerland (namely Iceland, Norway and Liechtenstein). The aim of the EEA Agreement is, inter alia, to ensure the uniform application of competition law throughout the EEA, and to this end art.53(1), (2) and (3) of the EEA Agreement in effect reproduces art.101(1), (2) and (3) TFEU and art.54 of the EEA Agreement reproduces art.102 TFEU. Other provisions of the EEA Agreement contain procedural and substantive rules which mirror the existing EU secondary legislation in the competition field. The EEA Agreement also provides for the establishment of the EFTA Surveillance Authority which has similar powers to the Commission and is subject to review by the EFTA Court of Justice. Article 56 of the EEA Agreement provides complex rules for the allocation of jurisdiction between the Commission and the EFTA Surveillance Authority in competition cases depending on the effect that the conduct under scrutiny has on trade between the EU and EFTA. A full analysis of the scope of the EEA Agreement is beyond the scope of this work ³⁰ but practitioners should bear in mind the possible application of EU competition law to contracts affecting the above-named territories.

^{11.} e.g. Bellamy and Child, European Union Law of Competition, 7th edn (2013). For comparative treatment of EU and UK competition law see Whish and Bailey, Competition Law, 8th edn (2015).

^{12.} See below, paras 43-011 et seq.

^{13.} European Communities Act 1972 s.2.

^{14.} See below, para.43-068.

^{15.} See below, para.43-032.

- 16. See below, paras 43-033—43-034.
- 17. See below, paras 43-061—43-064.
- 18. BRT v SABAM [1974] E.C.R. 51, 62; European Communities Act 1972 s.2(1).
- 19. For the English courts' analysis of this obligation see Garden Cottage Foods v Milk Marketing Board [1984] A.C. 130 HL; Bourgoin v Ministry of Agriculture [1986] Q.B. 716 CA; R. v Secretary of State for Transport Ex p. Factortame Ltd (No.2) [1991] 1 A.C. 603.
- 20. See below, paras 43-065—43-071.
- 21. See below, paras 43-033—43-034.
- 22. For a description of the EU institutions and of the different forms of secondary legislation see Hartley, The Foundations of European Union Law, 8th edn (2014).
- 23.  Much of the relevant legislation, notices, etc. is set out in Vol.II of Bellamy and Child, European Union Law of Competition, 7th edn (2013). See also Butterworths Competition Law Handbook, 22nd edn (2016). The Commission also issues an Annual Report of Competition Policy, available on its website: http://europa.eu.int/comm/competition/annual_reports.
- 24. The General Court was established in 1988 and hears appeals from Commission decisions in, inter alia, competition cases. Appeals from the General Court on points of law are made to the Court of Justice. Decisions of these courts are binding on the English courts: European Communities Act 1972 s.3(1) (as amended by the European Communities (Amendment) Act 1986).
- 25. European Communities Act 1972 ss.2(1) and 3(1). For the EU point of view see Simmenthal [1978] E.C.R. 629. For the English courts' approach see Ex p. Factortame above.
- 26. See below, para.43-054.
- 27. [1999] E.C.R. II-2969.
- 28. Regulations, directives, notices and Commission decisions are generally published in the Official Journal.
- 29. European Communities Act 1972 s.3(2) (as amended by the European Communities (Amendment) Act 1986).
- 30. For discussion of the EEA rules see Bellamy and Child, European Union Law of Competition, 7th edn (2013).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition
Section 2. - Competition Rules Under the TFEU
(b) - Article 101(1)

Article 101(1)

43-011

Article 101(1) provides that:

“The following shall be prohibited as incompatible with the internal market: all agreements between undertakings, decisions by associations of undertakings and concerted practices which may affect trade between Member States and which have as their object or effect the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition within the internal market, and in particular those which:

- (a) directly or indirectly fix purchase or selling prices or any other trading conditions;
- (b) limit or control production, markets, technical development, or investment;
- (c) share markets or sources of supply;
- (d)
apply dissimilar conditions to equivalent transactions with other trading parties, thereby placing them at a competitive disadvantage;
- (e)
make the conclusion of contracts subject to acceptance by the other parties of supplementary obligations which, by their nature or according to commercial usage, have no connection with the subject of such contracts.”

The elements in the test

43-012

In deciding whether a particular transaction falls within art.101(1) one must consider: (i) whether there exists an “agreement” or “concerted practice” made between, or operated by, “undertakings”, or a “decision” by an association of undertakings; (ii) whether competition within the internal market may be prevented, restricted or distorted; and (iii) whether there is an actual or potential effect on trade between Member States. It is also necessary to consider whether the effect on competition and on trade between Member States is appreciable.³¹

Undertaking

43-013

A “functional” approach must be taken to the meaning of the term “undertaking”: a legal entity may be acting as an undertaking when performing some functions but not when performing others.³² The term “undertaking” is a wide one covering almost any legal or natural person engaged in an economic activity, regardless of its legal status and the way in which it is financed.³³ It is capable of covering public and private companies, partnerships, trade associations,³⁴ individuals,³⁵ professionals,³⁶ and sole traders.³⁷ An undertaking need not be a profit-making body.³⁸ Employees are not undertakings³⁹; in *Becu*⁴⁰ the Court of Justice confirmed that employees are incorporated into the economic unit of the undertaking they work for and so are not themselves undertakings within the meaning of EU competition law. A commercial agent is capable of acting as an undertaking, though an agreement between a principal and a “genuine” commercial agent will normally fall outside art.101(1).⁴¹ So far as Member States⁴² are concerned, a distinction must be drawn between the situation where the State acts in the exercise of its powers as a public authority or carries on non-economic activities (in relation to which it is not to be treated as an undertaking)⁴³ and where it is engaged in economic activities of an industrial or commercial nature (in relation to which it is covered by art.101).⁴⁴

Parents and subsidiaries

43-014

Agreements between a parent company and its subsidiary, or between members of a group of companies under common control ordinarily fall outside art.101(1).⁴⁵ But the mere fact of common ownership is not decisive as account must be taken of the actual nature of the relationship between the companies and in particular whether they have economic independence or pursue the same market strategy as determined by the parent company.⁴⁶ In *Hydrotherm v Compact*⁴⁷ the Court of Justice stated that the term “undertaking” must be understood as “designating an economic unit ... even if in law that economic unit consists of several persons, natural or legal”. Therefore, where a number of parties to an agreement have identical interests and are controlled by the same person, who also participates in the agreement, those parties can be treated as a single undertaking.⁴⁸

Agreements

43-015

The term “agreement” in art.101(1) is not confined to legally binding contracts but covers any morally binding commitment⁴⁹; it is sufficient if the undertakings have expressed their joint intention to conduct themselves in the market in a particular way.⁵⁰ An agreement may be written or oral or inferred from the circumstances and can consist in a continuing course of business dealings between the parties.⁵¹ The leading case on the consensual nature of the conduct required to infer an agreement is Bayer v Commission.⁵² The General Court stressed that to support the finding of an agreement for the purposes of art.101, there must be evidence of “the subjective element that characterises the very concept of an agreement, that is to say a concurrence of wills between economic operators on the implementation of a policy, the pursuit of an objective, or the adoption of a given line of conduct on the market". An agreement between undertakings may be made on the undertaking's behalf by an employee acting in the course of his employment despite the ignorance of more senior management. ⁵³ A series of agreements can be read together as one agreement. ⁵⁴ The incorporation of a particular term in an agreement can be inferred from the surrounding circumstances, ⁵⁵ but the placing of new orders by a customer does not necessarily indicate acceptance of a new policy introduced by the supplier. In Bayer ⁵⁶ the General Court rejected the Commission's argument that the mere continuation of commercial relations with the manufacturer when it had adopted a policy designed to inhibit exports amounted to acquiescence by the wholesalers in that policy so as to create an agreement between them. The evidence showed rather that the wholesalers had actively tried to circumvent the supplier's policy by other means. However, the fact that a supplier has not taken steps to enforce a clause imposing an export ban or that a customer is acting contrary to its best interests in agreeing to such a clause is not sufficient to remove the clause from the ambit of art.101. ⁵⁷

"Horizontal" and "vertical" agreements

43-016

The competition affected by prohibited conduct may be competition between the parties to the agreement themselves. This will be the case in a "horizontal" agreement where the parties are active at the same level of production or supply, for example where a number of manufacturers agree on the prices they will charge to their respective customers. But art.101(1) is also capable of applying to "vertical" agreements where the parties are at different levels of production or supply and the competition affected is between them and third parties. ⁵⁸ For example, where a manufacturer concludes an exclusive supply and purchasing agreement with his dealer, the competition affected is between that manufacturer and other manufacturers who wish to supply that dealer, and between that dealer and other dealers who wish to obtain supplies from that manufacturer.

Concerted practices

43-017

The concept of "concerted practices" is very wide and covers forms of cooperation that fall short of an agreement. ⁵⁹ It denotes "any form of co-ordination by undertakings which, without having reached the stage where an agreement properly so called has been concluded, knowingly substitutes practical cooperation between them for the risks of competition". ⁶⁰ A concerted practice does not require a plan to be worked out nor must it have been put into effect for art.101(1) to apply. ⁶¹ Parallel conduct by undertakings does not necessarily give rise to a presumption of collusion if another plausible explanation for such parallelism can be found, for example in the characteristics of the market. ⁶² But where there is parallel conduct and evidence of meetings between the parties then a concerted practice will often be inferred. ⁶³

Decisions of associations of undertakings

43-018

These include the agreements entered into by and the constitution of, or other rules governing, the association, decisions binding upon the members and non-binding recommendations. ⁶⁴

Prevention, restriction or distortion of competition

43-019

The requirement that the conduct must have as its object or effect the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition lies at the heart of art.101. In applying this test one must bear in mind the dual purpose of the competition provisions of the Treaty. First, the Treaty aims to promote competition as the means of bringing about increased efficiency, wider choice, better products, greater innovation and lower prices, thereby ensuring the optimal allocation of resources. The examples set out in art.101(1) of the kinds of agreements likely to be prohibited illustrate the classic forms of anti-competitive behaviour: price fixing, market sharing and agreements to limit production.⁶⁵

Creation of a single market

43-020

Secondly, the competition provisions of the Treaty should help the creation of a single market by eliminating trade barriers between the Member States and encouraging the free movement of goods and services.⁶⁶ EU law is therefore particularly concerned to proscribe conduct which has the effect of re-erecting national boundaries or impeding the free flow of goods or services. Any contractual terms which prevent or limit the export of goods to other Member States should be scrutinised very carefully to ensure that they are compatible with art.101.⁶⁷ The enlargement of the European Union on May 1, 2004 and again subsequently, with the possibility of further enlargement to follow, means that single market integration will continue to influence the way in which the EU competition rules are applied.

The test to be applied

43-021

The test for determining whether conduct has as its object or effect⁶⁸ the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition has been laid down in a number of leading cases, in particular in *Société Technique Minière*⁶⁹; *Delimitis v Henninger Bräu*⁷⁰; *Wouters*⁷¹; and Cartes Bancaires.⁷² Generally speaking, the first step is to determine the object of the agreement. If it is not clear that the object is to restrict competition, one must then analyse the effect of the agreement within its legal and economic context; that is, assess the way in which competition would occur in the absence of the agreement and consider how this is likely to have been affected by the operation of the agreement. Among the many relevant factors for working out whether an agreement has a restrictive effect are the nature and quantity of the products covered by the agreement, the position and importance of the parties in the market for the products concerned, the isolated nature of the agreement or, alternatively, whether it forms part of a network of similar agreements.⁷³ Other material factors include the existence of any intellectual property rights and the number and size of competing undertakings.

The “object” of the agreement

43-022

The purpose of the agreement must be ascertained objectively and it is not necessary to show that the parties’ subjectively intended to restrict competition.⁷⁴ Some kinds of agreement have been held by the courts to have “by their very nature” the object of restricting competition. The question to be asked is whether the agreement “reveals in itself a sufficient degree of harm to competition”.⁷⁵ Such agreements include horizontal agreements⁷⁶ to fix prices, to limit production or to partition markets and vertical agreements⁷⁷ imposing export bans or requiring the buyer to re-sell the products at fixed or minimum prices. Provided that such agreements have an appreciable effect on competition and affect trade between Member States they will fall within art.101(1).⁷⁸

The “effect” of the agreement

43-023

If a simple analysis of the terms of the agreement is not sufficient to determine whether it has or may have an anticompetitive object, one must look at the consequences (or potential consequences)⁷⁹ of the operation of the agreement to see whether it has an anti-competitive effect. One must consider how the parties would have been expected to act in the absence of the agreement: has their freedom to determine the terms and conditions on which they supply their goods or services been curtailed in any way; has their choice of potential suppliers or potential customers been narrowed by the agreement; is it more difficult for other manufacturers to start supplying goods or services which compete with those offered by the parties to the agreement? In short, is the agreement likely to alter the commercial decisions of the parties to the agreement or of third parties⁸⁰ when they respond to changing market conditions? It should be added that a contractual restriction does not necessarily result in a restriction of competition; account should be taken of the actual conditions in which the agreement operates, the products or services covered by the agreement and the actual structure of the market to properly analyse its effect thereon.⁸¹ The economic analysis required in the application of this test may appear somewhat daunting. In practice, guidelines have been established by the jurisprudence of the Courts of the European Union and the Commission in respect of the application of art.101 to certain categories of agreement and certain contractual terms. In particular valuable guidance can be derived from the Commission's Guidelines on the Application of Article 101(3) of the Treaty⁸², Guidelines on Vertical Restraints⁸³, Guidelines on Horizontal Co-operation Agreements⁸⁴, and Guidelines on the Application of Article 101 TFEU to technology transfer agreements⁸⁵.

Requirement of appreciable effect

43-024

In *Völk v Vervaecke*⁸⁶ the Court of Justice stated that art.101(1) is not contravened if the agreement has only an insignificant effect on competition. In that case the parties to an agreement for the distribution of washing machines had only a 0.2 per cent share of the market and the agreement escaped the prohibition as the agreement was treated as de minimis. Subsequently in *Expedia Inc v Autorité de la Concurrence*⁸⁷ the Court of Justice held that any agreement that has an appreciable effect on trade between Member States and that "restricts competition by object" has an appreciable effect on competition.

Notice concerning agreements of minor importance

43-025

Following the decision in Völk, the Commission published a Notice giving guidance on the thresholds below which an agreement would be considered de minimis. The Commission's current Notice on Agreements of Minor Importance was adopted in June 2014.⁸⁸ It provides that the Commission does not consider horizontal agreements between firms with a market share of 10 per cent or less, or vertical agreements between firms each with a market share of 15 per cent or less, to restrict competition to an appreciable extent. However, consistently with the judgment in Expedia, this relaxed approach does not apply to restrictions of competition by object such as horizontal or vertical price fixing, market sharing or the imposition of export bans on distributors. If an agreement falls below the de minimis thresholds, the possibility remains that there might be an infringement of national law.

Relevance of networks of agreements

43-026

Generally speaking, when considering whether the effect of an agreement is likely to be appreciable, one must consider whether it is one of a network of similar agreements in operation in the relevant market.⁸⁹ For example, when assessing whether an agreement between a manufacturer and one of his distributors in the European Union has an appreciable effect on competition or on trade between Member States, one must look not only at the market share and turnover of the parties to that particular agreement but also of the other dealers in that manufacturer's network who are party to agreements in similar terms. Where the industry in which the agreement operates is characterised by a series of networks of restrictive agreements,⁹⁰ account should be taken of the proportion of the market covered by such agreements and their duration when assessing the extent of the effect of an agreement.⁹¹ The Commission's Notice on Agreements of Minor Importance states that agreements between firms with a market share of 5 per cent or less are not generally considered to significantly contribute to a cumulative foreclosure effect; and that such an effect is unlikely to exist if less than 30 per cent of the market is covered by parallel networks of agreements having similar effects.

Effect on trade between Member States

43-027

Anti-competitive conduct does not fall within the prohibition in art.101(1) unless it may appreciably affect trade between Member States.⁹² However, this requirement has been widely interpreted by the Commission and the Courts of the EU. Thus many agreements between parties in a single Member State which concern the supply of goods within that same state satisfy the test. The Treaty does not require that every restrictive clause in an agreement should be shown to have an effect on trade before it falls within art.101(1), provided that the agreement as a whole satisfies the test.⁹³ The Commission has published Guidelines on the effect on trade concept in arts 101 and 102 TFEU.⁹⁴

"Direct or indirect, actual or potential"

43-028

Conduct affects trade between Member States if it is possible to foresee with a sufficient degree of probability that it may have an influence, direct or indirect, actual or potential, on the pattern of trade between Member States.⁹⁵ Conduct will also be held to affect trade if it alters or has "repercussions" on the competitive structure of the market.⁹⁶ It is not necessary to show that the conduct has in fact affected trade; it is enough that it is capable of having an effect.⁹⁷ Clearly, any agreement which directly or indirectly restricts exports between Member States will satisfy the test. Agreements which cover the whole territory of a single Member State usually have the necessary effect, because they tend to reinforce national boundaries and hinder the economic inter-penetration which the Treaty is designed to realise.⁹⁸ There have been some cases in which the Courts of the European Union and the Commission have concluded that an agreement had no appreciable effect on trade between Member States. In *Bagnasco v BPN and Carige*⁹⁹ the Court of Justice held that an agreement between banks in Italy setting the terms on which they offered current accounts to customers fell outside art.101(1) because the economic activities in question had very limited impact on trade. This was followed by the decision of the Commission in *Dutch Acceptance Giro System*¹⁰⁰ where it found that the agreement did have an appreciable effect on competition but did not appreciably affect trade between Member States because the banking services were concentrated on domestic activity.

Undertakings outside the EU

43-029

Agreements between undertakings outside the EU may fall within art.101 if the implementation of the agreement affects competition within the internal market.¹⁰¹

Agreements concerning trade outside the EU

43-030

Agreements between undertakings concerning trade outside the EU may fall within art.101 if they produce an appreciable effect both on competition and on trade between Member States.¹⁰²

^{31.} See below, paras 43-024—43-027.

- 32. See, e.g. SELEX Sistemi Integrati SpA v Commission [2009] E.C.R. I-2207.
- 33. Höfner & Elser v Macrotron [1991] E.C.R. I-1979; Enichem v Commission [1991] E.C.R. II-1623, para.235; Commission v Italy [1998] E.C.R. I-3851 where the Court added that any activity consisting in offering goods or services on a given market is an economic activity.
- 34. Luttikhuis v Coberco [1995] E.C.R. I-4515 (dairy cooperative); Dansk Pelsdyravlerforening v Commission [1992] E.C.R. II-1931 (fur traders association). A body can be both an undertaking and an association of undertakings: Frubo v Commission [1975] E.C.R. 563.
- 35. See, e.g. RAI v UNITEL [1978] O.J. L157/39 (opera singer).
- 36. See, e.g. Wouters v Algemene Raad van de Nederlandse Orde van Advocaten [2002] E.C.R. I-1577, paras 45–49.
- 37. CNSD [1993] O.J. L203/27 (customs agents); COAPI [1995] O.J. L122/37, (industrial property agents).
- 38. Van Landewyck v Commission [1980] E.C.R. 3125, para.88.
- 39. Suiker Unie v Commission [1975] E.C.R. 1663, 2007, para.539.
- 40. [1999] E.C.R. I-5665.
- 41. Suiker Unie, above, paras 538–540. See below, para.43-059.
- 42. Diego Calì & Figli v Servizi ecologici Porto di Genova [1997] E.C.R. I-1547.
- 43. See, e.g. SAT Eurocontrol v Commission [1994] E.C.R. I-43 (body set up under international law to levy air traffic control charges not an undertaking); Poucet [1993] E.C.R. I-637 (body administering state sickness benefit not an undertaking); Diego Calì & Figli, above (body providing harbour pollution control services not an undertaking); FENIN v Commission [2006] E.C.R. I-6295 (organisations responsible for operation of the Spanish health service not undertakings).
- 44. See, e.g. IAZ v Commission [1983] E.C.R. 3369 (water supply companies)
- 45. Viho Europe BV v Commission [1995] E.C.R. II-17 upheld on appeal by the Court of Justice: [1997] E.C.R. I-5457.
- 46. Bodson v Pompes Funèbres [1988] E.C.R. 2479, para.20.
- 47. [1984] E.C.R. 2999, 3016, para.11.
- 48. This is important in applying the block exemptions, some of which stipulate that agreements covered must have only two parties.
- 49. Van Landewyck v Commission [1980] E.C.R. 3125, 3250. But an agreement concluded in the context of collective negotiations between management and labour falls outside art.101(1): see Brentjens [1999] E.C.R. I-6025.
- 50. Hercules v Commission [1991] E.C.R. II-1711, para.256.
- 51. Konica [1988] 4 C.M.L.R. 848, para.40.
- 52. [2000] E.C.R. II-3383, upheld on appeal, [2004] E.C.R. I-23. For further examples of cases where the General Court concluded that the evidence did not support the inference of an agreement see JCB v Commission [2004] E.C.R. II-49; General Motors v Commission [2003] E.C.R. 4491; Volkswagen v Commission [2006] E.C.R. I-6585.

- 53. Musique Diffusion Française v Commission [1983] E.C.R. 1825 at 1903.
- 54. ENI/Montedison [1989] 4 C.M.L.R. 444.
- 55. Sandoz v Commission [1990] E.C.R. I-45.
- 56. [2000] E.C.R. II-3383.
- 57. Sandoz, above.
- 58. Consten and Grundig v Commission [1966] E.C.R. 299 (affirmed many times).
- 59. The leading cases are ICI v Commission [1972] E.C.R. 619; Suiker Unie v Commission [1975] E.C.R. 1663; Musique Diffusion Française v Commission [1983] E.C.R. 1825; Hercules v Commission [1991] E.C.R. II-1711 and the other appeals in the Polypropylene proceedings; T-Mobile Netherlands BV v Raad van bestuur van de Nederlandse Mededingingsautoriteit [2009] E.C.R. I-4529. Conduct can be both an agreement and a concerted practice: Hercules, para.43-015.
- 60. ICI, above, at 655, para.64. This formulation was reaffirmed in the PVC Cartel II [1999] E.C.R. II-931, para.720.
- 61. Suiker Unie v Commission [1975] E.C.R. 1663 at 1942.
- 62. Ahlström Oy v Commission [1993] E.C.R. I-1307.
- 63. e.g. Società Italiano Vetro v Commission [1992] E.C.R. II-1403.
- 64. At least if a significant number of the members in fact comply with the recommendation: Van Landewyck v Commission [1980] E.C.R. 3125, 3250.
- 65. The categories of anti-competitive agreements set out in the subparagraphs of art.101(1) are illustrative, not exhaustive.
- 66. See, e.g. Consten and Grundig v Commission [1966] E.C.R. 299, 340.
- 67. See below, paras 43-040 et seq.
- 68. The terms “object” or “effect” are disjunctive rather than cumulative, so that the existence of either is sufficient: see Technique Minière, below.
- 69. Société Technique Minière v Maschinenbau Ulm [1966] E.C.R. 235.
- 70. Delimitis v Henninger Bräu [1991] E.C.R. I-935. For an analysis of the application of art.101 to a distribution agreement covering non-EEA states see Javico International v Yves Saint Laurent Parfums [1998] E.C.R. I-1983.
- 71. [2002] E.C.R. I-1577.
- 72. EU:C 2014:2204.
- 73. The Delimitis case restated the law on the relevance of the existence of a network of agreements; cf. the earlier case of Brasserie De Haecht v Wilkin [1967] E.C.R. 407.
- 74. e.g. IAZ v Commission [1983] E.C.R. 3369.
- 75. Cartes Bancaires v Commission EU:C:2014:2204.
- 76. See below, para.43-035.

- 77. See below, paras 43-038 et seq.
- 78. For “appreciability” see below, paras 43-024—43-026; for effect on trade between Member States see below, paras 43-027—43-030.
- 79. This is especially relevant in joint venture cases; see below, para.43-036. More generally, see, e.g. Javico International v Yves Saint Laurent Parfums [1998] E.C.R. I-1983.
- 80. e.g. in exclusive distribution or licensing agreements which foreclose outlets to competing manufacturers’ goods.
- 81. See, e.g. European Night Services v Commission [1998] E.C.R. II-3141, para.136.
- 82. [2004] O.J. C101/97.
- 83. [2010] O.J. C130/1.
- 84. [2011] O.J. C11/1.
- 85. [2014] O.J. C89/3.
- 86. [1969] E.C.R. 295.
- 87. EU:C:2012:795.
- 88. [2014] O.J. C291/1.
- 89. Brasserie De Haecht v Wilkin [1967] E.C.R. 407. For two further cases which show how the network effect of agreements should be analysed see the Court of Justice’s judgment in Neste Markkinointi Oy v Yötuuli Ky [2000] E.C.R. I-11121 dealing with a network of petrol station exclusive purchasing agreements.
- 90. e.g. brewery tied house estates, petrol solus agreements, selective distribution of luxury perfumes.
- 91. Delimitis v Henninger Bräu [1991] E.C.R. I-935; VGB v Commission [1997] E.C.R. II-759.
- 92. The requirement is satisfied even if the effect is to increase trade since the aim of the Treaty is to maintain undistorted competition: Consten and Grundig v Commission [1966] E.C.R. 299, 341.
- 93. Windsurfing International v Commission [1986] E.C.R. 611; affirmed in VGB v Commission [1997] E.C.R. II-759.
- 94. [2014] O.J. C291/1.
- 95. Société Technique Minière v Maschinenbau Ulm [1966] E.C.R. 235, 249 and 251 and affirmed many times.
- 96. This formulation of the test is sometimes used in cases under art.102, e.g. Commercial Solvents v Commission [1974] E.C.R. 223, 252.
- 97. Miller v Commission [1978] E.C.R. 131, 151.
- 98. See, e.g. Commission v Italy [1998] E.C.R. I-3851.
- 99. [1999] E.C.R. I-135.
- 100. [1999] O.J. L271/28.

101. Wood Pulp I [1988] E.C.R. 5193.

102. Javico International v Yves Saint Laurent Parfums [1998] E.C.R. I-1983.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition
Section 2. - Competition Rules Under the TFEU
(c) - Article 101(3)

Criteria of article 101(3)

43-031

If conduct falls within art.101(1), it is always open to the parties to argue that their agreement fulfils the criteria contained in art.101(3). ¹⁰³ Any agreement which satisfies all the conditions laid down in art.101(3) is covered by that provision. Article 101(3) provides that the prohibition may be “declared inapplicable” to an agreement which:

“... contributes to improving the production or distribution of goods or to promoting technical or economic progress while allowing consumers a fair share of the benefit, and which does not:

(a)

impose upon the undertakings concerned restrictions which are not indispensable to the attainment of these objectives;

(b) afford such undertakings the possibility of eliminating competition in respect of a substantial part of the products in question.”

Agreements likely to satisfy article 101(3)

43-032

All four criteria must be satisfied in order for art.101(3) to be applicable. ¹⁰⁴ The Commission has published Guidelines on the application of art.81(3) of the Treaty (art.101(3) TFEU). ¹⁰⁵ Since May 1, 2004 Regulation 1/2003 abolished the system of notification of agreements to the Commission for individual exemption under art.101(3) and the exclusive competence of the Commission to make decisions under that provision in individual cases; instead the parties to agreements and their advisers are expected to assess the application of art.101(3) themselves.

Block exemptions

43-033

The Commission is empowered to issue block exemptions in the form of Commission regulations. ¹⁰⁶ These regulations identify for certain common types of agreements the contractual obligations which fulfil the criteria set out in art.101(3) and which are therefore entitled to the benefit of exemption. Agreements which do not contain restrictions going beyond the terms permitted by the block exemption may automatically be treated as valid and enforceable. ¹⁰⁷ Agreements which contain restrictions beyond those in the block exemption may still satisfy the criteria of art.101(3), but an individual assessment will have to be made by the parties and their legal advisers in each case. The older block exemptions were very specific as to the clauses which could benefit from the block exemption; by contrast the newer block exemptions such as Regulations 330/2010, 1217/2010, 1218/2010 and 316/2014 on vertical agreements, research and development agreements, specialisation agreements and technology transfer agreements respectively adopt a less proscriptive approach, simply setting out what is not covered. Another key feature of these regulations is the use of a market share cap to determine eligibility of agreements for block exemption. The Commission and the national competition authorities have the power to withdraw the benefit of the block exemption from agreements which have effects incompatible with the criteria of art.101(3).

Block exemptions currently in force

43-034

⚠ At present there are block exemptions ¹⁰⁸ covering the following types of agreement:

vertical agreements ¹⁰⁹;

distribution of motor vehicles ¹¹⁰;

research and development agreements ¹¹¹;

specialisation agreements ¹¹²;

insurance agreements ¹¹³;

shipping and aviation agreements ¹¹⁴; technology transfer agreements. ¹¹⁵

Note that the block exemption regulation for certain insurance agreements, Regulation 267/2010, expired on March 31, 2017.

-
- 103. Matra Hachette v Commission [1994] E.C.R. II-595, para.85.
- 104. See, e.g. Métropole Télévision SA v Commission [1996] E.C.R. II-649.
- 105. [2004] O.J. C101/97.
- 106. The vires for the main block exemptions are Council Regulation 19/65 (exclusive dealing agreements and bilateral licences of intellectual property, amended by Regulation 1215/99 [1999] O.J. L148/1 to extend the delegated legislative powers of the Commission which enabled it to adopt a wider block exemption on vertical agreements) and Regulation 2821/71 (agreements on uniform standards, specialisation agreements and research and development agreements).
- 107. Note that if the agreement falls within an EU block exemption it will automatically enjoy parallel exemption from the Ch.I prohibition in UK competition law by virtue of the Competition Act 1998 s.10: see below, para.43-114.
- 108. The texts of the block exemptions, as amended, and the Commission Notices giving guidance on the interpretation of certain regulations, are printed in Butterworths Competition Law Handbook, 20th edn (2014) and in Vol.II of Bellamy and Child, European Union Law of Competition, 7th edn (2013).
- 109. Regulation 330/2010 [2010] O.J. L102/1. See also the Commission's Guidelines on Vertical Restraints [2010] O.J. C130/1.
- 110. Regulation 461/2010 [2010] O.J. L129/52. See also the Commission's Supplementary Guidelines on Vertical Restraints in Agreements for the Sale and Repair of Motor Vehicles and the Distribution of Spare Parts for Motor Vehicles [2010] O.J. C138/16.
- 111. Regulation 1217/2010 [2010] O.J. L335/36. See also the Commission's Guidelines on Horizontal Cooperation Agreements [2010] O.J. C11/1.
- 112. i.e. where undertakings agree to concentrate their production in different product areas: Regulation 1218/00 [2010] O.J. L335/43. See also the Commission's Guidelines on Horizontal Cooperation Agreements [2010] O.J. C11/1.
- 113. Regulation 267/2010 [2010] O.J. L83/1.
- 114. Reference should be made to specialist works for the legislation in these sectors.
- 115. Regulation 316/2014 [2014] O.J. L93/7. See also the Commission's Guidelines on Technology Transfer Agreements [2014] O.J. C89/3.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition
Section 2. - Competition Rules Under the TFEU
(d) - Application of Art.101 to Specific Agreements

Typical horizontal agreements

43-035

! The following constitute some of the most frequently encountered kinds of horizontal agreement in relation to which the application of art.101 needs to be carefully considered, in particular because very substantial fines can be imposed on the members of horizontal cartels, who may also be sued by victims of such cartels for damages ¹¹⁶.

(i) Price fixing

Since price is the main instrument of competition, art.101(1)(a) expressly prohibits agreements which “directly or indirectly fix purchase or selling prices or any other trading conditions”. There have been many cases in which horizontal price-fixing agreements have been condemned and in which very substantial fines have been imposed. Price fixing in any form is caught, including, for example, agreements on the level of discounts, prior consultation on price lists, agreements on recommended prices, maximum prices and collective resale price maintenance. Price fixing in the services sector is unlawful as well as in the goods sector. Buyers’ cartels can be caught as well as those of sellers. ¹¹⁷

(ii) Market sharing

Prominent among agreements which fall within art.101(1)(b) and (c) are horizontal agreements between competitors to refrain from supplying into each other’s markets. Such agreements frustrate the aims of the TFEU since they often divide up supplies along the lines of national boundaries and thus directly inhibit the free movement of goods and the creation of the single market. ¹¹⁸ Market sharing can be achieved by the sharing of customers as well as by allocating geographic areas to the parties. A further kind of agreement likely to infringe art.101(1) occurs where manufacturers allocate to each other quotas for the production or supply of products to the market of each participant. Article 101(1) may also be infringed where one manufacturer grants exclusive selling rights to a competitor in respect of a particular territory. A market sharing arrangement confined to the territory of one Member State may still infringe art.101(1) since it is liable to affect the patterns of imports and exports that might otherwise take place.

(iii) Exchange of information

Whether the exchange of information restricts competition within the meaning of art.101(1) depends inter alia on the nature of the information exchanged and the structure of the market to which the information agreement relates. ¹¹⁹ The exchange of information among competitors is likely to infringe art.101(1) if that information would normally be regarded as a business secret. Information about prices and other trading conditions is usually regarded as commercially sensitive and confidential. There is no objection to the collection by a trade association of statistical information giving an aggregate picture of the output and sales of the industry provided that individual company figures cannot be identified, or provided the information is sufficiently historical that it is unlikely to affect future behaviour.

(iv)

Collusive tendering

The practice of collusive tendering whereby firms agree amongst themselves to collaborate over their response to invitations to tender infringes art.101(1) and may attract large fines. ¹²⁰

(v)

Joint selling or purchasing

Joint selling or purchasing agreements may fall within art.101(1) where the parties agree the price they are prepared to charge or to pay or where they agree to buy or sell wholly or mainly through a joint operation such as a subsidiary company or other trade association they have established for this purpose. The Commission has published guidance on the applicability of art.101 to those kinds of benign horizontal agreements which often generate beneficial effects on competition; these include joint purchasing or production, research and development and standardisation agreements. ¹²¹

(vi)

Pay-for-delay agreements

An agreement between the owner of a patent and a manufacturer of generic drugs contemplating entry into the market upon expiry of the patent, whereby the patent owner makes a payment to the generic producer not to enter the market, may amount to an agreement that restricts competition by object. ¹²²

Joint ventures

43-036

One category of arrangement which is often considered by the Commission is where two or more undertakings set up a joint venture and pool their resources for the purpose of carrying out joint research and development of a new product or to establish more efficient production, distribution or promotion of their products. Such arrangements often impose restrictions on the parent companies' ability to compete with each other and/or with the joint venture, the grant by the parents of intellectual property or know-how licences to the joint venture, and restrictions on the use by the parents of the results of the activities of the joint enterprise. The basic principles according to which such arrangements are assessed under art.101(1) are set out in the Commission's Guidelines on Horizontal Cooperation Agreements. ¹²³ Some of these agreements will benefit from the block exemption regulations for research and development agreements and specialisation agreements promulgated by the Commission. ¹²⁴ Reference should be made to specialist works for the detailed rules to be applied to these kinds of agreements. ¹²⁵

Mergers

43-037

Article 101(1) does not apply to the acquisition of control of one company by another and mergers are governed by a separate legal regime under the EU Merger Regulation, Council Regulation 139/2004 ¹²⁶ and the subsidiary legislation and Commission Notices issued in implementation of the Merger Regulation. Some joint ventures fall to be considered under the Merger Regulation, if they are “full function”, that is if they have all the necessary resources in terms of funding, staff and assets to carry out the functions normally carried out by undertakings operating on the same market. ¹²⁷ Again, reference should be made to specialist works for an analysis of this complex area of the law. ¹²⁸

Application of article 101(1) to vertical agreements

43-038

The prohibition in art.101(1) is capable of applying to vertical agreements between suppliers and wholesalers or retailers as it does to horizontal agreements between undertakings at the same level of production. ¹²⁹ Generally, vertical agreements are likely to have a detrimental effect on competition only where competition with other firms’ products, so-called “inter-brand competition”, is restricted; this may be the case either directly as a result of a contractual restraint or due to the power of a supplier over the market in which it operates. It should be borne in mind that in the EU the integration of the single market is also an important consideration when applying art.101 to vertical agreements. However, the law recognises that many vertical agreements, while in one sense restricting competition, have countervailing benefits in terms of improving distribution which satisfy the requirements of art.101(3). This recognition is exemplified by the Commission’s block exemption Regulation on vertical agreements, Regulation 330/2010. The Commission has also published comprehensive Guidelines on Vertical Restraints ¹³⁰ which cover those agreements falling outside art.101(1) as well as discussing issues arising from the application of the block exemption and its enforcement policy in relation to such agreements. There are some clauses which are commonly found in the various categories of vertical agreements which may require particularly careful scrutiny under art.101(1) and these are described in the following paragraphs.

Exclusivity provisions

43-039

Many vertical agreements contain exclusivity provisions where the supplier appoints a single dealer in a particular territory and undertakes not to supply any other dealer in that territory ¹³¹ and/or where a dealer undertakes that he will buy all his supplies of a particular product only from a single supplier. ¹³² The mere grant of exclusive marketing rights in a particular territory does not, of itself, have as its object the restriction of competition; it must be examined in its legal, factual and economic context in order to determine whether it has such an effect. ¹³³ On balance, the case law indicates that a wide range of factors must be taken into account in deciding whether an exclusive supply contract falls within art.101(1), such as the novelty or technical complexity of the product to which the agreement relates, the level of investment and marketing commitment the distributor is expected to undertake, ¹³⁴ and the strength of the undertakings on the market for the product involved. ¹³⁵ The block exemption will apply to agreements containing these kinds of clauses provided the supplier’s and the buyer’s market shares are less than 30 per cent and that they are not combined with any hardcore restrictions proscribed by art.4 of the Regulation. ¹³⁶ It is therefore only where the agreement as a whole does not benefit from the block exemption that the question of the application of art.101(1) to such clauses is an important issue. Specific guidance on the application of art.101 to individual vertical agreements is provided by the Commission’s Guidelines on Vertical Restraints. ¹³⁷

Restrictions on imports or exports

43-040

If an agreement contains any term which affects the freedom of the distributor to export the goods supplied under the agreement to other Member States or which obstructs the ability of third parties to import or export those goods, it needs to be scrutinised carefully for compatibility with art.101(1). In the leading case of Consten and Grundig v Commission,¹³⁸ Grundig established a network of distributors in the different Member States, including the French distributor Consten. Grundig assigned the GINT trade mark to its products in France to Consten and agreed not to deliver Grundig products to anyone in France except to Consten and Consten agreed not to sell the products outside France. Grundig further undertook to procure that its distributors in the other Member States would also be subject to an export ban so that Consten enjoyed what is termed “absolute territorial protection”, i.e. it was protected not only from competing sales by other French Grundig distributors but from sales in France of products emanating from distributors in the other Member States. This aspect of the distribution system was condemned by the Court of Justice. The principle laid down in Consten and Grundig has been affirmed many times; any attempt to ban exports or to provide absolute territorial protection for exclusive dealers will normally be prohibited by art.101(1). The finding of the General Court that an indirect export ban in the GlaxoSmithKline case¹³⁹ did not have the object of restricting competition due to the specific conditions of the pharmaceutical sector in the EU, in which laws and regulations adopted by various Member States have a distortive effect on competition, was overruled by the Court of Justice on appeal.¹⁴⁰ However, the Court of Justice agreed with the General Court that the Commission had insufficiently considered Glaxo's argument that the agreements in question might be justifiable under art.101(3) TFEU. For technical reasons no answer was ever forthcoming from the Commission on the latter point.

The distinction between “active” and “passive” sales

43-041

In defining the extent to which exclusivity can legitimately be granted to a dealer in distribution agreements the block exemption, Regulation 330/2010, and the Commission's Guidelines draw a distinction between bans on “active” sales by a dealer outside his contract territory and bans on “passive” sales outside the contract territory.¹⁴¹ “Active” sales are those which are sought by the dealer, for example by placing advertisements or setting up a branch office or distribution apparatus outside his contract territory and, broadly speaking, a ban on such sales is regarded as legitimate and capable of satisfying art.101(3). “Passive” sales are those made in response to an order or request for products from a customer outside the territory, which is not solicited by the dealer; in general, passive selling includes the advertising or selling of a product via the internet.¹⁴² Generally speaking the dealer must remain free to make passive sales outside his territory, even if the territory from which the request comes has been allocated to a different exclusive dealer in the network; this is explained further in para.43-050, below.

Other measures impeding parallel imports

43-042

The freedom of a distributor or third party to import and export the goods supplied by the manufacturer to his dealer may be hindered by more sophisticated measures than a simple export ban. A provision requiring that the dealer supply only to end-users,¹⁴³ or preventing him from supplying goods to other dealers in the network,¹⁴⁴ or requiring him to provide information for the purpose of monitoring the destination of products¹⁴⁵ will be prohibited. The refusal to service parallel imported goods or to honour guarantees in relation to such goods¹⁴⁶ will also fall foul of art.101. Suppliers sometimes aim to discourage exports by charging a different price according to the territory into which the goods are to be delivered. An agreement under which different prices are charged to a purchaser merely on the grounds of his nationality or because he intends to export will very often contravene art.101(1).¹⁴⁷ The view of the General Court that this practice may not infringe art.101(1) in the specific circumstances of the pharmaceutical sector was reversed on appeal to the Court of

Justice. ¹⁴⁸

Resale price maintenance

43-043

A provision which seeks to control the minimum price at which a distributor may resell goods, or to impose a fixed price on the distributor, is likely to contravene art.101(1), at least if it applies to goods which are imported or reimported from, or exported to, another Member State. ¹⁴⁹ However, the communication by the supplier to the distributor of the supplier's recommended resale price is not unlawful unless a concerted practice grows up whereby the dealers in fact always charge the recommended price. ¹⁵⁰ A clause requiring the joint setting of prices by supplier and reseller is illegal even if it is never enforced. ¹⁵¹

Typical vertical agreements covered by article 101(1)

43-044

The kind of agreements most likely to be encountered by the practitioner and which require consideration under art.101(1) include exclusive distribution agreements; exclusive purchasing agreements; brewery tied house agreements; petrol solus agreements; intellectual property licences; franchise agreements; agency agreements; and selective distribution agreements. When considering each of these types of agreements one must consider both which terms of the agreement fall within art.101(1) and whether the agreement benefits from block exemption under Regulation 330/2010 (in the case of vertical agreements) or Regulation 316/2014 (in the case of intellectual property licences or, as they are often called, "technology transfer agreements"). In practice, the latter question—does an agreement benefit from one of the block exemptions—may be tackled first, since it is only if an agreement falls outside the block exemptions that the possible invalidity of the agreement under art.101(1) arises.

Application of the block exemptions

43-045

In the following paragraphs each category of agreement is considered in turn dealing both with the application of art.101(1) and the relevant block exemption regulation. It is important to bear in mind that if an agreement contains a clause which takes it outside the block exemption then the agreement as a whole cannot enjoy the benefit of the block exemption in respect of any of the clauses in it. In such a case all the clauses that are found to fall within art.101(1) and do not fulfil the conditions in art.101(3) will be invalid and unlawful, not just the clauses which go beyond those permitted by the block exemption. ¹⁵² The following paragraphs contain only a summary of the provisions of the block exemptions and reference should be made to the full text of Regulation 330/2010 in any assessment of an agreement.

Block exemption for vertical agreements

43-046

Regulation 330/2010 ¹⁵³ is the block exemption for vertical agreements generally, although Regulation 461/2010 applies to certain agreements in the motor car sector. ¹⁵⁴

Meaning of vertical agreement

43-047

Regulation 330/2010 applies to agreements or concerted practices entered into between two or more undertakings, each of which operates, for the purposes of the agreement, at a different level of the production or distribution chain. Typically this will be between a manufacturer and a wholesaler or between a wholesaler and a retailer. However, an agreement for the supply of goods by one manufacturer to another manufacturer will count as a vertical agreement, because they are at different levels of distribution for the purposes of the agreement. The application of the Regulation will, however, be different depending on whether the two manufacturers in question are competing in the same market: where they are, their agreement will benefit from block exemption only if the terms of art.2(4) are satisfied.

Market share cap

43-048

Where the vertical agreement is between parties who are not in competition with each other, then arts 2 and 3 of Regulation 330/2010 provide that the agreement is block exempted provided that the market share of the supplier does not exceed 30 per cent of the relevant market on which it sells the goods or services and that the market share of the buyer does not exceed 30 per cent of the relevant market on which it purchases the goods or services. Article 8 of the Regulation provides guidance on how to ascertain the market shares of the parties.

Prohibited clauses: resale price maintenance

43-049

Article 4(a) of the Regulation provides that it will not apply to an agreement which directly or indirectly restricts the ability of the buyer to set its sale prices. This does not, however, prohibit the supplier from imposing a maximum sales price or from recommending a price provided that there is no pressure or incentive on the buyer to treat this as a fixed price.

Prohibited clauses: territorial restrictions

43-050

Article 4(b) of the Regulation sets the limits of the block exemption so far as the imposition of restrictions on the territory into which the buyer can sell the goods or as to the customers to whom he can sell the goods acquired under the contract. The block exemption will apply provided that such restrictions limit only active sales into the territory or to a customer group which has been exclusively allocated by the supplier to a different buyer or reserved to itself. In other words the buyer must be able to sell goods into the exclusive territory of either the supplier or another buyer if the sale is made at the customer's initiative. In the case of a selective distribution network, the agreement may prohibit the buyer from selling to unauthorised distributors outside the network but must not prohibit them from selling to other authorised distributors or to any end users. In the case of an agreement for the supply of components, the agreement may not restrict the supplier to selling the components as spare parts to end users.

Non-compete obligations

43-051

Article 5(1)(a) of the Regulation provides that the block exemption will not apply to "any direct or indirect non-compete obligation, the duration of which is indefinite or exceeds five years". However, art.5(2) permits a longer period where goods or services are sold from premises owned by the supplier, or leased by the supplier from a third party, provided that the obligation does not exceed the period of occupancy of the premises by the buyer. A non-compete obligation is defined broadly by art.1 of the Regulation to include any obligation on the buyer to purchase from the supplier more than 80 per cent of its total purchases. Article 5(1)(b) provides that the block exemption will not apply to post-termination non-compete clauses; however, art.5(3) permits such a clause for up to one year where the supplier makes the premises available to the buyer.

Networks of parallel agreements

43-052

Article 29 of Regulation 1/2003 provides that the Commission or a national competition authority of a Member State may withdraw the benefit of the block exemption from a particular vertical agreement that is incompatible with the conditions laid down in art.101(3); this may be the case where there are parallel networks of similar agreements which seal off access to the market. Where parallel networks of similar vertical agreements cover more than 50 per cent of the relevant market, art.6 of the Regulation authorises the Commission by regulation to disapply the block exemption to vertical agreements containing specific restraints in that market. Any such regulation must not take effect earlier than six months following its adoption.

Transitional provisions

43-053

According to art.9 of the Regulation, the exempt status of existing agreements which benefited from exemption under Regulation 2790/99 continued until June 1, 2011. Otherwise, Regulation 330/2010 took effect from June 1, 2010 and expires on May 31, 2022.

Intellectual property licences

43-054

The exercise of intellectual property rights may be affected not only by the competition provisions of the TFEU but also by the articles ¹⁵⁵ which deal with the free movement of goods. There is substantial jurisprudence of the Court of Justice limiting the extent to which the owner or licensee of, say, a UK patent, copyright or registered trade mark can rely on the rights conferred by UK intellectual property law to prevent imports into the UK of goods which have been lawfully placed on the market in another Member State. ¹⁵⁶ However, art.101 also affects the validity of certain terms in licences of intellectual property rights. This is a complex area with many detailed rules to be applied and reference should be made to works on competition law and/or intellectual property rights. ¹⁵⁷

Intellectual property licences and article 101(1)

43-055

Many intellectual property licences provide for the exclusive grant of the licence to the licensee in the particular territory covered by the agreement whereby the licensor undertakes that he will not exploit the property himself in the territory and he will not license any other person to do so. Such a restriction may fall outside art.101(1) if the grant of the exclusive licence is the sole means whereby the licensor is able to ensure that the rights will be fully exploited in the territory concerned. ¹⁵⁸ This depends on the novelty and complexity of the technology involved and the level of investment and other resources which the licensee will have to devote to launching the product incorporating the rights in the territory concerned. ¹⁵⁹ Many other terms commonly found in licences may fall within art.101(1), in particular any terms purporting to limit the number of products manufactured using the rights or the export of any such product, "no challenge" clauses, field of use restrictions or tying obligations which are not essential for the proper exploitation of the rights.

Technology transfers agreements

43-056

The Commission adopted Regulation 316/2014 on March 21 2014. ¹⁶⁰ It entered into force on May 1, 2014 and will expire on April 30, 2026. ¹⁶¹ The format of Regulation 316/2014 is similar to Regulation 330/2010 on vertical agreements. Regulation 316/2014 applies to licences of patents, know-how and software copyright, including mixed licences thereof. Article 2 confers block exemption on certain bilateral technology transfer agreements. Article 3 imposes market share caps, which differ depending on whether an agreement is horizontal or vertical, the former being treated more strictly: the cap is 20 per cent for horizontal agreements and 30 per cent for vertical agreements. Article 4 contains a list of hardcore restrictions, the inclusion of which in an agreement will prevent the block exemption from applying: the list is stricter for horizontal than for vertical agreements. Article 5 sets out certain restrictions that are not block exempted, but which do not prevent the application of the Regulation to the rest of the agreement. Articles 6 and 7 provide for the block exemption to be withdrawn from agreements in certain circumstances. Subsequent provisions deal with matters such as the calculation of market share thresholds and transitional arrangements. Regulation 772/04 should be read in conjunction with the Commission's Technology Transfer Guidelines. ¹⁶²

Franchise agreements

43-057

Franchise agreements are those whereby the proprietor of a trade mark, business name or other distinctive marketing presentation (the franchisor) grants one or more parties (the franchisees) the rights to use the mark or other marketing format in the supply of goods or services and to present their premises in accordance with the distinctive layout or format associated with the franchisor. Each franchisee remains an independent trader bearing his own financial risk but he benefits from the goodwill associated with the franchisor's business. To the outside observer the franchisees' premises look uniform and sell products of the same appearance and quality. The franchisee normally undertakes to pay a royalty on sales from his premises and to buy at least part of his stock from the franchisor or from suppliers nominated by the franchisor. The franchisor provides know-how which may include staff training and guidance as well as allowing the franchisee to use the marketing image which usually has proven customer appeal.

Franchise agreements and article 101

43-058

In the leading case of Pronuptia ¹⁶³ the Court of Justice considered the terms of a standard form franchise agreement for the well-known bridal outfitters. The Court held that those clauses which were essential to the proper operation of the franchise system did not fall within art.101(1). Thus, since it was essential that the franchisor be able to protect the know-how and other expertise that he provides to the franchisee, art.101(1) is not infringed if the franchisee is prohibited from opening a shop of the same nature in an area where he may compete with another member of the network. Similarly, since it is essential that the uniformity of appearance and quality of the outlets in the franchise network is maintained, obligations on the franchisee to decorate his premises in a certain way or, in some circumstances, to buy his supplies of product from the franchisor are permissible. For those franchise agreements which may fall within art.101(1) such as those that divide the market territorially, Regulation 330/2010 provides block exemption, provided that such agreements do not contain restrictions going beyond those set out in the Regulation. In Carewatch Care Services Ltd v Focus Caring Services Ltd ¹⁶⁴ the High Court rejected a claim by the defendants that a one-year post-termination non-compete clause was contrary to art.101(1) and therefore unenforceable as the clause was to protect the know-how of the franchisor.

Agency agreements

43-059

Generally speaking, art.101(1) does not apply to an agreement between a principal and agent under which the latter agrees to procure business or to close transactions in the name and on behalf of the principal, in circumstances in which the agent is not acting as an independent trader on his own account.¹⁶⁵ However, the position is different where the agent is in business on his own account and bears financial or commercial risk in addition to carrying out his agency duties.¹⁶⁶ In such circumstances, clauses whereby the agent agrees not to act for suppliers other than the principal or to promote the principal's products in preference to those of other suppliers need to be scrutinised under art.101.¹⁶⁷ In *DaimlerChrysler v Commission*¹⁶⁸ the General Court annulled a finding of an infringement of art.101(1) by the Commission because the Commission had incorrectly concluded that DaimlerChrysler's dealers were not agents. Further guidance on the application of art.101 to agency agreements, in the context of service stations for the sale of petrol, can be found in the Court of Justice's judgment in Confederacion Española de Empresarios de Estaciones de Servicio.¹⁶⁹ The Commission's Guidelines on Vertical Restraints provide helpful guidance on the way in which it considers that art.101 does or does not apply to agency agreements.¹⁷⁰

Selective distribution systems

43-060

Sometimes a supplier chooses to distribute his goods through a limited number of dealers who are able to offer a level of technical expertise or whose premises are in keeping with the luxury image of the goods.¹⁷¹ Agreements between the supplier and the approved dealers in these cases will contain restrictions on the on-sale of the goods to dealers outside the network and will place obligations on the dealer concerning the training of staff and the extent and quality of promotional and advertising activity, etc. Article 101(1) will not in general apply to such agreements, provided that the dealers are selected only on the basis of non-discriminatory criteria relating to their technical ability to handle the goods or the suitability of their premises.¹⁷² However, if there is any limit on the number of dealers whom the supplier is prepared to approve, or any additional restrictions or obligations imposed on the reseller, art.101(1) may apply, in which case the selective distribution system would have to satisfy the criteria in art.101(3). In practice, a selective distribution agreement may benefit from the block exemption conferred by Regulation 330/2010 provided that the supplier's and the buyer's market shares are 30 per cent or less; that resale prices are not fixed; that there are no restrictions on active or passive sales to end-users; and that there are no restrictions on cross-supplies between authorised distributors.

^{116.} See below, paras 43-065—43-076.

^{117.} For detailed analysis of horizontal price-fixing agreements see Bellamy and Child, European Union Law of Competition, 7th edn (2013), paras 5.038–5.059; Whish and Bailey, Competition Law, 8th edn (2015), pp.556–565.

^{118.} For detailed analysis of horizontal market-sharing agreements see Bellamy and Child, European Union Law of Competition, 7th edn (2013), paras 5.065–5.074; Whish and Bailey, Competition Law, 8th edn, pp.565–568.

^{119.} For detailed analysis of the exchange of information see Whish and Bailey, Competition Law, 8th edn (2015), pp.575–583.

^{120.} For detailed analysis of collusive tendering agreements see Whish and Bailey, Competition Law, 8th edn (2015), pp.571–573.

^{121.} Commission's Guidelines on Horizontal Cooperation Agreements [2010] O.J. C11/1.

^{122.}  See, e.g. Lundbeck, Commission decision of June 19, 2013; Servier/Perindopril, Commission decision of July 9, 2014. The Commission's decision in Lundbeck was upheld on appeal to the General Court, H Lundbeck A/S v Commission (T-472/13) EU:T:2016:449; the case is on further appeal to the Court of Justice, P Lundbeck A/S v Commission (C-591/16), not yet decided.

- 123. [2010] O.J. C11/1.
- 124. Regulation 1217/2010 (research and development agreements) and Regulation 1218/2010 (specialisation agreements); see nn.110 and 111 above.
- 125. e.g. Bellamy and Child, European Union Law of Competition, 7th edn (2013), Ch.6; Whish and Bailey, Competition Law, 8th edn (2015), Ch.15.
- 126. [2004] O.J. L24/1.
- 127. See Commission Consolidated Jurisdictional Notice, July 10, 2007.
- 128. See, e.g. Levy, European Merger Control Law: a Guide to the Merger Regulation (LexisNexis, 2003); Bellamy and Child, European Union Law of Competition, 7th edn (2013), Ch.7; Whish and Bailey, Competition Law, 8th edn (2015), Ch.21.
- 129. Consten & Grundig v Commission [1966] E.C.R. 299.
- 130. [2010] O.J. C130/1.
- 131. Sometimes the supplier also undertakes that he will not supply end-users himself in the territory.
- 132. Sometimes the dealer also undertakes that he will not deal in goods which compete with the goods supplied under the agreement.
- 133. See Société Technique Minière v Maschinenbau Ulm [1966] E.C.R. 235; Nungesser v Commission [1982] E.C.R. 2015, 2069; Dansk Pelsdyravlerforening v Commission [1992] E.C.R. I-1931 for exclusive supply; and Delimitis v Henninger Bräu [1991] E.C.R. I-935 for exclusive purchase.
- 134. e.g. Nungesser, above.
- 135. e.g. Delimitis, above; Javico International v Yves Saint Laurent Parfums [1998] E.C.R. I-1983.
- 136. See Regulation 330/2010 arts 3 and 4; discussed below, paras 43–048 to 43–050.
- 137. See n.132 above.
- 138. [1966] E.C.R. 299.
- 139. [2006] E.C.R. II-2969.
- 140. GlaxoSmithKline Services Unltd v Commission [2009] E.C.R. I-9291.
- 141. This distinction is drawn in art.4(b) of Regulation 330/2010 and by the Commission's Guidelines on Vertical Restraints: see below, para.43-050.
- 142. Commission's Guidelines on Vertical Restraints paras 51-54.
- 143. Société de Vente de Ciments et Bétons v Kerpen & Kerpen [1983] E.C.R. 4173.
- 144. See, e.g. Hasselblad v Commission [1984] E.C.R. 883.
- 145. Hasselblad v Commission [1984] E.C.R. 883. See also BASF Coatings v Commission [1999]

- E.C.R. II-1581*, where the General Court concluded that a clause requiring the wholesaler to pass onto the manufacturer any inquiries from customers outside his contract territory operated as an export ban.
- 146. ETA v DK Investment [1985] E.C.R. 3933 (Swatch watches).
 - 147. Distillers v Commission [1980] E.C.R. 2229.
 - 148. GlaxoSmithKline Services v Commission [2009] E.C.R. I-9291.
 - 149. Hasselblad v Commission [1984] E.C.R. 863; Publishers' Association v Commission [1992] E.C.R. II-1995.
 - 150. Pronuptia de Paris v Schillgalis [1986] E.C.R. 353.
 - 151. Novalliance/Systemform [1997] O.J. L47/11.
 - 152. Delimitis v Henninger Bräu [1991] E.C.R. I-935.
 - 153. [2010] O.J. L102/1.
 - 154. [2010] O.J. L129/52.
 - 155. arts 34–37 TFEU.
 - 156. See, e.g. Merck v Primecrown [1996] E.C.R. I-6285 (patents); Phytheron v Bourdon [1997] E.C.R. I-1729 (trade marks); Metronome Musik v Music Point Hokamp [1998] E.C.R. I-1953.
 - 157. See e.g. Bellamy and Child, European Community Law of Competition, 7th edn (2013), Ch.9; Whish and Bailey, Competition Law, 8th edn (2015), Ch.19.
 - 158. Nungesser v Commission [1982] E.C.R. 2015; Louis Erauw-Jacquery v La Hesbignonne Société Co-opérative [1988] E.C.R. 1919.
 - 159. Louis Erauw-Jacquery v La Hesbignonne Société Co-opérative [1988] E.C.R. 1919.
 - 160. [2014] O.J. L93/7; Regulation 316/2014 replaces the earlier technology transfer regulation, Regulation 772/2004.
 - 161. Regulation 316/2014 art.11.
 - 162. [2014] O.J. C89/3.
 - 163. [1986] E.C.R. 353.
 - 164. [2014] EWHC 2313 (Ch).
 - 165. See, e.g. Sugar [1975] E.C.R. 1663, 2007, paras 538–540.
 - 166. VVR v Sociale Dienst [1987] E.C.R. 3801, 3828 (travel agents).
 - 167. Cases on the application of art.101 to agency agreements include Suiker Unie; Vereniging van Vlaamse Reisbureaus v Sociale Dienst van de Plaatselijke en Gewestelijke Overheidsdiensten [1987] E.C.R. 3801; DaimlerChrysler v Commission [2005] E.C.R. II-3319. See also the Council Directive on coordination of the law relating to self employed commercial agents brought into force as from January 1, 1994 by the Commercial Agents (Council Directive) Regulations 1993 (SI 1993/3053).
 - 168. [2005] E.C.R. II-3319.

- 169. [2006] E.C.R. II-1997.
- 170. Commission's Guidelines on Vertical Restraints paras 12–21.
- 171. The leading cases are Metro v Commission (No.1) [1977] E.C.R. 1875; AEG v Commission [1983] E.C.R. 3151; and Ford v Commission (No.2) [1985] E.C.R. 2725.
- 172. See Groupement d'achat Edouard Leclerc v Commission [1996] E.C.R. II-1961 (perfume and luxury cosmetics).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition
Section 2. - Competition Rules Under the TFEU
(e) - Article 102

Contractual clauses as infringements of article 102

43-061

Article 102 TFEU prohibits any abuse by one or more undertakings of a dominant position within the internal market or a substantial part of it insofar as it may affect trade between Member States. ¹⁷³ It used to be thought that art.101(1) applied to contracts and that art.102 applied to unilateral conduct on the part of dominant undertakings. However, increasingly the Commission and the Courts of the European Union have held that certain contractual provisions constitute an abuse of a dominant position when entered into by dominant firms.

Dominant undertakings

43-062

A detailed description of the test for ascertaining whether an undertaking enjoys a dominant position is beyond the scope of this work. ¹⁷⁴ Broadly speaking, one must first identify the product sector and the geographical area in which the undertaking being scrutinised competes ¹⁷⁵ and then calculate the market share of that market supplied by the undertaking and the number and size of its competitors. ¹⁷⁶ Many other factors are relevant in determining dominance, in particular the ownership of intellectual property rights and the existence of any other barriers to new entry to the market by potential competitors. Dominance of itself is not a contravention of the Treaty, but dominant undertakings have a “special responsibility” not to engage in any conduct which will hinder the maintenance of such competition that still takes place in the market. ¹⁷⁷ This responsibility becomes greater, and as a corollary a finding of abuse becomes more likely, the weaker the competitive constraints facing the dominant undertaking in a market are. However, in Irish Sugar v Commission ¹⁷⁸ the General Court stated that the fact that an undertaking is in a dominant position cannot deprive it of its entitlement to protect its own commercial interests when they are attacked, although such behaviour cannot be allowed if its purpose is to strengthen the dominant position and thereby abuse it. Articles 101 and 102 are not mutually exclusive and conduct which falls within art.101 may also be an abuse. ¹⁷⁹

Examples of abusive contractual provisions

43-063

 The following contractual clauses have been held to be capable of amounting to abusive conduct when engaged in by a dominant undertaking ¹⁸⁰:

- (i) Loyalty rebates

Special discounts or rebates granted by a dominant firm in return for securing all or most of a customer's business may well infringe art.102 since it is likely to have the same effect that a contractual stipulation to purchase exclusively would have done, making it more difficult for competitors to persuade customers to buy otherwise than from the dominant undertaking.¹⁸¹ In *Virgin/British Airways*¹⁸² the Commission synthesised the case law on loyalty rebates as follows: a dominant supplier can give discounts that relate to efficiencies, for example discounts for large orders that allow the supplier to produce large volumes of the product; however a dominant undertaking cannot give discounts or incentives that encourage loyalty on the part of a customer, that is for avoiding purchases from a competitor of the dominant supplier. BA's arrangements with travel agents were condemned as abusive. In Intel v Commission the General Court held that rebates offered by a dominant undertaking in return for exclusivity would always infringe art.102 unless they can be shown to be objectively justifiable or to lead to economic efficiencies.¹⁸³ !

(ii) Turnover related discounts

Similarly, discounts or rebates which are related to the customer achieving a certain value or volume of purchases over a set period may be abusive.¹⁸⁴

(iii) Tying clauses

Clauses which require the customer to acquire additional products or services from a supplier when it buys the product in which that supplier is dominant may infringe art.102 unless there is an objective justification for doing so such as making the production or distribution of goods cheaper.¹⁸⁵ One of the abusive practices for which the European Commission fined Microsoft €497 million in March 2004 was that it had "tied" its Windows Client PC Operating System with its Windows Media Player.¹⁸⁶

Refusal to contract as abusive conduct

43-064

The common law doctrine of "freedom of contract"¹⁸⁷ which provides that any company is free to decide not to enter into a contract with a particular company is circumscribed in relation to dominant undertakings. A dominant undertaking may, in exceptional circumstances, be found to have acted abusively where it refuses to supply an established customer, and in some cases a new customer, unless it has a legitimate objective justification for such a refusal.¹⁸⁸ One of the abusive practices for which the European Commission fined Microsoft €497 million in March 2004 was that it had refused to supply interoperability information to competitors wishing to make use of it for the purpose of developing and distributing work group server operating system products.¹⁸⁹

^{173.} The requirement of an actual or potential effect on trade between Member States is discussed above, paras 43-027—43-030.

^{174.} See, e.g. Bellamy and Child, European Union Law of Competition, 7th edn (2013), Ch.10; Whish and Bailey, Competition Law, 8th edn (2015), pp.26–51 and pp.190–199. Note also that the European Commission has published "Guidance on the Commission's enforcement priorities in applying Article [102 TFEU] to abusive exclusionary conduct by dominant undertakings”, [2010] O.J. C45/7. This document is not a formal set of guidelines describing the law of art.102 TFEU; however, it does provide useful insights into the way in which the Commission regards particular types of behaviour under art.102, and indicates the circumstances in which it might be inclined to open proceedings in relation to possibly abusive behaviour.

- 175. The leading cases on definition of the relevant market include United Brands v Commission [1978] E.C.R. 207; Hoffmann-La Roche v Commission [1979] E.C.R. 461; Michelin v Commission [1983] E.C.R. 3461; Hilti v Commission [1991] E.C.R. II-315.
- 176. A broad rule of thumb is that a market share of over 40 per cent sustained over a number of years may be an indication of dominance; there has only been one finding of dominance below 40 per cent, in Virgin/British Airways [2000] O.J. L30/1, where the Commission considered British Airways held a dominant position with a market share of 39.7 per cent in the market for the procurement of air travel agency services (the case was upheld on appeal to the General Court in British Airways v Commission [2003] E.C.R. II-5917 and on appeal to the Court of Justice in British Airways v Commission [2007] E.C.R. I-2331).
- 177. Michelin v Commission [1983] E.C.R. 3461, 3511.
- 178. [1999] E.C.R. II-2969.
- 179. On the relationship between arts 101 and 102 see, e.g. Ahmed Saeed [1989] E.C.R. 803; Tetra Pak I [1990] E.C.R. II-309.
- 180. Various other clauses were also condemned in Tetra Pak II [1994] E.C.R. II-755.
- 181. Hoffmann-La Roche [1979] E.C.R. 461; BPB Industries [1993] E.C.R. II-389 which also stated that the fact that the clause was included in the contract at the request of the customer does not affect its abusive nature.
- 182. [2000] O.J. L30/1, [2000] 4 C.M.L.R. 999, upheld on appeal by the General Court in British Airways v Commission [2003] E.C.R. II-5917 and on appeal to the Court of Justice British Airways v Commission [2007] E.C.R. I-2331.
- 183.  EU:T:2014:547. On September 6, 2017, the Court of Justice referred the case back to the General Court for further consideration of whether the rebates violated art.102.
- 184. Michelin v Commission [1983] E.C.R. 3461.
- 185. Hilti v Commission [1991] E.C.R. II-315; Tetra Pak II [1990] E.C.R. II-309.
- 186. Microsoft [2007] O.J. L32/23, upheld on appeal to the General Court Microsoft v Commission [2007] E.C.R. II-3601.
- 187. Vol.I, paras 1-026—1-035.
- 188. See, e.g. Commercial Solvents v Commission [1974] E.C.R. 223. Refusal to grant an intellectual property licence can in some circumstances amount to an abuse: Radio Telefis Eireann v Commission [1991] E.C.R. II-485.
- 189. See n.188 above.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition
Section 2. - Competition Rules Under the TFEU
(f) - Enforcement at the National Level

Direct applicability of articles 101 and 102

43-065

Article 1 of Regulation 1/2003 ¹⁹⁰ provides that arts 101 and 102 are directly applicable; agreements contrary to those prohibitions are prohibited, “no prior decision to that effect being required”. National competition authorities and national courts therefore have the power to apply the EU competition rules in full.

Role of the national courts

43-066

The direct effect of arts 101 and 102 means that contracting parties may rely on those provisions in national courts as a defence to the enforcement of a prohibited restriction and, furthermore, that third parties may in some circumstances plead an infringement of the competition rules as a defence to an action or as creating a cause of action sounding in damages.

Effect of Regulation 1/2003

43-067

Regulation 1/2003 art.6 specifically provides that national courts shall have power to apply arts 101 and 102 in full, and art.3 goes further by stating that they are under an obligation to apply arts 101 and 102 where an agreement or conduct have an effect on trade between Member States. Regulation 1/2003 contains several further provisions on the role of national courts in enforcing the EU competition rules. Article 15 of the Regulation makes provision for the national courts to request the Commission's opinion on the application of the competition rules; requires national courts to submit to the Commission any written judgment deciding on the application of arts 101 and 102; and enables national competition authorities and the Commission to make observations in proceedings before national courts. Article 16 of the Regulation is concerned with preserving the uniform application of EU law and gives effect to the Court of Justice's judgment in Masterfoods. ¹⁹¹ In that case the Court of Justice stated that when national courts rule on agreements or conduct which are already the subject of a Commission decision they cannot take a decision running contrary to that of the Commission. Article 16 adds that a national court must avoid giving a decision which would conflict with a decision contemplated by the Commission in parallel proceedings and must consider whether to stay its proceedings. The Commission has published a Notice on the cooperation between the Commission and the courts of the EU Member States in the application of arts 101 and 102 TFEU. ¹⁹²

Severance of void terms

43-068

Although art.101(2) provides that the prohibited agreement is void, the Court of Justice has held that it is in fact only the restrictive clauses in the agreement which are invalidated by art.101(2).¹⁹³ If those clauses can be severed from the agreement in accordance with the test usually applied under domestic law, the remainder of the agreement may be enforced.¹⁹⁴ However, in English Welsh & Scottish Railway Ltd v E.ON Plc the High Court held that directions by the Office of Rail Regulation, which has concurrent powers with the CMA to enforce the competition rules in the UK, that various terms of a coal carriage agreement between the parties were unlawful and should be removed altered the contract so fundamentally that it became void and unenforceable in its entirety.¹⁹⁵ In Calor Gas Ltd v Express Fuels (Scotland) Ltd the Outer House of the Court of Session in Scotland reached the conclusion that an exclusive dealing agreement was unenforceable by the supplier, Calor Gas, as it infringed art.101.¹⁹⁶ In *Robert Andrew Jones v Ricoh UK Ltd*¹⁹⁷ the Chancery Division of the High Court concluded that cl.7 of a Confidentiality Agreement was void and unenforceable as it was contrary to art.101(1) TFEU; the High Court subsequently held that cl.7 was severable from the remainder of the agreement which remained enforceable.¹⁹⁸ In *Martin Retail Group Ltd v Crawley Borough Council*¹⁹⁹ the Central London County Court held that a Proposed User clause in a letting scheme of retail premises was void and unenforceable under the Competition Act 1998 s.2.

Rights of third parties

43-069

In some circumstances a defendant who is not a party to a relevant agreement can plead art.101 or art.102 as a defence. This principally arises in actions brought by the holder of an intellectual property right who sues an alleged infringer of the right and is met by the defence that the licence under which he holds the right, or his conduct in exploiting the right, in some way contravenes the Treaty.²⁰⁰

Breaches of arts 101 or 102 as a cause of action

43-070

⚠ It is clear, following the judgment of the Court of Justice in Courage Ltd v Crehan,²⁰¹ that a person who suffers economic injury as a result of an infringement of the competition rules may bring an action for damages; such an action should, in principle, be available in order to safeguard the effective application ("effet utile") of the competition rules. The judgment in Courage Ltd v Crehan even establishes that one party to an agreement that infringes art.101 may be able to sue the other party for damages where the former does not bear the same responsibility for the infringement as the latter. Further judgments of the Court of Justice confirming the availability of damages for the victims of anti-competitive behaviour are *Manfredi*²⁰² and Kone AG v Ö BB Infrastruktur AG.²⁰³ The private enforcement of EU competition law was given added impetus by the adoption in November 2014 of the EU Damages Directive,²⁰⁴ ⚠ which entered into force on December 27, 2016. Most Member States failed to implement by that date, although most have now done so. It was implemented in UK law by the Claims in Respect of Loss or Damage Arising from Competition Infringements (Competition Act 1998 and Other Enactments (Amendment)) Regulations 2017.²⁰⁵ ⚠

Causes of action in English law

43-071

Even before the judgment of the Court of Justice in Courage Ltd v Crehan it had been established as a matter of domestic law that a breach of arts 101 or 102 can give rise to a cause of action on the part of someone injured by the prohibited conduct. In the leading case of *Garden Cottage Foods v Milk Marketing Board*²⁰⁶ the House of Lords held that in the light of the doctrine of direct effect, a breach of art.102 can be categorised in English law as a breach of statutory duty that is imposed not only for the purpose of promoting the general prosperity of the internal market but also for the benefit of private individuals to whom loss or damage is caused by a breach of that duty.²⁰⁷ Garden Cottage Foods was a decision at an interlocutory stage, but it was affirmed obiter by the Court of Appeal and relied upon in later actions. However, the fact that an action may be brought for breach of statutory duty does not preclude the possibility that an infringement of competition law might be tortious in some other way, such as conspiracy.²⁰⁸ In Gibbs v Gemmell the Court of Appeal held that, as a matter of English law, there was no action in damages or restitution at the suit of a party to a contract in respect of loss resulting from his compliance with terms which are in fact invalid because of art.101(2).²⁰⁹ However, this case must now be read subject to the judgment of the Court of Justice in *Courage Ltd v Crehan*²¹⁰ which says quite clearly, as a matter of EU law, that there should not be an absolute bar to a person in the position of a co-contractor bringing an action for damages for loss caused by a contract that is liable to restrict competition; otherwise the effectiveness of art.101 would be put at risk.

Role of national competition authorities

43-072

Under the regime introduced by Regulation 1/2003 national competition authorities share the competence to apply arts 101 and 102 alongside the national courts and the European Commission. National competition authorities have the power to make decisions bringing an infringement to an end, to order interim measures, to accept commitments from the parties in lieu of an adverse decision and to decide that there are no grounds for action on their part. The Regulation contains a number of provisions which are intended to promote cooperation between the Commission and the national competition authorities; a network of competition authorities, the "European Competition Network", has been established which will facilitate the handling of cases between the competition authorities in Europe. The Commission has published a Notice on Cooperation within the Network of Competition Authorities.²¹¹

^{190.} [2003] O.J. L1/1; see also BRT v SABAM [1974] E.C.R. 51. For the scope of this doctrine as applied in the UK, see R. v Secretary of State for Transport Ex p. Factortame Ltd (No.2) [1991] 1 A.C. 603. See also Eco Swiss China Time v Benetton [1999] E.C.R. I-3055, [2000] 5 C.M.L.R. 816 for the effect on an arbitration award of an allegation made on appeal that the agreement was contrary to art.101(1).

^{191.} [2000] E.C.R. I-11369.

^{192.} [2004] O.J. C101/54.

^{193.} Société de Vente de Ciments et Bétons v Kerpen & Kerpen [1983] E.C.R. 4173, 4184.

^{194.} See Richard Cound Ltd v BMW (GB) Ltd [1997] Eu.L.R. 277 CA; applied in, e.g. Benford Ltd v Cameron Equipment [1997] Eu.L.R. 334 Merc Ct; Parkes v Esso Petroleum [1999] 1 C.M.L.R. 455. See also Byrne v Inntrepreneur Beer Supply Co Ltd [1999] Eu.L.R. 834. For the English law of severance see Vol.I, paras 16-211 et seq.

^{195.} [2007] EWHC 599 (Comm), [2007] U.K.C.L.R. 1653.

^{196.} [2007] CSOH 170.

^{197.} [2010] EWHC 1743 (Ch).

^{198.} Robert Andrew Jones v IOS (RUK) Ltd and Ricoh UK Ltd [2012] EWHC 348 (Ch) at [44].

^{199.} [2014] L. & T.R. 17.

^{200.} See Philips Electronics v Ingman Ltd [1998] Eu.L.R. 666 Ch D; and the cases cited therein; Chiron Corp v Murex Diagnostics (No.2) [1994] 1 C.M.L.R. 410; Sportswear SpA v Stonestyle Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 380, [2006] U.K.C.L.R. 893.

- 201. [2001] E.C.R. I-6297.
- 202. [2006] E.C.R. I-6619.
- 203. EU:C:2014:1317.
- 204.  Directive 2014/14/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council on certain rules governing actions for damages under national law for infringements of the competition law provisions of the Member States and of the European Union [2014] O.J. L349/1.
- 205.  SI 2017/385.
- 206. [1984] A.C. 130.
- 207. See, e.g. Kirklees MBC v Wickes Building Supplies [1993] A.C. 227; An Bord Bainne v Milk Marketing Board [1988] 1 C.M.L.R. 605; Cutsforth v Mansfield Inns [1986] 1 W.L.R. 558.
- 208. W.H. Newson Ltd v IMI Plc [2013] EWCA Civ 1377.
- 209. Gibbs Mew Plc v Gemmell [1998] Eu.L.R. 588; Passmore v Morland [1999] 1 C.M.L.R. 1129; Parkes v Esso Petroleum [1999] 1 C.M.L.R. 455 and the cases cited therein.
- 210. [2001] E.C.R. I-6297; when the case reverted to the UK, the court held the agreement did not infringe art.101(1) in Crehan v Innentrepreneur Pub Co [2003] EWHC 1510 (Ch), a finding that was upheld by the House of Lords, [2006] UKHL 38.
- 211. [2004] O.J. C101/43.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition
Section 2. - Competition Rules Under the TFEU
(g) - Enforcement at the EU Level

Regulation 1/2003

43-073

The powers of the European Commission to enforce the competition rules were originally laid down in Regulation 17; that Regulation was replaced by Regulation 1/2003 with effect from May 1, 2004. ²¹²

Commission investigations and adverse decisions

43-074

A Commission investigation into the existence of anti-competitive conduct may be prompted by a complaint made by a competitor or customer, or may result from the Commission's own analysis of a particular market and an ex officio investigation. The Commission has wide powers to seek information and examine documents when carrying out investigations into infringements of the Treaty. ²¹³ The Commission has adopted an implementing regulation to accompany the entry into force of Regulation 1/2003 which explains the circumstances and manner in which the Commission conducts proceedings in art 101 and 102 cases. ²¹⁴ The implementing regulation lays down provisions on the issue of a Statement of Objections (setting out the Commission's provisional findings of fact, legal analysis and its view on appropriate remedies) and the parties' written and oral rights of defence. Regulation 1/2003 provides that the Commission may adopt decisions requiring termination of an infringement; accepting commitments which bind the parties and conclude the Commission's proceedings; or, where the EU public interest requires, making a finding that art.101 and/or art.102 does not apply to an agreement. A decision of the Commission is binding on the undertakings to which it is addressed but is subject to appeal to the General Court.

Interim measures

43-075

Article 8 of Regulation 1/2003 gives the Commission the power to order interim measures either on its own initiative or on the application of the complainant in a case; case law had held that such a power also existed under the old Regulation 17, although that instrument did not explicitly say so. ²¹⁵ The Commission has adopted interim measures on very few occasions; a complainant in need of interim relief may find this easier to obtain on application to a domestic court, which might require an undertaking to pay damages in the event of a failure to establish a claim at the trial of the action. Interim relief was successfully obtained by a claimant in Adidas-Salomon AG v Roger Draper and Paul Howorth, in which Adidas was granted an interim injunction against the International Tennis Federation and the "Grand Slam" tennis tournaments in relation to the dress rules for players; a settlement was subsequently reached so that the case did not go to final trial. ²¹⁶ In Dahabshiil Transfer Services Ltd v Barclays Bank Plc ²¹⁷ Dahabshiil was awarded an interim injunction against Barclays Bank on the basis that the latter may have been guilty of an unlawful refusal to supply contrary to art.102.

Fines and other remedies

43-076

The Commission may order termination of the infringement and may impose positive obligations such as a duty to provide information periodically to the Commission to enable it to monitor future compliance. The Commission has power to impose a fine where the undertaking has intentionally or negligently infringed arts 101(1) or 102.²¹⁸ The maximum fine is 10 per cent of the worldwide turnover of the undertaking concerned in the preceding business year. The Commission has issued guidance on the method it will adopt when calculating the level of a fine.²¹⁹ The Commission may reduce the fine imposed on a company that voluntarily approaches it and “blows the whistle” on a cartel of which it is a member.²²⁰

^{212.} [2003] O.J. L1/1.

^{213.} Regulation 1/2003 arts 18 and 20-21.

^{214.} Regulation 773/2004 [2004] O.J. L123/18.

^{215.} For an example of interim measures having been ordered see, e.g. La Cinq v Commission [1992] E.C.R. II-1.

^{216.} [2006] EWHC 1318 (Ch), [2006] U.K.C.L.R. 823.

^{217.} [2013] EWHC 3379 (Ch).

^{218.} Regulation 1/2003 art.23(2).

^{219.} Guidelines on the method of setting fines imposed pursuant to art.23(2)(a) of Regulation No.1/2003 [2006] O.J. C210/2.

^{220.} Commission Notice on immunity from fines and reduction of fines in cartel cases [2006] O.J. C298/17.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition
Section 3. - United Kingdom Competition Law
(a) - Introduction

Reform of the law

43-077

! The domestic competition law of the UK underwent fundamental reform with the passing of the Competition Act 1998, which entered into force on March 1, 2000. The Enterprise Act 2002 made further changes to UK competition law including the introduction of a new merger control regime, a new system of market investigation references, ²²¹ the establishment of a criminal cartel offence ²²² and the possibility of the disqualification of directors of companies that infringe competition law. ²²³ Changes were made to the Competition Act 1998 as a result of the application of Regulation 1/2003 by the Competition Act 1998 and Other Enactments (Amendment) Regulations 2004. ²²⁴ Further amendments were made to the law by the Enterprise and Regulatory Reform Act 2013. The provisions of the Competition Act 1998 are substantially modelled upon arts 101 and 102 TFEU. Wide powers to request information, conduct on-the-spot investigations and to impose substantial fines are given to the Competition and Markets Authority (CMA) ²²⁵ and, concurrently, to sectoral regulators such as the Office of Communications, the Gas and Electricity Markets Authority and the Financial Conduct Authority within their areas of competence. These radical changes to the law will be described in the rest of this chapter. The withdrawal by the United Kingdom from the European Union pursuant to the referendum of June 23, 2016 is likely to lead to significant changes to the domestic competition law of the UK in due course. ²²⁶ !

Structure of the Competition Act 1998

43-078

The Competition Act 1998 is a complex and technical piece of legislation. It is divided into four parts, as follows:

Pt I—Competition;

Pt II—Investigations in relation to arts 101 and 102 ²²⁷;

Pt III—Monopolies (these provisions were repealed and replaced by the Enterprise Act 2002);

Pt IV—Supplemental and transitional.

This chapter will analyse the provisions in Pt I of the Act, which introduces the prohibitions modelled upon arts 101 and 102. Where relevant, some of the provisions in Pts II-IV will also be referred to.

Part I of the Competition Act 1998

43-079

Part I of the Competition Act 1998 is divided into five Chapters, as follows:

Ch.I—Agreements;

Ch.II—Abuse of dominant position;

Ch.III—Investigation and enforcement;

Ch.IV—The Competition Commission and appeals;

Ch.V—Miscellaneous.

There are also numerous Schedules to the Act, containing much important detail, for example on exclusions, regulators and transitional provisions. The Act requires the CMA and the sectoral regulators to publish guidance as to how they will apply the Act in practice. There are also procedural rules, pursuant to s.51 and Sch.9, on the way in which the competition law proceedings are conducted as well as rules to deal with appeals to the Competition Appeal Tribunal. ²²⁸ A number of statutory instruments have been adopted under the Competition Act. Numerous guidelines have been published by the CMA, pursuant to s.52 of the Act, on various aspects of the new legislation. These guidelines are an important, albeit non-binding, source when applying the provisions of the Competition Act 1998. ²²⁹

Section 60: the “governing principles” clause

43-080

Section 60 is a crucially important provision in the Competition Act 1998, since it entitles and to some extent requires the competition authorities in the UK to apply EU jurisprudence on arts 101 and 102 when applying the Ch.I and Ch.II prohibitions. Section 60 is discussed at paras 43-140—43-142 below.

- 221. See below, paras 43-127—43-129.
- 222. See below, para.43-135.
- 223. See below, para.43-136.
- 224. SI 2004/1261.
- 225. Unless the text otherwise requires, the expression “CMA” should be taken to include the sectoral regulators who are given concurrent power to apply the provisions of the Act: see s.54 and Sch.10.
- 226.  For a general note on “Brexit”, see above, paras 1-013A et seq.
- 227. The Act refers to arts 85 and 86, but they have since been renumbered as arts 101 and 102 TFEU: see above, para.43-002.
- 228. See below, para.43-139.
- 229. All the materials referred to in the text are listed in Whish and Bailey, Competition Law, 8th edn (2015), pp.353-355; the guidelines are available at <http://www.cma.gov.uk>.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition
Section 3. - United Kingdom Competition Law
(b) - The Ch.I Prohibition: Agreements

Format of the Ch.I prohibition 230

43-081

The Competition Act controls anticompetitive agreements by means of a prohibition modelled upon art.101 TFEU. Section 3 and Schs 1-3 provide for a number of exclusions from the Ch.I prohibition. 231 Sections 4-11 deal with exemptions. 232 The Ch.I prohibition must also be read subject to s.50, which provides for the exclusion, by order, of vertical and land agreements. 233

Section 2(1): the prohibition

43-082

Section 2(1) provides as follows:

“Subject to s.3, agreements between undertakings, decisions by associations of undertakings or concerted practices which—may affect trade within the United Kingdom, and have as their object or effect the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition within the United Kingdom, are prohibited unless they are exempt in accordance with the provisions of this Part.”

(a)

(b)

Section 2(2): illustrative list

43-083

Section 2(2) sets out an illustrative list of agreements that could be prohibited under s.2(1):

“Subsection (1) applies in particular to agreements, decisions or practices which—

- (a) directly or indirectly fix purchase or selling prices or any other trading conditions;
- (b) limit or control production, markets, technical development or investment;
- (c) share markets or sources of supply;
- (d)
apply dissimilar conditions to equivalent transactions with other trading parties, thereby placing them at a competitive disadvantage;
- (e)
make the conclusion of contracts subject to acceptance by the other parties of supplementary obligations which, by their nature or according to commercial usage, have no connection with the subject of such contracts.”

Effect on trade within the United Kingdom ²³⁴

43-084

The obvious point about this expression is that there is no requirement under s.2(1) that trade between Member States may be affected, only that trade within the United Kingdom should be affected. The Competition Appeal Tribunal has held that there is no need for the “effect on trade” within the UK to be appreciable, ²³⁵ although doubt has been cast on the correctness of this in two High Court judgments. ²³⁶ Insofar as an agreement affects both trade between Member States and trade within the United Kingdom, it may be subject both to art.101(1) and to the Ch.I prohibition.

“Undertakings”

43-085

This expression will be interpreted as it has been in EU law: should be made to para.43-013, above. The Competition Appeal Tribunal handed down an important judgment on the meaning of the term “undertaking” in BetterCare Group Ltd v Director General of Fair Trading. ²³⁷ The Tribunal concluded that a Northern Irish Health Trust, when procuring facilities for the provision of residential and nursing care to elderly people, was acting as an undertaking and therefore fell within the ambit of the Competition Act 1998.

Agreements, decisions and concerted practices

43-086

These expressions are an exact replica of the provisions in art.101(1) TFEU: reference should be made to paras 43-015—43-018, above as to their meaning in EU law and to paras 43-140—43-142, below on the extent to which the competition authorities in the UK will be obliged and/or able to follow the jurisprudence of the Courts of the European Union and the decisional practice of the European Commission in interpreting these expressions. In its decision in Hasbro UK Ltd, Argos Ltd and Littlewoods Ltd the OFT (the predecessor of the CMA) found that a single, overall agreement and/or concerted practice existed between Hasbro, a toy manufacturer, and two of its retailers, Argos and Littlewoods, to fix the resale prices of various toys; this decision was upheld on appeal to the Competition Appeal Tribunal ²³⁸ and to the Court of Appeal. ²³⁹ An important judgment of the Competition Appeal Tribunal, exploring the application of the concept of a concerted practice to the practice of collusive tendering, is Apex Asphalt and Paving Co Ltd v OFT, which concluded that the OFT's finding that there had been an infringement of the Ch.I prohibition was correct. ²⁴⁰ Section 2(5) and (6) of the Act provides that, unless the context otherwise requires, any reference in the Act to an agreement includes a reference to a decision and/or concerted practice.

Object or effect of preventing, restricting or distorting competition

43-087

The test to be applied in applying the Ch.I prohibition is to determine whether the “object or effect” of the agreement is to prevent, restrict or distort competition. In Institute of Independent Insurance Brokers v Director General of Fair Trading ²⁴¹ the Tribunal stated that the first step is normally to determine the object of the agreement; if it is not plain that the object is to restrict competition, one should then move on to consider the effects. The illustrative list in s.2(2) is obviously of assistance in determining the types of agreement that might be caught. Considerable additional guidance is available in the jurisprudence of the EU on this: reference should be made to paras 43-019—43-026, above on this subject; and to the guidelines of the CMA referred to in para.43-079, above.

Establishing an effect on competition

43-088

Where an agreement does not have the object of restricting competition it is necessary to examine, within its legal and economic context, whether it might have the effect of doing so. In The Racecourse Association v OFT the Competition Appeal Tribunal concluded that the OFT had failed to establish that the collective selling of the right to broadcast horse-racing events had an anti-competitive effect ²⁴²; and in P&S Amusements Ltd v Valley House Leisure Ltd the High Court considered that there was no possibility of establishing that a beer tie in a lease of a public house in Blackpool could do so. ²⁴³

Appreciability

43-089

EU law applies to an agreement only to the extent that any effect on competition (or trade between Member States) is appreciable. ²⁴⁴ The CMA has regard to the European Commission's Notice on Agreements of Minor Importance when considering whether there is an appreciable effect on competition. ²⁴⁵

Section 2(3): territorial scope

43-090

Section 2(3) provides as follows:

“Subsection (1) applies only if the agreement, decision or practice is, or is intended to be, implemented in the United Kingdom.”

This gives effect to the judgment of the Court of Justice in the so-called Wood Pulp case,²⁴⁶ that an agreement entered into outside the EU but implemented within it can be caught by art.101(1). The judgment stopped short of holding that any agreement that produces an effect within the EU could be subject to EU law: the Court specifically required implementation there. The UK has traditionally disfavoured the application of an effects doctrine in competition law matters, and has objected to assertions of an effects doctrine by the competition authorities in the US. The insertion of s.2(3) in the Act is intended to bring UK law into line with the position under Wood Pulp, and is equally intended to demonstrate a refusal to go further and to adopt the effects doctrine.²⁴⁷

Section 2(4): voidness

43-091

Section 2(2), which mirrors art.101(2), provides as follows:

“Any agreement or decision which is prohibited by subsection (1) is void.”

This provision clearly has very serious consequences for agreements that infringe s.2(1) but do not benefit from a parallel exemption under s.10 or satisfy the criteria set out in s.9. For many undertakings, the fact that their agreements may be unenforceable may be of much more significance than that they might be fined. Should an exclusive purchasing term imposed by a supplier on a distributor be prohibited by s.2 and therefore void and unenforceable, this may fundamentally undermine the terms of the bargain agreed between the parties. Whilst it is no doubt true that judges will have a preference for enforcing agreements that have been voluntarily entered into and adhering to the maxim pacta sunt servanda, and that a dim view might be taken of an attempt to get out of a freely-negotiated contract on the basis of the “technicality” of infringing competition law,²⁴⁸ nevertheless where there clearly is an infringement s.2(4) and art.101(2) spell out quite clearly what the consequences will be. The High Court has said, in A Nelson & Co Ltd v Guna SpA, that an allegation that an agreement violates art.101 is a serious one that needs, in litigation, to be pleaded in detail so that it may be defended but also so that it can be evaluated at an early stage by a court when deciding how far such an extensive and expensive claim should be allowed to go forward.²⁴⁹ As to the temporal quality of this voidness, the Court of Appeal has held that an agreement that infringes the Ch.I prohibition may, through a change in circumstances, subsequently cease to do so, in which case the voidness would cease; conversely an agreement that was originally valid could subsequently become void.²⁵⁰

Severance

43-092

Section 2(4) provides that “any agreement” which violates s.2(1) is void. It does not contain on its face any wording to suggest that the voidness might attach only to the provisions in the agreement that violate the Ch.I prohibition, nor does it say anything about the consequences of such voidness on the remaining provisions of the agreement. However, despite the clear wording of both art.101(2) and s.2(4) that “agreements” that infringe are void, it has been established by the Court of Justice as a matter of EU law that it may be possible to sever the offensive parts of the agreement, leaving the remainder enforceable.²⁵¹ The Court of Justice regards it as a matter for the court trying the action to consider whether, and by reference to what technique, severance should be effected; this is, presumably, a matter to be determined by reference to the applicable law, rather than the lex fori, since the issue goes to the substance of the remaining obligations under the contract.²⁵² The intention is that the courts in the UK should interpret s.2(4) in the same way as the Court of Justice has interpreted art.101(2): this is to be achieved through the “governing principles” clause in s.60. ²⁵³

Void or illegal?

43-093

In Gibbs Mew v Gemmell ²⁵⁴ the Court of Appeal concluded that an agreement that infringes art.101(1) is not only void and unenforceable, but also illegal. This can have serious consequences: for example, under domestic law a party who has paid money to another under an illegal agreement cannot recover that money unless it can be shown that the parties were not in pari delicto. ²⁵⁵ However, in Crehan v Courage Ltd ²⁵⁶ the Court of Justice has held that EU law precludes a national law which imposes an absolute bar on an action by one party to an agreement that infringes art.101 against another party to it: see above, para.43-070.

Section 3 and Schs 1-4: exclusions

43-094

Section 3(1) provides that the Ch.I prohibition does not apply in any of the cases in which it is excluded by or as a result of:

(a)

Sch.1: mergers and concentrations;

(b)

Sch.2: competition scrutiny under other enactments;

(c)

Sch.3: planning obligations and other general exclusions;

(d)

Sch.4: professional rules: this Schedule has been repealed by s.207 of the Enterprise Act 2002.

Section 3(2)-(5) makes provision for the Secretary of State to amend Schs 1 and 3 in certain circumstances, whether by adding additional exclusions or by amending or removing existing ones. ²⁵⁷ Section 3(6) points out that Sch.3 itself enables the Secretary of State himself in certain circumstances to exclude agreements from the Ch.I prohibition. ²⁵⁸

Schedule 1: mergers and concentrations

43-095

Mergers and concentrations (the expression adopted in EU law) are, of course, of considerable interest to competition authorities, which will wish to have the opportunity to monitor transactions that might lead to a serious reduction of competition in the market place. Both the UK, in the form of the merger provisions in the Enterprise Act 2002, and the EU, in the form of the EU Merger Regulation, possess specialised systems for the investigation of mergers. These provisions are beyond the scope of this book, and reference should be made to the specialist texts on them. ²⁵⁹ Where undertakings merge, there will usually be a complex matrix of contractual documents, some of which effect the merger itself (in the sense of bringing the assets of different undertakings together), and others of which may not in themselves bring about the merger but may be necessary to the broader intentions of the parties and the success of the transaction. The intention of Sch.1 to the Act, in general terms, is to provide that agreements that bring about a merger or concentration, and any “ancillary restrictions”, should be dealt with under the provisions of UK or EU merger control, and should not be subject to the Ch.I and Ch.II prohibitions. The provisions work slightly differently in relation to UK and EU merger control, and a few additional refinements should be noted. There is a CMA Guideline on mergers and ancillary restrictions that explains the operation of Sch.1 to the Act.

Schedule 1 Pt I: UK mergers

43-096

The Ch.I and II prohibitions do not apply to agreements which will result in two or more enterprises ceasing to be distinct in the sense of s.26 of the Enterprise Act; nor do these prohibitions apply to any provision “directly related and necessary to the implementation of the merger provisions”. ²⁶⁰ A power is given to the CMA to “clawback”—that is to say to withdraw the exclusion from the prohibitions—where it considers that an agreement, if not excluded, would infringe the Ch.I prohibition, that it would not grant unconditional individual exemption and that it is not a protected agreement. ²⁶¹ Protected agreements are defined to include, for example, an agreement which is connected with a merger that the CMA or Secretary of State, as the case may be, has decided not to refer to the Competition Commission. ²⁶²

Schedule 1 Pt II: EU mergers

43-097

Mergers in relation to which the European Commission has exclusive jurisdiction are not subject to the Ch.I and II prohibitions. ²⁶³ This is true as a matter of EU law, as set out in the EU Merger Regulation; there is no power of clawback in such a case, since this would infringe the exclusive jurisdiction of the Commission. Schedule 1 does not mention ancillary restraints but since the European Commission is under an obligation to assess these under the EU Merger Regulation, it would seem to follow that national competition law cannot be applied to them as well.

Schedule 2: competition scrutiny under other enactments

43-098

Several UK statutes make provision for certain matters—such as the constitutions of self regulating organisations or for certain arrangements in the broadcasting sector—to be subjected to “competition scrutiny” prior to their approval. The principle of Sch.2 is that where agreements have been subjected to such scrutiny, they should not require separate assessment for compatibility with the Ch.I prohibition. In consequence, they are given an exclusion from the Ch.I prohibition, though not from the Ch.II prohibition. Various amendments have been made to Sch.2 as a result of subsequent enactments. ²⁶⁴

Schedule 3: “general exclusions”

43-099

Schedule 3 contains a number of “general exclusions”, in some cases from the Ch.I prohibition and in some from both Chs I and II.

Schedule 3 para.1: planning obligations

43-100

This paragraph provides that the Ch.I prohibition does not apply to certain planning obligations as defined in the Town and Country Planning Act 1990. There is no exclusion from the Ch.II prohibition.

Schedule 3 para.2: s.21(2) agreements43-101

This paragraph provided that the Ch.I prohibition did not apply to an agreement that had received directions under s.21(2) of the Restrictive Trade Practices Act 1976 where those directions were still in force immediately before s.2 of the Competition Act entered into force on March 1, 2000. These were agreements in relation to which the Secretary of State had absolved the now-defunct OFT of its duty to take an agreement to the, now abolished, Restrictive Practices Court because the restrictions in the agreement were not of material significance. The exclusion ceased where a material variation was made to the agreement. ²⁶⁵ The OFT had a power of “clawback”, that is to say to withdraw the exclusion, in specified circumstances. ²⁶⁶ There was no exclusion from the Ch.II prohibition. This provision was repealed with effect from May 1, 2007. ²⁶⁷

Schedule 3 para.3: EEA regulated markets43-102

This paragraph provides that the Ch.I prohibition does not apply to an agreement for the constitution of an “EEA regulated market” to the extent to which the agreement relates to any of the rules made, or guidance issued, by that market ²⁶⁸; the exclusion extends further to other matters, such as a decision of an EEA regulated market. ²⁶⁹ An EEA regulated market is a market which is listed by an EEA State other than the UK pursuant to art.16 of Council Directive 93/22 on investment services in the securities field and operates without any requirement that a person should have a physical presence in the EEA State from which any trading facilities are provided or any trading floor that the market may have. ²⁷⁰

Schedule 3 para.4: services of general economic interest43-103

This paragraph provides that neither the Ch.I prohibition, nor the Ch.II prohibition, shall apply to an undertaking:

“entrusted with the operation of services of general economic interest or having the character of a revenue-producing monopoly in so far as the prohibition would obstruct the performance, in law or in fact, of the particular tasks assigned to that undertaking.”

This provision mirrors, albeit not in precisely the same language, art.106(2) of the TFEU. It can be very important where, for example, an undertaking is required to carry out a service in the public interest such as the maintenance of a daily delivery of letters to all addresses at a uniform tariff: such a service may be operable only on the basis of a pricing policy that might otherwise amount to an infringement of the competition rules. In such circumstances the exclusion in this paragraph may be available to the undertaking concerned. The CMA has published guidelines on this provision. ²⁷¹

Schedule 3 para.5: compliance with legal requirements43-104

This paragraph provides that neither the Ch.I prohibition, nor the Ch.II prohibition, shall apply to an agreement or to conduct which is required in order to comply with a legal requirement. ²⁷² An example of the way this exclusion operates arose in Vodafone ²⁷³ in which that mobile phone operator was required under the terms of its licence under the Telecommunications Act 1984 to print the prices to be charged by retailers on its “pre-pay mobile phone vouchers”: this behaviour therefore could not infringe the Ch.I prohibition by virtue of this exclusion.

Schedule 3 para.6: avoidance of conflict with international obligations

43-105

This paragraph provides that the Secretary of State may make an order that neither the Ch.I prohibition, nor the Ch.II prohibition, shall apply to an agreement, category of agreements or conduct where this is necessary to avoid a conflict between the Competition Act and an international obligation of the United Kingdom. International arrangements in relation to civil aviation may be treated as “obligations” for this purpose. ²⁷⁴

Schedule 3 para.7: public policy

43-106

This paragraph provides that the Secretary of State may by order exclude the application of the Ch.I prohibition, and the Ch.II prohibition, to an agreement, category of agreements or conduct where there are “exceptional and compelling reasons of public policy” for doing so. One would expect that this provision will very rarely be invoked: a possible case could be in relation to the defence industry, which is not otherwise excluded or exempted from the Act.

Schedule 3 para.8: coal and steel

43-107

This paragraph provides that neither the Ch.I prohibition, nor the Ch.II prohibition, shall apply to matters within the exclusive jurisdiction of the European Commission under the European Coal and Steel Community: however, this exclusion ceased to have effect when it expired on July 23, 2002. ²⁷⁵

Schedule 3 para.9: agricultural products

43-108

This paragraph provides that the Ch.I prohibition does not apply to agricultural products: this is to reflect their exclusion from art.101 TFEU. The CMA has a power of clawback. ²⁷⁶ There is no exclusion from the Ch.II prohibition (just as there is no exclusion from art.102).

Schedule 4: professional rules

43-109

Schedule 4 provided that “professional rules” regulating certain professional services and the persons providing, or wishing to provide, those services, may be excluded from the Ch.I prohibition. However s.207 of the Enterprise Act 2002 has repealed Sch.4 with effect from April 1, 2003 and professional rules are consequently now subject to the Ch.I prohibition. By virtue of the “governing principles” s.60, it is likely that the Ch.I prohibition will be interpreted in the same way as the Court of Justice has interpreted art.101: professional rules which have a restrictive effect on competition may nevertheless fall outside art.101 TFEU insofar as they are necessary for the proper practice of a profession. ²⁷⁷

Section 50: vertical and land agreements

43-110

As mentioned at para.43-081, above, s.50 makes provision for the exclusion or exemption of vertical and land agreements from the Ch.I, but not the Ch.II, prohibition. Vertical agreements were excluded from the Ch.I prohibition until May 1, 2005, but that exclusion was then repealed. ²⁷⁸ Certain land agreements, for example containing covenants and conditions for the sake of good estate management, were excluded from the Ch.I prohibition as a result of the Competition Act 1998 (Land Agreements Exclusion and Revocation) Order 2004 ²⁷⁹; however, that exclusion has also been repealed. ²⁸⁰ In Martin Retail Group Ltd v Crawley Borough Council ²⁸¹ the Central London County Court held that a restrictive covenant in a lease of retail premises was void and unenforceable under the Competition Act 1998 s.2.

Section 9: exemption criteria

43-111

The criteria for exemption under domestic law are set out in s.9. The wording is similar to, though not identical to, art.101(3). Unlike art.101(3), s.9 expressly applies to improvements in the production or distribution of goods and services. Section 9 provides as follows:

“This section applies to any agreement which—

(a)

contributes to—

(i) improving production or distribution, or

(ii) promoting technical or economic progress, while allowing consumers a fair share of the resulting benefit; but does not—

(b)

(i)

impose on the undertakings concerned restrictions which are not indispensable to the attainment of those objectives; or afford the undertakings concerned the possibility of eliminating competition in respect of a substantial part of the products in question.”

(ii)

In applying s.9(1) the CMA will have regard to the European Commission’s Guidelines on the Application of art.101(3) TFEU. ²⁸²

Sections 4 and 5: individual exemption

43-112

Sections 4 and 5 of the Competition Act 1998 provided for the OFT to grant individual exemption to agreements that were notified to it and which satisfied the criteria of s.9 of the Act. However, these provisions were repealed by the Competition Act 1998 and Other Enactments (Amendment) Regulations 2004, ²⁸³ which bring the position in the UK into conformity with the principles of Regulation 1/2003. ²⁸⁴

Sections 6–8: block exemption

43-113

Provision is made in ss.6–8 for the Secretary of State to make block exemptions. For the reasons given in para.43–114, below, and in particular the fact that EU exemptions can be invoked in domestic law by virtue of the provisions in s.10 on “parallel exemptions”, it is likely that relatively few block exemptions will be issued; however one block exemption for public transport ticketing schemes has been enacted and took effect on March 1, 2001. ²⁸⁵

Section 10: parallel exemption

43-114

Section 10 provides for “parallel exemption”. This is a device whereby an agreement that benefits from an EU individual or block exemption, or which would so benefit if the agreement were to affect trade between Member States, automatically is also exempted from the Ch.I prohibition. The same benefits are available for exemptions obtained under the EEA Agreement. ²⁸⁶ A controversial aspect of s.10 is that it states that the CMA has power, in certain circumstances, to impose conditions or obligations subject to which a parallel exemption is to take effect, to vary it in other ways, or even cancel it. ²⁸⁷ However, art.3(2) of Regulation 1/2003 provides that it would be unlawful, as a matter of EU law, for the CMA to impose stricter terms on an agreement that is permitted under art.101. ²⁸⁸

Section 11: exemption for other agreements

43-115

This section has been repealed.

Sections 12–16: notification

43-116

The provisions in the Competition Act 1998 on notification for guidance and a decision were repealed by the Competition Act and Other Enactments (Amendment) Regulations 2004. ²⁸⁹

-
- ^{230.} s.2(8) of the Act specifically provides that the prohibition imposed by s.2(1) is to be called “the Chapter I Prohibition”.
- ^{231.} See below, paras 43-094—43-109.
- ^{232.} See below, paras 43-111—43-115.
- ^{233.} See below, para.43-110.
- ^{234.} The UK for this purpose includes England, Wales, Scotland plus the subsidiary islands (excluding the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands) and Northern Ireland: CMA’s Guideline: “Agreements and Concerted Practices” at para.2.27.
- ^{235.} Aberdeen Journals Ltd v Office of Fair Trading [2003] C.A.T. 11 at [459]-[462].
- ^{236.} P&S Amusements Ltd v Valley House Leisure Ltd [2006] EWHC 1510 (Ch) and Pirtek (UK) Ltd v Joinplace Ltd [2010] EWHC 1641 (Ch).
- ^{237.} [2002] C.A.T. 7, [2002] Comp. A.R. 299.
- ^{238.} Argos Ltd v OFT [2004] C.A.T. 24, [2005] Comp. A.R. 588.
- ^{239.} Argos Ltd v OFT [2006] EWCA Civ 1318, [2006] U.K.C.L.R. 1135; see similarly the so-called Football Shirt case, JJB Sports Plc v OFT, which is also the subject of the Court of Appeal judgment in [2006] EWCA Civ 1318.
- ^{240.} [2005] C.A.T. 4, [2005] Comp. A.R. 507; see similarly Makers UK Ltd v OFT [2007] C.A.T. 11, [2007] Comp A.R. 699.
- ^{241.} [2001] C.A.T. 4, [2001] Comp. A.R. 62.
- ^{242.} [2005] C.A.T. 29, [2005] Comp. A.R. 99.
- ^{243.} [2006] EWHC 1510 (Ch), [2006] U.K.C.L.R. 867.
- ^{244.} See above, paras 43-024—43-026.
- ^{245.} See the CMA Guideline Agreements and concerted practices, OFT 401 para.2.18; on the Commission’s de minimis Notice see above, para.43-025.
- ^{246.} Cases 114/85, etc. A Ahlstrom Oy v Commission [1988] E.C.R. 5913, [1988] 4 C.M.L.R. 901.
- ^{247.} See Lord Simon of Highbury, HL Deb November 13, 1997, col.261; the General Court followed the Wood Pulp judgment in Gencor v Commission [1999] E.C.R. II-753, while also considering whether the effects (in that case of a concentration that would have taken place in South Africa) would have been sufficiently immediate, substantial and foreseeable within the EU to justify jurisdiction in terms of public international law.
- ^{248.} See, e.g. Panayiotou v Sony Music Entertainment (UK) Ltd [1994] E.M.L.R. 229 as an example of a case in which the Court appears to have taken an unsympathetic approach to a plea based on art.101(2).
- ^{249.} [2011] EWHC 1202 (Comm) at [53].

- 250. Passmore v Morland Plc (decided under art.101(2)) [1999] 1 C.M.L.R. 1129.
- 251. Société de Vente de Ciments et Bétons v Kerpen & Kerpen [1983] E.C.R. 4173.
- 252. On the applicable law, see above, paras 30-017 et seq. and on severance in English law, see paras 16-211 et seq.; on severance under art.101(2), see above, para.43-068 and the cases cited therein.
- 253. See below, paras 43-140—43-142.
- 254. [1998] Eu.L.R. 588 CA.
- 255. See Goff and Jones, The Law of Restitution, 8th edn (2011), Ch.25.
- 256. [2001] E.C.R. I-6297.
- 257. This order-making power is subject to s.71 which requires an “affirmative resolution of each House of Parliament”.
- 258. See below, para.43-106.
- 259. On the UK system of merger control see Whish and Bailey, Competition Law, 8th edn (2015), Ch.22.
- 260. Competition Act 1998 Sch.1 paras 1 and 2.
- 261. Sch.1 para.4.
- 262. Sch.1 para.5.
- 263. Sch.1 para.6.
- 264. For the current position see Whish and Bailey, Competition Law, 8th edn (2015), pp.372-373.
- 265. Sch.3 para.2(2).
- 266. Sch.3 para.2(3)-(9).
- 267. Competition Act 1998 and Other Enactments (Amendment) Regulations 2004 (SI 2004/1261) reg.4, Sch.1.
- 268. Sch.3 para.3(1).
- 269. Sch.3 para.3(2)-(4).
- 270. Sch.3 para.3(5).
- 271. Guideline 421 on “Services of general economic interest exclusion” December 2004.
- 272. “Legal requirement” is defined in para.5(3).
- 273. OFTEL Decision, April 5, 2002.
- 274. Sch.3 para.6(1).
- 275. Sch.3 para.8(2), (4).
- 276. Sch.3 para.9(3)–(8).

- 277. See Wouters [2002] I E.C.R. 1577.
- 278. See the Competition Act 1998 and Other Enactments (Amendment) Regulations Order 2004 (SI 2004/1261).
- 279. SI 2004/1260.
- 280. See the Competition Act 1998 (Land Agreements Exclusion Revocation) Order 2010 (SI 2010/1709).
- 281. [2014] L. & T.R. 17.
- 282. See the CMA's Guideline Agreements and Concerted Practices, OFT 401 para.5.5.
- 283. SI 2004/1261.
- 284. See para.43-002 above.
- 285. The Competition Act 1998 (Public Transport Ticketing Schemes Block Exemption) Order 2001 (SI 2001/319, amended by SI 2005/3347 and SI 2011/227); see also OFT Guideline Public transport ticketing schemes block exemption, OFT 439.
- 286. s.10(11).
- 287. s.10(5)–(8).
- 288. See above, para.43-067; see also Whish and Bailey, Competition Law, 8th edn (2015), pp.78–82.
- 289. SI 2004/1261.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition
Section 3. - United Kingdom Competition Law
(c) - The Ch.II Prohibition: Abuse of a Dominant Position

Format of the Ch.II prohibition

43-117

The Competition Act controls anti-competitive agreements entered into by dominant undertakings by means of a prohibition modelled upon art.102 TFEU. ²⁹⁰ Section 17 repeals the anti-competitive practices provisions of the Competition Act 1980. Section 18 contains the prohibition of the abuse of a dominant position. Section 19 and Schs 1 and 3 provide for some exclusions from the Ch.I prohibition, although these are less extensive than in the case of Ch.I. Sections 20–24 contain provisions on notification.

Section 18(1): the prohibition ²⁹¹

43-118

Section 18(1) provides as follows:

“(1)

Subject to s.19, any conduct on the part of one or more undertakings which amounts to the abuse of a dominant position in a market is prohibited if it may affect trade within the United Kingdom.”

Section 18(2): illustrative list

43-119

Section 18(2) sets out an illustrative list of conduct that could be prohibited under s.18(1):

“(2)

Conduct may, in particular, constitute such an abuse if it consists in—directly or indirectly imposing unfair purchase or selling prices or other unfair trading conditions;

(a)

(b) limiting production, markets or technical development to the prejudice of consumers;

(c) applying dissimilar conditions to equivalent transactions with other trading parties, thereby placing them at a competitive disadvantage; making the conclusion of contracts subject to acceptance by the other parties of supplementary obligations which, by their nature or according to commercial usage, have no connection with the subject of the contracts.”

(d)

Effect on trade within the United Kingdom ²⁹² and territorial scope

43-120

As in the case of s.2(1), ²⁹³ the obvious point about s.18(1) is that there is no requirement that trade between Member States may be affected, only that trade within the United Kingdom should be affected; it is not necessary for the effect on trade within the UK to be appreciable. Section 18(3) provides that:

“... “dominant position” means a dominant position within the United Kingdom; and the “United Kingdom” means the United Kingdom or any part of it.”

Lord Simon, in the House of Lords, explained that there must be dominance within the United Kingdom, although the geographical market in which that dominance is held could be larger than the United Kingdom. ²⁹⁴ The Act does not have a provision in relation to s.18 that resembles s.2(3), ²⁹⁵ so that it is not clear what the territorial scope of the Ch.II prohibition is where the abuse is “committed” outside the UK.

“Undertakings”

43-121

This expression will be interpreted as it has been in EU law and useful guidance can be found in BetterCare, ²⁹⁶ where the Competition Appeal Tribunal stated that the Ch.II prohibition could apply to a public sector body: reference is made to paras 43-013 and 43-085, see above.

Abuse of a dominant position

43-122

The meaning of “abuse of a dominant position” has been discussed in relation to art.102 at paras 43-061—43-064, see above, to which reference should be made. In the UK, the CMA has published guidelines on market definition and the assessment of market power, ²⁹⁷ which, in addition to the judgments of the Competition Appeal Tribunal and EU jurisprudence and s.60 of the Act, are of assistance in interpreting the provisions of the Ch.II prohibition.

Voidness43-123

The Act does not refer to voidness in the case of Ch.II explicitly. An agreement that infringes art.102 is most probably void and unenforceable, although there is no direct authority on this in the Court of Justice, and the same consequence would presumably follow in the case of the Ch.II prohibition by virtue of s.60. ²⁹⁸

Section 19 and Schs 1 and 3: exclusions43-124

As in the case of the Ch.I prohibition, there are a number of exclusions from the Ch.II prohibition. Not surprisingly these are less extensive than in the case of Ch.I: the Act is less indulgent to “abuse” than it is to agreements that “restrict competition”. In particular, Sch.2 (other competition scrutiny) is inapplicable in the case of the Ch.II prohibition. As for Schs 1 and 3, the exclusions are available in some cases for the Ch.II prohibition, but they are not identical. The Ch.II prohibition will also not apply to certain conduct pursuant to the provisions of the Financial Service and Markets Act 2000. The exclusions are described at paras 43-094 et seq. see above, where relevant differences as to Chs I and II are pointed out.

Section 50: vertical and land agreements43-125

The exclusions for vertical and land agreements were only from the Ch.I, and not from the Ch.II, prohibition. ²⁹⁹

Sections 20–24: notification43-126

The provisions in the Competition Act 1998 on notification for guidance and a decision were repealed by the Competition Act and Other Enactments (Amendment) Regulations 2004. ³⁰⁰

^{290.} See below, paras 43-118 et seq.

^{291.} Section 18(4) of the Act specifically provides that the prohibition imposed by s.18(1) is to be called “the Chapter II prohibition”.

^{292.} On the meaning of the United Kingdom, see n.233, above.

^{293.} See above, para.43-084.

- 294. HL Deb March 5, 1998, col.1336.
- 295. See above, para.43-090.
- 296. [2002] C.A.T. 17, [2002] Comp. A.R. 299.
- 297. See above, para.43-079.
- 298. See above, para.43-068 on voidness and severance under art.101(2) TFEU and the cases cited therein.
- 299. See above, para.43-110.
- 300. SI 2004/1261.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition
Section 3. - United Kingdom Competition Law
(d) - Market Investigations

Market investigation references ³⁰¹

43-127

The market investigation regime contained in the Enterprise Act 2002 entered into force on June 20, 2003 and replaced the monopoly provisions in the Fair Trading Act 1973. It provides an alternative mechanism whereby agreements, in particular networks of agreements, might be scrutinised. However, it is intended that the market investigation provisions will be used relatively infrequently, since the Competition Act is the main legal instrument for controlling agreements which result, or are likely to result, in an anti-competitive outcome. The making and determination of market investigation references will be briefly described below; reference should be made to specialised works for further detail.

Making of a reference

43-128

Under Pt 4 of the Enterprise Act the CMA or, in exceptional cases, the Secretary of State may initiate a market investigation reference when there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that one or more “features” of a market prevent, restrict or distort competition in the supply or acquisition of goods or services in the whole or part of the UK ³⁰²; the investigation will be conducted, within a prescribed period, by a group of members of the CMA Panel, appointed by the Chair of that Panel. The Act defines features of a market to include the structure of the market or any characteristic thereof; the conduct of persons supplying or acquiring goods or services who operate in that market; and the conduct of those persons’ customers. ³⁰³ The CMA has published guidance that explains how it intends to exercise its discretion to make market investigation references ³⁰⁴; in particular where competition problems arise that are industry-wide and are not capable of being adequately addressed under the Competition Act. This may be the case in sectors of the economy that are oligopolistic in market structure—that is to say a market in which a few firms account for a substantial proportion of the market—and there is a diminution of competition which is not obviously attributable to an agreement or concerted practice subject to the Ch.I prohibition, nor to an abuse of a collective dominant position contrary to the Ch.II prohibition. A reference might also be appropriate to deal with the foreclosure of a market due to the operation of parallel networks of agreements.

Determination of a reference

43-129

Once a reference has been made, the CMA group conducting the investigation must investigate and then decide whether any feature of the market or combination thereof prevents, restricts or distorts competition in the market or markets that have been referred to it. ³⁰⁵ The CMA has published guidance on its procedures during market investigation references and the way in which it intends to exercise its powers. If it considers there is an adverse effect on competition, it must decide what action, if any, that either it or anyone else should take to remedy the adverse effect on competition or any detrimental effect on customers it has identified. ³⁰⁶ When considering remedial action, the CMA must have regard to the need to obtain as comprehensive a solution as is reasonable and practical to the adverse effect on competition and any detrimental effect on customers ³⁰⁷ as well as any “relevant customer benefits”, as defined in the Act. ³⁰⁸ The CMA has a number of remedial powers available to it, including, significantly, the power to order the division of a business. ³⁰⁹

^{301.} On market investigation references under the Enterprise Act generally see Whish and Bailey, Competition Law, 8th edn (2015), Ch.11.

^{302.} Enterprise Act 2002 ss.131–132.

^{303.} s.131(2).

^{304.} OFT 511 “Market investigation references: Guidance about the making of references under Pt 4 of the Enterprise Act”.

^{305.} s.134(1)–(3).

^{306.} s.134(4).

^{307.} s.134(6).

^{308.} s.134(7)–(8).

^{309.} The remedial powers of the CMA are set out in Sch.8.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition
Section 3. - United Kingdom Competition Law
(e) - Investigation and Enforcement

Role of the CMA

43-130

The CMA has wide powers to obtain information and to adopt decisions to terminate infringements and to impose fines.

Power to investigate

43-131

The CMA is given power to investigate suspected infringements of the Chs I and II prohibitions (and arts 101 and 102 TFEU), ³¹⁰ including the power to request information, ³¹¹ to enter premises without a warrant ³¹² or, in certain circumstances, with a warrant. ³¹³ However, it is not able to require a person to produce or disclose a privileged communication ³¹⁴ and it may not ask for explanations that might elicit admissions of an infringement of the competition rules.

Decisions following an investigation

43-132

If, as a result of an investigation, the CMA proposes to make a decision that there has been an infringement of the Chs I or II prohibitions, (or of arts 101 or 102) it must give written notice to the person or persons affected and give an opportunity for representations to be made. ³¹⁵ When adopting a decision that there has been an infringement, the CMA may make directions requiring the agreement or conduct to cease or be modified ³¹⁶; directions have been issued by the CMA (or its predecessor, the OFT) in several cases under the Act. ³¹⁷ If there is a default in complying with a direction, the CMA may apply to the court for an appropriate order. ³¹⁸ The CMA is given power to adopt interim measures where there is a case of urgency. ³¹⁹

Penalties

43-133

An important feature of the Act is the possibility of the imposition of substantial penalties for infringement. The infringement must have been intentional or negligent. ³²⁰ There is limited immunity from fines for “small agreements” ³²¹ and “conduct of minor significance”. ³²² Penalties may not exceed 10 per cent of an undertaking’s worldwide turnover. ³²³ Pursuant to s.38 of the Act, the CMA has published guidance on its likely approach to the imposition of fines which has been approved by the Secretary of State. ³²⁴ The CMA (or its predecessor, the OFT) has granted, and will grant, leniency from the fines it would otherwise impose on companies who “blow the whistle” on a cartel in which it has participated. ³²⁵ The Competition Appeal Tribunal has full jurisdiction to assess the level of penalty imposed ³²⁶ and reduced the fines imposed in Napp Pharmaceutical Holdings ³²⁷ and Aberdeen Journals to a limited extent. ³²⁸ Much larger reductions have been made in some subsequent cases. ³²⁹ The Tribunal has stated that it may have regard to the CMA's guidance on the level of a penalty and will take into account the severity and duration of any infringement as well as any mitigating factors. ³³⁰

Offences under the Competition Act

43-134

Not only does the Act provide for the imposition of penalties for infringing the competition rules; it also provides for a number of offences where there is a failure on the part of any person to comply with a requirement in relation to investigations. These offences are set out in ss.42–44 of the Act. It is important to appreciate that these offences can entail serious consequences for individuals as well as legal persons and that the penalty, for example for destroying or falsifying documents, can include a term of up to two years in prison. ³³¹

Cartel offence

43-135

The Enterprise Act introduced criminal sanctions for commission of the “cartel offence” which, on indictment, can result in the imposition of a term of imprisonment of up to five years and/or an unlimited fine. ³³² Under the Enterprise Act an individual was guilty of an offence if he or she dishonestly agrees with one or more other persons that undertakings will engage in one or more of the following cartel activities: direct and indirect price fixing; limitation of supply or production; market sharing; or bid rigging. ³³³ The law was amended by the Enterprise and Regulatory Reform Act which has eliminated the requirement of dishonesty from the offence. The CMA has been given specific powers of investigation in criminal cases and has published guidance on how it intends to exercise them. ³³⁴ Individuals may be granted immunity from prosecution where they have provided information about cartels to the CMA. ³³⁵

Company director disqualification

43-136

The Enterprise Act provides for the possibility of company directors being disqualified from office for a period of up to 15 years where they knew, or ought to have known, that their company has transgressed EU or UK competition law. ³³⁶ The CMA has published guidance on the situations in which it will apply to court for a disqualification order. ³³⁷

Third party actions

43-137

Although the Act does not specifically say so, it is intended that third parties should be able to bring an action for an injunction and/or damages where they suffer harm as a result of an infringement of the Chs I or II prohibitions. ³³⁸ The Court of Justice has clarified the position under EU law in the judgment it handed down in Courage v Crehan ³³⁹ which, by virtue of s.60, may lead to a greater number of damages actions in the UK. There have been several actions before the UK civil courts. Claims for damages may also be brought under ss.47A and 47B of the Competition Act, as inserted by the Enterprise Act, before the Competition Appeal Tribunal.

- 310. Competition Act 1998 s.25.
- 311. s.26.
- 312. s.27.
- 313. s.28.
- 314. s.30.
- 315. s.31.
- 316. ss.32 and 33.
- 317. See, e.g. Directions given by the Director General of Fair Trading under section 33 of the Competition Act 1998 to Napp Pharmaceutical Holdings Ltd and its subsidiaries, May 4, 2001, upheld on appeal Napp Pharmaceutical Holdings Ltd v Director General of Fair Trading [2002] C.A.T. 1, [2002] Comp. A.R. 13, paras 553–562; OFT Decision, Lladró Comercial, March 31, 2003, paras 117–118; OFT Decision, Genzyme, March 27, 2003; the C.A.T. granted interim relief in Genzyme Ltd v Office of Fair Trading [2003] C.A.T. 8.
- 318. Competition Act 1998 s.34.
- 319. s.35.
- 320. s.36(3).
- 321. s.36(4) and s.39.
- 322. s.36(5) and s.40.
- 323. Competition Act 1998 (Determination of Turnover for Penalties)(Amendment) Order 2004 (SI 2004/1259).
- 324. OFT 423 “Guidance as to the appropriate amount of a penalty”.
- 325. OFT 423, paras 3.3–3.8.
- 326. Competition Act 1998 Sch.8 para.3(2).
- 327. [2002] C.A.T. 1, [2002] Comp. A.R. 13.
- 328. [2003] C.A.T. 11.
- 329. See e.g. Construction Bid-rigging case, in which the fines were reduced from £129.2 million to £63.9 million: Case 1114/1/1/09 etc. Kier Group Plc v OFT [2011] C.A.T. 3.
- 330. Napp Pharmaceutical Holdings Ltd v Director General of Fair Trading [2002] C.A.T. 1, [2002] Comp. A.R. 13, paras 502–538.
- 331. Competition Act 1998 s.41.
- 332. s.43(2)(b).
- 333. Enterprise Act 2002 s.190(1).
- 334. OFT Guidelines 513 “The cartel offence: Guidance on the issue of no-action letters for individuals” para.2.3; OFT 515 “Powers for investigating criminal cartels”.

- 335. s.190(4); the OFT has published guidance on the issue of no-action letters, see OFT 513.
- 336. s.204.
- 337. OFT 510 “Competition disqualification orders” and OFT 1340 “Company directors and competition law”.
- 338. See Lord Simon, HL Deb, October 30, 1997, col.1 148; also DTI Press Release P/98/552, July 9, 1998.
- 339. [2001] 1 E.C.R. 6297, [2001] 5 C.M.L.R. 1058.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition
Section 3. - United Kingdom Competition Law
(f) - The Competition Commission

The Competition Commission

43-138

The Competition Commission was created by the Competition Act 340 and was responsible for carrying out merger and market investigations under the Enterprise Act 2002. However, the Competition Commission was abolished with effect from April 1, 2013 when its functions, and those of the former Office of Fair trading, were transferred to the newly created Competition and Markets Authority.

340. s.45(1).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition
Section 3. - United Kingdom Competition Law
(g) - The Competition Appeal Tribunal

The Competition Appeal Tribunal

43-139

! The Competition Appeal Tribunal was created by the Enterprise Act, is headed by a President, and is seised of appeals from decisions of the CMA and the sectoral regulators under the Competition Act; claims for damages following decisions finding an infringement of either the UK or EU competition law provisions; and applications for judicial review of decisions of the CMA and the Secretary of State in market investigation references. The Competition Appeal Tribunal Rules 2003 (as amended) ³⁴¹ set out the procedure to be followed in appeals to the Tribunal and apply from June 20, 2003. Appeals may be made by the subjects of such decisions ³⁴² and by third parties. ³⁴³ Appeals on points of law may be made with leave from the Competition Appeal Tribunal to the Court of Appeal. ³⁴⁴ It is also now possible for the Competition Appeal Tribunal to hear so-called “standalone” actions for an injunction and/or damages as a result of changes introduced with effect from October 1, 2015; that is to say it can now hear cases where there has been no prior decision by a competition authority in the UK or the EU.

^{341.} SI 2003/1372.

^{342.} s.46.

^{343.} s.47.

^{344.} s.49.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 43 - Restrictive Agreements and Competition
Section 3. - United Kingdom Competition Law
(h) - Miscellaneous

Section 60: the “governing principles” clause

43-140

A key provision in the Competition Act is s.60. Its purpose is to enable and require the courts and the competition authorities in the UK to take into account and maintain consistency with EU law. The obvious benefits of this are, first, that advantage can be taken of the substantial body of case law that has built up since the provisions of arts 101 and 102 came into effect and, second, that there should be consistency in the application of domestic and EU law. However, s.60 is not without its subtleties and requires careful scrutiny.

Section 60(1)

43-141

Section 60(1) provides as follows:

“The purpose of this section is to ensure that so far as is possible (having regard to any relevant differences between the provisions concerned), questions arising under this Part in relation to competition within the United Kingdom are dealt with in a manner which is consistent with the treatment of corresponding questions arising in Community law in relation to competition within the Community.”

This paragraph states the purpose of s.60, which is the maintenance of consistency with the treatment of corresponding questions in EU law. However, this is to be achieved “so far as is possible (having regard to any relevant differences ...)”. Thus it is recognised that there may not be total symmetry between the application of domestic and EU law. For example, there are certain respects in which the Act itself contains a provision which differs from a corresponding EU rule: an obvious example of this is s.30, which provides a wider concept of legal professional privilege than EU law. ³⁴⁵ Furthermore, there are certain respects in which EU jurisprudence is inappropriate in the context of domestic competition law as it affects the market within the UK: in particular, that element of EU law which is concerned with the development and protection of the single market would appear to be “relevantly different”. This means therefore that there will be circumstances where the case law of the General Court and Court of Justice will not be followed in the UK where it is clear that the EU court was deciding a matter on the basis of single market considerations rather than “orthodox” competition grounds. It hardly needs to be added that it may not always be clear what the motivation of a particular judgment of the EU courts may have been. In BetterCare ³⁴⁶ the Competition Appeal Tribunal stated that s.60 required it to approach an issue of competition law:

“in the manner in which we think the European Court would approach it, as regards the principles and reasoning likely to be followed by that Court.” ³⁴⁷

Section 60(2) and (3)

43-142

Section 60(2) establishes the duty which follows from the purpose set out in s.60(1). The duty of the domestic court, the Competition Appeal Tribunal ³⁴⁸ and of the CMA ³⁴⁹ (including the sectoral regulators) ³⁵⁰ is to determine questions with a view to securing that there is no inconsistency between the principles applied and the decision reached domestically and the principles laid down by the Treaty and the Court of Justice's and the General Court's decisions that would be applicable in determining corresponding questions in EU law. Significantly s.60(3) provides that the domestic court or competition authority "must, in addition, have regard to any relevant decision or statement of the Commission". This means that the duty is lesser in the case of the Commission's decisions and statements, the obligation being only to "have regard" to them, rather than to "maintain consistency" with them.

Section 73: Crown application

43-143

Section 73 specifically provides that the Act binds the Crown, although the Crown is not criminally liable, is not liable to a penalty, and nothing affects Her Majesty in her private capacity.

^{345.} On EU law, see Case 155/79 AM and S Europe v Commission [1982] E.C.R. 1575, [1982] 2 C.M.L.R. 264; this judgment was followed by the Court of Justice in AKZO Nobel Chemicals Ltd v Commission (C-550/07 P) [2010] E.C.R. I-8302.

^{346.} [2002] C.A.T. 7, [2002] Comp. A.R. 299.

^{347.} [2002] C.A.T. 7, [2002] Comp. A.R. 299, para.32.

^{348.} s.60(5) provides that court includes any tribunal.

^{349.} s.60(4).

^{350.} As to the sectoral regulators, see above, para.43-077.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 1. - In General
(a) - Introduction

Sale of Goods Act 1979

44-001

The Sale of Goods Act 1979, which came into force on January 1, 1980, consolidates the law relating to sale of goods. It replaced the Sale of Goods Act 1893 (as amended). Prior to the Consumer Rights Act 2015, the 1979 Act had itself been subject to three amending Acts, viz the Sale of Goods (Amendment) Act 1994, the Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1994 and the Sale of Goods (Amendment) Act 1995, and (in relation to consumers) to the Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002 ¹ as well as a number of minor statutory amendments. The Consumer Rights Act 2015 ² has a major impact on contracts for the sale of goods by businesses to consumers. Many of the rules discussed in this chapter are now limited to business-to-business sales. Consumer contracts are covered in detail in Ch.38. Cases prior to the 1893 Act are of course only relevant in so far as they are consistent with the Act. ³ But they are occasionally cited nevertheless. Cases decided on the 1893 Act are usually relevant but should be approached with caution. They may have been based on a form of words no longer contained in the 1979 Act, either because the 1979 Act consolidated amendments made to the 1893 Act or because of the subsequent amendments to the 1979 Act. But such cases may legitimately be used where the 1979 Act, as often, preserves earlier forms of wording (sometimes in a slightly “modernised” form which it appears was not meant to effect practical changes).

44-002

The Act is not exhaustive, and by s.62 it is provided that:

“(1)

The rules in bankruptcy relating to contracts of sale apply to those contracts, notwithstanding anything in this Act. ⁴

(2)

The rules of the common law, including the law merchant, ⁵ except in so far as they are inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, and in particular the rules relating to the law of principal and agent ⁶ and the effect of fraud, misrepresentation, ⁷ duress or coercion, ⁸ mistake, ⁹ or other invalidating cause, ¹⁰ apply to contracts for the sale of goods.

(3)

Nothing in this Act or the Sale of Goods Act 1893 affects the enactments relating to bills of sale, ¹¹ or any enactment relating to the sale of goods which is not expressly repealed or amended by this Act or that. ¹²

(4)

The provisions of this Act about contracts of sale do not apply to a transaction in the form of a contract of sale which is intended to operate by way of mortgage, pledge, charge or other security.” ¹³

Rights, etc. enforceable by action

44-003

By s.60:

“Where a right, duty or liability is declared by this Act, it may (unless otherwise provided by this Act) be enforced by action.” ¹⁴

Consumer Rights Act 2015

44-004

The Consumer Rights Act 2015 has a major impact on contracts for the sale of goods by businesses (referred to as “traders”) to consumers made on or after October 1, 2015. ¹⁵ The provisions of the Act are discussed in detail in Ch.38.

Legislative background to the Consumer Rights Act 2015 ¹⁶

44-005

Between the enactment of the Sale of Goods Act 1893 and the amendment in 2002 of its successor, the Sale of Goods Act 1979, ¹⁷ the legislative frameworks governing contracts for the sale of goods did not themselves apply special rules to govern consumer contracts, that is, broadly speaking, contracts between sellers acting in the course of business and buyers not acting in the course of business, though they distinguished between sellers acting or not acting in the course of business. On the other hand, from 1973 legislation controlling the validity of contract terms seeking to exclude or to limit the seller’s liability under the statutory implied terms in ss.12 to 14 of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 did distinguish according to the position of the buyer, first by reference to “consumer sales” ¹⁸ and then, under the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, by reference to a buyer “dealing as consumer”. ¹⁹

Consumer Sales Directive 1999

44-006

However, this established pattern of treatment was changed on implementation of the European Consumer Sales Directive of 1999. ²⁰ The main purpose of this directive is to require uniform rules governing certain aspects of contracts of sale of goods by sellers acting in the course of a business to consumer buyers. ²¹ The Directive has three main requirements to be given effect in national laws.

First, it requires that “the seller must deliver goods to the consumer which are in conformity with the contract of sale”, defining “conformity” in terms familiar to the English lawyer from the statutory implied terms of s.14 and 15 of the Sale of Goods Act 1979.²² However, some aspects of the 1999 Directive’s requirement of conformity were new to English law, notably, the specified relevance to the quality which a consumer can reasonably expect of goods of “public statements on the specific characteristics of the goods made about them by the seller, the producer or his representative”.²³ Secondly, the Directive requires a series of rights for consumer buyers in respect of the “contractual non-conformity” of the goods: at a first level, a right to repair or replacement of the goods²⁴; and, if these remedies are unavailable or fail, a right to “an appropriate reduction in the price”²⁵ and a right to “rescission” of the contract as long as the non-conformity of the goods is not minor.²⁶ Thirdly, the Directive requires that “guarantees” by sellers or producers to consumers²⁷ shall be binding.²⁸

First implementation of 1999 Directive: amendment of existing legislation

44-007

The 1999 Directive was first implemented in the UK by the Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002 (“the 2002 Regulations”)²⁹ and took effect principally by the amendment of existing UK legislation: the Sale of Goods Act 1979,³⁰ the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982,³¹ the Supply of Goods (Implied Terms) Act 1973³² and the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977.³³ In particular, the 2002 Regulations inserted a new Pt 5A into the Sale of Goods Act 1979 providing a bespoke scheme of remedies based on the Directive for those dealing as a consumer. The 2002 Regulations also made provision for “consumer guarantees” as required by the 1999 Directive, which was not inserted into any existing primary legislation.³⁴ In implementing the Directive in this way, the new English law provisions were extended so as to benefit persons “dealing as consumer” within the meaning of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977³⁵ and not merely “consumers” as understood by the 1999 Directive. This law still applies to contracts made before October 1, 2015³⁶ and is discussed in detail in Ch.38.³⁷

The Consumer Rights Act 2015

44-008

The Consumer Rights Act 2015 takes a radically different approach to implementation of the Consumer Sales Directive 1999 and introduces wider reform to the substantive rights of consumers against traders in respect of the conformity of goods, digital content or services with the contract. As described in detail in Ch.38, Pt 1 of the 2015 Act identifies three broad categories of consumer contract: “contracts for a trader to supply goods to a consumer” or “goods contracts” (Ch.2)³⁸, “contracts for a trader to supply digital content to a consumer” or “digital content contracts” (Ch.3)³⁹, and “contracts for a trader to supply a service to a consumer” or “services contracts” (Ch.4)⁴⁰, providing for each category a series of terms which are “treated as included” in the contract, these being broadly equivalent to the traditional implied terms of earlier legislation, as amended and supplemented.⁴¹

44-009

Secondly, in respect of each category of contract, the 2015 Act provides a series of remedies, referred to as “rights to enforce terms”.⁴² In the case of “goods contracts” and “digital content contracts”, these rights are modelled broadly on the rights in respect of contractual non-conformity of goods provided by the 1999 Directive and earlier implemented by Pt 5A in the Sale of Goods Act 1979,⁴³ but there are a series of adjustments and differences.⁴⁴ Part 1 of the 2015 Act also gives effect to certain aspects of the Consumer Rights Directive 2011, notably its requirement that information provided by the trader about the goods or services as set out by the Directive is to form part of the contract⁴⁵ and its rules governing delivery of goods and the passing of risk in goods in consumer sales contracts.⁴⁶

44-010

Thirdly, the 2015 Act provides that a term in a contract to which it applies cannot exclude or restrict the trader's liability arising under its substantive provisions. ⁴⁷

44-011

In this way, the 2015 Act seeks to set out comprehensively in a single Act all the rules governing the issues arising between the parties to consumer contracts. As a result, the 2015 Act disapplies earlier legislation affecting these categories of contracts (particularly the 1979 Act) so as no longer to apply to them or to apply to them only with qualifications. ⁴⁸ Thus, as special provision is made in the 2015 Act ⁴⁹ for the issues formerly (and generally) governed by the 1979 Act's provisions on statutory implied terms as to title, sale by description, quality or fitness for purpose and sale by sample ⁵⁰ the 2015 Act disapplies these provisions in the 1979 Act so as no longer apply to "goods contracts" within the meaning of Pt 1 of the 2015 Act. ⁵¹ Similarly, the 2015 Act makes special provision for "goods contracts" regarding delivery of goods generally, ⁵² delivery of wrong quantity, ⁵³ instalment deliveries ⁵⁴ and the passing of risk ⁵⁵ and, as a result, it disapplies the equivalent provisions applicable to contracts of sale of goods under the 1979 Act. ⁵⁶ Finally, because the 2015 Act also provides a new scheme of remedies for the consumer under "goods contracts" it also deletes Pt 5A of the 1979 Act and disapplies other provisions in the 1979 Act. ⁵⁷ The remainder of this chapter accordingly focuses on rules which are either common to consumer contracts for goods and business sales (summarised in para.44-012 below), or which now only apply to non-consumer sales which are not subject to Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the 2015 Act.

Issues still regulated by the Sale of Goods Act 1979

44-012

The 2015 Act leaves unaffected a number of provisions of the 1979 Act, which are therefore potentially applicable to the contracts to which the 2015 Act applies. In particular, the 2015 Act leaves unaffected provisions in the 1979 Act governing capacity to buy and sell, ⁵⁸ how contracts of sale of goods are made, ⁵⁹ existing or future goods, ⁶⁰ perished goods, ⁶¹ goods perishing before sale but after agreement to sell, ⁶² ascertainment of price, ⁶³ agreement to sell at a valuation, ⁶⁴ stipulations about time, ⁶⁵ when property passes (though the 2015 Act refers instead to "ownership" rather than "property"), ⁶⁶ sales by a person other than the owner, ⁶⁷ duties of sellers and buyers in general, ⁶⁸ payment and delivery as concurrent conditions, ⁶⁹ the buyer's liability for not taking delivery of goods, ⁷⁰ the unpaid seller's rights against goods, ⁷¹ the seller's action for the price, ⁷² and damages for non-acceptance against the buyer. ⁷³

The Uniform Laws on International Sales Act 1967

44-013

This Act implemented two international conventions signed at The Hague in 1964. It contains, in Schedules, two uniform laws, the Uniform Law on the International Sale of Goods ("ULIS") and the Uniform Law on the Formation of Contracts for the International Sale of Goods ("ULFIS"), both of which differ in important respects from the English domestic law. The Laws received the requisite number of ratifications to be brought into effect in 1972. ⁷⁴ The Uniform Law on Sales was intended to regulate international sales between parties whose places of business or habitual residence are in the territories of different contracting states, ⁷⁵ but by virtue of reservations made by the United Kingdom on ratification, under English law the law applied only where chosen by the parties. ⁷⁶ The Uniform Laws had comparatively little effect, and in the United Kingdom virtually none. They have in effect been superseded by the Vienna Convention, below.

Vienna Convention of 1980

44-014

❗ A new Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods (CISG), prepared by UNCITRAL and intended to supersede ULIS and ULFIS, was approved in Vienna in April 1980.⁷⁷ Its scope is similar, and though its rules vary considerably from those of ULIS and ULFIS they are still substantially different from those of English law: they represent, in fact, a compromise between common law and civil law techniques. The Convention came into force on January 1, 1988. It has been ratified or acceded to by over 78 States, including the United States, China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand and most EU countries, but not by the United Kingdom, Brazil, countries in the Indian subcontinent or (with the exception of Singapore) South-East Asia or most African countries. Should the United Kingdom adopt the Convention, its application would (within its own terms) be automatic and not dependent on the positive choice of the parties; and the same is the case in other countries which become parties to it. The contracting parties, however, may exclude the Convention in whole or in part if they wish. Contracts governed by foreign law may well be governed or affected by the Convention. In 2011 the European Commission proposed a Common European Sales Law, a different project from CISG; but that proposal has recently been withdrawn.⁷⁸ ❗

-
- ^{1.} SI 2002/3045.
 - ^{2.} The Act has been brought into force so as to apply to contracts made on or after October 1, 2015. See above, para.38-011.
 - ^{3.} “The object and intent of the statute of 1893 was, no doubt, simply to codify the written law applicable to the sale of goods, but, in so far as there is an express statutory enactment, that alone must be looked at and must govern the rights of the parties, even though the section may to some extent have altered the prior common law”: Bristol Tramways and Carriage Co v Fiat Motors Ltd [1910] 2 K.B. 831, 836, per Cozens-Hardy M.R. See also Bank of England v Vagliano Brothers [1891] A.C. 107, 144-145.
 - ^{4.} See Insolvency Act 1986 as amended. See also Vol.I, Ch.20.
 - ^{5.} It seems clear that these include the rules of equity, which have in numerous cases been assumed to be applicable: the prime example is that of rescission for misrepresentation, as to which see below, para.44-058. See in general Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 1-008, 1-009.
 - ^{6.} See above, Ch.31.
 - ^{7.} See Vol.I, Ch.7; below, para.44-058.
 - ^{8.} See Vol.I, Ch.8.
 - ^{9.} See Vol.I, Ch.6.
 - ^{10.} See Vol.I, Ch.16 (Illegality).
 - ^{11.} See the Bills of Sale Acts 1878 and 1882; above, para.39-519.
 - ^{12.} e.g. Factors Act 1889.
 - ^{13.} See below, paras 44-030, 44-031. New subss.(5) and (6) are added by the Consumer Rights Act 2015 making it clear that certain sections or subsections of the Act no longer apply to consumer sales contracts which are subject to Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the 2015 Act.
 - ^{14.} In Chalmers, Sale of Goods, 18th edn (1981), p.261, it is suggested that the purpose of this provision is to exclude the criminal law.
 - ^{15.} See above, n.2.

- 16. For further detail see above, paras 38-399—38-402.
- 17. These amendments were effected by the Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002 SI 2002/3045 implementing the Directive 1999/44/EEC (“the Consumer Sales Directive 1999”).
- 18. Supply of Goods (Implied Terms) Act 1973 s.4 creating new Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.55(4) and (7) (repealed by Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977).
- 19. Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 s.6(2)(a) (in relation to the terms implied by the Sale of Goods Act 1979 ss.13-15).
- 20. Directive 1999/44/EC on certain aspects of the sale of consumer goods and associated guarantees [1999] O.J. L171/12 (“Consumer Sales Directive” or “1999 Directive”). See above, para.38-400.
- 21. 1999 Directive art.2(a) “consumer”; (b) “goods” and (c) “seller”.
- 22. 1999 Directive art.3(2). The formulations of these requirements are elaborated further in the Directive.
- 23. 1999 Directive art.3(3)(d) in fine.
- 24. 1999 Directive art.3(3).
- 25. 1999 Directive art.3(5).
- 26. 1999 Directive art.3(5) and (6).
- 27. Defined in 1999 Directive art.1(2)(e).
- 28. 1999 Directive art.6.
- 29. SI 2002/3045.
- 30. 2002 Regulations regs 3-6, amending Sale of Goods Act 1979 ss.14, 20 and 61(1) and inserting new Pt 5A.
- 31. 2002 Regulations regs 7-12, amending Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 ss.4, 11D, 11J and 18, and inserting new Pt 1B.
- 32. 2002 Regulations reg.13, amending Supply of Goods (Implied Terms) Act 1973 s.10.
- 33. 2002 Regulations reg.14, amending Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 s.12 (for English law).
- 34. 2002 Regulations reg.15. The definitions in reg.2 apply only to this provision as the remainder of the substantive provisions of the 2002 Regulations provide for amendments of other legislation (as explained in the text) whose terms fall to be interpreted, therefore, by the legislation which these amendments concern.
- 35. The definition in UCTA was amended to include contracts made by an individual buyer for goods of a kind not normally supplied for private use or consumption.
- 36. For the temporal application of the Consumer Rights Act 2015, see above, para.38-011.
- 37. See the discussion of the “old law” above, paras 38-405—38-430.
- 38. Consumer Rights Act 2015 s.3(1). See above, paras 38-451—38-495.
- 39. 2015 Act s.33(1). See above, paras 38-496—38-526.

- 40. 2015 Act s.48(1). See above, paras 38-527—38-547.
- 41. i.e. the Supply of Goods (Implied Terms Act) 1973, the Sale of Goods Act 1979, and the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982.
- 42. 2015 Act s.19 (goods contracts), s.42 (digital content contracts) and s.54 (services contracts); and see above, paras 38-477—38-488, 38-517—38-522 and 38-540—38-544.
- 43. 1982 Act Pt 1B.
- 44. See above, paras 38-477—38-488, 38-517—38-522 and 38-540—38-544 for the details.
- 45. 2011 Directive art.6(5), above para.38-465, 2015 Act ss.11(4)-(6), 12 (goods contracts); above para.38-509; s.36(3)-(4) and 37 (digital content contracts); above para.38-532, ss.50(3)-(4) (services contracts).
- 46. 2011 Directive arts 18 and 20; 2015 Act ss.28-29. See above, para.38-490.
- 47. 2015 Act s.31 (goods contracts), s.47 (digital content contracts) and s.57 (services contracts) and see above, paras 38-492, 38-524 and 38-545 respectively.
- 48. 2015 Act s.60 and Sch.1.
- 49. 2015 Act ss.9-18.
- 50. 1979 Act ss.11-15.
- 51. 2015 Act s.60; Sch.1, paras 8, 10-14.
- 52. 2015 Act s.28.
- 53. 2015 Act s.25.
- 54. 2015 Act s.26.
- 55. 2015 Act s.29.
- 56. 1979 Act ss.20, 29-33; 35-36; 2015 Act s.60, Sch.1 paras 17-22.
- 57. 2015 Act s.60, Sch.1 paras 24-30, 31-32 disapplying 1979 Act s.35 (acceptance), s.35A (right of partial rejection) and s.36 (buyer not bound to return rejected goods) which are inconsistent with the new scheme for consumers. The 2015 Act also disappplies s.51 (damages for non-delivery), s.52 (specific performance), s.53 (remedy for breach of warranty) and s.54 (interest). In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides special remedies for buyers. Where there is no direct equivalent to ss.51, 52 and 53 the consumer buyer will have to rely on the common law. The 2015 Act s.60, Sch.1 also makes other minor amendments to the 1979 Act consequential on its enactment of Pt 1.
- 58. 1979 Act s.3, on which see Vol.1, Ch.9 and below, para.44-033.
- 59. Though parallel provision is made for all the types of contract to which Pt 1 of the 2015 Act applies: 2015 Act s.1(2).
- 60. 1979 Act s.5, on which see below, para.44-038.
- 61. 1979 Act s.6, on which see below, para.44-046.
- 62. 1979 Act s.7, on which see below, paras 44-047—44-048.
- 63. 1979 Act s.8, on which see below, paras 44-051—44-052.

- 64. 1979 Act s.9, on which see below, para.44-053.
- 65. 1979 Act s.10, on which see below, para.44-128.
- 66. 2015 Act s.4; 1979 Act ss.16-19, 20A-20B, below, paras 44-130—44-186.
- 67. 1979 Act ss.21-26, below, paras 44-191—44-233.
- 68. 1979 Act s.27, on which see below, para.44-234.
- 69. 1979 Act s.28, on which see below, para.44-235.
- 70. 1979 Act s.37, on which see below, para.44-291.
- 71. 1979 Act ss.41-48, on which see below, paras 44-304 et seq.
- 72. 1979 Act s.49, on which see below, paras 44-359 et seq.
- 73. 1979 Act s.50, on which see below, paras 44-367 et seq.
- 74. Uniform Laws on International Sales Order 1972 (SI 1972/973).
- 75. SI 1972/973 art.1.
- 76. Uniform Law on International Sales Act 1967 s.1(3).
- 77. See Nicholas (1989) 105 L.Q.R. 201; Honnold, Uniform Law for International Sales, 4th edn (2009); Schlechtriem, Commentary on the UN Convention on the International Sale of Goods (CISG), 3rd edn (2010); Bianca and Bonell, Commentary on the International Sales Law (1987); Bridge, The International Sale of Goods: Law and Practice, 2nd edn (2007).
- 78.  See COM(2011) 635 (final) of 11.10.2011. Following a positive opinion from the Legal Affairs (JURI) Committee (Memo/13/792) on February 26, 2014 the proposal received strong backing from the European Parliament (Memo 14/137). However, on December 16, 2014 the EU Commission presented its Work Programme for 2015 to the European Parliament and the existing proposal for a Common European Sales Law was listed as item 60 in the Annex of withdrawn proposals (Com (2014) 910 final). The reason given for the withdrawal was: "Modify proposal in order to fully unleash the potential of e-commerce in the Digital Single Market". In its Digital Single Market Strategy published on May 6, 2015 (Com (2015) 192 final) the Commission referred to the need to modernise and simplify consumer rules for online and digital purchases, but the Digital Single Market agenda also covers a wide range of other issues and the likely substance and form of any new proposal in relation to sales remains very unclear. In December 2015, the Commission proposed a directive on contracts for online and other distance sales of goods (the Online Sale of Goods Directive COM(2015) 635 final). This would partly replace the existing Consumer Sales Directive with regard to distance sales (both online and offline). The proposed Online Sale of Goods Directive is part of the Digital Single Market Strategy and comes alongside several other proposed legal instruments, notably in connection with digital content supply and the portability of digital content. On May 25, 2016, the Commission published an E-commerce package (COM(2016) 320 final) aimed at three particular aspects of ecommerce: unjustified geo-blocking, transparency of parcel delivery prices and enforcement of consumer rights.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 1. - In General
(b) - Definitions

Definitions

44-015

 By s.61(1), unless the context or subject matter otherwise requires:

"Action" includes counterclaim and set-off;

"Bulk" means a mass or collection of goods of the same kind which—is contained in a defined space or area; and is such that any goods in the bulk are interchangeable with other goods therein of the same number or quality ⁷⁹;

(a)

(b)

"Business" includes a profession and the activities of any government department (including a Northern Ireland department), or local or public authority;

"Buyer" means a person who buys or agrees to buy goods;

"Contract of sale" includes an agreement to sell as well as a sale;

"Delivery" means voluntary transfer of possession from one person to another ⁸⁰ except that in relation to ss.20A and 20B ... it includes such appropriation of goods to the contract as results in property in the goods being transferred to the buyer ⁸¹;

"Document of title to goods" has the same meaning as it has in the Factors Acts ⁸²;

"Factors Acts" means the Factors Act 1889 and any enactment amending or substituted for the same;

"Fault" means wrongful act or default;

"Future goods" means goods to be manufactured or acquired by the seller after the making of the contract of sale ⁸³;

"Goods" includes all personal chattels other than things in action and money. ⁸⁴  The term includes emblements, industrial growing crops, and things attached to or forming part of the land which are agreed to be severed before sale or under the contract of sale ⁸⁵; and includes an undivided share in goods ⁸⁶;

"Plaintiff" includes defendant counterclaiming;

"Property" means the general property in goods, and not merely a special property ⁸⁷;

"Seller" means a person who sells or agrees to sell goods ⁸⁸;

"Specific goods" means goods identified and agreed on at the time a contract of sale is made and includes an undivided share, specified as a fraction or percentage, of goods identified and agreed on as aforesaid ⁸⁹;

"Warranty" means an agreement with reference to goods which are the subject of a contract of sale, but collateral to the main purpose of such contract, the breach of which gives rise to a claim for damages, but not to a right to reject the goods and treat the contract as repudiated." ⁹⁰

44-016

By s.61(3), a thing is deemed to be done "in good faith" within the meaning of the Act when it is in fact done honestly, whether it is done negligently or not. ⁹¹

By s.61(4), a person is deemed to be insolvent within the meaning of the Act if he has either ceased to pay his debts in the ordinary course of business or he cannot pay his debts as they become due. ⁹²

By s.61(5), goods are in a "deliverable state" within the meaning of the Act when they are in such a state that the buyer would under the contract be bound to take delivery of them. ⁹³

Reasonable time

44-017

By s.59:

"Where a reference is made in this Act to a reasonable time the question what is a reasonable time is a question of fact." ⁹⁴

Consumer Rights Act 2015

44-018

The Consumer Rights Act 2015 removes from the Sale of Goods Act those definitions that are relevant only to consumer contracts, and provides its own definitions. The principal change is that the concept of “dealing as a consumer”⁹⁵ is abolished and the Act applies “where there is an agreement between a trader and a consumer for the trader to supply goods, digital content or services, if the agreement is a contract”.⁹⁶ “Trader” is defined as “a person acting for purposes relating to that person’s trade, business, craft or profession, whether acting personally or through another person acting in the trader’s name or on the trader’s behalf”.⁹⁷ “Consumer” is defined as “an individual acting for purposes that are wholly or mainly outside that individual’s trade, business, craft or profession”.⁹⁸ The principal changes of substance is that only an individual can now count as a consumer and that there is now explicit provision for the case in which goods are bought partly for business and partly for non-business purposes: the question will be which was the main purpose.⁹⁹

Overseas sales

44-019

Special forms of contract have been developed by traders for overseas sales, and in particular for sales which contemplate that the goods will be carried to their destination by ship or by multimodal transport. The most frequently encountered types of contract are CIF (cost, insurance and freight), where the price is inclusive of insurance and freight to the designated port of destination, and FOB (free on board), where the seller is required at his own expense to deliver the goods to and place them on board a ship at the designated port of shipment. But the standard types of such contract also include: C&F or CFR (cost and freight), FAS (free alongside ship), FCA or FRC (free to carrier at a named place), CIP (carriage and insurance paid to a named place of destination), as well as Ex Works, Ex Ship and Ex Quay. Agreed terminology has been formulated by the International Chamber of Commerce in Incoterms,¹⁰⁰ but the incidents of the contracts there defined are sometimes at variance with those implied by English law. A detailed discussion of the law applicable to overseas sales can be found in Pt 7 of Benjamin’s Sale of Goods.¹⁰¹

^{79.} Inserted by s.2 of the Sale of Goods (Amendment) Act 1995: see ss.20A, 20B, see below, paras 44-160 et seq. It is probable that this definition does not apply to s.15: see below, para.44-114.

^{80.} But the delivery may be constructive; see below, para.44-239.

^{81.} Amended by s.2 of the Sale of Goods (Amendment) Act 1995. See below, paras 44-160 et seq.

^{82.} See ss.24, 25. The expression “document of title” is stated by s.1 of the Factors Act 1889 to include “any bill of lading, dock warrant, warehouse-keeper’s certificate, and warrant or order for the delivery of goods, and any other document used in the ordinary course of business as proof of the possession or control of goods, or authorising or purporting to authorise, either by endorsement or by delivery, the possessor of the document to transfer or receive goods thereby represented”. This is considerably wider than the common law notion of a document of title, viz a document which is treated as representing the goods, which is effectively confined to bills of lading. See Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.18-007. A motor vehicle registration document is not in England a document of title under the Act: Joblin v Watkins and Roseveare (Motors) Ltd (1949) 64 T.L.R. 464; and see Beverley Acceptances Ltd v Oakley [1982] R.T.R. 417.

^{83.} See below, para.44-037.

84.

!The term “personal chattels” covers any tangible movable property except money: s.61(1) (but see Moss v Hancock [1899] 2 Q.B. 111; coin bought as curiosity, and not received as current coin). It includes ships: Behnke v Bede Shipping Co [1927] 1 K.B. 649, 659; but these are largely governed by their own special rules: see Merchant Shipping Act 1995. It does not include things in action, such as shares, insurance policies, negotiable instruments, and industrial property; but it does include a part interest in goods (see s.2(2), below, para.44-020; Nicol v Hennessy (1896) 1 Com. Cas. 410). It has been held that a sale of a computer system, including both hardware and software, is a sale of goods: quaere as to software alone: Toby Constructions Products Pty Ltd v Computa Bar (Sales) Pty Ltd [1983] 2 N.S.W.L.R. 48; Rubicon Computer Systems Ltd v United Paints Ltd (2000) 2 T.C.L.R. 454; and see St. Albans City and DC v International Computers Ltd [1996] 4 All E.R. 481; but cf. Beta Computers (Europe) Ltd v Adobe Systems (Europe) Ltd 1996 S.L.T. 604. In Southwark LBC v IBM UK Ltd [2011] EWHC 549 (TCC), 135 Con. L.R. 136 it was said that compact discs impressed with software can be considered as “goods”. The issue does not easily arise as such because matters of quality and suitability for purpose can be disposed of under express contract terms, the implied terms of the Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1982 and the implication of terms by analogy with that statute and the Sale of Goods Act. See also discussions by Green and Saidov [2007] J.B.L. 161; Naranjan [2009] J.B.L. 799; and below, para.44-109. It was decided, after a careful survey of the authorities, that software is not “goods” in Gammasonics Institute for Medical Research Pty Ltd v Comrad Medical Systems Ltd [2010] NSWSC 267. In Software Incubator Ltd v Computer Associates UK Ltd [2016] EWHC 1587 (QB) HH Judge Waxman (sitting as a Judge of the High Court) held that the sale of computer software was a sale of goods for the purposes of the Commercial Agents (Council Directive) Regulations 1993. Although he stressed that context was all and that it was possible that there could be a different answer under the Sale of Goods Act, he reviewed the authorities on the Act (at [47] et seq.) and concluded that the case law was scarce and limited in effect. The Consumer Rights Act 2015 Ch.3 provides statutory terms for contracts for the supply of digital content to consumers and provide the consumer with remedies for breach. See above, paras 38-496—38-524.

85.

Slag, cinder tips or other artificially formed mounds of débris may, in the process of time, so accede to the soil as to become incapable of forming the subject matter of a contract of sale within the Sale of Goods Act: Morgan v Russell [1909] 1 K.B. 357; Mills v Stokman (1967) 116 C.L.R. 61 (abandoned slate); cf. Kursell v Timber Operators and Contractors Ltd [1927] 1 K.B. 298 (growing timber). Mineral oil extracted and removed from the soil is in the category of movables: Anglo-Iranian Oil Co Ltd v Jaffrate [1953] 1 W.L.R. 246, 260. It has been held in Australia that the sale of a house to be moved on a trailer was a sale of goods: Symes v Laurie [1985] 2 Qd.R. 547.

86.

Amended by s.2 of the Sale of Goods (Amendment) Act 1995; see below, paras 44-160 et seq.

87.

A special property could arise, for example, by way of pledge. For the distinction, see Sewell v Burdick (1884) 10 App. Cas. 74; The Odessa [1916] 1 A.C. 145.

88.

See s.2, below, para.44-020.

89.

Amended by s.2 of the Sale of Goods (Amendment) Act 1995; see below, paras 44-160 et seq.

90.

See s.11, below, para.44-056; Vol.I, paras 13-019 et seq.

91.

See Jones v Gordon (1877) 2 App. Cas. 616; Janesich v Attenborough & Son (1910) 102 L.T. 605; Moody v Pall Mall Deposit and Forwarding Co Ltd (1917) 33 T.L.R. 306; Heap v Motorist' Advisory Agency Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 577, 590, 591; Davey v Paine Bros (Motors) Ltd [1954] N.Z.L.R. 1122, 1130; Barclays bank Ltd v TOSG Trust Fund Ltd [1984] B.C.L.C. 1, 18; GE Capital Bank Ltd v Rushton [2005] EWCA Civ 1556, [2006] 1 W.L.R. 899. cf. Bishopsgate Motor Finance Corp Ltd v Transport Brakes Ltd [1949] 1 K.B. 322, 338; Pearson v Rose and Young Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 275, 289; Stadium Finance Ltd v Robbins [1962] 2 Q.B. 664, 672, 675; Astley Industrial Trust Ltd v Miller [1968] 2 All E.R. 36 (whether purchase of vehicle without registration document is evidence of bad faith). See ss.23-25, below, paras 44-206 et seq.

92.

See below, para.44-313.

- 93. See below, paras 44-0—44-141.
- 94. e.g. s.18 r.4, ss.29(3), 35, 37, 48(3).
- 95. Previously found in Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.61(5A).
- 96. s.1(1).
- 97. s.2(2).
- 98. s.2(3).
- 99. See further above, para.38-447.
- 100. Incoterms 2010 (ICC Publication 715).
- 101. 9th edn (2014).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 2. - Formation of the Contract

(a) - Contract of Sale

Sale and agreement to sell

44-020

 The terms "sale" and "agreement to sell" are defined as follows by s.2 of the Sale of Goods Act 1979:

"(1)

A contract of sale of goods is a contract by which the seller transfers or agrees to transfer the property ¹⁰²  in goods to the buyer for a money consideration, called the price.

(2)

There may be a contract of sale between one part owner and another.

(3)

A contract of sale may be absolute or conditional. ¹⁰³

(4)

Where under a contract of sale the property in the goods is transferred from the seller to the buyer the contract is called a sale.

(5)

Where under a contract of sale the transfer of the property in the goods is to take place at a future time or subject to some condition later to be fulfilled the contract is called an agreement to sell.

(6)

An agreement to sell becomes a sale when the time elapses or the conditions are fulfilled subject to which the property in the goods is to be transferred." ¹⁰⁴

Two points here are to be noted. The first is the distinction between a sale and an agreement to sell. The second is the distinction between a contract of sale, which includes both a sale and an agreement to sell, and other similar contracts.

Sales distinguished from agreements to sell

44-021

It is necessary to make this distinction because a sale of goods is both a contract and a conveyance ¹⁰⁵; an agreement to sell, on the other hand, is a contract and nothing more. It follows that if one party to an agreement to sell defaults, the other party is limited to a personal remedy. But if there has been a sale the buyer also may have proprietary remedies in respect of the goods themselves, and the seller can sue for the price. Further, the risk of destruction or deterioration of the goods in a business-to-business transaction normally remains with the owner: thus it usually lies on the seller under an agreement to sell, but if there has been a sale the prima facie rule is that the buyer assumes the risk. ¹⁰⁶

Contracts of sale distinguished from other contracts

44-022

Before the repeal of s.4 of the Sale of Goods Act 1893, ¹⁰⁷ the distinction between sale and other similar contracts was important, for until then sales, but not other contracts relating to goods, required written evidence. Since that time the matter is of less significance. But it may still be necessary to draw the distinction. For example, the Act lays down implied terms as to title, quality and description ¹⁰⁸; and the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 contains special provisions regulating the exclusion of these terms, ¹⁰⁹ which are different from those applicable to other contracts for the supply of goods ¹¹⁰ or to contracts in general. ¹¹¹ Although similar terms are laid down for hire-purchase contracts, they did not apply to contracts of barter, for work and materials, or of pure hire. Thus the section of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, which applied to these contracts, ¹¹² when first passed had little to bite on. However, the courts applied similar rules by analogy ¹¹³; and subsequently the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 laid down implied terms for these contracts also ¹¹⁴; but they are not identical with those for sale or hire-purchase. Again, the Sale of Goods Act contains detailed provisions under which the property in goods passes, in many cases independently of delivery. ¹¹⁵ These rules as such do not apply to contracts which are not contracts of sale. ¹¹⁶ The distinction may also be important in the case of frustration: certain contracts for the sale of goods are governed by s.7 of the Act, but the consequences of frustration when the case falls outside s.7 are governed by the general law and by the Law Reform (Frustrated Contracts) Act 1943. ¹¹⁷ And in general, the other provisions of the Act are intended for contracts of sale and not for other contracts. ¹¹⁸

Transactions outside the Act

44-023

The following transactions are outside the scope of the Act.

(i) Gift

44-024

The provisions of the Act, e.g. those as to quality and as to the passing of property, do not apply to gifts. This can be important in the case of advertising and promotional offers of goods: if there is a sale, the Act will apply, but if there is merely a gift it will not. ¹¹⁹

(ii) Exchange or barter ¹²⁰44-025

A sale presupposes a price, and if the consideration for the transfer of property is goods and not money, the transaction is one of exchange or barter and not one of sale. ¹²¹ For s.61(1) defines goods so as to exclude money. ¹²² But in order to constitute a sale it is not necessary that the entire consideration should be money, and if it consists partly of the delivery of goods and partly of money, the contract is probably one of sale; for such a partexchange arrangement may be treated as involving reciprocal sales with a set-off of prices, ¹²³ or as a sale where the buyer has the option of satisfying the price in part by delivery of goods. ¹²⁴ On the latter interpretation the traded-in article would not be the subject of a contract of sale. But implied terms are provided for contracts of barter by the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982.

(iii) Contract for work and materials44-026

The distinction between such contracts and contracts of sale has long given rise to controversy. Where the person for whom the work is done supplies all or the principal materials, ¹²⁵ or where the work done involves affixing, or installing materials on the land ¹²⁶ or a chattel ¹²⁷ of that person, the contract is likely (but not certain) ¹²⁸ to be treated as one for work and materials. More difficulty occurs where the work done goes into the actual creation of something produced with materials furnished by the creator. In Lee v Griffin ¹²⁹ Blackburn J. stated that the test was whether the contract was intended to pass the property; if so, the contract must be one of sale. But in Robinson v Graves ¹³⁰ the Court of Appeal held that a contract to paint a portrait was one for work and materials and not for the sale of goods, and Greer L.J. stated the law as follows:

“If the substance of the contract ... is that skill and labour have to be exercised for the production of the article and ... it is only ancillary to that that there will pass from the artist to his client or customer some materials in addition to the skill involved in the production of the portrait, that does not make any difference to the result, because the substance of the contract is the skill and experience of the artist in producing the picture.”

The latter dictum, being more recent, presumably carries more weight, but it has been observed that the question is one of choice between two equally arbitrary rules. ¹³¹ The tendency in the courts was in any case to construe contracts for work and materials as though terms analogous to the implied terms of the Sale of Goods Act were applicable to them. ¹³² But implied terms applicable to contracts for work and materials are now provided by the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982. ¹³³ The Consumer Rights Act 2015 introduces a new concept of the “mixed contract”, i.e. one that involves the trader supplying more than one of the three elements (goods, digital content and services) covered by the three chapters of Pt 1. The 2015 Act also provides that a contract is a sales contract if the goods are to be manufactured or produced, the trader agrees to supply them to the consumer, and the goods will then be owned by the consumer. ¹³⁴

(iv) Hire-purchase agreements, conditional sale agreements and credit sale agreements ¹³⁵44-027

A hire-purchase agreement is an agreement for the bailment of goods for hire with an option to purchase. ¹³⁶ Such a transaction is not governed by the Sale of Goods Act, and indeed this form of contract was in part devised to avoid its provisions, especially that by which a person who has agreed to buy goods and obtained possession of them with the consent of the seller can in some circumstances pass a good title to a bona fide purchaser though he has no property in the goods. ¹³⁷ Hire-purchase agreements, however, have since 1938 been controlled by other statutes in the interests of consumer protection. The principal current statute imposing such control ¹³⁸ is the

Consumer Credit Act 1974 (which applies when the hirer is an individual). ¹³⁹ Terms analogous to those implied by ss.12 to 15 of the Sale of Goods Act are implied in all hire-purchase agreements by the Supply of Goods (Implied Terms) Act 1973. ¹⁴⁰ Hire-purchase agreements under which a trader supplies goods to a consumer are within the scope of Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. ¹⁴¹

Conditional sale agreements

44-028

⚠ A conditional sale agreement is an agreement for the sale of goods under which the purchase price or part of it is payable by instalments, and the property in the goods is to remain in the seller (notwithstanding that the buyer is to be in possession of the goods) until such conditions as to the payment of instalments or otherwise as may be specified in the agreement are fulfilled. ¹⁴² Such a transaction is a contract of sale of goods ¹⁴³ ⚠ and is governed by the Sale of Goods Act. But it is also subject to the control of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 ¹⁴⁴ if the buyer is an individual. Unlike a hirer under a hirepurchase agreement, who has merely an option to purchase the goods, a buyer under a conditional sale agreement will have agreed to buy them, so that if he is in possession of the goods with the consent of the seller he may be able to pass a good title to a bona fide purchaser. ¹⁴⁵ But a buyer under a conditional sale agreement which is a consumer credit agreement within the meaning of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 is deemed not to be a person who has bought or agreed to buy goods. ¹⁴⁶ Such an agreement is therefore assimilated to a hirepurchase agreement for the purposes of restricting the buyer's ability to pass a good title to the goods. Conditional sale agreements under which a trader supplies goods to a consumer are within the scope of Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. ¹⁴⁷

Credit-sale agreements

44-029

The term "credit-sale agreement" is largely of statutory origin: it refers to "an agreement for the sale of goods under which the purchase price or part of it is payable by instalments, but which is not a conditional sale agreement", ¹⁴⁸ viz the property passes to the buyer in accordance with normal rules and is not reserved to the seller. ¹⁴⁹ Such a transaction is a sale of goods and is therefore governed by the Sale of Goods Act. A credit-sale agreement is a consumer credit agreement if the buyer is an individual ¹⁵⁰ and (unless otherwise exempt) ¹⁵¹ the agreement will be a regulated agreement ¹⁵² and subject to the control of the Consumer Credit Act 1974, ¹⁵³ unless the number of payments to be made by the buyer in respect of credit does not exceed four. ¹⁵⁴ A buyer under a credit-sale agreement can pass title to a third party by virtue of the fact that he is the owner of the goods.

(v) Mortgages of goods

44-030

A legal mortgage of goods consists in the transfer of property in the goods in order to secure a debt; the mortgagor retains possession of the goods, subject to the mortgagee's power of taking possession on default in payment. As such, a mortgage of goods bears certain similarities to a contract of sale, since there is a transfer of the property in the goods by the mortgagor to the mortgagee with a proviso for retransfer on redemption. But a transaction in the form of a contract of sale which is intended to operate by way of mortgage, charge or other security is not subject to the provisions of the Sale of Goods Act. ¹⁵⁵ If, however, it is reduced to writing, the transaction may fall within the Bills of Sale Acts 1878 and 1882. ¹⁵⁶ Considerable difficulty may, however, arise where an owner of goods sells the goods to a purchaser and then immediately enters into a hire-purchase agreement whereby he (the original owner) agrees to hire the goods. The combined effect of the sale and lease back may be that of a loan on security of the goods. A genuine sale and a genuine lease back of the same goods will be upheld as falling outside the Bills of Sale Acts. ¹⁵⁷ But circumstances may be present which indicate that such a two-stage transaction is in reality a cloak for a mortgage and so void under the Bills of Sale Act 1882.¹⁵⁸

(vi) Pledges

44-031

A pledge consists in the bailment of goods to secure payment of a debt.¹⁵⁹ The general property in the goods remains in the pledgor, though the pledgee thereby acquires a special property for securing repayment of the debt. The provisions of the Sale of Goods Act about contracts of sale do not apply to a transaction in the form of a contract of sale¹⁶⁰ which is intended to operate by way of pledge.¹⁶¹

(vii) Agency

44-032

A person who agrees to procure goods for another may be an agent, or he may buy them and resell them to that other. Conversely a person who agrees to sell goods for another may be an agent, or he may be a person buying for resale, whether outright or on a “sale or return” basis.¹⁶² An agent’s duties are normally no more than to use his best endeavours and are quite different from those of a seller. The extent to which the person concerned is remunerated by commission is relevant to this distinction: even more relevant is the extent to which he has to account to the other.¹⁶³

^{102.}

❗ It is not, of course, essential that any immediate right to possession should be passed by the contract: see Watts v Seymour [1967] 2 Q.B. 647. But the title passed must be absolute and not merely possessory: see Rowland v Divall [1923] 2 K.B. 500; and the transfer of property must be the essence of the contract: see PST Energy 7 Shipping LLC v OW Bunker Malta Ltd (The Res Cogitans) [2016] UKSC 23. The Supreme Court, upholding the decision of the Court of Appeal ([2015] EWCA Civ 1058; see L. Shmilovits [2016] L.M.C.L.Q. 20 and A. Tettenborn [2016] L.M.C.L.Q. 24 and, in relation to the decision of the Supreme Court, L. Gullifer [2017] L.Q.R. 244), held that a contract for the supply of fuel bunkers, which contained a retention of title clause and permitted the purchasing vessel owners to consume the bunkers during the credit period, was not a contract for the sale of goods within the meaning of s.2(1). See below, para.44-174A.

^{103.}

❗ The meaning of the term “conditional” is not clear, but it is submitted that it refers to a contract in which the duties are subject to a suspensive or resolute condition, of which an example is discussed in connection with future goods. In Hughes v Pendragon Sabre Ltd (t/a Porsche Centre Bolton) [2016] EWCA Civ 18 there was a contract to sell if the seller was allocated one of a new model of car by the manufacturer. The contract was construed as an agreement to sell future goods to be acquired by the seller which depended on a contingency: see below, para.44-037. As such it should be distinguished from an option to buy: see Marten v Whale [1917] 2 K.B. 480. cf. Spiro v Glencrown Properties Ltd [1991] Ch. 537. Difficulties occur because of the use of the term “unconditional” in s.18 r.1 (see below, para.44-028); and because of conditions affecting the passage of property creating a “conditional sale” (see below, para.44-028).

^{104.}

As to when the property is transferred, see below, paras 44-130 et seq.

^{105.}

See Mischeff v Springett [1942] 2 K.B. 331, 336.

^{106.}

See below, para.44-187.

^{107.}

See below, para.44-034.

- 108. 1977 Act ss.12-15, see below, paras 44-075 et seq.
- 109. s.6, see below, paras 44-117 et seq.
- 110. See s.7; Vol.I, para.15-094.
- 111. 1977 Act ss.2, 3; Vol.I, paras 15-081 et seq.
- 112. s.7.
- 113. See below, para.44-026.
- 114. See ss.1, 2-5, 6-10.
- 115. See below, paras 44-130 et seq.
- 116. See Flynn v Mackin and Mahon [1974] I.R. 101, noted (1976) 39 M.L.R. 589 (barter).
- 117. See below, para.44-047 and Vol.I, paras 23-074 et seq.
- 118. See Widenmeyer v Burn, Stewart & Co Ltd 1967 S.C. 85 (pre-1893 rules as to risk applied to contract of barter).
- 119. The point arose in connection with purchase tax: see Esso Petroleum Co Ltd v Customs and Excise Commissioners [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1. See also Beecham Foods Ltd v North Supplies (Edmonton) Ltd [1959] 1 W.L.R. 643; Chappell & Co Ltd v Nestlé Co Ltd [1960] A.C. 87. Equally, Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 does not apply to gifts of goods. Nor does it apply to gifts of digital content: it applies only where the consumer is to pay a price or the digital content is available “free” but only with goods, services or other digital content for which the consumer must pay. See above, para.38-502.
- 120. See Law Com. No.95 (1979); Forte (1983) 28 J. Law Soc. Scotland 108, 314; Jacobs (1986) 15 Anglo-Am.L.R. 234.
- 121. Harrison v Luke (1845) 14 M. & W. 139; Simpson v Connolly [1953] 1 W.L.R. 911, 915. Contracts of barter or exchange between a consumer and a trader are within the scope of Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 as far as the trader's obligations are concerned as they constitute “contracts for the transfer of goods” under s.8. See above, para.38-457.
- 122. See above, para.44-015.
- 123. See Sheldon v Cox (1824) 3 B. & C. 420; Aldridge v Johnson (1857) 7 E. & B. 885. But cf. Chappell & Co Ltd v Nestlé Co Ltd [1960] A.C. 87.
- 124. See GJ Dawson (Clapham) Ltd v H & G Duffield [1936] 2 All E.R. 232.
- 125. See Dixon v London Small Arms Co (1876) 1 App. Cas. 632 (manufacture of rifles).
- 126. Tripp v Armitage (1839) 4 M. & W. 687 (building); Appleby v Myers (1867) L.R. 2 C.P. 651 (machinery); Reg Glass Pty Ltd v Rivers Locking Systems Ltd (1968) 120 C.L.R. 516 (burglar-proof door); Archivent Sales and Development Ltd v Strathclyde RC (1984) 14 B.L.R. 70 (building).
- 127. Stewart v Reavell's Garage [1952] 2 Q.B. 545 (relining car brakes).
- 128. See H Parsons (Livestock) Ltd v Uttley Ingham & Co Ltd [1978] Q.B. 791, 805, 809 (contract to install bulk food hopper held one of sale: but cf. Lord Denning M.R. at 800).
- 129. (1861) 1 B. & S. 272.

- 130. [1935] 1 K.B. 579, 587. Transactions held not to be sales include printing (Clay v Yates (1856) 1 H. & N. 73); supply of veterinary medicines (Dodd and Dodd v Wilson and McWilliam [1946] 2 All E.R. 691); supply of building materials by builder (Young and Marten Ltd v McManus Childs Ltd [1969] 1 A.C. 454); a contract to build, launch, equip and complete a ship (Hyundai Heavy Industries Co Ltd v Papadopoulos [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1129; and Stocznia Gdanska SA v Latvian Shipping Co [1998] 1 W.L.R. 574); and a contract to build and deliver a transportable house (Hewett v Court (1983) 149 C.L.R. 639); see also below, n.133. Transactions treated as sales include supply of medicine on prescription (R. v Wood Green Profiteering Committee (1920) 89 L.J.K.B. 55) (but supply under the National Health Service is not a sale at all: Pfizer Corp v Ministry of Health [1965] A.C. 512; Appleby v Sleep [1968] 1 W.L.R. 948); supply of meal in a restaurant (Lockett v A & M Charles Ltd [1938] 4 All E.R. 170; Gee v White Spot Ltd (1986) 32 D.L.R. (4th) 238); manufacture of a ship propeller (Cammell Laird & Co Ltd v Manganese Bronze and Brass Co Ltd [1934] A.C. 402); manufacture of jacket to order (J Marcel (Furriers) Ltd v Tapper [1953] 1 W.L.R. 49); compounding of mink food to formula specified (Christopher Hill Ltd v Ashington Piggeries Ltd [1972] A.C. 441).
- 131. Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.1-047. The test laid down in Robinson v Graves was rejected by the Supreme Court of Victoria in Deta Nominees Pty Ltd v Viscount Plastic Products Pty Ltd [1979] V.R. 167.
- 132. See Harmer v Cornelius (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 236 (painter); Myers & Co v Brent Cross Service Co [1934] 1 K.B. 46 (car repairs); Watson v Buckley, Osborne, Garrett & Co Ltd [1940] 1 All E.R. 174 (hair dye); Samuels v Davis [1943] K.B. 526 (dentures); Dodd and Dodd v Wilson and McWilliam [1946] 2 All E.R. 691 (veterinary medicines); Stewart v Reavell's Garage [1952] 2 Q.B. 545 (car repairs); Ingham v Emes [1955] 2 Q.B. 366 (hair dye); Young and Marten Ltd v McManus Childs Ltd [1968] 1 A.C. 454; cf. Gloucestershire CC v Richardson [1969] 1 A.C. 480 (building materials); Helicopter Sales (Australia) Pty Ltd v Rotor-Work Pty Ltd (1974) 132 C.L.R. 1 (helicopter replacement part); Cheeld v Alliot [2013] EWCA Civ 508 (defective workmanship in metal porch where nothing turned on whether it was a contract for goods or services). See also Vol.I, paras 14-034 et seq.
- 133. See ss.2-5.
- 134. See above, para.38-026.
- 135. See in general above, Ch.39.
- 136. For statutory definition, see Consumer Credit Act 1974 s.189(1).
- 137. Factors Act 1889 s.9; Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.25; see below, para.44-218; see Helby v Matthews [1895] A.C. 471. Such a transaction was not caught by the Bills of Sale Acts: McEntire v Crossley Bros Ltd [1895] A.C. 457; nor by the Moneylenders Acts. A limited exception as regards motor vehicles was introduced by the Hire-Purchase Act 1964 Pt III, which is re-enacted by Sch.4 para.22 to the Consumer Credit Act 1974; see above, para.39-402.
- 138. The Hire-Purchase Act 1965 was entirely repealed by s.192(3)(b) of and Sch.5 to the Consumer Credit Act 1974 and SI 1983/1551 (c.44), but see art.6(1)(2) of that Order.
- 139. ss.8, 9. The general financial limit in the 1974 Act was removed by s.2 of the Consumer Credit Act 2006. For the definition of "individual", see s.189(1) (as amended by the Consumer Credit Act 2006): it includes (a) a partnership consisting of two or three persons not all of whom are bodies corporate; and (b) an unincorporated body of persons which does not consist entirely of bodies corporate and is not a partnership. See also above, paras 39-016, 39-017.
- 140. ss.8-11; see above, para.39-316. The 1973 Act is re-enacted by s.192 of and Sch.4 paras 35-36 to the Consumer Credit Act 1974, and was amended by the Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1994 and by the Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/3045) reg.13.
- 141. See above, para.38-455.

- 142. Consumer Credit Act 1974 s.189(1); see above, para.39-464.
- 143.  Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.2(3). However, if the terms of an agreement mean that property is unlikely ever to pass then the Sale of Goods Act does not apply, see PST Energy 7 Shipping LLC v OW Bunker Malta Ltd [2016] UKSC 23 in the context of a bunker supply contract.
- 144. ss.8, 9; see above, para.39-461. The general financial limit in the 1974 Act was removed by s.2 of the Consumer Credit Act 2006. For the definition of “individual” see s.189(1) and n.141 above.
- 145. Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.25(1); Factors Act 1889 s.9; Lee v Butler [1893] 2 Q.B. 318; Hull Rope Works Co v Adams (1895) 73 L.T. 446; Thompson and Shackell Ltd v Veale (1896) 74 L.T. 130; Horton v Gibbins (1897) 13 T.L.R. 408; Wylde v Legge (1901) 84 L.T. 121; Marten v Whale [1917] 2 K.B. 480; see below, para.44-218.
- 146. Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.25(2)(4), Sch.1 para.9 and Sch.4 para.2; Consumer Credit Act 1974 s.192 and Sch.4 paras 2, 4; SI 1983/1572. But see Pt III of the Hire-Purchase Act 1964 (motor vehicles), see above, para.39-402, which is re-enacted by Sch.4 para.22 to the Consumer Credit Act 1974.
- 147. See above, para.38-456.
- 148. Consumer Credit Act 1974 s.189(1).
- 149. See above, para.39-442.
- 150. 1974 Act s.8(2). The general financial limit in the 1974 Act was removed by s.2 of the Consumer Credit Act 2006. For the definition of “individual” see s.189(1) and n.141 above.
- 151. Under ss.16, 16A, 16B, 16C of the 1974 Act (as amended); see above, para.39-038.
- 152. s.8(3).
- 153. See above, para.39-465.
- 154. Consumer Credit (Exempt Agreements) Order 1989 (SI 1989/869) art.3(1)(a)(i) (provided the payments are to be made within 12 months from the date of the agreement). As a result of the implementation of the Consumer Credit Directive (see para.39-011, above), art.3(1)(a)(i) has been amended by SI 2010/1010 reg.66 (in force from February 1, 2011) and a further condition for exemption has been added: that the credit must be provided without interest or any other charge.
- 155. s.62(3), (4): see above, para.44-002; nor the Consumer Rights Act 2015.
- 156. Or (in the case of a company) a registrable charge: Companies Act 2006 s.860(7)(b). See also Bills of Sale Act (1878) (Amendment) Act 1882 s.17; Re Standard Manufacturing Co [1891] 1 Ch. 627; and see above, para.39-519.
- 157. Yorkshire Ry Wagon Co v Maclure (1882) 21 Ch. D. 309; Victoria Dairy Co of Worthing v West (1895) 11 T.L.R. 233; British Ry Traffic and Electric Co v Kahn [1921] W.N. 52; Staffs Motor Guarantee Ltd v British Wagon Co Ltd [1934] 2 K.B. 305; Olds Discount Co Ltd v Krett [1940] 2 K.B. 117; Diamond (1960) 23 M.L.R. 518.
- 158. Re Watson (1890) 25 Q.B.D. 27; Wheatley's Trustee v Wheatley Ltd (1901) 85 L.T. 491; Maas v Pepper [1905] A.C. 102; Polisky v S and A Services [1951] 1 All E.R. 185, 1062n.; North Central Wagon Finance Co Ltd v Brailsford [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1288. cf. Kingsley v Sterling Industrial Securities Ltd [1967] 2 Q.B. 747. See also Stoneleigh Finance Ltd v Phillips [1965] 2 Q.B. 537; Snook v London and West Riding Investments Ltd [1967] 2 Q.B. 786; Re Curtain Dream Plc [1990] B.C.L.C. 925; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.1-066.

- 159. See above, para.33-121.
- 160. For pledge and sale contrasted, see Burdick v Sewell (1884) 13 Q.B.D. 159, 175; (1884) 10 App. Cas. 74, 93. For a case where a storage arrangement having some appearance of a bailment was held to be a sale, see Chapman Bros v Verco Bros & Co Ltd (1933) 49 C.L.R. 306 .
- 161. 1974 Act s.62(4): see above, para.44-002.
- 162. See below, para.44-146.
- 163. For full discussion, see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 1-048—1-049; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.1-032. See also above, para.31-129.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 2. - Formation of the Contract

(b) - Capacity of Parties

Capacity of parties

44-033

! By s.3 ¹⁶⁴:

“(1)

Capacity to buy and sell is regulated by the general law concerning capacity to contract and to transfer and acquire property.

(2)

Where necessaries are sold and delivered to a minor or to a person who by reason of drunkenness is incompetent to contract, he must pay a reasonable price for them.

(3)

In subs.(2) above, “necessaries” means goods suitable to the condition in life of the minor or other person concerned and to his actual requirements at the time of the sale and delivery.” ¹⁶⁵

Section 7 of the Mental Capacity Act 2005, which deals with mental incapacity, is expressed in similar terms. These provisions are considered elsewhere in this work. ¹⁶⁶ The liability to pay a reasonable price for necessaries appears to be restitutionary: a person who in law is incompetent to make a contract cannot bind himself to pay for necessaries supplied, but if it is for his benefit that he should have them, he must pay a reasonable price for goods received, though not necessarily the contract price. ¹⁶⁷ Hence it is usually thought that a minor would not be liable on an executory contract for necessaries. ¹⁶⁸ !

¹⁶⁴. As amended by the Mental Capacity Act 2005 Sch.6 para.24.

¹⁶⁵. See Nash v Inman [1908] 2 K.B. 1.

¹⁶⁶. Vol.I, Ch.9. See also Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 2-028 et seq.

167. Re Rhodes (1890) 44 Ch. D. 94, 105; approved in Nash v Inman [1908] 2 K.B. 1, 8.

168.  But in Roberts v Gray [1913] 1 K.B. 520 a minor was held liable on an executory contract for education. cf. also Treitel, The Law of Contract, 14th edn (2015), para.12–008; Goff and Jones, The Law of Unjust Enrichment, 9th edn (2016), para.24-018 (liability is contractual).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 2. - Formation of the Contract
(c) - Formalities

Formalities

44-034

Section 4 of the Sale of Goods Act 1893, ¹⁶⁹ which required written evidence or part performance for contracts for the sale of goods of the value of £10 or upwards, was repealed by the Law Reform (Enforcement of Contracts) Act 1954. The result is that contracts for the sale of goods may be made without formalities. ¹⁷⁰

^{169.} s.4 re-enacted, with some variations, the Statute of Frauds 1677. See Vol.I, Ch.5.

^{170.} But there are statutory requirements for certain hire-purchase agreements, conditional sale agreements, and credit-sale agreements: see above, paras 39-076 et seq.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 2. - Formation of the Contract

(d) - Subject Matter

Subject matter of contract

44-035

By s.5(1):

“The goods which form the subject of a contract of sale may be either existing goods, owned or possessed by the seller, or goods to be manufactured or acquired by him after the making of the contract of sale, in this Act called future goods.”

Existing goods

44-036

These may be specific or unascertained. This distinction, which is important as regards the passing of property and as regards the effects of destruction of the goods, is discussed in what follows.

Future goods

44-037

⚠ This expression covers goods which are not yet in existence and existing goods not yet acquired by the seller. ¹⁷¹ Section 5(3) provides: “Where by a contract of sale the seller purports to effect a present sale of future goods, the contract operates as an agreement to sell the goods”. Future goods will usually ¹⁷² be unascertained: as such property in them cannot pass. ¹⁷³ ⚠ Even if they are specific, the passing of property would sometimes be deferred until they were in a deliverable state. ¹⁷⁴

Contracts for the sale of future goods

44-038

⚠ Such contracts are capable of three interpretations. First, the seller may promise that they will come into existence or be acquired, and will be liable if this does not occur. ¹⁷⁵ Secondly, there may be a conditional sale on the basis of s.5(2), which provides: “There may be a contract for the sale of goods, the acquisition of which by the seller depends on a contingency which may or may not happen”. ¹⁷⁶ ⚠ In such a case (e.g. the sale of a future crop) both seller and buyer may owe subordinate duties to each other not to prevent the occurrence of the condition, and in some cases to facilitate its occurrence ¹⁷⁷; but the buyer only pays for such goods as are supplied and cannot sue for non delivery of goods that never came into existence or were never acquired. ¹⁷⁸ When only part of the goods come into existence or are acquired it is a question of interpretation whether he can demand, or must take, such goods as there are, and whether he can reject completely. ¹⁷⁹

Sale of a chance

44-039

The third interpretation is that the buyer agrees to pay whether or not goods are supplied (though there would here again be subordinate duties as to the prevention of the goods coming into existence or being acquired). The subject matter here would be a mere chance. This possibility is not mentioned in the Act, and indeed it is arguable that such a sale of a chance is not a sale of goods at all: but there seems little merit in excluding the Act from such a closely assimilated transaction. There is no clear authority, but it is commonly said that an old decision in Bagueley v Hawley ¹⁸⁰ could be explained on this basis.

Specific, ascertained and unascertained goods

44-040

Although two possibilities are referred to in s.5 as forming the subject matter of a contract of sale, there is another important distinction to be drawn. This is the distinction between specific, ascertained and unascertained goods, which to some extent cuts across the distinction between existing and future goods.

Specific goods; ascertained goods

44-041

Specific goods are those “identified and agreed on at the time a contract of sale is made”. ¹⁸¹ By an amendment made by the Sale of Goods (Amendment) Act 1995, this definition was extended to include “an undivided share, specified as a fraction or percentage of goods identified and agreed on as aforesaid”. Thus a contract for the sale of a quartershare in a named racehorse, or a contract for the sale of 20 per cent of the existing cargo of a named ship, will be a contract for the sale of specific goods. Ascertained goods are not defined by the Act, although various references are made to such a category. ¹⁸² In Re Wait ¹⁸³ Atkin L.J. said that ascertained “probably means identified in accordance with the agreement after the time a contract of sale is made”.

Unascertained goods

44-042

Unascertained goods may be said to fall into three categories:

- (i) future goods, except identified goods to be acquired by the seller;
- (ii) generic goods, e.g. “100 tons of wheat”;

(iii)

the unascertained portion of an ascertained whole, for instance, “100 tons of wheat from the larger quantity which A has in his warehouse”.

Problem cases

44-043

It is clear that existing goods may be either specific or unascertained: if unascertained they may later become ascertained. Future goods will certainly for the most part be unascertained. The clearest example of future goods which seem to be specific is that of identified goods owned by a third party at the time the contract is made.¹⁸⁴ But it can be argued that there is nothing in the Act saying that specific goods must actually be in existence at the time they are identified and agreed upon: on this basis a contract for the entire future crop of a particular piece of land might be argued to be a contract for specific goods.¹⁸⁵ In *Howell v Coupland*¹⁸⁶ it was held before the Act that a contract for the sale of a specified quantity of potatoes to be grown on a designated piece of land was frustrated by failure of the crop, and the contract was said to be one for “what will be and may be called specific things”.¹⁸⁷ But in *Re Wait*¹⁸⁸ it was held that a contract for a specified quantity of goods out of a particular mass was not a contract for specific goods, and though the context was one of the availability of specific performance the reasoning seems of general application. Thus the sale of a particular quantity of future goods from a defined source is not a sale of specific goods, and it is submitted that even a sale of the whole crop from that source would not be, for the wording of ss.6 and 7 of the Act, which deal with perishing of the goods,¹⁸⁹ seem clearly to envisage “specific goods” as being in existence at the time of contract, and the wording of s.5(3)¹⁹⁰ points to a similar conclusion. In *HR & S Sainsbury Ltd v Street*¹⁹¹ it was held that a contract similar to that in Howell v Coupland was governed by s.5(2) of the Act¹⁹² and was not a contract for specific goods covered by s.7. Although the case was also one of sale of a specified quantity to be grown at a particular place, it is submitted that the reasoning is again of general application and that, except in the situation indicated at the beginning of the paragraph, future goods cannot be specific.

Importance of distinction

44-044

The distinction between specific, ascertained and unascertained goods is of importance in relation to ss.6 and 7 of the Act, as explained below. It is also of importance in relation to the passing of the property and the risk. This is discussed in detail elsewhere.¹⁹³

Sale of goods already perished

44-045

🚫 By s.6:

“Where there is a contract for the sale of specific goods, and the goods without the knowledge of the seller have perished¹⁹⁴ at the time when the contract is made, the contract is void.”

This section deals with mistake as to the existence of the specific subject matter of the contract.¹⁹⁵ If the terms of the section are satisfied the contract is void, so that no action will lie for breach of contract by either party and the buyer may recover the price if he has already paid it. The section is commonly thought to be intended to represent the effect of the old decision in Couturier v Hastie.¹⁹⁶ In that case there was a sale (effectively what is now called CIF) of a specific cargo of corn then believed to be on the high seas but which had in fact, before the sale, become so heated that it had been unloaded and sold at a nominal price by the master of the ship. The sellers had delivered the shipping documents. The House of Lords held that they were not entitled to recover the price from the buyer. The case was regarded as turning on the construction of the contract¹⁹⁷ : it was decided that this was a contract for the sale of a specific cargo rather than the adventure represented by the documents, and so in the circumstances the plaintiffs could not recover. The question whether the contract was void can be said not to have been directly in issue, though had it been void the same result would have ensued. Nevertheless, the case was and is taken to stand for the proposition that such a sale is based on the initial existence of the goods, and hence inoperative if there were none.¹⁹⁸

44-046

Three points arising from s.6 require brief comment:

(i) Specific goods

The section does not cover a sale of unascertained goods. Thus if A contracts to sell to B 1,000 tons of grain, it is normally immaterial that A's intended source of supply has already been destroyed. The case is governed by the maxim genus nunquam perit, and A remains liable to procure the grain from another source.¹⁹⁹

(ii) Partial destruction

It seems that the section applies where there is a contract to sell an indivisible parcel of specific goods part only of which has perished when the contract is made. In Barrow, Lane and Ballard Ltd v Phillip Phillips & Co,²⁰⁰ where, at the date of the contract to sell 700 bags, 109 bags had been stolen, it was held that the whole contract was avoided. Had the contract been severable it could perhaps have been void only as to the perished part.

(iii) Knowledge of the seller

If at the time of the contract the seller knows that the goods have perished, he is perhaps estopped from pleading that no contract exists.²⁰¹ But if the seller is ignorant and the buyer aware, or if both parties are ignorant, it seems that the contract is in each case void. There is however nothing to exclude the application of common law doctrines which might render the contract inoperative for any other reason, e.g. some other type of fundamental mistake, even if this would be rare.²⁰²

Goods perish after contract made

44-047

By s.7:

“Where there is an agreement to sell specific goods and subsequently the goods, without any fault on the part of the seller or buyer, perish before the risk passes to the buyer, the agreement is avoided.”²¹²

44-048

Section 7 relates to a particular case of frustration. The scope of the section is comparatively narrow. First, it is limited to specific goods and does not apply to sales of unascertained goods. This excludes sales of generic goods, sales of an unascertained quantity of an ascertained whole,²⁰³ and most sales of future goods from the operation of the section.²⁰⁴ Secondly, it is limited to goods which have perished.²⁰⁵ Perishing covers of course physical destruction, and also the case where the goods are so damaged as no longer to answer to the description under which they were sold.²⁰⁶ But if the goods retain their commercial identity, and have merely deteriorated in quality, the section does not apply.²⁰⁷ Further, it probably does not apply where the goods have not perished but are simply unavailable, because for example, of requisition²⁰⁸ or the outbreak of war,²⁰⁹ though where they are stolen or otherwise lost irretrievably, it may apply.²¹⁰ Thirdly, it is limited to an agreement to sell, that is, a case where the property in the goods has not passed to the buyer.²¹¹ Fourthly, the risk must not yet have passed to buyer: so, for example, s.7 will not apply where the property in the goods remains in the seller; but the goods are nevertheless at the buyer's risk.²¹² Fifthly, the section is limited to cases where the goods perish without any fault²¹³ on the part of the seller or the buyer.

Frustration at common law

44-049

There is however nothing to exclude the operation of the common law doctrine of frustration in situations other than that where the goods perish, even if it would rarely apply.²¹⁴

Operation of s.7

44-050

⚠ The Law Reform (Frustrated Contracts) Act 1943 s.2(5)(c), excepts from the Act's provisions any contract to which s.7 of the Sale of Goods Act applies.²¹⁵ Consequently cases falling under s.7 are governed by the common law rules as to the consequences of frustration, and not by the apportionment provisions introduced by the 1943 Act, irrational though this difference may be.²¹⁶ ⚠

^{171.} 1893 Act s.61(1); see above, para.44-015.

^{172.} See below, para.44-038.

^{173.} ⚠ See s.16, see below, para.44-131. Before the 1893 Act equity held that a beneficial interest passed to the buyer as soon as the goods became present goods and the contract could be implemented by specific performance (see Holroyd v Marshall (1862) 10 H.L.C. 191). But this doctrine did not survive the Act, at any rate in England and Wales: see Re Wait [1927] 1 Ch. 606, 635-636, applied in Hughes v Pendragon Sabre Ltd (t/a Porsche Centre Bolton) [2016] EWCA Civ 18 (at [42]).

^{174.} See s.18 r.2: below, para.44-141.

- 175. e.g. Blackburn Bobbin Co Ltd v TW Allen & Sons Ltd [1918] 2 K.B. 467 (sale of generic goods).
- 176.  See also s.2(3) of the Act: above, para.44-020. See Hughes v Pendragon Sabre Ltd (t/a Porsche Centre Bolton) [2016] EWCA Civ 18.
- 177. e.g. the seller of a future crop must cultivate it. See Mackay v Dick (1881) 6 App. Cas. 251 (duty to test machine). See Vol.I, paras 14-014, 14-015.
- 178. e.g. Lovatt v Hamilton (1839) 5 M. & W. 639 (sale of goods “to arrive”).
- 179. See HR & S Sainsbury Ltd v Street [1972] 1 W.L.R. 834 (barley).
- 180. (1867) L.R. 2 C.P. 625 (resale of goods seized under distress).
- 181. 1893 Act s.61(1); see above, para.44-015.
- 182. e.g. ss.16, 17, 52.
- 183. [1927] 1 Ch. 606, 630.
- 184. This was in the case in Varley v Whipp [1900] 1 Q.B. 513, and there is no suggestion in the case that the goods were not specific.
- 185. Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 1–114, 1–115. See also Lister v Munro [1924] N.Z.L.R. 1137, 1140.
- 186. (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 258.
- 187. At 262.
- 188. [1927] 1 Ch. 606.
- 189. See below, paras 44-045 et seq.
- 190. See above, para.44-037.
- 191. [1972] 1 W.L.R. 834.
- 192. See above, para.44-038.
- 193. See below, paras 44-130 et seq., paras 44-187 et seq.
- 194. On the meaning of “perish”, see note to s.7: below, para.44-048. Section 6 does not apply if the goods have never been in existence at all, for in that case they have not “perished”: McRae v Commonwealth Disposals Commission (1951) 84 C.L.R. 377, where sellers were held liable on the basis that they had warranted that the goods (a wrecked oil tanker sold for salvage) existed. The case could also be solved on the basis of a collateral contract or of an action in tort for negligent misrepresentation.
- 195. See Vol.I, paras 6-042 et seq.
- 196. (1856) 5 H.L.C. 673; affirming (1853) 9 Exch. 102.
- 197.  Twigg-Flessner, Canavan and MacQueen, Atiyah and Adams’ Sale of Goods, p.77, concludes, citing s.55(1) (see below, para. 44-127) and McRae’s case, see above, n.196, that s.6 is not mandatory; that is, it will not apply if, on the construction of the contract, the seller has contracted that the goods are in existence, or if the buyer can genuinely be regarded as having bought a chance. See also Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 1-122-1-135; Vol.I, paras 6-021 et seq. Such an interpretation would only be necessary where a claim in tort or upon a collateral contract would yield damages inadequate to the circumstances.

- 198. The question connects with problems of risk in documentary sales. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.19–113.
- 199. Re Thornett and Fehr and Yuills Ltd [1921] 1 K.B. 219.
- 200. [1929] 1 K.B. 574. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.1–126.
- 201. See Bell v Lever Bros [1932] A.C. 161, 217.
- 202. See Vol.I, Ch.6.
- 203. e.g. 200 bottles from a larger quantity in an identified bin. But a contract for the sale of a fraction ("one-fifth") or percentage ("20%") of the wine in an identified bin is a contract for the sale of specific goods: s.61(1); see above, para.44–015.
- 204. See above, para.44-037; HR & S Sainsbury Ltd v Street [1972] 1 W.L.R. 834.
- 205. Including part of an indivisible parcel: see above, para.44-046.
- 206. Barr v Gibson (1838) M. & W. 390; Asfar & Co Ltd v Blundell [1896] 1 Q.B. 123. For a recent example see Oldfield Asphalts Ltd v Grovedale Coolstores (1994) Ltd [1998] 3 N.Z.L.R. 479.
- 207. Horn v Minister of Food [1948] 2 All E.R. 1036 (rotten potatoes held still to be potatoes). But cf. Rendell v Turnbull & Co (1908) 27 N.Z.L.R. 1067 (a case on s.6).
- 208. See Re Shipton, Anderson & Co [1915] 3 K.B. 676, where, however, the contract was held to be frustrated at common law.
- 209. See Re Badische Co Ltd [1921] 2 Ch. 331, where again common law was applied.
- 210. See Barrow, Lane & Ballard Ltd v Phillip Phillips & Co Ltd [1929] 1 K.B. 574 (theft).
- 211. As in cases falling within s.18 rr.2 and 3 of the Act (below, paras 44-141 et seq.) or where the seller reserves the right of disposal (below, para.44-171).
- 212. See below, para.44-187. Frustration only starts where risk stops.
- 213. Defined in s.61(1); see above, para.44-015.
- 214. See Vol.I, Ch.23; Blackburn Bobbin Co Ltd v TW Allen & Sons [1918] 2 K.B. 467; Re Shipton, Anderson & Co, above; Lewis Emanuel & Son Ltd v Sammut [1955] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 629. Alternatively, the contract may be subject to a condition precedent as to the goods coming into existence as in Howell v Coupland (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 258.
- 215. The second part of s.2(5)(c) excepts from the Law Reform (Frustrated Contracts) Act 1943 "any other contract for the sale or for the sale and delivery of specific goods where the contract is frustrated by reason of the fact that the goods have perished". It is far from clear to what situations this obscure provision applies: see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.6–059; Atiyah, Sale of Goods, 12th edn (2010), p.354.
- 216.  See Vol.I, para.23-096; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.6–036; Twigg-Flessner, Canavan and MacQueen, Atiyah and Adams' Sale of Goods, p.293.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 2. - Formation of the Contract
(e) - The Price

Ascertainment of price

44-051

By s.8:

“(1)

The price in a contract of sale may be fixed by the contract, or may be left to be fixed in manner agreed by the contract, or may be determined by the course of dealing between the parties. 217

(2)

Where the price is not determined as mentioned in subs.(1) above the buyer must pay a reasonable price. 218

(3)

What is a reasonable price is a question of fact dependent on the circumstances of each particular case.”

In the latter case the current market price may or may not be a reasonable price. 219

Price not fixed

44-052

The fact that the price is not fixed may be an indication that no binding contract has been concluded at all. The authorities are discussed elsewhere. 220 But briefly it seems that each case must be decided on the construction of the particular contract. 221 If there is nothing that can be regarded as an agreement about the price, this may be evidence that the parties have not in fact completed the making of their contract 222; if on the other hand it appears that the parties have made a contract, the courts may be able to determine what is the price by resort to provisions for arbitration, trade custom, etc., or will apply s.8 in order to establish a reasonable price. 223

Agreement to sell at a valuation

44-053

By s.9:

“(1)

Where there is an agreement to sell goods on the terms that the price is to be fixed by the valuation of a third party, and he cannot or does not make the valuation, the agreement is avoided; but if the goods or any part of them have been delivered to and appropriated by the buyer he must pay a reasonable price for them.

(2)

Where the third party is prevented from making the valuation by the fault of the seller or buyer, the party not at fault may maintain an action for damages against the party at fault.” ²²⁴

Such a valuer is not an arbitrator so that the Arbitration Act 1996 ²²⁵ will not apply. He cannot be sued for failure to give a valuation, unless he has contracted to do so. But if he does make a valuation, it seems that he may be liable in tort if he does so fraudulently or negligently. ²²⁶ The actual valuation is normally valid unless there is fraud or collusion. ²²⁷

^{217.} The contract may provide that one of the parties may fix the price: see May and Butcher Ltd v The King [1934] 2 K.B. 17, 21.

^{218.} This probably extends to executory contracts and is not restricted to cases where the buyer has taken delivery: see Acebal v Levy (1834) 10 Bing. 376; Haudly v M'Laine (1834) 10 Bing. 482; Hall v Busst (1960) 104 C.L.R. 206, 24-244; cf. at 222, 234.

^{219.} Acebal v Levy (1834) 10 Bing. 383. As to agreements to sell at “market price”, see Charrington & Co Ltd v Wooder [1914] A.C. 71. See also Davies v Davies (1887) 36 Ch. D. 359, 392-393.

^{220.} Vol.I, paras 2-119 et seq.

^{221.} See Foley v Classique Coaches Ltd [1934] 2 K.B. 1, 10, 12.

^{222.} See, e.g. May & Butcher Ltd v The King [1934] 2 K.B. 17.

^{223.} See, e.g. Foley v Classique Coaches Ltd [1934] 2 K.B. 1; Hillas & Co Ltd v Arcos Ltd (1932) 147 L.T. 503. See also British Bank for Foreign Trade Ltd v Novinex Ltd [1949] 1 K.B. 623; R & J Dempster Ltd v Motherwell Bridge and Engineering Co Ltd, 1964 S.L.T. 353; F & G Sykes (Wessex) Ltd v Fine Fare Ltd [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 53; Smith v Morgan [1971] 1 W.L.R. 803; Brown v Gould [1972] Ch. 53; Courtney & Fairbairn Ltd v Tolaini Bros (Hotels) Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 297; Bushwall Properties Ltd v Vortex Properties Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 591; Mallozzi v Carapelli SpA [1976] 1 All E.R. 407; Hall v Busst (1960) 104 C.L.R. 206, 222, 232-235, 241-245; Att-Gen v Barker Bros [1976] 2 N.Z.L.R. 445; Didymi Corp v Atlantic Lines and Navigation Co Inc (The Didymi) [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 108; Queensland Electricity Generating Board v New Hope Collieries Pty Ltd [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 205; Mamidoil-Jetoil Greek Petroleum SA v Okta Crude Oil Refinery Co [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 76. See Berg (2003) 119 L.Q.R. 357.

^{224.} This section applies to a named valuer. Where the valuer is to be appointed, and the machinery for appointing him breaks down, it has been held that, where on its true construction the agreement was one to sell at a reasonable price to be determined by the valuer, the court will substitute its own machinery for ascertaining a fair and reasonable price: Sudbrook Trading Estate Ltd v Eggleton [1983] 1 A.C. 444 (option to purchase land). See also Wenning v Robinson (1964) 64 S.R. (N.S.W.) 157 (no mention of particular valuer).

225. See above, Ch.32.

226. See Sutcliffe v Thackrah [1974] A.C. 727; Campbell v Edwards [1976] 1 W.L.R. 403; Arenson v Arenson [1977] A.C. 405.

227. Campbell v Edwards [1976] 1 W.L.R. 403; above; and see Baber v Kenwood Mfg Co Ltd [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 175. But it may sometimes be possible to impeach the valuation if it can be shown to be based on a wrong principle: Baber v Kenwood, above; Finnegan v Allen [1943] K.B. 425; Dean v Prince [1954] Ch. 409; Frank H Wright (Constructions) Ltd v Frodoor [1967] 1 W.L.R. 506; Smith v Gale [1974] 1 W.L.R. 9; Burgess v Purchase & Sons (Farms) Ltd [1983] Ch. 216; Jones v Sherwood Computer Services Plc [1992] 2 All E.R. 170; Nikko Hotels (UK) v MEPC (1991) 28 E.G. 86; Pontsarn Investments v Kasallis-Osake-Pankki (1992) 22 E.G. 103. See above, para.32-196.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 3. - Terms of the Contract
(a) - Conditions, Warranties, Misrepresentations and Puffs

General

44-054

Where promises and statements are made in connection with a contract of sale, it may be necessary to determine into what category they should be put, for the consequences of a promise or statement not being made good or being untrue may vary in accordance with the category to which it is attributed.

Puffs and statements of opinion

44-055

A puff is a statement extolling the virtues of goods which by virtue of its vagueness or extravagance would not be expected to and does not ground any form of liability. ²²⁸ Simplex commendatio non obligat. Difficulties can arise regarding expressions of opinion. ²²⁹ Although these may similarly give rise to no liability, they may, especially when made by skilled persons, amount to promises, or to representations that the opinion is honestly held or of the facts upon which they purport to be based. ²³⁰ In general, liability on statements is more readily imposed than formerly. ²³¹

Contractual promises: conditions and warranties

44-056

Other statements may be contractual promises, for which the maker must in general answer strictly, i.e. guarantee their truth. ²³² The Sale of Goods Act refers to two types of such promise or term, conditions and warranties. A condition is a promise in respect of which the parties have agreed, whether by express words or by implication, that any failure of performance by one party, irrespective of the gravity of the event that has in fact resulted from the breach, shall entitle the other party not only to damages but also to treat the contract as discharged. ²³³ A warranty is defined by the Act ²³⁴ as "an agreement with reference to goods which are the subject of a contract of sale, but collateral to the main purpose of such contract, the breach of which gives rise to a claim for damages, but not to a right to reject the goods and treat the contract as repudiated". It is thus a minor promise within the contract, for which the promisor still answers strictly, but normally ²³⁵ only in damages. It should be distinguished from a genuinely separate or collateral warranty, which is a promise contained in a separate contract with its own consideration, and which may override terms of the main contract or otherwise create liability independently of the main contract. ²³⁶ Section 11(3) provides:

"Whether a stipulation in a contract of sale is a condition, the breach of which may give rise to a right to treat the contract as repudiated, or a warranty, the breach of which may give rise to a claim for damages but not to a right to reject the goods and treat the contract as repudiated, depends in each case on the construction of the contract; and a stipulation may be a condition, though called a warranty in the contract.” ²³⁷

The converse of the last proposition is also true: a stipulation designated a condition may be held not to be so. ²³⁸ The Consumer Rights Act 2015 does not refer to terms (whether “terms that are to be treated as included” in the contract, or express terms, which the Act often describes as “requirements stated in the contract”) as being conditions or warranties. Chapters 2 and 3 of the Act set out the remedies which are available for various breaches of contract by the trader. ²³⁹ However, there is nothing in the Act to prevent the parties agreeing that an express term shall be a condition or a warranty, with the normal consequences. Section 11(3) of the 1979 Act is not disapplied from consumer contracts for goods.

Dichotomy not exhaustive

44-057

It has subsequently become clear, however, that, whatever the words of the Act, this dichotomy is not exhaustive, and that in sale as in other contracts there may be discharge by virtue of the nature and effect of the breach. ²⁴⁰ The operation of these general principles is preserved by s.62(2) of the Act. ²⁴¹ The normal approach seems to be to treat this as indicating the existence of a third type of term, the “intermediate” or “innominate” term, breach of which may or may not give rise to (in this context) the right to reject, depending on the nature and consequences of the breach, ²⁴² though in truth the technique deployed is a different one. ²⁴³

Misrepresentations external to the contract

44-058

The law recognises a third category, that of a misrepresentation of fact which does not constitute a contractual promise but which nevertheless forms sufficient part of the inducement to contract to justify the granting of a remedy to the representee. Such representations, not being promises, did not originally ground any relief at common law unless they were made fraudulently, in which case there was liability in deceit. From the late nineteenth century however it was established that equity would grant relief by way of rescission and indemnity, ²⁴⁴ and although it was arguable that since the Act made no reference to this jurisdiction it did not apply to sale of goods, ²⁴⁵ it is now clear that it does so. ²⁴⁶ The jurisdiction was much improved by the Misrepresentation Act 1967, which by s.1(b) abolished a possible limit on the right to rescind; by s.2(1) created a statutory action against a party to a contract who made such a misrepresentation negligently ²⁴⁷; and by s.2(2) empowered the court to grant damages in lieu of rescission. ²⁴⁸ It also made provision for the control of terms excluding liability for misrepresentation. ²⁴⁹ Meanwhile the possibility of a tortious action for a negligent statement leading to pure economic loss was established in Hedley Byrne & Co Ltd v Heller & Partners Ltd, ²⁵⁰ and the action on a collateral contract, the use of which had earlier been restricted in this context, also became prominent. ²⁵² Thus there has been a movement from a paucity of remedies to almost an excess. ²⁵³

Distinction between terms of the contract and external misrepresentations

44-059

The distinction between these two notions can be extremely difficult to make in this context. It is easier to classify a statement as a mere representation where there is a considerable time-gap between negotiation and contract, or where the negotiations are oral and the contract written, e.g. in the sale of land. ²⁵⁴ These conditions less frequently occur in the sale of goods. The test of a contractual promise traditionally asks whether there is “evidence of an intention by both parties that there should be contractual liability in respect of the accuracy of the statement”. ²⁵⁵ But it may be that to some extent one should, to determine this intention, consider the consequences of attributing a statement to either category before doing so. ²⁵⁶ There are important differences between those consequences.

Standard of liability

44-060

First, if the statement is treated as a contractual promise the seller will prima facie answer strictly for it, however carefully or honestly he made it. If (the tort of) negligence is pleaded, he can prove that he was not at fault; and if sued under s.2(1) of the Misrepresentation Act 1967 he has the statutory defence contained in it, that he had reasonable grounds to believe and did believe up to the time the contract was made that the facts represented were true. If it is treated as a mere representation, deliberate or negligent conduct is not required: he will be liable to have the contract rescinded against him, unless it is too late to do so ²⁵⁷ or the court awards damages in lieu of rescission. ²⁵⁸

Measure of damages

44-061

❗ Secondly, if the statement is treated as a contractual promise; the damages for which the seller will be liable will be such as to put the buyer in the position in which he would have been had the promise been made good. ²⁵⁹ These will include the difference between the value of the goods as promised and their value as delivered, ²⁶⁰ and the buyer's loss of profit. ²⁶¹ If the statement is treated as a mere representation, the measure of damages recoverable is that in tort, which seeks to put the buyer in the position in which he would have been had the representation not been made. ²⁶² This will prima facie be restricted to his "reliance" or "out-of-pocket" loss, ²⁶³ although consequential loss is recoverable. ²⁶⁴ ❗

Unfair commercial practices

44-062

The Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2008, ²⁶⁵ which implemented the Unfair Commercial Practices Directive, ²⁶⁶ have recently been amended ²⁶⁷ to provide remedies for individual consumers who have been the victim of certain types of unfair commercial practice, namely misleading actions and aggressive practices. ²⁶⁸

Contributory negligence

44-063

Thirdly, although contributory negligence will normally be no defence in an action by the buyer for breach of a contractual promise, ²⁶⁹ it may in certain circumstances be raised as a defence where the buyer's claim is for breach of the common law duty of care or under s.2(1) of the Misrepresentation Act 1967. ²⁷⁰

Conditions

44-064

Which terms in a contract of sale will be held conditions? The implied terms as to title, description and quality are, as regards England and Wales and Northern Ireland, all designated by the Act as implied conditions. ²⁷¹ This classification has the merit of certainty and facilitates rejection by the buyer where a term is sharply formulated. ²⁷² It may well be reasonable in consumer transactions to uphold strictly the buyer's right to reject. In commercial transactions, however, the right to reject the goods for minor disparities or defects may be abused by the buyer for market reasons.²⁷³ Accordingly, s.15A of the Act seeks to limit the right of rejection in such cases.²⁷⁴

44-065

Express terms are most likely to be held conditions if they are designated as such²⁷⁵; if they have been held to be conditions in other cases²⁷⁶; if they relate to the time of performance in mercantile contracts²⁷⁷; if they relate to duties which must be performed by fixed times in sequence with the duties of the other party²⁷⁸; or if the circumstances of the particular case indicate that it was contemplated that rejection should follow if the term was not complied with.²⁷⁹

Effect of breach of condition

44-066

Where the term broken is a condition, upon any breach the buyer may treat the contract as discharged, i.e. refuse to perform his own obligations and refuse to accept the goods or further performance.²⁸⁰ He may also sue for damages²⁸¹; or he may instead elect to recover money he has paid in restitution, if there has been a total failure of consideration.²⁸² If he has already received part performance which he cannot return he therefore may not be able to recover the price paid.²⁸³ But the courts will allow recovery of part of the price despite the fact that part of the goods have been delivered and retained, if the price is readily apportionable.²⁸⁴ It is arguable that the mere tender of defective goods is not itself a repudiatory breach of contract, though where it causes loss (for example, by payment for a survey) it may give rise to liability in damages. A small group of cases, mostly concerned with documentary sales with time limits for performance, hold that if there is still time, the seller can withdraw a rejected tender and submit another.²⁸⁵ But it is uncertain how far this goes: in many cases a faulty tender would be prejudicial to the buyer and entitle him to treat the contract as repudiated and purchase elsewhere.²⁸⁶

Effect of breach of other terms

44-067

It might seem from the wording of the Act that where the term broken is not a condition it must be a warranty, and hence give rise to a right to damages only. However, as stated above,²⁸⁷ it has been held that the common law principles, whereby a breach which goes to the root of the contract or which deprives the innocent party of the whole benefit of the contract entitles that party to treat the contract as discharged, are not excluded by the Act.²⁸⁸ From the reasoning in the case it follows that if the term broken is held not to be a condition, the next stage should be to examine the extent of the breach to see whether it justifies discharge on common law principles, which consider the nature and consequences of the breach²⁸⁹ and whether there has been a renunciation or repudiation.²⁹⁰ If it does, the consequences are the same as those of breach of condition: if it does not there will be a right to damages. It might seem that only damages are available for breach of what is clearly a warranty, but it may be that if there was an aggregation of breaches of warranty, or if serious consequences resulted there could be repudiatory conduct on general principles.²⁹¹

Loss of right to reject²⁹²

44-068

The right to reject must be exercised clearly.²⁹³ And even though the term broken is a condition, the buyer may lose the right to reject for breach of it. He can do this by waiving the breach completely, or by electing to affirm the contract and sue for damages. Thus s.11(2) of the Sale of Goods Act provides:

“Where a contract of sale is subject to a condition to be fulfilled by the seller, the buyer may waive the condition, or may elect to treat the breach of the condition as a breach of warranty and not as a ground for treating the contract as repudiated.”

A waiver in this sense is usually treated by the law as a promise not to sue, and it may be possible to go back on it on giving notice, unless it is supported by consideration or the other party has acted on it in some way making it inequitable to retract. ²⁹⁴ An affirmation on the other hand is an act of election and may not normally be retracted regardless of whether it has been acted on. ²⁹⁵ It requires in principle a manifestation of choice (“election”), communicated to the other party, by a person who knows that he has the right to reject. But affirmation may in this context also be simply implied by law ²⁹⁶ when the goods have been accepted. Section 11(4) of the Act ²⁹⁷ provides:

“Subject to s.35A ... where a contract of sale is not severable, ²⁹⁸ and the buyer has accepted the goods or part of them, the breach of any condition to be fulfilled by the seller can only be treated as a breach of warranty, and not as a ground for rejecting the goods and treating the contract as repudiated, unless there is an express or implied term of the contract to that effect.”

The notion of acceptance is dealt with below. ²⁹⁹ Under this provision the buyer may lose the right to reject before he has discovered a defect in the goods, and without any communication with the seller.

Rejection in severable contract

44-069

In principle, as s.11(4) indicates, acceptance of part of the goods bars rejection of the remainder. But the subsection does not apply where the contract of sale is severable (or divisible), for example, where it provides for the delivery of goods by stated instalments, which are to be separately paid for. ³⁰⁰ Then the buyer's right to treat the contract as discharged depends on the relation of the breach to the total contractual obligation and is regulated by s.31(2) of the Act ³⁰¹: acceptance of instalments already delivered does not prevent the buyer from treating the rest of the contract as discharged. Moreover, s.11(4) is subject to s.35A which permits the buyer to accept conforming goods and to reject those that do not conform. ³⁰²

Limitation of right to reject in non-consumer cases

44-070

A further limitation is placed on the right to reject for breach of condition in non-consumer cases by s.15A of the 1979 Act:

“(1)

Where in the case of a contract of sale—

(a)

the buyer would, apart from this section, have the right to reject goods by reason of a breach on the part of the seller of a term implied by s.13, 14 or 15 ... , but the breach is so slight that it would be unreasonable for him to reject them, [then, if the buyer does not deal as consumer], ³⁰³ the breach is not to be treated as a breach of condition but may be treated as a breach of warranty.

(b)

(2)

This section applies unless a contrary intention appears in, or is to be implied from, the contract.

(3)

It is for the seller to show that the breach does not fall within subs.(1)(b) above.”

This section was introduced into the 1979 Act by the Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1994. ³⁰⁴ Its purpose was to prevent a commercial buyer from abusing the right to reject by taking advantage of a trivial breach, for example, when the real reason for rejecting the goods is a fall in the market. But it only applies to a breach of the implied terms as to quality, fitness for purpose and correspondence with description or sample set out in ss.13, 14 and 15 of the 1979 Act and not to the breach of any express term. It may also be excluded expressly or by implication. This may give rise to some uncertainty, ³⁰⁵ e.g. as to whether the application of the section is impliedly excluded in the case of the breach of a term as to the date of shipment of goods to be carried by sea (which is treated as part of their description); and there may be other situations where its application is similarly uncertain. No reported decisions on this section have been traced. ³⁰⁶

Further remedies in consumer cases

44-071

The paragraphs above state the common law position as to the buyer's rights to reject the goods, terminate the contract and/or sue for damages. The Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002, which came into effect on March 31, 2003 provided (in a new Pt 5A inserted into the 1979 Act) a further range of remedies for consumers based on an EU Directive of 1999 on certain aspects of the sale of consumer goods and associated guarantees. These exist alongside the common law remedies and interact in a way that is not easy to formulate. The Consumer Rights Act 2015 incorporates these Pt 5A remedies, together with new remedies for consumers, into a new comprehensive scheme. Consumer contracts are dealt with in detail in Ch.38.

Rescission for misrepresentation

44-072

Where the statement made by the seller ranks as a misrepresentation inducing the contract, and is not a contractual promise, the basic remedy is rescission (with indemnity where appropriate) only, ³⁰⁷ though if it was subsequently incorporated as a term in the contract the remedies for breach of contract will also apply. ³⁰⁸ The buyer may therefore rescind unless his right to do so is barred by affirmation of the contract, the impossibility of restitutio in integrum, the intervention of third-party rights, or lapse of time. ³⁰⁹ However, the court may exercise the power to award damages in lieu of rescission under s.2(2) of the Misrepresentation Act 1967, ³¹⁰ and it is possible that this power applies also to misrepresentations subsequently incorporated into the contract as conditions. ³¹¹

Remedies in tort

44-073

Where the buyer has suffered loss caused by a wilfully false statement by the seller, he may sue the seller in deceit. ³¹² The damages here will be calculated by the rules applicable to that tort, and hence may include consequential loss even if unforeseeable. ³¹³ So also if loss is caused by a negligent statement made by the seller, the buyer may sue in negligence if he can establish the existence of a duty of care. ³¹⁴ As regards a seller, however, these remedies are of less importance in England than they might be in view of that provided by s.2(1) of the Misrepresentation Act 1967, ³¹⁵ which provides what appears to be a statutory tort action. ³¹⁶ Section 2(1) of that Act gives a party to a contract a statutory action for damages against the other party who makes a false representation, unless that other party shows that he had reasonable grounds to believe and did believe that the facts represented were true. ³¹⁷ Where defective goods cause damage to person or property the seller may be liable in negligence ³¹⁸ or under Pt I of the Consumer Protection Act 1987. ³¹⁹

^{228.} e.g. Chalmers v Harding (1868) 17 L.T. 571 ("very good second-hand reaper"); JJ Savage & Sons Pty Ltd v Blakney (1970) 119 C.L.R. 435 (speed of boat); Ross v Allis-Chalmers Australia Pty Ltd (1981) 55 A.L.J.R. 8 (capacity of harvesting machine).

^{229.} Vol.I, paras 7–007 et seq.

^{230.} e.g. Jendwine v Slade (1797) 2 Esp. 572; cf. Power v Barham (1836) 4 A. & E. 473 (cases on pictures); Hopkins v Tanqueray (1854) 15 C.B. 130; cf. Schawel v Reade (1912) 46 I.L.T. 281; Holmes v Burgess [1975] 2 N.Z.L.R. 311 (assertions of soundness of horses). See also Andrews v Hopkinson [1957] 1 Q.B. 229 ("It's a good little bus"); Cremdean Properties Ltd v Nash [1977] E.G.D. 63; Porter v General Guarantee Corp Ltd [1982] R.T.R. 384.

^{231.} See Vol.I, paras 7-004 et seq.

^{232.} See below, para.44-060.

^{233.} Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 826, 849, per Lord Diplock; and see Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.11(3), quoted below; unless the right is lost; see below. As to the history of this use of the word "condition" see Vol.I, paras 13-025 et seq.; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 10–024 et seq.

^{234.} s.61(1); see also s.11(3), quoted below.

^{235.} But see below, para.44–067.

^{236.} Couchman v Hill [1947] K.B. 554; see Vol.I, paras 13-003, 13-033, 13-106.

^{237.} There are leading dicta to the same effect in Bentsen v Taylor, Sons & Co [1893] 2 Q.B. 274, 281.

^{238.} See Wickman Machine Tool Sales Ltd v L Schuler AG [1974] A.C. 235.

^{239.} See above, paras 38–447 et seq.

^{240.} Cehave NV v Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH (The Hansa Nord) [1976] Q.B. 44, where the words "shipment to be made in good condition" were held not to be a condition, but to be subject to the general principles of repudiatory breach, following Hong Kong Fir Shipping Co Ltd v Kawasaki Kisen Kaisha Ltd [1962] 2 Q.B. 26, in which the test was said to be whether the breach deprived the innocent party of "substantially the whole benefit" of the contract. See also Reardon Smith Line Ltd v Yngvar Hansen-Tangen (The Diana Prosperity) [1976] 1 W.L.R. 989, 998. In RG Grain Trade LLP v Feed Factors International Ltd [2011] EWHC 1889 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 432 it was said that it was not the law that there was a right of rejection for quality matters unless the contract provides otherwise: at [42]. As to the general principles of discharge by breach, see Vol.I, Ch.24.

- 241. The Hansa Nord [1976] Q.B. 44.
- 242. e.g. Bunge Corp v Tradax Export SA [1981] 1 W.L.R. 711, 717, 718, 719. See Vol.I, paras 24-040 et seq.; below, para.44-067.
- 243. See Koompahtoo Local Aboriginal Land Council v Sanpine Pty Ltd (2007) 82 A.L.J.R. 345, per Kirby J.
- 244. Redgrave v Hurd (1881) 20 Ch. D. 1. See below, para.44-072; Vol.I, Ch.7.
- 245. Riddiford v Warren (1901) 20 N.Z.L.R. 572; followed in Watt v Westhoven [1933] V.L.R. 458; see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 1–008 et seq., 10–008.
- 246. For examples, see Leaf v International Galleries [1950] 2 K.B. 86 (painter of picture); Long v Lloyd [1958] 1 W.L.R. 753 (condition of lorry); Goldsmith v Rodger [1962] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 249 (misrepresentation by buyer as to condition of boat); Royscot Trust Ltd v Rogerson [1991] Q.B. 297 (sale by dealer to finance company). See also as to misrepresentation by buyer Riddiford v Warren (1901) 20 N.Z.L.R. 572.
- 247. Below, para.44-073.
- 248. See Vol.I, paras 7-074 et seq., 7-102 et seq., 7-142.
- 249. s.3 (as amended by Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 s.8): see Vol.I, paras 7-143 et seq.
- 250. [1964] A.C. 465; Vol.I, paras 7-089 et seq.
- 251. Heilbut, Symons & Co v Buckleton [1913] A.C. 30. See Vol.I, para.13-004.
- 252. e.g. Esso Petroleum Co Ltd v Mardon [1976] Q.B. 801. But cf. Howard Marine and Dredging Co Ltd v A Ogden & Sons (Excavations) Ltd [1978] Q.B. 574.
- 253. In the case of consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 certain information provided under the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013 is also to be treated as included as a term of the contract (ss.11(4) and 12). The consumer will be entitled to rely on the remedies set out in s.19 of the Act; see above, paras 38-459 et seq.
- 254. And, in the nineteenth century, of stocks and shares, on which there are several cases.
- 255. Heilbut, Symons & Co v Buckleton [1913] A.C. 30, 51; see Vol.I, para.13-004.
- 256. See Dick Bentley (Productions) Ltd v Harold Smith (Motors) Ltd [1965] 1 W.L.R. 623, 627 (though some of this passage should be viewed with caution); Vol.I, para.13-003. In cases decided before the advent of a remedy in damages for negligent misrepresentation, there perhaps was a tendency to hold that, whereas statements by dealers and others with special means of knowledge were contractual promises (the Dick Bentley [1965] 1 W.L.R. 623, 627), statements by private persons were misrepresentations only (Oscar Chess Ltd v Williams [1957] 1 W.L.R. 370). cf. Beale v Taylor [1967] 1 W.L.R. 1193. But this is less important after the enactment of the Misrepresentation Act 1967.
- 257. See below, para.44-073.
- 258. Under s.2(2) of the Misrepresentation Act 1967; see below, para.44-072.
- 259. See below, paras 44-411 et seq.

- 260. Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.53; see below, para.44-411.
- 261. See below, paras 44-422 et seq.
- 262. Sharneyford Supplies Ltd v Edge [1986] Ch. 128 (actual decision reversed [1987] Ch. 305); Royscot Trust Ltd v Rogerson [1991] 2 Q.B. 297. But as to this distinction see Omak Maritime Ltd v Mamola Challenger Shipping Co Ltd (The Mamola Challenger) [2010] EWHC 2026 (Comm), [2010] 2 C.L.C. 194; McLauchlan (2011) 127 L.Q.R. 23. See Vol.I, paras 7-078, 7-079.
- 263. Saunders v Edwards [1987] 1 W.L.R. 1116. cf. East v Maurer [1991] 1 W.L.R. 461.
- 264.  Davis & Co (Wines) Ltd v Afa Minerva Ltd (EMI) Ltd [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 27; Royscot Trust Ltd v Rogerson [1991] 2 Q.B. 297. In the Royscot Trust case, however, the Court of Appeal held that the measure of damages under s.2(1) of the 1967 Act was the same as that in deceit, and hence that even unforeseeable damage was recoverable. This is, however, arguable. The Singapore Court of Appeal doubted the correctness of Royscot in RBC Properties v Defu Furniture Pte Ltd [2014] SGCA 62, [2015] 1 S.L.R. 997; see Liao [2015] L.M.C.L.Q. 464. See Vol.I, para.7-078. For the measure of damages in deceit, see Doyle v Olby (Ironmongers) Ltd [1969] 2 Q.B. 158, and Vol.I, paras 7-055 et seq.
- 265. SI 2008/1277.
- 266. Directive 2005/29/EC of May 11, 2005.
- 267. By the Consumer Protection (Amendment) Regulations 2014 (SI 2014/870). The bulk of the Regulation came into force on October 1, 2014 and apply to contracts made on or after that date: reg.1(3). See generally paras 38-160 et seq.
- 268. See above, paras 38-160 et seq.
- 269. See Vol.I, para.1-197.
- 270. cf. Gran Gelato Ltd v Richcliff Ltd [1992] Ch. 560; Vol.I, para.7-082.
- 271. 1973 Act ss.12(5A), 13(1A), 14(6), 15(3).
- 272. e.g. Arcos Ltd v EA Ronaasen & Son [1933] A.C. 470 (description): see below, para.44-089. But a looser term such as "satisfactory quality" (below, para.44-099) facilitates flexibility.
- 273. e.g. Cehave NV v Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH (The Hansa Nord) [1976] Q.B. 44.
- 274. See below, para.44-070.
- 275. Though this is not conclusive: see above, para.44-056.
- 276. e.g. Maredelanto Cia Naviera SA v Bergbau-Handel GmbH (The Mihalis Angelos) [1971] 1 Q.B. 164.
- 277. United Scientific Holdings Ltd v Burnley BC [1978] A.C. 904, 924, 937, 944, 950, 958; Bunge Corp v Tradax Export SA [1981] 1 W.L.R. 711, 716. But see Compagnie Commerciale Sucres et Denrées v C Czarnikow Ltd [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1137, 1347 (no presumption or rule of law to that effect). See also below, para.44-128.
- 278. Bunge Corp v Tradax Export SA [1981] 1 W.L.R. 711, 729; Toepfer v Lenersan-Poortman NV [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 143.
- 279. e.g. Harling v Eddy [1950] 2 K.B. 739 (promise to take goods back); Bergerco v Vegoil Ltd [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 440 ("direct ship"); Kuwait Rocks Co v AMN Bulkcarriers Inc (The Astra) [2013] EWHC 865 (Comm), [2013] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 69 (breach of an express obligation to make punctual payment of time charterparty hire). See also Vol.I, para.13-040.

280. See Vol.I, Ch.24.

281. See below, paras 44-387 et seq.

282. Giles v Edwards (1797) 7 T.R. 181; Bragg v Villanova (1923) 40 T.L.R. 154.

283. See Yeoman Credit Ltd v Apps [1962] 2 Q.B. 508; cf. Charterhouse Credit Co Ltd v Tolly [1963] 2 Q.B. 683.

284. See Vol.I, para.29-066.

285. Principally Borrowman, Phillips & Co v Free and Hollis (1878) 4 Q.B.D. 500; EE & Brian Smith (1928) Ltd v W heatsheaf Mills Ltd [1939] 2 K.B. 392. But if loss was thereby caused to the buyer the seller might be liable in damages.

286. But cf. McDougall v Aeromarine of Emsworth Ltd [1958] 1 W.L.R. 1126. Curing of a faulty tender may be easier in the case of delivery of wrong quantity: see below, paras 44-255 et seq. See in general Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.12-032.

287. See above, para.44-057.

288. Cehave NV v Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH (The Hansa Nord) [1976] Q.B. 44.

289. [1976] Q.B. 44 at 60, 72-73, 84. See Vol.I, paras 13-034 et seq.; below, paras 44-264 et seq.

290. See Koompahtoo Local Aboriginal Land Council v Sanpine Pty Ltd (2007) 82 A.L.J.R. 345 (see per Kirby J. at [114], where however for English law the word "substantial" is too weak). In Gregg & Co (Knottingley) Ltd v Emherst Glass Ltd [2005] EWHC 804 (TCC) it was held that continuing malfunctions of computerised machines, despite best efforts at remediation over two years, were repudiatory of an obligation of sale and service though the right to reject had been lost.

291. See Rubicon Computer Systems Ltd v United Paints Ltd (2000) 2 T.C.L.R. 453 (Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.12(2)); but cf. The Ymnos [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 574, 583. Such an idea is accepted in the context of an elaborately drafted agreement in GB Gas Holdings Ltd v Accenture (UK) Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 912; but different uses of the word "warranty" make it difficult to generalise further.

292. The Consumer Rights Act 2015 makes elaborate provisions as regards the different circumstances which give rise to the remedies (often referred to as "rights to enforce") which the Act provides for the consumer. Under the 2015 Act, the buyer will have a so-called "short-term right to reject", which will normally be lost after 30 days from delivery of the goods, and a final right to reject. See above, paras 38-478 et seq.

293. See Grimoldby v Wells (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 391, 396; Chapman v Morton (1843) 11 M. & W. 534.

294. See Panoutsos v Raymond Hadley Corp of New York [1917] 2 K.B. 473; Charles Rickards Ltd v Oppenheim [1950] 1 K.B. 616; Société Italo-Belge, etc. v Palm and Vegetable Oils (Malaysia) Ltd (The Post Chaser) [1982] 1 All E.R. 19; Vol.I, paras 22-040 et seq.

295. Motor Oil Hellas (Corinth) Refineries SA v Shipping Corp of India (The Kanchenjunga) [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 391, 397-399. See also Vol.I, para.24-003; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.12-036.

296. And there may be situations where a buyer is estopped from alleging that he has affirmed even though he did not know he had a right to reject. See Panchaud Frères SA v Et. General Grain Ltd [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 53 (documentary sale); Peyman v Lanjani [1985] Ch. 457; Glencore

Grain Rotterdam BV v Lebanese Organisation for International Commerce [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 386.

- 297. The subsection in the 1893 Act originally based rejection of specific goods on the passing of property, creating considerable problems which remain in some other common law jurisdictions. This provision does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides a corresponding right of partial rejection, see above, para.38-480.
- 298. See below, paras 44-262 et seq.
- 299. See below, paras 44-278 et seq.
- 300. See below, paras 44-263 et seq.
- 301. See below, para.44-263.
- 302. See below, para.44-286. But see s.35(7).
- 303. See s.61(5A). The words in brackets are deleted by the Consumer Rights Act 2015. Special rules in that Act apply to consumer sales. In particular, the implied terms in ss.13, 14 and 15 of the 1979 Act no longer apply in consumer sales contracts.
- 304. s.4(2).
- 305. Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 12–024 et seq., 18–331.
- 306. The provision was used in an argument e contrario in Lowe v W Machell Joinery Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 794, below, para.44-089.
- 307. See Vol.I, paras 7-111 et seq.
- 308. Misrepresentation Act 1967 s.1(a); see Vol.I, para.7-113. For practical difficulties of tactics in this connection, see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.12–120.
- 309. See Vol.I, paras 7-123 et seq. A fifth possible limitation, that rescission was barred by performance of the contract, was removed by s.1(b) of the Misrepresentation Act 1967.
- 310. See Atlantic Lines and Navigation Co Inc v Hallam Ltd [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 188, 202; William Sindall Plc v Cambridgeshire CC [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1016; Beale (1995) 111 L.Q.R. 60; and Vol.I, paras 7-104 et seq.
- 311. See Vol.I, para.7-112.
- 312. Derry v Peek (1889) 14 App. Cas. 337; Vol.I, paras 7-047 et seq.
- 313. Doyle v Olby (Ironmongers) Ltd [1969] 2 Q.B. 158; Archer v Brown [1985] Q.B. 401; Vol.I, paras 7-055 et seq.
- 314. See Esso Petroleum Co Ltd v Mardon [1976] Q.B. 801; Capital Motors Ltd v Beecham [1975] 1 N.Z.L.R. 576; Sealand of the Pacific Ltd v Ocean Cement Ltd 33 D.L.R. (3d) 625 (1973); affirmed 51 D.L.R. (3d) 702 (1975); James McNaughton Paper Group Ltd v Hicks Anderson & Co [1991] 2 Q.B. 113; Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), paras 8–51 et seq. See Vol.I, paras 7-089 et seq.
- 315. For an example of possible difference, see Howard Marine and Dredging Co Ltd v A Ogden & Sons (Excavations) Ltd [1978] Q.B. 574. cf. Vol.I, para.7-097.
- 316. See, e.g. Royscot Trust Ltd v Rogerson [1991] 2 Q.B. 297; Vol.I, para.7-078.

- 317. See Vol.I, paras 7-075 et seq. The action does not lie against an agent who induces a contract with his principal by misrepresentation: Resolute Maritime Inc v Nippon Kaiji Kyokai (The Skopas) [1983] 1 W.L.R. 857.
- 318. Clarke v Army and Navy Co-operative Society Ltd [1903] 1 K.B. 155; Herschtal v Stewart and Arden Ltd [1940] 1 K.B. 155; Andrews v Hopkinson [1957] 1 Q.B. 229; Vacwell Engineering Ltd v BDH Chemicals Ltd [1971] 1 Q.B. 88, 108; Rasbora Ltd v JCL Marine Ltd [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 645; Bacardi-Martini Beverages Ltd v Thomas Hardy Packaging Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 549, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 379. But the duty can sometimes be discharged by a warning: see Hurley v Dyke [1979] R.T.R. 265. Such an action may perhaps lie, on the analogy of building cases, in respect of damage to another part of a complex structure: but not merely because the article is unsatisfactory and involves financial loss to the buyer: see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 12–123 et seq. and in general Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), Ch.11.
- 319. See also Pt II of the 1987 Act (breach of statutory duty).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 3. - Terms of the Contract

(b) - Implied Terms

44-074

The Act lays down a number of implied terms as to title, compliance with description and quality or fitness, and these are now discussed. Further new terms were added by the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013 ³²⁰; if the trader provides pre-contractual information in compliance with those Regulations, the information “is to be treated as included as a term of the contract” and the contract is to be treated as including a term that the trader has supplied the information required. ³²¹ The Consumer Rights Act 2015 seeks to set out in a comprehensive way all of a consumer buyer’s statutory rights under a consumer sale of goods contract. The consumer will have rights directly equivalent to the existing rights under current law and several new rights. ³²² The corollary of the 2015 Act’s enactment of special and separate provision for consumer contracts in certain respects is that it amends certain provisions of the Sale of Goods Act 1979, including the implied terms in ss.12, 13, 14 and 15, so that the 1979 Act no longer applies to consumer sales contracts or applies to them only with qualifications.

³²⁰. SI 2013/3134.

³²¹. See above, paras 38-053 et seq.

³²². The new rights granted to consumers by the 2015 Act in the case of consumer sale of goods contracts are described above, paras 38-458 et seq.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 3. - Terms of the Contract
(b) - Implied Terms
(i) - Implied Terms about Title

Implied terms about title

44-075

By s.12 of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 323:

“(1)

In a contract of sale, other than one to which subs.(3) below applies, 324 there is an implied term on the part of the seller that in the case of sale, he has a right to sell the goods, and in the case of an agreement to sell, 325 he will have a right to sell the goods at the time when the property is to pass.

(2)

In a contract of sale, other than one to which subs.(3) below applies, there is also an implied term that—the goods are free, and will remain free until the time when the property is to pass, from any charge or encumbrance not disclosed or known to the buyer before the contract is made, and the buyer will enjoy quiet possession of the goods except so far as it may be disturbed by the owner or other person entitled to the benefit of any charge or encumbrance so disclosed or known.”

(a)

(b)

Breaches of s.12

44-076

Section 12(1) is clearly broken if the goods belong to a third party and the seller has at the relevant moment no power to transfer the property in them to the buyer. It requires no knowledge or fault on the part of the seller nor any disturbance of possession, merely absence of the right to sell. Further, in Niblett v Confectioners' Materials Co Ltd, ³²⁶ where the goods sold bore a label which infringed the trade mark of a third party, it was held that the sellers had no right to sell them because the third party could have obtained an injunction to restrain the sale. Scrutton L.J. said ³²⁷: "If a vendor can be stopped by process of law from selling he has not the right to sell".

44-077

❗ The seller need not, however, own the goods at any time: he only promises that he will be able to create the appropriate rights in the buyer. ³²⁸ ❗ He can therefore perform by causing transfer direct from a third party. There is no clear decision as to whether the term is broken where a person sells who has no right to sell, but who nevertheless has a power to pass title in a situation where a non-owner can do so by statute. ³²⁹ The above dictum of Scrutton L.J. might suggest that it is: but it is submitted that since the goods will not be affected by any third party right after sale, the seller should be regarded as having had the right to sell. ³³⁰

Charges and encumbrances: quiet possession

44-078

Section 12(2), dealing with charges and encumbrances and quiet possession, is an amalgamation of what were in the original Act two separate provisions. ³³¹ There has been little authority on the application of their requirements, and both are more reminiscent of the law of land than of sale of goods. ³³² It does not however appear that rules from land law should be imported into this area. ³³³ Thus though the warranty against encumbrances in relation to land is not broken until the buyer's possession is disturbed, ³³⁴ the wording of the subsection, at any rate in its present form, appears to envisage breach simply because of the presence of an encumbrance at the relevant time, which is not necessarily (as in the case of s.12(1)) the time at which property is to pass. And though there is authority that the warranty of quiet possession in land law only applies to disturbance by the vendor and not those claiming by title paramount, ³³⁵ this is not so in the case of sale of goods. ³³⁶

44-079

The term as to quiet possession seems in fact to have at least three applications where the condition as to title may fail. First, it may apply to interference not related to title. Thus it was held in Microbeads AG v Vinhurst Road Markings Ltd ³³⁷ that where goods were sold, and after the sale letters patent were granted which enabled third parties to restrain the use of the goods, there was a breach of s.12(2)(b), though s.12(1) was not infringed; and in The Playa Larga ³³⁸ it was held broken when subsequent to the sale the seller connived at a governmental decision to withdraw goods from a contract after appropriation. But interference by wrongful acts of third parties unconnected with the seller would not be covered. ³³⁹ Secondly, the term may allow the buyer a longer period of limitation than that which is available to him under s.12(1); for under s.12(2)(b) time will not begin to run until the disturbance of possession has actually taken place. ³⁴⁰ Thirdly, it may provide the buyer with a remedy in a situation where the seller has a right to sell but the goods are subject to the rights of a third party. If, for instance, a debtor sells goods which have been seized by a sheriff but which remain in the debtor's possession, the buyer may have a remedy for breach of the terms as to quiet possession and freedom from encumbrances if he is compelled to surrender the goods. ³⁴¹

Effect of breach of s.12 ³⁴²

44-080

As regards England and Wales and Northern Ireland the term implied by s.12(1) is a condition. ³⁴³ Hence on its breach the buyer can treat the contract as repudiated and claim damages. ³⁴⁴ He can alternatively affirm the contract and claim damages.³⁴⁵ The obligations laid down in s.12(2) are, in England and Wales and Northern Ireland, warranties only.³⁴⁶ They will normally give rise to no more than the right to damages.³⁴⁷ The rules as to damages are discussed elsewhere,³⁴⁸ but it may be noted that buyers have been held entitled to recover the cost of improvements done to the goods in the ordinary course of events, if evicted,³⁴⁹ and of discharging the adverse claim³⁵⁰ or defending an action brought by the true owner.³⁵¹

Total failure of consideration despite use of goods

44-081

A well-known problem arises as to whether the buyer, when he treats the contract as repudiated, is entitled to recover the whole purchase price as upon a total failure of consideration in spite of the fact that he has used the thing sold. In *Rowland v Divall*³⁵² the plaintiff bought a car from a person who, unknown to him, did not own it. He and his sub-purchaser used the car for several months before it was seized by the police and restored to the true owner; nevertheless, he was allowed to recover the purchase price in full on the ground that there had been a total failure of consideration. This case was followed in *Butterworth v Kingsway Motors Ltd*³⁵³ and *Barber v NWS Bank Plc*³⁵⁴ and a similar principle has been applied in relation to hire-purchase agreements.³⁵⁵ As a result, the buyer's use of the goods, their consequent deterioration and any alterations in the conditions of the market are regarded as irrelevant; though where improvements have in good faith been made to the goods, the amount recovered may be reduced to the extent to which the value of the goods is attributable to the improvement.³⁵⁶ It is arguable that the buyer should be obliged to bring into account any benefit that he has received, although as the law now stands he has the right to recover the entire purchase price paid.³⁵⁷ It is, however, possible that if the seller's title is made good, or "fed", before the buyer elects to treat the contract as repudiated, the purchase price cannot be recovered.³⁵⁸ And if the buyer satisfies a judgment against him in conversion, the true owner's title is extinguished³⁵⁹ and it is arguable that the buyer cannot then treat the contract as repudiated, though he can sue for damages.³⁶⁰

44-082

A further difficulty in this connection is that by virtue of s.11(4) of the Act³⁶¹ acceptance by the buyer will normally deprive him of his right to treat the contract as repudiated, and confine him to his remedy in damages. In cases such as Rowland v Divall it is difficult to see that the buyer had not accepted the goods. Atkin L.J. however held that s.11(4) had no application to a breach of s.12 in that case.³⁶²

Change of position no defence

44-083

Since a claim by the buyer to recover the purchase price paid on the ground of a total failure of consideration is a restitutionary claim, he could in principle be met by a defence of "change of position",³⁶³ that is to say, that the seller had changed his position as a result of the payment so that it would now be inequitable to require him to make restitution in whole or in part.³⁶⁴ But it is submitted that his defence is not open to a seller since he is, by his breach (even if unwitting) of the contract of sale, a "wrongdoer" to whom the defence is not available.³⁶⁵

Sales of limited title

44-084

Subsections (3) to (5) of s.12 of the 1979 Act deal with sales of limited title:

“(3)

This subsection applies to a contract of sale in the case of which there appears from the contract or is to be inferred from its circumstances an intention that the seller should transfer only such title as he or a third person may have.

(4)

In a contract to which subs.(3) above applies there is an implied term that all charges or encumbrances known to the seller and not known to the buyer have been disclosed to the buyer before the contract is made.

(5)

In a contract to which subs.(3) above applies there is also an implied term that none of the following will disturb the buyer’s quiet possession of the goods, namely—

(a)

the seller;

(b)

in a case where the parties to the contract intend that the seller should transfer only such title as a third person may have, that person;

(c)

anyone claiming through or under the seller or that third person otherwise than under a charge or encumbrance disclosed or known to the buyer before the contract is made.”

There is at present no authority on the scope of subs.(3). ³⁶⁶ Section 12 of the 1893 Act was expressed to apply “unless the circumstances of the contract are such as to show a different intention”. It was accordingly held in connection with that Act that there was no breach of subs.(1) where an auctioneer sold goods known to have been distrained by a bailiff, ³⁶⁷ and Atkin L.J. suggested that the qualification was introduced to exclude sales by a sheriff under an execution, and “other cases where by implication or by express terms there is no warranty of title”. ³⁶⁸ Certain cases prior to the Act of 1893 are also sometimes cited, ³⁶⁹ but none of these authorities can be regarded as conclusively indicating the appropriate interpretation of the present wording. In England and Wales and Northern Ireland, these implied terms are warranties. ³⁷⁰

Exclusion of s.12

44-085

By s.6(1) of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, “Liability for breach of the obligation arising from s.12 of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 ... cannot be excluded or restricted by reference to any contract term”. It should be noted that this provision, is not limited to sales made in the ordinary course of business. ³⁷¹ Thus the section can only be limited by the techniques which it itself provides in subs.(3) to (5). Evasion of this provision by means of a “choice of law” clause is prevented by s.27(2) of the 1997 Act. ³⁷² However, by s.26 the limits on contracting out imposed by the Act do not apply to international supply contracts. ³⁷³ In such a contract therefore the common law principles will apply.

There was much controversy over the possibility of contracting out of the provisions of s.12 before the introduction of the present subss.(3) to (5). It seems that it is in principle possible to do so if the true intention of the parties is that the seller should transfer only such title as he or a third person may have within subss.(3) to (5). Otherwise it is submitted that a clause which, in general terms, purported to relieve the seller from his obligation to pass a good title to the buyer would be inconsistent with the notion of sale and would not be upheld,³⁷⁴ although a clause which merely restricted the seller's liability for breach of that obligation or any right or remedy available to the buyer could well be effective. However, in a consumer contract made before October 1, 2015, any term which purported to exclude or even limit the seller's liability would probably be regarded as improper and "unfair" within the meaning of the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999³⁷⁵ and hence not be binding on the consumer.³⁷⁶

^{323.} This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides a corresponding term relating to the right to supply which is to be treated as included in the contract, see above, paras 38-472 et seq.

^{324.} See below, para.44-084.

^{325.} See above, paras 44-020—44-021.

^{326.} [1921] 3 K.B. 387, disapproving Monforts v Marsden (1895) 12 R.P.C. 266. See also Egekvist Bakeries v Tizel & Blinick [1950] 1 D.L.R. 585; affirmed [1950] 2 D.L.R. 592 (goods subject to detention order by pure food administration); J Barry Winsor & Associates Ltd v Belgo Canadian Mfg Co Ltd (1976) 76 D.L.R. (3d) 685 (non-compliance with electrical standards). Applied in Azzurri Communications Ltd v International Telecommunications Equipment Ltd [2013] EWPC 17 where it was accepted that there was a breach of s.12(1) and s.12(2) where telephone handsets infringed a registered trademark. The decision of the buyer to return the handsets to the owner constituted reasonable mitigation and the buyer was entitled to damages for buying replacement goods.

^{327.} At 398.

^{328.}  Karlshamns Oljefabriker v Eastport Navigation Corp (The Elafi) [1986] 1 All E.R. 208, 215; in the context of retention of title clauses, see PST Energy 7 Shipping LLC v OW Bunker Malta Ltd [2015] EWCA Civ 1058 (noted Tettenborn [2016] L.M.C.L.Q. 24), affirmed [2016] UKSC 23.

^{329.} See below, paras 44-191 et seq. But see Reg v Wheeler (1991) 92 Cr. App. R. 279 (sale in market overt).

^{330.} Contra, Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.4—004. See Kolkarni v Manor Credit (Davenham) Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 69, [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 431 at [43]. It may, however, be argued that a person who holds title to a vehicle only by virtue of Pt III of the Hire Purchase Act 1964 (see above, para.39-370) will find the vehicle virtually unsaleable through the motor trade. See also Barber v NWS Bank Plc [1996] 1 W.L.R. 641 (express term).

^{331.} 1979 Act ss.12(2) and (3).

^{332.} cf. Conveyancing Act 1881 s.7. But encumbrances can certainly be relevant when ships are sold: see The Barenbels [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 528 (where the debt in respect of which the ship was arrested did not constitute an encumbrance).

^{333.} See Mason v Burningham [1949] 2 K.B. 545, 563.

^{334.} Nottidge v Dering [1909] 2 Ch. 647, 656; affirmed [1910] 1 Ch. 297.

^{335.} See Niblett v Confectioners' Materials Co Ltd [1921] 3 K.B. 387, 403; Jones v Lavington [1903]

1 K.B. 253.

- 336. Mason v Burningham [1949] 2 K.B. 545, 562–563; Microbeads AG v Vinhurst Road Markings Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 218.
- 337. See above. See also Gencab of Canada Ltd v Murray-Jensen Mfg Ltd (1980) 114 D.L.R. (3d) 92 (threat of action by patent holder); Rubicon Computer Systems Ltd v United Paints Ltd (2000) 2 T.C.L.R. 454 (supplier of computer equipment attached lock to it).
- 338. Empresa Exportadora de Azucar v Industria Azucarera Nacional SA (The Playa Larga) [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 171.
- 339. In Great Elephant Corp v Trafigura Beheer BV [2012] EWHC 1745 [2013] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 415 a Nigerian Government Department had refused to issue cargo documents which prevented the vessel carrying the oil which was the subject of the contract of sale from sailing. There was a breach of s.12(2)(b) as although the interference occurred after property had passed it arose out of circumstances which existed at the time of the sale. However, when the Government unlawfully demanded a fine, the breach stopped as the guarantee did not extend to unlawful acts. The judge's decision on s.12(2)(b) was upheld by the Court of Appeal ([2013] EWCA Civ 905) although the appeal was allowed on different grounds.
- 340. See Howell v Richards (1809) 11 East 633, 642, 643; Baynes & Co v Lloyd & Sons [1895] 1 Q.B. 820, 824 (cases on land, however).
- 341. See Lloyds and Scottish Finance Ltd v Modern Cars & Caravans (Kingston) Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 764.
- 342. The Consumer Rights Act 2015 introduces a separate scheme of remedies for breaches of the provisions equivalent to those of s.12, but the effect appears to be much the same: if the trader had no right to sell the goods, the consumer may reject the goods and treat the contract as at an end; if the goods are subject to an encumbrance, the consumer will have no right to reject or treat the contract as at an end but will be entitled to damages. See above, para.38-476.
- 343. 1979 Act s.12(5A).
- 344. See above, para.44-056.
- 345. e.g. Mason v Burningham [1949] 2 K.B. 545.
- 346. 1979 Act s.12(5A).
- 347. But see Rubicon Computer Systems Ltd v United Paints Ltd (2000) 2 T.C.L.R. 454 (repudiatory breach rules applied).
- 348. See below, paras 44-387 et seq. See also Healing (Sales) Pty Ltd v English Electrix Pty Ltd (1968) 121 C.L.R. 584.
- 349. Mason v Burningham [1949] 2 K.B. 545.
- 350. Stock v Urey [1954] N.I. 71; Ed Learn Ford Sales Ltd v Giavannone (1990) 74 D.L.R. (4d) 761.
- 351. Lloyds and Scottish Finance Ltd v Modern Cars and Caravans (Kingston) Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 764 . See further Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.4–029.
- 352. [1923] 2 K.B. 500.
- 353. [1954] 1 W.L.R. 1286.
- 354. [1996] 1 W.L.R. 641.

- 355. Karflex Ltd v Poole [1933] 2 K.B. 251; Mercantile Union Guarantee Corp v Wheatley [1938] 1 K.B. 490; Warman v Southern Counties Car Finance Corp Ltd [1949] 2 K.B. 576; see above, para.39-285. See also Rover International Ltd v Cannon Film Sales Ltd [1989] 1 W.L.R. 912, 925, 938.
- 356. Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 s.6(3). The reason is that the damages recoverable by the true owner are under the Act similarly reducible.
- 357. See the Twelfth Report of the Law Reform Committee (1966) Cmnd.2958, para.36; see also Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.4–006. cf. Law Commission, Final Report on Sale and Supply of Goods (1987), Law Com. No.160, paras 6.1–6.5.
- 358. Lucas v Smith [1926] V.L.R. 400, 403–404; Butterworth v Kingsway Motors Ltd [1954] 1 W.L.R. 1286; Patten v Thomas Motors Pty Ltd [1965] N.S.W.R. 1457. But cf. HW West Ltd v McBlain [1950] N.I. 144. See also Whitehorn Bros v Davison [1911] 1 K.B. 463, 475; Blundell-Leigh v Attenborough [1921] 3 K.B. 235, 240, 242; Robin and Rambler Coaches Ltd v Turner [1947] 2 All E.R. 284; Bennett v Griffin Finance Ltd [1967] 2 Q.B. 46, 50; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 4–010–4–011.
- 359. Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 s.5(1). It is arguable that the title also vests in the buyer. This is the position at common law: USA v Dollfus Mieg & Cie [1952] A.C. 582, 622.
- 360. Benjamin at para.4–012. See also Ed Learn Ford Sales Ltd v Giavannone (1990) 74 D.L.R. (4d) 761.
- 361. See above, para.44-068.
- 362. At 506–507. The provision was then s.11(1)(c). A possible argument is that the subsection does not apply where the breach is fundamental. See Reynolds (1963) 79 L.Q.R. 534, 553–555; Ellinger (1969) 5 Victoria U. of Wellington L.R. 168. But the demise of the notion of fundamental breach makes this now difficult to argue: see Vol.I, paras 15-023 et seq.
- 363. Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548, 558, 562, 567–568, 577. See Vol.I, paras 29-186 et seq.
- 364. cf. Barber v NWS Bank Plc [1996] 1 W.L.R. 641 (where the defence failed on the facts).
- 365. Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd, above, at 579. Contra, Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.4–008.
- 366. But see Reg v Wheeler (1991) 92 Cr. App. R. 279 (sale in market overt, now abolished).
- 367. Payne v Elsdon (1900) 17 T.L.R. 161.
- 368. Niblett v Confectioners' Materials Co Ltd [1921] 3 K.B. 387, 401.
- 369. See, e.g. Chapman v Speller (1850) 14 Q.B. 621 (sheriff); Bagueley v Hawley (1867) L.R. 2 C.P. 625 (resale of goods seized under distress); Wood v Baxter (1883) 49 L.T. 45 (auctioneer); Morley v Attenborough (1849) 3 Exch. 500 (pawnbroker); Page v Cowasjee Eduljee (1866) L.R. 1 P.C. 127 (shipmaster). See also Warmings Used Cars Ltd v Tucker [1956] S.A.S.R. 249 (commission agent).
- 370. 1979 Act s.12(5A).
- 371. The Consumer Rights Act 2015 Act repeals or disapplies provisions in the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 governing the contracts to which Ch.1 applies, and instead makes its own provision controlling the exclusion of liabilities arising under its provisions.
- 372. See Vol.I, para.30-008; Mann (1974) 90 L.Q.R. 42.

- 373. See below, para.44-125.
- 374. See Suisse Atlantique Société d'Armement Maritime SA v NV Rotterdamsche Kolen Centrale [1967] 1 A.C. 361, 398, 432; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.4–020.
- 375. SI 1999/2083 as amended by SI 2001/1186 reg.5(1), Sch.2 para.1(b); paras 38-201 et seq.
- 376. Consumer contracts entered into after October 1, 2015 are now governed by the Consumer Rights Act 2015.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 3. - Terms of the Contract
(b) - Implied Terms
(ii) - Implied Term as to Correspondence with Description

Sale by description

44-086

Section 13 of the Act provides 377:

“(1)

Where there is a contract for the sale of goods by description, there is an implied term that the goods will correspond with the description.

(2)

If the sale is by sample as well as by description it is not sufficient that the bulk of the goods corresponds with the sample if the goods do not also correspond with the description.”

The section applies to all sales of unascertained goods, 378 and has been interpreted as applying to many sales of specific goods. 379 As regards the latter, it may be said that there is a sale by description in two types of cases. The first occurs where the buyer contracts in reliance on the description of the goods in the contract without having seen them. Thus in Varley v Whipp 380 the defendant agreed to buy a reaping machine which he had never seen, and which the plaintiff described as nearly new. In fact it did not correspond with this description, and the defendant was held to be entitled to reject it. It was said that, although the most usual application of this section is to the case of unascertained goods, it “must apply to all cases where the purchaser has not seen the goods but is relying on the description alone”, and was therefore applicable to a contract for the sale of specific goods where there was no identification otherwise than by description. 381

44-087

The second goes further: the buyer has seen the goods, but the stated characteristics of the goods are still intended to form part of the description by which they are sold. 382

“It may also be pointed out that there is a sale by description even though the buyer is buying something displayed before him on the counter: a thing is sold by description, though it is specific, so long as it is sold not merely as the specific thing but as a thing corresponding to a description, e.g. woollen undergarments, a hot-water bottle ...”³⁸³

This is subject to the proviso that the difference between the goods and the description of them was not apparent at the time of the sale.³⁸⁴ This type of case also extends to situations where the buyer, though he has seen the goods, relies, at least in part, on the description given to them,³⁸⁵ for example, that table linen is “the authentic property of Charles I”³⁸⁶ or that a painting is the work of a particular artist.³⁸⁷ However, if the buyer purchases specific goods, not in reliance on the description, but such as they are,³⁸⁸ then the goods will not have been sold by description. Thus in *Harlingdon and Leinster Enterprises Ltd v Christopher Hull Fine Art Ltd*³⁸⁹ a sale between art dealers of a painting attributed to Gabriele Münter was held not to be by description where the seller had disclaimed any knowledge as to the artist and the buyer had, after inspection, relied on his own judgment in buying the painting, even though the attribution had been made in negotiations, in an old auction catalogue, and in an invoice issued after the sale.

Goods selected by buyer

44-088

Though it was probably already the case, it is made clear by s.13(3) of the Act that a sale where the buyer selects the goods, in, e.g. a self-service shop, can be a sale by description. The subsection provides: “A sale of goods is not prevented from being a sale by description by reason only that, being exposed for sale or hire, they are selected by the buyer”.

Correspondence with description

44-089

The time for correspondence with description is the time of delivery, or if the time of passing of property is earlier, at that time.³⁹⁰ Once it is established that a given contract of sale is a sale by description, the test applied by the courts to determine whether or not the goods correspond with the description is a strict one. If the goods do not correspond with the description, it is not enough for the seller to show that they were of satisfactory quality, or fit for the particular purpose for which they were required. Some cases are fairly obvious. Thus a contract for common English sainfoin seed is not performed by the delivery of giant sainfoin,³⁹¹ a contract for a new car is not performed by delivery of a second-hand car,³⁹² and a contract for a 1961 Triumph Herald is not performed by delivery of a car made up of two portions from different models welded together.³⁹³ But in commercial cases particularly stringent rules may be applied. In Arcos Ltd v EA Ronaasen & Son,³⁹⁴ a case where timber did not meet specified measurements, Lord Atkin put the point as follows: “If the written contract specifies conditions of weight, measurement and the like, those conditions must be complied with. A ton does not mean about a ton, or a yard about a yard”. The same reasoning may apply to packaging: thus in *Re Moore & Co and Landauer & Co*³⁹⁵ a buyer was held entitled to reject a whole consignment of tinned fruit on the grounds that some of the cases contained 24 tins instead of the stipulated 30, though the total number of tins was correct. In such cases also stipulations as to the time and method of shipment are usually held part of the description.³⁹⁶ Nevertheless, it has been said that some of these cases are “excessively technical and due for fresh examination” in the House of Lords.³⁹⁷

Description or quality?

44-090

Difficulty may occur in distinguishing between description and quality. In principle the two are clearly different.³⁹⁸ But indications of quality may in appropriate cases be part of the description of the goods,³⁹⁹ as may indications of purpose (e.g. “cough mixture”, “pet food”), and goods may be of such bad quality as not to comply with their description for that reason.⁴⁰⁰ In commercial cases much may turn on the form of the contract⁴⁰¹ and on commercial usage.⁴⁰² Where goods contain admixtures of other substances the question is whether the addition is such as to make the basic substance lose its identity, or merely to vary the quality. ⁴⁰³ “Ultimately the test is whether the buyer could fairly and reasonably refuse to accept the physical goods proffered to him on the ground that their failure to correspond with that part of what was said about them in the contract makes them goods of different kind from those he had agreed to buy”. ⁴⁰⁴

Identification

44-091

Descriptive words may however identify the goods with varying degrees of preciseness. In a charterparty case ⁴⁰⁵ the ship chartered was described as “Japanese flag ... Newbuilding motor tank vessel called Yard No.354 at Osaka Zosen ... described as per Clause 24 hereof”. The vessel tendered had been built at an associated yard, Oshima, in whose books it was No.004. The words were held not descriptive of the ship but simply to provide an indication or identification of the vessel meant. ⁴⁰⁶

Sale by sample and description

44-092

It follows from the wording of s.13(1) that a sale may be by sample as well as by description. In such a case the rule is that the goods must correspond with both sample and description. Thus, in Nichol v Godts ⁴⁰⁷ the sale was for “foreign refined rape oil, warranted only equal to sample”. The goods tendered were equal to sample but contained an admixture of hemp oil. It was held that the buyer was entitled to reject because the goods, though corresponding with the sample, did not correspond with the description. But sometimes the sample is given under circumstances making it the only description of the thing to be supplied ⁴⁰⁸; and where quality is part of the description, ⁴⁰⁹ certification as to quality may sometimes be conclusive as to compliance with sample and hence with description. ⁴¹⁰

Remedies for breach ⁴¹¹

44-093

As regards England and Wales and Northern Ireland, the term implied by s.13 is a condition. ⁴¹² Breach of the term by the seller will therefore entitle the buyer, if he so chooses, to reject the goods and normally treat the contract as repudiated ⁴¹³ and to recover damages for any loss sustained as a result of the breach. But in the case of a very slight breach in a non-consumer case the right to reject is subject to s.15A. ⁴¹⁴

^{377.} This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides a corresponding requirement that goods be as described which is to be treated as included in the contract, see above, para.38-464. There will be one additional element. Under the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013, traders are required to give various types of information to consumers before or at the time the contract is made, including information about the main characteristics of the goods. The information about the main characteristics that is given will be included as a term of the contract, so that the consumer will have the same remedies as in other cases in which the goods do not comply with the description. Other information that is given by the trader in compliance with the Regulations is to be treated differently: see above, paras 38-464—38-465.

^{378.} Kidman v Fiskens Bunning & Co [1907] S.A.L.R. 101, 107; see above, paras 44-040 et seq.

- 379. For the historical background, see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 11–002, 11–003; Taylor v Combined Buyers Ltd [1924] N.Z.L.R. 627. Prior to 1973 the condition as to merchantability in s.14(2) of the 1893 Act only applied to sales by description, and many of the authorities on the meaning of the phrase arise in connection with that subsection.
- 380. [1900] 1 Q.B. 513.
- 381. [1900] 1 Q.B. 513 at 516.
- 382. Gill & Duffus SA v Berger & Co Inc [1984] A.C. 382, 394; Harlingdon and Leinster Enterprises Ltd v Christopher Hull Fine Art Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 564.
- 383. Grant v Australian Knitting Mills Ltd [1936] A.C. 85, 100 per Lord Wright.
- 384. See Beale v Taylor [1967] 1 W.L.R. 1193, 1196.
- 385. Benjamin's Sale of Personal Property, 7th edn (1931), p.641; Joseph Travers & Son Ltd v Longel Ltd (1947) 64 T.L.R. 150. See also Speedway Safety Products Ltd v Hazell & Moore Industries Pty Ltd [1982] 1 N.S.W.L.R. 225; Elder Smith Goldsborough Mort Ltd v McBride [1976] 2 N.S.W.L.R. 631.
- 386. Nicholson and Venn v Smith Marriott (1947) 177 L.T. 189.
- 387. Leaf v International Galleries [1950] 2 K.B. 86, 89 (a case of misrepresentation). But see Harlingdon and Leinster Enterprises Ltd v Christopher Hull Fine Art Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 564.
- 388. In Hughes v Hall [1981] R.T.R. 430, Donaldson L.J. said that a clause in a contract “sold as seen and inspected” would prima facie negative a sale by description. The case was, however, doubted in Cavendish-Woodhouse Ltd v Manley (1984) 82 L.G.R. 376. See also Speedway Safety Products Ltd v Hazell & Moore Industries Pty Ltd [1982] 1 N.S.W.L.R. 225 (sale by receiver of stock situated at identified premises).
- 389. [1991] 1 Q.B. 564.
- 390. See KG Bominflot Bunkergesellschaft etc. & Co v Petroplus Marketing AG (The Mercini Lady) [2010] EWCA Civ 1145, [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 442, holding that it will not normally be appropriate to imply a term that the goods hold their specification for a period: if they cease to conform, that is a matter of quality covered by s.14, below, paras 44-094 et seq.
- 391. Wallis, Son and Wells v Pratt and Haynes [1911] A.C. 394.
- 392. Andrews Bros Ltd v Singer & Co Ltd [1934] 1 K.B. 17.
- 393. Beale v Taylor [1967] 1 W.L.R. 1193 (a case very near the line, however). Brewer v Mann [2010] EWHC 2444 (QB) (car sold as “1930 Speed Six Bentley” actually contained 1927 reconstructed standard 6.5 litre engine).
- 394. [1933] A.C. 470, 479. But contracts frequently stipulate for tolerances: and trade custom may be received in this connection: see Montague L Meyer Ltd v Vigers Bros Ltd (1939) 63 Ll.L. Rep. 10.
- 395. [1921] 2 K.B. 519, a case on s.30(4) (now repealed).
- 396. Bowes v Shand (1877) 2 App. Cas. 455; Macpherson Train & Co Ltd v Howard Ross & Co Ltd [1955] 1 W.L.R. 640 (date of due arrival). cf. J Aron & Co Inc v Comptoir Wegimont [1921] 3 K.B. 345.
- 397. Reardon Smith Line Ltd v Yngvar Hansen-Tangen (The Diana Prosperity) [1976] 1 W.L.R. 989, 998, per Lord Wilberforce. Bowes v Shand, above, was, however, approved by the House of Lords in Bunge Corp v Tradax Export SA [1981] 1 W.L.R. 711; and Lord Wilberforce himself reserved the position as to unascertained future goods (e.g. commodities), as to which the date of shipment is often of commercial importance.

- 398. See, e.g. Arcos Ltd v EA Ronaasen & Son [1933] A.C. 470, where the goods were found to be merchantable under the contract specification and suitable for their purpose. See also Proton Energy Group SA v Orien Letuva [2013] EWHC 2872 (Comm), [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 100 (oil specification went to quality not description).
- 399. See Toepfer v Continental Grain Co [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 11 ("hard amber durum wheat"); Toepfer v Warinco AG [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 569 ("fine-ground"); cf. Christopher Hill Ltd v Ashington Piggeries Ltd [1972] A.C. 441, 470 ("fair average quality" not part of description, though in clause headed "Quantity and Description"); Tradax International SA v Goldschmidt SA [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 604 (provision as to impurities); Gill & Duffus SA v Berger & Co Inc [1984] A.C. 382, 393–394; Total International Ltd v Addax BV [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 33 ("usual Dakar refinery quality" not part of description). And see Montedison SpA v Icroma SpA (The Caspian Sea) [1980] 1 W.L.R. 48; NV Bunge v Cie Noga, etc. SA (The Bow Cedar) [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 601.
- 400. Christopher Hill Ltd v Ashington Piggeries Ltd [1969] 3 All E.R. 1496, 1516; affirmed on this point [1972] A.C. 441, 470; Lockhart v Osman [1981] V.R. 57 (cattle sold at cattle breeders' sale infected with brucellosis).
- 401. See, e.g. Montague L Meyer Ltd v Kivisto (1929) 35 Ll.L. Rep. 265 (timber: "to be properly seasoned" not part of description); cf. Tradax Export SA v European Grain & Shipping Ltd [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 100 ("maximum 7.5 per cent fibre" part of description).
- 402. See Grenfell v EB Meyrowitz Ltd [1936] 2 All E.R. 1313 ("safety glass"); Steels & Busks Ltd v Bleecker Bik & Co Ltd [1956] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 228 ("pale crepe rubber, quality as previously delivered").
- 403. See Pinnock Bros v Lewis and Peat Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 690 (copra cake containing castor seed poisonous and not copra cake); Robert A Munro & Co Ltd v Meyer [1930] 2 K.B. 312 (adulterated bone meal); cf. Christopher Hill Ltd v Ashington Piggeries Ltd [1972] A.C. 440 (contaminated herring meal, toxic to mink but not to other animals, still herring meal); Gill & Duffus SA v Berger & Co Inc [1984] A.C. 382. But see Coote (1976) 50 A.L.J. 17, pointing out that exclusion clause cases have used a more generalised approach than the precise correspondence required in some commodity cases on rejection.
- 404. Christopher Hill Ltd v Ashington Piggeries Ltd, above, at 503–504 per Lord Diplock.
- 405. Reardon Smith Line Ltd v Yngvar Hansen-Tangen (The Diana Prosperity) [1976] 1 W.L.R. 989; see also Joseph Travers & Sons Ltd v Longel Ltd (1947) 64 T.L.R. 50 ("waders").
- 406. As to when descriptive words can constitute warranties or external representations, see Taylor v Combined Buyers Ltd [1924] N.Z.L.R. 627; The Diana Prosperity [1976] 1 W.L.R. 989 at 998; Howard Marine and Dredging Co Ltd v A Ogden & Sons (Excavations) Ltd [1978] Q.B. 574; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 11–012, 11–013.
- 407. (1854) 10 Exch. 191. See also Azémar v Casella (1867) L.R. 2 C.P. 677; Wallis, Son and Wells v Pratt and Haynes [1911] A.C. 394; ES Ruben & Co Ltd v Faire Bros & Co Ltd [1949] 1 K.B. 254.
- 408. Boshali v Allied Commercial Exporters Ltd (1961) 105 S.J. 987.
- 409. See above, para.44-090.
- 410. e.g. Toepfer v Continental Grain Co [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 11; Gill & Duffus SA v Berger & Co Inc [1984] A.C. 382, 393–394; cf. NV Bunge v Cie Naga d'Importation et d'Exportation SA (The Bow Cedar) [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 601; Cauwenberghe & Fils SA v Tropical Product Sales SA [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 535.

411. The Consumer Rights Act 2015 introduces a separate scheme of remedies for breaches of the provisions equivalent to those of s.13; see above, paras 38-464—38-465.

412. 1979 Act s.13(1A).

413. See above, para.44-066.

414. See above, para.44-070.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 3. - Terms of the Contract
(b) - Implied Terms
(iii) - Implied Terms about Quality and Fitness for Purpose

Preliminary

44-094

Section 14(1) of the Sale of Goods Act provides: "Except as provided by this section and s.15 below and subject to any other enactment, ⁴¹⁵ there is no implied term about the quality or fitness for any particular purpose of goods supplied under a contract of sale". Subsection (4) however adds that "An implied term about quality or fitness for a particular purpose may be annexed to a contract of sale by usage". ⁴¹⁶

Implied term as to satisfactory quality ⁴¹⁷

44-095

By subss.(2) to (2F) of s.14 of the 1979 Act:

"(2)

Where the seller sells goods in the course of a business, there is an implied term that the goods supplied under the contract are of satisfactory quality.

(2A)

For the purposes of this Act, goods are of satisfactory quality if they meet the standard that a reasonable person would regard as satisfactory, taking account of any description of the goods, the price (if relevant) and all the other relevant circumstances.

(2B)

For the purposes of this Act, the quality of goods includes their state and condition and the following (among others) are in appropriate cases aspects of the quality of the goods—

(a) fitness for all the purposes for which goods of the kind in question are commonly supplied,

(b)

appearance and finish,

(c) freedom from minor defects,

(d) safety, and

(e) durability.

(2C)

The term implied by subsection (2) above does not extend to any matter making the quality of goods unsatisfactory—which is specifically drawn to the buyer's attention before the contract is made,

(a)

(b)

where the buyer examines the goods before the contract is made, which that examination ought to reveal, or in the case of a contract for sale by sample, which would have been apparent on a reasonable examination of the sample.” 418

(c)

The concept of “satisfactory quality” and the guidelines were introduced into the 1979 Act by the Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1994 419 and replace that of “merchantable quality” the 1893 Act. As regards England and Wales and Northern Ireland, the term implied by subs.(2) is a condition. 420

Sale in course of a business

44-096

The subsection requires that the seller sells goods “in the course of a business” and the Act provides that “‘business’ includes a profession and the activities of any government department ... or local or public authority”.⁴²¹ It has been held⁴²² that these words cover, not only sales by business sellers of the type of goods which they are in the business of selling,⁴²³ but also sales by business and professional sellers who are in the business of selling one thing and sell something else incidentally (e.g. a commercial fisherman selling his fishing vessel,⁴²⁴ or a coal merchant selling his truck) and business and professional sellers who are not in the business of selling at all but who make a sale in connection with another business (e.g. a television rental company selling one of its vans or a doctor the computer used by his secretary). This is so despite the fact that cases in other contexts, especially with regard to buyers (more likely to be thought of as needing protection), suggest that the words “in the course of a business” require that the transaction is an integral part of the business carried on or, if it is only incidental thereto, that there is a sufficient degree of regularity about the transaction in question.⁴²⁵ It has been held that the final sale of the live and dead stock of a farm was made in the course of a business.⁴²⁶ Difficult cases may also arise where non-profit-making organisations (schools, hospitals) conduct commercial activities such as bookshops and restaurants: authority as to the meaning of the word “business” in other contexts, though relevant, will not be conclusive.⁴²⁷

Sale through an agent

44-097

Section 14(5) provides:

“The preceding provisions of this section apply to a sale by a person who in the course of a business is acting as agent for another as they apply to a sale by a principal in the course of a business, except where that other is not selling in the course a business and either the buyer knows that fact or reasonable steps are taken to bring it to the notice of the buyer before the contract is made.”

This subsection applies to any sale by an agent whether the principal is disclosed or undisclosed.⁴²⁸ Thus a sale will be in the course of a business if it is effected by an agent in the course of a business on behalf of a principal who would, if selling himself, be selling privately, unless the buyer knows that the principal is selling privately or reasonable steps are taken to make him aware of this. This provision is particularly relevant to sales by auction.

Goods supplied under the contract

44-098

These words take account of case law under the 1893 Act, whereby the duty to supply merchantable goods was applied to the containers and other additions in and with which they were supplied.⁴²⁹

Satisfactory quality

44-099

The duty to supply goods of satisfactory quality is strict: it is no defence to prove that all care was taken.⁴³⁰ Section 14(2A) defines satisfactory quality: “For the purposes of this Act, goods are of satisfactory quality if they meet the standard that a reasonable person would regard as satisfactory, taking account of any description of the goods, the price (if relevant) and all the other relevant circumstances”. It has been said that the provision is “to establish a general standard of quality which goods are required to reach”⁴³¹ and that it is “primarily directed towards substandard goods”.⁴³² There is as yet a modest amount of case law on the application of this new definition⁴³³ although there are numerous cases on “merchantable quality” in the previous legislation.⁴³⁴ These are, however, unlikely to be of direct assistance in interpreting the current definition. The reference to “a reasonable person” suggests an objective standard, but presumably must take into account the position of the individual buyer and must necessarily presuppose that the reasonable person is fully acquainted with the condition of the goods (including any hidden defects) ⁴³⁵ and would with that knowledge regard them as being of a satisfactory standard. In determining the appropriate standard, it will obviously be relevant to take account of any description given of the goods ⁴³⁶: this is particularly the case where the goods are described as having certain characteristics, e.g. “heavy duty” equipment, or are described as second-hand ⁴³⁷ or sub-standard goods. The price may also be relevant in that the buyer may reasonably expect a standard of quality that is not grossly out of line with the price that he has paid. ⁴³⁸ But all other relevant circumstances may be taken into account. ⁴³⁹

Guidelines

44-100

⚠ Section 14(2B) further provides a non-exhaustive list of features which, in addition to the state and condition of the goods, are “in appropriate cases” to be regarded as “aspects of the quality of the goods”. ⁴⁴⁰ The first is “fitness for all the purposes for which the goods in question are commonly supplied”. By including fitness for all such purposes this feature appears to go further than the previous law, which held goods to be merchantable if they were fit for a purpose for which goods of that description would normally be used even if they were unfit for another such purpose intended by the buyer. ⁴⁴¹ However, the reference to the purposes for which the goods are commonly supplied may, in addition to excluding an abnormal or idiosyncratic use of the goods, enable the courts to avoid the extreme position that the goods must be fit for whatever purpose the buyer happens to require them. ⁴⁴² Moreover, this feature is only to be applied “in appropriate cases”. The second and third features (“appearance and finish” and “freedom from minor defects”) are especially applicable to consumer sales, where the existence of slight defects may cause a reasonable person to regard the goods as unsatisfactory ⁴⁴³ even if they do not make the goods unfit for their purpose and even if the cost of remedying the defects is small. ⁴⁴⁴ The fourth feature (“safety”) is important in both consumer and nonconsumer sales. Goods may be rendered unsafe by the absence of appropriate instructions for their use. ⁴⁴⁵ Conversely, goods may be rendered safe if accompanied by clear and adequate instructions as to their use or by warnings as to the risks involved. ⁴⁴⁶ The fifth feature (“durability”) does not mean that the seller gives a continuing guarantee that the goods will last for any particular period of time. But the inherent durability of the goods at the time of their sale to the buyer is a matter to be taken into account in determining whether the goods are of satisfactory quality. ⁴⁴⁷ ⚠ The extent of the durability which it is reasonable to expect will, on the other hand, depend on the nature and description of the goods, their price and the circumstances of the sale. ⁴⁴⁸

Provisos

44-101

The first proviso, relating to defects drawn to the buyer’s attention, is particularly relevant to the sale of second-hand and sub-standard goods. ⁴⁴⁹

44-102

The second proviso, on examination, replaced a similar proviso in the original 1893 Act with one difference of wording: there is no liability for defects which that (previously “such”) an examination ought to reveal. It seems likely that this change in wording was intended to reverse the effect of the decision in Thornett and Fehr v Beers & Son ⁴⁵⁰ where the buyer made a hasty examination though offered further facilities: it was held that the proviso applied to defects which a proper examination would have revealed. The present wording may be taken to refer to the examination actually conducted. ⁴⁵¹ It is to be noted, however, that the term continues to be implied where the buyer is given the opportunity to examine the goods but fails to do so.

44-103

The third proviso applies only in the case of a contract for sale by sample. ⁴⁵² Its effect is that the seller is under no liability in respect of defects which could have been detected on reasonable examination of the sample. ⁴⁵³ In this situation it is immaterial whether or not the buyer examines the sample. ⁴⁵⁴

Time for compliance

44-104

In principle the goods must be of satisfactory quality at the time of sale, ⁴⁵⁵ though in CIF and FOB contracts the duty normally relates to the time when risk passes, viz the time of shipment, ⁴⁵⁶ and this may be so in most cases where property and risk are separated. But the fact that goods deteriorate soon after purchase may be evidence that they were not of the requisite standard (including in respect of durability) when sold ⁴⁵⁷; and in contracts involving transportation of the goods, s.14(2) may be held to require that the goods are on shipment in a fit state to endure normal transit and to be satisfactory in quality on arrival. ⁴⁵⁸

Implied term as to fitness for purpose ⁴⁵⁹

44-105

Section 14(3) of the Act ⁴⁶⁰ provides:

“Where the seller sells goods in the course of a business and the buyer, expressly or by implication, makes known—to the seller, or

(a)

(b)

where the purchase price or part of it is payable by instalments and the goods were previously sold by a credit-broker to the seller, to that credit-broker, any particular purpose for which the goods are being bought, there is an implied term that the goods supplied under the contract are reasonably fit for that purpose, whether or not that is a purpose for which such goods are commonly supplied, except where the circumstances show that the buyer does not rely, or that it is unreasonable for him to rely, on the skill or judgment of the seller or credit-broker.”

The meaning of “sells goods in the course of a business” and the rules as to a sale through an agent have already been discussed ⁴⁶¹ as has also the meaning of the phrase “goods supplied under the contract”. ⁴⁶² As regards England and Wales and Northern Ireland, the term implied by s.14(3) is a condition. ⁴⁶³

Credit-broker

44-106

The references to a credit-broker are intended to cover instalment credit transactions where the supplier of the goods, e.g. a retailer, sells the goods to a finance company which then sells them to the buyer on credit terms (under a credit sale ⁴⁶⁴ or conditional sale ⁴⁶⁵ agreement). The finance company is not a party to the original negotiations. In this case the purpose for which the goods are being bought is not made known to the seller, the finance company, but to the supplier (the credit-broker) with whom there is no contract of sale. The effect of the amendment is to make the actual seller subject to s.14(3) as well as to s.14(2).⁴⁶⁶ A credit-broker is defined by the subsection as:

“... a person acting in the course of a credit brokerage carried on by him, that is a business of effecting introductions of individuals desiring to obtain credit—(i) to persons carrying on any business so far as it relates to the provision of credit, or (ii) to other persons engaged in credit brokerage.”⁴⁶⁷

Making known purpose for which goods bought

44-107

As the subsequent words “whether or not that is a purpose for which such goods are commonly supplied” make clear, the subsection is not confined to the ordering of goods for specific purposes. The wording at this point is similar to that of s.14(1) of the 1893 Act, case-law on which had established that the purpose need not be made known expressly. Thus where an article can only be used for one purpose, e.g. a hotwater bottle, it is unnecessary for the buyer to make clear that he wants the article for the purpose of containing hot water without leakage.⁴⁶⁸ Where however the goods may be used for any of several purposes, it may be necessary to specify the purpose: but here again knowledge may readily be inferred, e.g. from extraneous communications,⁴⁶⁹ the purpose of the contract,⁴⁷⁰ or the general background of the particular trade.⁴⁷¹

Reliance may be rebutted

44-108

The 1893 Act required the buyer to allege reliance on the seller’s skill or judgment, though the court would readily infer such reliance.⁴⁷² The present wording of s.14(3) dispenses the plaintiff from this requirement, and it is for the seller to prove the absence of reliance or that reliance was not in the circumstances reasonable.⁴⁷³ This could occur for instance where the seller disclaims any knowledge or expertise in relation to the goods, or if the buyer knows more about the conditions in which the goods are to be used than the seller,⁴⁷⁴ or selects the goods from stock himself,⁴⁷⁵ or where the buyer makes assumptions as to the product which are not justified⁴⁷⁶ or takes a commodity as it is.⁴⁷⁷ Dealers in established markets may likewise be held to rely on their own judgment when buying, though there is no rule to this effect.⁴⁷⁸ Reliance may be partial: for example, where mink farmers asked a compounder of animal foods to make up mink food to a supplied formula it was held that there was reliance as to the suitability of the ingredients only.⁴⁷⁹

Reasonably fit for purpose

44-109

⚠ The duty to provide goods reasonably fit for the purpose made known is a strict one: it is no defence that all care was taken.⁴⁸⁰ There are many cases on this subsection,⁴⁸¹ ⚠ for s.14(2) of the original 1893 Act applied only to sales “by description”: and difficulties over the meaning of that phrase, and over the meaning of “merchantable quality”, seem for a period to have discouraged litigants from relying on that provision. As already stated, “reasonably fit” covers fitness for purposes for which the goods are commonly supplied as well as for specific purposes expressly made known to the seller. It does not however require that the goods are absolutely suitable for their purpose,⁴⁸² nor proof against misuse,⁴⁸³ nor usable for purposes outside the range of purposes foreseeable by the seller,⁴⁸⁴ nor proof against an abnormal peculiarity or sensitivity, not known to the seller,⁴⁸⁵ in the buyer, or in the circumstances of the use of the goods by the buyer. This is the provision of the Act most likely to be relevant, whether directly or by analogy, to defective consumer software.⁴⁸⁶ The analogy would however (unless a service element can be isolated) create strict liability, which may not always be appropriate to a composite transaction.

Patent or trade name

44-110

Under the wording in the 1893 Act the order of an article by its patent or trade name would exclude the condition as to fitness, though the proviso to this effect was restrictively interpreted.⁴⁸⁷ Under the present wording the fact that an article is ordered by a patent or trade name is relevant only as a possible indication that the buyer did not rely, or that it was unreasonable for the buyer to rely, on the seller's skill or judgment.

Time for compliance

44-111

This question has been discussed in connection with s.14(2).⁴⁸⁸ There can, however, be a difference of application, in that if a contract contemplates transportation of the goods and the goods are perishable, they must be shipped in a condition to endure normal transit to their destination.⁴⁸⁹

Relation between ss.14(2) and (3)

44-112

There is a considerable overlap between ss.14(2) and 14(3) and claims under both subsections are frequently made. But three main differences exist.⁴⁹⁰ First, s.14(2) requires that the goods be of satisfactory quality whereas s.14(3) requires that they be reasonably fit for the purpose made known. The latter standard will normally be higher than the former if a special purpose is made known; and though "satisfactory quality" includes in appropriate cases fitness for purpose, it can be argued to impose a somewhat lower standard than s.14(3).⁴⁹¹ Secondly, if there is no reliance, or if reliance is unreasonable, s.14(3) is excluded, but s.14(2) may still apply.⁴⁹² Thirdly, s.14(2) is excluded as regards defects drawn to the buyer's attention, and defects which ought to have been revealed by an examination made: in connection with s.14(3) either of these factors may be relevant to show lack of reliance, but the lack of reliance may be partial only and not exclude the provision altogether.

^{415.} Various statutes impose warranties upon sales: see, e.g. Agriculture Act 1970 (as amended) Pt IV (fertilisers and feeding stuffs); Plant Varieties and Seeds Act 1964 (as amended) ss.16, 17.

^{416.} As to custom or usage, see Vol.I, paras 14-021 et seq. An example is Jones v Bowden (1813) 4 Taunt. 847 (warranty against seawater damage).

^{417.} This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides a corresponding requirement of satisfactory quality which is to be treated as included in the contract, see above, para.38-462. Section 14(2) is amended by removing subss.(2D)–(2F); see also Peebles v Rembrand Builders Merchants Ltd Unreported, April 18, 2017 Sheriff Court (Tayside, Central and Fife) (Dundee) (roof tiles which became patchy and discoloured were not of satisfactory quality).

^{418.} subss.(2D) to (2F) are deleted by the Consumer Rights Act 2015. These subsections were inserted by the Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002 and are set out above at para.38-406. The provisions of s.14(2) no longer apply to consumer sales contracts.

- 419. s.1(1).
- 420. 1979 Act s.14(5A). As to conditions, see above, para.44-093.
- 421. 1979 Act s.61(1).
- 422. Stevenson v Rogers [1999] Q.B. 1028; MacDonald v Pollock [2012] CSIH 12, 2012 G.W.D. 8–162 (sale of a cruise ship).
- 423. As to which see Christopher Hill Ltd v Ashington Piggeries Ltd [1972] A.C. 441, 474, 485, 495.
- 424. Stevenson v Rogers [1999] Q.B. 1028.
- 425. See R & B Customs Brokers Co Ltd v United Dominions Trust Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 321 (buyer); Feldaroll Foundry Plc v Hermes Leasing (London) Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 747 (buyer); Peter Symmons & Co v Cook (1981) 131 L.J. 758 (buyer) (Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977); Davies v Sumner [1984] 1 W.L.R. 1301 (seller, but in context of criminal offence under Trade Descriptions Act 1968); below, para.44-121.
- 426. Buchanan-Jardine v Hamilink, 1983 S.L.T. 149 (depleting sale to buyer of farm: not actual sale of business). See also Browning v Brachers [2005] EWHC 16 (QB), [2004] P.N.L.R. 28 at [47] (sale of items as part of the majority of a business).
- 427. See, e.g. Trade Descriptions Act 1968 s.1; Moneylenders Act 1900 ss.2, 6 (now repealed) (see Litchfield v Dreyfus [1906] 1 K.B. 584); Stroud's Judicial Dictionary, 7th edn (2006), "Business". See also Stevenson v Beverley Bentinck Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 483.
- 428. Boyster v Thomson [1995] 2 A.C. 628.
- 429. Gedding v Marsh [1920] 1 K.B. 668 (returnable mineral water bottle); Morelli v Fitch and Gibbons [1928] 2 K.B. 636 (ginger beer bottle); Niblett v Confectioners' Materials Ltd [1921] 3 K.B. 387 (tins of condensed milk); Chaproniere v Mason (1905) 21 T.L.R. 633 (stone in Bath bun); Wilson v Rickett, Cockerell & Co Ltd [1954] 1 Q.B. 598 (explosive mixed in Coalite).
- 430. Grant v Australian Knitting Mills Ltd [1936] A.C. 85, 100.
- 431. Jewson Ltd v Boyhan [2003] EWCA Civ 1030, [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 505 at [68].
- 432. Balmoral Group Ltd v Borealis (UK) Ltd [2006] EWHC 1900 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 629 at [140].
- 433. See Thain v Anniesland Trade Centre, 1997 S.C.L.R. 991 (second hand car failed after a few weeks: sufficient durability); Britvic Soft Drinks Ltd v Messer UK Ltd [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 20; affirmed [2002] EWCA Civ 549, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 379 (carcinogenic additive to CO2 gas: too little to cause harm but necessitated product recall: quality not satisfactory); contrast Jewson Ltd v Boyhan [2003] EWCA Civ 1030, [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 505 (home energy rating of boilers: boilers satisfactory in themselves); Bramhill v Edwards [2004] EWCA Civ 403, [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 653 (American mobile home slightly wider than UK regulations permitted: satisfactory quality though use in UK would be illegal: doubted by Twigg-Flesner (2005) 121 L.Q.R. 205); Balmoral Group Ltd v Borealis (UK) Ltd [2006] EWHC 1900 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 629 (polymer satisfactory for making storage tanks if properly processed); Darren Egan v Motor Services (Bath Ltd) [2007] EWCA Civ 1002, [2008] 1 All E.R. 1156n. (car veered with camber of road: satisfactory); Webster Thompson Ltd v JG Pears (Newark) Ltd [2009] EWHC 1070 (Comm), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 339 (Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 s.4, as amended) (goods liable to be downgraded under EU animal by-products regulations); Lowe v W Machell Joinery Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 794, [2012] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 153 (staircase supplied as specified but did not comply with Building Regulations, though change to specification required would have been very slight: not satisfactory); Activa DPS Europe SARL v Pressure Seal Solutions Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 943, [2012] 3 C.M.L.R. 33 (goods lacked certification of conformity required by EC Directive—satisfactory quality as no evidence that Directive implemented in country of sale and buyer able to resell goods inside and outside EU); Ward v MGM Marine Ltd [2012] EWHC 4093 (QB) (luxury yacht caught fire and exploded 15 minutes after delivery: quality not satisfactory); Cheeld v Alliot [2013] EWCA Civ 508 (defective workmanship in metal porch); KG Bominflot Bunkergesellschaft, etc. & Co v Petroplus Marketing AG (The Mercini Lady) (No.2) [2012] EWHC 3009 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 360 (unstable gasoil: discussion of principles). cf. United Central Bakeries Ltd v Spooner Industries Ltd 2013 CSOH 150, 2013 G.W.D. 302–608 (baking equipment of satisfactory quality though part of the cause of fire).

434. For examples see Wren v Holt [1903] 1 K.B. 610 (contaminated beer); Bristol Tramways, etc. Carriage Co v Fiat Motors Ltd [1910] 2 K.B. 831 (buses not strong enough for heavy passenger work); Niblett v Confectioners' Materials Ltd, above (goods carrying labels infringing trade mark) (cf. Sumner, Permain & Co v Webb & Co [1922] 1 K.B. 55 (tonic water unsaleable in Argentina only)); Buchanan-Jardine v Hamilink, 1983 S.L.T. 149 (cattle subject to temporary health "stop order" preventing movement); Rasbora Ltd v JCL Marine Ltd [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 645 (boat); Jackson v Chrysler Acceptances [1978] R.T.R. 474 (car); Leaves v Wadham Stringer (Cliftons) Ltd [1980] R.T.R. 308 (car); Rogers v Parish (Scarborough) Ltd [1987] Q.B. 933 (car); M/S Aswan Engineering Establishment Co v Lupdine Ltd [1987] 1 W.L.R. 1 (plastic pails). For a recent example see Russo v Belcar Pty Ltd [2011] SASCF 151 (car merchantable despite many alleged defects).
435. Bristol Tramways, etc. Carriage Co v Fiat Motors Ltd [1910] 2 K.B. 831 at 841; Australian Knitting Mills Ltd v Grant (1933) 50 C.L.R. 387, 418; Henry Kendall & Sons v William Lillico & Sons Ltd [1969] 2 A.C. 31, 79, 108, 118.
436. Harlingdon and Leinster Enterprises Ltd v Christopher Hull Fine Art Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 564. This passage from the 31st edition of this work (para.43–086) is cited in Saint Gobain Building Distribution Ltd (t/a International Decorative Surfaces) v Hillmead Joinery (Swindon) Ltd [2015] B.L.R. 555 QBD, [60].
437. As to second-hand goods, see Bartlett v Sydney Marcus Ltd [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1013 (car); McDonald v Empire Garage (Blackburn) [1975] 10 C.L. 388 (car); Feast Contractors Ltd v Ray Vincent Ltd [1974] 1 N.Z.L.R. 212 (engine); Lee v York Coach and Marine [1977] R.T.R. 35 (car); Kealey v Guy McDonald Ltd (1984) 134 New L.J. 706 (car); Shine v General Guarantee Corp Ltd [1988] 1 All E.R. 911 (car); Business Application Specialists Ltd v Nationwide Credit Corp Ltd [1988] R.T.R. 332 (car); Brewer v Mann [2010] EWHC 2444 (QB) (car: s.13).
438. See BS Brown & Son v Craiks Ltd [1970] 1 W.L.R. 752. It has been held that the existence of a warranty is not relevant to the issue of satisfactory quality: Lamarra v Capital Bank Plc, 2007 S.C. 95 (Sh Ct) (Range Rover).
439. Where the seller makes up the goods to the buyer's instructions, the requirement may attach to the ingredients only: Christopher Hill Ltd v Ashington Piggeries Ltd [1972] A.C. 441, 494 (mink food); Bowen v RB Young Products Pty Ltd [1967] W.A.R. 97, 105 (poultry food).
440. In the case of consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 the satisfactory quality of goods also depends on other relevant circumstances including public statements made about the goods. See Consumer Rights Act s.9, above para.38-462.
441. Henry Kendall & Sons v William Lillico & Sons Ltd [1969] 2 A.C. 31; M/S Aswan Engineering Establishment Co v Lupdine Ltd [1987] 1 W.L.R. 1. See also Cehave NV v Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH (The Hansa Nord) [1976] Q.B. 44 (part of consignment damaged, still usable for same purpose in lesser concentration).
442. This is supported by Jewson Ltd v Boyhan [2003] EWCA Civ 1030, [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 505 (boilers yielding low home energy ratings and reducing attractiveness of newly converted flats: satisfactory—see at [67] et seq.), cited in Balmoral Group Ltd v Borealis (UK) Ltd [2006] EWHC

1900 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 629 at [140].

- 443. Rogers v Parish (Scarborough) Ltd [1987] Q.B. 933, 944 (car); Jackson v Rotax Motor and Cycle Co Ltd [1910] 2 K.B. 937 (motor horns).
- 444. cf. Bernstein v Pamson Motors (Golders Green) Ltd [1987] 2 All E.R. 220, 227.
- 445. Henry Kendall & Sons v William Lillico & Sons Ltd [1969] 2 A.C. 31 at 119.
- 446. Wormell v RHM Agricultural (East) Ltd [1987] 1 W.L.R. 1091 (herbicide). See in general McLeod (1981) 97 L.Q.R. 550; Brown [1988] L.M.C.L.Q. 502.
- 447.  See Whitecap Leisure Ltd v John H Rundle Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 429, [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 216 at [45] (subsequent deterioration evidence of original quality, not part of a continuing breach); see also Peebles v Rembrand Builders Merchants Ltd Unreported, April 18, 2017 Sheriff Court (Tayside, Central and Fife) (Dundee) (roof tiles which became patchy and discoloured were not of satisfactory quality).
- 448. Preist v Last [1903] 2 K.B. 148 (hot-water bottle); MP Evangelinos v Leslie & Anderson (1920) 4 L.L. Rep. 17 (tinned salmon); AB Kemp v Tolland [1956] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 681 (peaches); Shillingford v Baron [1959] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 453 (sugar syrup); Godley v Perry [1960] 1 W.L.R. 9 (catapult); Oleificio Zucchi SpA v Northern Sales Ltd [1965] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 496, 517 (rapeseed screenings); Crowther v Shannon Motor Co [1975] 1 W.L.R. 30.
- 449. See above, n.440. See also Stephenson v Cookson [2009] EWCA Civ 1270 (horse: different defect from that to which attention drawn).
- 450. [1919] 1 K.B. 486 (barrels of glue); cf. Frank v Grosvenor Auctions Pty Ltd [1960] V.R. 607 (car). It may be that the proviso is not applicable where the buyer has reason to believe that the defect will be rectified: see R & B Customs Brokers Co Ltd v United Dominions Trust Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 321, 326, 333.
- 451. But this point was ignored by the Court of Appeal in Bramhill v Edwards [2004] EWCA Civ 403, [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 653 (mobile home inspected but not measured for conformity with width regulations): see Twigg-Flesner (2005) 121 L.Q.R. 125. It was, however, so decided in MacDonald v Pollock [2012] CSIH 12, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 425. See further Garside v Black Horse Ltd [2010] EWHC 190 (QB) (Supply of Goods (Implied Terms) Act 1973) (new car: examination of an allegedly identical item not sufficient).
- 452. See below, paras 44-113, 44-114.
- 453. See Joseph Travers & Sons Ltd v Longel Ltd (1948) 64 T.L.R. 50 ("waders" not waterproof—apparent on examination). cf. Godley v Perry [1960] 1 W.L.R. 9 (catapult dangerous—not apparent).
- 454. But, if the buyer fails to examine the sample, this might be an indication that the sale is not one by sample. See also Murdoch (1981) 44 M.L.R. 388, 396-399.
- 455. For the meaning of "sale", see s.2 above, para.44-020. See AB Kemp Ltd v Tolland [1956] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 681, 685, 691 (peaches); Crowther v Shannon Motor Co [1975] 1 W.L.R. 30, 33 (car). But in Lambert v Lewis [1982] A.C. 225, 276; Viskase Ltd v Paul Kiefel GmbH [1999] 1 W.L.R. 1305 and Whitecap Leisure Ltd v John H Rundle Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 429, [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 216 at [45] it is said that the duty relates to the time of delivery. See Hudson (1978) 94 L.Q.R. 566.
- 456. Oleificio Zucchi SpA v Northern Sales Ltd [1965] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 496, 518. But see Cehave NV v Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH (The Hansa Nord) [1976] Q.B. 44, where the discussion concentrates entirely on the condition of the goods on arrival.
- 457. See above, para.44-100.

- 458. Mash and Murrell Ltd v Joseph I Emanuel Ltd [1961] 1 W.L.R. 862, 867-868 (potatoes); reversed on other grounds [1961] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 326. See also Cordova Land Co Ltd v Victor Bros Inc [1966] 1 W.L.R. 793, 796 (skins); discussion in KG Bominflot Bunkergesellschaft etc. & Co v Petroplus Marketing AG (The Mercini Lady) [2010] EWCA Civ 1145, [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 442, especially at [18] (rejecting an argument that the goods must hold their specification for such a period); and below, para.44-273. But where any goods of the type would deteriorate in transit, the seller may not be liable: see Broome v Pardess Co-operative Society of Orange Growers [1940] 1 All E.R. 603.
- 459. This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides a corresponding requirement of fitness for purpose which is to be treated as included in the contract, see above, para.38-463.
- 460. Formerly s.14(1) of the 1893 Act.
- 461. See above, paras 44-096, 44-097.
- 462. See above, para.44-098.
- 463. 1979 Act s.14(5A). As to conditions, see para.44-093.
- 464. See above, para.44-029.
- 465. See above, para.44-028.
- 466. Provisions as to the agency of the supplier in respect of express statements in negotiations are contained in s.56 of the Consumer Credit Act 1974: see above, para.39-075.
- 467. Problems may arise where the buyer is a corporation and so not an "individual": see Dobson [1983] J.B.L. 313.
- 468. Preist v Last [1903] 2 K.B. 148.
- 469. Bristol Tramways, etc. Carriage Co v Fiat Motors Ltd [1910] 2 K.B. 831 (buses required for heavy passenger work in Bristol).
- 470. Cammell Laird & Co Ltd v Manganese Bronze & Brass Co Ltd [1934] A.C. 402 (ship propeller).
- 471. e.g. Henry Kendall & Sons v William Lillico & Sons Ltd [1969] 2 A.C. 31 (Cattle Food Trade Assn: foreseeable that pig and poultry food might be fed to pheasants); Christopher Hill Ltd v Ashington Piggeries Ltd [1972] A.C. 441 (claim against third parties: foreseeable that herring meal might be fed to mink).
- 472. See Henry Kendall & Sons v William Lillico & Sons Ltd [1969] 2 A.C. 31 at 81-84; Godley v Perry [1960] 1 W.L.R. 9 (child buying catapult).
- 473. Central Regional Council v Uponor, 1996 S.L.T. 645 (water pipes). For a case on the old wording in which reliance was not proved, see Hamilton v Papakura DC [2002] 3 N.Z.L.R. 308 PC (water supply to tomato grower).
- 474. Teheran-Europe Co Ltd v ST Belton (Tractors) Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 545 (air compressors for resale in Iran); Sumner, Permain & Co v Webb & Co [1922] 1 K.B. 55 (tonic water for resale in Argentina); Phoenix Distributors Ltd v LB Clarke (London) Ltd [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 285, [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 518 (potatoes for export to Poland); Nikka Traders Ltd v Gizella Pastry Ltd [2012] BCSC 1412 (cookies for importation into Japan needing to pass customs). As to reliance by an agent, see Ashford Shire Council v Dependable Motors Pty Ltd [1961] A.C. 336. See also Britvic Soft Drinks Ltd v Messer UK Ltd [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 20 at [93]; affirmed [2002] EWCA Civ 548, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 368 (sufficient that buyer relies on seller or any person from whom seller acquired the goods). Sed quaere: see Jewson Ltd v Kelly Unreported August 2, 2002 Q.B.D. at [88]; reversed without reference to this point [2003] EWCA Civ 1030, [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 505. See Sealy [2003] C.L.J. 260.

- 475. H Beecham & Co Pty Ltd v Francis Howard & Co Pty Ltd [1921] V.L.R. 428 (timber).
- 476. Balmoral Group Ltd v Borealis (UK) Ltd [2006] EWHC 1900 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 629 (polymer: different process required).
- 477. See Turner v Mucklow (1862) 6 L.T. 690; Ipswich Gaslight Co v WB King & Co (1886) 3 T.L.R. 100—cases on sale of industrial waste.
- 478. See CEB Draper & Son Ltd v Edward Turner & Son Ltd [1965] 1 Q.B. 424, 433, 434; but cf. Henry Kendall & Sons v William Lillico & Sons Ltd [1969] 2 A.C. 31, 84, 95, 107, 124 (London Cattle Foods Trading Association). See also Feast Contractors Ltd v Ray Vincent Ltd [1974] 1 N.Z.L.R. 212 (cartage contractor buying engine from garage); South Coast Basalt Pty Ltd v RW Miller & Co Pty Ltd [1981] 1 N.S.W.L.R. 356 PC (reliance though buyer and seller associated companies).
- 479. Christopher Hill Ltd v Ashington Piggeries Ltd [1972] A.C. 441; see also Cammell Laird & Co Ltd v Manganese Bronze and Brass Co Ltd [1934] A.C. 402; cf. Central Regional Council v Uponor, 1996 S.L.T. 645. See also Jewson Ltd v Kelly [2003] EWCA Civ 1030, [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 505 (boilers for flats); Medivance Instruments Ltd v Gaslane Pipework Services Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 500 (heater: BS compliance relevant to s.14(2) not s.14(3)); BSS Group Plc v Makers (UK) Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 809 (plumbing equipment: made known to seller that parts to be used with Uponor piping: reliance reasonable).
- 480. Bigge v Parkinson (1862) 7 H. & N. 955, 959 (tinned goods); Frost v Aylesbury Dairy Co [1905] 1 K.B. 608 (typhoid germs in milk); Henry Kendall & Sons v William Lillico & Sons Ltd [1969] 2 A.C. 31, 84.
- 481. Ie.g. Wallis v Russell [1902] 2 I.R. 585 (infected boiled crab); Bristol Tramways, etc. Carriage Co v Fiat Motors Ltd [1910] 2 K.B. 831 (buses unsuitable for heavy passenger work); Henry Kendall & Sons v William Lillico & Sons Ltd [1969] 2 A.C. 31, 84 (groundnut extractions unsuitable for compounding into poultry food); Vacwell Engineering Co Ltd v BDH Chemicals Ltd [1971] 1 Q.B. 88 (dangerous chemical without warning label); Christopher Hill Ltd v Ashington Piggeries Ltd [1972] A.C. 441 (herring meal toxic to mink); Jackson v Chrysler Acceptances Ltd [1978] R.T.R. 474; but cf. Millar's of Falkirk Ltd v Turpie, 1976 S.L.T. (Notes) 66; Leaves v Wadham Stringer (Cliftons) Ltd [1980] R.T.R. 308 (cases on new cars); Farnworth Finance Facilities Ltd v Attryde [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1053 (motorcycle); Finch Motors Ltd v Oris (No.2) [1980] 2 N.Z.L.R. 519 (car unsuitable for towing boat); Milne Construction Ltd v Expandite Ltd [1984] 2 N.Z.L.R. 163 (epoxy resin accompanied by inadequate instructions); Hazlewood Grocery Ltd v Lion Foods Ltd [2007] EWHC 1887 (QB) (dye in food: danger of intervention by Food Standards Agency); Fluor Ltd v Shanghai Zhenhua Heavy Industries Ltd [2016] EWHC 2062 (TCC) (if a buyer knows of goods' true condition but is unable to discover without lengthy investigation whether or not that condition affects use of the goods, they are not fit for purpose).
- 482. e.g. Bartlett v Sidney Marcus Ltd [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1013 (second-hand car); cf. Crowther v Shannon Motor Co [1975] 1 W.L.R. 30; Lee v Coach and Marine [1977] R.T.R. 35.
- 483. Heil v Hedges [1951] 1 T.L.R. 512 (pork insufficiently cooked). As to the legal significance of instructions see McLeod (1981) 97 L.Q.R. 550.
- 484. See Christopher Hill Ltd v Ashington Piggeries Ltd [1972] A.C. 441 at 477, 498-499 (applying the test of remoteness laid down in Koufos v C Czarnikow Ltd (The Heron II) [1969] 1 A.C. 350).
- 485. Slater v Finning Ltd [1997] A.C. 473 (engine for boat). See also Griffiths v Peter Conway Ltd [1939] 1 All E.R. 685 (skin sensitive to tweed); Ingham v Emes [1955] 2 Q.B. 366 (hair dye); Crozier v A & P Canada Inc (2010) 329 D.L.R. (4th) 565 (peanut butter: claimant had long history of Crohn's disease). cf. BSS Group Plc v Makers (UK) Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 809 (the fact that the plumbing equipment supplied was not compatible was not due to some unknown idiosyncrasy of the buyer).

- 486. See above, para.44-015 n.85. For examples see Salvage Assn v CAP Financial Services Ltd [1995] F.S.R. 654; St Albans City and DC v International Computers Ltd [1996] 4 All E.R. 481; Jonathan Wren & Co Ltd v Microdec Plc (1999) 65 Con. L.R. 157; Pegler Ltd v Wang UK Ltd [2000] B.L.R. 218; Watford Electronics Ltd v Sanderson CFL Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 317, [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 696; Rubicon Computer Systems Ltd v United Paints Ltd (2000) 2 T.C.L.R. 454; SAM Business Systems Ltd v Hadley & Co [2002] EWHC 2733 (TCC), [2003] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 465; Brocket v DGS Retail Ltd [2004] C.L.Y. 3269 (seller should warn about incompatibility of packages). A recent example in the context of defective software (though for commercial use) is Kingsway Hall Hotel Ltd v Red Sky IT (Hounslow) Ltd [2010] EWHC 965 (TCC) (reservation system for hotel). See also Southwark LBC v IBM UK Ltd [2011] EWHC 549 (TCC), 135 Con. L.R. 136 (no sale involved in supply of third party software and associated services). The Consumer Rights Act 2015 provides new statutory rights in relation to digital content: see above, paras 38-496 et seq.
- 487. See Baldry v Marshall [1925] 1 K.B. 260, 267.
- 488. See above, para.44-104. See Lambert v Lewis [1982] A.C. 225, 276-277; Viskase Ltd v Paul Kiefel GmbH [1999] 1 W.L.R. 1305.
- 489. See Mash and Murrell Ltd v Joseph I Emanuel Ltd [1961] 1 W.L.R. 862, 867-868; reversed on other grounds [1961] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 326 (potatoes), below, para.44-273; cf. AB Kemp Ltd v Tolland [1956] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 681, 684-685 (peaches). But this is a matter of quality on shipment: see KG Bominflot Bunkergesellschaft etc. & Co v Petroplus Marketing AG (The Mercini Lady) [2010] EWCA Civ 1145, [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 442, especially at [18].
- 490. See also (under the 1893 Act), e.g. Bristol Tramways, etc. Carriage Co Ltd v Fiat Motors Ltd [1910] 2 K.B. 831; Lee v York Coach and Marine [1977] R.T.R. 35. See Franzi (1977) 51 A.L.J. 298; and Teheran-Europe Co Ltd v ST Belton (Tractors) Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 545, 562-563.
- 491. See above, para.44-099.
- 492. But see Harlingdon and Leinster Enterprises Ltd v Christopher Hull Fine Art Ltd [1991] 1 Q.B. 564, where this was not so.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 3. - Terms of the Contract

(b) - Implied Terms

(iv) - Sale by Sample

Sale by sample ⁴⁹³

44-113

By s.15(1):

“A contract of sale is a contract for sale by sample where there is an express or implied term to that effect in the contract.”

It seems that there is a sale by sample only if the parties intended this and made it a term of their contract that “the goods should answer the description of a small parcel exhibited at the time of sale”. ⁴⁹⁴ Thus the fact that a sample was exhibited during the negotiations for the contract does not of itself render it a sale by sample. ⁴⁹⁵ But evidence of usage is admissible to show that a sale is by sample even where the written contract is silent on this point. ⁴⁹⁶ In view of the fact that the term as to satisfactory quality does not apply to defects apparent on reasonable examination of the sample, ⁴⁹⁷ it may be suggested that private buyers, who usually lack expertise for such examination, will not readily be held to buy by sample, nor private sellers to sell by sample.

Bulk to correspond with sample

44-114

By s.15(2) certain terms are implied in the case of a contract for sale by sample. ⁴⁹⁸ In England and Wales and Northern Ireland these terms are conditions. ⁴⁹⁹ Unlike the requirements of s.14, they are not restricted to business sellers, though, as stated above, it may be that private sales by sample are rare. The first is “(a) that the bulk will correspond with the sample in quality”. ⁵⁰⁰ The fact that the bulk, though not in accordance with the sample, could be made to conform by a simple process is irrelevant: correspondence must be precise. ⁵⁰¹ It has been held that an exclusion of any implied term as to quality does not exclude the duty of securing that the bulk correspond with the sample. ⁵⁰² The extent to which there must be conformity—whether it need be visual only, or whether the two must correspond on analysis—depends on the contemplation of the parties and the usage of trade. ⁵⁰³ The word “bulk” is defined in s.61(1) of the Act, ⁵⁰⁴ but in a way that appears to be inappropriate in the context of the present section, ⁵⁰⁵ since specific goods, ⁵⁰⁶ goods manufactured after contract, ⁵⁰⁷ and further articles supplied on the pattern of that shown as a sample, may all count as “bulk” under it.

Freedom from latent defect

44-115

The second term implied by s.15(2) is:

“(c)

that the goods will be free from any defect, making their quality unsatisfactory, which would not be apparent on reasonable examination of the sample.”

The effect of this provision is that the seller is liable for latent defects which make the quality of the goods unsatisfactory. ⁴⁹³ Where, however, the defect could have been detected on reasonable examination of the sample there is no liability. ⁴⁹⁴ It follows from this provision that, if there is a latent defect of this kind in the goods, the buyer may reject them even though bulk and sample correspond. ⁴⁹⁵

⁴⁹³. See Murdoch (1981) 44 M.L.R. 388. This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides corresponding terms requiring goods to match any sample which are to be treated as included in the contract; see above, para.38-466. The 2015 Act also introduces a new requirement that goods must match a model seen or examined; see above, para.38-467.

⁴⁹⁴. Parker v Palmer (1821) 4 B. & A. 387, 391.

⁴⁹⁵. Gardiner v Gray (1815) 4 Camp. 144; Ginner v King (1894) 7 T.L.R. 140. And in commercial contracts for commodities samples may perform quite different functions: see John Bowron & Sons Ltd v Rodema Canned Foods Ltd [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 183 (preliminary shipment); cf. Wood Components of London v James Webster & Bros Ltd [1959] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 200.

⁴⁹⁶. See Syers v Jonas (1848) 2 Exch. 111.

⁴⁹⁷. See above, para.44-102.

⁴⁹⁸. 1979 Act s.15 should be read in conjunction with s.13, see above, paras 44-086 et seq.; a sale is frequently both by sample and by description.

⁴⁹⁹. 1979 Act s.15(3).

⁵⁰⁰. “Quality” of goods includes their state or condition and, in appropriate cases, certain other features: s.14(2B); see above, para.44-095.

⁵⁰¹. ES Ruben Ltd v Faire Bros & Co Ltd [1949] 1 K.B. 254, 260; Aitken, Campbell & Co v Boullen and Gatenby, 1908 S.C. 490. Unless the de minimis principle applies.

⁵⁰². Champanhac & Co Ltd v Waller & Co Ltd [1948] 2 All E.R. 724.

⁵⁰³. See FE Hookway & Co Ltd v Alfred Isaacs & Son [1954] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 491; Steels and Busks Ltd v Bleecker Bik & Co Ltd [1956] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 228. Sometimes there are provisions making certain types of certification or testing conclusive: e.g. Gill & Duffus SA v Berger & Co Inc [1984] A.C. 382.

⁵⁰⁴. See above, para.44-015. The definition is plainly directed at ss.20A and 20B, below, paras 44-160 et seq.

⁵⁰⁵. Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.11-078.

- 506. e.g. Azémar v Casella (1867) L.R. 2 C.P. 677.
- 507. e.g. Drummond & Sons v Van Ingen & Co (1887) 12 App. Cas. 284; Jones v Padgett (1890) 24 Q.B.D. 650.
- 508. Godley v Perry [1960] 1 W.L.R. 9 (catapult dangerous—not apparent): “satisfactory quality” is defined in s.14(2A); see above, para.44-099.
- 509. Joseph Travers & Sons Ltd v Longel Ltd (1948) 64 T.L.R. 150 (“waders” not waterproof—apparent on examination). This is expressly covered for in a proviso to s.14(2) contained in s.14(2C); see above, para.44-103.
- 510. Mody v Gregson (1868) L.R. 4 Ex. 49; Drummond & Sons v Van Ingen & Co (1887) 12 App. Cas. 284, 297.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 3. - Terms of the Contract
(b) - Implied Terms
(v) - Pre-contractual Information to Consumers

Pre-contractual information to be included as term of consumer contract

44-116

The Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013 ⁵¹¹ implement the Consumer Rights Directive. ⁵¹² They replace the Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 and the Cancellation of Contracts made in a Consumer's Home or Place of Work, etc. Regulations 2008 with effect from June 13, 2014, and apply to contracts made on or after that date. The 2013 Regulations impose duties on traders making distance contracts, off-premises contracts and some other ("on-premises") contracts with consumers to give or make available a wide range of information to the consumer before the contract is concluded. ⁵¹³ The Consumer Rights Act 2015, refers to the information requirements and provides that information provided in accordance with the Regulations becomes a term of the contract. Information about the main characteristics of the goods will be treated as part of the description, and the consumer will have the normal remedies for non-conformity ⁵¹⁴; whereas for other information that is given the trader is in effect, treated as giving a contractual warranty that the information was correct at the time. ⁵¹⁵

^{511.} SI 2013/3134.

^{512.} 2011/83/EU of October 15, 2011.

^{513.} See above, paras 38-055 et seq.

^{514.} See above, para.38-464.

^{515.} See above, para.38-465.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 3. - Terms of the Contract
(b) - Implied Terms
(vi) - Exclusion of Terms Implied by ss.13, 14, and 15

Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977

44-117

The Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 controls, for the contracts to which it applies, attempts to exclude the seller's duties laid down in ss.13, 14 and 15 of the Sale of Goods Act. ⁵¹⁶ In addition to the general provisions of the Act, which are dealt with elsewhere in this work, ⁵¹⁷ s.6(2) (which in substance re-enacts earlier controls imposed by the Supply of Goods (Implied Terms) Act 1973) provided an absolute bar on exclusions in consumer cases:

“As against a person dealing as consumer, liability for breach of the obligations arising from—(a) sections 13, 14 or 15 of the 1979 Act ... cannot be excluded or restricted by reference to any contract term.” ⁵¹⁸

In the case of non-consumer sales, s.6(3) of the 1977 Act provided:

“As against a person dealing otherwise than as consumer, the liability specified in subs.(2) above can be excluded or restricted by reference to a contract term, but only in so far as the term satisfies the requirement of reasonableness.” ⁵¹⁹

44-118

However, for contracts entered into after October 1, 2015, the Consumer Rights Act 2015 repeals or disapplies provisions in the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 in relation to consumer contracts. In relation to contracts to which Ch.1 applies, the Act makes its own provision controlling the exclusion of liabilities arising under its provisions, ⁵²⁰ though this follows the pattern of the relevant provisions in the 1977 Act to a considerable extent. As a result, s.31 of the 2015 Act provides that a term of a goods contract ⁵²¹ is not binding on the consumer to the extent that it would exclude or restrict the trader's liability under the statutory terms which the Act treats as included, ⁵²² in respect of its special provisions governing non-conformity of the goods, ⁵²³ delivery of goods and the passing of risk. ⁵²⁴ Section 6 of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 no longer applies to consumer contracts. It should be noted that the new provisions have a different scope of application from that of the 1977 Act, because the test whether the party was “dealing as a consumer” ⁵²⁵ is to be replaced by one of whether the contract for goods was one under which a trader was to supply goods to a consumer, and only a natural person who is buying goods wholly or mainly for purposes outside that individual's trade, business craft or profession as a consumer. ⁵²⁶

Thus, control of unfair terms is now divided sharply between terms found in consumer contracts

(regulated by the 2015 Act, principally in Pt 2) and terms (principally exemption clauses ⁵²⁷) in other contracts (regulated by the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977).

44-119

In non-consumer sales, a new s.6(1A) (replacing the previous s.6(2) and (3)) provides that:

“Liability for breach of the obligations arising from—

(a)

Section 13,14 or 15 of the 1979 Act (seller’s implied undertakings as to conformity of goods with description or sample, or as to their quality or fitness for a particular purpose);

(b)

Section 9, 10 or 11 of the 1973 Act (the corresponding things in relation to hire purchase),

Cannot be excluded or restricted by reference to a contract term except in so far as the term satisfies the requirement of reasonableness.”

44-120

The provisions are not confined, as is the rest of the 1977 Act, ⁵²⁸ to business liability, but of course the duties created by s.14 are already limited to business sellers. ⁵²⁹ As elsewhere explained, ⁵³⁰ there are possibilities of reducing the operation of the Act by reducing the contractual description, as by providing for tolerances. If the seller points out defects these will not be covered by the provisions as to merchantable quality of s.14(2). And where the seller indicates to the buyer that the buyer should not rely on the seller’s skill or judgment, this may make it unreasonable for the buyer to do so under s.14(3). It has however been held that a clause “sold as seen and inspected” was an actual exclusion of s.13. ⁵³¹

Businesses dealing as consumer ⁵³²

44-121

For contracts entered into before October 1, 2015, s.12(1) of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 provided that:

“(1)

A party to a contract ‘deals as consumer’ in relation to another party if—he neither makes the contract in the course of a business nor holds himself out as doing so; and

(a)

- (b)
 - the other party does make the contract in the course of a business; and
 - (c)
 - in the case of a contract governed by the law of sale of goods ... the goods passing under or in pursuance of the contract are of a type ordinarily supplied for private use or consumption. ⁵³³
- (2)
 - But on a sale by auction or competitive tender the buyer is not in any circumstances to be regarded as dealing as consumer. ⁵³⁴
 - (3)
 - Subject to this, it is for those claiming that a party does not deal as consumer to show that he does not."

This definition, which is deleted by the Consumer Rights Act 2015, also applied to the same words as used in the Sale of Goods Act 1979, ⁵³⁵ and was amended (for both) by the Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002. ⁵³⁶ Under this definition, except in certain situations a corporation can in appropriate cases deal as consumer. ⁵³⁷ The phrase "in the course of a business" is the same as that used in s.14 of the Sale of Goods Act 1979, ⁵³⁸ where it has been held that these words cover, not only a seller selling goods of a type which he is in the business of selling, but a seller in the business of selling one type of goods who incidentally in his business sells another type of goods or even one who sells goods in the course of a business which does not consist of selling goods at all, for example, the sale by a plumber of his van. ⁵³⁹ But it has been held that, in the context of the 1977 Act, for a buyer ⁵⁴⁰ to make the contract in the course of a business the transaction must be an integral part of the business carried on, or, if only incidental thereto, be of a type regularly entered into. Thus the purchase of a second-hand motor car by a firm of surveyors ⁵⁴¹ or by a company which carried on the business of freight forwarders and shipping agents ⁵⁴² was held not to be a contract made in the course of a business. The overall result favours buyers, which seems appropriate, albeit there is some loss of consistency. Problems may also arise (when it applies) as to the phrase "goods ordinarily supplied for private use or consumption". Does this mean that the majority of such goods are supplied for private use, or that such goods are commonly supplied for such use? The second interpretation is much wider, and it is submitted that it should be adopted: the effect would be that only goods which are not supplied, or only exceptionally supplied, for such use would be excluded (e.g. beer pumps, furniture vans). ⁵⁴³

Non-consumer sales

44-122

In non-consumer sales, exclusions are enforceable if clearly expressed, but only insofar as the term satisfies the requirement of reasonableness. Schedule 2 lays down guidelines ⁵⁴⁴ for the exercise of the court's discretion stating that:

"The matters to which regard is to be had in particular ... are any of the following which appear to be relevant—

- (a) the strength of the bargaining positions of the parties relative to each other, taking into account (among other things) alternative means by which the customer's requirements could have been met;
- (b) whether the customer received an inducement to agree to the term, or in accepting it had an opportunity of entering into a similar contract with other persons, but without having to accept a similar term ⁵⁴⁵;
- (c) whether the customer knew or ought reasonably to have known of the existence and extent of the term (having regard, among other things, to any custom of the trade and any previous course of dealing between the parties);
- (d) where the term excludes or restricts any relevant liability if some condition is not complied with, whether it was reasonable at the time of the contract to expect that compliance with that condition would be practicable ⁵⁴⁶;
- (e) whether the goods were manufactured, processed or adapted to the special order of the customer."

Reasonableness ⁵⁴⁷

44-123

The Act's more general provision, applicable to non-consumer sales, is that the clause must have been a:

"... faias been held that the term must be taken as a whole: if the term as a whole were, or ought reasonably to have been, known to or in the contemplation of the parties when the contract was made." ⁵⁴⁸

It has been held that the term must be taken as a whole: if the term as a whole is unreasonable, it is not open to a party to say that the part of the term on which he relies is reasonable, or that a particular application of it is reasonable, or vice versa. ⁵⁴⁹ The question of reasonableness is obviously a general one and is considered in Vol.I. ⁵⁵⁰ The same is true of the question to which types of clause the Act applies. ⁵⁵¹ As regards sale of goods and closely related transactions, some of the reported authority relates to s.3 of the Misrepresentation Act 1967 and the amendments to the Sale of Goods Act 1893 inserted by the Supply of Goods (Implied Terms) Act 1973, under both of which the test was whether the reliance on the term was reasonable in the particular case. In the leading case of George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd ⁵⁵² reliance on a term in a contract for the supply of cabbage seed limiting liability to the price of the seed was held unreasonable where the term was contained in a standard contract which had not been negotiated between interested parties or trade associations, insurance against liability for supply of the wrong seed was easily obtainable at low cost and the evidence showed that the proponent did not in fact usually rely on the term but sought to negotiate against its background. In cases decided under the 1977 Act, where the test is one of reasonableness of inclusion, the following terms have been held to be unreasonable: a term in a contract for the supply of piping which excluded all liability unless the seller was notified of defects in the piping within three months of delivery ⁵⁵³; a term in a contract for the supply of a drilling rig which limited liability to replacement parts ⁵⁵⁴; a term in a contract for the supply of computer software limiting liability to £100,000 ⁵⁵⁵; a term in a contract for the supply of radar equipment excluding the terms implied by the Sale of Goods Act save for a warranty that the equipment was free of defects caused by faulty materials or bad workmanship ⁵⁵⁶; an exclusion and time-bar in a computer software contract inserted by a party who had so misrepresented what was being supplied that breaches of contract were not unlikely ⁵⁵⁷; exclusion of all liability for the typical consequences of delivery of impure CO₂ gas, subject to a derisory recovery if complaint was made within an impossibly short period ⁵⁵⁸; a term in a contract for the supply of a polymer for making storage tanks limiting liability to replacement or refund of the price was unreasonable as a blanket exclusion of liability ⁵⁵⁹; a term in a contract for the supply of O-rings purporting to exclude liability, subject to certain exceptions, unless defects were reported within a very short period ⁵⁶⁰ and terms in a contract for supply of laminated sheets excluding implied terms, damages for consequential loss and excluding liability where there had been no inspection. ⁵⁶¹ On the other hand, it has been stated that it would not be unreasonable for a finance company to exclude its liability with respect to goods sold on credit where it had never had possession of or inspected the goods ⁵⁶², and a commercially acceptable warranty in place of the normal implied terms has been held to make an accompanying exclusion reasonable. ⁵⁶³

Burden of proof

44-124

The burden of proof is on the party contending that the clause is reasonable. ⁵⁶⁴

International sales

44-125

Section 26 excludes from the scope of the 1977 Act international supply contracts. An “international supply contract” (a term which of course also covers transactions other than sale) is defined by subs.(3) as having the following characteristics:

“(a)

either it is a contract of sale of goods or it is one under or in pursuance of which the possession or ownership of goods passes ⁵⁶⁵; and it is made by parties ⁵⁶⁶ whose places of business (or, if they have none, habitual residences) are in the territories of different States (the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man being treated for this purpose as different States from the United Kingdom).”

(b)

This definition is amplified by subs.(4) which reads:

“A contract falls within subs.(3) above only if either—

- (a) the goods in question are, at the time of the conclusion of the contract, in the course of carriage, or will be carried, ⁵⁶⁷ from the territory of one State to the territory of another; or
- (b) the acts constituting the offer and acceptance have been done in the territories of different States; or
- (c) the contract provides for the goods to be delivered to the territory of a State other than that within whose territory those acts were done.” ⁵⁶⁸

It should be noted first that the definition is not restricted to commercial transactions, and thus applies to consumer transactions if made before October 1, 2015. ⁵⁶⁹ It covers liability under s.3 of the Misrepresentation Act 1967. ⁵⁷⁰ It also causes certain difficulties. It does not indicate how to treat parties who have places of business in more than one State: presumably the place of business from which the transaction is conducted is intended. The reference to “the acts constituting the offer and acceptance” being “done” leaves it in doubt whether it is the physical acts which are referred to or the place where these legally take effect (which under English law may differ, for example, in the case of letters of acceptance). It has been held that these words refer to “the totality of the acts which constitute the offer and acceptance including both the making and receiving of each” without recourse to technicalities of communication. What is excluded is the situation where all elements occur in the same state. ⁵⁷¹ For other situations, s.27 provides that the 1977 Act’s controls of exclusion or restriction of liability do not apply where the law applicable to the contract is the law of any part of the United Kingdom only by choice of the parties. ⁵⁷² It also seeks to preserve the effect of the Act despite an evasive choice of a foreign law and in certain consumer situations. ⁵⁷³

Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 ⁵⁷⁴

44-126

These Regulations are replaced by Pt 2 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015. ⁵⁷⁵ The Regulations and the provisions of Pt 2 of the 2015 Act are considered in detail in Ch.38.

Common law

44-127

The common law technique of holding that a clause is not part of the contract at all ⁵⁷⁶ is expressly preserved by s.11(2) of the Unfair Contract Terms Act, and though there is no express reference to other ways of attacking exemption clauses it may be assumed that the cases on collateral warranties, ⁵⁷⁷ misrepresentation, ⁵⁷⁸ privity ⁵⁷⁹ and restrictive interpretation ⁵⁸⁰ are still valid. Although the scope for the operation of these rules is obviously much cut down by the controls provided by the Act, ⁵⁸¹ there are occasions where they will be of use. The common law will still be relevant in the case of international supply contracts⁵⁸² and contracts where English law is applicable only by choice of the parties,⁵⁸³ and in certain other cases of lesser importance.⁵⁸⁴ The common law rules as to exemption clauses are dealt with earlier in this work.⁵⁸⁵ In brief, though s.55(1) of the 1979 Act permits exclusion or variation of the Act's provisions, clauses purporting to exclude the central duties of the contract of sale are restrictively construed. Exclusion of warranties does not exclude conditions⁵⁸⁶; exclusion of implied conditions may not cover express conditions⁵⁸⁷; sale "with all faults" may only cover "faults which [the article] may have consistently with being the thing described"⁵⁸⁸; clauses forbidding absolutely or after a period rejection of "the goods herein specified" and the like may not prevent rejection of goods not conforming with the specification⁵⁸⁹; clauses stating that "no warranty is given" need not exclude collateral warranties.⁵⁹⁰ Cases of this sort make it difficult to exclude the provisions of s.13, and frequently those of ss.14 and 15 also. There are a few cases appearing to go further, and holding that clauses which on the face might seem to exclude one or more of these provisions were inoperative on the basis of the doctrine of fundamental breach of contract.⁵⁹¹ In view of dicta in the *George Mitchell*⁵⁹² case that it is not admissible to reintroduce that doctrine by the back door, these decisions cannot now be justified on that basis; but they have not been overruled and most can probably be regarded as still valid as examples of strict interpretation.⁵⁹³ It has been said that the principles of interpretation are not applicable in their full rigour to clauses which merely limit liability in monetary terms⁵⁹⁴; but though this may be useful as a commonsense guide, it is difficult to accept it as a clear principle of law, for some monetary limits are so low as to be equivalent to non-liability.⁵⁹⁵

^{516.} As to s.12, see above, para.44-085.

^{517.} Vol.I, paras 15-066 et seq.

^{518.} The use of terms purporting to exclude such liability was an offence under the Consumer Protection (Restriction on Statements Order) 1976 (SI 1976/1813) as amended by SI 1978/127 (now repealed); as was the supply of statements about consumer rights relating to quality, fitness or description without at the same time notifying the consumer that his statutory rights are unaffected. See Hughes v Hall [1981] R.T.R. 430; but cf. Cavendish-Woodhouse Ltd v Manley (1984) 82 L.G.R. 376.

^{519.} The subsection also refers to hire-purchase (see above, para.39-382); and s.7 makes similar, but not identical, provision for other contracts where possession or ownership of goods passes (see Vol.I, para.15-094).

^{520.} See above, paras 38-334 et seq. On the general strategy of the 2015 Act in relation to the control of unfair contract terms, see above, paras 38-334 et seq.

^{521.} On s.31 see above, para.38-492.

^{522.} i.e. 2015 Act s.9 (goods to be of satisfactory quality), s.10 (goods to be fit for particular purpose), s.11 (goods to be as described), s.12 (other pre-contract information included in contract); s.13 (goods to match a sample); s.14 (goods to match a model seen or examined) and s.17 (trader to have right to supply the goods etc.): 2015 Act s.31(1)(a)-f), (i). On these provisions see above, paras 38-458 et seq.

^{523.} i.e. 2015 Act s.15 (installation as part of conformity of the goods with the contract) and s.16 (goods not conforming to contract if digital content does not conform): 2015 Act s.31(1)(g) and (h). On these provisions see above, paras 38-468 and 38-469 respectively.

^{524.} 2015 Act ss.28 and 29 respectively: 2015 Act s.31(j) and (k), on which see above, para.38-490.

^{525.} See below, para.44-121.

^{526.} See above, para.38-447.

^{527.} The Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 as amended by the 2015 Act applies only to exemption clauses (as defined in s.13) and other clauses falling within s.3(2)(b) of the 1977 Act: see Vol.I, paras 15-085 et seq.

528. s.1(3); Vol.I, para.15-072.

529. See above, paras 44-096, 44-105.

530. Vol.I, para.15-070.

531. Hughes v Hall [1981] R.T.R. 430 (a prosecution under the Consumer Protection (Restriction on Statements) Order 1976 (now repealed)), above, n.521. The decision was however doubted in Cavendish-Woodhouse Ltd v Manley (1984) 82 L.G.R. 376. If such a clause is not an exclusion it seems that the operation of the 1977 Act can be fairly easily avoided. But in Titan Steel Wheels Ltd v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc [2010] EWHC 211 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 92 several clauses in a sale of derivatives were said merely to define "the basis on which [the contractor] was providing its services". See also Avrora Fine Arts Investment Ltd v Christie Manson & Woods Ltd [2012] EWHC 2198 (Ch), [2012] P.N.L.R. 35 (clause purporting to negative reliance on statements at fine art auction "parts company with reality" because it attempted retrospectively to alter the character of what had gone before, so subject to Act: but also held reasonable); Dalmare SpA v Union Maritime Ltd (The Union Power) [2012] EWHC 3537 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 509 (sale of ship "as she was" at time of inspection wording held not clear enough to exclude the conditions stated in ss.13 and 14—even if the words "as is where is" could exclude statutory implied terms). On the other hand a "certificate of acceptance" and associated terms in an aircraft lease were assumed valid in principle in Olympic Airlines SA v ACG Acquisition XX LLC [2013] EWCA Civ 369, [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 658. This problem links to that of entire agreement clauses and "no-reliance" clauses: see Vol.I, paras 15-147 and 7-144 respectively.

532. 1977 Act s.5 deals with guarantees of consumer goods: see Vol.I, para.15-091; and see above, paras 38-491 et seq.

533. By virtue of the Sale and Supply of Goods to Consumers Regulations 2002 (SI 2002/3045) reg.14 subs.(c) does not apply where the buyer is an individual.

534. By virtue of the above Regulations, where the buyer is an individual this exception is limited to second-hand goods sold by public auction at which individuals have the opportunity of attending in person.

535. Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.61(5A), added by Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1994: for application see ss.14(2D), 14(2F), 15A, 20(4), 30(2A), 32(4), 35(3), 48A-48F.

536. 2002 Regulations reg.14.

537. See Peter Symmons & Co v Cook (1981) 131 N.L.J. 758; R & B Customs Brokers Co Ltd v United Dominions Trust Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 321; Air Transworld Ltd v Bombardier Inc [2012] EWHC 243 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 349 at [108], though in the case itself the corporation did not do so.

538. See above, para.44-096.

539. Stevenson v Rogers [1999] Q.B. 1028; MacDonald v Pollock [2012] CSIH 12, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 425.

540. i.e. the party referred to in s.12(1)(a): R & B Customs Brokers Co Ltd v United Dominions Trust Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 321 (buyer); following Davies v Sumner [1984] 1 W.L.R. 1301 (Trade Descriptions Act 1968: seller); and cf. Corfield v Sevenways Garage Ltd [1985] R.T.R. 109.

541. Peter Symmons & Co v Cook (1981) 131 N.L.J. 758.

542. R & B Customs Brokers Co Ltd v United Dominions Trust Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 321. This case contains a suggestion (at 331) that the corporate veil might sometimes be pierced in such a case. See also Rasbora Ltd v JCL Marine Ltd [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 645.

- 543. An expensive power boat was held to come within the similar terminology laid down by the Supply of Goods (Implied Terms) Act 1973 in Rasbora Ltd v JCL Marine Ltd [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 645. In Air Transworld Ltd v Bombardier Inc [2012] EWHC 243 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 349 at [122], a Challenger 605 jet aircraft (sold to a corporation) was held to be such an item.
- 544. See Vol.I, para.15-097, for cases in which these guidelines were considered.
- 545. See Denham Fish Selling Ltd v Anderson, 1991 S.L.T. (Sh Ct.) 24.
- 546. See Rees Hough Ltd v Redland Reinforced Plastics Ltd (1984) 134 New L.J. 706.
- 547. See in general Vol.I, paras 15-104 et seq.
- 548. 1977 Act s.11(1). See Vol.I, para.15-096.
- 549. Stewart Gill Ltd v Horatio Myer & Co Ltd [1992] Q.B. 600; Vol.I, para.15-112; but see doubts expressed in Bacardi-Martini Beverages Ltd v Thomas Hardy Packaging Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 549, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 379 at [26].
- 550. Ch.15, paras 15-104 et seq.
- 551. See Ch.15, para.15-069.
- 552. [1983] 2 A.C. 903; contrast RW Green Ltd v Cade Bros Farms [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 602.
- 553. Rees Hough Ltd v Redland Reinforced Plastics Ltd (1984) 134 N.L.J. 706 (piping); cf. Knight Machinery (Holdings) Ltd v Rennie, 1995 S.L.T. 166 (meaning of similar clause not clear).
- 554. Edmund Murray Ltd v BSP International Foundations Ltd (1992) 33 Con. L.R. 1; cf. British Fermentation Products Ltd v Compair Reavell Ltd (1999) 66 Con. L.R. 1 (air compressor).
- 555. St Albans City and DC v International Computers Ltd [1995] F.S.R. 686; affirmed [1996] 4 All E.R. 481; but cf. Bacardi-Martini Beverages Ltd v Thomas Hardy Packaging Ltd [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 62; affirmed [2002] EWCA Civ 549, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 379 (CO₂ gas for drinks: £500,000 reasonable).
- 556. AEG (UK) Ltd v Logic Resource Ltd [1996] C.L.C. 265 (noted [1996] L.M.C.L.Q. 334).
- 557. Pegler Ltd v Wang UK Ltd [2000] B.L.R. 218. cf. Southwark LBC v IBM UK Ltd [2011] EWHC 549 (TCC), 135 Con. L.R. 136, where a clause in a software contract excluding implied conditions or warranties of fitness for purpose would have been reasonable had the Act applied.
- 558. Bacardi-Martini Beverages Ltd v Thomas Hardy Packaging Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 549, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 379; see also Britvic Soft Drinks Ltd v Messer UK Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 548, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 368; and Rasbora Ltd v JCL Marine Ltd [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 645. For a recent example in connection with hotel computer software see Kingsway Hall Hotel Ltd v Red Sky IT (Hounslow) Ltd [2010] EWHC 965 (TCC).
- 559. Balmoral Group Ltd v Borealis (UK) Ltd [2006] EWHC 1900 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 629 (some reliance on insurance position and fact that buyer had sometimes settled claims).
- 560. Sterling Hydraulics Ltd v Dichtomatik Ltd [2006] EWHC 2004 (QB), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 8.
- 561. Saint Gobain Building Distribution Ltd (t/a International Decorative Surfaces) v Hillmead Joinery (Swindon) Ltd [2015] B.L.R. 555 QBD.
- 562. R & B Customs Brokers Co Ltd v United Dominions Trust Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 321, 332. But contrast Purnell Secretarial Services v Lease Management Services [1994] C.C.L.R. 127; Sovereign Finance Ltd v Silver Crest Furniture Ltd [1997] C.C.L.R. 76.

- 563. Air Transworld Ltd v Bombardier Inc [2012] EWHC 243 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 349 at [122] et seq.; cf. KG Bominflot Bunkergesellschaft etc. & Co v Petroplus Marketing AG (The Mercini Lady) [2010] EWCA Civ 1145, [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 442 at [62]. See also Avrora Fine Arts Investment Ltd v Christie Manson & Woods Ltd [2012] EWHC 2198 (Ch), [2012] P.N.L.R. 35 (limited rejection rights at fine art auction reasonable. Important considerations were that there was a remedy to cancel the sale under an express warranty and that this was a rich claimant with no imperative to deal with the defendant); Allen Fabrications Ltd v ASD Ltd [2012] EWHC 2213 (TCC) (commercial sale of parts of rigid steel platform: limits of liability for personal injuries reasonable. Both parties were substantial commercial entities, there was insurance in place and such terms were common in the industry).
- 564. 1977 Act s.11(5).
- 565. The term covers related services which are part of the contract: Amiri Flight Authority v BAE Systems Plc [2002] EWHC 2481 (Comm), [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 50; reversed on other grounds [2003] EWCA Civ 1447, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 767.
- 566. Not their agents: Ocean Chemical Transport Inc v Exnor Craggs Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 446, 453. See further Balmoral Group Ltd v Borealis (UK) Ltd [2006] EWHC 1900 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 629 at [437]-[439].
- 567. There is no requirement under s.26(4)(a) that the carriage of the goods be in the fulfilment of a contractual obligation, though there is under s.26(4)(c). See Amiri Flight Authority v BAE Systems Plc [2003] EWCA Civ 1447, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 767 at [32]; Trident Turboprop (Dublin) Ltd v First Flight Couriers Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 290, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 702 at [32] (indicating also that carriage includes self-propulsion); Air Transworld Ltd v Bombardier Inc [2012] EWHC 243 (Comm) at [87] et seq.; see also Yuanda (UK) Ltd v WW Gear Construction Ltd [2010] EWHC 720 (TCC), [2010] 1 C.L.C. 491 (goods to be brought in from third country).
- 568. See Amiri Flight Authority v BAE Systems Plc [2003] EWCA Civ 1447, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 767 (goods must be delivered to a different country); Balmoral Group Ltd v Borealis (UK) Ltd [2006] EWHC 1900 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 629 at [442], [443].
- 569. But see below, para.44-126.
- 570. Trident Turboprop (Dublin) Ltd v First Flight Couriers Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 290, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 702.
- 571. Air Transworld Ltd v Bombardier Inc [2012] EWHC 243 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 349 at [81].
- 572. This was so in the Transworld case, above. See Vol.I, para.30-008.
- 573. See Vol.I, para.30-008.
- 574. SI 1999/2083 (with several subsequent amending instruments none involving substance).
- 575. See above, paras 38-334 et seq.
- 576. See Vol.I, paras 13-009 et seq.; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 13-012 et seq. For recent examples of such arguments see Balmoral Group Ltd v Borealis (UK) Ltd [2006] EWHC 1900 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 629; Sterling Hydraulics Ltd v Dichtomatik Ltd [2006] EWHC 2004 (QB), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 8; Baillie Estates Ltd v Du Pont (UK) Ltd [2009] CSIH 95, 2010 S.C.L.R. 192.
- 577. See Vol.I, para.15-148; Couchman v Hill [1947] K.B. 554.

- 578. See Vol.I, para.15-146; Curtis v Chemical Cleaning and Dyeing Co [1951] 1 K.B. 805. But as to this case see AXA Sun Life Services Plc v Campbell Martin Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 133, [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1 at [99]-[105].
- 579. See Vol.I, paras 15-042 et seq.
- 580. See Vol.I, paras 15-008 et seq.; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 13-020 et seq.
- 581. See Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827, 843.
- 582. See above, para.44-125.
- 583. See above, para.44-125.
- 584. e.g. certain transactions not caught by s.7.
- 585. See Vol.I, Ch.15. As to clauses purporting to exclude reliance under s.14(3) see Vol.I, para.15-147.
- 586. Baldry v Marshall [1925] 1 K.B. 260; Wallis, Son and Wells v Pratt and Haynes [1911] A.C. 394; Henry Kendall & Sons v William Lillico & Sons [1969] 2 A.C. 31, 84, 95–96, 107, 109, 114, 126; KG Bominflot Bunkergesellschaft etc. & Co v Petroplus Marketing AG (The Mercini Lady) [2010] EWCA Civ 1145, [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 442 at [61]-[66]; Dalmare SpA v Union Maritime Ltd (The Union Power) [2012] EWHC 3537 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 509 (sale of ship “as she was” at time of inspection: wording held not clear enough to exclude the conditions stated in ss.13 and 14 and, in any event, would only have excluded the right to reject whilst leaving the right to claim damages); but cf. Air Transworld Ltd v Bombardier Inc [2012] EWHC 243 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 349 at [10] et seq., especially at [30]. See also Aston FFI (Suisse) SA v Dreyfus [2015] EWHC 80 (right to reject goods in an FOB contract not excluded by requirement as to certification).
- 587. Andrews Bros Ltd v Singer & Co Ltd [1934] 1 K.B. 17.
- 588. Shepherd v Kain (1821) 5 B. & A. 240, 241; see Robert A Munro & Co Ltd v Meyer [1930] 2 K.B. 312; Champanhac & Co Ltd v Waller & Co Ltd [1948] 2 All E.R. 724.
- 589. Vigers Bros v Sanderson Bros [1901] 1 K.B. 608; Beck & Co v Szymonowski & Co [1924] A.C. 43; cf. Smeaton, Hanscomb & Co Ltd v Sassoon I Setty, Son & Co [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1468.
- 590. Webster v Higgin [1948] 2 All E.R. 127; Harling v Eddy [1951] 2 K.B. 739.
- 591. Yeoman Credit Ltd v Apps [1962] 2 Q.B. 508; following Pollock & Co v Macrae, 1922 S.C. 192 HL. See also Farnworth Finance Facilities Ltd v Attryde [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1053. As to this doctrine see in general Vol.I, paras 15-023 et seq.
- 592. George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] 2 A.C. 803, 813. See above, para.44-123; Vol.I, para.15-026.
- 593. cf. Vol.I, para.15-027. The proposition that an exclusion clause should be interpreted so as not to cover a deliberate breach is rejected in Astrazeneca UK Ltd v Albemarle International Corp [2011] EWHC 1574 (Comm), [2011] 2 C.L.C. 252.
- 594. Ailsa Craig Fishing Co Ltd v Malvern Fishing Co Ltd [1983] 1 W.L.R. 964, 970, per Lord Fraser of Tullybelton (HL); followed in the George Mitchell case [1983] 2 A.C. 813.
- 595. It was rejected by the High Court of Australia in Darlington Futures Ltd v Delco Australia Pty Ltd (1986) 161 C.L.R. 500.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 3. - Terms of the Contract

(c) - Stipulations as to Time

Stipulations as to time

44-128

Section 10 provides that:

“(1)

Unless a different intention appears from the terms of the contract, stipulations as to time of payment are not deemed to be of the essence of a contract of sale.

(2)

Whether any other stipulation as to time is of the essence of the contract or not depends on the terms of the contract.”

A contract may always by its terms make prompt or punctual payment a condition,⁵⁹⁶ and such an implication may fairly readily be read into a commercial contract.⁵⁹⁷ Otherwise, however, the question whether late payment entitles the seller to treat the contract as discharged will be regulated by the rules as to repudiatory breach,⁵⁹⁸ though it should be borne in mind that there may sometimes be a right of resale in such a situation.⁵⁹⁹ It was long said that an action for damages does not lie for late payment⁶⁰⁰; but it is now the law that a claimant can plead and prove actual interest losses (including compound interest) as well as other loss in the contemplation of the parties incurred by reason of the late payment.⁶⁰¹ Interest on commercial debts may, by statute, also be awarded in certain circumstances.⁶⁰² As to delivery,⁶⁰³ it has been said that “in ordinary commercial contracts for the sale of goods the rule clearly is that time is prima facie of the essence with respect to delivery”,⁶⁰⁴ although there is no presumption or rule of law to that effect and the question ultimately depends on the terms of the contract and the nature of the goods. Late delivery gives rise to a claim for damages in the usual way.⁶⁰⁵

Late delivery in consumer contracts for goods

44-129

The Consumer Rights Directive 2011⁶⁰⁶ requires Member States to provide that in a consumer sales contract the trader must deliver within certain periods unless the parties have agreed otherwise, and to provide the buyer with rights to terminate the contract in the event of late delivery.⁶⁰⁷ This provision was initially implemented in the United Kingdom by the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013,⁶⁰⁸ which apply to consumer contracts made after June 13, 2014. These provisions are now contained in the Consumer Rights Act 2015. ⁶⁰⁹

- ^{596.} See, e.g. Ebbw Vale Steel, Iron and Coal Co v Blaina, etc. Co (1901) 6 Com. Cas. 33; MacLaine Galty [1921] 1 A.C. 376, 389 (loan: “punctual payment”); The Brimnes [1975] Q.B. 929 (time charter: “punctual payment”); Lombard North Central Plc v Butterworth [1987] Q.B. 527 (hire: “punctual payment to be of essence”).
- ^{597.} See, e.g. Ryan v Ridley & Co (1902) 8 Com. Cas. 105 (CIF contract); Pavia & Co SpA v Thurmann-Nielsen [1952] 2 Q.B. 84; Ian Stach Ltd v Baker Bosley Ltd [1958] 2 Q.B. 130 (opening of credit in international sale).
- ^{598.} See Vol.I, Ch.24; Mersey Steel and Iron Co v Naylor Benzon & Co (1884) 9 App. Cas. 434; Payzu Ltd v Saunders [1919] 2 K.B. 581; Decro-Wall International SA v Practitioners in Marketing Ltd [1971] 1 W.L.R. 361.
- ^{599.} Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.48; see below, paras 44-344 et seq.
- ^{600.} See Vol.I, para.26-175.
- ^{601.} Sempra Metals Ltd v Inland Revenue Commissioners [2007] UKHL 34, [2008] 1 A.C. 561; see Vol.I, para.26-175.
- ^{602.} Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act 1998 (as amended); Vol.I, para.26-232; see below, para.44-300.
- ^{603.} See below, paras 44-239 et seq.
- ^{604.} Hartley v Hymans [1920] 3 K.B. 475, 483-484. See also Toeffer v Lenersan-Poortman NV [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 143; Bunge Corp v Tradax Export SA [1981] 1 W.L.R. 711; as to a noncommercial contract McDougall v Aeromarine of Emsworth Ltd [1958] 1 W.L.R. 1126; and see below, para.44-239. The date of shipment is usually part of the description of the goods: Bowes v Shand (1877) 2 App. Cas. 455; see above, para.44-089.
- ^{605.} See below, para.44-406.
- ^{606.} Directive 2011/83/EU of October 25, 2011.
- ^{607.} art.18.
- ^{608.} SI 2013/3134.
- ^{609.} See above, paras 38-489 et seq.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 4. - Effects of the Contract
(a) - Transfer of Property as between Seller and Buyer ⁶¹⁰

Rules governing transfer of property

44-130

Sections 16-19 and s.20A of the Act contain the rules which govern the transfer of the property in goods sold from the seller to the buyer.

Unascertained goods

44-131

By s.16:

“Subject to s.20A ... where there is a contract for the sale of unascertained goods no property ⁶¹¹ in the goods is transferred to the buyer unless and until the goods are ascertained.”

This section states in the clearest terms that, except where s.20A applies, ⁶¹² the property in unascertained goods cannot pass. ⁶¹³ It must be noted that the rule is stated negatively. It does not say that when the goods are ascertained the property will pass, although in very many instances this is what will in fact happen; the intention of the parties is of primary importance in determining when the property is to pass. ⁶¹⁴

44-132

The Act does not define unascertained goods, but for the purpose of the passing of the property they seem to fall into three categories ⁶¹⁵: generic goods, ⁶¹⁶ for instance, “100 tons of wheat”; a specified quantity of goods forming part of an identified bulk, ⁶¹⁷ for instance, “100 tons of wheat from the larger quantity which A has in his warehouse”; and certain types of future goods. ⁶¹⁸

Separation of goods from bulk

44-133

Where there is a contract for the sale of a quantity of unascertained goods forming part of an identified bulk, the goods may become ascertained by “exhaustion”, that is to say, if sufficient goods are removed from the bulk that the remaining goods are reduced to (or to less than) the contract quantity and there is only one buyer to whom goods are due out of the bulk. ⁶¹⁹ The goods may also become ascertained by “consolidation”, if all the contracts for the goods which remain in the bulk become vested in a single buyer so that he is then the only buyer to whom goods are due out of the bulk. ⁶²⁰ Otherwise as a general rule ⁶²¹ the goods must be physically separated from the bulk before they can become ascertained. ⁶²² Previously, since s.16 precluded the passing of property in unascertained goods, a buyer would have no claim at law or in equity ⁶²³ to or to a share in unascertained goods while still in bulk, even if he had paid the whole or part of the purchase price, unless the seller was estopped from contending that the buyer was entitled to delivery of the goods. ⁶²⁴ So, for example, if after the buyer had paid for the goods the seller became insolvent or the bulk was seized in execution by a creditor of the seller, the buyer would have no claim to the goods but only a claim as an unsecured creditor for return of the price. However, s.16 was amended by the Sale of Goods (Amendment) Act 1995 ⁶²⁵ so as to make the section subject to s.20A (which was also introduced by the 1995 Act). Under s.20A, in certain circumstances property in an undivided share in the bulk will be transferred to the buyer and he will become an owner in common of the bulk. ⁶²⁶

Intention of the parties

44-134

By s.17:

“(1)

Where there is a contract for the sale of specific or ascertained goods the property in them is transferred to the buyer at such time as the parties to the contract intend it to be transferred.

(2)

For the purpose of ascertaining the intention of the parties regard shall be had to the terms of the contract, the conduct of the parties, and the circumstances of the case.”

It will be noted that this section, which makes the passing of property dependent upon the intention of the parties, applies both to specific goods, viz goods identified and agreed on at the time a contract of sale is made, and also to goods which, though not so identified and agreed on, later become ascertained.

Ascertaining intention

44-135

By s.18 it is provided that:

“Unless a different intention appears, the following are rules for ascertaining the intention of the parties as to the time at which the property in the goods is to pass to the buyer.”

It must be emphasised that these rules are presumptions and nothing more. They are not applied if the parties have agreed when and on what conditions the property is to pass. ⁶²⁷

Specific goods in a deliverable state

44-136

By r.1:

“Where there is an unconditional contract for the sale of specific goods in a deliverable state the property in the goods passes to the buyer when the contract is made, and it is immaterial whether the time of payment or the time of delivery, or both, be postponed.” ⁶²⁸

(i) Rule 1 applied

44-137

In Dennant v Skinner ⁶²⁹ an auctioneer knocked down several motor cars to a bidder who later tendered payment by cheque, representing himself as the son of a well-known car dealer. Before allowing him to drive away a car, the auctioneer made him sign a statement that the ownership in the cars would not pass to him until the proceeds of the cheque were credited to the auctioneer. The bidder was a fraudulent person whose cheque was dishonoured and who sold the car to the defendant. Hallett J. held that the contract was completed on the fall of the hammer and at that time the property passed to the bidder, as the document which purported to delay the passing of the property was signed after the property had in fact passed it was of no effect. The defendant therefore had a good title.

(ii) Unconditional

44-138

It would seem that this word distinguishes cases where the passing of property is subject to a condition later to be fulfilled, ⁶³⁰ e.g. where it is agreed that property is not to pass until the price has been paid.

(iii) Specific goods ⁶³¹

44-139

The meaning of the requirement that the goods must be specific is illustrated in relation to r.1 by Kursell v Timber Operators and Contractors Ltd. ⁶³² In that case the contract was for the sale of all the timber in a Latvian forest which conformed with certain measurements at a specified date. Shortly afterwards all private rights in relation to the forest were annulled. It was held that the property in the timber had not passed to the buyers because this was not a contract for the sale of specific goods. Scrutton L.J. said: “Specific goods are defined as goods identified and agreed upon at the time a contract of sale is made. It appears to me these goods were neither identified nor agreed upon. Not every tree in the forest passed, but only those complying with a certain measurement not then made”. ⁶³³ Specific goods also include an undivided share, specified as a fraction or percentage of goods identified and agreed on at the time a contract of sale is made, e.g. a quarter share in a named racehorse.

(iv) Deliverable state

44-140

The goods must also be in a deliverable state at the time the contract is made, that is, “in such a state that the buyer would under the contract be bound to take delivery of them”. ⁶³⁴ In Underwood v Burgh Castle Brick and Cement Syndicate ⁶³⁵ a fixed condensing engine was sold by the claimants to the defendants; it was to be severed, dismantled and delivered free on rail at a specified price. The main body of the engine was damaged by accident while being loaded on a railway truck and the defendants refused to accept it. It was held that the property had not passed to the defendants under r.1 because the engine was not in a deliverable state at the time the contract was made.

Specific goods to be put into a deliverable state

44-141

By r.2:

“Where there is a contract for the sale of specific goods and the seller is bound to do something to the goods, for the purpose of putting into a deliverable state, ⁶³⁶ the property does not pass until the thing is done, and the buyer has notice that it has been done.” ⁶³⁷

This rule only applies where the obligation to put the goods in a deliverable state rests on the seller. But where a similar obligation is placed on the buyer, the result may be the same: s.18 r.1, will not apply, and the situation will be governed by s.17 of the Act. ⁶³⁸

44-142

It is a question of interpretation in each case whether the thing to be done for the purpose of putting the goods into a deliverable state is a condition of the contract of sale so as to suspend the passing of property, or whether the seller's obligation is a supplemental obligation only. ⁶³⁹

44-143

The buyer must have notice that the obligation has been performed.

Specific goods to be weighed, etc

44-144

By r.3:

“Where there is a contract for the sale of specific goods in a deliverable state but the seller is bound to weigh, measure, test, or do some other act or thing with reference to the goods for the purpose of ascertaining the price, the property does not pass until the act or thing is done ⁶⁴⁰ and the buyer has notice that it has been done.”

Rule 3 suspends the transfer of property only where the act or thing is to be done by the seller, and not by the buyer or a third party. A mere right on the part of the buyer or a third party to weigh the goods will not suspend the passing of property. ⁶⁴¹ Thus in Nanka-Bruce v Commonwealth Trust Ltd ⁶⁴² the appellant sold cocoa to A, who was to resell it to the respondents. The latter were then to weigh the cocoa at their premises and the weight was to be tested there. It was held that the property had passed to A and that accordingly the respondents had a good title. The weighing of the goods was said to be “simply a means to satisfy the purchaser that he had what he had bargained for and that the full price claimed per the contract was therefore due”. ⁶⁴³ As in r.2, the buyer must have notice that the seller has done what he is required to do.

Different intention

44-145

As already indicated, the rules for ascertaining the intention of the parties are of presumptive force only and are open to rebuttal. Thus in a given case the parties may intend the property to pass at once, even though the price has not yet been precisely calculated. The fixing of a provisional estimate of the price is evidence of an intention that the passing of the property is not to depend upon the final weighing. ⁶⁴⁴

Sale or return

44-146

By r.4:

“When goods are delivered to the buyer on approval or on sale or return or other similar terms the property in the goods passes to the buyer:

- (a)
 - when he signifies his approval or acceptance to the seller or does any other act adopting the transaction;
- (b)
 - if he does not signify his approval or acceptance to the seller but retains ⁶⁴⁵ the goods without giving notice of rejection ⁶⁴⁶ then, if a time has been fixed for the return of the goods, on the expiration of that time, and, if no time has been fixed, on the expiration of a reasonable time.” ⁶⁴⁷

What is a reasonable time is a question of fact. ⁶⁴⁸

44-147

This states the general rule that where goods are delivered on approval or on sale or return the property in them remains with the seller until the buyer adopts the transaction. It is however possible to enter into a transaction which is similar in purpose but under which the property passes immediately subject to the buyer's right to return the goods, as where garments can be exchanged if they are not of the right size: such transactions are not affected by this rule. ⁶⁴⁹

44-148

Two situations must be contrasted. The first is where the buyer has an option to acquire the property in the goods on the terms set out in r.4; the second is where r.4 is displaced because the contract states that some other event is essential to the passing of the property. With regard to the first situation it is clear that approval of the goods may be signified expressly or it may be implied from the buyer's actions. So in Kirkham v Attenborough, ⁶⁵⁰ where the person to whom the goods were delivered “on sale or return” pledged them with a pawnbroker, it was held that the act of pledging was an act adopting the transaction and operated to transfer the property therein to the buyer. With regard to the second situation, it is established that if the contract states for instance that the property is not to pass until the price is paid, an act of the buyer which purports to adopt the transaction is not, without more, sufficient to pass the property to him. For r.4, like all five rules in s.18, does not operate if a different intention appears. Consequently, third parties are not protected. ⁶⁵¹ Thus, where the goods, though delivered “on sale for cash only or return”, were to remain the property of the seller till settled for or charged, it was held that, though pawned, they were recoverable by the seller, as the special term took the case out of r.4. ⁶⁵²

Appropriation of unascertained or future goods

44-149

By r.5:

“(1)

Where there is a contract for the sale of unascertained or future goods ⁶⁵³ by description, ⁶⁵⁴ and goods of that description ⁶⁵⁵ and in a deliverable state ⁶⁵⁶ are unconditionally ⁶⁵⁷ appropriated to the contract, either by the seller with the assent of the buyer, or by the buyer with the assent of the seller, the property in the goods then passes to the buyer; and the assent may be express or implied, and may be given either before or after the appropriation is made.

(2)

Where, in pursuance of the contract, the seller delivers the goods to the buyer or to a carrier or other bailee ... (whether named by the buyer or not) for the purpose of transmission to the buyer, and does not reserve the right of disposal, ⁶⁵⁸ he is to be taken to have unconditionally appropriated the goods to the contract.

(3)

Where there is a contract for the sale of a specified quantity of unascertained goods in a deliverable state ⁶⁵⁹ forming part of a bulk ⁶⁶⁰ which is identified either in the contract or by subsequent agreement between the parties and the bulk is reduced to (or to less than) that quantity, then, if the buyer under that contract is the only buyer to whom goods are then due out of the bulk—

(a)

the remaining goods are to be taken as appropriated to that contract at the time when the bulk is so reduced; and the property in those goods then passes to that buyer.

(b)

(4)

Paragraph (3) above applies also (with the necessary modifications) where a bulk is reduced to (or to less than) the aggregate of the quantities due to a single buyer under separate contracts relating to that bulk and he is the only buyer to whom goods are then due out of that bulk.”

Appropriation by one party with assent of other

44-150

Once unascertained goods have become ascertained, the property in them may pass if they are unconditionally appropriated to the contract by one party with the assent of the other party. "Appropriation" will occur only where the contract has become irrevocably attached to the goods in question. Rule 5(1) states that the appropriation may be made either by the buyer or by the seller. In a case where the buyer is to select the goods and take them away, there is normally little difficulty.⁶⁶¹ There is also normally little difficulty if the seller selects the goods, and the buyer subsequently assents to the seller's choice.⁶⁶² But when it is the seller who is to select by virtue of the previous assent (express or implied) of the buyer,⁶⁶³ it may be difficult to point to the act of the seller by which the goods are appropriated so as to pass the property in them to the buyer. This is because it may not be clear whether the seller is exercising irrevocably his right to make an election, or whether, though he intends to appropriate these goods to the contract, he may still change his mind and appropriate others.⁶⁶⁴ This is a question of law, and the answer to it is important, not only to the question of risk, but also because if appropriation has taken place the buyer is protected against the insolvency of the seller. Property has been held to pass where goods were placed by the seller in containers provided by the buyer.⁶⁶⁵ But in the absence of any such constructive or quasi-delivery, the position is less certain.⁶⁶⁶ The principle was thus stated in *Carlos Federspiel & Co SA v Charles Twigg & Co Ltd*⁶⁶⁷ by Pearson J.:

"A mere setting apart or selection of the seller of the goods which he expects to use in performance of the contract is not enough. If that is all, he can change his mind and use those goods in performance of some other contract and use some other goods in performance of this contract. To constitute an appropriation of the goods to the contract, the parties must have had, or be reasonably supposed to have had, an intention to attach the contract irrevocably to those goods, so that those goods and no others are the subject of the sale and become the property of the buyer."

Express or implied assent

44-151

Assent to the appropriation may be express or implied. So in *Pignataro v Gilroy*⁶⁶⁸ the defendants sold bags of rice to the claimant who paid for them and received a delivery order identifying the rice agreed to be sold; he delayed for a month before sending for some of the rice. It was held that his subsequent assent to the appropriation must be implied from his conduct. The property had therefore passed to him and the rice was at his risk. If it is alleged that one party assented to an appropriation by the other before it was made, then it must be shown that the latter was authorised, expressly or impliedly, to pass the property in the goods by appropriation⁶⁶⁹ and that the appropriation effected was in accordance with the terms of that authority.

Appropriation unconditional

44-152

The appropriation must be unconditional, that is to say, the party appropriating must intend that the property shall pass by the appropriation, if assented to by the other party, and not upon the occurrence of some further event, e.g. payment of the price.⁶⁷⁰

Goods "of that description"

44-153

Rule 5(1) also requires that the appropriation be of goods “of that description”, i.e. the description by which the goods are sold. If the goods which are the subject matter of the appropriation are other than those described in the contract of sale, then the property will not pass under the rule.⁶⁷¹ But it may be the intention of the parties that property in such goods shall pass to the buyer, subject to right of the buyer (if he so chooses) to reject them as not being in conformity with the contract.⁶⁷² In such a case, property will pass to the buyer under s.17, since r.5(1) establishes only a prima facie rule.

Appropriation by delivery

44-154

Appropriation by delivery is dealt with by r.5(2), and it is probably the commonest example of unconditional appropriation.⁶⁷³ Four points must be made. The first is that the rule, like all others in s.18, only applies if no different intention appears. Thus if the seller reserves the right of disposal until certain conditions are fulfilled, the appropriation is not unconditional and s.19 provides that the property is not to pass until those conditions are fulfilled.⁶⁷⁴ Secondly, where goods are delivered to a carrier, the rule only applies if the carrier is or is deemed to be the buyer's agent (and not the agent of the seller) to take delivery.⁶⁷⁵ The third point is that if goods are delivered to a carrier, unmarked with other goods of like kind, the property will not pass. In other words, unless the goods become ascertained goods by virtue of their delivery to a carrier, they are not deemed to be unconditionally appropriated. Thus if the contract is for the sale of 20 boxes of mackerel, the delivery to a carrier of 20 boxes amounts to unconditional appropriation; but the delivery of 190 boxes from which 20 are to be taken does not, unless the 20 are marked with the name of the consignee.⁶⁷⁶ Fourthly, the delivery to the carrier must be “in pursuance of the contract”, that is to say, the contract must provide, expressly or impliedly, for delivery to a carrier and the delivery must be in accordance with its terms.⁶⁷⁷

Appropriation of goods to be manufactured by the seller

44-155

In cases where goods are to be manufactured by the seller, the general rule is that the property does not pass until the work is completed and the goods are appropriated to the contract with the assent of the buyer.⁶⁷⁸ However, the parties may agree that the property is to pass before completion. Whether or not they have done so is a question of construction of the contract.

Shipbuilding contracts

44-156

This problem has come up for decision on a number of occasions in shipbuilding contracts. In *Re Blyth Shipbuilding and Dry Docks Co*⁶⁷⁹ the Blyth Shipbuilding Company contracted to build a ship for an Italian company; the purchase price was to be paid by instalments, and a clause in the contract provided that “from and after payment by the purchasers to the builder of the first instalment ... the vessel and all materials and things appropriated for her should thenceforth ... become and remain the absolute property of the purchasers”. After two instalments had been paid, the Blyth Shipbuilding Company went into liquidation. It was held that on the true construction of the contract, the property in the uncompleted ship had passed to the purchasers. In Sir James Laing & Sons v Barclay, Curle & Co,⁶⁸⁰ on the other hand, it was held that the property in the ship as she lay had not passed because, although the purchase price was to be paid by instalments, the contract showed no intention that the property was to pass before the vessel was completed and tried.

Materials not yet incorporated

44-157

It again appears to be a question of construction whether the property passes in materials provided by the seller and intended to be used by him in manufacture but not yet incorporated in the product. If, for instance, there was “some definite agreement between the parties which amounts to an assent to the property in the materials passing from the builders to the purchasers”, ⁶⁸¹ it seems that the materials would be regarded as appropriated to the contract and that the property in them would pass. The courts, however, are disinclined to hold that the property in the material passes before they become part of the structure of the product. ⁶⁸² The point was put as follows by Lord Watson in Seath & Co v Moore ⁶⁸³: “materials provided by the builder and portions of the fabric, whether wholly or partially finished, although intended to be used in the execution of the contract, cannot be regarded as appropriated to the contract or as ‘sold’ unless they have been affixed to or in a reasonable sense made part of the corpus”. And in Re Blyth Shipbuilding and Dry Docks Co, ⁶⁸⁴ where the clause regulating the passing of the property referred specifically to the materials, it was held by the Court of Appeal that the materials had not been effectively appropriated to the contract. Warrington L.J. said ⁶⁸⁵:

“the real way of dealing with this question is to read the word ‘appropriated’, in its proper technical sense and as limited to goods which have been so dealt with that the builder could not use them except for the purposes of the ship, and that the purchasers could not refuse to accept them as part of the ship, ... the mere intention on the part of the builder to use them is not enough to transfer the property to the purchasers.”

Appropriation of goods forming part of an identified bulk

44-158

Rule 5(3) and r.5(4) deal with the appropriation of goods forming part of an identified bulk. ⁶⁸⁶ The effect of r.5(3) may be illustrated as follows: a buyer contracts to purchase, and pays for, ⁶⁸⁷ 100 tons of wheat part of a larger bulk of 1000 tons lying in a specified warehouse. Under s.20A of the Act ⁶⁸⁸ property in an undivided share in the bulk is transferred to the buyer and the buyer becomes an owner in common of the bulk. If, because of deliveries to other buyers or other removal of wheat from the warehouse, the quantity of wheat in the warehouse is reduced to 100 tons or less and the buyer is the only buyer to whom wheat is due out of the 1000 tons, the quantity of wheat remaining becomes ascertained goods by process of “exhaustion”. ⁶⁸⁹ Further, under r.5(3), if that quantity of wheat is in a deliverable state, ⁶⁹⁰ it is taken as appropriated to the buyer’s contract and the property in the wheat itself (as opposed to an undivided share in the bulk) passes to the buyer.

44-159

The effect of r.5(4) may be illustrated as follows: if in the above example the seller has agreed to sell the 100 tons to the buyer under two or more separate contracts, the remaining wheat becomes ascertained by “consolidation” ⁶⁹¹ and the property can pass under r.5(4) even though no portion of it has been appropriated to any particular contract. The same result ensues even if the contracts have been made with different sellers, or different buyers, but have become vested in a single buyer.

Undivided shares in goods forming part of a bulk

44-160

Subsections (1) and (2) of s.20A provide:

“(1)

This section applies to a contract for the sale of a specified quantity of unascertained goods if the following conditions are met—

(a)

the goods or some of them form part of a bulk which is identified either in the contract or by subsequent agreement between the parties; and the buyer has paid the price for some or all the goods which are the subject of the contract and which form part of the bulk.

(b)

(2)

Where this section applies, then (unless the parties agree otherwise), as soon as the conditions specified in paragraphs (a) and (b) of subs.(1) above are met or at such later time as the parties may agree—

(a) property in an undivided share in the bulk is transferred to the buyer, and the buyer becomes an owner in common of the bulk.”

(b)

Section 20A was inserted into the Act by the Sale of Goods (Amendment) Act 1995.⁶⁹² It qualifies s.16 of the Act⁶⁹³ which provides that property cannot pass in the case of a contract for the sale of unascertained goods unless and until the goods are ascertained. Previously, if there was a contract for the sale of a quantity of unascertained goods forming part of an identified bulk, no property or interest in the goods would pass to the buyer unless and until the goods were ascertained either by being separated from the bulk or by process of “exhaustion” or “consolidation”.⁶⁹⁴ In the event of the insolvency of the seller the buyer could assert no proprietary claim to the goods while still in bulk even though the purchase price had been paid. The object of s.20A is (inter alia)⁶⁹⁵ to enable a pre-paying buyer to assert such a claim by transferring to him the property in an undivided share of the bulk. The conditions set out in subs.(1) must, however, be satisfied.

Requirements for passing of property in undivided share

44-161

The first requirement of subs.(1) is that there should be “a contract for the sale of a specified quantity of unascertained goods”. The quantity may be specified by number, weight, measurement or any other means but cannot be wholly indefinite.⁶⁹⁶ The goods must be unascertained goods, for example, 100 tons of wheat part of a larger quantity currently lying in a designated warehouse, and not specific goods⁶⁹⁷ (as defined in s.61(1) of the Act).

44-162

The second requirement is that the goods or some of them form part of a bulk. "Bulk" is defined by s.61(1) to mean "a mass or collection of goods of the same kind which—(a) is contained in a defined space or area, and (b) is such that any goods in the bulk are interchangeable with any other goods therein of the same number or quantity". In addition to the obvious examples of a warehouse, store, hopper, hold or tank, the words "in a defined space or area" will include a ship, vehicle or aircraft, or even a discrete stack or pile.⁶⁹⁸ It does not seem necessary that the goods in the bulk are interchangeable in the sense of being identical provided that they are regarded as equivalent to each other under the contract or by trade practice.⁶⁹⁹ It would appear to be immaterial that the extent of the bulk is unknown⁷⁰⁰ or that it is not in existence at the time of the sale or that the goods comprised in the bulk are constantly changing.⁷⁰¹ But, since the goods agreed to be sold, or some of them, must form part of the bulk it is clear that there must be attribution of those goods to the bulk.

44-163

The third requirement is that the bulk must be identified either in the contract or by agreement of the parties. It must be certain from which bulk the goods are to come and this must be established by agreement: a unilateral designation by one party will not suffice unless it is agreed or assented to by the other.⁷⁰²

44-165

The fourth requirement is that the buyer must have paid the price for some or all of the goods which are the subject of the contract and which form part of the bulk. Presumably any recognised form of payment, e.g. by bill of exchange or cheque, will suffice.⁷⁰³

44-166

It is open to the parties to agree that no undivided share is to be transferred to the buyer, and it may be assumed that they can do so expressly or by implication, for example, by reserving the right of disposal against payment in full of the price.⁷⁰⁴ They may also agree that an undivided share is to be transferred to the buyer at some time later than that specified in subs.(2). But, in the absence of any such agreement, the buyer acquires an undivided share in the bulk and becomes an owner in common of the bulk as soon as these conditions are satisfied. It is important, however, to note that what is transferred to the buyer by s.20A is the property in an undivided share in the bulk. The buyer does not become the sole owner of the goods themselves. The goods, while in bulk, remain unascertained and s.16 still governs the transfer of the property in those goods. They must therefore become ascertained (normally by being physically separated from the bulk)⁷⁰⁵ before the property can pass. Once they have become ascertained, the sole property in the goods themselves will pass to the buyer at such time as the parties intend it to be transferred⁷⁰⁶ having regard, in appropriate cases, to s.18 r.5.

Extent of the undivided share

44-167

Subsections (3) to (6) of s.20A deal with the extent of the buyer's undivided share:

"(3)

Subject to subs.(4) below, for the purposes of this section, the undivided share of a buyer in a bulk at any time shall be such share as the quantity of goods paid for and due to buyer out of the bulk bears to the quantity of goods in the bulk at that time.

(4)

Where the aggregate of the undivided shares of buyers in a bulk determined under subs.(3) above would at any time exceed the whole of the bulk at that time, the undivided share in the bulk of each buyer shall be reduced proportionately so that the aggregate of the undivided shares is equal to the whole bulk.

(5)

Where a buyer has paid the price for only some of the goods due to him out of a bulk, any delivery ⁷⁰⁷ to the buyer out of the bulk shall, for the purposes of this section, be ascribed in the first place to the goods in respect of which payment has been made.

(6)

For the purposes of this section payment of part of the price for any goods shall be treated as payment for a corresponding part of the goods.”

Although the buyer becomes owner in common with others of the entire bulk, only a proportionate share of the bulk is attributed to him. The basic rule (set out in subs.(3)) is that the extent of his undivided share in the bulk at any time is such share as the quantity of goods paid for and due to him out of the bulk bears to quantity of goods in the bulk at that time, e.g. if he has agreed to buy and has paid for 100 tons out of a bulk consisting of 1000 tons, there is transferred to him the property in an undivided share of one-tenth of the 1000 tons. Subsection (4) deals with the question of what happens if the aggregate of the undivided shares of buyers in the bulk exceeds the bulk at that time, for example, if 100 tons have been sold to each of ten buyers from a bulk believed to contain 1000 tons, but the bulk is subsequently reduced by theft or wastage to 800 tons or the seller or another person wrongfully removes 200 tons from that bulk. In that case, the undivided share of each buyer in the remaining 800 tons is reduced proportionately to one-tenth of 800 tons. Reduction also occurs where a co-owning buyer has taken delivery of the goods due to him under his contract but in excess of his undivided share. ⁷⁰⁸ It is, however, doubtful whether subs.(4) applies where the seller purports to sell more than the quantity of goods in the bulk, for example, where he sells to each of three buyers consecutively 500 tons from a bulk which consists only of 1000 tons. ⁷⁰⁹ In such a case, it is probable that the last buyer will get nothing as the seller will by then have nothing left to sell. ⁷¹⁰ The section does not deal with the converse case where the aggregate of the undivided shares is less than the whole of the bulk at that time, for instance, where the seller sells 100 tons to each of ten buyers from a bulk believed to consist of 1000 tons but which actually consists of 1100 tons, or where 100 tons are added by the seller to the bulk. In such a case each buyer becomes (together with the seller) a co-owner of the entire 1100 tons and there is transferred to him an undivided share of oneeleventh of the bulk of 1100 tons. The section also does not deal with the case where the quantity of goods in the bulk is unknown: presumably the calculation must then be done on the basis of an estimate.

Deemed consent by owner to dealings in bulk goods

44-168

Section 20B supplements s.20A and provides that each co-owner of the bulk is deemed to have consented to deliveries to any other co-owner of the quantity due to the latter under his contract ⁷¹¹ and is deemed to have consented to any dealing with or removal, delivery or disposal of the goods in the bulk by another co-owner (including the seller) falling within the latter's undivided share at the time. ⁷¹² This is a useful provision ⁷¹³ having regard to the fact that the relationship between a buyer's undivided share and his contractual entitlement may be uncertain and may vary from time to time. Section 20B may therefore protect third parties who purchase goods from co-owning buyers, and liquidators and receivers who release goods to co-owning buyers in reliance on the deemed consent. ⁷¹⁴ The section also contains other savings, ⁷¹⁵ and in particular preserves the rights of any buyer under his contract. ⁷¹⁶

Situations outside s.20A

44-169

A contract for the sale of specific goods falls outside s.20A and by s.61(1) “specific goods” includes an undivided share, specified as a fraction or percentage, of a bulk which is identified and agreed on at the time a contract of sale is made. Thus a contract for the sale of a quarter share in a named racehorse, or a contract for the sale of a fraction (“one-half”) or percentage (“50 per cent”)—as opposed to a specified quantity (“100 tons”)—of a larger quantity of wheat currently lying in a designated warehouse, will be not be a contract for the sale of a specified quantity of unascertained goods falling within s.20A but one for the sale of specific goods. Nevertheless, while the goods still form part of the bulk, the result at common law is probably the same: property in an undivided share in the bulk is transferred to the buyer and he becomes an owner in common of the bulk. ⁷¹⁷ This proprietary interest will pass when the parties intend it to pass, ⁷¹⁸ which may be before or at the time or after the price is paid.

44-170

Where one or more of the other conditions specified in subs.(1) of s.20A is not satisfied, for example, where the buyer had not paid the price for any of the goods comprised in the contract, ⁷¹⁹ or where the buyer has paid the price for only some of the goods, then as regards those goods for which no payment has been made, s.20A will not apply. It is also open to the parties to exclude by agreement the application of s.20A. ⁷²⁰ In those cases, there may be exceptional situations where property in an undivided share will pass to the buyer while the goods are still in bulk. ⁷²¹ But, as a normal rule, this will not be so and the seller will remain the sole owner of the goods unless and until they have become ascertained by being separated from the bulk ⁷²² and have been appropriated to the contract in accordance with s.18 r.5.

Seller's right of disposal

44-171

Section 19(1) provides as follows:

“Where there is a contract for the sale of specific goods or where goods are subsequently appropriated to the contract, the seller may, by the terms of the contract or appropriation, reserve the right of disposal of the goods until certain conditions are fulfilled; and in such a case, notwithstanding the delivery of the goods to the buyer, or to a carrier or other bailee ... for the purpose of transmission to the buyer, the property in the goods does not pass to the buyer until the conditions imposed by the seller are fulfilled.”

Section 19(1) states the general rule that it is open to the seller to reserve to himself the right of disposal, i.e. retain property in the goods, until a specified condition is fulfilled—usually payment of the price. ⁷²³ If he does this, the property does not pass until that condition is fulfilled, even though the goods are delivered to the buyer or to a carrier or other bailee for the purpose of transmission to the buyer; in other words, delivery to a carrier does not, in this instance, amount to an unconditional appropriation so as to pass the property under s.18 r.5. This point may be illustrated by reference to what is the normal rule in CIF contracts. ⁷²⁴ There the property in the goods does not usually pass upon shipment, nor even upon notice of appropriation, but only when the seller transfers the documents against payment or securing of the price.

44-172

The remaining subsections consist of particular applications of the general rule stated in s.19(1) and are as follows:

“(2)

Where goods are shipped, and by the bill of lading the goods are deliverable to the order of the seller or his agent, the seller is prima facie deemed to reserve the right of disposal. ⁷²⁵

(3)

Where the seller of goods draws on the buyer for the price, and transmits the bill of exchange and bill of lading to the buyer together to secure acceptance or payment of the bill of exchange, the buyer is bound to return the bill of lading if he does not honour the bill of exchange, and if he wrongfully retains the bill of lading the property in the goods does not pass to him.” ⁷²⁶

Section 19(2) states that there is a presumption in favour of the reservation of the right of disposal where by the bill of lading the goods are deliverable to the order of the seller or his agent. ⁷²⁷ It must be added that if the bill of lading is made out to the order of the buyer or his agent it does not necessarily follow that the property in the goods is transferred when they are shipped. If, for instance, the seller retains the bill of lading this may be “inconsistent with an intention to pass the property” ⁷²⁸ so as to prevent the property from passing even though the bill of lading is taken in the buyer’s name. The result of s.19(2) seems to be that where goods are shipped under a bill of lading the presumption is that the property does not pass until the bill is transferred unconditionally to the buyer.

44-173

Section 19(3) in the circumstances to which it applies makes the passing of the property by the transfer of the bill of lading conditional on the bill of exchange being honoured by the buyer. As in s.19(1), the protection given to the seller is limited: so that if the buyer, without honouring the bill of exchange, transfers the bill of lading to a bona fide third party, the latter may by statute acquire a good title. ⁷²⁹

“Romalpa” clauses: retention of title ⁷³⁰

44-174

⚠ Reservation of the right of disposal of goods greatly increased in importance as the result of the decision in Aluminium Industrie Vaassen BV v Romalpa Aluminium Ltd ⁷³¹ where the Court of Appeal upheld, as against a receiver of the buyer company, a clause by which (inter alia) the seller retained title to the goods sold until all sums owing from the buyer were paid. This case was distinguished in Re Bond Worth Ltd, ⁷³² where the clause in question retained merely “equitable and beneficial” (and not legal) ownership; it was held to create a charge on the assets of the buyer company within s.95(2) of the Companies Act 1948 ⁷³³ and to require registration. However, if the seller retains legal ownership of the goods agreed to be sold until their price is paid, no question of any charge by the buyer company requiring registration under s.860 of the Companies Act 2006 ⁷³⁴ can arise, because a company can create a charge only on its own property, and if it never acquired property in the goods it cannot charge them. ⁷³⁵ The fact that the buyer is expressly or impliedly ⁷³⁶ entitled to consume the goods in manufacture or to resell them in the ordinary course of business will not invalidate the seller’s retention of ownership until such time as the goods are so consumed or sold. ⁷³⁷ ⚠ Nor will the addition of words which entitle the seller to retake possession of the goods in which he retains title upon certain contingencies, e.g. the insolvency of the buyer company, create a registrable charge, ⁷³⁸ since the seller retains property in the goods and his right to recover the seller’s right to possession is a right against his own goods. ⁷³⁹ In the Romalpa case, it was conceded that, on the wording of the clause, the buyer held the goods until payment as bailee for the seller. ⁷⁴⁰ But in subsequent cases, the courts have found it unnecessary to decide whether the relationship between seller and buyer in relation to the goods is one of bailor or bailee ⁷⁴¹ or whether, if the buyer resells the goods, he does so as agent of the seller. ⁷⁴² Such considerations are not relevant to the efficacy of the seller's retention of title to the goods, but only (if at all) to the question of accountability of the buyer for the proceeds of sale. ⁷⁴³

Right to consume before property has passed

44-174A

⚠ If the contract provides for possession of goods to be given, coupled with a legal entitlement to consume them before the property in them is transferred upon payment, then, according to the Supreme Court in PST Energy 7 Shipping LLC v OW Bunker Malta Ltd ⁷⁴⁴ ⚠ the contract is not one of sale but is sui generis as a bailment coupled with a licence to consume the goods. Since almost all retention of title clauses allow the buyer to use or resell the goods before property in them has passed, this means that a very large number of contracts with reservation of title clauses will no longer be contracts of sale within the meaning of the Sale of Goods Act.

Sui generis supply contracts analogous to contracts for the sale of goods

44-174B

⚠ A consequence of the conclusion in PST Energy 7 Shipping LLC is that a body of common law parallel to the Sale of Goods Act will have to be elaborated to deal with sui generis supply contracts. Although the Court of Appeal was clear that the incidents of the sui generis contract should track those of a sale of goods contract, ⁷⁴⁵ ⚠ it cannot be assumed that the entire Sale of Goods Act can be applied by analogy to sui generis contracts. ⁷⁴⁶ ⚠ The Supreme Court gave consideration to an obligation comparable to the right to sell goods that is the equivalent of s.12 of the Act. However, the judge at first instance saw no need for a warranty of quiet possession akin to the one that exists for sale of goods contracts in s.12(2)(b). ⁷⁴⁷ ⚠ The first reason given was that the recipient of the goods obtained sufficient protection from the implied term of lawful permission to use or consume. The second reason was that the warranty of quiet possession in sale of goods contracts was concerned with events after the passing of property. However, neither reason seems compelling and there may be a practical need for such a warranty. It is likely that equivalent common law rules should apply to such sui generis contracts in relation to matters such as delivery (including time and quantity of delivery and delivery by instalments) payment and quality (although, on a strict view, the statutory provisions which modify the common law rules on merchantable quality, etc. would not apply). The potential applicability of the statutory exceptions to the nemo dat rule is complex. The supplier of goods under a sui generis contract is not a "seller" for the purposes of s.24, nor is the recipient a "buyer" of goods for the purpose of s.25. However, it is likely that the receipt of goods with a licence to use or consume them should be regarded as a disposition for the purposes of these sections. The definition of a mercantile agent in s.1(1) of the Factors Act 1889 may be broad enough to capture a person who buys and resells under a sui generis supply contract, given that such contracts are "in commercial terms" regarded as contracts for the sale of goods ⁷⁴⁸ ⚠ and that the Factors Act is not confined to sale of goods contracts as these are defined in the Sale of Goods Act. Thus the provisions of s.2(1) of the Factors Act may apply. By contrast, certain provisions of the Sale of Goods Act are statutory inventions and did not codify existing common law. Such sections cannot apply by analogy at common law. For example, it is possible, though perhaps unlikely, that a bulk may consist of goods supplied to two or more recipients under sui generis supply contracts and that the bulk has not been exhausted by the time that one or more recipients has paid in full. Section 20A, which is not declaratory of the common law, cannot apply to such contracts by analogy. Similarly, ss.15A and 30(2A) cannot apply.

44-175

⚠ Although certain retention of title clauses retain ownership only in such goods as have not been paid for by the buyer, others go further and retain ownership until all goods comprised in the same invoice ⁷⁴⁹ ⚠ or in the same contract ⁷⁵⁰ ⚠ have been paid for, or until all accounts owing by the buyer have been settled. ⁷⁵¹ ⚠ There is no reason, under s.19(1) of the 1979 Act, why the seller should not reserve the right of disposal of the goods on any terms that he thinks fit, ⁷⁵² ⚠ although in the case of an “all accounts” clause this may in practice mean that property will never pass between seller and buyer. In Clough Mill Ltd v Martin ⁷⁵³ ⚠ the Court of Appeal upheld the retention of title in a clause which retained ownership until all goods comprised in the same contract were paid for, but the court discussed ⁷⁵⁴ ⚠ the problems that would arise if goods that had already been paid for (but in which the property had not yet passed) were repossessed and sold by the seller: whether account must be taken of the part payment already received, and whether the seller would be accountable to the buyer for the proceeds of sale once full payment was achieved. In Armour v Thyssen Edelstahlwerke AG ⁷⁵⁵ ⚠ (where an “all accounts” clause was upheld) the House of Lords did not find it necessary to form a concluded view as to the solution of these problems. ⁷⁵⁶ ⚠

Products

44-176

If goods which are the subject of a retention of title provision are used by the buyer in his manufacturing process to make other products or are incorporated in other goods owned by the buyer, the seller may lose his title to the goods. In Borden (UK) Ltd v Scottish Timber Products Ltd ⁷⁵⁷ resin supplied by the seller was used by the buyer company in the manufacture of chipboard. The Court of Appeal held that, once the resin had lost its identity in the chipboard, it ceased to exist and with it the seller's title thereto; the resin could not be traced into the chipboard or the proceeds of its sale, nor could the seller claim any interest in or charge over the chipboard. In Re Peachdart Ltd, ⁷⁵⁸ where leather supplied by the seller was used by the buyer company to manufacture handbags, Vinelott J. held that, once a piece of leather had been appropriated to be manufactured into a handbag and work had started on it, it ceased to be the exclusive property of the seller. ⁷⁵⁹ And in Clough Mill Ltd v Martin, ⁷⁶⁰ Robert Goff L.J. stated ⁷⁶¹ that: “where A's material is lawfully used by B to create new goods, whether or not B incorporates other material of his own, the property in the new goods will generally vest in B, at least where the goods are not reducible to the original materials”. On the other hand, in Hendy Lennox (Industrial Engines) Ltd v Grahame Puttick Ltd ⁷⁶² diesel engines supplied by the seller were incorporated by the buyer company into diesel generating sets. The incorporation did not alter or destroy the substance or an engine, and it could be removed from the set within several hours, Staughton J. held that the proprietary rights of the seller were not affected by the incorporation. These cases move into very difficult and uncertain areas of law, ⁷⁶³ in particular where the goods remain identifiable but have, to a greater or less extent, been worked upon by the buyer. ⁷⁶⁴

44-177

“Romalpa” clauses sometimes expressly provide that ownership of products manufactured from goods supplied subject to the seller's retention of title are to vest in the seller, or that the seller is to acquire ownership of any articles in which such goods are incorporated. But there is considerable doubt as to the efficacy of such provisions. In the Borden case (see above) it was stated ⁷⁶⁵ that, had any interest been granted to the seller in the chipboard or the proceeds of its sale, such interest would have been agreed to be granted and must have been created by the buyer company as security for debts owed to the seller and be registrable as a charge. ⁷⁶⁶ In Re Peachdart Ltd (see above), ⁷⁶⁷ a provision that “the relationship of the buyer to the seller shall be fiduciary in respect ... of other goods in which [the contract goods] are incorporated or used” was held to create a charge over completed and uncompleted handbags manufactured by the buyer company from the leather supplied. In Clough Mill Ltd v Martin, ⁷⁶⁸ however, where yarn was supplied to be manufactured by the buyer company into fabric, Robert Goff and Oliver L.JJ. ⁷⁶⁹ saw no objection in principle to a provision whereby property in any new product created by manufacture should ipso facto vest in the seller, ⁷⁷⁰ but the Court of Appeal was unanimous in holding ⁷⁷¹ that the clause in that case (which vested property in the products in the seller until payment had been made) could not be read literally so as to produce the result of a “windfall” to the seller of the full value of the new product, and so gave rise to a charge in favour of the seller.

Proceeds of sale

44-178

A mere reservation of title provision would not appear to impose any duty on the buyer to account for the proceeds of sale of the goods in which title is reserved. ⁷⁷² Even if the clause further provides that the buyer holds the goods until payment as bailee or sells the goods as agent of the seller, ⁷⁷³ he does not necessarily hold or sell them in a fiduciary capacity, ⁷⁷⁴ since not all bailees or agents are fiduciaries for their bailors or principals. ⁷⁷⁵ But provision is commonly found in “Romalpa” clauses that the buyer is to hold the proceeds of sale on trust or in a fiduciary capacity for the seller. The object is to enable the seller to trace the proceeds of sale in accordance with the principles in Re Hallett's Estate ⁷⁷⁶ to the exclusion of other creditors of the buyer. In Re Bond Worth Ltd, ⁷⁷⁷ however, it was pointed out that there is high authority ⁷⁷⁸ for the view that, if the buyer is not bound to keep the proceeds of sale separately, but is entitled to mix them with his own money and deal with them as he pleases, and when called upon to hand over an equivalent sum of money, then he is not a trustee of the proceeds but merely a debtor. A “Romalpa” clause should therefore provide that the proceeds of sale are to be placed in a separate account so as to be identifiable as being in the beneficial ownership of the seller. Nevertheless, even in such a case, it is arguable that if the parties never intended that the entire proceeds of sale (including the buyer's profit) ⁷⁷⁹ could be claimed by the seller, but that the true intention was that the proceeds were to be appropriated by the buyer to satisfy pro tanto and to be security for his debt to the seller this is inconsistent with an intention that the buyer sells as agent for the seller. ⁷⁸⁰ If the intention was that a charge over the proceeds would thus be created ⁷⁸¹ by the buyer company, ⁷⁸² it would fall within s.860(7) of the Companies Act 2006. ⁷⁸³ On the other hand, in Associated Alloys Pty Ltd v CAN001 452 106 Pty Ltd (In Liquidation) ⁷⁸⁴ the High Court of Australia upheld ⁷⁸⁵ a clause which required the buyer company to hold on trust for the seller such part of the proceeds of sale as were equal to the amount owing by the buyer at the time of receipt of the proceeds. The High Court held that there was an implied term in the contract that, upon receipt of the relevant proceeds, the obligation in debt of the buyer to the seller was discharged. The clause did not therefore, create any “charge” over the proceeds to secure a debt: it was simply an agreement to constitute a trust of after-acquired property, which did not require registration.

Claims against sub-purchasers

44-179

A seller may be able to claim title to goods in the possession of a sub-purchaser if the sale and sub-sale are both made subject to a retention of title provision. ⁷⁸⁶ Otherwise title of bona fide purchasers from the buyer of goods subject to a “Romalpa” clause is not ordinarily ⁷⁸⁷ affected by the existence of the clause. ⁷⁸⁸ However, “Romalpa” clauses sometimes contain a provision (which may take various forms) whereby any claim to the purchase price of the goods resold by the buyer to sub-purchasers is to vest in ⁷⁸⁹ or to be transferred to the seller. Again, however, it is arguable that the parties never intended that the entire resale price should pass to the seller, but that the right is granted as security and so creates a charge on the book debts of the buyer company. ⁷⁹⁰ In the Romalpa case ⁷⁹¹ itself, a provision that the buyer company was, if the seller so required, to “hand over” to the seller claims that it had against sub-purchasers was held not to be a present equitable assignment of those claims. But if the clause is construed as an agreement by the buyer company to assign future choses in action, namely, future debts owed by sub-purchasers to the buyer up to the amount of outstanding indebtedness of the buyer to the seller, then (depending on its wording) it may likewise be held to be a charge created by the buyer company on its book debts. ⁷⁹² In the event that it is to be construed as an absolute assignment, ⁷⁹³ vesting the buyer's claim to the sub-sale price unconditionally in the seller, then it will not create a charge, but problems of priority ⁷⁹⁴ may arise as between the seller and other assignees, e.g. where the buyer has factored the debts. ⁷⁹⁵

Building contracts ⁷⁹⁶

44-180

Goods may be supplied by a sub-contractor to the main contractor subject to a “Romalpa” clause, and delivered to the building site. Before the goods are affixed to the building, ⁷⁹⁷ the main contractor becomes insolvent and the sub-contractor seeks to recover the unfixed goods from the employer. In some cases the sub-contractor's claim may fail because the main contractor is a “buyer in possession” and can therefore pass a good title to the employer under s.25 of the 1979 Act. ⁷⁹⁸ But in other cases it will succeed, either because the contract between the sub-contractor and the main contractor is not one of sale but for work and materials, ⁷⁹⁹ or because there is no sufficient “sale, pledge or other disposition of the goods” by the main contractor to the employer to enable the latter to rely on s.25, ⁸⁰⁰ or because the employer had notice of the terms of the sub-contract including the “Romalpa” clause. ⁸⁰¹

Fixtures

44-181

Where goods sold subject to “Romalpa” clause are so attached to land as to become fixtures, the seller's retention of title to the goods will normally ⁸⁰² be ineffective, for example, against a mortgagee ⁸⁰³ or landlord ⁸⁰⁴ of the buyer. The goods, having become part of the realty, are irrecoverable by the seller. ⁸⁰⁵

Non-corporate buyers

44-182

Where the buyer is not a company, a “Romalpa” clause cannot be attacked on the ground that it creates a charge which requires to be registered under s.860 of the Companies Act 2006, ⁸⁰⁶ since that provision applies only to companies. But problems relating to the scope and interpretation of the clause will nevertheless remain. The “reputed ownership” provision of the Bankruptcy Act 1914 has now been repealed. ⁸⁰⁷ However, there are certain further statutes that have to be taken into account where the buyer is unincorporated. First there are the Bills of Sales Acts 1878 and 1882. ⁸⁰⁸ A mere reservation of title clause will not be affected by these Acts, ⁸⁰⁹ although an extension of the clause to products manufactured with the goods supplied may come within their scope. ⁸¹⁰ Secondly, a general assignment by the buyer to the seller of debts due to the buyer from sub-purchasers of the goods may be invalidated by s.344 of the Insolvency Act 1986 ⁸¹¹ unless the assignment has been registered ⁸¹² under the Bills of Sale Act 1878.

Disadvantages of “Romalpa” clauses

44-183

⚠ The presence of a “Romalpa” clause takes away entitlement to bad debt relief in respect of value added tax ⁸¹³ and, by reason of the fact that the property in the goods has not passed to the buyer, unless it is expressly stipulated to the contrary and the goods will continue to be at the seller's risk in the hands of the buyer. ⁸¹⁴ It had been held ⁸¹⁵ ⚠ that an action for the price would not be available unless either s.49(1) or s.49(2) were satisfied and that accordingly the presence of a “Romalpa” clause, which prevented property from passing to the buyer, would ordinarily mean that the seller could not maintain an action for the price. In PST Energy 7 Shipping LLC v OW Bunker Malta Ltd ⁸¹⁶ ⚠ the Supreme Court held that the bunker supply contract fell outside the Sale of Goods Act and accordingly it was not necessary to decide whether an action for the price under the Act would have been maintainable in the circumstances. However, the Supreme Court indicated, obiter, that the price would have been recoverable on the date stated by virtue of the contract's express terms providing the goods had been delivered, indicating that they would have overruled the decision of the Court of Appeal in Caterpillar on this point.⁸¹⁷  A careful assessment of the advantages and disadvantages of such a clause should therefore be made, in particular since the practical difficulties of identifying the goods sold and not paid for—even if still in the possession of the buyer, and of tracing into a mixed fund in the hands of a liquidator or receiver (possibly in competition with other suppliers under “Romalpa” clauses), may be considerable.

Administration ⁸¹⁸

44-184

The ability of the seller to enforce a “Romalpa” clause, or indeed any other agreement for the sale of goods to a company by which the right of disposal is reserved until payment of the price,⁸¹⁹ will be affected once an administration application has been made⁸²⁰ or during the period in which a company is in administration.⁸²¹ No step may be taken to repossess the goods except with the consent of the administrator or permission of the court.⁸²² Moreover, the administrator is empowered, if he obtains an order of the court, to overreach the rights of the seller by disposing of the goods as if ownership were vested in the company⁸²³ and applying the net proceeds of the disposal towards the sums payable under the agreement.⁸²⁴

Voluntary arrangements

44-185

A similar temporary moratorium is available to a company against repossession of the goods by the seller where the directors propose a voluntary arrangement under Pt I of the Insolvency Act 1986.⁸²⁵ This facility is, however, restricted to small companies, and certain companies are excluded.⁸²⁶

Receivership

44-186

Where goods are supplied on credit to a company subject to a retention of title clause, and the company goes into receivership, the court will not grant an injunction to restrain the receivers from dealing with the goods if they give an undertaking to pay for such of the goods as are used or sold.⁸²⁷ But the power of a floating charge holder to appoint a receiver has been largely taken away by s.72A of the Insolvency Act 1986.⁸²⁸

⁶¹⁰. Lawson (1949) 65 L.Q.R. 352; Battersby and Preston (1972) 35 M.L.R. 268; Ho [1997] C.L.J. 571; Battersby [2001] J.B.L. 1.

⁶¹¹. Defined s.61(1), see above, para.44-015.

⁶¹². See below, para.44-160.

⁶¹³. Karlshamns Oljefabriker v Eastport Navigation Corp (The Elafi) [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 679, 683.

⁶¹⁴. See s.17, see below, para.44-134.

⁶¹⁵. See above, para.44-042.

⁶¹⁶. See Austin v Craven (1812) 4 Taunt. 644; Hayward Bros v Daniel (1904) 91 L.T. 319.

- 617. See Hayman v M'Lintock, 1907 S.C. 936; Healy v Howlett & Sons [1917] 1 K.B. 337; Laurie & Morewood v Dudin & Sons [1926] 1 K.B. 223; Kursell v Timber Operators and Contractors Ltd [1927] 1 K.B. 298; National Coal Board v Gamble [1959] 1 Q.B. 11; Preston v Albuery [1964] 2 Q.B. 796; Re Stapylton Fletcher Ltd [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1181; see below, para.44-160.
- 618. See above, para.44-042. See also s.18 r.5(1), below, para.44-149.
- 619. Wait and James v Midland Bank (1926) 31 Com. Cas. 172; Karlshamns Oljefabriker v Eastport Navigation Corp (The Elafi) [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 679; s.18 r.5(3); see below, para.44-158.
- 620. Karlshamns Oljefabriker v Eastport Navigation Corp (The Elafi), see above. See also, para. 44-159, below.
- 621. cf. Re Stapylton Fletcher Ltd [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1181.
- 622. Gillett v Hill (1834) 2 C. & M. 530, 535; R. v Tideswell [1905] 2 K.B. 273; Healy v Howlett & Sons [1917] 1 K.B. 336; Laurie & Morewood v Dudin & Sons [1926] 1 K.B. 223; National Coal Board v Gamble [1959] 1 Q.B. 11; Preston v Albuery [1964] 2 Q.B. 796; Re London Wine Shippers Ltd [1986] P.C.C. 121.
- 623. Re Wait [1927] 1 Ch. 606, 623, 634, 636; Re London Wine Shippers Ltd, above; Re Goldcorp Exchange Ltd [1995] 1 A.C. 74. Contrast International Finance Corp v DSNL Offshore Ltd [2005] EWHC 1844 (Comm), [2007] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 305 at [60] (equitable lien).
- 624. Stonard v Dunkin (1810) 2 Camp. 344; Hawes v Watson (1824) 2 B. & C. 540; Gillett v Hill (1834) 2 C. & M. 530, 535; Woodley v Coventry (1863) 2 H. & C. 164; Knights v Wiffen (1870) L.R. 5 Q.B. 660; Simm v Anglo-American Telegraph Co (1879) 5 Q.B.D. 188, 215; Contrast Re London Wine Shippers Ltd (1886) P.C.C. 121; Re Goldcorp Exchange Ltd [1995] 1 A.C. 74.
- 625. s.1(1).
- 626. See below, para.44-160.
- 627. See McEntire v Crossley Bros Ltd [1895] A.C. 457; Omstein v Alexandra Furnishing Co (1895) 12 T.L.R. 128; Re Shipton, Anderson & Co [1915] 3 K.B. 676; Re Anchor Line (Henderson Bros) Ltd [1937] Ch.1; Karlshamns Oljefabriker v Eastport Navigation Corp (The Elafi) [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 679 (property passed though no appropriation to specific contracts). Special rules apply where the sale is on CIF, FOB, "ex ship", f.o.r., etc. terms: see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 18–252, 19–099, 20–076, 21–003, 21–011, 21–013, 21–021, 21–044, 21–103.
- 628. Tarling v Baxter (1827) 6 B. & C. 360; Gilmour v Supple (1858) 11 Moore P.C. 551, 556; Seath v Moore (1886) 11 App. Cas. 350, 370. But see RV Ward Ltd v Bignall [1967] 1 Q.B. 534, 545; "in modern times very little is needed to give rise to the inference that the property in specific goods is to pass only on delivery or payment". For such a case, see Michael Gerson (Leasing) Ltd v Williamson [2001] Q.B. 514. See also Orix Australia Corp Ltd v Peter Donnelly Automotive Pty Ltd [2007] NSWSC 977.
- 629. [1948] 2 K.B. 164.
- 630. Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.2(3), (5), 19. The alternative view (based on Varley v Whipp [1900] 1 Q.B. 513, 517; Ollett v Jordan [1918] 2 K.B. 41, 45; and Leaf v International Galleries [1950] 2 K.B. 86, 89–90) that "unconditional" means "subject to no essential undertaking" cannot be supported: see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 5–019–5–020. See also Classic Automobiles of London v Aura Holdings Inc [1997] EWCA Civ 2834.
- 631. Defined in s.61(1), see above, para.44-015.
- 632. [1927] 1 K.B. 298.

- 633. [1927] 1 K.B. 298 at 311. See also at 314.
- 634. 1987 Act s.61(5). See Underwood Ltd v Burgh Castle Brick and Cement Syndicate [1922] 1 K.B. 343, 345; Pritchett & Gold and Electric Power Storage Co Ltd v Currie [1916] 1 Ch. 515; Philip Head & Sons Ltd v Showfronts Ltd [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 140; Kulkarni v Manor Credit (Davenham) Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 69, [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 431 at [24].
- 635. [1922] 1 K.B. 243.
- 636. See above, para.44-140.
- 637. See (before the 1893 Act) Rugg v Minett (1809) 11 East 210; Acraman v Morice (1849) 8 C.B. 449. See also Underwood v Burgh Castle Brick and Cement Syndicate [1922] 1 K.B. 343.
- 638. Kursell v Timber Operators and Contractors Ltd [1927] 1 K.B. 298; see above, para.44-134.
- 639. Pritchett and Gold and Electrical Power Storage Co Ltd v Currie [1916] 1 Ch. 515; Jerome v Clements Motor Sales Ltd, 15 D.L.R. (2d) 689 (1958); Hartley v Saunders 33 D.L.R. (2d) 638 (1962); Anderson v Ryan [1967] 1 I.R. 34, 37.
- 640. See Zagury v Furnell (1809) 2 Camp. 240: goods to be counted; Hanson v Meyer (1805) 6 East 614: goods to be weighed; Logan v Le Mesurier (1847) 6 Moo. P.C. 116: goods to be measured.
- 641. In limiting the rule to acts to be done by the seller, the Act adopted the view taken in Turley v Bates (1863) 2 H. & C. 200. There weighing was to be done by the buyer, and it was held that the passing of the property was not suspended. But see s.17.
- 642. [1926] A.C. 77 (though not a case of specific goods).
- 643. At 79.
- 644. See Martineau v Kitching (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 436, 449; Anderson v Morice (1874) L.R. 10 C.P. 58. See also Howes v Watson (1842) 2 B. & C. 243; Kershaw v Ogden (1865) 3 H. & C. 717; R. v Tideswell [1905] 2 K.B. 273, 277.
- 645. This rule applies only if it is the buyer who retains. See Re Ferrier [1944] Ch. 295 (property did not pass because goods retained by buyer's execution creditors). But cf. Genn v Winkel (1912) 107 L.T. 434.
- 646. See Berry v Star Brush Co (1915) 31 T.L.R. 603. On the contents of the notice, see Atari Corp (UK) Ltd v Electronic Boutiques Stores (UK) Ltd [1998] Q.B. 539.
- 647. See Moss v Sweet (1851) 16 Q.B. 493; Poole v Smith's Car Sales (Balham) Ltd [1962] 1 W.L.R. 744. But the transaction does not become a sale if the goods perish in the bailee's possession without his fault: Elphick v Barnes (1880) 5 C.P.D. 321. cf. Poole v Smith's Car Sales (Balham) Ltd, above. On return of the goods in a damaged condition, see below, para.44-290; cf. Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 5-055, 5-056.
- 648. 1987 Act s.59.
- 649. See Head v Tattersall (1871) L.R. 7 Ex. 7.
- 650. [1897] 1 Q.B. 291. Followed in London Jewellers Ltd v Attenborough [1934] 2 K.B. 206, where an agent to sell was treated as a buyer; see per Scrutton L.J. at 214: the section "appears to contemplate that the person who has goods delivered to him on approval becomes a buyer to whom the property passes". cf. Genn v Winkel (1912) 107 L.T. 434.
- 651. Further, a person who takes goods on sale or return is not in possession under an agreement to buy for the purposes of s.25: see Edwards v Vaughan (1910) 26 T.L.R. 545, 546. Therefore he cannot pass a good title to a third party. But a third party is protected if the contract is one of mercantile agency within the Factors Act 1889: see Weiner v Harris [1910] 1 K.B. 285; Janesich v Attenborough (1910) 102 L.T. 605. Contrast Re Nevill (1860) L.R. 6 Ch. App. 397; affirmed sub nom. Towle & Co v White (1873) 29 L.T. 78 HL. See below, paras 44-202, 44-220.

- 652. Weiner v Gill [1906] 2 K.B. 574; see also Edwards v Vaughan (1910) 26 T.L.R. 545; Kempster v Bravingtons Ltd (1925) 133 L.T. 680 (previous cases reviewed); R. v Eaton (1966) 50 Cr. App. R. 189.
- 653. Defined s.61(1), see above, para.44-015, and see s.5(1), see above, paras 44-035 et seq.
- 654. See s.13, see above, paras 44-086 et seq.
- 655. See below, para.44-153.
- 656. Defined, s.61(5), see above, para.44-136.
- 657. See below, para.44-152. Notice of appropriation under a CIF contract does not pass the property because, as the seller retains the documents against the payment of the price, the appropriation is not unconditional: see Ross T Smyth & Co Ltd v Bailey, Son & Co [1940] 3 All E.R. 60, 65–66; Ginzberg v Barrow Haematite Steel Co and McKellar [1966] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 343; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.19–101.
- 658. cf. s.32, see below, para.44-269.
- 659. Defined in s.61(5); see above, para.44-140.
- 660. Defined in s.61(1); see above, para.44-015.
- 661. But cf. R. v Tideswell [1905] 2 K.B. 273; National Coal Board v Gamble [1959] 1 Q.B. 11.
- 662. Rohde v Thwaites (1927) 6 B. & C. 388; Pignataro v Gilroy [1919] 1 K.B. 459; Wardar's (Import and Export) Ltd v W Norwood & Sons Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 663.
- 663. See below, para.44-151.
- 664. See Blackburn on Sale, 1st edn, p.128, citing Heyward's Case (1595) 2 Co. Rep. 35a. See also Mucklow v Mangles (1808) 1 Taunt. 318; Ridgway v Ward (1884) 14 Q.B.D. 110, 116; Cocker v McMullen (1900) 81 L.T. 784; Noblett v Hopkinson [1905] 2 K.B. 214. cf. Pletts v Beattie [1896] 1 Q.B. 519; Furbey v Hoey [1947] 1 All E.R. 736.
- 665. Aldridge v Johnson (1857) 7 E. & B. 885; Langton v Higgins (1858) 4 H. & N. 402.
- 666. But see Hendy Lennox (Industrial Engines) Ltd v Grahame Puttick Ltd [1984] 1 W.L.R. 485, 495 (goods invoiced to buyer). See also Pullman Trailmobile Canada Ltd v Hamilton Refrigeration Ltd 96 D.L.R. (3d) 322 (1979). Contrast Carlos Federspiel & Co SA v Charles Twigg & Co Ltd, below; Kulkarni v Manor Credit (Davenham) Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 69, [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 431.
- 667. [1957] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 240, 255; Kulkarni v Manor Credit (Davenham) Ltd, above, at [35].
- 668. [1919] 1 K.B. 459.
- 669. Jenner v Smith (1869) L.R. 4 C.P. 270, 277, 278.
- 670. Godts v Rose (1854) 17 C.B. 229; Stein Forbes & Co Ltd v County Tailoring Co Ltd (1916) 86 L.J.K.B. 448, 449. Notice of appropriation under a CIF contract does not pass the property because, as the seller retains the documents against payment or securing of the price, the appropriation is not unconditional: see Ross T Smyth & Co Ltd v Bailey Son & Co [1940] 3 All E.R. 60, 65–66; Ginzberg v Barrow Haematite Steel Co and McKellar [1966] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 343

; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.19–101. See also s.19, below, para.44-171.

- 671. Wait v Baker (1848) 2 Exch. 1, 7; Vigers v Sanderson [1901] 1 K.B. 608; Hammer & Barrow v Coca-Cola [1962] N.Z.L.R. 723; Thornley v Tuckwell Butchers Ltd [1964] Crim. L.R. 127.
- 672. Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders and Shippers Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 459; McDougall v Aeromarine of Emsworth Ltd [1958] 1 W.L.R. 1126.
- 673. Ogle v Atkinson (1814) 5 Taunt 759; Colonial Insurance Co of New Zealand v Adelaide Marine Insurance Co (1887) 12 App. Cas. 128; Denny v Skelton (1916) 115 L.T. 305; Edwards v Dolin [1976] 1 W.L.R. 942. See also s.29(4) (delivery by attornment of third party) and Wardar's (Export and Import) Co Ltd v Norwood & Sons Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 663.
- 674. See below, para.44-171.
- 675. Wait v Baker (1849) 2 Exch. 1, 7. See also Badische Anilin und Soda Fabrik v Basle Chemical Works [1898] A.C. 200 (despatch by post); Scottish and Newcastle International Ltd v Othon Ghalanos Ltd [2008] UKHL 11, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 462 at [15]–[37] (C&F contract), and s.32(1) below, para.44-269. It is submitted that r.5(2) is not affected by s.32(4) which affects only risk.
- 676. Healy v Howlett & Sons [1917] 1 K.B. 337.
- 677. Cooke v Ludlow (1806) 2 B. & P.N.R. 119; Ullock v Reddelein (1828) 5 L.J.(o.s.) K.B. 208; Aron & Co v Comptoir Wegimont [1921] 3 K.B. 435.
- 678. See Mucklow v Mangles (1808) 1 Taunt. 318; Clarke v Spence (1836) 4 A. & E. 448, 466; Laidler v Burlinson (1837) 2 M. & W. 602; Reid v Macbeth [1904] A.C. 223.
- 679. [1926] Ch. 494; see also Wood v Bell (1856) 6 E. & B. 355; Seath v Moore (1887) 11 App. Cas. 350, 380; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 5–090—5–092.
- 680. [1908] A.C. 35.
- 681. Re Blyth Shipbuilding and Dry Docks Co [1926] Ch. 494, 518. See also Sauter Automation Ltd v Goodman Mechanical Services Ltd (1986) 34 Build. L.R. 81 (building contract). cf. McDougall v Aeromarine of Emsworth Ltd [1958] 1 W.L.R. 1126, 1129 (contra); Re Cosslett (Contractors) Ltd [1998] Ch. 495; Smith v Bridgend CBC [2001] UKHL 58, [2002] 1 A.C. 336 (charge).
- 682. See Wood v Bell (1856) 6 E. & B. 355, 263 (overruling Woods v Russell (1822) 5 B. & Ald. 942); Reid v Macbeth [1904] A.C. 223. But see Petromec Inc v Petroleo Brasileiro SA Petrobras [2004] EWHC 1180 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 219 at [36].
- 683. (1887) 11 App. Cas. 350, 381.
- 684. [1926] Ch. 494, 518.
- 685. At 517–518.
- 686. “Bulk” is defined in s.61(1); see above, para.44-015. See below, para.44-163.
- 687. If the goods are not paid for, in whole or in part, no property in an undivided share passes to the buyer under s.20A, but r.5(3) can nevertheless still apply to transfer the property in the goods themselves to the buyer.
- 688. See below, para.44-160.
- 689. See above, para.44-133.
- 690. Despite the position of the words “in a deliverable state” in r.5(3), it is submitted that the goods need only be in a deliverable state at the time the bulk is reduced and not at the time of the contract of sale. For the meaning of “deliverable state”, see s.61(5), see above, para.44-016, and see above, para.44-140.

691. See above, para.44-133.

692. s.1(3).

693. See above, para.44-131.

694. See above, para.44-133.

695. See also the other reasons set out in the Report of the English and Scottish Law Commission Sale of Goods Forming Part of a Bulk (Law Com. No.215 and Scot. Law Com. No.145) (1993).

696. For a discussion as to whether, e.g. “80 to 100 tons” or “100 tons 5% more or less” are covered, see Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.5-111.

697. See below, para.44-169.

698. The word “contained” should be given its larger meaning of being kept within limits rather than enclosed or kept within a container: Benjamin at para.5-113.

699. Benjamin at paras 1–120, 5–113.

700. But see below, para.44-171.

701. cf. Mercer v Craven Grain Storage Ltd [1994] C.L.C. 328 HL.

702. For the particular problems to which this may give rise, see Benjamin at para.5-114.

703. See Vol.I, paras 21-040—21-084.

704. See below, para.44-171. For the position in relation to CIF and C&F contracts, see Benjamin, paras 5-116, 18-346.

705. But see above, para.44-133 (exhaustion and consolidation).

706. 1979 Act s.17.

707. Defined in s.61(1); see above, para.44-015.

708. 1979 Act s.20B(1)(a); see below, para.44-168.

709. See Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 5–121 to 5–123.

710. 1979 Act s.21(1); see below, para.44-191 (unless the last purchaser can establish a good title under s.24 of the 1979 Act, see below, para.44-212). See Benjamin at paras 5–121 to 5–123, 7–067.

711. 1979 Act s.20B(1)(a).

712. 1979 Act s.20B(1)(b).

713. For the position at common law and under s.10(1) of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977, see Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.5-125.

714. 1979 Act s.20B(2).

715. 1979 Act s.20B(3).

- 716. For the position in respect of risk, see below, para.44-187.
- 717. Benjamin at para.5-129. But the rules in subss.(4) to (6) of s.20A are peculiar to that section and cannot therefore apply.
- 718. 1979 Act s.17.
- 719. 1979 Act s.20A(1)(b).
- 720. See above, para.44-166.
- 721. Re Stapylton Fletcher Ltd [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1181. Contrast Re London Wine Co (Shippers) Ltd [1986] P.C.C. 121; Re Goldcorp Exchange Ltd [1995] 1 A.C. 74.
- 722. See above, para.44-133 (but note also ascertainment by exhaustion and consolidation).
- 723. See, e.g. Leigh and Sullivan Ltd v Aliakmon Shipping Co Ltd [1986] A.C. 785. If a seller makes a unilateral reservation of property in breach of contract, and/or refuses to transfer the property on tender of the price, it is not clear whether the buyer's tender vests the property in him. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 5–132, 18–255; City Motors (1933) Pty Ltd v Southern Aerial Super Service Pty Ltd (1961) 106 C.L.R. 477, 485–486, 487–490.
- 724. See Smyth & Co Ltd v Bailey, Son & Co [1940] 3 All E.R. 60, 67–68; see also Wait v Baker (1848) 2 Exch. 1, 7–8 and Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 19–099 et seq.
- 725. See Ogg v Shuter (1875) 1 C.P.D. 147; Mirabita v Imperial Ottoman Bank (1878) 3 Ex. D. 164, 172; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 18–256, 20–083.
- 726. The reference is probably to dishonour by non-acceptance rather than by non-payment. See Shepherd v Harrison (1871) L.R. 5 H.L. 116; The Prinz Adalbert [1917] A.C. 586; The Orteric [1920] A.C. 724. See also Barton, Thompson & Co v Vigers Bros (1906) 19 Com. Cas. 175; Ernest Scragg & Sons Ltd v Perseverance Banking and Trust Co Ltd [1973] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 101; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 5–138, 18–265.
- 727. Mitsui & Co Ltd v Flota Mercante Grancolombiana SA [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1145. cf. The Parchim [1918] A.C. 157: presumption rebutted in a Prize case.
- 728. The Kronprinsessan Margareta [1921] 1 A.C. 486, 517. Although property usually passes on transfer of the bill of lading this is not necessarily so: Carlos Soto SAU v AP Moller-Maersk AS (The SFL Hawk) [2015] EWHC 458 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 537, [19].
- 729. Cahn v Pockett's Bristol Channel Steam Packet Co Ltd [1899] 1 Q.B. 643. See below, para.44-218.
- 730. See Parris, Retention of Title on Sale of Goods (1982); Parris, Effective Reservation of Title Clauses (1986); Dickson, Retention of Title Clauses (1987); McCormack, Reservation of Title, 2nd edn (1995); Davies, Effective Retention of Title (1991); Wheeler, Retention of Title Clauses: Impact and Implications (1991); Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 5–141 et seq.; Palmer and McKendrick, Interests in Goods, 2nd edn (1998), Ch.28. The periodical literature is voluminous. For the problems involved regarding conflict of laws see Benjamin at para.26-151. On European Union requirements, see Directive 2000/35 art.4 ([2000] O.J. L200/35) and Council Regulation 1346/2000 of May 29, 2000 ([2000] O.J. L160/1); Benjamin at para.26-160.
- 731. [1976] 1 W.L.R. 676; noted (1976) 39 M.L.R. 585, [1977] C.L.J. 27.
- 732. [1980] Ch. 228. See also Stroud Architectural Systems Ltd v John Laing Construction Ltd [1994] B.C.L.C. 276.
- 733. See now Companies Act 2006 s.860, replacing Companies Act 1985 ss.395, 396, from October 2009. The amendments provided for in ss.92–107 of the Companies Act 1989, were not brought into force and are repealed by s.1295 of and Sch.16 of the 2006 Act. On proposals of the Law Commission for reform: see Law Com. Consultation Paper No.264 (2002); Law Com. Consultation Paper No.176 (2004); Law Com. Report No.296 (2005).

734. See n.737, above.

735. Clough Mill Ltd v Martin [1985] 1 W.L.R. 111, 116, 122, 125. See also Re Peachdart Ltd [1984] Ch. 131, 141; Hendy Lennox (Industrial) Engines Ltd v Grahame Puttick Ltd [1984] 1 W.L.R. 485, 491; Re Andrabell Ltd [1984] 3 All E.R. 407, 410. But see Re Curtain Dream Plc [1990] B.C.L.C. 925 (sale and repurchase of goods).

736. Aluminium Industrie Vaassen BV v Romalpa Aluminium Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 676, 680, 687, 689, 692, 694; Re Bond Worth Ltd [1980] Ch. 228, 246; Borden (UK) Ltd v Scottish Timber Products Ltd [1981] Ch. 25, 34, 44, 46; Hendy Lennox (Industrial Engines) Ltd v Grahame Puttick Ltd [1984] 1 W.L.R. 485, 491; Re Andrabell Ltd [1984] 3 All E.R. 407 at 411; Four Point Garages Ltd v Carter [1985] 3 All E.R. 12. Fairfax Gerrard Holdings Ltd v Capital Bank Plc [2007] EWCA Civ 1226, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 297 at [34].

737. ! Aluminium Industrie Vaassen BV v Romalpa Aluminium Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 676, 680, 687, 689, 692, 694; Re Peachdart Ltd [1984] Ch. 131, 141; Hendy Lennox (Industrial Engines) Ltd v Grahame Puttick Ltd [1984] 1 W.L.R. 485, 491; cf. Borden (UK) Ltd v Scottish Timber Products Ltd [1981] Ch. 25, 34, 44, 46; Re Bond Worth Ltd [1980] Ch. 228, 246. However, where the buyer is at liberty to consume the goods before the price becomes due, such that the transfer of the property in the goods may never happen, the contract may not be a contract of sale at all: see PST Energy 7 Shipping LLC v OW Bunker Malta Ltd [2016] UKSC 23 where the Supreme Court characterised a bunker contract with these characteristics as a sui generis supply contract. See below, para.44-174A.

738. Under s.860(7)(b) of the Companies Act 2006, see n.737, above.

739. McEntire v Crossley Brothers Ltd [1895] A.C. 457, 462; Smart Brothers Ltd v Holt [1929] 2 K.B. 303, 308.

740. [1976] 1 W.L.R. 676, 680. Contrast Borden (UK) Ltd v Scottish Timber Products Ltd [1981] Ch. 35, 45; E Pfeiffer Weinkellerei-Weineinkauf GmbH & Co v Arbuthnot Factors Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 150, 159.

741. Re Peachdart Ltd [1984] Ch. 131, 141, 142; Hendy Lennox (Industrial Engines) Ltd v Graham Puttick Ltd [1984] 1 W.L.R. 499–500; Re Andrabell Ltd [1984] 3 All E.R. 414. But see Clough Mill Ltd v Martin [1985] 1 W.L.R. 111 at 116.

742. Aluminium Industrie Vaassen BV v Romalpa Aluminium Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 676, 690, 693, 694. But see Caterpillar (NI) Ltd (formerly FG Wilson (Engineering) Ltd) v John Holt & Co (Liverpool) Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1232, [2014] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 393 at [60], [61], [75]–[76] (buyer sells as agent). For a critical analysis of this decision see Gullifer [2014] L.M.C.L.Q. 564.

743. See below, para.44-178. In Caterpillar (NI) Ltd (formerly FG Wilson (Engineering) Ltd) v John Holt & Co (Liverpool) Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1232, [2014] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 393, the question of whether the the buyer resold as agent was relevant to the question of whether property had ever passed to the buyer, or passed directly to the sub-buyer, which, in turn, was relevant to whether there could be an action for the price under s.49 of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 for the purposes of a non set-off clause.

744. ! [2016] UKSC 23, [2016] 2 W.L.R. 1193, [2016] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 589. For a critical review of this decision see L. Gullifer [2017] L.Q.R. 244. The Court of Appeal in Wood v TUI Travel Plc (t/a First Choice) [2017] EWCA Civ 11, [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 322 held that PST Energy 7 Shipping LLC was not authority for the proposition that there was no intention that property in any food or drink served by a hotel to guests would pass to them. The conclusion in PST Energy 7 Shipping

LLC depended upon the relationship between a retention of title clause and the liberty to consume fuel in which property had not already passed and was accordingly distinguishable.

- 745. !“There is no reason why the incidents of a contract of sale of goods for which the Act provides should not apply equally to such a contract at common law”: Moore-Bick L.J., [2015] EWCA Civ 1058 at [33].
- 746. !See L. Gullifer [2017] L.Q.R. 244, 258 and Benjamin's Sale of Goods (2016) 2nd Supplement, paras 4-001, 4-025 and 4-030.
- 747. ![2015] EWHC 2022 (Comm) at [63].
- 748. ![2015] EWCA Civ 1058 at [33].
- 749. !Re Peachdart Ltd* [1984] Ch. 131.
- 750. !Re Bond Worth Ltd* [1980] Ch. 228, 246; Clough Mill Ltd v Martin [1985] 1 W.L.R. 111.
- 751. !Aluminium Industrie Vaassen BV v Romalpa Aluminium Ltd* [1976] 1 W.L.R. 676; Borden (UK) Ltd v Scottish Timber Products Ltd, above; John Snow & Co Ltd v DGB Woodcraft Co Ltd [1985] B.C.L.C. 54; Armour v Thyssen Edelstahlwerke AG [1991] 2 A.C. 339; Peerless Carpets Ltd v Moorhouse Carpet Market Ltd (1992) 4 N.Z.B.L.C. 102, 747.
- 752. !Aluminium Industrie Vaassen BV v Romalpa Aluminium Ltd* [1976] 1 W.L.R. 676; Re Peachdart Ltd [1984] Ch. 131; Clough Mill Ltd v Martin [1985] 1 W.L.R. 111; John Snow & Co Ltd v DGB Woodcraft Co Ltd [1985] B.C.L.C. 541; Armour v Thyssen Edelstahlwerke AG [1991] 2 A.C. 339 at 353. Contrast Goodhart and Jones (1980) 43 M.L.R. 489, 508; Goodhart (1986) 49 M.L.R. 86. In Scotland, “all accounts” clauses were once struck down as an attempt to obtain security without possession, and, by virtue of s.62(4), to fall outside the Sale of Goods Act 1979, but they have since been upheld in Armour v Thyssen Edelstahlwerke AG [1991] 2 A.C. 339.
- 753. ![1985] 1 W.L.R. 111.
- 754. !At 117–118, 124, 125–126.
- 755. ![1991] 2 A.C. 339.
- 756. !At 353. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.5-146.
- 757. [1981] Ch. 85.
- 758. [1984] Ch. 131. See also Modelboard Ltd v Outer Box Ltd [1993] B.C.L.C. 623 (cardboard made into boxes); Ian Chisholm Textiles v Griffiths [1994] B.C.C. 96 (cloth cut and worked on); Chaigley Farms Ltd v Crawford, Kay & Grayshire Ltd [1996] B.C.C. 957 (slaughtered cattle); Re Highway Foods International [1995] B.C.L.C. 209 (processed meat); ICI New Zealand v Agnew [1998] 2 N.Z.L.R. 129 (plastic pellets made into containers). Contrast Armour v Thyssen Edelstahlwerke AG [1991] 2 A.C. 339 (cut steel); New Zealand Forest Products Ltd v Pongakawa Sawmill Ltd [1992] 3 N.Z.L.R. 304 (sawn timber); Coleman v Harvey [1989] 1 N.Z.L.R. 723 (refined silver).
- 759. In this case there was an express “products” provision (see below) and it was held that the intention was to create a charge on the handbags in the course of manufacture and on the end products.

- 760. [1985] 1 W.L.R. 111.
- 761. At 119. See also at 125.
- 762. [1984] 1 W.L.R. 485. Contrast Specialist Plant Services Ltd v Braithwaite Ltd (1987) 3 B.C.C. 119 (materials for repair).
- 763. Clough Mill Ltd v Martin [1985] 1 W.L.R. 111, 124; Coleman v Harvey [1989] 1 N.Z.L.R. 723. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 1-058—1-059, 5-148—5-149.
- 764. As in Re Peachdart Ltd [1984] Ch. 131; and the cases cited in n.757, see above. See also Re Bond Worth Ltd [1980] Ch. 228; Clough Mill Ltd v Martin [1985] 1 W.L.R. 111 (where the manufacturing process went further).
- 765. [1981] Ch. 25, at 44, 45. See also at 46, 47; Re Bond Worth Ltd [1980] Ch. 228, 246.
- 766. Under what is now s.860(7)(b) of the Companies Act 2006. cf. ICI New Zealand v Agnew [1998] 2 N.Z.L.R. 129 (floating charge).
- 767. [1984] Ch. 131.
- 768. [1985] 1 W.L.R. 111.
- 769. At 119, 124. But see Donaldson M.R. at 125. See also Glencore International AG v Metro Trading International Inc [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 284, 322; Bacardi-Martini Beverages Ltd v Thomas Hardy Packaging Ltd [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 62, 75; affirmed [2002] EWCA Civ 549, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 379.
- 770. So that the buyer company would not be creating a charge over its own goods.
- 771. At 120, 124, 125. See also Modelboard Ltd v Outer Box Ltd [1993] B.C.L.C. 623.
- 772. Michelin Tyre Co Ltd v Macfarlane (Glasgow) Ltd (1917) 55 Sc.L.R. 35 HL; Hendy Lennox (Industrial Engines) Ltd v Grahame Puttick Ltd [1984] 1 W.L.R. 485; Re Andrabell Ltd [1984] 3 All E.R. 407; E Pfeiffer Weinkellerei-Weineinkauf GmbH & Co v Arbuthnot Factors Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 150, 159. Contrast Len Vidgen Ski & Leisure Ltd v Timaru Marine Supplies (1982) Ltd [1986] N.Z.L.R. 349. See also Caterpillar (NI) Ltd (formerly FG Wilson (Engineering) Ltd v John Holt & Co (Liverpool) Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1232, [2014] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 393 at [60], [61], [75]–[76] (buyer sells as agent). For a critical analysis of this decision see Gullifer [2014] L.M.C.L.Q. 564.
- 773. See above, para.44-174.
- 774. Contrast Aluminium Industrie Vaassen BV v Romalpa Aluminium Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 676, 690, 692, 694. See also Re Hallett's Estate (1880) 13 Ch. D. 696, 708–711.
- 775. Kirkham v Peel (1880) 43 L.T. 171; Re Coomber [1911] 1 Ch. 723, 728; Henry v Hammond [1913] 2 K.B. 515; Boardman v Phipps [1967] 2 A.C. 46, 126; Hendy Lennox (Industrial Engines) Ltd v Grahame Puttick, above, at 497–499; Re Andrabell Ltd, above, at 411–416; Compaq Computer Ltd v Abercorn Group Ltd [1991] B.C.C. 484, 496.
- 776. (1880) 13 Ch. D. 696 (as in Aluminium Industrie Vaassen BV v Romalpa Aluminium Industrie Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 676, 690, 692, 694).
- 777. [1980] Ch. 228.
- 778. Re Nevill (1870) L.R. 6 Ch. App. 397; affirmed sub nom. Towle & Co v White (1873) 29 L.T. 78 HL; Foley v Hill (1848) 2 H.L.C. 28; South Australian Insurance Co v Randall (1869) L.R. 3 P.C. 101. See also Henry v Hammond [1913] 2 K.B. 515 at 521; Neste Oy v Lloyd's Bank Plc [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 658.

- 779. For this reason, some clauses provide for the buyer to hold as trustee for the seller only such part of the proceeds as represent or are equivalent to the price at which the goods resold were invoiced to the buyer. The trust of such a part would appear to be effective even though not separated. See Hunter v Moss [1994] 1 W.L.R. 452; Associated Alloys Pty Ltd v CAN001 452 106 Pty Ltd (In Liquidation), below.
- 780. cf. Caterpillar (NI) Ltd (formerly FG Wilson (Engineering) Ltd) v John Holt & Co (Liverpool) Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1232, [2014] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 393 where the majority of the Court of Appeal found that on the terms of the particular clause there was a duty to account for the whole proceeds of sale which was consistent with an agency relationship (per Patten L.J. at [60] and Floyd L.J. (at [76])). For a critical analysis of this decision see Gullifer [2014] L.M.C.L.Q. 564.
- 781. Borden (UK) Ltd v Scottish Timber Products Ltd [1981] Ch. 25, 45; Re Bond Worth Ltd [1980] Ch. 228, 248, 259; Tatung (UK) Ltd v Galex Telesure Ltd [1989] 5 B.C.C. 325; Re Weldtech Equipment Ltd [1991] B.C.C. 16; Compaq Computer Ltd v Abercorn Group Ltd [1991] B.C.C. 484; Modelboard Ltd v OuterBox Ltd [1993] B.C.C. 623.
- 782. cf. Aluminium Industrie Vaassen BV v Romalpa Aluminium Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 676, 682–683 (at first instance); Peerless Carpets Ltd v Moorhouse Carpet Market Ltd (1992) 4 N.Z.B.L.C. 102, 747.
- 783. See n.737, above. Such an argument would be even stronger in the case of a trust in respect of the proceeds of sale of products manufactured from the goods supplied: see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.5–154; and see above, para.44-177.
- 784. (2000) A.L.J.R. 862 (Kirby J. dissenting).
- 785. But the seller's claim failed, on the facts, since it could not sufficiently relate the proceeds of sale to the goods that it had supplied.
- 786. W Hanson (Harrow) v Rapid Civil and Engineering and Usborne Developments (1987) 38 Build. L.R. 106; Re Highway Foods International Ltd [1995] B.C.L.C. 209. cf. P4 Ltd v Unite Integrated Solutions Plc [2006] Build. L.R. 150.
- 787. But see Re Interview Ltd [1975] I.R. 182; Dawber Williamson Roofing Ltd v Humberside CC (1979) 14 Build. L.R. 70; Feuer Leather Corp v Frank Johnstone & Sons [1981] Com. L.R. 251; W Hanson (Harrow) v Rapid Civil Engineering and Usborne Developments (1987) 38 Build. L.R. 106; Forsyth International (UK) Ltd v Silver Shipping Co Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 268.
- 788. Aluminium Industrie Vaassen BV v Romalpa Aluminium Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 676, 681; Re Peachdart Ltd [1984] Ch. 131, 141; Hendy Lennox (Industrial Engines) Ltd v Grahame Puttick Ltd [1984] 1 W.L.R. 485, 495; Archivent Sales and Developments Ltd v Strathclyde RC (1984) 27 Build. L.R. 98; Four Point Garage Ltd v Carter [1985] 3 All E.R. 12; Fairfax Gerrard Holdings Ltd v Capital Bank Plc [2007] EWCA Civ 1226, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 297 at [16].
- 789. See Goode [1964] J.B.L. 523, 525.
- 790. Companies Act 2006 s.860(7)(f); see n.737, above. Alternatively see Re Bond Worth Ltd [1980] Ch. 228 (floating charge).
- 791. [1976] 1 W.L.R. 676, 688, 692.
- 792. E Pfeiffer Weinkellerei-Weineinkauf GmbH & Co v Arbuthnot Factors Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 150; Re Weldtech Equipment Ltd [1991] B.C.C. 16; Compaq Computer Ltd v Abercorn Group Ltd [1991] B.C.C. 484.
- 793. Hughes v Pump House Hotel Co [1902] 2 K.B. 190.
- 794. See Vol.I, para.19-069.

- 795. E Pfeiffer Weinkellerei-Weineinkauf GmbH & Co v Arbuthnot Factors Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 150. See also Re Interview Ltd [1975] I.R. 182; Re Peachdart Ltd [1984] Ch. 131 at 143; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.5–161.
- 796. See Newman (1999) 10 Construction Law 25.
- 797. cf. Aircool Installations v British Telecommunications [1995] C.L.Y. 821 Cty Ct (goods affixed).
- 798. Archivent Sales and Developments Ltd v Strathclyde RC (1984) 27 Build. L.R. 98; see below, para.44-218.
- 799. Dawber Williamson Roofing Ltd v Humberside CC (1979) 14 Build. L.R. 70; see below, para.44-220.
- 800. W. Hanson (Harrow) Ltd v Rapid Civil Engineering Ltd (1987) 38 Build. L.R. 106; see below, para.44-227.
- 801. W. Hanson (Harrow) Ltd v Rapid Civil Engineering Ltd (1987) 38 Build. L.R. 106; see below, para.44-229.
- 802. But see above, para.39-419 (goods let on hire-purchase). The same principles apply.
- 803. Trust Bank Central Ltd v Southdown Properties Ltd [1991] 1 N.Z. Conv. C. 190, 870. But see Guest and Lever (1963) 27 Conv.N.S. 30, and see above, para.39-419.
- 804. See above, para.39-419.
- 805. Melluish v BMI (No.3) Ltd [1996] A.C. 454; Aircool Installations v British Telecommunications [1995] C.L.Y. 821 Cty Ct; Bennett and Davis (1994) 110 L.Q.R. 448.
- 806. See n.737 above.
- 807. s.38(c). See s.235 and Sch.10 Pts III and V, of the Insolvency Act 1985. The Insolvency Act 1986 contains no “reputed ownership” provision.
- 808. Bills of Sale Act 1878; Bills of Sale Act (Amendment) Act 1882.
- 809. McEntire v Crossley Brothers Ltd [1895] A.C. 457, 462. See above, para.44-174.
- 810. Bills of Sale Act 1878 s.3. The clause must be contained in a document.
- 811. See Vol.I, para.19-063.
- 812. s.344(4).
- 813. Value Added Tax Act 1994 s.36(4)(b). But Customs and Excise have conceded entitlement to such relief if title has passed to the insolvent debtor by the time relief is claimed: see C.C.A.B. TR 388 (May 7, 1980); VAT Leaflet 700/18/86 (April 1, 1986). See also s.11 of the Finance Act 1990.
- 814. See below, para.44-187. cf. (consumer sales) para.38-490.
- 815.  Caterpillar (NI) Ltd (formerly FG Wilson (Engineering) Ltd) v John Holt & Co (Liverpool) Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1232, [2014] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 393 at [60], [61] and [75]–[76].
- 816.  [2016] UKSC 23.
- 817.  See further below, para.44-365.

- 818. See Sch.B1 to the Insolvency Act 1986, substituted by s.248 of and Sch.16 to the Enterprise Act 2002.
- 819. i.e. a “retention of title agreement”, as defined in s.251 of the Insolvency Act 1986, which is included in the definition of “hire purchase” agreement in Sch.B1 para.111(1).
- 820. Insolvency Act 1986 Sch.B1 para.44.
- 821. Insolvency Act 1986 Sch.B1 para.43.
- 822. Insolvency Act 1986 Sch.B1 paras 43, 44.
- 823. Insolvency Act 1986 Sch.B1 para.72.
- 824. Insolvency Act 1986 Sch.B1 para.72(3).
- 825. Insolvency Act 1986 s.1A and Sch.A1, inserted by the Insolvency Act 2000 s.1.
- 826. i.e. banks, insurance companies and companies involved in the performance of market contracts: Insolvency Act 1986 Sch.A1 para.2.
- 827. Lipe Ltd v Leyland DAF Ltd [1993] B.C.C. 385.
- 828. Inserted by s.250 of the Enterprise Act 2002.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 4. - Effects of the Contract

(b) - When the Risk Passes

Passing of the risk

44-187

By s.20(1) ⁸²⁹:

“Unless otherwise agreed, the goods remain at the seller's risk until the property in them is transferred to the buyer, but when the property in them is transferred to the buyer, the goods are at the buyer's risk whether delivery has been made or not.” ⁸³⁰

Thus the presumption is that the risk and the property pass together. This means that as a general rule the risk of loss, damage or deterioration falls on the owner of the goods. But the property and the risk may be separated by agreement ⁸³¹ or by usage. ⁸³² Where the buyer deals as consumer this section does not apply and under the Consumer Rights Act 2015, risk passes only on delivery of the goods. ⁸³³

Goods to which risk relates

44-188

The goods must be sufficiently identifiable as those to which the risk relates. But in some cases, especially of overseas sales, the risk in goods not yet separated from bulk may pass to the buyer even though the property in the goods is still in the seller. ⁸³⁴ And in Sterns Ltd v Vickers Ltd ⁸³⁵ the buyers purchased 120,000 gallons of spirit, part of a larger quantity contained in a 200,000-gallon tank belonging to the storage company. They accepted a delivery warrant whereby the company undertook to deliver to them the quantity which had been sold. They indorsed the warrant to a sub-purchaser, who left the spirit in storage and paid the storage company rent. The bulk of the spirit deteriorated in quality before delivery took place, and it was held that upon acceptance of the delivery warrant the risk passed to the buyers. Bankes L.J. left open the question whether the property had passed. Scrutton L.J. held that it had not because there had been no appropriation; but he regarded the acceptance of the delivery warrant as crucial in that it transferred to the buyers an undivided interest in the bulk which carried with it the risk of loss from deterioration. ⁸³⁶ Under s.20A of the Act ⁸³⁷ where there is a contract for the sale of a specified quantity of ascertained goods forming part of an identified bulk and the buyer has paid the price for some or all of the goods, property in an undivided share in the bulk will be transferred to the buyer and he will become an owner in common of the bulk. In such a case, it is probable that risk passes to the buyer at the same time as the undivided share ⁸³⁸ although it is by no means clear from ss.20, 20A and 20B that this is the result. ⁸³⁹

Overseas trade

44-189

The fact that the goods are to be shipped under a CIF or FOB or similar contract is a strong indication that the property and the risk may pass at separate times.⁸⁴⁰ Thus in a CIF contract the risk is transferred on shipment or as from shipment, but the presumption is that the property does not pass until the shipping documents are handed over. In a FOB contract, on the other hand, the property and the risk may pass together on shipment. But if the seller reserves the right of disposal of the goods, the risk passes on shipment or as from shipment, but the property remains with the seller until the buyer effects payment or secures the price against tender of the bill of lading; and, further, if the goods are unascertained, the risk again passes on shipment but the property in the goods themselves⁸⁴¹ does not pass until they become ascertained and are unconditionally appropriated.⁸⁴²

Qualifications

44-190

The main rule stated in s.20(1) does not apply where the loss is caused by the fault of either party. It is therefore qualified as follows:

“(2)

Where delivery has been delayed through the fault⁸⁴³ of either buyer or seller the goods are at the risk of the party at fault as regards any loss which might not have occurred but for such fault.⁸⁴⁴

(3)

Nothing in this section affects the duties or liabilities of either seller or buyer as a bailee ... of the goods of the other party.”

It must be noted that subs.(2), in speaking of delivery, deals with the transfer of possession, not of property; also that the party in fault does not bear the entire risk, but only the risk of loss “which might not have occurred but for such fault”. Subsection (3) means that neither subs.(1) nor subs.(2) alters the common law rule that the party in possession of another person's goods remains liable for them qua bailee for negligence.⁸⁴⁵

^{829.} This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides special rules for the passing of risk, see above para.38-490. Special rules concerning the passing of risk were required by the Consumer Rights Directive 2011. These rules were initially implemented in reg.43 of the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013. These rules are now repeated in the Consumer Rights Act 2015. See above, para.38-490.

^{830.} Healy v Howlett & Sons [1917] 1 K.B. 337; Pignataro v Gilroy [1919] 1 K.B. 459; Underwood Ltd v Burgh Castle Brick and Cement Syndicate [1922] 1 K.B. 343; Wardars (Export and Import) Co Ltd v W Norwood & Sons Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 663; Stora Enso Oyj v Port of Dundee [2006] 1 C.L.C. 453.

^{831.} Castle v Playford (1872) L.R. 7 Ex. 98, Martineau v Kitching (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 436; Anderson v Morice (1876) 1 App. Cas. 713; Horn v Minister of Food, 65 T.L.R. 1906.

^{832.} Bevington v Dale (1902) 7 Com. Cas. 112.

- 833. See above, para.38-490.
- 834. Stock v Inglis (1884) 12 Q.B.D. 564; affirmed sub nom. Inglis v Stock (1885) 10 App. Cas. 263. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 18–348, 19–111, 20–094, 21–003, 21–011, 21–021, 21–044, 21–105.
- 835. [1923] 1 K.B. 78.
- 836. At 84, 95. But contrast also Comptoir d'Achat v Luis de Ridder [1949] A.C. 293, 312, 319 (emphasising the restricted application of the decision in Sterns Ltd v Vickers Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 78). See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 6–004, 18–348.
- 837. See above, para.44-160.
- 838. Benjamin at paras 6–006—6–008. The definition of “goods” in s.61(1), see above, para. 44-015, includes an undivided share in goods.
- 839. In particular, it is arguable that s.20B(3)(c) means that the passing of property under s.20A is to be disregarded in determining risk: Benjamin at para.6–006.
- 840. See Benjamin at the paragraphs cited in n.831, see above.
- 841. As opposed to property in an undivided share under s.20A; see above, para.44-160.
- 842. Inglis v Stock (1885) 10 App. Cas. 263.
- 843. Defined, s.61(1), see above, para.44-015.
- 844. Demby Hamilton & Co Ltd v Barden [1949] 1 All E.R. 435. See Gatoil International Inc v Tradax Petroleum Ltd [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 351, 362.
- 845. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 6–027—6–033. For the duties and liabilities of a bailee, see above, Ch.33.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 4. - Effects of the Contract

(c) - Transfer of Title

(i) - Sale by Person not the Owner

Nemo dat quod non habet ⁸⁴⁶

44-191

The first part of s.21(1) states the general rule that “no one can transfer a better title than he himself possesses”. ⁸⁴⁷ It provides that:

“Subject to this Act, ⁸⁴⁸ where goods are sold by a person who is not their owner and who does not sell them under the authority or with the consent of the owner, the buyer acquires no better title to the goods than the seller had.”

An owner of goods who has an immediate right to possession ⁸⁴⁹ of them may either retake them without action ⁸⁵⁰ or bring an action for delivery up of the goods ⁸⁵¹ or for damages. ⁸⁵² Further, any person who has wrongfully converted the goods either to his own use or to the use of another will be liable to an action for wrongful interference at the suit of the owner provided that, at the time of the conversion, the owner had a right to immediate possession of the goods. ⁸⁵³ The liability of a person who has converted goods is a strict liability and is not dependent upon proof of knowledge or fault on his part. ⁸⁵⁴

44-192

An allowance may be made for the extent to which, at the time as at which the goods fall to be valued in assessing the damages recoverable, the value of the goods is attributable to an improvement effected by the defendant or by a person from whom the defendant has derived (whether immediately or not) his supposed “title” to the goods. ⁸⁵⁵

Exceptions

44-193

Commercial convenience has, however, called for the recognition of certain exceptions to the general rule.

^{846.} On this see generally the Twelfth Report of the Law Reform Committee on the Transfer of Title to Chattels, Cmnd.2958 (1966).

^{847.} Whistler v Forster (1863) 14 C.B.(N.S.) 248, 257.

- 848. ss.21, 23–25, see below.
- 849. Iran v Barakat Galleries Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 1374. cf. North West Securities v Alexander Breckon [1981] R.T.R. 518 (action by non-owner who had entered into binding contract to purchase).
- 850. See Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), para.30–14. On improvements, see Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 ss.3(7), 6(1), (2); Greenwood v Bennett [1973] 1 Q.B. 195; Thomas v Robinson [1977] 1 N.Z.L.R. 385.
- 851. Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 s.3(2)(a), (b). The remedy of specific delivery is, however, discretionary: see s.3(3)(b) of the 1977 Act.
- 852. 1977 Act s.3(2)(c).
- 853. Union Transport Finance Ltd v British Car Auctions Ltd [1978] 2 All E.R. 385; RH Willis & Son v British Car Auctions Ltd [1978] 1 W.L.R. 438; J Sargent (Garages) Ltd v Motor Auctions (West Bromwich) Ltd [1977] R.T.R. 121; Chubb Cash Ltd v John Crilley & Son [1983] 1 W.L.R. 599; Hillesden Securities Ltd v Ryjack Ltd [1983] 1 W.L.R. 959. For the measure of damages in conversion, see Kuwait Airways Corp v Iraqi Airways Co (Nos 4 and 5) [2002] UKHL 19, [2002] 2 A.C. 883. But see above, para.39-416 (measure of damages where goods let under hire-purchase agreement) and Uzinterimpex JSC v Standard Bank Plc [2008] EWCA Civ 819, [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 456 (duty to mitigate). Contrast OBG v Allan [2007] UKHL 21, [2008] 1 A.C. 1 (conversion does not extend to choses in action).
- 854. Hollins v Fowler (1875) L.R. 7 H.L. 757.
- 855. Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 s.6; Reid v Fairbanks (1853) 13 C.B. 692, 797; Munro v Willmott [1949] 1 K.B. 295. See also s.3(7) of the 1977 Act (allowance to be made on order for delivery up of the goods).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 4. - Effects of the Contract

(c) - Transfer of Title

(i) - Sale by Person not the Owner

(aa) - Estoppel ⁸⁵⁶

Estoppel

44-194

By s.21(1) the owner of the goods may by his conduct be “precluded” from denying the seller’s authority to sell. It would appear that this provision was intended to give statutory recognition to a particular principle of estoppel in English law in relation to the sale of goods and that the word “precluded” was used to render the principle intelligible in Scots law where the specific term “estoppel” is unknown. ⁸⁵⁷ Briefly, in order to raise such an estoppel it must be shown either that there was a representation by the owner that the seller was entitled to sell the goods or that the owner was negligent in allowing the seller to appear to be entitled to sell the goods. Each of these categories, that is estoppel by representation and estoppel by negligence, are relatively narrow in scope. Their extent is discussed below.

Estoppel by representation

44-195

There must have been a voluntary ⁸⁵⁸ representation by the owner that the seller was entitled to sell the goods. It is clear that the mere parting with possession of goods, or of documents of title to goods, does not without more raise an estoppel. ⁸⁵⁹ The owner must have so acted as to mislead the buyer into the belief that the seller was entitled to sell the goods. Thus in Central Newbury Car Auctions Ltd v Unity Finance Ltd ⁸⁶⁰ the claimants, owners of a second-hand car, allowed X, who wished to buy it, to take away the car and the registration book before a finance company had accepted their proposal to buy the car and let it to X on hire-purchase terms; X sold the car to a garage, who sold it to the defendants; it was held that the defence of estoppel failed because a motor-car registration book was not proof of ownership, and the claimants had not represented X to be the owner of the car, or to have their authority to sell the car, by allowing him to take possession of it.

44-196

The representation that the seller has a right to sell the goods must be made by the owner or his agent. ⁸⁶¹ He will not be estopped by a representation of ownership made by the seller himself, ⁸⁶² unless he authorised the representation or consented to its being made. ⁸⁶³ The representation must also be clear and unambiguous, ⁸⁶⁴ and be addressed to the particular buyer who alleges that he relied on it, or be made under such circumstances of publicity as to justify the inference that the buyer knew of and relied on it. ⁸⁶⁵

44-197

⚠ It is important to appreciate that the broad principle stated in Lickbarrow v Mason ⁸⁶⁶ by Ashhurst J. that “wherever one of two innocent persons must suffer by the acts of a third, he who has enabled such third person to occasion the loss must sustain it” cannot be regarded as a reliable guide to the solution of problems in this area. This dictum has been heavily criticised, ⁸⁶⁷ and although it was relied on in Commonwealth Trust v Akotey, ⁸⁶⁸ that case cannot be regarded as good law in view of the decision in Mercantile Bank of India Ltd v Central Bank of India Ltd. ⁸⁶⁹ There are very few reported cases in which a plea of estoppel by representation has in fact succeeded. But in Henderson v Williams ⁸⁷⁰ ⚠ an estoppel arose where the owner instructed that goods in the possession of a warehouseman be transferred to the order of another, who sold them as owner. And in Eastern Distributors Ltd v Goldring ⁸⁷¹ it was held that there was an estoppel since, in the words of Devlin J., the owner of a van had armed a dealer “with documents which enabled him to represent to the plaintiffs [a finance company] that he was the owner of the van and had the right to sell it”.

Estoppel by negligent conduct

44-198

⚠ In order to establish estoppel by negligence it is necessary for the buyer to show, first, the existence of a duty of care owed to him by the owner; secondly, a breach of that duty by negligence on the part of the owner; thirdly, that this negligence was proximate or real cause of the buyer entering into the transaction with the seller which occasioned the loss. ⁸⁷² It is the first of these requirements that gives rise to the greatest difficulty. Mere carelessness in relation to the goods, or to documents of title to goods, such as failing to take proper precautions to prevent them from being stolen ⁸⁷³ or to report their theft to the police, ⁸⁷⁴ a culpable credulity in entrusting them to another, ⁸⁷⁵ or a careless failure to register in a central register the owner's interest in a vehicle let on hire-purchase ⁸⁷⁶ ⚠ will be insufficient. The situation or relationship must be such as to bring into being a duty of care, and on this point decided cases give no firm guidance. The fact that the owner could reasonably foresee that his carelessness would lead the buyer to believe that the seller was the owner of the goods, or that the owner had no interest in the goods, does not in itself impose such a duty. ⁸⁷⁷ But in Mercantile Credit Co Ltd v Hamblin, ⁸⁷⁸ A delivered possession of a car to B and at the same time delivered to B hire-purchase documents signed in blank. A contemplated and contingently intended that the documents should be used to obtain a loan from any person who might be prepared to advance money on the security of the vehicle. B fraudulently completed the documents in a manner not authorised by A and then represented to C that he (B) had a good title to the car. C purchased the car in reliance on the representation. The Court of Appeal held that A owed to C a duty of care, ⁸⁷⁹ but further held on the facts that A had not been negligent. The Court of Appeal also took the view that the effective cause of C's loss was the fraud of B, and not any negligence on the part of A. In most cases, however, where a duty of care and breach of that duty has been shown to exist, the negligence of the owner should be regarded as an effective cause of the buyer's loss, albeit concurrent with the fraud of the seller. ⁸⁸⁰

Non est factum

44-199

Where the owner of goods has signed a document which transfers title to the goods to another, he will not be permitted—vis-à-vis an innocent purchaser of the goods from that other—to disown his signature simply by asserting that he did not understand that which he signed. ⁸⁸¹ But where, by reason of fraud, he is induced to sign a document which purports to be a transaction essentially different in substance or in kind from the transaction intended, he may be able to rely on the defence of non est factum, ⁸⁸² but only if he proves that he exercised reasonable care. ⁸⁸³

Estoppel by judgment

44-200

Where, in an action between two parties brought to determine the ownership of goods, title to the goods is established by judgment, the unsuccessful party will be estopped per rem judicatam from claiming the goods and that estoppel will bind also his privies, i.e. those claiming title from or through him, but only if the title claimed was acquired after (and not before) the date of the judgment. ⁸⁸⁴

Nature of title

44-201

The effect of an estoppel is to transfer a real title to the buyer. ⁸⁸⁵

-
- ^{856.} On this generally see Pickering (1939) 55 L.Q.R. 400; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.7–008.
- ^{857.} See above, para.31-076.
- ^{858.} Debs v Sibec Developments Ltd [1990] R.T.R. 91.
- ^{859.} Cole v North Western Bank (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 354, 363; Johnson v Crédit Lyonnais Co (1877) 3 C.P.D. 32, 36; Farquharson Bros & Co v King & Co [1902] A.C. 325, 330; Mercantile Bank of India Ltd v Central Bank of India Ltd [1938] A.C. 287; Jerome v Bentley & Co [1952] 2 All E.R. 114, 118; Central Newbury Car Auctions Ltd v Unity Finance Ltd [1957] 1 Q.B. 371, 394, 396; Moorgate Mercantile Co Ltd v Twitchings [1977] A.C. 890; Beverley Acceptances Ltd v Oakley [1982] R.T.R. 417.
- ^{860.} [1957] 1 Q.B. 371.
- ^{861.} Central Newbury Car Auctions Ltd v Unity Finance Ltd, above, J Sargent (Garages) Ltd v Motor Auctions (West Bromwich) Ltd [1977] R.T.R. 121.
- ^{862.} Farquharson Bros & Co v King & Co [1902] A.C. 325; Weiner v Gill [1905] 2 K.B. 172; affirmed at 719.
- ^{863.} Pickard v Sears (1837) 6 A. & E. 469; Rimmer v Webster [1902] 2 Ch. 163, 173; Abigail v Lapin [1934] A.C. 491; Eastern Distributors Ltd v Goldring [1957] 2 Q.B. 600.
- ^{864.} Moorgate Mercantile Co Ltd v Twitchings [1977] A.C. 890.
- ^{865.} Dickinson v Valpy (1829) 10 B. & C. 128, 140; Farquharson Bros v King & Co [1902] A.C. 325 at 341.
- ^{866.} (1787) 2 T.R. 63, 70.
- ^{867.} See Farquharson Bros v King & Co, above, at 342; London Joint Stock Bank v MacMillan [1918] A.C. 777, 836; Jones Ltd v Waring & Gillow Ltd [1926] A.C. 670, 693; Central Newbury Car Auctions Ltd v Unity Finance Ltd [1957] 1 Q.B. 371 at 389, 396.
- ^{868.} [1926] A.C. 72.
- ^{869.} [1938] A.C. 287.
- ^{870.}  [1895] 1 Q.B. 521 (in this case, the warehouseman also acknowledged to the buyer that he held the goods to the buyer's order subsequent to the contract of sale). See also Pickering v Busk (1812) 5 East 38 (agency); Colonial Bank v Cady (1890) 15 App. Cas. 267, 278, 283; Weiner v Gill [1906] 2 K.B. 574, 582; Fry v Smellie [1912] 3 K.B. 282; Fuller v Glyn, Mills Currie

- & Co [1914] 2 K.B. 168 (documents of title); Chatfields-Martin Walter Ltd v Lombard North Central Plc [2014] EWHC 1222 (QB) (representation via the Hire Purchase Register that the owner had no legitimate interest in a vehicle).
- 871. [1957] 2 Q.B. 600, 614. See also Spencer v North Country Finance Co Ltd [1963] C.L.Y. 212 CA; Stoneleigh Finance Ltd v Phillips [1965] 2 Q.B. 537; Snook v London and West Riding Investments Ltd [1967] 2 Q.B. 786.
- 872. Johnson v Crédit Lyonnais Co (1877) 3 C.P.D. 32, 42; Farquharson Bros & Co v King & Co [1902] A.C. 325, 335–336; Mercantile Bank of India Ltd v Central Bank of India Ltd [1938] A.C. 287, 299; Central Newbury Car Auctions v Unity Finance Ltd [1957] 1 Q.B. 371, 381, 389, 395; Mercantile Credit Co Ltd v Hamblin [1965] 2 Q.B. 242, 271; Moorgate Mercantile Co Ltd v Twitchings [1977] A.C. 890, 903, 906, 912, 920, 921, 924, 927, 928; Beverley Acceptances Ltd v Oakley [1982] R.T.R. 434, 439.
- 873. Farquharson Bros & Co v King & Co, above, at 335; Central Newbury Car Auctions v Unity Finance Ltd [1957] 1 Q.B. 381, 394.
- 874. Debs v Sibec Developments Ltd [1990] R.T.R. 91.
- 875. Johnson v Crédit Lyonnais Co (1877) 3 C.P.D. 32; Farquharson Bros & Co v King & Co [1902] A.C. 325; Central Newbury Car Auctions v Unity Finance Ltd [1957] 1 Q.B. 371; Beverley Acceptances Ltd v Oakley [1982] R.T.R. 434.
- 876.  Moorgate Mercantile Co Ltd v Twitchings [1977] A.C. 890: See also Cadogan Finance Ltd v Lavery and Fox [1982] Com. L.R. 248 (aircraft) and Industrial and Corporate Finance Ltd v Wyder Group (2008) 152 S.J.L.B. 31 (motorcycle). However, if the owner of a vehicle changes the register to represent that it no longer has an interest it will be estopped from going back on that representation (Chatfields-Martin Walter Ltd v Lombard North Central Plc [2014] EWHC 1222 (QB)).
- 877. Moorgate Mercantile Co Ltd v Twitchings [1977] A.C. 890: See also Cadogan Finance Ltd v Lavery and Fox [1982] Com. L.R. 248 (aircraft).
- 878. [1965] 2 Q.B. 242. See also British Railway Traffic and Electric Co Ltd v Roper (1939) 162 L.T. 217; General and Finance Facilities Ltd v Hughes (1966) 110 S.J. 147; United Dominions Trust Ltd v Western [1976] Q.B. 513; Allcock (1982) 45 M.L.R. 18.
- 879. [1965] 2 Q.B. 242, 275, 275, 278.
- 880. United Dominions Trust Ltd v Western [1976] Q.B. 513; Moorgate Mercantile Co Ltd v Twitchings [1977] A.C. 890 at 912, 928. cf. at 921; Gator Shipping Corp v Trans-Atlantic Oil Ltd [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 357, 378; Cadogan Finance Ltd v Lavery and Fox [1982] Com. L.R. 248.
- 881. Blay v Pollard & Morris [1930] 1 K.B. 628; Muskham Finance Ltd v Howard [1963] 1 Q.B. 904, 914.
- 882. See Vol.I, paras 1-139 et seq.
- 883. Mercantile Credit Co Ltd v Hamblin [1965] 2 Q.B. 242; Saunders v Anglia Building Society [1971] A.C. 1004, 1016, 1019, 1027, 1028.
- 884. Powell v Wiltshire [2004] EWCA Civ 534, [2005] Q.B. 117.
- 885. Eastern Distributors Ltd v Goldring [1957] 2 Q.B. 600, 611.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 4. - Effects of the Contract

(c) - Transfer of Title

(i) - Sale by Person not the Owner

(bb) - Sales under the Factors Acts

Sales under the Factors Acts

44-202

The Factors Act 1889 s.2(1), provides that:

“Where a mercantile agent is, with the consent of the owner, in possession of goods or of the documents of title to goods, any sale, pledge, or other disposition of the goods, made by him when acting in the ordinary course of business of a mercantile agent, shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, be as valid as if he were expressly authorised by the owner of the goods to make the same; provided that the person taking under the disposition acts in good faith, and has not at the time of the disposition notice that the person making the disposition has not authority to make the same.”

44-203

Section 21(2)(a) of the Sale of Goods Act states that “nothing in this Act Affects ... the provisions of the Factors Acts ... enabling the apparent owner of goods to dispose of them as if he were their true owner”. The provision quoted above is therefore an important qualification of the general rule in s.21(1) safeguarding the title of the owner. In order that a bona fide disponee of the goods without notice should be able to claim the benefit of it, five conditions must be satisfied; first, the person disposing of the goods must be a mercantile agent as defined by the Factors Act 1889 s.1(1); secondly, he must be in possession of the goods or of the documents of title to goods; thirdly, he must be in possession with the consent of the owner; fourthly, there must be a sale, pledge or other disposition of the goods by him; fifthly, he must dispose of the goods when acting in the ordinary course of business of a mercantile agent. These conditions are discussed elsewhere. ⁸⁸⁶

⁸⁸⁶. See above, paras 31-079 et seq.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 4. - Effects of the Contract
(c) - Transfer of Title
(i) - Sale by Person not the Owner
(cc) - Sales under Special Powers or Court Orders ⁸⁸⁷

Sales under special powers or court orders

44-204

Section 21(2)(b) states that “nothing in this Act affects ... the validity of any contract on sale under any special common law or statutory power of sale or under the order of a court of competent jurisdiction”.

(i) Special common law powers

These may be exercised by pledgees, for a pledge carries with it an implied power of sale. ⁸⁸⁸ They may also be exercised by agents of necessity. ⁸⁸⁹

(ii) Special statutory powers

There are numerous examples of these. Amongst the most important are those given to pawnees by the Consumer Credit Act 1974 ⁸⁹⁰; to innkeepers by the Innkeepers Act 1878 ⁸⁹¹ s.1; to an enforcement officer charged with the enforcement of a warrant of control against goods ⁸⁹²; to trustees in bankruptcy by the Insolvency Act 1986 s.134 and Sch.5; to liquidators of companies by the Insolvency Act 1986 ss.165–167 and Sch.4; to a criminal court ⁸⁹³; to the police ⁸⁹⁴; to a local authority in respect of abandoned vehicles ⁸⁹⁵; to bailees of uncollected goods under the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 ss.12, 13 ⁸⁹⁶; to an unpaid seller of goods under the Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.48 ⁸⁹⁷; to enforcement authorities ⁸⁹⁸ and to administrators of companies. ⁸⁹⁹

(iii) Court orders

Under the Civil Procedure Rules r.25.1 ⁹⁰⁰ the court has power to order the sale of goods which are of a perishable nature, or which for any other good reason it is desirable to sell quickly.

⁸⁸⁷. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 7-109—7-114.

⁸⁸⁸. See above, para.33-121.

⁸⁸⁹. See above, para.31-035; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), paras 4–001 et seq.

- 890. ss.120, 121; see above, para.33-144.
- 891. See above, para.33-118.
- 892. See para.44-231.
- 893. Powers of the Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s.143; Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 Pts 2, 5; Police Reform Act 2002 Sch.4 para.10; Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s.97.
- 894. Police (Property) Act 1897 ss.2 (as amended), 2A; Police Reform Act 2002 Sch.4 para.10.
- 895. Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 s.101 (as amended); Removal and Disposal of Vehicles Regulations 1986 (SI 1986/183) reg.15; Bulbruin Ltd v Romanyszyn [1994] R.T.R. 273.
- 896. See above, para.33-095.
- 897. See below, para.44-345.
- 898. Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s.267 and Sch.7; Serious Crime Act 2007 Sch.8.
- 899. Insolvency Act 1986 Sch.B1 paras 59, 70–72, inserted by s.248 of and Sch.16 to the Enterprise Act 2002.
- 900. See also CPR r.61.10, 2D–61 (sale of a ship), County Courts Act 1984 ss.38, 100.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 4. - Effects of the Contract

(c) - Transfer of Title

(i) - Sale by Person not the Owner

(dd) - Sale in Market Overt

Market overt

44-205

Section 22(1) of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 gave effect in England ⁹⁰¹ to the ancient market overt rule which protected the bona fide purchaser of goods from shops in the City of London and more generally from any open, public and legally constituted market. The rule was replete with artificiality and s.22(1) was repealed as from January 3, 1995, by the Sale of Goods (Amendment) Act 1994.

⁹⁰¹. The rule did not apply in Scotland or in Wales.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 4. - Effects of the Contract

(c) - Transfer of Title

(i) - Sale by Person not the Owner

(ee) - Sale under a Voidable Title

Sale under a voidable title

44-206

By s.23:

“When the seller of goods has a voidable title to them, but his title has not been avoided at the time of the sale, the buyer acquires a good title to the goods, provided he buys them in good faith and without notice of the seller’s defect of title.”

Thus if A, the true owner of goods, is induced by the fraud of B (the seller) to sell goods to B which B resells to C, an innocent buyer, C will acquire a good title to the goods, provided that A had not exercised his right to avoid B’s voidable title before the time of the sale by B to C. 902

44-207

However, the transaction between the true owner and the seller must confer upon the seller a voidable title to the goods; so if that transaction is not a sale, but merely an agreement to sell, or a bailment of the goods, 903 then the seller will not have a voidable title to, but merely possession of, the goods, and cannot pass a good title under this section. 904

Voidable distinguished from void title

44-208

A voidable title must be distinguished from a void title. The latter is a nullity, the former may be set aside, but unless and until it has been set aside, is valid. 905 If the fraud practised by the seller is of such a kind as to make the contract between himself and the true owner void for mistake, he will have no title to the goods and can pass none to the bona fide purchaser. A mistake to identity, induced by fraud, may sometimes have this effect. 906 There may be a mistake of identity, induced by fraud, sufficient to render the contract void and thus prevent the property passing, even if the negotiations take place when the parties are in each other’s presence. 907

The meaning of avoidance

44-209

The general rule is that in order to avoid the contract the true owner's intention to rescind must be communicated to the seller who has obtained the goods by fraud. But in Car and Universal Finance Co Ltd v Caldwell ⁹⁰⁸ the Court of Appeal held that a contract induced by fraud could be rescinded without communication to the fraudulent party where that party had deliberately absconded but the true owner had nevertheless taken steps to trace him, for instance, by notifying the police and the Automobile Association. This exception to the general rule was justified by Upjohn L.J. as follows ⁹⁰⁹: "If one party, by absconding, deliberately puts it out of the power of the other to communicate his intention to rescind which he knows the other will almost certain want to do, I do not think he can any longer insist on his right to be made aware of the election to determine the contract. In these circumstances communication is a useless formality". The effect of this decision has, however, been considerably curtailed by the subsequent decision of the Court of Appeal in Newtons of Wembley Ltd v Williams. ⁹¹⁰ From this later case it would appear ⁹¹¹ that, notwithstanding that the true owner has avoided the seller's voidable title, the seller may be able to pass a good title under s.25, even if he cannot do so under s.23.

Sale to buyer

44-210

Although s.23 applies in its terms only to the situation where the person with a voidable title is a "seller" and the person seeking to establish a good title is a "buyer" of the goods, at common law a similar rule applies to a person with a voidable title who pledges the goods with an innocent pledgee. ⁹¹²

Good faith and notice

44-211

The burden of proving that the buyer bought with notice ⁹¹³ or otherwise than in good faith ⁹¹⁴ appears to rest upon the true owner. ⁹¹⁵

^{902.} See, e.g. Lewis v Averay [1972] 1 Q.B. 198; Vol.I, paras 3-036 et seq., 6-001.

^{903.} Truman v Attenborough (1910) 26 T.L.R. 601. But cf. Whitehorn Bros v Davidson [1911] 1 K.B. 463.

^{904.} But see below, para.44-218 (s.25).

^{905.} Whitehorn Bros v Davidson [1911] 1 K.B. 463 at 481; and see Robin and Rambler Coaches v Turner [1947] 2 All E.R. 284.

^{906.} Cundy v Lindsay (1878) 3 App. Cas. 459; Vol.I, para.3-042. The Law Reform Committee, Cmd.2958 (1966), para.15, recommended that contracts of sale that are void for mistake as to identity should be voidable as against a third party.

^{907.} Ingram v Little [1961] 1 Q.B. 31 (Vol.I, para.3-041). See also Lake v Simmons [1927] A.C. 487; Rigby (Haulage) Ltd v Reliance Marine Insurance Co [1956] 2 Q.B. 468, where Lake v Simmons was distinguished; Shogun Finance Ltd v Hudson [2003] UKHL 62, [2004] 1 A.C. 919. But cf. Lewis v Averay [1972] 1 Q.B. 198.

^{908.} [1965] 1 Q.B. 525. See also Thomas v Heelas, Nov. 27, 1986 (C.A.T. No.1065); Colwyn Bay Motorcycles v Poole [2000] C.L.Y. 4675 Ct. Contrast (Scotland) Macleod v Kerr, 1965 S.C. 253; Young v DS Dalgleish & Son (Hawick) 1994 S.C.L.R. 696 Sh Ct.

^{909.} At 555.

- 910. [1965] 1 Q.B. 560. See below, paras 44-218, 44-225.
- 911. In Newton's case, there appears to have been an agreement to sell, and not a sale of the goods. But see below, para.44-219.
- 912. Babcock v Lawson (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 284; Whitehorn Bros v Davidson [1911] 1 K.B. 463; Phillips v Brooks [1919] 2 K.B. 243.
- 913. See below, para.44-229.
- 914. Defined in s.61(3); see above, para.44-016.
- 915. Whitehorn Bros v Davidson [1911] 1 K.B. 463. But see Thomas v Heelas, November 27, 1986 (C.A.T. No.1065).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 4. - Effects of the Contract
(c) - Transfer of Title
(i) - Sale by Person not the Owner
(ff) - Disposition by Seller in Possession ⁹¹⁶

Seller in possession

44-212

By s.24 of the Act ⁹¹⁷:

“Where a person having sold goods continues or is in possession of the goods, or of the documents of title ⁹¹⁸ to the goods, the delivery or transfer by that person, or by a mercantile agent acting for him, ⁹¹⁹ of the goods or documents of title under any sale, pledge, or other disposition thereof, to any person receiving the same in good faith and without notice of the previous sale, has the same effect as if the person making the delivery or transfer were expressly authorised by the owner of the goods to make the same.”

The effect of this section is that where a seller in possession wrongfully disposes of the goods, contrary to the terms of the contract, to a person receiving them in good faith, ⁹²⁰ the title acquired by the latter prevails over that of the buyer.

Possession of seller

44-213

The seller must be or continue in possession ⁹²¹ of the goods sold or of the documents of title to the goods. It was at one time regarded as settled law that s.24 would only apply if the seller was in possession or continued in possession as seller, and that the subsection would not apply if, for example, he continued in possession in some other capacity, e.g. as bailee under a separate agreement. ⁹²² But this was not the view taken by the Privy Council in Pacific Motor Auctions Pty Ltd v Motor Credits (Hire Finance) Ltd. ⁹²³ In that case, dealers sold cars to the claimants, remaining in possession for display purposes and being authorised to sell as agents for the claimants. This authority was later revoked but the dealers sold to the defendants, who were bona fide purchasers. It was held that the defendants had obtained a good title by virtue of a provision identical to s.24. ⁹²⁴ The Privy Council decided that “continues ... in possession” in s.24 refers to the continuity of physical possession regardless of any private transaction between seller and buyer which might alter the legal title under which possession was held. In order to defeat the operation of s.24, there would have to be a break in the continuity of physical possession of the goods, for instance, by delivery of the goods to the buyer or to some third party. ⁹²⁵ But the subsection would not cease to apply where the seller simply attorned to the buyer as bailee. This decision was followed by the Court of Appeal in Worcester Works Finance Ltd v Cooden Engineering Co Ltd. ⁹²⁶

Consent of buyer

44-214

Section 24 does not require that the seller should continue or be in possession of the goods or documents of title with the consent of the buyer. ⁹²⁷

Delivery or transfer

44-215

he delivery ⁹²⁸ or transfer ⁹²⁹ of the goods or documents of title ⁹³⁰ must be effected “under”, i.e. in consequence of, a sale, pledge or other disposition thereof. So in Nicholson v Harper ⁹³¹ where a merchant sold wine stored in a warehouse and later pledged it to the warehouse-keeper to secure an advance made in good faith and without notice of the sale, the pledge was held by North J. to confer no title to the wine as there had been no delivery or transfer to the warehouseman after the sale. It was, however, subsequently held in the context of s.25(1) of the Act ⁹³² that a constructive delivery would suffice ⁹³³ and it is now clear that this also applies in the case of s.24. ⁹³⁴

Disposition

44-216

It has been said that “disposition” extends to all acts by which a new interest (legal or equitable) in the property is effectually created, ⁹³⁵ although there is some doubt whether a purely gratuitous disposition, e.g. a gift, would suffice. ⁹³⁶

Good faith and notice

44-217

The burden of proving good faith ⁹³⁷ and absence of notice ⁹³⁸ appears to rest upon the person receiving the goods. ⁹³⁹

^{916.} See Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.7–055; Merrett [2008] C.L.J. 376.

^{917.} 1979 Act s.24 reproduces, with slight modifications, s.8 of the Factors Act 1889.

^{918.} Defined, s.61(1), see above, para.44-016. See also below, para.44-218.

^{919.} As to mercantile agents, see above, para.31-079.

^{920.} See Rutherford and Todd [1979] C.L.J. 346.

^{921.} See s.1(2) of the Factors Act 1889 and City Fur Manufacturing Co Ltd v Fureenbond (Brokers) London Ltd [1937] 1 All E.R. 799.

^{922.} Staffs Motor Guarantee Ltd v British Wagon Co Ltd [1934] 2 K.B. 305; Ahrens Ltd v Cohen & Co Ltd (1934) 50 T.L.R. 411; Dore v Dore, The Times, March 18, 1953; Eastern Distributors Ltd v Goldring [1957] 2 Q.B. 600; Halfway Garage (Nottingham) Ltd v Lepley, Guardian, February 8, 1964. cf. Union Transport Finance Ltd v Ballardie [1937] 1 K.B. 510.

- 923. [1965] A.C. 867. For a discussion of this decision, see Thornely [1965] C.L.J. 181.
- 924. New South Wales Sale of Goods Act 1923–1953 s.28(1).
- 925. Mitchell v Jones (1905) 24 N.Z.L.R. 932; Olds Discount Co Ltd v Krett [1940] 2 K.B. 117; Worcester Works Finance Ltd v Cooden Engineering Co Ltd [1972] 1 Q.B. 210, 217–218.
- 926. [1972] 1 Q.B. 210. See also Astley Industrial Trust Ltd v Miller [1968] 2 All E.R. 36.
- 927. Worcester Works Finance Ltd v Cooden Engineering Co Ltd [1972] 1 Q.B. 210, 217–218.
- 928. As to whether physical delivery is required, see para.44-227, below (s.25).
- 929. In Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.7–062, it is suggested that these words should be read distributively in relation to “goods” and “documents of title to goods”. See Nicholson v Harper [1895] 2 Ch. 415; Kitto v Bilbie, Hobson & Co (1895) 72 L.T. 266, 267; Ahrens Ltd v Cohen, Sons & Co Ltd (1934) 30 T.L.R. 411, 412; cf. Worcester Works Finance Ltd v Cooden Engineering Co Ltd [1972] 1 Q.B. 210.
- 930. cf. Mount Ltd v Jay and Jay (Provisions) Ltd [1960] 1 Q.B. 159, 168; see below, para.44-341.
- 931. [1895] 2 Ch. 415.
- 932. See below, para.44-227.
- 933. Gamers Motor Centre (Newcastle) Pty Ltd v Natwest Wholesale Australia Pty Ltd (1987) 63 C.L.R. 236; Forsyth International (UK) Ltd v Silver Shipping Co Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 268. See also Four Point Garage Ltd v Carter [1985] 2 All E.R. 12, and see below, para.44-227.
- 934. Michael Gerson (Leasing) Ltd v Wilkinson [2001] Q.B. 514; see below, para.44-227.
- 935. Worcester Works Finance Ltd v Cooden Engineering Co Ltd [1972] 1 Q.B. 210, 218. cf. P4 Ltd v Unite Integrated Systems Plc [2006] B.L.R. 150 at [18].
- 936. cf. Kitto v Bilbie Hobson & Co (1895) 72 O.T. 266; Worcester Works Finance Ltd v Cooden Engineering Co Ltd [1972] 1 Q.B. 210, Preston (1972) 88 L.Q.R. 239.
- 937. Defined, s.61(3); see above, para.44-016.
- 938. See below, para.44-229.
- 939. Heap v Motorists' Advisory Agency Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 577 (Factors Act 1889 s.2).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 4. - Effects of the Contract
(c) - Transfer of Title
(i) - Sale by Person not the Owner
(gg) - Disposition by Buyer in Possession 940

Buyer in possession

44-218

By subs.(1) of s.25 941:

“Where a person having bought or agreed to buy goods obtains, with the consent of the seller, possession of the goods or the documents of title 942 to the goods, the delivery or transfer by that person, or by a mercantile agent 943 acting for him, of the goods or documents of title, 944 under any sale, pledge, or other disposition thereof, to any person receiving the same in good faith and without notice of any lien or other right of the original seller in respect of the goods, has the same effect as if the person making the delivery or transfer were a mercantile agent in possession of the goods or documents of title with the consent of the owner.”

The effect of this subsection is, for example, that a seller who agrees to sell goods to a buyer and retains title to them until the price is paid, but who nevertheless allows the buyer to have possession of the goods, may lose his title if the buyer wrongfully sells the goods to an innocent purchaser.

“Having bought”

44-219

The inclusion of the words “having bought” has been criticised as superfluous in that it is unnecessary to protect a third party who has bought from a buyer in possession and to whom the property has already passed. But if the buyer has a voidable title (for instance, where he has obtained the goods by fraud) and this has been avoided by the seller, the buyer may yet be a person who has bought within the meaning of s.25(1): in consequence, although the property has reverted to the seller, he may be able to pass a good title to a third party buyer in good faith. In Newtons of Wembley Ltd v Williams 945 a buyer obtained goods by fraud. The seller, having attempted to trace him, rescinded the contract and thus avoided the buyer’s title. But it was held that, as the buyer had agreed to buy the goods and obtained possession of them with the seller’s consent, such consent was deemed to continue 946 and he could pass a good title under s.25(1) to a third party buyer in good faith. 947 The same reasoning, it is submitted, would apply where the buyer bought and not merely agreed to buy the goods. 948

“Having ... agreed to buy”

44-220

With regard to the phrase “agreed to buy”, it is necessary to distinguish between those situations where the buyer is contractually bound to purchase the goods and those situations where he is not under any such binding obligation. Under a hire-purchase agreement, for example, the hirer is not bound to purchase the goods, but has merely an option to do so: thus until he exercises the option he is not a person who has bought or agreed to buy goods. In consequence he cannot pass a good title to a buyer in good faith by virtue of s.25(1). ⁹⁴⁹ The same is true where goods are delivered “on sale or return”. ⁹⁵⁰ or under a contract for work and materials. ⁹⁵¹ In a conditional sale agreement, on the other hand, the buyer is bound to purchase the goods and, accordingly, at common law, he is a person who has agreed to buy the goods; thus he can pass a good title by s.25(1). ⁹⁵² However, where the agreement is one which is a consumer credit agreement within the meaning of the Consumer Credit Act 1974, ⁹⁵³ the buyer is to be deemed not to be a person who has bought or agreed to buy goods, and so cannot pass title by virtue of the subsection. ⁹⁵⁴

Possession of buyer

44-221

⚠ Having bought or agreed to buy goods the buyer must obtain possession of the goods or the documents of title to the goods. ⁹⁵⁵ ⚠ By s.1(2) of the Factors Act 1889, a buyer will be deemed to be in possession of goods or of the documents of title to goods, where the goods or documents of title are in his actual custody or are held by any other person subject to his control or for him or on his behalf. ⁹⁵⁶

Meaning of “consent of seller”

44-222

The meaning of “consent” in this context was at one time somewhat controversial. But it is now settled that the crucial question is whether the seller in fact consented to the buyer's possession. It is immaterial that the goods have been obtained by fraud or in circumstances amounting to theft if the de facto consent of the seller has been given. ⁹⁵⁷

Consent withdrawn

44-223

Where possession of goods is in fact obtained with the consent of the seller, s.2(2) of the Factors Act provides that such consent is deemed to continue notwithstanding that it has been withdrawn, provided that the third party had no notice of the withdrawal. Thus in Newtons of Wembley Ltd v Williams ⁹⁵⁸ the fact that the contract had been rescinded by the seller did not mean that he had withdrawn his consent to the buyer continuing in possession; and accordingly the latter was able to pass a good title under s.25(1).

Burden of proof

44-224

The consent of the seller is to be presumed in the absence of evidence to the contrary, ⁹⁵⁹ so that the burden is on him to prove the lack of consent.

Mercantile agent

44-225

Section 25(1) provides that a delivery or transfer of the goods or documents of title by a buyer in possession is to have:

“... the same effect as if the person making the delivery or transfer were a mercantile agent in possession of the goods or documents of title with the consent of the owner.”

This necessitates a reference to s.2 of the Factors Act which applies to the case of a disposition by a mercantile agent, and validates the disposition only where it is made by a mercantile agent when acting in the ordinary course of business as a mercantile agent. Where the buyer is in fact a mercantile agent acting in the course of his business, clearly there is no difficulty and the transaction is validated. And where he is not so acting it seems equally clear that the transaction is not validated.⁹⁶⁰ The difficulty arises where the buyer is not a mercantile agent at all, for it is not easy to see how such a person could be said to be acting in the ordinary course of business of a mercantile agent. This problem arose for consideration in Newtons of Wembley Ltd v Williams.⁹⁶¹ Pearson L.J. said⁹⁶²:

“It follows that, when applying the hypothesis in s.2, one assumes that he is a mercantile agent: if he has a business it is assumed to be the business of a mercantile agent; or the other way of putting it is that the transaction will be validated if this buyer is doing something which would constitute acting in the ordinary course of business if he were a mercantile agent.”

Thus, as the original buyer was not a mercantile agent, it was said that he must act in the way he would have been expected to act if he had been a mercantile agent; and that here he had done so as the sale had taken place in a recognised street market.⁹⁶³

44-226

A sale of a second-hand vehicle without its registration document is ordinarily not in the ordinary course of business.⁹⁶⁴

Delivery or transfer

44-227

As in the case of s.24 of the Act,⁹⁶⁵ there must be a “delivery or transfer” of the goods or documents of title under any sale, pledge or other disposition thereof.⁹⁶⁶ The question, however, arises under both sections whether an actual, as opposed to constructive, delivery of the goods is required.⁹⁶⁷ In *Gamer’s Motor Centre (Newcastle) Pty Ltd v Natwest Wholesale Australia Pty Ltd*⁹⁶⁸ the defendant sellers delivered to car dealers possession of certain vehicles under an agreement for a sale by which they reserved property in the vehicles until the price was paid. The dealers immediately sold the vehicles to the claimants, who bought them in good faith, but allowed the dealers to retain possession of them for the purposes of display though reserving the right to take possession of the vehicles at any time without notice. The High Court of Australia, by a bare majority, held that “delivery” in s.25(1) did not require a physical delivery of the goods to the donee. There was a sufficient delivery of the vehicles by the dealers to the claimants when the character of the dealers’ possession changed and they became bailees of the vehicles for the claimants.⁹⁶⁹ The conclusion that a constructive delivery of the goods will suffice was endorsed in relation to s.25(1) by Clarke J. in *Forsyth International (UK) Ltd v Silver Shipping Co Ltd*⁹⁷⁰ and adopted in relation to s.24 by the Court of Appeal in Michael Gerson (Leasing) Ltd v Wilkinson.⁹⁷¹ It must therefore now be taken to represent English law.⁹⁷² A physical delivery of the goods by the seller to the donee at the request of the buyer will in any event be a sufficient delivery, since such delivery will be considered to have been effected by him as agent for the buyer.⁹⁷³ The delivery (whether actual or constructive) must be voluntary.⁹⁷⁴

Effect of delivery or transfer

44-228

Despite the fact that the subsection states that the delivery or transfer shall have the same effect as if the buyer were a mercantile agent in possession of the goods or documents of title with the consent of the owner, a buyer whose possession of the goods derives ultimately from a thief cannot pass title to an innocent purchaser. ⁹⁷⁵

Good faith and notice

44-229

The burden of proving good faith and absence of notice rests upon the person receiving the goods. ⁹⁷⁶ “Good faith” is defined in s.61(3). ⁹⁷⁷ “Notice” in this subsection and other similar provisions ⁹⁷⁸ prima facie means actual notice. ⁹⁷⁹ The doctrine of constructive notice does not normally apply to commercial transactions, and there is no general duty on a buyer of goods in an ordinary commercial transaction to make inquiries as to the right of the seller to dispose of the goods. ⁹⁸⁰ However, means of knowledge in his power wilfully disregarded will amount to notice, i.e. “deliberately turning a blind eye”. ⁹⁸¹ Moreover, the test to be applied is an objective one, that is to say, would the circumstances known to the buyer lead him to conclude, as a reasonable man, that the relevant fact existed. ⁹⁸² And it has been said that “if by an objective test clear notice was given liability cannot be avoided by proof merely of the absence of actual knowledge”. ⁹⁸³

^{940.} See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.7–069; Merrett [2008] C.L.J. 376.

^{941.} Re-enacting, with slight modifications, s.9 of the Factors Act 1889.

^{942.} Defined, s.61(1), see above, para.44-015. A vehicle registration document is not a document of title: Pearson v Rose and Young Ltd [1957] 1 Q.B. 275; Central Newbury Car Auctions Ltd v Unity Finance Ltd [1957] 1 Q.B. 371; J Sargent (Garages) Ltd v Motor Auctions (West Bromwich) Ltd [1977] R.T.R. 121; Beverley Acceptances Ltd v Oakley [1982] R.T.R. 417; Shaw v Commissioner of Metropolitan Police [1987] 1 W.L.R. 1322, 1335–1336.

^{943.} As to mercantile agents, see above, para.31-079

^{944.} See Mount Ltd v Jay and Jay (Provisions) Co Ltd [1960] 1 Q.B. 159, see below, para.44-341, where Salmon J. said obiter that the document which is transferred to the sub-purchaser need not be the same document as that which was given to the buyer; and therefore that the requirements of s.25(1) are less rigorous than those of what is now s.47(2).

^{945.} [1965] 1 Q.B. 560; see also below, para.44-225.

^{946.} Within s.2(2) of the Factors Act 1889; see below, para.44-223.

^{947.} Car and Universal Finance Co Ltd v Caldwell [1965] 1 Q.B. 525 was distinguished on the ground that there the buyer from the seller with a voidable title had notice of the defect and so could not be protected by s.25(1).

^{948.} Thus the disponent could acquire a good title under s.25(1), even though he could not do so under s.23.

^{949.} Helby v Matthews [1895] A.C. 471; Payne v Wilson [1895] 2 Q.B. 537; Belsize Motor Supply Co v Cox [1914] 1 K.B. 244; Modern Light Cars Ltd v Seals [1934] 1 K.B. 32; Close Asset Finance Ltd v Care Graphics Machinery, Ltd [2000] E.C.L.R. 43. Contrast Forthright Finance Ltd v

- Carlyle Finance Ltd* [1997] 4 All E.R. 90. See above, para.39-307. But see the exception for motor vehicles established by the Hire-Purchase Act 1964; see above, para.39-402.
950. Edwards v Vaughan (1910) 26 T.L.R. 545. But see London Jewellers Ltd v Attenborough [1934] 2 K.B. 206, and s.18 r.4 of the Act; see above, para.44-146.
951. Dawber Williamson Roofing Ltd v Humberside CC (1979) 14 Build. L.R. 70.
952. Lee v Butler [1893] 2 Q.B. 318. See above, para.39-464.
953. ss.8(1), 189(1).
954. See above, para.39-464. A "conditional sale agreement" means an agreement for the sale of goods which is a consumer credit agreement within the meaning of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 (s.8(2)) under which the purchase price or part of it is payable by instalments, and the property in the goods is to remain in the seller (notwithstanding that the buyer is to be in possession of the goods) until such condition as to payment of instalments or otherwise as may be specified in the agreement are fulfilled: see Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.25(2)(4), Sch.1 para.9 and Sch.4 para.1; Consumer Credit Act 1974 s.192 and Sch.4 paras 2, 4 (SI 1983/1572). A conditional sale agreement is a consumer credit agreement if the buyer is an "individual", as defined in s.189(1) of the 1974 Act, as amended by the Consumer Credit Act 2006: see above, para.39-443. See also for the removal of the general financial limit by the 2006 Act, above, para.39-010.
955.  See for example Carlos Soto SAV v AP Moller-Maersk AS [2015] EWHC 458 (Comm), where the buyer had obtained a bill of lading in good faith and without notice. cf. Four Point Garage Ltd v Carter [1985] 3 All E.R. 12 (buyer requests seller to deliver goods direct to a sub-purchaser).
956. Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Warriner (1896) 12 T.L.R. 216; Forsythe International (UK) Ltd v Silver Shipping Co Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 268. cf. Fairfax Gerrard Holdings Ltd v Capital Bank Plc [2006] EWHC 3439, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 170 (reversed on other grounds, [2007] EWCA Civ 1226, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 297).
957. Du Jardin v Beadman Bros Ltd [1952] 2 Q.B. 712.
958. [1965] 1 Q.B. 560; see above, para.44-219.
959. Factors Act 1889 s.2(4).
960. See Newtons of Wembley Ltd v Williams [1965] 1 Q.B. 560, 579; Colwyn Bay Motorcycles v Poole [2000] C.L.Y. 4675 Cty Ct.
961. [1965] 1 Q.B. 560; see also above, paras 44-219, 44-223. A similar problem was considered in Lambert v G&C Finance Corp (1963) 107 S.J. 666. See also Angara Maritime Ltd v Ocean-Connect UK Ltd [2010] EWHC 619 (QB), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 61.
962. At 579.
963. The general implications of this decision have been much criticised. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.7–081; Cornish (1964) 27 M.L.R. 472; Thornely [1965] C.L.J. 24; Langmead v Thyer Rubber Co Ltd [1947] S.A.S.R. 29, 39; Jeffcott v Andrew Motors Ltd [1960] N.Z.L.R. 721, 729; Gamer's Motor Centre (Newcastle) Pty Ltd v Natwest Wholesale Australia Pty Ltd (1987) 163 C.L.R. 236, 243, 252; Forsyth International (UK) Ltd v Silver Shipping Co Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 268, 280. The Law Reform Committee, Cmnd.2958 (1966), para.23, recommended an amendment to s.25(1) so as to make it unnecessary for the buyer in possession of goods to have acted in disposing of them, as if he were a mercantile agent.
964. Stadium Finance Ltd v Robbins [1962] 2 Q.B. 664; Lambert v G&C Finance Corp (1963) 107 S.J. 666. Drevertton v Regal Garage Ltd [1998] C.L.Y. 4382. See also Pearson v Rose and Young Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 275; George v Revis (1966) 111 S.J. 51 (stolen registration book).

965. See above, para.44-215.

966. Or (by virtue of s.9 of the Factors Act 1889) under any agreement for the sale, pledge or other disposition thereof: see Shenstone & Co v Hilton [1894] 2 Q.B. 452. For the meaning of “disposition”, see para.44-216 above. cf. W. Hanson (Harrow) Ltd v Rapid Civil Engineering Ltd (1987) 38 Build. L.R. 106; Re Highway Foods International [1995] B.C.L.C. 209.

967. See Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.7–077.

968. (1987) 63 C.L.R. 236.

969. Pacific Motor Auctions Pty Ltd v Motor Credits (Hire Finance) Ltd [1965] A.C. 867; see above, para.44-213.

970. [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 268.

971. [2001] Q.B. 514.

972. Even though it does not appear to accord with the decision of North J. in Nicholson v Harper [1895] 2 Ch. 415; see above, para.44-215.

973. Four Point Garage Ltd v Carter [1985] 3 All E.R. 12.

974. Forsyth International (UK) Ltd v Silver Shipping Co Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 268; Angara Maritime Ltd v OceanConnect UK Ltd [2010] EWHC 619 (QB), [2011] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 61. cf. Worcester Works Finance Ltd v Cooden Engineering Co Ltd [1972] 1 Q.B. 210 (voluntary surrender of goods).

975. National Mutual General Insurance Ltd v Jones [1990] 1 A.C. 24.

976. Heap v Motorists’ Advisory Agency Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 577; Lambert v G & C Finance Corp (1963) 107 S.J. 666; Feuer Leather Corp v Frank Johnstone & Sons [1981] Com. L.R. 251, 253; Forsyth International (UK) Ltd v Silver Shipping Co Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 268, 279.

977. See above, para.44-016.

978. Sale of Goods Act 1979 ss.22, 23, 24; s.2(1) of the Factors Act 1889; and see s.138(2) of the Senior Courts Act 1981 (now replaced: see para.44-231).

979. Feuer Leather Corp v Frank Johnstone & Sons [1981] Com. L.R. 251, 253; Forsyth International (UK) Ltd v Silver Shipping Co Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 268, 279; P4 Ltd v Unite Integrated Solutions Plc [2006] Build. L.R. 150.

980. Hambro v Burnand [1904] 2 K.B. 10, 20; Dobell, Beckett & Co v Neilson (1904) 7F. 281, 288; Reckett v Barnet and Slater Ltd [1928] 2 K.B. 244, 258, 266; reversed [1929] A.C. 176; Feuer Leather Corp v Frank Johnstone & Sons, above, at 253; Forsyth International (UK) Ltd v Silver Shipping Co Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 279; Carlos Soto SAU v AP Moller-Maersk AS (The SFL Hawk) [2015] EWHC 458 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 537.

981. Heap v Motorists’ Advisory Agency Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 577, 591; Worcester Works Finance Ltd v Cooden Engineering Co Ltd [1972] 1 Q.B. 210, 218; Feuer Leather Corp v Frank Johnstone & Sons, above, at 253; Forsyth International (UK) Ltd v Silver Shipping Co Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 268, 279; Summers v Havard [2011] EWCA Civ 764, [2011] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 283 at [16].

982. Evans v Trueman (1830) 1 Moody & R. 10, 12; Navulshaw v Brownrigg (1852) 2 De G.M. & G. 441, 451; Feuer Leather Corp v Frank Johnstone & Sons [1981] Com. L.R. 251, 253; Forsyth International (UK) Ltd v Silver Shipping Co Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 279; Ceres Orchard Partnership v Fiatagari Australia Pty Ltd [1995] N.Z.L.R. 112, 117.

983. Feuer Leather Corp v Frank Johnstone & Sons [1981] Com. L.R. 251 at 253; Forsyth International (UK) Ltd v Silver Shipping Co Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 268 at 279; Fairfax Gerrard Holdings Ltd v Capital Bank Plc [2006] EWHC 3439, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 170 at [31(e)] (reversed on the grounds [2007] EWCA Civ 1226, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 297).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 4. - Effects of the Contract
(c) - Transfer of Title
(i) - Sale by Person not the Owner
(hh) - Sale of a Motor Vehicle under the Hire-Purchase Act 1964

Sale of a motor vehicle under the Hire-Purchase Act 1964

44-230

The Hire-Purchase Act 1964 ⁹⁸⁴ creates an important further exception to the general rule set out in s.21(1) of the 1979 Act. This is discussed in detail elsewhere. ⁹⁸⁵ Briefly, it is provided that the disposition of a motor vehicle by a hirer under a hirepurchase agreement or by a buyer under a conditional sale agreement to a private purchaser in good faith and without notice is effective to vest a good title in such a purchaser. The operation of this Act is not confined to agreements within the statutory control of the Consumer Credit Act 1974.

⁹⁸⁴. ss.27–29 (as re-enacted from May 19, 1985 (see SI 1983/1551 (C. 44)) by s.192 of and Sch.4 para.22 to the Consumer Credit Act 1974).

⁹⁸⁵. See above, paras 39-402 et seq.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 4. - Effects of the Contract
(c) - Transfer of Title
(ii) - Effect on Title of Warrants of Control

Effect on title of writs or warrants of execution

44-231

From April 6, 2014 ⁹⁸⁶ the provisions previously contained in para.8(1) of Sch.7 to the Courts Act 2003 ⁹⁸⁷ were replaced by Pt 3 of Sch.12 to the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 and the old “writs of execution” were renamed warrants of control. The property in the goods of the debtor becomes bound from the time when a writ issued by the High Court is received. ⁹⁸⁸ However, subpara.5(2) of para.5 to Sch.2 provides that the provisions are not to prejudice the title to any goods of the execution debtor acquired by a person in good faith and for valuable consideration ⁹⁸⁹ without notice. ⁹⁹⁰ Thus, a warrant of control does not prevent the property passing on a sale of them by the execution debtor, although the buyer, if he has notice or is not in good faith, takes the goods subject to the rights of the execution creditor. ⁹⁹¹ If he has no notice and is in good faith, the buyer acquires an unencumbered title provided that the warrant has not been executed. Once, however, the warrant has been executed by seizure of the goods then the execution debtor cannot pass an unencumbered title to a buyer, even though the goods have been seized under arrangements which leave the debtor in possession of the goods. ⁹⁹²

⁹⁸⁶. Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 (Commencement No.11) Order 2014 (SI 2014/768).

⁹⁸⁷. Replacing s.138 of the Senior Courts Act 1981.

⁹⁸⁸. Sch.12, 4(2). Where the power is conferred by a warrant to which s.99 of the County Courts Act 1984 (c.28) or s.125ZA of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 (c.43) applies, the warrant binds the property in the goods from the time when it is received by the person who is under a duty to endorse it under that section (Sch.12, 5(1)).

⁹⁸⁹. Beeber & Co v Turner's Successors (1931) 48 T.L.R. 61 cf. Re Cooper [1958] Ch. 922, 928. See also Ellis & Co v Cross [1915] 2 K.B. 654.

⁹⁹⁰. See Ehlers v Kauffman (1883) 49 L.T. 806.

⁹⁹¹. Samuel v Duke (1838) 3 M. & W. 622; Woodland v Fuller (1840) 11 A. & E. 859, 867; McPherson Temiskaming Lumber Co Ltd [1913] A.C. 145, 156.

⁹⁹². Lloyds & Scottish Finance Ltd v Modern Cars & Caravans (Kingston) Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 764.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 4. - Effects of the Contract

(c) - Transfer of Title

(iii) - Effect of Limitation

Limitation

44-232

Where goods have been converted, the owner of the goods has six years thereafter ⁹⁹³ in which to bring an action in respect of that and all subsequent acts of conversion whether or not committed by the same person. ⁹⁹⁴ After the expiration of that period, unless he has previously recovered possession, s.3(2) of the Limitation Act 1980 provides that his title to the goods is extinguished. However, these rules are qualified where the goods have been stolen. ⁹⁹⁵ As against a purchaser in good faith of stolen goods or a person who has converted the goods following such a purchase, the owner's title is extinguished and his right to claim damages barred, after six years from the date of purchase. ⁹⁹⁶ But otherwise the right of a person from whom goods are stolen to bring an action in respect of the theft or of any conversion following the theft is not barred by limitation, nor is his title to the goods extinguished. ⁹⁹⁷ And the same applies to cases where the goods are obtained by deception ⁹⁹⁸ or blackmail. ⁹⁹⁹ Theft and these allied offences are therefore "imprescriptible" as against the person from whom the goods are stolen, and no subsequent converter (other than a bona fide purchaser or person claiming through such a purchaser) can claim the benefit of limitation. ¹⁰⁰⁰

Actions for the recovery of property obtained through unlawful conduct etc

44-233

By s.27A of the Limitation Act 1980 ¹⁰⁰¹ (inserted by s.288 of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002) none of the limits given in the preceding provisions of the 1980 Act apply to any proceedings under Ch.2 of Pt 5 of the 2002 Act (civil recovery of proceeds of unlawful conduct) brought by a "relevant person", that is to say, by the Serious Organised Crime Agency, the Director of Public Prosecutions, the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions or the Director of the Serious Fraud Office. ¹⁰⁰² A relevant person has 12 years in which to bring proceedings ¹⁰⁰³ for a recovery order from the date on which his cause of action accrued. ¹⁰⁰⁴ Moreover, if proceedings are started by a relevant person for a recovery order in respect of a chattel, s.3(2) of the 1980 Act does not prevent a claimant from asserting on an application under s.281 of the 2002 Act (victims of theft, etc.) that the property belongs to him, or the court making a declaration in his favour under that section. If the court makes such a declaration, his title to the chattel is to be treated as not having been extinguished by s.3(2) of the 1980 Act.

^{993.} Unless he has recovered possession in the meantime.

^{994.} Limitation Act 1980 ss.2, 3(1). But see s.32 of the 1980 Act.

^{995.} See the Twenty-first Report of the Law Reform Committee, Cmnd.6923 (1977), paras 3.1 et seq.

996. Limitation Act 1980 s.4(1), (2).

997. Limitation Act 1980 s.4(1), (2), (3).

998. Limitation Act 1980 s.4(5)(b); Theft Act 1968 s.15(1).

999. Limitation Act 1980 s.4(5)(b); Theft Act 1968 s.21.

1000. By s.4(4) of the 1980 Act, the claimant bears the burden of proving that the goods were stolen from him or anyone through whom he claims, but the defendant bears the burden of proving that he is or claims through a bona fide purchaser. See Kuwait Airways Corp v Iraqi Airways Co (Nos 4 and 5) [2002] UKHL 19, [2002] 2 A.C. 883 at [103].

1001. As amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 Sch.6 para.2; Serious Crime Act 2007 Sch.8 para.147.

1002. 1980 Act s.27A(8).

1003. Defined in s.27A(3).

1004. Defined in s.27A(4).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 5. - Performance of the Contract

(a) - Duties of Seller and Buyer

Duties of seller and buyer

44-234

By s.27:

"It is the duty of the seller to deliver 1005 the goods, and of the buyer to accept 1006 and pay for them, in accordance with the terms of the contract of sale."

44-235

By s.28:

"Unless otherwise agreed, 1007 delivery of the goods and payment of the price are concurrent conditions, that is to say, the seller must be ready and willing to give possession of the goods to the buyer in exchange for the price and the buyer must be ready and willing to pay the price in exchange for possession of the goods." 1008

In cases to which the section does apply, the rule is that the seller can claim the price only when ready and willing to deliver the goods, and the buyer can claim the goods only when ready and willing to pay the price. The section is, however, satisfied if the party making the claim is in a position to perform his side of the contract; he need not tender. 1009

44-236

The effect of s.28 may be adopted by express terms. Thus if, for instance, it is provided that payment is to be made against documents, tender of the documents and payment are concurrent conditions. 1010 Section 28 prima facie applies to CIF contracts. It must be noted that here of course documents represent the goods, 1011 so that the duty of the seller is to tender the shipping documents, and the buyer must pay the price on tender of the documents even though the goods are still afloat. 1012

Export or import licences 1013

44-237

It seems that there is no general rule as to whether, in the absence of an express provision in the contract, it is the duty of the seller or of the buyer to obtain any necessary export or import licence. The question is one of construction. This was the approach favoured by the House of Lords in Pound

& Co Ltd v Hardy & Co Inc. ¹⁰¹⁴ In that case a buyer agreed to buy turpentine from the seller, f.a.s. the buyer's ship at Lisbon; the destination of the turpentine was East Germany, as the seller knew. Turpentine could not be exported from Portugal without a licence, and this was not granted. It was held that on the construction of the contract and in the light of the surrounding circumstances, the obligation to obtain the licence lay on the seller; but the House of Lords was clearly of the opinion that each case must depend on its own facts. Once it has been determined upon whom the duty lies, it is then necessary to consider whether that duty is an absolute one, ¹⁰¹⁵ or whether it is merely a duty to use best endeavours and reasonable diligence to obtain a licence. ¹⁰¹⁶

Letters of credit ¹⁰¹⁷

44-238

In Ian Stach Ltd v Baker, Bosley Ltd ¹⁰¹⁸ Diplock J. said: "The commercial purpose of a banker's confirmed credit is more than a mere method of payment: it creates a direct liability on the banker independent of the contract of sale, and is an undertaking by the banker that if the seller presents the required documents in the required time he will receive payment of the contract price". Where the parties to an export sale arrange for payment under a letter of credit without arranging when the credit shall be opened, the credit has to be opened sufficiently early to enable the seller to be assured of payment during the whole agreed shipment period. This now seems to be the rule with regard both to CIF and FOB contracts. For CIF contracts, it was decided in Pavia & Co SpA v Thurmann-Nielson ¹⁰¹⁹ that the letter of credit must be opened at the latest by the beginning of the shipment period. But a different view was expressed in Sinason-Teicher Inter-American Grain Corp v Oilcakes and Oilseeds Trading Co Ltd, ¹⁰²⁰ which concerned a bank guarantee for payment to be given to the sellers. Lord Denning stated ¹⁰²¹: "The correct view is that, if nothing is said about time in the contract, the buyer must provide the letter of credit within a reasonable time before the first date for shipment. The same applies to a bank guarantee". With regard to FOB contracts, it was decided in Ian Stach Ltd v Baker, Bosley Ltd ¹⁰²² that it was the buyer's duty to open the credit at the latest by the first day of the shipping period, and not a reasonable time before the date nominated by the buyer in the shipping instructions. If a date for opening of the credit is stipulated, the buyer must furnish it by that date. ¹⁰²³ ¹⁰⁰⁵. "Delivery" is defined in s.61(1), see above, para.44-015. But usually it is the duty of the buyer to collect the goods: s.29(2), see below, para.44-242.

¹⁰⁰⁶. See also ss.20, 37.

¹⁰⁰⁷. For an example of a contrary implication, see Amos & Wood Ltd v Kaprow (1948) 64 T.L.R. 110.

¹⁰⁰⁸. But payment of price in exchange for possession does not of itself preclude the buyer from subsequently rejecting the goods. See ss.34 and 35, see below, paras 44-277—44-289.

¹⁰⁰⁹. Levey & Co Ltd v Goldberg [1922] 1 K.B. 688, 692.

¹⁰¹⁰. Polenghi Bros v Dried Milk Co Ltd (1904) 92 L.T. 64.

¹⁰¹¹. By "documents" is meant the bill of lading, the insurance policy and the invoice (unless otherwise agreed).

¹⁰¹². See E Clemens Horst & Co v Biddell Brothers [1912] A.C. 18: but payment does not deprive the buyer of the right to reject the goods; see s.35, see below, para.44-278.

¹⁰¹³. See Vol.I, para.14-016, and Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 18—356.

¹⁰¹⁴. [1956] A.C. 588; distinguishing Brandt & Co v Morris & Co Ltd [1917] 2 K.B. 784; observations of Scrutton L.J. (which might be read as placing duty primarily on buyer) limited to facts of that case.

- 1015. e.g. KC Sethia Ltd v Partabmul Rameshwar [1950] 1 All E.R. 51; affirmed [1951] 2 All E.R. 352n.; Peter Cassidy Seed Co v Osuustukkukauppa Ltd [1957] 1 W.L.R. 273. cf. Pagnan SpA v Tradax Ocean Transportation SA [1987] 3 All E.R. 565.
- 1016. e.g. Re Anglo-Russian Merchant Traders and John Batt & Co (London) Ltd [1917] 2 K.B. 679.
- 1017. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), Ch.23; see above, Ch.34.
- 1018. [1958] 2 Q.B. 130, 139.
- 1019. [1952] 2 Q.B. 84.
- 1020. [1954] 1 W.L.R. 1394. See also above, para.34-492.
- 1021. At 1400.
- 1022. [1958] 2 Q.B. 130; see also Heisler v Anglo-Dal Ltd [1954] 1 W.L.R. 1273; Glencore Grain Rotterdam BV v Lebanese Organisation for International Commerce [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 386; Kolmar Group AG v Traxpo Enterprises Pvt Ltd [2010] EWHC 113 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 653.
- 1023. Nichimen Corp v Gatoil Overseas Inc [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 47; Vitol SA v Conoil Plc [2009] EWHC 1144 (Comm), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 466. But the seller may agree to extend the time or be held to have waived the failure: see Vol.I, paras 22-040—22-047.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 5. - Performance of the Contract

(b) - Rules Governing Delivery

Delivery

44-239

Delivery is defined ¹⁰²⁴ to mean “voluntary transfer of possession from one person to another”. Delivery may be actual or constructive. ¹⁰²⁵ There will be actual delivery where possession of goods is transferred from the seller to the buyer, or to a carrier (whether named by the buyer or not) for the purpose of transmission to the buyer. ¹⁰²⁶ Delivery is constructive when it is effected without any change in the actual possession of the thing delivered, as in the case of delivery by attornment (i.e. acknowledgement) or symbolic delivery. ¹⁰²⁷ Delivery by attornment may take place in three classes of cases. ¹⁰²⁸ First, the seller may be in possession of the goods, but after the sale he may attorn to the buyer, and continue to hold the goods as his bailee. ¹⁰²⁹ Secondly, the goods may be in the possession of the buyer before sale, but after the sale he may hold them on his own account. ¹⁰³⁰ Thirdly, the goods may be in the possession of a third person, as bailee for the seller. After the sale such third person may attorn to the buyer and continue to hold them as bailee. ¹⁰³¹

44-240

The transfer of possession must in all cases be voluntary. ¹⁰³² Section 29 contains rules relating to the place, time, expense and other details of the delivery; they will be considered in the following paragraphs. It must be emphasised that the rules apply only if the parties have not expressly or impliedly made other arrangements.

44-241

The Consumer Rights Directive 2011 required there to be special rules governing delivery in consumer contracts. This Directive was initially implemented in reg.42 of the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013 ¹⁰³³ which contained provisions relating to the time for delivery of the goods where the contract of sale is made between a buyer who is a “consumer” and a seller who is a “trader” (as defined in reg.4) and is entered into on or after June 13, 2014. Regulation 42 is now subsumed by the special rules relating to delivery in consumer sales contracts contained in the Consumer Rights Act 2015. ¹⁰³⁴

^{1024.} 1979 Act s.61(1); see above, para.44-015.

^{1025.} But delivery for the purpose of one rule in the Act need not necessarily be delivery for the purpose of another separate rule: see Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.8–002.

^{1026.} See s.32(1); see below, para.44-269.

^{1027.} Ellis v Hunt (1789) 3 T.R. 464, 468; Chaplin v Rogers (1800) 1 East 192, 195; Elmore v Stone (1809) 1 Taunt. 458, 460; Ancona v Rogers (1876) 1 Ex. D. 285, 290; Hilton v Tucker (1888) 39

Ch. D. 669, 676; Lloyd's Bank Ltd v Swiss Bankverein (1913) 108 L.T. 143, 146; Wrightson v McArthur and Hutchinson (1919) Ltd [1921] 2 K.B. 807, 816.

1028. Chalmers Sale of Goods Act 1893, 5th edn, p.118.

1029. Dublin City Distillery Ltd v Doherty [1914] A.C. 823, 843; Gamers' Motor Centre (Newcastle) Pty Ltd v Natwest Wholesale Australia Pty Ltd (1987) 163 C.L.R. 236; Michael Gerson (Leasing) Ltd v Wilkinson [2001] Q.B. 514.

1030. Manton v Moore (1796) 7 T.R. 67; Eden v Dudfield (1841) 1 Q.B. 302; Lillywhite v Devereux (1846) 15 M. & W. 285; Forsythe International (UK) Ltd v Silver Shipping Co Ltd [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 268, 276. cf. Nicholson v Harper [1895] 2 Ch. 415; see above, para.44-215.

1031. See s.29(4); see below, para.44-252.

1032. Forsythe International (UK) Ltd v Silver Shipping Co Ltd, above: cf. Worcester Works Finance Ltd v Cooden Engineering Co Ltd [1972] 1 Q.B. 210.

1033. SI 2013/3134, amended by SI 2014/870. The Regulations are subject to the exceptions set out in reg.6.

1034. See above, para.38-489.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 5. - Performance of the Contract

(b) - Rules Governing Delivery

(i) - Place of Delivery

Place of delivery

44-242

By s.29(1):

“Whether it is for the buyer to take possession of the goods or for the seller to send them to the buyer is a question of depending in each case on the contract, express or implied, between the parties.”

And by s.29(2):

“Apart from any such contract, express or implied, the place of delivery is the seller's place of business, if he has one, and if not, his residence; except that if the contract is for the sale of specific goods, which to the knowledge of the parties when the contract is made are in some other place, then that place is the place of delivery.” 1035

It follows from this rule that it is basically the duty of the buyer to collect the goods rather than that of the seller to send them. But the rule is frequently displaced, especially in overseas sales. 1036

Delivery at buyer's premises to unauthorised person

44-243

Under a contract to deliver at the buyer's premises, the seller discharges his obligation if he makes delivery there without negligence to a person “apparently having authority to receive them”, although in fact the person to whom the goods were delivered had no authority to receive them and misappropriated them. 1037

1035. See also Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 8–018—8–024.

1036. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods at Chs 18–21; Scottish & Newcastle International Ltd v Othon Ghalanos Ltd [2008] UKHL 11, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 462. Different rules apply to contracts which are subject to Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer sales, unless the trader and consumer have agreed otherwise, the contract is to be treated as including a term that the trader must deliver the goods to the consumer. See above, para.38-489.

1037. Galbraith & Grant Ltd v Block [1922] 2 K.B. 155; Computer 2000 Distribution Ltd v ICM Computer Solutions Plc [2004] EWCA Civ 16345, [2005] Info. T.L.R. 147. cf. E & D Thomas v HS Alper & Sons [1953] C.L.Y. 3277 CA. Contrast Linden Tricotagefabrik v White and Meacham [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 384.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 5. - Performance of the Contract

(b) - Rules Governing Delivery

(ii) - Time for Delivery 1038

Express stipulation

44-244

The parties are at liberty to stipulate in their contract that time is to be of the essence in relation to the seller's obligation to deliver within an agreed time. If no such stipulation is inserted, but a time for delivery is nevertheless fixed, the question whether time is of the essence depends on the terms of the contract. 1039 There is no presumption or rule of law that stipulations as to time of delivery are of the essence of the contract 1040 but, in commercial contracts, they are frequently so construed. 1041

No time fixed

44-245

By s.29(3) 1042.

"Where under the contract of sale the seller is bound to send the goods to the buyer, but no time for sending them is fixed, the seller is bound to send them within a reasonable time."

This is but one aspect of a more general rule that, if the contract is silent as to the time of delivery, the seller is bound to deliver the goods within a reasonable time. 1043 What is a reasonable time is a question of fact, 1044 but may be affected by the usage of trade. 1045

Goods to be delivered "as required"

44-246

Where the goods are to be delivered as required, the rule is as follows: the seller is not bound to deliver any goods until the buyer requires him to do so; once the buyer has made his request, the seller must deliver within a reasonable time; if the buyer fails to make known his requirements within a reasonable time, the seller may not rescind the contract for delay without giving notice to the buyer, 1046 but extreme delay in requiring delivery may support the inference that there is a mutual intention to abandon the contract. 1047

"Reasonable hour"

44-247

By s.29(5):

“Demand or tender of delivery may be treated as ineffectual unless made at a reasonable hour; and what is a reasonable hour is a question of fact.”

Variation of delivery time

44-248

The buyer may agree to an extension of the time fixed for delivery and such an agreement will constitute an effective variation of the contract of sale provided that sufficient consideration to support the variation moves from the promisee. ¹⁰⁴⁸

Waiver of delivery time

44-249

Although the contract fixes a time for delivery, the buyer's right to require delivery within that period may be waived even after the expiry of that period. So in Hartley v Hymans, ¹⁰⁴⁹ where the buyer continued to demand and accept deliveries long after the fixed date and then alleged that the contract had been broken by failure to deliver punctually, the court held that the buyer, by his demands after the fixed date, had waived his right to insist that the period of delivery terminated on that date. He was also by his conduct estopped from alleging that the period for delivery terminated on the date originally fixed by the contract.

Affirmation

44-250

The parties may be found to have mutually affirmed the contract on the same terms, after the contractual date for delivery has passed. ¹⁰⁵⁰

Force majeure

44-251

By a clause in the contract the seller may be entitled to suspend delivery or extend the time for delivery or even cancel the contract on the happening of a specified event or events beyond his control. ¹⁰⁵¹ Such clauses are very common in commercial contracts of sale; but force majeure clauses may assume a variety of forms and must be construed in the light of their precise wording, and with regard to the nature and general terms of the contract. ¹⁰⁵²

^{1038.} As to damages for delayed delivery, see below, para.44-406.

^{1039.} 1979 Act s.10(1); see above, para.44-128. cf. Hartley v Hymans [1920] 3 K.B. 475, 483. See also ERG Raffinerie Mediterranee SpA v Chevron USA Inc [2007] EWCA Civ 494, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 542 (lay can shipment term in FOB contract).

- 1040. Compagnie Commerciale Sucres et Denrées v C Czarnikow Ltd [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1337, 1347.
- 1041. Wimshurst v Deeley (1845) 2 C.B. 253; Bowes v Shand (1877) 2 App. Cas. 455, 463; Reuter v Sala (1879) 4 C.P.D. 239, 246, 249; Hartley v Hymans [1920] 3 K.B. 475, 484; Brooke Tool Manufacturing Ltd v Hydraulic Gears Co Ltd (1920) 89 L.J.K.B. 263; Finagrain SA v P Kruse Hamburg [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 508; United Scientific Holdings Ltd v Burnley BC [1978] A.C. 904, 924, 937, 944, 950, 958; Bunge Corp v Tradax Export SA [1981] 1 W.L.R. 711; Scandinavian Trading Co A/B v Zodiac Petroleum SA [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 81; Cerealmangimi SpA v Toepfer [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 337; Tradax Export SA v Italgrani Francesco Ambrosio [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 112; Gill & Duffus SA v Société pour l'Exportation des Sucres SA [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 322; Compagnie Commerciale Sucres et Denrées v C Czarnikow Ltd [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1337, 1347.
- 1042. This provision does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides special rules in relation to delivery in consumer sales contracts, see above, para.38-489.
- 1043. Ellis v Thompson (1838) 3 M. & W. 445, 456; Jones v Gibbons (1853) 8 Exch. 920, 923; Hick v Raymond and Reid [1893] A.C. 22, 29; Thomas Borthwick (Glasgow) Ltd v Bunge & Co Ltd [1969] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 17, 28; SHV Gas Supply and Trading SAS v Naftomar Shipping & Trading Co Ltd Inc [2005] EWHC 2528 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 163. Contrast ERG Raffinerie Mediterranee SpA v Chevron USA Inc [2006] EWHC 1322 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 543 at [56] (affirmed [2007] EWCA Civ 494, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 542) (FOB contract: ship provided by buyer).
- 1044. 1979 Act s.59.
- 1045. Bradley & Sons v Colonial Continental Trading (1964) 108 S.J. 599.
- 1046. Jones v Gibbons (1853) 8 Exch. 920, 923.
- 1047. Pearl Mill Co v Ivy Tannery Co [1919] 1 K.B. 78. See also Honck v Muller (1881) 7 Q.B.D. 92. But see Vol.I, para.22-027.
- 1048. South Caribbean Trading Ltd v Trafigura Beheer BV [2004] EWHC 2676 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 128; see Vol.I, para.4-080.
- 1049. [1920] 3 K.B. 475. See also Ogle v Earl Vane (1868) L.R. 3 Q.B. 272; Besseler Waechter Glover & Co v South Derwent Coal Co [1938] 1 K.B. 408; Charles Rickards Ltd v Oppenheim [1950] 1 K.B. 616; Woodhouse v Nigerian Produce Marketing Co Ltd [1972] A.C. 741, 755; Finagrain SA Geneva v P Kruse Hamburg [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 508; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Vanden Avenne-Izegem PVBA [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 109, 116, 120, 126, 130, 131; Cerealmangimi SpA v Toepfer [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 337; Cook Industries v Meunerie Liegeois [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 359; Cremer v Granaria BV [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 583; Société Italo Belge pour le Commerce et l'Industrie v Palm and Vegetable Oils (Malaysia) Sdn Bhd [1982] 1 All E.R. 19; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Raiffeissen [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 355; Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Deutsche Conti-Handelsgesellschaft mbH [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 45; Motor Oil (Hellas) (Corinth) Refineries SA v Shipping Corp of India [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 391, 399; Fleming & Wendeln GmbH & Co v Sanofi SA/AG [2003] EWHC 561 (QB), [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 473; Westbrook Resources Ltd v Metallurgical Inc [2009] EWCA Civ 310, [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 224. See also Vol.I, paras 22-040 et seq. Contrast South Caribbean Trading Ltd v Trafigura Beheer BV, above (estoppel cannot be invoked where unconscionable to do so): see Vol.I, para.4-096.
- 1050. Glencore Energy UK Ltd v Transworld Oil Ltd [2010] EWHC 141 (Comm), [2010] 1 C.L.C. 284.
- 1051. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.8-088.
- 1052. See Vol.I, para.15-152.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 5. - Performance of the Contract
(b) - Rules Governing Delivery
(iii) - Goods in Possession of Third Person

Goods in possession of third person

44-252

By s.29(4):

“Where the goods at the time of sale are in possession of a third person, there is no delivery by seller or buyer unless and until the third person acknowledges to the buyer that he holds the goods on his behalf; but nothing in this section affects the operation of the issue or transfer of any document of title 1053 to goods.” 1054

This subsection states that where goods are possessed by a third person, there is no delivery to the buyer unless there is an attornment. 1055 The qualification of the rule is merely negative in nature. The issue or transfer of a document of title 1056 does not necessarily dispense with an attornment. 1057 As between seller and buyer 1058 a bill of lading would appear to be the only document of title which will have this effect. 1059 The issue or transfer of other documents, for example, a delivery order, does not constitute delivery without an attornment by the bailee.

44-253

The seller and buyer must do what is necessary to obtain the attornment. If the third person then refuses to acknowledge the buyer's right, the latter is entitled to treat the contract as discharged. 1060

1053. Defined, s.61(1), see above, para.44-015.

1054. See also ss.24, 25 and 47, see above, paras 44-212 et seq., see below, paras 44-340 et seq.

1055. Farina v Home (1846) 16 M. & W. 119; Dublin City Distillery Ltd v Doherty [1914] A.C. 823, 847–848, 864–865; Laurie and Morewood v Dudin & Sons [1926] 1 K.B. 223, 237; Peter Dumenil & Co Ltd v James Ruddin Ltd [1953] 1 W.L.R. 815; Wardar's (Import and Export) Co Ltd v Norwood and Sons Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 663; Mercuria Energy Trading PTE Ltd v Citibank NA [2015] EWHC 1481 (Comm); see also above, para.44-133.

1056. As defined in s.61(1) of the Sale of Goods Act (see above, para.44-015) and s.1(4) of the Factors Act 1889.

1057. See the cases cited in n.1052, see above; and Mordaunt Bros v British Oil and Cake Mills Ltd [1910] 2 K.B. 502; Comptoir d'Achat et de Vente du Baerenbond Belge SA v Luis de Ridder Ltd

[1949] A.C. 293; Margarine Union GmbH v Cambay Prince Steamship Co Ltd [1969] 1 Q.B. 219 .

1058. Contrast ss.9, 10 of the Factors Act 1889 and ss.25(1), 47 of the Sale of Goods Act 1979.

1059. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 8–013, 18–088, 18–235.

1060. Pattison v Robinson (1816) 5 M. & S. 105, 110; cf. Peter Dumenil & Co Ltd v James Ruddin Ltd [1953] 1 W.L.R. 815.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 5. - Performance of the Contract
(b) - Rules Governing Delivery
(iv) - Expenses in Connection with Delivery

Expenses of delivery

44-254

By s.29(6): "Unless otherwise agreed, the expenses of and incidental to putting the goods into a deliverable state ¹⁰⁶¹ must be borne by the seller". This subsection does not deal with the expenses of the actual delivery. Here the rule is that, unless otherwise agreed, the expenses of and incidental to making delivery of the goods must be borne by the seller, but those of and incidental to receiving delivery must be borne by the buyer. ¹⁰⁶² So where buyers of oil undertook to receive it from the sellers' ship through the buyers' pipe-lines at the discharging berth, it was held that on the construction of the contract the buyers had undertaken to procure for the sellers the right to have the steamer at the berth for the purpose of discharging there, and that the buyers must bear the cost of the dredging operations, which proved necessary. ¹⁰⁶³ Special rules have, however, been elaborated where the sale is on CIF or FOB, etc. terms. ¹⁰⁶⁴

^{1061.} Defined, s.61(5), see above, para.44-016.

^{1062.} cf. Neill v Whitworth (1866) L.R. 1 CP 684; Playford v Mercer (1870) 22 L.T. 41; Acme Wood Flooring Co v Sutherland Innes Co (1904) 9 Com. Cas. 170; White v Williams [1912] A.C. 814.

^{1063.} Re Shell Transport Co & Consolidated Petroleum Co (1904) 20 T.L.R. 517.

^{1064.} See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 19-009, 19-011, 20-008, 20-012, 21-002, 21-010, 21-012, 21-014.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 5. - Performance of the Contract

(b) - Rules Governing Delivery

(v) - Delivery of the Wrong Quantity 1065

Defective delivery

44-255

Section 30 deals with the delivery of the wrong quantity. 1066

It is submitted that a delivery which is defective under the section does not ipso facto entitle the buyer to treat the contract as repudiated, but it is open to the seller to withdraw the rejected tender, and substitute a tender of goods in conformity with the contract, provided he does so within the time limited for delivery. 1067

Insufficient delivery

44-256

By s.30(1):

“Where the seller delivers to the buyer a quantity of goods less than he contracted to sell, the buyer may reject them, but if the buyer accepts the goods so delivered he must pay for them at the contract rate.”

Two alternatives are therefore open to the buyer: (i) to reject the insufficient quantity delivered, recover the price (if paid) and sue for any loss occasioned by the seller's breach 1068, or (ii) to accept the quantity delivered, paying for this at the contract rate, and recovering such part of the price as has been paid for the undelivered balance 1069; he can also claim damages for breach. 1070 In Behrend & Co v Produce Brokers Co 1071 the claimants had sold certain seed to the defendants to be delivered in London, and the claimants' ship, after discharging part only of the seed, left with the remainder to discharge other cargo elsewhere. She returned a fortnight later to complete the delivery to the defendants, who rejected it. It was held that once the delivery had begun the buyers were entitled to receive the whole quantity before the ship left port, and that in the circumstances they were entitled to keep the part actually delivered and to reject the balance.

44-257

Unless the seller consents, the subsection does not allow the buyer to accept part only of the goods tendered in attempted performance of the contract and to reject the rest. 1072

44-258

The seller cannot protect himself from the consequences of a short delivery by promising a completed delivery in due course, because s.31(1) provides that "Unless otherwise agreed, the buyer of goods is not bound to accept delivery by instalments". 1073

Excessive delivery

44-259

By s.30(2):

"Where the seller delivers to the buyer a quantity of goods larger than he contracted to sell, the buyer may accept the goods included in the contract and reject the rest, or he may reject the whole."

And by s.30(3):

"Where the seller delivers to the buyer a quantity of goods larger than he contracted to sell and the buyer accepts the whole of the goods so delivered he must pay for them at the contract rate."

The buyer therefore has three options: first, to reject the whole of the goods delivered 1074; secondly, to select the correct quantity and to reject the rest 1075; thirdly, to accept the whole delivery, paying for the excess at the contract rate. 1076

Limitation of right to reject

44-260

The right to reject the goods for failure to deliver the exact quantity of goods contracted for is nevertheless alleviated in non-consumer cases by subs.(2A) of s.30:

"A buyer 1077 may not—

(a)

where the seller delivers a quantity of goods less than he contracted to sell, reject the goods under subs.(1) above, or where the seller delivers a quantity of goods larger than he contracted to sell, reject the goods under subs.(2) above.

(b)

if the shortfall or, as the case may be, excess is so slight that it would be unreasonable for him to do so."

It is for the seller to show that a shortfall or excess falls within this subsection. At common law, whether or not the buyer deals as consumer, the right to reject is subject to the principle de minimis non curat lex: a trifling or minute departure from the exact quantity stipulated does not entitle the buyer to reject the goods.¹⁰⁷⁸ But it would appear that subs.(2A), despite its reference to the shortfall or excess being “slight”, goes further than this and that a departure which is more than de minimis could fall within its scope. It might be unreasonable for the buyer to reject if, for example, a shortfall could be adequately compensated for by damages or, in the case of an excessive delivery, if it was commercially practical for the buyer to separate out the correct quantity and return the excess or if he did not have to pay for the excess.

Derogation from s.30

44-261

The whole of s.30 (including subs.(2A)) is subject to any usage of trade, special agreement, or course of dealing between the parties.¹⁰⁷⁹ The most common way for the parties to derogate from its provisions is to stipulate for a margin by using terms such as “about” or “more or less”, but then the seller must not deliver a quantity outside the margin.¹⁰⁸⁰ The parties may also include in their contract a “non-rejection” clause which limits the remedy of the buyer to damages only.

^{1065.} It is a matter of speculation whether, if the buyer deals as consumer, the additional remedies conferred by Pt 5A of the 1979 Act (see above, para.38-408) would be available to him on the ground of non-conformity of the goods due to the breach of an express term: see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.8–045 n.252. For contracts made on or after October 1, 2015, the Consumer Rights Act 2015 repeals and replaces those provisions.

^{1066.} The section is subject to s.31(2), where the contract is one for the sale of goods by instalments: Regent OHG Aisenstadt und Barig v Francesco of Jermyn Street Ltd [1981] 3 All E.R. 327. This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides special rules in relation to delivery of the wrong quantity in consumer sales contracts, see above, para.38-489.

^{1067.} Borrowman, Phillips & Co v Free & Hollis (1878) 4 Q.B.D. 500; see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 8–052, 12–032.

^{1068.} Harland & Wolff Ltd v Burstall & Co (1901) 84 L.T. 324.

^{1069.} Oxendale v Wetherell (1829) 9 B. & C. 386; Biggerstaff v Rowatt's Wharf Ltd [1896] 2 Ch.93; Behrend & Co v Produce Brokers Co [1920] 3 K.B. 530.

^{1070.} Household Machines Ltd v Cosmos Exporters Ltd [1947] K.B. 217.

^{1071.} [1920] 3 K.B. 530.

^{1072.} Champion v Short (1807) 1 Camp. 53; Tarling v O'Riordan (1878) 2 L.R.Ir. 82. cf. Hudson (1976) 92 L.Q.R. 506.

^{1073.} See Reuter v Sala (1879) 4 C.P.D. 239; Cobec Brazilian Trading and Warehousing Corp v Toepfer [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 386 and see below, para.44-262.

^{1074.} Cunliffe v Harrison (1851) 6 Exch. 903, 906. But there is some doubt whether the buyer is so entitled if the seller does not seek to charge the buyer with the excess and the excess quantity is not otherwise a burden to the buyer: Levy v Green (1857) 8 E. & B. 575, 587; (1859) 1 E. & E. 969, 975; Rylands v Kreitman (1865) 19 C.B.(N.S.) 351; Shipton Anderson & Co v Weil Bros & Co [1912] 1 K.B. 574, 577.

^{1075.} But not part of the correct quantity or part of the excess. cf. Hudson (1976) 92 L.Q.R. 506.

^{1076.} Hart v Mills (1846) 15 M. & W. 85; Cunliffe v Harrison, above; Gabriel Wade and English Ltd v

Arcos Ltd (1929) 24 Ll.L. Rep. 306.

1077. The former reference to consumers is deleted by the Consumer Rights Act 2015. Contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the 2015 Act are subject to special rules in relation to delivery, see above, para.38-489.

1078. See Harland and Wolff Ltd v Burstall & Co (1901) 6 Com. Cas. 113, 116; Shipton Anderson & Co v Weil Brothers [1912] 1 K.B. 574; EA Ronaasen & Son v Arcos Ltd (1932) 48 T.L.R. 356; affirmed sub nom. Arcos Ltd v EA Ronaasen & Son [1933] A.C. 470; Margaronis Navigation Agency Ltd v Peabody & Co Ltd [1965] 1 Q.B. 300. cf. Jackson v Rotax Motor and Cycle Co [1910] 2 K.B. 937, 948; Payne & Routh v Lillico & Sons (1920) 36 T.L.R. 569; Wilensko Slaski v Fenwick & Co Ltd [1938] 3 All E.R. 429; Rapalli v KL Take Ltd [1958] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 469.

1079. 1979 Act s.30(5).

1080. Payne & Routh v Lillico & Sons (1920) 36 T.L.R. 569. See also Cross v Eglin (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 106; Reuter v Sala (1974) 4 C.P.D. 239; Harland and Wolff Ltd v Burstall & Co (1901) 6 Com. Cas. 113 (reasonable latitude exceeded).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 5. - Performance of the Contract

(b) - Rules Governing Delivery

(vi) - Instalment Deliveries

Instalment deliveries

44-262

By s.31(1) ¹⁰⁸¹: “Unless otherwise agreed, the buyer of goods is not bound to accept delivery of them by instalments”. ¹⁰⁸² Nor can he demand delivery by instalments. ¹⁰⁸³ But the parties may provide, expressly or impliedly, ¹⁰⁸⁴ for delivery by instalments, and in Howell v Evans ¹⁰⁸⁵ a contract for the sale of 13 engravings “to be sent to me as published” was held, by its very terms, to be an instalments contract.

Stated instalments ¹⁰⁸⁶

44-263

By s.31(2):

“Where there is a contract for the sale of goods to be delivered by stated instalments, ¹⁰⁸⁷ which are to be separately paid for, and the seller makes defective deliveries in respect of one or more instalments, or the buyer neglects or refuses to take delivery of or pay for one or more instalments, it is a question in each case depending on the terms of the contract and the circumstances of the case whether the breach of contract is a repudiation of the whole contract or whether it is a severable breach giving rise to a claim for compensation but not to a right to treat the whole contract as repudiated.” ¹⁰⁸⁸

By its express terms s.31(2) applies only if the goods are to be delivered by stated instalments and if the instalments are to be separately paid for, but the common law applies the same principle to other severable contracts for the delivery of goods by instalments. ¹⁰⁸⁹ However, the rule set out in the subsection does not apply to entire contracts, that is, where full and complete delivery of the entire quantity is a condition precedent to the liability of the buyer to pay any part of the price, though the delivery may be made by instalments. In these cases a partial breach is treated as a total breach. ¹⁰⁹⁰

Repudiation of whole contract

44-264

Failure of performance by one party may entitle the other party to treat an instalment contract as repudiated, but only if the breach goes “to the root or essence of the contract” ¹⁰⁹¹ or deprives the other party of substantially the whole benefit which it was intended that he should receive from the contract. ¹⁰⁹² In Maple Flock Co Ltd v Universal Furniture Products (Wembley) Ltd ¹⁰⁹³ the test to be considered in applying the subsection was stated by Lord Hewart C.J. to be: "First, the ratio quantitatively which the breach bears to the contract as a whole, and secondly, the degree of probability or improbability that such a breach will be repeated". In that case the contract was for the sale of 100 tons of rag flock, the flock to conform to government standards and to be delivered in separate loads. The sixteenth load was found not to conform to government standards, and the buyers refused to accept further deliveries. The Court of Appeal held that the seller's breach of contract with regard to one delivery was not a repudiation of the whole contract, for the character of the breach was said to be isolated and limited and there was also an "extreme improbability of the breach being repeated". ¹⁰⁹⁴ By contrast in Robert A Munro & Co Ltd v Meyer ¹⁰⁹⁵ the contract was for the sale of 1,500 tons of meat and bone meal of a specified quality, to be shipped in equal weekly quantities. After more than half of the whole had been delivered it was found that the meal was adulterated, and the buyer claimed to treat the contract as repudiated. Wright J. came to the following conclusion: "Where the breach is substantial and so serious as the breach in this case and has continued so persistently, the buyer is entitled to say that he has the right to treat the whole contract as repudiated". ¹⁰⁹⁶

Renunciation of obligations

44-265

One party may also be entitled to treat an instalment contract as repudiated if the other party renounces his obligations under it in some fundamental respect. ¹⁰⁹⁷ In Freeth v Burr ¹⁰⁹⁸ Lord Coleridge C.J. stated the test to be "whether the acts and conduct of the party evince an intention no longer to be bound by the contract". So in Mersey Steel and Iron Co v Naylor, ¹⁰⁹⁹ where the buyer's failure to pay was due to his thinking in error that there was no one to whom payment could safely be made, the vendor company having gone into liquidation, it was held that this was not to be treated as a repudiation of the whole contract.

Disablement from performing

44-266

Where one party has, by his own act or default, finally and completely disabled himself from performing an obligation undertaken by him, the other party will be entitled to treat an instalment contract as repudiated, ¹¹⁰⁰ provided that the resulting non-performance would amount to a fundamental breach. ¹¹⁰¹

Anticipatory breach: repudiation accepted ¹¹⁰²

44-267

⚠ If one party commits a repudiatory breach of the contract of sale, and the repudiation is accepted by the other party, this brings to an end all primary obligations of both parties which have not yet been performed. ¹¹⁰³ The seller is not bound to deliver, nor is the buyer bound to accept and pay for, any further instalments of the goods. ¹¹⁰⁴ Further, the repudiating party cannot raise as a defence to liability any plea that, had he not repudiated the contract, there would have been no performance by the other party at the time fixed for performance or that the performance would have been defective. ¹¹⁰⁵ However, when assessing damages for breach, the compensatory principle requires the court to undertake a hypothetical assessment of what would have occurred if there had been no repudiatory breach. The burden would accordingly fall on the innocent party to prove that, had there been no breach, it would have been in a position to fulfil its own obligations under the contract, thereby entitling it to earn whatever consideration was due to it under the contract. ¹¹⁰⁶ ⚠ Exceptionally, if, at the time of the repudiation, the other party has (unknown to the repudiating party) committed a breach which would have justified the repudiation ¹¹⁰⁷ or (seemingly) if it is clear that the other party was at that time finally and completely disabled from performing, ¹¹⁰⁸ then he may raise this as a defence to any action for damages brought against him by the other party based on the repudiation. Although he repudiated the contract for the wrong reason or for no reason at all, he may yet justify his action if there were at the time facts in existence which would have provided a good reason. ¹¹⁰⁹

Repudiation not accepted

44-268

On the other hand, if one party commits a repudiatory breach of the contract of sale, but the repudiation is not accepted by the other party who continues to require performance, then the contract remains alive for the benefit of both parties. ¹¹¹⁰ It might therefore be expected that each party would continue to be bound to carry out those of his obligations under the contract which remain unperformed and that it would be a defence for the repudiating party to show that, notwithstanding his repudiation, the other party had failed to perform the contract in accordance with its terms. In Braithwaite v Foreign Hardwood Co Ltd, ¹¹¹¹ however, where buyers under a CIF contract wrongfully repudiated the contract by refusing to accept any goods under it, the Court of Appeal held that they thereby waived the performance by the seller of the conditions precedent which would otherwise have been necessary to the enforcement by him of the contract and that the buyers could not raise as a defence to liability the fact that two instalments of the goods subsequently tendered ¹¹¹² by the seller were not of the quality required by the contract. The facts of Braithwaite's case are, however, open to interpretation and the case has been explained as one in which the buyer's repudiation was in fact accepted by the seller and at a time at which he had committed no breach of contract which would have justified the repudiation. ¹¹¹³ In any event, the House of Lords has now held ¹¹¹⁴ that, if a repudiation is not accepted, the repudiating party can rely upon a term of the contract which entitles him to terminate the contract upon the other party's subsequent breach. Since the contract remains alive for the benefit of both parties, it would seem that the repudiating party could also take advantage of any subsequent non-performance by the other party which would entitle him to be discharged, ¹¹¹⁵ unless he is estopped from so doing by representing to the other party that he will no longer require performance of that obligation ¹¹¹⁶ or unless the other party can prove that his breach was caused by or due to the repudiation. ¹¹¹⁷

^{1081.} This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides special rules in relation to instalment deliveries in consumer sales contracts, see above, para.38-488.

^{1082.} Reuter v Sala (1879) 4 C.P.D. 239; Behrend & Co v Produce Brokers Co [1920] 3 K.B. 530, 534-535; Cobec Brazilian Trading and Warehousing Corp v Toepfer [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 13.

^{1083.} Reuter v Sala (1879) 4 C.P.D. 247.

^{1084.} Brandt v Lawrence (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 344; Colonial Insurance Co of New Zealand v Adelaide Marine Insurance Co (1886) 12 App. Cas. 128, 138; Jackson v Rotax Motor and Cycle Co [1910] 2 K.B. 937.

^{1085.} (1926) 134 L.T. 570.

^{1086.} It is probable that s.31(2) applies also by analogy where the buyer deals as consumer and so has the additional remedies conferred by Pt 5A of the Act: see above, n.1062.

^{1087.} Semble the same principle applies if the instalments are not stated: Calaminus v Dowlais Iron Co (1878) 47 L.J.Q.B. 5757 and Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.8-077.

^{1088.} See also Vol.I, para.24-046.

^{1089.} See below, para.44-264, and Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.8-077.

^{1090.} Longbottom & Co Ltd v Bass, Walker & Co [1922] W.N. 245.

- 1091. Mersey Steel and Iron Co v Naylor Benzon & Co (1884) 9 App. Cas. 434, 443-444. See also Foxholes Nursing Home Ltd v Accora Ltd [2013] EWHC 3712 (Ch).
- 1092. See Vol.I, paras 24-041, 24-046.
- 1093. [1934] 1 K.B. 148, 157. See also Cornwall v Henson [1900] 2 Ch. 298, 304; Millar's Karri & Jarrah Co v Weddel, Turner & Co (1909) 100 L.T. 128, 129.
- 1094. See also Simpson v Crippin (1872) L.R. 8 Q.B. 14; Payzu Ltd v Saunders [1919] 2 K.B. 581; Taylor v Oakes Roncoroni & Co (1922) 127 L.T. 267; Ross T Smyth & Co Ltd v TD Bailey Son & Co [1940] 3 All E.R. 60; Amos & Wood Ltd v Kaprow (1948) 64 T.L.R. 110; Regent OHG Aisenstadt und Barig v Francesco of Jermyn Street Ltd [1981] 3 All E.R. 327.
- 1095. [1930] 2 K.B. 312. See also Hoare v Rennie (1859) 5 H. & N. 19; Honck v Muller (1881) 7 Q.B.D. 92; Millar's Karri & Jarrah Co v Weddel, Turner & Co (1909) 100 L.T. 128, 129.
- 1096. At 331.
- 1097. See Vol.I, para.24-018.
- 1098. (1874) L.R. 9 C.P. 208, 213.
- 1099. (1884) 9 App. Cas. 434. See also Kent v Godts (1855) 26 L.T.(o.s.) 88; Freeth v Burr (1874) L.R. 9 C.P. 208, 213; Dominion Coal Co Ltd v Dominion Iron and Steel Co Ltd [1909] A.C. 293; Household Machines v Cosmos Exports [1947] K.B. 217; Shaffer Ltd v Findlay Durham & Brodie [1953] 1 W.L.R. 106; Peter Dumenil & Co Ltd v James Ruddin Ltd [1953] 1 W.L.R. 815; Bunge GmbH v CCV Landbouwbelaang GA [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 458. Contrast (renunciation); Withers v Reynolds (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 882; Morgan v Bain (1874) L.R. 10 C.P. 15; Bloomer v Bernstein (1874) L.R. 9 C.P. 588; Berk & Co Ltd v Day and White (1897) 13 T.L.R. 475; Warinco AG v Samor SpA [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 450; Metro Meat Ltd v Fares Rural Co Pty Ltd [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 13.
- 1100. See Vol.I, para.24-029.
- 1101. Afovos Shipping Co SA v R Pagnan & Filli [1984] 1 W.L.R. 195, 203.
- 1102. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 9-010—9-017.
- 1103. See Vol.I, para.24-049.
- 1104. Cort v Ambergate Ry (1851) 17 Q.B. 127; Bank of China, Japan and the Straits v American Trading Co [1894] A.C. 266, 274; Braithwaite v Foreign Hardwood Co Ltd [1905] 2 K.B. 543, 552; Cooper Ewing & Co v Hamel & Horley Ltd (1922) 13 L.L. Rep. 590, 592; British and Beningtons Ltd v North Western Cachar Tea Co Ltd [1923] A.C. 48, 63-66; Gill & Duffus SA v Berger & Co Inc [1984] A.C. 382, 395-396.
- 1105. Cooper Ewing & Co v Hamel & Horley Ltd (1922) 13 L.L. Rep. 590, 593; Taylor v Oakes Roncoroni & Co (1922) 38 T.L.R. 349, 517; British and Beningtons Ltd v North Western Cachar Tea Co Ltd [1923] A.C. 72; Gill & Duffus SA v Berger & Co Inc [1984] A.C. 392, 396.
- 1106.  Braithwaite v Foreign Hardwood Co Ltd (1905) 92 L.T. 637 (cf. at [1905] 2 K.B. 543); British and Beningtons Ltd v North Western Cachar Tea Co Ltd [1923] A.C. 48, 71, 72; Esmail v Rosenthal & Sons [1964] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 447, 466; Gill & Duffus SA v Berger & Co Inc [1984] A.C. 392, 396; Golden Strait Corp v Nippon Yusen Kubishika Kaisha (The Golden Victory) [2007] UKHL 12, [2007] 2 A.C. 253; Flame SA v Glory Wealth Shipping PTE Ltd [2013] EWHC 3153, [2014] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 1043. Contrast Taylor v Oakes Roncoroni & Co (1922) 38 T.L.R. 349, 517. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.9-020. On whether damages should be assessed in a different way in commodity sales see P. Todd [2017] L.M.C.L.Q. 122.

- 1107. Taylor v Oakes Roncoroni & Co (1922) 38 T.L.R. 349, 351; affirmed at 517; Esmail v Rosenthal & Sons Ltd [1964] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 466.
- 1108. Cooper Ewing & Co v Hamel & Horley Ltd (1922) 13 Ll.L. Rep. 590; British and Beningtons Ltd v North Western Cachar Tea Co Ltd [1923] A.C. 48 at 72. See Vol.I, para.24-029.
- 1109. See Vol.I, para.24-014.
- 1110. See Vol.I, paras 24-003, 24-011—24-012.
- 1111. [1905] 2 K.B. 543. See also Cerealmangimi SpA v Toepfer [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 337; Bunge Corp v Vegetable Vitamin Foods (Private) Ltd [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 613.
- 1112. Or offered to be tendered.
- 1113. Taylor v Oakes Roncoroni & Co (1922) 38 T.L.R. 349, 351; affirmed at 517; Esmail v J Rosenthal & Sons Ltd [1964] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 447, 466 (not discussed on appeal to the House of Lords [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1117).
- 1114. Fercometal SARL v Mediterranean Shipping Co SA [1989] A.C. 788 (Vol.I, paras 24-011, 24-026). See also Segap Garages Ltd v Gulf Oil (Great Britain) Ltd, The Times, October 24, 1988. (Vol.I, para.24-026). But see Foran v Wight (1989) 168 C.L.R. 385, 421-422.
- 1115. See Vol.I, para.24-025.
- 1116. Fercometal SARL v Mediterranean Shipping Co SA [1989] A.C. 788, 805.
- 1117. Segap Garages Ltd v Gulf Oil (Great Britain) Ltd, The Times, October 24, 1988.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 5. - Performance of the Contract

(b) - Rules Governing Delivery

(vii) - Delivery to a Carrier

Delivery to a carrier

44-269

By s.32(1) 1118.

“Where, in pursuance of a contract of sale, the seller is authorised or required to send the goods to the buyer, delivery of the goods to a carrier (whether named by the buyer or not) for the purpose of transmission to the buyer is prima facie deemed to be a delivery of the goods to the buyer.” 1119

The effect of delivery to a carrier for the purpose of transmission to the buyer is prima facie to pass possession to the buyer. It must also be noted that although delivery to a carrier normally terminates the unpaid seller's lien, 1120 the goods may still be stopped in transit 1121; further, delivery to a carrier does not amount to acceptance by the buyer within the meaning of s.35. 1122

Reasonable contract with carrier

44-270

By s.32(2):

“Unless otherwise authorised by the buyer, the seller must make such contract with the carrier on behalf of the buyer as may be reasonable having regard to the nature of the goods and the other circumstances of the case; and if the seller omits to do so, and the goods are lost or damaged in course of transit, the buyer may decline to treat the delivery to the carrier as a delivery to himself or may hold the seller responsible in damages.”

The question which arises here is whether the contract made by the seller with the carrier on the buyer's behalf is a reasonable one. It was considered in Thomas Young & Sons v Hobson & Partners. 1123 In that case engines sold and sent to the buyers by railway “at owner's risk” were damaged in the course of transit because they were improperly secured. If the sellers had arranged for the goods to be sent “at company's risk” the railway would have made an inspection to see that the goods were suitably secured. There was no difference in rates at owner's risk and at company's risk. It was held that the sellers had failed to make a reasonable contract with the carrier and the buyers were therefore entitled to refuse to treat the delivery to the carrier as delivery to themselves.

Notice to enable insurance

44-271

By s.32(3):

“Unless otherwise agreed, where goods are sent by the seller to the buyer by a route involving sea transit, under circumstances in which it is usual to insure, the seller must give such notice to the buyer as may enable him to insure them during their sea transit; and, if the seller fails to do so, the goods are at his risk during such sea transit.”

This provision does not normally apply to CIF contracts because in such contracts it is the seller's duty to insure ¹¹²⁴; but it does apply to FOB contracts unless the buyer has sufficient information to enable him to insure or has waived notice. ¹¹²⁵ Thus in Wimble Sons & Co v Rosenberg & Sons ¹¹²⁶ goods were sold FOB Antwerp to be shipped as required, payment by cash against bills of lading; the sellers were left to select the ship. The sellers shipped the goods, without having insured them, and both goods and ship were lost at sea. When the bills were presented for payment, the buyers refused to pay on the ground that the sellers had not given them such notice as was required by s.32(3) and they had consequently not insured the goods. It was held that, before the goods were shipped, the buyers had all the information necessary to enable them to make a particular insurance, and that therefore there was no obligation upon the sellers to give notice of the shipment on a particular ship. It is a moot point whether this rule could be extended by analogy to other forms of transport.

Deterioration

44-272

By s.33 ¹¹²⁷:

“Where the seller of goods agrees to deliver them at his own risk at a place other than that where they are when sold, the buyer must nevertheless (unless otherwise agreed) take any risk of deterioration in the goods necessarily incident to the course of transit.”

The rule only applies where the seller has agreed (expressly or impliedly) to assume the risk during transit. The buyer is bound to accept the goods if only deteriorated to the extent that they are necessarily subject to in the course of transit from one place to another. ¹¹²⁸ The rule is excludable by contrary agreement and it is quite possible for the seller to agree to bear the whole risk.

Seller's responsibilities at point of delivery

44-273

In Mash & Murrell Ltd v Emanuel Ltd, ¹¹²⁹ Diplock J. said that, where goods are sold under a contract which involves transit before use, there is an implied term in the contract of sale that the goods should be dispatched in such a condition that they can endure the normal journey and upon arrival at their destination be suitable for the ordinary purpose for which such goods are intended to be used and be of merchantable quality. This dictum appears to be good law, ¹¹³⁰ at least so far as perishable goods are concerned. ¹¹³¹ In the case itself, Cyprus potatoes were sold C&F Liverpool. They were in good condition when shipped but were rotten on arrival. If the cause of the rotting had been, for example, a fungus infection, or wetting before or at the time of shipment, the seller would have been liable for breach of the implied term stated by Diplock J. But the cause of the rotting was found by the Court of Appeal ¹¹³² to be poor ventilation occurring after shipment, so that the seller was not liable for the deterioration. As a result, where the warranty applies “an extraordinary deterioration of the goods due to abnormal conditions experienced during transit [is one] for which the buyer takes the risk. A necessary and inevitable deterioration during transit which will render them unmerchantable on arrival is normally one for which the seller is liable". ¹¹³³ On the other hand the terms of the contract may be such as to show that the goods are to meet their specification at the time they are delivered on board the vessel but that thereafter the buyer should assume the risk of any deterioration of or changes in the goods. ¹¹³⁴

44-274

At first sight, this rule appears to be the precise opposite to that stated in s.33. However, it must be noted that s.33 applies only where the seller agrees to deliver the goods at his own risk at a place other than that where they are when sold, and does not apply to a case where (as under a C&F, CIF or FOB contract) the goods are effectively at the buyer's risk after shipment. But in situations to which s.33 applies, it would seem that the words "necessarily incident to the course of transit" should not be taken to extend to cases where perishable goods are dispatched by the seller in such a state as to be unable to withstand normal transit, but only to cover deterioration which all goods of that kind would necessarily suffer during transit. ¹¹³⁵

^{1118.} This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides special rules in relation to delivery in consumer sales contracts, see above, para.38-489.

^{1119.} Scottish & Newcastle International Ltd v Othon Ghalanos Ltd [2008] UKHL 11, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 462; see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 8-014, 19-011, 20-014, 21-073. Contrast Dunlop v Lambert (1839) 6 Cl. & F. 600, 620; Badische Anilin und Soda Fabrik v Basle Chemical Works [1898] A.C. 200, 207; Galbraith and Grant Ltd v Block [1922] 2 K.B. 155, 156; Scottish & Newcastle International Ltd v Othon Galanos Ltd [2008] UKHL 11, 39 (carrier employee or agent of seller).

^{1120.} 1979 Act s.43(1), see below, para.44-321.

^{1121.} 1979 Act s.45(1), see below, para.44-326.

^{1122.} See below, paras 44-278—44-289. The presumption is that the carrier is the buyer's agent to take delivery, but is not his agent to accept the goods in performance of the contract.

^{1123.} (1949) 65 T.L.R. 365. See also Wimble, Sons & Co Ltd v Rosenberg & Sons [1913] 3 K.B. 743; Gatoil International Inc v Tradax Petroleum Ltd [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 350; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 8-015, 18-289.

^{1124.} Law and Bonar Ltd v British American Tobacco Co Ltd [1916] 2 K.B. 605. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 18-290, 19-118, 20-043, 21-106.

^{1125.} It does not apply to FOB contracts if the seller has undertaken to arrange for shipment and insurance. For a discussion of this point, see Pyrene Co Ltd v Scindia Navigation Co Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 401, 424; Benjamin at paras 18-290, 20-043. See also (C&F) Benjamin at para.21-013. cf. ERG Raffinerie Mediterranee SpA v Chevron USA Inc [2006] EWHC 1322 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 543 at [56] (affirmed [2007] EWCA Civ 494, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 542).

^{1126.} [1913] 3 K.B. 743. Buckley L.J., however, pointed out at 754 that the fact that the buyer could protect himself by a general covering policy would not prevent the application of s.32(3): if this were so, the subsection would be meaningless.

^{1127.} This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides special rules in relation to delivery and risk in consumer sales contracts, see above paras 38-489 and 38-490.

- 1128. Bull v Robison (1854) 10 Exch. 342, 346. See Benjamin at paras 6-023, 18-293, 19-119, 20-098.
- 1129. [1961] 1 W.L.R. 862.
- 1130. Beer & Walker (1877) 46 L.J.Q.B. 677; Ollett v Jordan [1918] 2 K.B. 41; Broome v Pardess Co-operative Society [1939] 3 All E.R. 978; reversed on other grounds [1940] 1 All E.R. 603; AB Kemp Ltd v Tolland [1956] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 681, 685; H Glynn (Covent Garden) Ltd v Wittleder [1959] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 409; Gardano and Giampieri v Greek Petroleum, etc. Co [1962] 1 W.L.R. 40, 53; Gatol International Inc v Tradax Petroleum Ltd [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 350, 358; Benjamin at paras 6-020, 11-067, 18-322, 20-042. Contrast KG Bominflot Bunkersgesellschaft etc. & Co v Petroplus Marketing AG [2010] EWCA Civ 1145, [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 442 at [45], where Rix L.J suggested that the implied term was precluded by s.14(1) of the 1979 Act.
- 1131. On non-perishable goods, see Oleificio Zucchi SpA v Northern Sales Ltd [1965] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 496; Cordova Land Co Ltd v Victor Brothers Inc [1966] 1 W.L.R. 793.
- 1132. [1962] 1 W.L.R. 16.
- 1133. Mash & Murrell Ltd v Joseph I Emanuel Ltd [1961] 1 W.L.R. 862, 871.
- 1134. KG Bominflot Bunkersgesellschaft etc. & Co v Petroplus Marketing AG [2010] EWCA Civ 1145, [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 442; see para.44-111, above.
- 1135. See Sassoon (1965) 28 M.L.R. 189.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 5. - Performance of the Contract

(c) - Examination and Acceptance

Buyer's right of examining the goods

44-275

By s.34 1136:

“Unless otherwise agreed, when the seller tenders delivery of goods to the buyer, he is bound on request to afford the buyer a reasonable opportunity of examining the goods for the purpose of ascertaining whether they are in conformity with the contract and, in the case of a contract for sale by sample, of comparing the bulk with the sample.”

Thus where the buyer has not been given an opportunity to examine the goods, he is not in breach of contract by not accepting them: though conversely if he refuses to examine, the seller may not be in breach if he does not deliver. 1137

Place for examination

44-276

The prima facie rule is that the place of delivery is the place for examination. 1138 This presumption is, however, displaced if the terms of the contract 1139 or the circumstances of the case (e.g. that the place is inconvenient 1140 or the goods are packed in such a way that examination before final destination would be difficult 1141) indicate a different intention. Such will frequently be the case in overseas sales. 1142

Waiver

44-277

On general principle the buyer may waive his right to examine the goods, for instance, where he expressly accepts them without troubling to examine them. This is, however, not so if the buyer deals as consumer and has had no opportunity to examine. 1143 Subject to this, the right may also be excluded by the terms of the contract express or implied: thus in a CIF sale the buyer must pay against the documents without having examined the goods, 1144 and in auctions examination after sale is only relevant for the purpose of ascertaining that the goods received are those bought. 1145

Acceptance

44-278

Section 35 of the 1979 Act ¹¹⁴⁶ provides:

“(1)

The buyer is deemed to have accepted the goods subject to subs.(2) below—

(a)

when he intimates to the seller that he has accepted them, or when the goods have been delivered to him and he does any act in relation to them which is inconsistent with the ownership of the seller.

(b)

(2)

Where goods are delivered to the buyer, and he has not previously examined them, he is not deemed to have accepted them under subs.(1) above until he has had a reasonable opportunity of examining them for the purpose—of ascertaining whether they are in conformity with the contract, and in the case of a contract for sale by sample, of comparing the bulk with the sample.

(a)

(b)

(3)

Where the buyer deals as consumer ... the buyer cannot lose his right to rely on subs.(2) above by agreement, waiver or otherwise.” ¹¹⁴⁷

This section relates to the loss of the right to reject the goods by acceptance under s.11(4). ¹¹⁴⁸ It should be noted that as a matter of principle the party entitled to insist that goods have been accepted may waive his rights in this respect and take them back. ¹¹⁴⁹

Intimation of acceptance

44-279

The intimation may presumably be express or implied. Signature by or on behalf of the buyer of a delivery note acknowledging that he had taken delivery of the goods would not of itself amount to an intimation of acceptance unless it could reasonably be inferred from the wording of the note and the surrounding circumstances that the buyer had accepted the goods. An acknowledgment that the buyer had inspected goods when he had not would only be effective in favour of a seller who relied on

it. ¹¹⁵⁰ And by virtue of subs.(3), none of these would affect a buyer dealing as consumer and seeking to reject at common law who had not had the opportunity to examine. Asking for information or discussing remedial measures, so keeping the matter open, need not be an intimation of acceptance. ¹¹⁵¹

Act inconsistent with the ownership of the seller

44-280

The second instance of acceptance listed in subs.(1) gives rise to some problems of interpretation. In many situations where the goods have been delivered to the buyer, the property in the goods will have passed to the buyer, so that the seller has no ownership of the goods with which the buyer can inconsistently deal. It is, however, said that the fact that the buyer has a right to reject makes the property conditional only and leaves a reversionary interest in the seller, and it is with that reversionary interest that the buyer must not act inconsistently. ¹¹⁵²

44-281

The policy which lies behind this provision is also not clear. Some, perhaps the majority, of cases concern situations where the goods cannot in fact be returned, because, for example, they have been incorporated into a structure ¹¹⁵³ or consumed, or more of them used than is necessary for testing or fitting. ¹¹⁵⁴ In such cases it is not difficult to see why the goods should be held to have been accepted, and the right to reject consequently lost, because restitutio in integrum is no longer possible. The wording of the provision is, however, in wider terms and a second group of cases brings within the concept of “any act in relation to [the goods] which is inconsistent with the ownership of the seller” acts done in relation to the goods, most clearly resale and forwarding to a sub-buyer. ¹¹⁵⁵ This line of reasoning has been extended still further, on an uncertain basis, to cover putting goods up for sale in one's own name and buying them in, ¹¹⁵⁶ mortgaging them ¹¹⁵⁷ and reselling them ¹¹⁵⁸ (but not unloading them, ¹¹⁵⁹ rebagging them, ¹¹⁶⁰ insuring them, ¹¹⁶¹ claiming on insurance relating to them ¹¹⁶² or making inquiries about resale ¹¹⁶³). It may be argued that the reason why, in these cases, the buyer is deemed to have accepted the goods and so lost his right of rejection is because the acts in question show that he has thereby elected to affirm the contract, and he should not be permitted to resile from that election. But, if this is so, then it is difficult to see how there is any true election to “affirm” the contract in situations where the buyer has no knowledge that the goods are defective or of his right to reject; yet rejection in such a situation may be barred. It would be preferable if s.35(1)(b) were confined to cases where the goods simply cannot be returned. Hence if the buyer has resold the goods but can recover the goods from the sub-buyer (i.e. because the sub-buyer has himself rejected them) he should be able to reject them. ¹¹⁶⁴ He should also be able to reject them if he delivers the goods to a third party for repair. ¹¹⁶⁵ This approach is to some extent supported by s.35(6)(b) which provides that the buyer is not by virtue of s.35 deemed to have accepted the goods “merely because the goods are delivered to another under a sub-sale or other disposition”.

Opportunity to examine

44-282

The acts which are stated in s.35(1)(a) and (b) to constitute acceptance are both subject to s.35(2). The effect of this subsection is that, where goods are delivered to the buyer, he will not be deemed to have accepted them unless he has previously examined the goods or has had a reasonable opportunity of examining them. A commercial buyer could nevertheless agree to forego or waive his right of examination. ¹¹⁶⁶ But if the buyer deals as consumer he cannot so lose his right to rely on s.35(2).

Lapse of reasonable time

44-283

Section 35 provides yet a third way in which acceptance will take place and the right to reject become barred:

“(4)

The buyer is also deemed to have accepted the goods when after the lapse of a reasonable time he retains the goods without intimating to the seller that he has rejected them.

(5)

The questions that are material in determining for the purposes of subs.(4) above whether a reasonable time has elapsed include whether the buyer has had a reasonable opportunity of examining the goods for the purpose mentioned in subs.(2) above.”

44-284

What is a “reasonable time” for rejection is a question of fact. ¹¹⁶⁷ In general the buyer is entitled to a reasonable time in which to assess the defects and decide what to do ¹¹⁶⁸; but if his delay is unnecessarily prejudicial to the seller, it may be held unreasonable. ¹¹⁶⁹ There was a tendency to assume that in the interests of finality the time should not be long; and there is certainly no requirement that the time be sufficiently long to enable a defect of the type concerned to manifest itself, for this may in the case of some products not be for several years. In 1987 an approach was adopted at first instance that the time should not be related to special circumstances of the buyer, but should be more generally “a reasonable practical interval in commercial terms”. ¹¹⁷⁰ It has more recently, however, been held in the Court of Appeal that, since the amendments of 1994, this no longer represents the law, and time taken to ascertain what repairs or changes are needed and implement them is not necessarily to be counted. ¹¹⁷¹ The question whether the buyer has had a reasonable opportunity for examination is relevant to the determination whether a reasonable time has elapsed. ¹¹⁷² Where goods are sold for resale, a reasonable time to intimate rejection will usually be the time actually taken to resell the goods together with an additional period in which they can be inspected and tried out by the sub-purchaser. ¹¹⁷³ In determining what is a reasonable time the seller's conduct also may be relevant; as where he has acquiesced in an extension of time, ¹¹⁷⁴ or by means of a misrepresentation has caused the buyer to prolong the trial of the goods. ¹¹⁷⁵ Custom may also be considered, and in one old case a custom that only one day should be allowed for rejection was upheld. ¹¹⁷⁶

Attempts at repair

44-285

Where the buyer allows the seller to attempt to repair defects in the goods, there might be a risk that the buyer would in consequence lose his right to reject, whether because this was an implied indication of acceptance or because the attempts cause a reasonable time to elapse. Section 35(6) seeks to meet this problem by providing that the buyer is not deemed to have accepted the goods “merely because he asks for, or agrees to, their repair by or under an arrangement with the seller”. The House of Lords has recently considered the question whether a buyer must accept goods which have been repaired to the appropriate standard, but where no information is given as to what was or had been wrong with them. It was held that he need not; and it would seem that even if an explanation is given, sometimes (as in this case) the indication of the nature of the repair would be enough to justify continued rejection. The basis of the reasoning cannot be that there is a right to retender, nor that the retender of goods so repaired of itself puts the seller in compliance under the main contract, for either of these (unless perhaps the view is taken that the returned goods would not have been of satisfactory quality unless accompanied by an explanation) would have led to a different result. It is rather that the arrangement for repair was a separate transaction suspending the right to reject. It seems that this may have been by way of a separate contract, unilateral or even bilateral, or by way of a conditional waiver; and the implied terms of that arrangement in the situation in issue (though not necessarily always) required the seller to state what had been wrong, or even sometimes to specify this before commencing on repair. ¹¹⁷⁷

Acceptance of part

44-286

In principle acceptance of part of the goods is acceptance of the whole and thus bars the right to reject. ¹¹⁷⁸ But this rule is subject to two exceptions. In the first place it does not apply where the contract is severable. One example of a severable (or divisible) contract is a contract for the sale of goods to be delivered by stated instalments which are to be separately paid for, ¹¹⁷⁹ though there can be other cases. ¹¹⁸⁰ Where the contract is severable, a buyer may treat it as discharged if there is a renunciation or repudiatory failure of performance by the seller, despite the fact that he has accepted instalments of the goods previously delivered to him. ¹¹⁸¹ He must of course pay for any deliveries accepted. ¹¹⁸²

44-287

The second exception is set out in s.35A(1) of the Act ¹¹⁸³:

“If the buyer—

(a)

has the right to reject the goods by reason of a breach on the part of the seller that affects some or all of them, but accepts some of the goods, including, where there are any goods unaffected by the breach, all such goods, he does not by accepting them lose his right to reject the rest.”

(b)

Goods are “affected by a breach” if by reason of a breach they are not in conformity with the contract. ¹¹⁸⁴ Where the sale is by instalments, the provision applies to each instalment. ¹¹⁸⁵ The section applies unless a contrary intention appears in, or is to be implied, from the contract. ¹¹⁸⁶

44-288

It will be noted that, in order to take advantage of s.35A(1), the buyer must accept all the conforming goods; he cannot accept part of them only. But he is permitted to choose how much of the non-conforming goods he will accept or reject. The subsection does not, however, impose on the buyer any obligation to accept those goods which are in conformity with the contract: he can always reject the whole. Presumably the buyer must pay for the goods accepted at the contract rate or, if the price has been paid, can recover the price of the goods rejected.

44-289

Section 35A(1) is nevertheless qualified where the goods sold can be divided into “commercial units”. Section 35(7) provides:

“Where the contract is for the sale of goods making one or more commercial units, a buyer accepting any goods included in a unit is deemed to have accepted all the goods making the unit; and in this subsection ‘commercial unit’ means a unit division of which would materially impair the value of the goods or the character of the unit.”

Standard examples are one of a pair of shoes or a volume of a multi-volume encyclopedia. Although part acceptance of goods within a unit amounts to total acceptance of that unit, a buyer could nevertheless accept a unit or units which conform with the contract while rejecting those that do not conform.

Return to seller

44-290

By s.36 ¹¹⁸⁷:

“Unless otherwise agreed, where goods are delivered to the buyer, and he refuses to accept them, having the right to do so, he is not bound to return them to the seller, but it is sufficient if he intimates to the seller that he refuses to accept them.”

The property in the goods is by rejection revested in the seller and they become at his risk ¹¹⁸⁸ if they were not so already. If they have been damaged or destroyed without the buyer’s fault it is not clear whether they may still be rejected. Cases suggest that they may ¹¹⁸⁹; but it is arguable that unless the damage or destruction arises from the very defect complained of, the risk should be on the buyer. ¹¹⁹⁰ It is certainly true that the fact that goods have deteriorated has been taken into account in the assessment of what is a “reasonable time” under what is now s.35(4). ¹¹⁹¹ A buyer who rejects cannot exercise a lien over the goods against repayment of the price. ¹¹⁹²

Refusal to take delivery

44-291

By s.37:

“(1)

When the seller is ready and willing to deliver the goods, and requests the buyer to take delivery, ¹¹⁹³ and the buyer does not within a reasonable time ¹¹⁹⁴ after such request take delivery of the goods, he is liable to the seller for any loss occasioned by his neglect or refusal to take delivery, ¹¹⁹⁵ and also for a reasonable charge for the care and custody of the goods. ¹¹⁹⁶

(2)

Nothing in this section affects the rights of the seller where the neglect or refusal of the buyer to take delivery amounts to a repudiation of the contract.”

44-292

Where the property has passed but the buyer does not take delivery, the seller's principal remedy is an action for the price under s.49.¹¹⁹⁷ He may also claim damages under s.37. Where the property has not passed his remedy normally lies in damages.¹¹⁹⁸ In such a case failure to take delivery would normally indicate wrongful repudiation and would often be difficult to distinguish from nonacceptance; but cases could arise where the two were distinguishable.¹¹⁹⁹

^{1136.} Nothing in this section affects the operation of the time limit for the consumer's short-term right to reject under the Consumer Rights Act 2015. On the consumer buyer's right to reject under the 2015 Act see above, paras 38-478—38-485.

^{1137.} Walter W Potts & Co Ltd v Brown, Macfarlane & Co Ltd (1924) 30 Com. Cas. 64.

^{1138.} Perkins v Bell [1893] 1 Q.B. 193.

^{1139.} See Heilbutt v Hickson (1872) L.R. 7 C.P. 438.

^{1140.} See Grimoldby v Wells (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 391 (transfer from one vehicle to another).

^{1141.} See Molling & Co v Dean & Son Ltd (1901) 18 T.L.R. 217 (books); Van den Hurk v R Martens & Co Ltd [1920] 1 K.B. 850 (sodium sulphate); cf. Saunt v Belcher and Gibbons Ltd (1920) 90 L.J.K.B. 541 (coke).

^{1142.} See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 12-045, 19-157, 20-115, 20-116, 21-107.

^{1143.} On the consumer buyer's right to reject under the 2015 Act see above, paras 38-478—38-485.

^{1144.} E Clemens Horst & Co v Biddell Bros [1912] A.C. 18 (though he may reject later). See also Polenghi Bros v Dried Milk Co Ltd (1904) 92 L.T. 64 (sale by sample).

^{1145.} Pettitt v Mitchell (1842) 4 Man. & G. 819; Isherwood v Whitmore (1843) 11 M. & W. 347.

^{1146.} This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides special rules in relation to the right to reject in consumer sales contracts, see above paras 38-478—38-485.

^{1147.} subs.(3) only applies to acceptance under subs.(2). General principles of waiver are however presumably relevant. This subsection is deleted by the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides special rules in relation to the right to reject in consumer sales contracts, see above, paras 38-378—38-485. In consumer sales contracts the buyer has a so-called "early right to reject", which is normally lost after 30 days from delivery of the goods.

^{1148.} See above, para.44-068.

^{1149.} Whitecap Leisure Ltd v John H Rundle Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 429, [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 216.

^{1150.} cf. "acknowledgment" clauses: see Vol.I, para.15-147.

^{1151.} Clegg v Anderson [2003] EWCA Civ 320, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 32; as explained in Jones v Gallagher [2004] EWCA Civ 10, [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 377.

- 1152. Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders & Shippers Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 459, 487; J Rosenthal & Sons Ltd v Esmail [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1117, 1131.
- 1153. Mechan & Sons v Bow, M'Lachlan & Co Ltd, 1910 S.C. 758 (ship).
- 1154. See a case before the Act, Harnor v Groves (1855) 15 C.B. 667.
- 1155. Hardy & Co v Hillerns & Fowler [1923] 2 K.B. 490; E & S Ruben Ltd v Faire Bros & Co Ltd [1949] 1 K.B. 254; Pelhams (Materials) Ltd v Mercantile Commodities Syndicate [1953] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 281. But contrast (dealings with documents) Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders & Shippers Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 459, 485-488.
- 1156. Parker v Palmer (1821) 4 B. & A. 387, also before the Act.
- 1157. Metals Ltd v Diamond [1930] 4 D.L.R. 886.
- 1158. Chapman v Morton (1843) 11 M. & W. 534; Vargas Pena Apezteguia y Cia SAIC v Peter Cremer GmbH [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 394; cf. J & J Cunningham Ltd v Robert A Munro & Co Ltd (1922) 28 Com. Cas. 42.
- 1159. Libar Wood Co v H Smith & Sons Ltd (1930) 37 Ll.L. Rep. 296.
- 1160. Dower & Co v Corrie, Maccoll & Son Ltd (1925) 23 Ll.L. Rep. 100.
- 1161. Clegg v Anderson [2003] EWCA Civ 320, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 32.
- 1162. JS Robertson (Aust) Pty Ltd v Martin (1956) 94 C.L.R. 30.
- 1163. Fisher Reeves & Co Ltd v Armour & Co Ltd [1920] 3 K.B. 614.
- 1164. But see Jordeson & Co v Stora Kopparbergs Bergslags Aktiebolag (1931) 41 Ll.L. Rep. 201.
- 1165. cf. s.35(6) (repair by or under an arrangement with the seller).
- 1166. See above, para.44-277.
- 1167. 1979 Act s.59. See Fisher, Reeves & Co Ltd v Armour & Co Ltd [1920] 3 K.B. 614, 624; Leaf v International Galleries [1950] 2 K.B. 86; Long v Lloyd [1958] 1 W.L.R. 753.
- 1168. Fisher, Reeves & Co Ltd v Armour & Co Ltd, above; Manifatture Tessile Laniera Wooltex v J B Ashley Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 28; Patient (1980) 43 M.L.R. 463.
- 1169. Morrison and Mason Ltd v Clarkson Bros (1898) 25 R. 427 (goods subjected to rough usage).
- 1170. Bernstein v Pamsons Motors (Golders Green) Ltd [1987] 2 All E.R. 220 (decided before s.35 was amended and replaced by the Sale and Supply of Goods Act 1994 s.2(1)): the right to reject a defective new car was held to have been lost after 21 days, though the buyer had been ill for part of the time and had only driven 120 miles. cf. M & J Hurst Consultants Ltd v Grange Motors (Brentwood) Ltd (Russell J.), Manchester, October 1981 (about four months): see (1988) 104 L.Q.R. 16; Fiat Auto Financial Services v Connelly, 2007 S.L.T. (Sh Ct) 111 (attempts to rectify: car used as taxi over 40,000 miles over more than eight months: rejectable); Kingsway Hall Hotel Ltd v Red Sky IT (Hounslow) Ltd [2010] EWHC 965 (TCC) (computer program: five months).
- 1171. Clegg v Andersson [2003] EWCA Civ 320, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 32 (yacht: eight months); as explained in Jones v Gallagher [2004] EWCA Civ 10, [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 377 (fitted kitchen: too late to reject after four month's negotiation). See also Douglas v Genvarigill Co Ltd [2010] CSOH 14 (car not rejectable after 15 months); Russo v Belcar Pty Ltd [2011] SASFC 151 (acceptance by acquiescence in performance of warranty work and lack of unequivocal rejection).

- 1172. 1979 Act s.35(5).
- 1173. Truk (UK) Ltd v Tokmakidis GmbH [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 543, 551.
- 1174. Lucy v Moufflet (1860) 5 H. & N. 229 (failure to answer letter of complaint). And see Farnworth Finance Facilities Ltd v Attryde [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1053.
- 1175. Munro & Co v Bennet & Son, 1911 S.C. 337; Cork v Greavette Boats Ltd [1940] 4 D.L.R. 202; but cf. Long v Lloyd [1958] 1 W.L.R. 753, 760. And if the buyer negotiates for a reduction in price this may indicate acceptance: see Canterbury Seed Co Ltd v J G Ward Farmers' Association Ltd (1895) 13 N.Z.L.R. 96.
- 1176. Sanders v Jameson (1848) 2 C. & K. 557.
- 1177. J & H Ritchie Ltd v Lloyd Ltd [2007] UKHL 9, [2007] 1 W.L.R. 670. See Bridge [2007] J.B.L. 814; Loi [2007] J.B.L. 807; Low (2007) 123 L.Q.R. 536. In Gregg & Co (Knottingley) Ltd v Emherst Glass Ltd [2005] EWHC 804 (TCC) it was held that continuing malfunctions of computerised machines, despite best efforts at remediation over two years, were repudiatory of "the contract for sale and after sales services" though the right to reject had been lost.
- 1178. 1979 Act s.11(4); see above, para.44-068.
- 1179. 1979 Act s.31(2); see above, para.44-263.
- 1180. See Longbottom & Co Ltd v Bass, Walker & Co [1927] W.N. 245 (delivery in instalments, price payable by monthly account); Jackson v Rotax Motor & Cycle Co [1910] 2 K.B. 937 (deliveries "as required"); Molling & Co v Dean & Son Ltd (1901) 18 T.L.R. 217; Regent OHG Aisenstadt und Barig v Francesco of Jermyn St Ltd [1981] 3 All E.R. 327.
- 1181. 1979 Act s.31(2); see above, paras 44-263 et seq.
- 1182. Jackson v Rotax Motor & Cycle Co, above; Cehave NV v Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH (The Hansa Nord) [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 216, 226; decision reversed [1976] Q.B. 44. See also Tarling v O'Riordan (1878) 2 L.R. Ir. 82.
- 1183. This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides special rules in relation to partial rejection in consumer sales contracts, see above, para.38-480.
- 1184. 1979 Act s.35A(3).
- 1185. 1979 Act s.35A(2).
- 1186. 1979 Act s.35A(4).
- 1187. This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides special rules in relation to the right to reject in consumer sales contracts, see above, paras 38-478—38-485.
- 1188. See Grimoldby v Wells (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 391; Lucy v Moufflet (1860) 5 H. & N. 229. A buyer was awarded damages for storing rejected goods in Kolfor Plant Ltd v Tilbury Plant Ltd (1977) 121 S.J. 390. As to the effect of acts by a buyer after rejection see Tradax Export SA v European Grain and Shipping Ltd [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 100; Whitecap Leisure Ltd v John H Rundle Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 429, [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 216.
- 1189. Head v Tattersall (1871) L.R. 7 Ex. 7; Chapman v Withers (1888) 20 Q.B.D. 824; Kinnear v Brodie (1902) 3 F. 540, 544, 545; Boyd & Forrest v Glasgow and South-Western Ry Co, 1915 S.C. 20, 29 HL; Vitol SA v Esso Australia Ltd [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 96.

- 1190. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 12-059—12-061.
- 1191. Morrison and Mason Ltd v Clarkson Bros (1898) 25 R. 427.
- 1192. J L Lyons & Co Ltd v May & Baker Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 685.
- 1193. Defined, s.61(1), see above, para.44-015.
- 1194. This is a question of fact: s.59.
- 1195. But the seller may claim only if he himself is ready and willing to deliver: see Forrest & Son Ltd v Aramayo (1900) 83 L.T. 335.
- 1196. See Greaves v Ashlin (1813) 3 Camp. 426. See also Penarth Dock Engineering Co v Pounds [1963] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 359 (benefit of free storage given as damages for trespass).
- 1197. See below, para.44-359.
- 1198. Unless the price is payable on a day certain irrespective of delivery: s.49(2): see below, para.44-364.
- 1199. e.g. where in an overseas sale the buyer accepts documents but not goods; or accepts goods after delay. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 19-235, 20-147.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 5. - Performance of the Contract

(d) - Payment

Payment by buyer

44-293

It is the duty of the buyer to pay for the goods in accordance with the terms of the contract of sale. ¹²⁰⁰ The method, place and time of payment are, therefore, in the first instance to be determined by reference to the terms of the contract of sale. ¹²⁰¹ The duty of the buyer to pay the price does not, however, necessarily connote a right on the part of the seller to sue for the price ¹²⁰² and a wrongful neglect or refusal by the buyer to pay the price may give rise only to an action for damages for non-acceptance. ¹²⁰³

Amount of payment

44-294

The buyer is bound to pay to the seller the full price of the goods unless by their contract the parties have agreed that a discount shall be allowed. If a discount is stipulated for a particular period, the full price is payable should the reduced price not be paid before the end of the period. ¹²⁰⁴

Payment in cash

44-295

Unless otherwise agreed the seller is entitled to payment in cash and in legal currency. ¹²⁰⁵ But the parties may expressly or impliedly agree that payment may be made in some other manner, e.g. by cheque or by credit or charge card or by credit transfer, ¹²⁰⁶ and such an implication may be made by course of dealing between the parties or by trade custom.

Conditional and absolute payment

44-296

Payment by negotiable instrument ¹²⁰⁷ or by letter of credit ¹²⁰⁸ is normally regarded as conditional payment only: the seller's remedy to sue for the price is suspended, but revives if the instrument is dishonoured on presentation ¹²⁰⁹ or if payment of the letter of credit is wrongfully refused. However, payment by means of a credit or charge card ¹²¹⁰ and probably by cheque supported by a cheque guarantee card ¹²¹¹ is absolute payment and a discharge of the buyer's obligation to pay.

Place of payment

44-297

Where a place of payment is specified in the contract of sale, payment must be made at that place. Otherwise payment is to be made at the seller's place of business, if he has one, or if not, his residence. ¹²¹² The place of payment may be a condition of the contract and not merely an intermediate term. ¹²¹³

Time of payment44-298

The time of payment may be stipulated in the contract, or, if not expressly so stipulated, be determined by reference to the course of dealing between the parties or by trade custom. Where no time of payment can thus be implied, payment will prima facie be due when the seller informs the buyer that he is ready and willing to deliver the goods, since by virtue of s.28 of the 1979 Act delivery of the goods and payment of the price are, unless otherwise agreed, concurrent conditions. ¹²¹⁴

Whether time for payment of essence44-299

Unless a different intention appears from the terms of the contract, ¹²¹⁵ stipulations as to time of payment are not deemed to be of the essence of a contract of sale. ¹²¹⁶ But the seller may expressly reserve the right of re-sale in the event of default ¹²¹⁷ and by s.48(3) of the Act the seller has in certain circumstances a statutory right of resale. ¹²¹⁸

Late payment of commercial debts44-300

Statutory interest may be payable under the Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act 1998 on a debt created by virtue of an obligation to pay the whole or part of the contract price. ¹²¹⁹ Such interest starts to run on the day after the relevant day for the debt determined in accordance with s.4 of the 1998 Act. This will not necessarily be the same as the time of payment referred to above. ¹²²⁰

Advance payment44-301

The question whether the time for payment of a deposit or other advance payment is of the essence depends on the intention of the parties to be ascertained by construing the contract. ¹²²¹ A term which stipulates for payment of a deposit is not usually a condition precedent to the formation of the contract, ¹²²² but it may be construed as a fundamental term of the contract entitling the seller to treat the contract as repudiated if the deposit is not duly paid. ¹²²³ The Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act 1998 contains specific provisions for the calculation of the date from which statutory interest starts to run in a case where the debt relates to an obligation to make an advance payment. ¹²²⁴

Credit44-302

Where goods are sold on credit, payment is not due until the period of credit has expired. ¹²²⁵ Before that time the seller is not entitled to withhold delivery until payment or tender of the price, unless the buyer becomes insolvent, ¹²²⁶ in the absence of an express stipulation in the contract to the contrary.

¹²²⁷

44-303

A contract for the sale of goods on credit, where the buyer is to pay the price of the goods by instalments, may be regulated by the Consumer Credit Act 1974 if the buyer is an individual. ¹²²⁸

^{1200.} Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.29.

^{1201.} Otherwise, see s.28 of the Act; see above, para.44-235.

^{1202.} See below, para.44-359.

^{1203.} See below, para.44-367.

^{1204.} Amos and Wood Ltd v Kaprow (1948) 64 T.L.R. 110. Aliter if the discount is a “trade” discount.

^{1205.} See Vol.I, para.21-040.

^{1206.} See Vol.I, paras 21-046, 21-076, 21-084.

^{1207.} See Vol.I, paras 21-075—21-083.

^{1208.} See above, para.34-445.

^{1209.} See also below, para.44-311 (when seller is “unpaid”).

^{1210.} Re Charge Card Services Ltd [1989] Ch. 497; see Vol.I, para.21-084.

^{1211.} [1987] Ch. 150, 166 (Millett J.). This question was left open by the Court of Appeal [1989] Ch. 497, 517.

^{1212.} See Vol.I, para.21-056.

^{1213.} PT Berlian Laju Tanker TBK v Nuse Shipping Ltd [2008] EWHC 1330 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 246.

^{1214.} See above, para.44-234.

^{1215.} See above, para.44-128.

^{1216.} Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.10(1); see above, para.44-128 and generally Vol.I, paras 21-011, 21-055.

^{1217.} Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.48(4); see below, para.44-355.

^{1218.} See below, para.44-346.

^{1219.} See Vol.I, para.26-244.

^{1220.} See, e.g. s.4(5).

^{1221.} Portaria Shipping Co v Gulf Pacific Navigation Co Ltd [1981] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 180.

^{1222.} Damon Compañía Naviera SA v Hapag-Lloyd International SA [1985] 1 W.L.R. 435. See also Millichamp v Jones [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1422. cf. Myton Ltd v Schwab-Morris [1974] 1 W.L.R. 331.

- 1223. Myton Ltd v Schwab-Morris, above, at 337; Millichamp v Jones, above, at 1430; Portaria Shipping Co v Gulf Pacific Navigation Co Ltd, above; Damon Compañía Naviera SA v Hapag-Lloyd International SA [1985] 1 W.L.R. 435.
- 1224. ss.4(4), 11; see Vol.I, para.26-244. In Griffon Shipping LLC v Firodi Shipping Ltd (The Griffon) [2013] EWCA Civ 1567, [2014] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 593, there was an express contractual right to cancel in the event that a deposit was not paid. If the right to receive the deposit had accrued it could survive termination of the agreement.
- 1225. Price v Nixon (1814) 5 Taunt. 338.
- 1226. Sale of Goods Act 1979 ss.39(1)(2), 41(1); see below, paras 44-304, 44-314.
- 1227. cf. BV Oliehandel Jongland v Coastal International Ltd [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 463.
- 1228. Consumer Credit Act 1974 s.8; see above, paras 39-016 et seq. But credit sale agreements of four instalments or less are not regulated agreements provided that the payments are to be made within a period not exceeding 12 months beginning with the date of the agreement: Consumer Credit (Exempt Agreements) Order 1989 (SI 1989/869) art.3(1)(a)(i). This exemption does not apply to conditional sale agreements where the seller retains the property in the goods.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 6. - Remedies of the Seller
(a) - Rights of Unpaid Seller against the Goods

Summary of remedies against the goods

44-304

It is provided by s.39(1) of the Act that:

“Subject to this ¹²²⁹ and any other ¹²³⁰ Act, notwithstanding that the property ¹²³¹ in the goods may have passed to the buyer, the unpaid seller of goods, as such, has by implication of law ¹²³²—

- (a)
a lien on the goods or right to retain ¹²³³ them for the price while he is in possession of them;
- (b)
in case of the insolvency ¹²³⁴ of the buyer, a right ¹²³⁵ of stopping the goods in transit after he has parted with the possession of them;
- (c) a right of re-sale as limited by this Act.” ¹²³⁶

Although the unpaid seller's normal remedy is to sue the buyer for the price ¹²³⁷ or for damages for non-acceptance, the law gives him certain remedies in respect of the goods themselves, analogous to a form of “security” for payment of the price. ¹²³⁸ By exercising these remedies, the unpaid seller in effect secures a form of preference over the general creditors of a bankrupt buyer. ¹²³⁹ They are known as “real” remedies, since they depend on, and are directed against, the res, the goods themselves. ¹²⁴⁰ The remedies of lien and stoppage in transit are designed to give protection to an unpaid seller so long as the goods have not reached the actual possession of the buyer or his agent. Until then, the buyer's right to possession is defeasible upon certain conditions: the main one ¹²⁴¹ is where the buyer becomes insolvent while the goods are still subject to the control of the unpaid seller or his agent; the seller ¹²⁴² is then, by virtue of his right of lien, entitled to retain possession of them until the price is paid. If the buyer becomes insolvent while the goods are still in the control of a carrier and before the buyer or his agent obtains delivery of them, the seller may, by giving notice to the carrier, prevent delivery to the buyer and direct redelivery to himself or his agent: this is the right of stoppage in transit, which enables the unpaid seller to resume possession of the goods and to retain them until the price is paid. ¹²⁴³ The unpaid seller who has exercised either of the rights of lien or of stoppage is given the power to pass to a new buyer a good title to the goods, so that the resale will divest the original buyer of the title which he may have had. ¹²⁴⁴ In practice, the unpaid seller will need to be in possession of the goods before he can effectively exercise his right to resell them. ¹²⁴⁵

Effect on third parties

44-305

The real remedies exercisable by the unpaid seller normally prevail over the rights of a sub-buyer or pledgee, ¹²⁴⁶ and may affect third parties in that remedies for wrongful interference with the goods (e.g. trespass or conversion) will depend on who is in possession of them or entitled to possession of them. ¹²⁴⁷

Remedies of seller who retains the property in the goods

44-306

Section 39(2) provides:

“Where the property in goods has not passed to the buyer, the unpaid seller has (in addition to his other remedies) ¹²⁴⁸ a right ¹²⁴⁹ of withholding delivery similar to and co-extensive with his rights of lien or retention and stoppage in transit where the property has passed to the buyer.” ¹²⁵⁰

The purpose of this subsection is to bring into line the law on the seller's right to retain the goods pending payment of the price in the two possible situations which could arise in respect of the property in the goods. A lien is a right to retain possession of goods owned by another person, and the unpaid seller's “lien” is therefore an appropriate term when the property in the goods has already passed to the buyer before the seller claims to retain possession of the goods. ¹²⁵¹ When, however, the property in the goods is not to pass until a future event ¹²⁵² (e.g. upon payment ¹²⁵³), the seller is claiming to retain, pending payment of the price, goods in which he still has the property. ¹²⁵⁴ One result of s.39(2) is that in an instalment contract ¹²⁵⁵ the seller may usually ¹²⁵⁶ “withhold delivery” of future instalments until he is paid for instalments already delivered to the buyer. ¹²⁵⁷

Retention of title

44-307

A special contractual clause (a Romalpa or retention of title clause) may reserve to the seller the property in the goods supplied to the buyer, until the full price has been paid; such a clause may also purport to entitle the unpaid seller to claim any product manufactured by the buyer from the goods, or the proceeds of resale of the goods, or of the manufactured product. ¹²⁵⁸

Future and unascertained goods

44-308

If, under an agreement to sell ¹²⁵⁹ “future goods” ¹²⁶⁰ or “unascertained goods” ¹²⁶¹ the seller has not yet obliged himself to deliver any particular goods to the buyer (e.g. by a notice of appropriation), he is obviously under no contractual obligation towards the buyer in regard to any goods subject to his control which happen to fit the contractual description, or which he has in mind to use in order to perform his obligations to the buyer. ¹²⁶² Since such goods have not been attached to the particular contract, the seller's right and power over them are in no way restricted by the contract, and his rights over them are therefore wider than rights arising under s.39(2), see above (which should not be interpreted so as to restrict any of his rights arising under common law rules). ¹²⁶³

Extended meaning of “seller”

44-309

Section 38(2) extends ¹²⁶⁴ the meaning of “seller” as follows:

“In this part of this Act ‘seller’ includes any person who is in the position of a seller, as, for instance, an agent of the seller to whom the bill of lading has been indorsed, ¹²⁶⁵ or a consignor or agent who has himself paid (or is directly responsible for) the price.”

Thus, a wider group of persons are given the opportunity of protecting their interests when they have not been paid. The main illustration is that of the agent who has himself paid the price to the seller, ¹²⁶⁶ as in the decisions before the Act on the position of a commission agent who accepted an order to obtain goods for his principal on the understanding that the agent would buy the goods in his own name and then consign them to the principal. By buying in his own name, the commission agent pledged his own credit when buying the goods, and not the credit of his principal ¹²⁶⁷: he was thus treated (for this purpose) as a seller of the goods to his principal and was held to be entitled to exercise the right of stoppage in transit when his principal became insolvent during the course of transit of the goods. ¹²⁶⁸ It is submitted that a surety for the buyer is, when he has paid the seller, a “person who is in the position of a seller” within the meaning of subs.(2) above. ¹²⁶⁹ Before the buyer has defaulted in paying the price, the surety has only a contingent liability to pay the price, ¹²⁷⁰ but after payment by him he is subrogated to the rights of the seller against the defaulting buyer. ¹²⁷¹

Claim for repayment

44-310

The term “seller” in s.38(2) does not extend to a buyer who has a claim against the seller for repayment of the price. ¹²⁷² So where the buyer paid the price to the seller, but later, and justifiably, rejected the goods, he could not claim a lien to retain the goods until the seller repaid him the price. ¹²⁷³ If the buyer who has paid the price wishes to reject the goods on the ground that they are not in accordance with the contractual description, he is dependent on the solvency of the seller for his recovery of the price ¹²⁷⁴: the buyer’s rejection of the goods revests the property in the seller and leaves the buyer with only a personal claim against the seller.

Definition of unpaid seller

44-311

Section 38(1) provides:

“The seller of goods is an unpaid seller within the meaning of this Act—

- (a) when the whole ¹²⁷⁵ of the price has not been paid or tendered;
- (b)

when a bill of exchange or other negotiable instrument has been received as conditional ¹²⁷⁶ payment, and the condition on which it was received has not been fulfilled by reason of the dishonour of the instrument or otherwise.” ¹²⁷⁷

The buyer's obligation to pay the price depends on construction of the contract. ¹²⁷⁸ The meaning of s.38(1)(a) is that the whole of the price has not in fact been paid or tendered to the seller, whether or not payment is due according to the contract. ¹²⁷⁹ During a period of credit, or during the currency of a negotiable instrument taken for the price, the seller is taken to have waived his right to a lien, but he is nevertheless an unpaid seller, whose right to exercise the real remedies revives ¹²⁸⁰ if the buyer becomes insolvent. ¹²⁸¹ The same position obtains where by the contract the buyer is obliged to pay the price by arranging for a banker's commercial credit to be opened in favour of the seller: the opening of the credit is normally only conditional payment, ¹²⁸² and if the banker defaults in honouring the credit, the seller may claim payment of the price directly from the buyer, ¹²⁸³ and the seller's remedies against the goods revive.

Tender of price

44-312

For entitlement to exercise the real remedies, tender of the price is equated with payment. ¹²⁸⁴ The general principles of the law on tender of money to pay a debt are discussed in Vol.I. ¹²⁸⁵ If the seller waives ¹²⁸⁶ tender of the price by the buyer, he will be estopped from claiming subsequently that he is an “unpaid seller” for the purpose of exercising the real remedies. ¹²⁸⁷

Definition of insolvency ¹²⁸⁸

44-313

Section 61(4) provides a definition of insolvency ¹²⁸⁹:

“A person is deemed to be insolvent within the meaning of this Act if he has either ceased to pay his debts in the ordinary course of business ¹²⁹⁰ or he cannot pay his debts as they become due.” ¹²⁹¹

This definition is of crucial importance for two of the remedies against the goods: the right of stoppage in transit arises only upon the buyer's insolvency, ¹²⁹² while in the case of the unpaid seller's lien, it is one of the three alternative situations which justify the seller's retention of the goods. ¹²⁹³ The word “insolvent” has been interpreted in other contexts, from which analogies may cautiously be sought. ¹²⁹⁴ Thus, the word has often been construed, “both in private instruments and upon the construction of a statute, to apply to a person labouring under a general disability to pay his just debts in the ordinary course of trade and business”. ¹²⁹⁵ When a clause in a contract is to take effect upon the “insolvency” of a party, the ordinary meaning of the word has been held to be “an incapability of paying the party's just debts”, ¹²⁹⁶ or “a general inability to pay debts”. ¹²⁹⁷ The buyer's own statements in documents or correspondence may be strong evidence against him. ¹²⁹⁸ Some cases have dealt with the effect of the buyer's alleged insolvency upon the contract of sale. If the buyer declares that he is insolvent this does not of itself terminate the contract ¹²⁹⁹: but he may make the declaration in such circumstances as to show that he cannot, or does not intend to, perform his side of the contract, in which case the seller may treat the declaration as a repudiation and terminate the contract. ¹³⁰⁰ In this context, the mere fact that a debtor calls a meeting of his creditors, or some of them, need not necessarily imply that he is insolvent: the debtor may merely be discussing his need for more capital or for more credit, or the possibility that he may have to wind up an unprofitable business. ¹³⁰¹

Effect of bankruptcy

44-314

The rules on bankruptcy apply notwithstanding the Act. ¹³⁰² The fact that the buyer has become bankrupt does not of itself terminate the contract, but the buyer's trustee in bankruptcy may exercise his power to disclaim onerous property, including any unprofitable contract. ¹³⁰³ The buyer's trustee in bankruptcy (and, probably, a sub-buyer of the same goods bought from the buyer) is entitled to choose to fulfil the original contract by paying the price in cash to the seller within a reasonable time of the buyer's default in payment. ¹³⁰⁴ If, however, the goods are still in transit because a bankrupt or insolvent buyer refused to take delivery of the goods from the seller or the carrier, the seller may still have the opportunity of exercising his rights of lien or of stoppage in transit, and thus of gaining priority over the general creditors of the buyer. ¹³⁰⁵

^{1229.} The provisions of the Act which are directly relevant are ss.24, 25 and 41-48.

^{1230.} e.g. Factors Act 1889 ss.8, 9, 10 (cf. ss.24, 25, 47(2) of the Sale of Goods Act 1979); Carriage of Goods by Sea Act 1924; Bills of Sale Act 1878.

^{1231.} Defined, s.61(1): see above, para.44-015.

^{1232.} These remedies may therefore be excluded or varied by the parties: s.55.

^{1233.} The "right to retain" is a term of Scots law.

^{1234.} On the definition of "insolvent", see s.61(4); see below, para.44-313.

^{1235.} It is a right not only against the buyer, but also against the carrier: see below, para.44-337. In the 1893 Act, and in most of the common law cases on the topic, the Latin phrase "stoppage in transitu" is used. The 1979 Act uses the English version "in transit".

^{1236.} The provision referred to is s.48(3): RV Ward Ltd v Bignall [1967] 1 Q.B. 534, 549. The "right" of resale includes the "power" to confer a good title on the new buyer (as against the original buyer).

^{1237.} The right of the seller to sue for the price is independent of his remedies against the goods: see e.g. s.43(2).

^{1238.} The creation of a security recognised at law requires the debtor to have both ownership and possession (actual or constructive) of the goods: Armour v Thyssen Edelstahlwerke AG [1991] 2 A.C. 339, 353.

^{1239.} cf. the use of retention of title clauses under which the seller retains the property in the goods until he has been fully paid: see above, paras 44-174—44-186.

^{1240.} These remedies are historically derived from the law merchant.

^{1241.} For other conditions in the case of liens, see s.41(1) (see below, para.44-315).

^{1242.} An agent who has actual or apparent authority from the unpaid seller may exercise on his behalf the seller's remedies against the goods: Whitehead v Anderson (1842) 9 M. & W. 518 (stoppage in transit). Similarly, the doctrine of ratification may apply: Hutchings v Nunes (1863) 1 Moo. P.C.(n.s.) 243; Bird v Brown (1850) 4 Exch. 786 (see above, paras 31-027 et seq.; below, para.44-327).

^{1243.} See below, paras 44-326—44-348.

- 1244. See below, para.44-345.
- 1245. See below, paras 44-344—44-358.
- 1246. 1979 Act s.47 (see below, paras 44-339—44-343).
- 1247. Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), paras 17–44, 17–61 et seq., 17–137.
- 1248. e.g. s.49 (see below, para.44-359); s.50 (see below, para.44-367).
- 1249. A “right” as against the buyer: as owner of the goods, the seller has the legal “power” to withhold delivery.
- 1250. The omission of a reference in s.39(2) to a right of resale (as against the original buyer) does not mean that the unpaid seller in these circumstances lacks the right to resell, since s.48(3) (see below, para.44-351) can be interpreted as applicable to cases where the property has not passed to the buyer as well as to those where it has: RV Ward Ltd v Bignall [1967] 1 Q.B. 534, 545. See also Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2010), para.15–011.
- 1251. Lickbarrow v Mason (1793) 6 East 21, 24n. (“... it is a contradiction in terms to say a man has a lien upon his own goods ...”).
- 1252. See above, paras 44-171 et seq.
- 1253. Or in a contract to deliver unascertained goods by instalments, when the goods are “unconditionally appropriated” to that instalment: s.18 r.5(1) (see above, paras 44-149 et seq.).
- 1254. This was the position before the Act: e.g. Bellamy v Davey [1891] 3 Ch. 540; Ex p. Chalmers (1873) L.R. 8 Ch. App. 289, 293 (following Griffiths v Perry (1859) 1 E. E. 680, 688).
- 1255. See above, para.44-306 n.1252.
- 1256. The contract may, however, be “severable” into separate contracts: see below, para.44-320.
- 1257. Longbottom Co Ltd v Bass, Walker Co [1922] W.N. 245, 246 (see below, para.44-320).
- 1258. On these clauses, see above, paras 44-174—44-186.
- 1259. s.2(5) (see above, paras 44-020—44-022).
- 1260. s.61(1) (see above, paras 44-015, 44-037, 44-042).
- 1261. s.16 (see above, paras 44-040 et seq., para.44-131). cf. s.18 r.5(1) (see above, para.44-149).
- 1262. cf. Carlos Federspiel Co SA v Charles Twigg Co Ltd [1957] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 240.
- 1263. See the saving provisions of s.62(2) (see above, para.44-002).
- 1264. The main definition of “seller” is in s.61(1): it includes a person who “agrees to sell”, e.g. a buyer who resells the goods before the property in the goods has passed to him: Jenkyns v Usborne (1844) 7 M. & G. 678, 698–699 (buyer who resold is entitled, as against the insolvent sub-buyer, to stop the goods in transit).
- 1265. See the early decision of Morison v Gray (1824) 2 Bing. 260. (This was an action of trover, on which point reference should now be made to Burgos v Nascimento (1908) 100 L.T. 71 and to the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 (see below, paras 44-447—44-448)); see above, paras 33-010 et seq.
- 1266. Imperial Bank v London and St. Katharine Docks Co (1877) 5 Ch. D. 195.

- 1267. Feise v Wray (1802) 3 East 93; Ex p. Miles (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 39, 42.
- 1268. Ireland v Livingston (1872) L.R. 5 H.L. 395, 408–409; Cassaboglou v Gibb (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 797, 804, 806–807 (following Feise v Wray (1802) 3 East 93). (By s.38(2), such an agent could exercise any of the real remedies.) See also above, para.31-165.
- 1269. The Mercantile Law Amendment Act 1856 s.5, may also lead to the same result: Imperial Bank v London and St Katharine Docks Co (1877) 5 Ch. D. 195. (See below, para.45-146.)
- 1270. See below, paras 45-001 et seq.
- 1271. See below, para.45-143.
- 1272. JL Lyons Co Ltd v May and Baker Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 685.
- 1273. JL Lyons Co Ltd v May and Baker Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 685.
- 1274. This is the reason given in Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders and Shippers Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 459, 483, for the buyer not rejecting the goods after he had paid the price.
- 1275. Before the Act, payment of part of the price did not prevent exercise of the right of stoppage in transit: this rule now applies to all the real remedies (even the right of resale). The price may, however, be apportioned where separate deliveries are to be paid for separately: see above, para.44-262.
- 1276. For the circumstances in which a negotiable instrument is taken as absolute payment, see Vol.I, para.21-079. In this situation, the seller's only remedy is to sue on the instrument.
- 1277. Gunn v Bolckow, Vaughan Co (1875) L.R. 10 Ch. App. 491, 501 (dishonour by non-payment: a fortiori in the case of non-acceptance of the draft). See also above, paras 34-103—34-108 ("or otherwise" at the end of s.38(1)(b) refers to the buyer's insolvency).
- 1278. See Vol.I, paras 13-041 et seq.; see above, paras 44-051—44-053.
- 1279. This is implied by ss.41(1)(b) and 43(2).
- 1280. If the other conditions of entitlement are satisfied, e.g. s.44 (see below, para.44-326); Gunn v Bolckow, Vaughan Co (1875) L.R. 10 Ch. App. 491 at 501.
- 1281. The fact that the seller, who has taken a bill of exchange as conditional payment, has negotiated the bill to a third person, does not alter the rule that there has been only a conditional payment of the price, because the seller may have to take up the bill: if such a bill is dishonoured while it is in the hands of a third person, the seller's remedies revive: Gunn v Bolckow, Vaughan Co (1875) L.R. 10 Ch. App. 503. cf. Bunney v Poyntz (1833) 2 L.J.K.B. 55.
- 1282. WJ Alan Co Ltd v El Nasr Export and Import Co [1972] 2 Q.B. 189, 209–212, 221; Maran Road Saw Mill v Austin Taylor Co Ltd [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 156; ED F Man Ltd v Nigerian Sweets and Confectionery Co Ltd [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 50.
- 1283. Newman Industries Ltd v Indo-British Industries Ltd [1956] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 219, 236; reversed on another ground: [1957] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 211; Soproma SpA v Marine and Animal By-products Corp [1966] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 367, 386. See also above, para.34-495.
- 1284. s.38(1)(a) above; ss.41(1) (see below, para.44-315), 44 (see below, para.44-326), and 48(3) (see below, para.44-351). A valid tender does not discharge the buyer's obligation to pay the price.
- 1285. Vol.I, paras 21-085 et seq.
- 1286. Vol.I, paras 22-040—22-047.

- 1287. Cohen v Roche [1927] 1 K.B. 169 (“waiver of tender will produce the same result as actual tender in divesting a [seller] of his right to assert a vendor’s lien”: at 180).
- 1288. On bankruptcy, see Vol.I, paras 20-015 et seq.
- 1289. This definition is required by ss.41 and 44 (in addition to s.39).
- 1290. A special reason for a failure to pay debts may prevent the debtor being held to be “insolvent” within the definition, e.g. if an alien enemy failed to meet an acceptance because of the outbreak of war: The Feliciana (1915) 59 S.J. 546, 547 (obiter: the goods were seized as prize before the seller purported to give notice of stoppage).
- 1291. The words omitted from subs.(4) were repealed by the Insolvency Act 1985 s.235(3), Sch.10 Pt III (and by corresponding legislation for Scotland).
- 1292. Sales Goods Act 1979 s.44 (see below, para.44-326). The time when the buyer became insolvent may be important for this remedy: at common law, the stoppage was held to be valid if the buyer became insolvent before the expected termination of the transit, even where it later appeared that he was not insolvent at the time of the stoppage: The Constantia (1807) 6 C.Rob.Adm.R. 321, 326. (Section 44 could possibly be interpreted so as to enable such a retroactive justification of a premature stoppage.)
- 1293. s.41(1) (see below, para.44-315).
- 1294. cf. the grounds on which a bankruptcy order may be made: Insolvency Act 1986 ss.267(2), 271(1); also s.268.
- 1295. R. v Saddlers’ Co (1863) 10 H.L.C. 404, 425.
- 1296. Parker v Gossage (1835) 2 C.M. R. 617, 620.
- 1297. Biddlecombe v Bond (1835) 4 A. E. 332, 337. (It is not restricted to a person who actually becomes “bankrupt” within the meaning of the Insolvency Act 1986 (referring to the Insolvent Debtors’ Act 1820).)
- 1298. Billson v Crofts (1873) L.R. 15 Eq. 314.
- 1299. Ex p. Chalmers (1873) L.R. 8 Ch. App. 289, 293–294; Mess v Duffus (1901) 6 Com. Cas. 165, 167.
- 1300. Mess v Duffus (1901) 6 Com. Cas. 165, 167. On this point, see Vol.I, para.24-018.
- 1301. Re Phoenix Bessemer Steel Co (1876) 4 Ch. D. 108, 120. (Nor is mere suspicion of the buyer’s insolvency sufficient.)
- 1302. 1979 Act s.62(1).
- 1303. Insolvency Act 1986 s.315.
- 1304. Ex p. Stapleton (1879) 10 Ch. D. 586, 590. cf. Insolvency Act 1986 ss.311(5), 314; Kemp v Falk (1882) L.R. 7 App. Cas. 573, 578.
- 1305. Ex p. Cooper (1879) 11 Ch. D. 68, 73. See below, paras 44-330, 44-335.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 6. - Remedies of the Seller
(a) - Rights of Unpaid Seller against the Goods
(i) - Unpaid Seller's Lien ¹³⁰⁶

Seller's right to retain possession

44-315

Section 41(1) provides:

“Subject to this Act, the unpaid seller ¹³⁰⁷ of goods who is in possession of them is entitled to retain possession of them until payment or tender of the price in the following cases—where the goods have been sold without any stipulation as to credit ¹³⁰⁸;

- (a)
- (b)
where the goods have been sold on credit but the term of credit has expired;
- (c)
where the buyer becomes insolvent.”

Apart from an express term in the contract of sale, ¹³⁰⁹ the seller's only right of lien arises under the Act and the seller cannot rely on the equitable principle of a vendor's lien. ¹³¹⁰ The gist of the unpaid seller's lien is his entitlement to retain the goods until the buyer has paid or tendered ¹³¹¹ the whole ¹³¹² of the price ¹³¹³; his lien is therefore a qualification on his duty to deliver the goods to the buyer, ¹³¹⁴ and the seller will in practice exercise his right of lien as a first step towards exercising a right of resale. ¹³¹⁵ The lien arises whether the contract is a sale of specific goods or an executory contract to supply unascertained goods, e.g. by instalments over a future period ¹³¹⁶; in the case of unascertained goods, the lien will arise when the goods have been ascertained. ¹³¹⁷ The extent of the lien is limited to the price: it does not cover the expenses of keeping the goods, since the seller is detaining them for his own benefit. ¹³¹⁸

Effect of grant of credit

44-316

Where the seller grants credit to the buyer, he waives his lien for the agreed period of credit, ¹³¹⁹ but the lien will revive after that period has expired, ¹³²⁰ whether or not the buyer is then insolvent. Where the buyer is given credit for the period of a negotiable instrument given by him to the seller in payment of the price, the seller's lien is waived for that period, since acceptance of a negotiable instrument is normally treated as conditional ¹³²¹ payment. ¹³²² But if, before the goods are delivered to the buyer, the negotiable instrument is dishonoured, ¹³²³ or the buyer becomes insolvent, ¹³²⁴ the seller's lien ¹³²⁵ will revive, so that he may retain the goods until he is paid. ¹³²⁶ The lien revives upon dishonour despite the fact that the dishonour occurred after the seller had, during the period of the buyer's solvency, committed a breach of his obligations under the contract (e.g. by failure to deliver part of the goods ¹³²⁷). In these circumstances, the buyer has a cause of action, but the seller has his lien for payment of the whole of the price, ¹³²⁸ which will be taken into account in assessing the buyer's damages for the seller's breach. ¹³²⁹

Buyer insolvent

44-317

Where the buyer becomes insolvent, ¹³³⁰ the seller may retain the goods ¹³³¹ until the buyer, or his trustee in bankruptcy, ¹³³² pays the whole price. Thus, unless full payment is made, the seller's power of retention enables him to avoid the alternative of proving in the bankruptcy for the price. ¹³³³ The buyer's trustee in bankruptcy may elect to fulfil the contract by paying the price in cash within a reasonable time ¹³³⁴; dicta also suggest that a sub-buyer might have the same election. ¹³³⁵

The seller's possession

44-318

The unpaid seller must be in "possession" of the goods in order to exercise his right of lien, ¹³³⁶ and what amounts to possession for this purpose may be different from that required for other types of lien ¹³³⁷ or for other rules of law. ¹³³⁸ Provided he retains general control over the goods, ¹³³⁹ the seller's possession for the purpose of maintaining his lien may continue despite the fact that the buyer has been given a measure of control over them or temporary possession of them for a limited and specific purpose, ¹³⁴⁰ e.g. to allow the buyer to mark them ¹³⁴¹ or to pack them in his (the buyer's) own containers. ¹³⁴² The seller may act in the dual role of seller and warehouseman for the buyer, but he retains his lien ¹³⁴³. s.41(2) of the Act provides that: "The seller may exercise his lien or right of retention notwithstanding that he is in possession of the goods as agent or bailee ... for the buyer". ¹³⁴⁴ Thus, the seller does not lose his lien by attorning ¹³⁴⁵ to the buyer, viz by acknowledging to the buyer that he holds the goods on the buyer's account. ¹³⁴⁶

Wrongful refusal to deliver on credit

44-319

If the buyer is entitled to delivery of the goods without paying the price, because the goods are sold on credit terms, ¹³⁴⁷ a wrongful refusal by the unpaid seller to deliver the goods to the buyer should, it is submitted, debar the seller from exercising his lien if the buyer should later become insolvent. ¹³⁴⁸

Part delivery and instalment contracts

44-320

By s.42:

"Where an unpaid seller has made part delivery of the goods, he may exercise his lien or right of retention on the remainder, unless such part delivery has been made under such circumstances as to show an agreement to waive ¹³⁴⁹ the lien or right of retention.” ¹³⁵⁰

The onus is on the buyer, who claims that the seller has lost his lien, to show that it was the intention of the parties that the part delivery should constitute a delivery of the whole. ¹³⁵¹ Where there is a contract for the sale of a specified quantity of goods by instalments, the presumption is that it is an indivisible or entire contract, so that the seller may exercise his lien over any part of the goods not yet delivered, if any part ¹³⁵² of the total price is unpaid. ¹³⁵³ But if the contract is severable, in the sense that there are to be separate deliveries of specified instalments, with a separate payment to be made for each delivery, each delivery will be treated for the purposes of the seller's lien as if it were a separate contract ¹³⁵⁴; in these circumstances, no lien can be exercised by the seller in regard to a particular instalment of the goods for which payment has been made, ¹³⁵⁵ and the lien can be exercised only over goods forming part of an instalment which has not been paid for. ¹³⁵⁶

Termination of the lien

44-321

By s.43 of the Act it is provided that:

“(1)

The unpaid seller of goods loses his lien or right of retention in respect of them—when he delivers the goods to a carrier or other bailee ... for the purpose of transmission to the buyer without reserving the right of disposal ¹³⁵⁷ of the goods;

(a)

(b)

when the buyer or his agent lawfully obtains possession of the goods;

(c)

by waiver of the lien or right of retention.”

The lien may also be lost in other circumstances, e.g. the seller will lose his lien if the whole of the price is paid or tendered to him, since he then ceases to be an “unpaid” seller within the meaning of s.38(1). ¹³⁵⁸

Delivery to carrier ends lien

44-322

The delivery of the goods to a carrier ¹³⁵⁹ will terminate the lien ¹³⁶⁰ unless there are special circumstances; e.g. where the seller contracts to deliver the goods to the buyer at a particular destination, the carrier may be treated as the seller's agent. ¹³⁶¹ Where the goods are shipped under a bill of lading, possession of the goods is treated as having been transferred to the buyer or his agent when the bill has been indorsed and delivered to him.¹³⁶² But while the goods are in transit, the unpaid seller may exercise the separate right of stoppage in transit.¹³⁶³

Delivery to buyer ends lien

44-323

Possession¹³⁶⁴ of the goods passes to the buyer or his agent (s.43(1)(b) above) only¹³⁶⁵ upon delivery,¹³⁶⁶ whereupon the seller loses his lien.¹³⁶⁷ Analogies relevant to the buyer's obtaining possession may be found in the decisions on the termination of transit for the purpose of the right of stoppage in transit,¹³⁶⁸ and in the decisions on what constituted an actual receipt by the buyer within the (now repealed) provision of the Statute of Frauds.¹³⁶⁹ The seller's lien is not lost by the buyer's wrongful taking of the goods,¹³⁷⁰ but once the lien is lost by delivery to the buyer or his agent, it does not revive when the goods are handed back to the seller for a different purpose (e.g. repacking).¹³⁷¹ The seller will lose possession, and thus his lien as unpaid seller, whenever a third person (such as a warehouseman) who is in possession of the goods as the seller's bailee, attorns to the buyer,¹³⁷² or sub-buyer.¹³⁷³ But the fact that a delivery note or order for goods stored in a warehouse is handed to the buyer does not normally give the buyer possession until the warehouseman attorns to the buyer¹³⁷⁴: until then the seller's lien continues. The delivery of part only of the goods sold does not normally preclude the unpaid seller from exercising his right of lien over the remainder of the goods which continue in his possession.¹³⁷⁵

Waiver of lien

44-324

The seller may waive his lien by assenting to a sub-sale,¹³⁷⁶ or by dealing with the goods in a manner inconsistent with the lien,¹³⁷⁷ or by making a new arrangement with the buyer which is inconsistent with the continuance of his lien.¹³⁷⁸ A lien may be lost if the seller refuses to deliver the goods on some ground other than the buyer's failure to pay or tender the price, or on some ground other than his right of lien.¹³⁷⁹ Where the seller obtains judgment for the price he does not waive his lien: by s.43(2) of the Act, "An unpaid seller of goods who has a lien or right of retention in respect of them does not lose his lien or right of retention by reason only that he has obtained judgment or decree for the price of the goods".¹³⁸⁰ Only full satisfaction¹³⁸¹ of a judgment¹³⁸² for the price can amount to payment so as to defeat the seller's lien.¹³⁸³

Effect of sub-sales and other dispositions

44-325

The fact that the buyer has resold the goods to a sub-buyer, or agreed to pledge them or disposed of them in some other way, will not deprive the unpaid seller of his lien,¹³⁸⁴ even where he knows of the sub-sale or other disposition, or knows that the sub-buyer has paid the buyer.¹³⁸⁵ There are, however, a number of special circumstances in which the unpaid seller's right of lien will be lost or adversely affected by a sub-sale or other disposition of the goods.¹³⁸⁶

¹³⁰⁶. On the general law of lien, see Silvertown, The Law of Lien (1988). The seller's lien should be distinguished from the equitable lien that a party may have over goods in the possession of another if he has paid for them: see International Finance Corp v DSNL Offshore Ltd [2005] EWHC 1844 (Comm), [2007] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 305.

¹³⁰⁷. s.38 (see above, para.44-311). The unpaid seller who retains the property in the goods has a similar right of withholding delivery: s.39(2) (see above, para.44-306). But a right to a lien, stricto sensu, can arise only when the property held belongs to another: Nippon Yusen Kaisha v Ramjiban Serowgee [1938] A.C. 429, 444.

- 1308. s.28 (see above, para.44-235) applies. This was the common law position: Bloxam v Sanders (1825) 4 B. & C. 941, 948; Miles v Gorton (1834) 2 Cr. & M. 504, 511.
- 1309. s.55. Express terms creating a lien or security for the price will prevail over the statutory implication of a lien: Re Leith's Estate (1866) L.R. 1 P.C. 296. See also above, paras 44-174—44-186 (on retention of title clauses).
- 1310. Transport and General Credit Corp Ltd v Morgan [1939] 2 All E.R. 17, 25.
- 1311. See above, para.44-311.
- 1312. s.38(1)(a) (see above, para.44-311).
- 1313. The contract of sale is not rescinded (terminated) by exercise of the lien: s.48(1) (see below, para.44-344). The right to be paid is independent of the existence of the lien: The Eider [1893] P. 119, 131. For a discussion of the nature of a lien, see Fletcher Moulton L.J.'s dissenting judgment in Lord's Trustee v GE Ry [1908] 2 K.B. 54, 61–73. (The House of Lords allowed the appeal: GE Ry v Lord's Trustee [1909] A.C. 109.)
- 1314. s.27 (see above, para.44-234).
- 1315. For the seller's power to resell, see below, para.44-345. If the unpaid seller resells while exercising his right of lien, the second buyer acquires a good title to the goods as against the original buyer: s.48(2). During the exercise of the lien the seller's possession of the goods will support an action for wrongful interference with the goods: Nippon Yusen Kaisha v Ramjiban Serowgee [1938] A.C. 429, 445.
- 1316. Griffiths v Perry (1859) 1 E. & E. 680; Ex p. Chalmers (1873) L.R. 8 Ch. App. 289. See also s.39(2) (see above, para.44-306).
- 1317. See above, paras 44-149 et seq.
- 1318. Somes v British Empire Shipping Co (1860) 8 H.L.C. 338 (a case on a repairer's lien: see above, para.33-093). A claim for damages may lie for such expenses: Bloxam v Sanders (1825) 4 B. & C. 941, 950 (cf. s.37).
- 1319. Spartali v Benecke (1850) 10 C.B. 212, 223; Poulton and Son v Anglo-American Oil Co Ltd (1910) 27 T.L.R. 38, 39; on appeal (1911) 27 T.L.R. 216. The normal implication of granting credit is that the buyer is immediately entitled to delivery without making payment: (1910) 27 T.L.R. 38, 39. But the parties may agree that, despite the granting of credit, delivery is to take place concurrently with payment: Bloxam v Sanders, above, at 948; Miles v Gorton (1834) 2 Cr. & M. 504, 511; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.15–034. cf. Field v Lelean (1861) 6 H. & N. 617.
- 1320. Poulton and Son v Anglo-American Oil Co Ltd (1910) 27 T.L.R. 38, 39.
- 1321. The seller may convert it into an absolute payment by negotiating the instrument without recourse: Bunney v Poyntz (1833) 2 L.J.K.B. 55. (See all the reports: 1 N. & M. 229; 4 B. & Ad. 568.) cf. Re J Defries Sons Ltd [1909] 2 Ch. 423, 429.
- 1322. s.38(1)(b). cf. Horncastle v Farran (1820) 3 B. & Ald. 497 (carrier's lien); Hewison v Guthrie (1836) 2 Bing.N.C. 755, 759 (broker's lien).
- 1323. Miles v Gorton (1834) 2 Cr. & M. 504 at 512; Gunn v Bolckow Vaughan Co (1875) L.R. 10 Ch. App. 491, 501.
- 1324. Miles v Gorton (1834) 2 Cr. & M. 504 at 512, 514; Gunn v Bolckow Vaughan Co (1875) L.R. 10

Ch. App. 491, 501.

- 1325. It may be that it is not a right to a lien stricto sensu because the lien had been waived by the granting of credit; but it is a right of withholding delivery analogous to a lien: Griffiths v Perry (1859) 1 E. & E. 680, 688.
- 1326. Valpy v Oakeley (1851) 20 L.J.Q.B. 380; Griffiths v Perry (1859) 1 E. & E. 680, 688.
- 1327. Valpy v Oakeley (1851) 20 L.J.Q.B. 380; Griffiths v Perry (1859) 1 E. & E. 680, 688.
- 1328. Valpy v Oakeley (1851) 20 L.J.Q.B. 380; Griffiths v Perry (1859) 1 E. & E. 680, 688.
- 1329. Valpy v Oakeley (1851) 20 L.J.Q.B. 380; Griffiths v Perry (1859) 1 E. & E. 680, 688.
- 1330. On insolvency, see above, para.44-313.
- 1331. Grice v Richardson (1877) L.R. 3 App. Cas. 319.
- 1332. Ex p. Stapleton (1879) 10 Ch. D. 586, 590; Ex p. Chalmers (1873) L.R. 8 Ch. App. 289, 294.
- 1333. Gunn v Bolckow Vaughan Co (1875) L.R. 10 Ch. App. 491 at 501.
- 1334. Ex p. Stapleton (1879) 10 Ch. D. 586, 590.
- 1335. Ex p. Stapleton (1879) 10 Ch. D. 586, 590. cf. Kemp v Falk (1882) L.R. 7 App. Cas. 573, 578.
- 1336. Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 15–038—15–039. The seller's lien does not entitle him to regain possession of the goods after he has given it up: Jeffcott v Andrew Motors Ltd [1960] N.Z.L.R. 721 CA. cf. stoppage in transit (see below, paras 44-326 et seq.).
- 1337. GE Ry v Lord's Trustee [1909] A.C. 109, 115 (carrier's lien: see also the dissenting judgment of Fletcher Moulton L.J. in the court below: Lord's Trustee v GE Ry [1908] 2 K.B. 54, 71).
- 1338. See Harris, Oxford Essays in Jurisprudence (1961), p.69.
- 1339. Milgate v Kebble (1841) 3 M. & G. 100 (retention of key to premises): cf. Wrightson v McArthur and Hutchisons (1919) Ltd [1921] 2 K.B. 807.
- 1340. Paton's Trustees v Finlayson, 1923 S.C. 872; GE Ry v Lord's Trustee [1909] A.C. 109; Milgate v Kebble (1841) 3 M. & G. 100. See further Benjamin at paras 15–038—15–039, and (on trust receipts) Benjamin at paras 18–279 et seq.
- 1341. Dixon v Yates (1833) 5 B. & Ad. 313. cf. Cooper v Bill (1865) 3 H. & C. 722. See also Tansley v Turner (1835) 2 Bing. N.C. 151.
- 1342. Goodall v Skelton (1794) 2 H.B1. 316; Boulter v Arnott (1833) 1 Cr. & M. 333. See also Milgate v Kebble (1841) 3 M. & G. 100; and cf. Holderness v Shackels (1828) 8 B. & C. 612.
- 1343. Miles v Gorton (1834) 2 Cr. & M. 504, 513, 514; Grice v Richardson (1877) L.R. 3 App. Cas. 319, 323, 323–324 (the buyer's agreement to pay warehousing charges to the seller does not prevent continuance of the lien).
- 1344. In United Plastics Ltd v Reliance Electric (NZ) Ltd [1977] 2 N.Z.L.R. 125 it was held that the corresponding section in the New Zealand Act applied only where the seller had never parted with possession of the goods.
- 1345. On attornment, see above, para.33-030.
- 1346. Poulton Son v Anglo-American Oil Co Ltd (1911) 27 T.L.R. 216. (Under the common law before the Act, the seller lost his lien in these circumstances: Cusack v Robinson (1860) 1 B. & S. 299, 308.) The seller's conduct may, however, be evidence of waiver: see s.43(1)(c) (see below, paras 44-321, 44-324); and the delivery of a document of title to the goods may bring s.47(2) into operation (see below, para.44-341).

1347. See above, para.44-311.

1348. cf. the analogous case in s.45(6) (see below, para.44-335).

1349. On waiver, see s.43(1)(c) (see below, para.44-324). cf. s.45(7) (see below, para.44-335).

1350. This section sets out what was the position at common law: Dixon v Yates (1833) 5 B. & Ad. 313, 341–342; Bunney v Poyntz (1833) 4 B. & Ad. 568; Miles v Gorton (1834) 2 Cr. & M. 504 at 513; Kemp v Falk (1882) L.R. 7 App. Cas. 573, 586.

1351. Kemp v Falk (1882) L.R. 7 App. Cas. 573, 586; Ex p. Cooper (1879) 11 Ch. D. 68, 73 (both cases of stoppage in transit: see below, para.44-335). s.42 does not apply where the seller's bailee attorns to the buyer: Miles v Gorton, above, at 509–510; Hammond v Anderson (1803) 1 B. & P.N.R. 69 (as explained in Ex p. Cooper above, at 74–75).

1352. See s.38(1)(a) (see above, para.44-311).

1353. Ex p. Chalmers (1873) L.R. 8 Ch. App. 289; Longbottom Co Ltd v Bass, Walker Co [1922] W.N. 245; Re Grainex Canada Ltd, 34 D.L.R. (4th) 646 (1987).

1354. Longbottom Co Ltd v Bass, Walker Co [1922] W.N. 246.

1355. Merchant Banking Co of London v Phoenix Bessemer Steel Co (1877) 5 Ch. D. 205, 219–220; Longbottom Co Ltd v Bass, Walker Co [1922] W.N. 246.

1356. An express term in the contract itself, however, may entitle the seller to exercise a general lien over any goods of the buyer in the seller's possession.

1357. For this right, see s.19 (see above, paras 44-171–44-173). See also Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 5–131 et seq., 18–252 et seq., 20–076 et seq. cf. the retention of title under Romalpa clauses: see above, paras 44-174–44-186.

1358. See above, para.44-312.

1359. 1979 Act s.32 (see above, paras 44-269–44-271). By s.32(1), delivery to a carrier is prima facie deemed to be delivery to the buyer.

1360. Bolton v Lancs and Yorks Ry (1866) L.R. 1 C.P. 431, 439; Badische Anilin und Soda Fabrik v Basle Chemical Works [1898] A.C. 200 (for this purpose “the post office is simply a carrier of parcels like any other carrier”: at 204); but cf. Postmaster-General v WH Jones Co (London) Ltd [1957] N.Z.L.R. 829.

1361. This was the rule at common law, and it is not altered by the Act: Dunlop v Lambert (1839) 6 Cl. & F. 600; Badische case [1898] A.C. 200, 207, 209.

1362. Sanders Bros v Maclean (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 327, 341; The Prinz Adalbert [1917] A.C. 586, 589. There is no need for an attornment by the carrier to the buyer.

1363. See below, paras 44-326 et seq.

1364. See above, para.44-318.

1365. The buyer may, however, have previously been in possession as bailee, and the seller may assent to the buyer's holding for himself as from the date of the contract. cf. s.41(2) (see above, para.44-318). cf. also a symbolic or constructive delivery in a sale and leaseback transaction: Michael Gerson (Leasing) Ltd v Wilkinson [2000] Q.B. 514.

- 1366. See above, paras 44-239 et seq. (The definition of “delivery” in s.61(1) reads: “voluntary transfer of possession from one person to another”.) Where delivery and payment of the price are to be contemporaneous, the seller will intend to retain his lien (and so intend not to complete delivery) until payment: Kidman v Patterson (1887) 8 N.S.W.L.R. (L.) 290.
- 1367. s.43(1)(b), see above. Even in this situation, the contract itself may create a special right in the seller which is analogous to a lien: Dodsley v Varley (1840) 12 A. & E. 632 (goods delivered to warehouse employed by buyer, but the course of dealing (s.55(1)) was that they were to remain there until they were paid for). In New Zealand, an express power for the seller to retake possession upon the buyer's default has been interpreted to allow the unpaid seller's lien to revive: Bines v Sankey [1958] N.Z.L.R. 886, 895–896. (But cf. United Plastics Ltd v Reliance Electric (NZ) Ltd [1997] 2 N.Z.L.R. 125). cf. also Howes v Ball (1827) 7 B. & C. 481 (commented on in Sewell v Burdick (1884) 10 App. Cas. 74, 96); Re Hamilton Young Co [1905] 2 K.B. 772.
- 1368. s.45(1) and (2) (see below, paras 44-328—44-332).
- 1369. Cusack v Robinson (1861) 1 B. & S. 299, 308; Baldev v Parker (1823) 2 B. & C. 37, 44. See above, para.44-034; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.15-050.
- 1370. Wallace v Woodgate (1824) Ry. Moo. 193 (followed in Jeffcott v Andrew Motors Ltd [1960] N.Z.L.R. 721, 730, CA); Mason v Morley (1865) 11 Jur.(n.s.) 459, 461. See Benjamin at para.15-055.
- 1371. Valpy v Gibson (1847) 4 C.B. 836; United Plastics Ltd v Reliance Electric (NZ) Ltd [1997] 2 N.Z.L.R. 125.
- 1372. s.29(4). See Harman v Anderson (1809) 2 Camp. 243; Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Warriner (1896) 12 T.L.R. 216. See also s.45(3) (see below, para.44-333).
- 1373. Hawes v Watson (1824) 2 B. & C. 540.
- 1374. M'Ewan and Sons v Smith (1849) 2 H.L.C. 309.
- 1375. See s.42 (see above, para.44-320).
- 1376. See s.47(1) (see below, para.44-339).
- 1377. e.g. by wrongfully reselling (Chinery v Viall (1860) 5 H. & N. 288) or consuming the goods (Gurr v Cuthbert (1843) 12 L.J. Ex. 309). See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.15-057.
- 1378. Bank of Africa Ltd v Salisbury Gold Mining Co Ltd [1892] A.C. 281, 284 (lien on a member's shares in a company). cf. Clifford Harris & Co v Solland International Ltd [2005] EWHC 141 (Ch), [2005] 2 All E.R. 334.
- 1379. Boardman v Sill (1808) 1 Camp. 410(n) (a claim for a lien for warehouse charges: approved (obiter) in Yungmann v Briesemann (1892) 67 L.T. 642, 644); Weeks v Goode (1859) 6 C.B.(N.S.) 367. cf. White v Gainer (1824) 2 Bing. 23 (no waiver of lien for work done on chattels).
- 1380. Benjamin submits at para.15-059 that s.43(2) also applies when the seller has resumed possession of the goods by exercising his right of stoppage in transit.
- 1381. cf. Jacobs v Latour (1828) 5 Bing. 130 (a stable-keeper's lien lost when creditor caused sheriff to take the goods in execution).
- 1382. It is not clear whether the lien would cover the costs of the judgment as well as the judgment debt itself (the price).

- 1383. The position was the same before the Act: Houlditch v Desanges (1818) 2 Stark. 337; Scrivener v GN Ry (1871) 19 W.R. 388.
- 1384. s.47(1) (see below, para.44-339).
- 1385. M'Ewan Sons v Smith (1849) 2 H.L.C. 309. Nor can the fact that the unpaid seller has knowledge of a sub-sale be used to found an estoppel, so as to prevent him from setting up his lien: Poulton and Sons v Anglo-American Oil Co Ltd (1910) 27 T.L.R. 38, 39.
- 1386. See s.47(1) and (2) (see below, paras 44-339—44-342); Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 15-092—15-100; attornment by bailee to the buyer (M'Ewan and Sons v Smith, above); and s.25 (see above, paras 44-218—44-229).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 6. - Remedies of the Seller
(a) - Rights of Unpaid Seller against the Goods
(ii) - Stoppage in Transit ¹³⁸⁷

Right of stoppage in transit

44-326

Section 44 of the Act provides:

“Subject to this Act, when the buyer of goods becomes insolvent ¹³⁸⁸ the unpaid seller ¹³⁸⁹ who has parted with the possession of the goods has the right of stopping them in transit, that is to say, he may resume possession of the goods as long as they are in course of transit, ¹³⁹⁰ and may retain them until payment or tender of the price.” ¹³⁹¹

The main purpose of the right of stoppage is to enable the unpaid seller, by resuming his lien, ¹³⁹² to gain priority (in regard to the goods) over the general creditors of an insolvent buyer who becomes bankrupt. ¹³⁹³ By stopping the goods in the course of their transit, the seller puts the carrier under an obligation to redeliver the goods to him, ¹³⁹⁴ and thereby reacquires the right to possession of the goods. ¹³⁹⁵ But the exercise of the right of stoppage does not of itself terminate the contract of sale ¹³⁹⁶ : it merely prevents the buyer from obtaining possession of the goods, and puts the seller in a position in which he can effectively exercise his statutory power of resale. ¹³⁹⁷ The practical importance of the right of stoppage in transit has greatly diminished with the development of more sophisticated methods of payment, particularly the use of bankers' commercial credits ¹³⁹⁸ when the parties carry on business in different countries: where a bank is in possession of the documents of title to the goods until payment it is in a position to protect both the seller and itself if the buyer becomes insolvent. The right of stoppage in transit may be exercised despite the fact that property in the goods has passed to the buyer ¹³⁹⁹ ; where the property remains in the seller, ¹⁴⁰⁰ he may withhold delivery by virtue of his ownership. ¹⁴⁰¹

Who is entitled to exercise the right

44-327

The definition of seller in the Act ¹⁴⁰² includes one who agrees to sell: thus a buyer who resells the goods before the property in the goods has passed to him may exercise the right of stoppage as against the sub-buyer. ¹⁴⁰³ The right of stoppage has also been extended to some quasi-sellers ¹⁴⁰⁴ , and it is submitted that a surety of the buyer who has paid the seller would be entitled to exercise it. ¹⁴⁰⁵ A commission agent may accept an order to obtain goods for his principal by buying them in his own name ¹⁴⁰⁶ and consigning them to him: such an agent is treated as a seller ¹⁴⁰⁷ of the goods to his principal and may exercise the right of stoppage in transit if the principal becomes insolvent. ¹⁴⁰⁸ Obviously, the seller's agent may exercise the right of stoppage on his behalf. ¹⁴⁰⁹ Where the right was exercised by a purported agent who lacked actual authority to do so, the seller may subsequently ratify the agent's act, provided the ratification is before the transit terminates. ¹⁴¹⁰

Duration of transit

44-328

Section 45 contains seven subsections setting out various rules on the duration of transit ¹⁴¹¹ for the purposes of the unpaid seller's right of stoppage. These rules reflect the following principle: "The essential feature of a stoppage in transit ... is, that the goods should be at the time in the possession of a middleman, or of some person intervening between the vendor who has parted with and the purchaser who has not yet received them". ¹⁴¹² The whole of s.45 indicates that the carrier "middleman" must be independent of both the seller and the buyer, in the sense that he is not acting exclusively as the agent of one of them, even though he may have been appointed by only one of them. ¹⁴¹³

"In course of transit"

44-329

By s.45(1):

"Goods are deemed to be in course of transit from the time when they are delivered to a carrier or other bailee ¹⁴¹⁴ or custodian ¹⁴¹⁵ for the purpose of transmission to the buyer, until the buyer or his agent ¹⁴¹⁶ in that behalf takes delivery ¹⁴¹⁷ of them from the carrier or other bailee or custodian." ¹⁴¹⁸

The duration or extent of the transit will normally depend on the interpretation of the particular words used in the contract or in the directions of the buyer to the seller. ¹⁴¹⁹ If the ultimate destination is specified by the buyer, ¹⁴²⁰ and no fresh directions by the buyer are needed, ¹⁴²¹ transit will continue until the goods reach that ultimate destination. So long as the seller knows he is delivering to a carrier, who receives them in that capacity, ¹⁴²² the right of stoppage arises despite the fact that the buyer had not informed the seller of the ultimate destination of the goods. ¹⁴²³

Delivery

44-330

The question whether delivery has taken place may depend on the buyer's intention to take delivery ¹⁴²⁴ or the carrier's intention not to deliver until the freight has been paid. ¹⁴²⁵ The buyer will not obtain possession of the goods merely by marking them or by taking samples while they remain in the carrier's possession. ¹⁴²⁶ A bankrupt buyer ¹⁴²⁷ (or his trustee in bankruptcy) ¹⁴²⁸ may terminate the transit by accepting delivery; but the seller's right of stoppage will be preserved by the bankrupt buyer's refusal to accept delivery. ¹⁴²⁹

Shipment on buyer's ship: transfer of bill of lading

44-331

Transit prima facie comes to an end ¹⁴³⁰ when goods are shipped by the seller on a ship belonging to the buyer ¹⁴³¹, but the seller may continue the transit by taking in his name a bill of lading for the goods to be delivered "unto order or assigns". ¹⁴³² Similarly, a seller may preserve his right of stoppage in the case of a delivery to a ship under a FOB contract, if pending the issue of the bill of lading, he takes a mate's receipt acknowledging that the goods are shipped on account of the seller. ¹⁴³³ The transfer of a bill of lading by the seller to the buyer (or his agent) does not in itself terminate the transit for the purposes of stoppage in transit ¹⁴³⁴: provided that possession of the goods was intended by the parties to pass directly from the seller to the carrier, and to be received by him as carrier (i.e. purely in his capacity as such and not as agent of the buyer), the transit as between the seller and the buyer will continue. ¹⁴³⁵

Buyer obtains delivery before arrival

44-332

Section 45(2) provides:

“If the buyer or his agent in that behalf ¹⁴³⁶ obtains delivery of the goods before their arrival at the appointed destination, the transit is at an end.” ¹⁴³⁷

In many circumstances of inland transport the consignee may, in the absence of special terms in the contract of carriage, demand the goods from the carrier at a place en route to the designated destination ¹⁴³⁸; similarly, circumstances may arise in which the carrier attorns ¹⁴³⁹ to the buyer in the course of the transit, and thus terminates the transit. ¹⁴⁴⁰

Acknowledgment to the buyer

44-333

Section 45(3) provides:

“If, after the arrival of the goods at the appointed destination, ¹⁴⁴¹ the carrier or other bailee or custodian acknowledges to the buyer or his agent that he holds the goods on his behalf and continues in possession of them as bailee or custodian for the buyer or his agent, the transit is at an end, and it is immaterial that a further destination ¹⁴⁴² for the goods may have been indicated by the buyer.”

Such an acknowledgment is an illustration of the doctrine of attornment ¹⁴⁴³: a bailee who acknowledges to the claimant that the claimant now has title to a chattel, becomes the bailee of the claimant. ¹⁴⁴⁴ The assent of both parties (the carrier ¹⁴⁴⁵ and the buyer) ¹⁴⁴⁶ is required to the change from the carrier holding the goods as carrier to holding them as warehouseman or agent for the buyer. ¹⁴⁴⁷ The buyer's request to the carrier to hold the goods in the carrier's warehouse pending further instructions from the buyer, is strong evidence that the carrier thereupon becomes the buyer's agent so that transit ends. ¹⁴⁴⁸

Other provisions as to transit

44-334

⚠ Section 45 further provides:

“(4)

If the goods are rejected by the buyer, and the carrier or other bailee or custodian continues in possession of them, the transit is not deemed to be at an end, even if the seller has refused to receive them back. ¹⁴⁴⁹

(5)

When goods are delivered to a ship chartered by the buyer it is a question depending on the circumstances of the particular case ¹⁴⁵⁰ whether they are in the possession of the master as a carrier or as agent to the buyer.”

Under subs.(5) the proper test to apply ¹⁴⁵¹ is whether the master of the ship is an employee of the shipowner ¹⁴⁵² or of the buyer as demise charterer ¹⁴⁵³ : in the latter situation, the seller loses his right of stoppage upon delivery to the ship, unless he takes a bill of lading in a form under which he retains control over the goods ¹⁴⁵⁴; in the former situation, transit is not terminated by delivery to the ship.

44-335

Section 45 continues:

“(6)

Where the carrier or other bailee or custodian wrongfully ¹⁴⁵⁵ refuses to deliver the goods to the buyer or his agent in that behalf, the transit is deemed to be at an end. ¹⁴⁵⁶

(7)

Where part delivery of the goods has been made to the buyer or his agent in that behalf, the remainder of the goods may be stopped in transit, unless such part delivery has been made under such circumstances as to show an agreement ¹⁴⁵⁷ to give up possession of the whole of the goods.” ¹⁴⁵⁸

Subsection (7) implies that normally part delivery is not to be treated as delivery of the whole. ¹⁴⁵⁹ But circumstances may indicate constructive delivery of the whole; thus where the goods constitute one entire machine, and the consignee is permitted to take an essential part of it, that transfer might amount to transfer of the whole machine. ¹⁴⁶⁰

Methods of exercising right of stoppage

44-336

It is provided by s.46:

“(1)

The unpaid seller may ¹⁴⁶¹ exercise his right of stoppage in transit either by taking actual possession of the goods or by giving notice ¹⁴⁶² of his claim to the carrier or other bailee or custodian in whose possession the goods are.

(2)

The notice may be given either to the person in actual possession of the goods ¹⁴⁶³ or to his principal. ¹⁴⁶⁴

(3)

If given to the principal, the notice is ineffective unless given at such time and under such circumstances that the principal, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, may communicate it to his servant or agent in time to prevent a delivery to the buyer.” ¹⁴⁶⁵

The seller takes the risk of the stoppage being unjustified ¹⁴⁶⁶ so that the carrier is not concerned to investigate the facts to see whether the seller is justified in stopping the goods ¹⁴⁶⁷; the carrier must give effect to the stoppage as soon as he is satisfied that it is the seller who claims the goods. ¹⁴⁶⁸

Duties of the parties after notice is given

44-337

By s.46(4):

“When notice of stoppage in transit is given by the seller to the carrier or other bailee or custodian in possession of the goods, he must re-deliver the goods to, or according to the directions of, the seller; and the expenses of the re-delivery must be borne by the seller.” ¹⁴⁶⁹

The stoppage does not entitle the seller to direct the carrier to deliver the goods to him except at the contractual destination. ¹⁴⁷⁰ The only effect on the contract of carriage is to prevent delivery to the consignee at the destination, and to entitle the seller to direct delivery there ¹⁴⁷¹ to himself or to his order. ¹⁴⁷² The exercise of the seller’s power places the seller ¹⁴⁷³ under a direct obligation to the carrier either to take delivery or to give him directions for delivery. ¹⁴⁷⁴ In order to regain actual possession of the goods, the seller must pay any unpaid freight due to the carrier ¹⁴⁷⁵ and if he fails to do so, he must pay damages to the carrier for the amount of the freight. ¹⁴⁷⁶ Similarly, if the seller fails to give directions to the carrier after the stoppage, he will be liable to the carrier in damages for expenses, such as demurrage or landing charges. ¹⁴⁷⁷ If the carrier disregards a valid notice, and delivers the goods to the consignee, e.g. by mistake, ¹⁴⁷⁸ he is liable to the seller for conversion, ¹⁴⁷⁹ since by the notice the seller resumes the right to possession of the goods. ¹⁴⁸⁰

Stoppage limited to the goods themselves

44-338

Since the right of stoppage is a right exercisable only against the goods themselves, the unpaid seller has no right against money paid or payable to the buyer under a policy of insurance for damage suffered by the goods in the course of transit. ¹⁴⁸¹ (The same principle prevents the unpaid seller from using his right of stoppage, after the actual transit has ended, to intercept the price due to be paid to the buyer under a sub-sale of the same goods. ¹⁴⁸²)

^{1387.} In the 1893 Act, and in the common law cases before that Act, the Latin phrase in transitu was used. The 1979 Act uses the English phrase “in transit”.

^{1388.} s.61(4): see above, para.44-313.

- 1389. s.38: see above, para.44-311. (The seller is “unpaid” where only part of the price has been paid.)
- 1390. s.45 (see below, paras 44-328—44-330).
- 1391. The right of stoppage may be negated or varied by agreement: s.55.
- 1392. Which he would normally have lost by delivery of the goods to the carrier: s.43(1)(a) (see above, para.44-322). But the right under s.44 does not depend on the seller having previously enjoyed a right of lien under s.41.
- 1393. For the justification of the doctrine, see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.15-064.
- 1394. s.46(4) (see below, para.44-337).
- 1395. Booth S.S. Co Ltd v Cargo Fleet Iron Co [1916] 2 K.B. 570, 581.
- 1396. s.48(1) (see below, para.44-344).
- 1397. s.48(3) (see below, para.44-351). cf. a retention of title clause: see above, paras 44-174—44-186.
- 1398. See above, paras 34-445 et seq.
- 1399. s.39(1) (see above, para.44-304); Bloxam v Sanders (1825) 4 B. & C. 941, 948 (cited with approval in Ex p. Chalmers (1873) L.R. 8 Ch. App. 289, 291-292). The effect of the property passing is that the goods are then at the risk of the buyer: see above, paras 44-187—44-190.
- 1400. This may include the situation when the seller has retained a right of disposal over the goods, in accordance with s.19 (see above, paras 44-171—44-173).
- 1401. s.39(2) (see above, para.44-306). See also Bolton v Lancs. and Yorks Ry (1866) L.R. 1 C.P. 431, 439; Ex p. Chalmers, see above, at 292.
- 1402. s.61(1) (see above, para.44-015).
- 1403. Jenkyns v Usborne (1844) 7 M. & G. 678, 698-699.
- 1404. See above, para.44-309; Imperial Bank v London and St Katharine Docks Co (1877) 5 Ch. D. 195.
- 1405. See above, para.44-309.
- 1406. This means that the agent pledges his own (and not his principal's) credit when buying the goods: Feise v Wray (1802) 3 East 93; Ex p. Miles (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 39, 42.
- 1407. At least for the purpose of the remedy of stoppage in transit: Cassaboglou v Gibb (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 797; cf. above, para.31-165. (By virtue of s.38(2), his remedies under the Act will now include the three “real” remedies in s.39(1).)
- 1408. Ireland v Livingston (1872) L.R. 5 H.L. 395, 408-409; Cassaboglou v Gibb (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 797, 804, 806-807 (following Feise v Wray (1802) 3 East 93).
- 1409. Whitehead v Anderson (1842) 9 M. & W. 518.
- 1410. Hutchings v Nunes (1863) 1 Moo. P.C.(n.s.) 243; Bird v Brown (1850) 4 Ex. 786. (Under the general law of agency, the principal may ratify only if he was competent at the time of the ratification to do the act in question: see above, para.31-031; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), paras 2-047 et seq.)

- 1411. “Transit” does not mean that the goods must be actually moving at the relevant time: they must, however, be still in the possession of the carrier. The duration of transit is a question which is entirely distinct from the passing of property: Bethell v Clark (1888) 20 Q.B.D. 615, 617.
- 1412. Schotsmans v Lancs Yorks Ry (1867) L.R. 2 Ch. App. 332, 338.
- 1413. Thus the mere fact that the carrier was appointed by the buyer does not mean that transit ended when the delivery was made to the carrier: Bethell v Clark, above, at 617. See also Ex p. Rosevear China Clay Co (1879) 11 Ch. D. 560.
- 1414. These words would include a carrier by air: see McNair, Law of the Air, 3rd edn, pp.161-163. (s.45(1) of the 1893 Act read “... a carrier by land or water or other bailee ...”).
- 1415. The Scottish term for bailee.
- 1416. Bethell v Clark (1888) 20 Q.B.D. 615 at 620. It is immaterial that the buyer has instructed his agents to forward the goods to another destination: Kendal v Marshall Stevens Co (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 356; Jobson v Eppenheim Co (1905) 21 T.L.R. 468. See also Dixon v Baldwin (1804) 5 East 175.
- 1417. Defined in s.61(1): see above, para.44-015. Although the buyer may have taken delivery of the goods, the seller may still, through the reservation of the right of disposal, have rights over them: see above, paras 44-171—44-173.
- 1418. See Todd [1978] J.B.L. 39.
- 1419. For illustrations, see Jackson v Nichol (1839) 5 Bing.(n.c.) 508; Ex p. Watson (1877) 5 Ch. D. 35 (as explained in Ex p. Miles (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 39, 46, 47); Kemp v Ismay, Imrie Co (1909) 100 L.T. 996.
- 1420. Bethell v Clark (1888) 20 Q.B.D. 615. See also Coates v Railton (1827) 6 B. & C. 422.
- 1421. cf. Valpy v Gibson (1847) 4 C.B. 836, 865 (goods received by buyer’s shipping agents who had no authority to forward the goods until they received the buyer’s order to do so).
- 1422. Delivery to a ship (unless it is the buyer’s ship: see below, n.1430) is “an indication that the goods were to go on a voyage”: Kendal v Marshall Stevens Co (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 356, 367.
- 1423. Ex p. Rosevear China Clay Co (1879) 11 Ch. D. 560 (FOB contract).
- 1424. James v Griffin (1837) 2 M. & W. 623 (wharf not intended to be “place of final deposit”). See also s.45(4) and Bolton v Lancs and Yorks Ry (1866) L.R. 1 C.P. 431. cf. Fairfax v Illawarra Steam Navigation Co (1872) 11 S.C.R. (N.S.W.) 103. cf. also symbolic or constructive delivery in a sale and leaseback transaction: Michael Gerson (Leasing) Ltd v Wilkinson [2000] Q.B. 514.
- 1425. Edwards v Brewer (1837) 2 M. & W. 375. cf. Allan v Gripper (1832) 2 C. & J. 218; Crawshay v Eades (1823) 1 B. & C. 181.
- 1426. Whitehead v Anderson (1842) 9 M. & W. 518, 535.
- 1427. Scott v Pettit (1803) 3 B. P. 469. On bankruptcy, see above, para.44-314.
- 1428. Ellis v Hunt (1789) 3 T.R. 464.
- 1429. Ex p. Cooper (1879) 11 Ch. D. 68, 73. (See above, para.44-314.)
- 1430. This proposition may have to give way to the parties’ intention: Merchant Banking Co v Phoenix Bessemer Steel Co (1877) 5 Ch. D. 205, 219.
- 1431. Van Casteel v Booker (1848) 2 Exch. 691, 699, 708; Berndston v Strang (1867) 4 Eq. 481,

- 488-489; (on appeal) (1868) L.R. 3 Ch. App. 588; Ex p. Francis Co Ltd (1887) 56 L.T. 577; Schotsmans v Lancs and Yorks Ry (1867) L.R. 2 Ch. App. 332 (buyer's ship employed as general trader). cf. s.45(5) (see below, para.44-334).
- 1432. Van Casteel v Booker (1848) 2 Exch. 691, 699, 708-709; Berndston v Strang (1867) 4 Eq. 481, 488-489. On such a reservation of a right of disposal, see s.19(2) (see above, para.44-172) and Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.18-255.
- 1433. Craven v Ryder (1816) 6 Taunt. 433; Ruck v Hatfield (1822) 5 B. & A. 632. cf. Cowasjee v Thompson (1845) 5 Moo. P.C. 165. On mate's receipts in general, see Benjamin at paras 18-205 et seq.
- 1434. Schotsmans v Lancs and Yorks Ry (1867) L.R. 2 Ch. App. 332 at 337.
- 1435. Lyons v Hoffnung (1890) 15 App. Cas. 391; The Tigress (1863) 32 L.J.Adm. 97; Ex p. Golding Davis Co Ltd (1880) 13 Ch. D. 628, 633. (But if the buyer transfers the bill of lading to a sub-buyer or pledgee, s.47(2) will apply: see below, paras 44-341—44-342).
- 1436. This means an agent with authority to take delivery at a place other than the appointed destination: Mechan Sons Ltd v NE Ry, 1911 S.C. 1348, 1357-1358.
- 1437. Johann Plischke and Sohne GmbH v Allison Bros Ltd [1936] 2 All E.R. 1009. The common law before the Act was to the same effect: Whitehead v Anderson (1842) 9 M. & W. 518, 534.
- 1438. Cork Distilleries Co v GS and W Ry (1874) L.R. 7 H.L. 269. See also L and NW Ry v Bartlett (1861) 7 H. & N. 400, 407-408. However, in modern conditions it may often be impossible or impracticable for the carrier to deliver the goods to the consignee at any place en route to the appointed destination. The terms of the contract of carriage may expressly or by implication deny the consignee the right to demand the goods before arrival at that destination. (On container transport, see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 21-073 et seq.) The buyer's tortious acquisition of possession without the carrier's consent should not terminate the transit: Benjamin's Sale of Goods, para.15-074; and see Todd [1978] J.B.L. 39, 43-44.
- 1439. See above, para.33-030; cf. see below, para.44-333.
- 1440. Reddall v Union Castle Mail S.S. Co Ltd (1914) 84 L.J.K.B. 360. The carrier is not obliged to attorn to the buyer in the course of transit: Jackson v Nichol (1839) 5 Bing.(n.c.) 508.
- 1441. This depends on the provisions of the contract for sale: Mechan Sons Ltd v NE Ry, 1911 S.C. 1348, 1356, 1358. The name of the person to whom the goods are sent, as well as the place, is implied in "destination": Ex p. Miles (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 39, 45.
- 1442. Kendall v Marshall, Stevens Co (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 356; Bethell v Clark (1888) 20 Q.B.D. 615, 617; Ex p. Miles (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 47 (referring to Ex p. Watson (1877) 5 Ch. D. 35). See also Rodger v Comptoir D'Escompte de Paris (1869) L.R. 2 P.C. 393.
- 1443. See above, para.33-030. Attornment cannot be inferred from the mere fact that the carrier has notified the buyer that he is ready to deliver the goods: Mechan Sons Ltd v NE Ry, 1911 S.C. 1348 at 1359.
- 1444. Henderson Co v Williams [1895] 1 Q.B. 521; Dublin City Distillery Ltd v Doherty [1914] A.C. 823, 847-848. See also Bolton v Lancs and Yorks Ry (1866) L.R. 1 C.P. 431, 438; Ex p. Cooper (1879) 11 Ch. D. 68, 78. At common law, the bailee was also estopped (by the attornment) from denying the claimant's title to the chattel, but by s.8(1) of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 the bailee may now set up the title of a third person in reply to the claimant's demand for the chattel: see above, paras 33-015—33-017, 33-030.
- 1445. Whitehead v Anderson (1842) 9 M. & W. 518 (silence on the part of the carrier is insufficient to show assent); Coventry v Gladstone (1868) L.R. 6 Eq. 44.

- 1446. Bolton v Lancs and Yorks Ry (1866) L.R. 1 C.P. 431, 438; Ex p. Barrow (1877) 6 Ch. D. 783, 789. Silence and delay on the part of the buyer may lead to an inference of assent, e.g. after the carrier sends the buyer a notice that he will hold the goods as warehouseman and charge rent to the buyer: Taylor v GE Ry (1901) 17 T.L.R. 394; Ex p. Catling (1873) 29 L.T. 431.
- 1447. The parties may agree that the change is made despite the fact that the carrier insists on his lien until freight has been paid: Kemp v Falk (1882) 7 App. Cas. 573, 584; Crawshay v Eades (1823) 1 B. & C. 181; Ex p. Barrow (1877) 6 Ch. D. 783, 789; Ex p. Cooper (1879) 11 Ch. D. 68, 72-73, 74, 76 (delivery of part after payment of part of the freight). cf. Whitehead v Anderson (1842) 9 M. & W. 518, 535-536.
- 1448. Johann Plischke and Sohne GmbH v Allison Bros Ltd [1936] 2 All E.R. 1009.
- 1449. Bolton v Lancs and Yorks Ry (1866) L.R. 1 C.P. 431. (The buyer's consent is needed for "delivery": see above, paras 44-239 et seq.). A bankrupt buyer, by refusing to take delivery, preserves the seller's right of stoppage: see above, para.44-314.
- 1450. cf. delivery to the buyer's ship: see above, para.44-331.
- 1451. The question depends on the intention of the parties as shown by the terms of the charterparty and particularly by the form of the bill of lading: in whose name and to whose order was it made out? See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 15-082, 20-076 et seq.
- 1452. As in the case of a charterparty which is not by demise (see below, n.1452).
- 1453.  Berndtson v Strang (1868) L.R. 3 Ch. App. 588. In a charter by demise (a type of "lease" of a ship: see Scrutton on Charterparties and Bills of Lading, 23rd edn (2015), paras 1.013 et seq.) the charterer is in possession of the ship and the master is his employee.
- 1454. Berndtson v Strang, above (bill of lading for the goods to be delivered to the seller's "order or assigns"). In Ex p. Rosevear China Clay Co (1879) 11 Ch. D. 560, although delivery had been made to a ship chartered by the buyer, the stoppage was made before any bill of lading had been signed.
- 1455. "Wrongfully" implies that the carrier has no legal justification for refusing to deliver, e.g. no lien for unpaid freight or demurrage (see below, para.44-337). But the carrier need not attorn to the buyer in the course of transit: see above, para.44-332.
- 1456. Bird v Brown (1850) 4 Exch. 786. cf. s.45(1) (see above, para.44-329).
- 1457. On the part of both parties: Kemp v Falk (1882) 7 App. Cas. 573, 586.
- 1458. Jones v Jones (1841) 8 M. & W. 431; Tanner v Scovell (1845) 14 M. & W. 28; Bolton v Lancs and Yorks Ry (1866) L.R. 1 C.P. 431, 440; Ex p. Cooper (1879) 11 Ch. D. 68; Kemp v Falk (1882) 7 App. Cas. 579, 586. cf. s.42 (see above, para.44-320).
- 1459. Mechan Sons Ltd v NE Ry, 1911 S.C. 1348, 1358. Unpaid freight charges indicate that delivery of part is not constructive delivery of the whole: Ex p. Cooper (1879) 11 Ch. D. 68.
- 1460. Ex p. Cooper (1879) 11 Ch. D. 68, 75-76. cf. s.45(3) (attornment, see above, para.44-333).
- 1461. At common law, no particular formality was needed: Snee v Prescott (1753) 1 Atk. 245, 250; Litt v Cowley (1816) 7 Taunt. 169. The seller's notice may be given with the full agreement of the buyer: Nicholls v Le Feuvre (1835) 2 Bing. N.C. 81.
- 1462. The notice may tell the carrier not to deliver to the buyer (e.g. Booth S.S. Co Ltd v Cargo Fleet Iron Co Ltd [1916] 2 K.B. 570, 592) or to hold the goods to the seller's orders.
- 1463. Whitehead v Anderson (1842) 9 M. & W. 518, 534.

- 1464. Notice to the consignee is probably not sufficient: Phelps, Stokes Co v Comber (1885) 29 Ch. D. 813, 822, 826.
- 1465. e.g. a shipowner who receives notice is under a duty to communicate it with reasonable diligence to the master of the ship carrying the goods: Kemp v Falk (1882) 7 App. Cas. 573, 585-586 (failure in this duty would render the shipowner liable to the seller, either in conversion, or under s.60).
- 1466. The Tigress (1863) 32 L.J.Adm. 97, 101. Thus, a shipowner need not require the seller to show that the bill of lading has not been transferred by the buyer to a third person: see below, paras 44-336, 44-337.
- 1467. The Tigress (1863) 32 L.J.Adm. 97. (See also s.46(4).) If the seller acts without justification, e.g. if the buyer is not insolvent, the buyer's remedy is a claim for damages against the seller: The Constantia (1807) 6 C.Rob.Adm.R. 321, 326. (The seller is still bound to deliver to the buyer, who apparently has no claim against the carrier.)
- 1468. The Tigress (1863) 32 L.J.Adm. 97, at 101. If the carrier is aware of a legal defect in the seller's claim, he need not give effect to the stoppage; if the carrier is uncertain as to his position, he can interplead: above at 102; Bethell v Clark (1888) 20 Q.B.D. 615. On interpleader proceedings, see CPR Pts 17 and 33.
- 1469. The Tigress (1863) 32 L.J.Adm. 97.
- 1470. Booth SS Co Ltd v Cargo Fleet Iron Co Ltd [1916] 2 K.B. 570, 600-601. The carrier may redeliver to the seller before the goods are carried to the contractual destination, but it is prudent for the carrier to do so only under an indemnity from the seller.
- 1471. Booth SS Co Ltd v Cargo Fleet Iron Co Ltd [1916] 2 K.B. 570.
- 1472. 1979 Act s.46(4), see above. See also United States Steel Products Co v GW Ry [1916] 1 A.C. 189, 203.
- 1473. Even where he is not a party to the contract of affreightment: Booth ss.Co Ltd v Cargo Fleet Iron Co Ltd [1916] 2 K.B. 570.
- 1474. Booth SS Co Ltd v Cargo Fleet Iron Co Ltd [1916] 2 K.B. 570.
- 1475. Booth SS Co Ltd v Cargo Fleet Iron Co Ltd [1916] 2 K.B. 570, 583, 588. The carrier's lien on the goods for the freight takes priority over the seller's right of stoppage (which in turn takes priority over any general lien on the goods which the consignment contract may give the carrier in respect of sums owing to him from the consignee under other transactions): United States Steel Products Co v GW Ry, above; Oppenheim v Russell (1802) 3 Bos. P. 42; Nicholls v Le Feuvre (1835) 2 Bing. N.C. 81 (shipping agent's general lien).
- 1476. Booth SS Co Ltd v Cargo Fleet Iron Co Ltd [1916] 2 K.B. 570, 583.
- 1477. Booth SS Co Ltd v Cargo Fleet Iron Co Ltd [1916] 2 K.B. 570, 583. (See the last clause of s.46(4) above.)
- 1478. Litt v Cowley (1816) 7 Taunt. 169. (This case is no longer authority on the question of revesting of title: see now s.48(1) (see below, para.44-344).)
- 1479. The Tigress (1863) 32 L.J. Adm. 97; Mechan Sons Ltd v NE Ry, 1911 S.C. 1348. The action will fall under s.60 and is classified as an action in tort, not in contract: Pontifex v Midland Ry (1877) 3 Q.B.D. 23: it will be governed by the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977. Refusal of the carrier to deliver upon demand being made by the seller would also be evidence of conversion: Wilson v Anderton (1830) 1 B. & A. 450, 456; The Tigress (1863) 32 L.J. Adm. 102.
- 1480. Sales of Goods Act s.44 (see above, para.44-326). Other remedies of the seller may include an injunction: Schotsmans v Lancs and Yorks Ry (1867) L.R. 2 Ch. App. 332, 340; or Admiralty proceedings if the goods are in the possession of a shipowner: The Tigress, above (a proceeding by the seller to recover, by arrest of the ship, damages for refusal to deliver goods to him).

1481. Berndtson v Strang (1868) L.R. 3 Ch. App. 588, 591. See also Latham v Chartered Bank of India (1873) 17 Eq. 205, 216. cf. Phelps, Stokes Co v Comber (1885) 29 Ch. D. 813. cf. also Northern Grain Co v Wiffler (1918) 223 N.Y. 169 (where the carrier has sold the goods to meet his freight charges, the unpaid seller's right of stoppage can attach to the balance of the proceeds of the sale).

1482. See below, para.44-343.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 6. - Remedies of the Seller
(a) - Rights of Unpaid Seller against the Goods
(iii) - Sub-sales and Other Subsequent Transactions

Sub-sale by buyer

44-339

Section 47(1) of the Act provides:

“Subject to this Act, ¹⁴⁸³ the unpaid seller's right of lien or retention or stoppage in transit is not affected by any sale or other disposition of the goods ¹⁴⁸⁴ which the buyer may have made, unless the seller has assented to it.”

Thus, the fact that the seller knows of a sub-sale, or knows that the sub-buyer has paid the buyer, will not deprive the seller of his lien, ¹⁴⁸⁵ nor can such knowledge be used to found an estoppel, so as to prevent the seller from setting up his lien. ¹⁴⁸⁶ (The important exception to subs.(1) is found in subs.(2), which concerns the transfer of a document of title. ¹⁴⁸⁷) But the “assent” of the seller to the sub-sale will prevent his remedy by way of lien or stoppage. ¹⁴⁸⁸ In one case before the 1893 Act, ¹⁴⁸⁹ the sellers were held to have assented to the buyers dealing with the goods, because the sellers had issued to the buyers a warrant which was (by custom) treated as a representation that the goods were free from any seller's lien. But in a case ¹⁴⁹⁰ interpreting s.47 of the 1893 Act, it was held that:

“... the assent which affects the unpaid seller's right of lien must be such an assent as in the circumstances shews that the seller intends to renounce his rights against the goods. ¹⁴⁹¹ It is not enough to shew that the fact of a sub-contract has been brought to his notice and that he has assented to it merely in the sense of acknowledging the receipt of the information ...”

In another case, ¹⁴⁹² the sellers were held to have “assented” to the sub-sale, and thus to have lost their lien: the sellers sold cartons in the possession of a wharfinger to the buyer for resale to two of the buyer's customers and agreed with the buyer that the price should be paid by the buyer out of the money received from the sub-sales. The sellers made out delivery orders in favour of the buyer, who sold some of the cartons to a sub-buyer and gave him a delivery order. The sub-buyer paid the buyer but the buyer failed to pay the original sellers. The court held that the sellers had “assented” to the sub-sale “in the sense that they intended to renounce their rights against the goods and to take the risk of [the buyer's] honesty”. ¹⁴⁹³

Attornment

44-340

Attornment ¹⁴⁹⁴ obviously comes within “assent”, as where the unpaid seller who retains possession of the goods attorns to the sub-buyer, by acknowledging to the sub-buyer that he holds the goods on behalf of the sub-buyer, or to his order. ¹⁴⁹⁵ The same principle applies where the seller accepts a delivery order in favour of a sub-buyer in respect of a certain quantity of goods held in bulk in his warehouse: the seller is estopped from denying the sub-buyer’s title (vis-à-vis himself ¹⁴⁹⁶) despite the fact that a specific part of the bulk has not been appropriated to the sub-buyer. ¹⁴⁹⁷

Transfer of document of title

44-341

It is provided by s.47(2):

“Where a document of title ¹⁴⁹⁸ to goods has been lawfully transferred ¹⁴⁹⁹ to any person as buyer or owner of the goods, and that person transfers the document to a person who takes it in good faith ¹⁵⁰⁰ and for valuable consideration, then—

- (a) if the last-mentioned transfer was by way of sale the unpaid seller’s right of lien or retention or stoppage in transit is defeated; and
- (b) if the last-mentioned transfer was made by way of pledge ¹⁵⁰¹ or other disposition for value, the unpaid seller’s right of lien or retention or stoppage in transit can only be exercised subject to the rights of the transferee.” ¹⁵⁰²

The person who transfers the document of title to the buyer may himself create the document (e.g. a delivery order); it is therefore unnecessary that he should have received it from a third person before he can “transfer” it within the meaning of subs.(2). ¹⁵⁰³ So when sellers gave a delivery order to a buyer for part of a consignment of seed, and the buyer indorsed the order to sub-buyers who took in good faith and for value, it was held that the order was a document of title whose transfer terminated the seller’s right to a lien. ¹⁵⁰⁴ It has been said obiter that the words of subs.(2) confine it to cases where a document of title is transferred to the buyer and the same document is then transferred to the sub-buyer or transferee. ¹⁵⁰⁵ Thus, where the original seller gave delivery orders to the buyer, who (instead of indorsing them over to the sub-buyer) sent them to the warehouseman and gave fresh delivery orders to the sub-buyer, the latter was not protected by the subsection. ¹⁵⁰⁶

44-342

Section 47(2) expressly covers pledges of a document of title. Before the 1893 Act, it was held that where a bill of lading for goods in transit had been indorsed by the buyer to a third person to secure a loan to the buyer, the unpaid seller had a claim in equity to stop the goods, subject to the mortgage: subject to repayment of the loan, the seller had a right to the surplus of the proceeds of the goods in preference to the general creditors of the buyer. ¹⁵⁰⁷

“The unpaid vendor’s right, except so far as the interest had passed by the pledging of the bill of lading to the pledgee ... enabled the unpaid vendor in equity to stop in transit everything which was not covered by that pledge.” ¹⁵⁰⁸

Stoppage in respect of price payable under sub-sale

44-343

A principle similar to that applied in the pledge cases has been applied in Ex p. Golding Davis Co Ltd,¹⁵⁰⁹ where a buyer resold the goods while the transit continued, but the subbuyer had not yet paid the price under the sub-sale. On the ground that the seller has an equitable right to stop the goods in transit “except in so far as it is necessary to give effect to interests which other persons have acquired for value”,¹⁵¹⁰ the Court of Appeal allowed the seller (who had given notice of stoppage before the transit ended) to intercept the unpaid purchase price due from the sub-buyer and to take from it the full price due to him as original seller, leaving only the balance to the buyer.¹⁵¹¹ It is very doubtful whether this remedy should be allowed after the transit has ended, but before the price due under the sub-sale has been actually paid by the sub-buyer to the buyer.¹⁵¹² A special term in the contract may, however, purport to entitle the seller to “trace” and recover the proceeds of sub-sales made by the buyer.¹⁵¹³

^{1483.} s.25 (see above, paras 44-218—44-229); s.47(2).

^{1484.} A sale of unascertained goods is within the section: DF Mount Ltd v Jay and Jay (Provisions) Co Ltd [1960] 1 Q.B. 159, 167-168.

^{1485.} McEwan and Sons v Smith (1849) 2 H.L.C. 309.

^{1486.} Poulton and Sons v Anglo-American Oil Co Ltd (1910) 27 T.L.R. 38, 39.

^{1487.} See below, paras 44-341—44-342. In the 1893 Act, the provision now contained in s.47(2) was the proviso to s.47, and is referred to as such in the cases.

^{1488.} The previous law was to the same effect: Blackburn, Sale, 1st edn, p.271; Stoveld v Hughes (1811) 14 East 308; Pearson v Dawson (1858) E.B. & E. 448; Merchant Banking Co v Phoenix Bessemer Steel Co (1877) 5 Ch. D. 205.

^{1489.} Merchant Banking Co v Phoenix Bessemer Steel Co (1877) 5 Ch. D. 205.

^{1490.} Mordaunt Bros v British Oil and Cake Mills Ltd [1910] 2 K.B. 502, 507.

^{1491.} Or an intention “that the sub-contract shall be carried out irrespective of the terms of the original contract”: [1910] 2 K.B. 502, 507.

^{1492.} DF Mount Ltd v Jay and Jay (Provisions) Co Ltd [1960] 1 Q.B. 159.

^{1493.} [1960] 1 Q.B. 159 at 167. (The assent was given in anticipation of the sub-sale.)

^{1494.} See above, para.33-030.

^{1495.} And without notice to the sub-buyer of his claim to a lien (or to a contingent lien) over the goods in respect of the unpaid price: Pearson v Dawson (1858) E.B. & E 448. cf. Hawes v Watson (1824) 2 B. & C. 540 (attornment by seller’s warehouseman).

^{1496.} The seller may, however, defend a claim by reference to a third party who has a better title than himself: see s.8 of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 (see above, paras 33-015—33-018).

^{1497.} Woodley v Coventry (1863) 2 H. & C. 164; Knights v Wiffen (1870) L.R. 5 Q.B. 660. (On the passing of property in part of a larger bulk, see above, paras 44-160 et seq.)

- 1498. See above, para.44-015.
- 1499. On the meaning of “lawfully transferred”, see s.61(1) (“delivery”) (see above, paras 44-015, 44-234 et seq.) and s.11 of the Factors Act 1889. (These two provisions must be read together: Cahn and Mayer v Pockett’s Bristol Channel Steam Packet Co Ltd [1899] 1 Q.B. 643, 665.)
- 1500. On the meaning of “good faith” see s.61(3), above, para.44-016.
- 1501. See above, paras 33-121 et seq.
- 1502. The corresponding provision in the 1893 Act was “the proviso to section 47”, and is referred to as such in the reported cases (s.10 of the Factors Act 1889 has a similar effect).
- 1503. Ant Jurgens Margarinefabrieken v Louis Dreyfus Co [1914] 3 K.B. 40.
- 1504. Ant Jurgens Margarinefabrieken v Louis Dreyfus Co [1914] 3 K.B. 40. The document of title need not be one in respect of specific goods: [1914] 3 K.B. 40, 45; Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Warriner (1896) 1 Com. Cas. 314. (But on this point, see Nicol (1979) 42 M.L.R. 129.)
- 1505. DF Mount Ltd v Jay and Jay (Provisions) Co Ltd [1960] 1 Q.B. 159, 168.
- 1506. DF Mount Ltd v Jay and Jay (Provisions) Co Ltd [1960] 1 Q.B. 159, 168. But s.25 overlaps with s.47(2), and is not limited to cases where the buyer transfers the same document as that which is in his possession with the consent of the seller: [1960] 1 Q.B. 159, 169. (See above, paras 44-218 et seq.) For a critical review of this decision, see Borrie (1960) 23 M.L.R. 100.
- 1507. Kemp v Falk (1882) 7 App. Cas. 573, 576-577 (upholding Re Westzinthus (1833) 5 B. & A. 817; and Spalding v Ruding (1843) 6 Beav. 376; affirmed (1846) 15 L.J.Ch. 375).
- 1508. Kemp v Falk, above, at 582.
- 1509. (1880) 13 Ch. D. 628.
- 1510. (1880) 13 Ch. D. 628 at 638.
- 1511. This could simply be a novel way of implementing a valid stoppage: Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.15-100.
- 1512. The Court of Appeal was ready to allow it in Ex p. Falk (1880) 14 Ch. D. 446, but it was seriously doubted in the House of Lords in the same case: Kemp v Falk (1882) 7 App. Cas. 573, 577-578 (the appeal turned on a different point). See Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, para.15-100, and cf. see above, para.44-339.
- 1513. On such retention of title clauses, see above, paras 44-174 et seq. (On tracing orders, see Vol.I, paras 29-166 et seq.)

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 6. - Remedies of the Seller
(a) - Rights of Unpaid Seller against the Goods
(iv) - Resale by the Seller

Contract not rescinded by exercise of lien or stoppage

44-344

Section 48(1) provides 1514:

“Subject to this section, a contract of sale is not rescinded by the mere exercise by an unpaid seller 1515 of his right of lien or retention or stoppage in transit.”

The seller may terminate 1516 further performance of the contract only by taking further steps. 1517 The important effect of s.48(1) is that where the property in the goods has passed to the buyer, the exercise of the lien or of the right of stoppage does not in itself revert the property in the seller; the property is reverted in the seller only when he validly terminates the contract, by reselling or otherwise. 1518

Power of the seller to pass a good title to a second buyer

44-345

The seller has the power to transfer a good title to the goods to a second buyer in several situations, in some of which he does not have, as against the original buyer, the right to resell the goods. 1519 In a resale, the seller has such a power to pass to a second buyer a good title to the goods:

(1)

when, at the time of the resale, he has the property in the goods 1520: as owner, the seller can transfer a good title to a new buyer under a second contract of sale 1521;

(2)

under s.24, discussed above 1522;

(3)

even where the property in the goods has passed to the original buyer, the seller has power, by reselling, to pass a good title to a second buyer where he has exercised his right of lien or of stoppage in transit. This is provided by s.48(2): “Where an unpaid seller who has exercised his right of lien or retention or stoppage in transit resells the goods, the buyer acquires a good title to them as against the original buyer". The effect of the subsection ¹⁵²³ is that the title of the second buyer is good as against the original buyer, ¹⁵²⁴ whether or not the seller, as against the original buyer, has a right of resale.

¹⁵²⁵

Right to resell

44-346

The seller has the right to resell (viz the power to transfer a good title in the goods to a second buyer, but without committing any breach of his contract with, or any tort against the original buyer) in the following situations ¹⁵²⁶:

(1)

where he has in the original contract expressly reserved a right to do so ¹⁵²⁷;

(2)

in the two situations specified in s.48(3) ¹⁵²⁸;

(3)

where the buyer repudiates his obligations under the contract or commits a fundamental breach. The seller is entitled at common law to terminate the contract and to deal with the goods as their owner ¹⁵²⁹;

(4)

(possibly) where the seller can act as an "agent of necessity" on behalf of the buyer.

¹⁵³⁰

Repudiation or fundamental breach by the buyer

44-347

If the buyer repudiates his obligations under the contract, ¹⁵³¹ the seller is entitled ¹⁵³² to accept the repudiation, viz to treat the contract as terminated and to deal with the goods as their owner. ¹⁵³³ The buyer will be treated as having repudiated the contract if he becomes insolvent, and informs the seller of his insolvency in circumstances which show that he is unable or unwilling to pay the price of the goods. ¹⁵³⁴ But a mere declaration of insolvency by a party to a contract will not, on its own, ¹⁵³⁵ amount to a repudiation of his obligations, since he may still intend to perform and have a reasonable expectation of his ability in the future to do so. ¹⁵³⁶ On similar principles the seller is entitled ¹⁵³⁷ to terminate the contract where the buyer has committed a fundamental breach of his contractual obligations. ¹⁵³⁸ In a contract in which the buyer undertakes other important obligations in addition to payment of the price, the seller may terminate the contract on the ground of the buyer's breach of one of these obligations, despite the fact that the buyer has paid the price. ¹⁵³⁹ The result is that, as from the time of the termination, he is released from any obligation to perform his remaining contractual duties. ¹⁵⁴⁰ The seller can no longer sue the buyer for the price, ¹⁵⁴¹ but the contract remains alive for the purpose of assessing the seller's right of action for damages for the buyer's breach, ¹⁵⁴² and for purposes incidental thereto. ¹⁵⁴³

Seller's remedies after termination

44-348

A New Zealand case ¹⁵⁴⁴ deals with the common law rights of the seller of goods to resell following his termination of the contract on the ground of the buyer's repudiation or fundamental breach. ¹⁵⁴⁵ Where a contract for the sale of land is validly terminated by the vendor on account of the purchaser's repudiation or default in completion, the vendor is entitled to deal with the property as owner and to resell ¹⁵⁴⁶; he may retain the whole of the proceeds of the resale (even when he sells at a higher price ¹⁵⁴⁷) and either: (a) claim from the original purchaser any difference between the original price and that under the resale, ¹⁵⁴⁸ after giving credit for any deposit paid; or (b) keep the deposit. ¹⁵⁴⁹ The New Zealand case ¹⁵⁵⁰ holds that exactly the same principles apply to the seller's termination of a contract for the sale of goods: that at common law the seller's acceptance of the buyer's repudiation revests the property in the seller ¹⁵⁵¹ so that he can resell as owner, ¹⁵⁵² keep the whole proceeds of the resale and either forfeit the deposit ¹⁵⁵³ paid by the buyer or sue for damages for any net deficiency after giving credit for the deposit paid. ¹⁵⁵⁴

Where the seller retains property in the goods

44-349

If the seller is to exercise his common law power to resell, in terms of the preceding paragraphs, he will usually need to obtain possession of the goods. In two English cases where the goods had been delivered to the buyer but the property in them remained with the unpaid seller, it was held that a seizure of them by the seller operated as a "rescission" or termination of the contract and that this applied even where the seizure was made under an express power in the contract to do so upon the buyer's default. ¹⁵⁵⁵ Where the contract confers no power to retake the goods, the unpaid seller who retains the property may be entitled to retake them from the buyer, by analogy with the position on contracts for the sale of land ¹⁵⁵⁶: where the purchaser has been let into possession of land pending completion, and he commits a breach of contract entitling the vendor to terminate the contract, the vendor who chooses to terminate is entitled ¹⁵⁵⁷ to be reinstated in possession of the land ¹⁵⁵⁸; the vendor resumes his position as full owner, and may therefore resell. ¹⁵⁵⁹ Where the seller cannot himself retake the goods he may seek specific restitution of the goods by bringing proceedings for wrongful interference with them. ¹⁵⁶⁰

Where the buyer has property in the goods

44-350

However, it is submitted that the seller cannot lawfully retake (or obtain an order for specific restitution of) the goods, where, following the contract of sale, the buyer has both possession of, and the property in, the goods ¹⁵⁶¹; any retaking of the goods by the seller in these circumstances would (except in cases of fraud or misrepresentation) be a conversion against the buyer. ¹⁵⁶² In the cases which support this proposition, the seller did not purport, prior to the retaking, to terminate the contract of sale on the ground of the buyer's repudiation or fundamental breach, but it is submitted that this would not have altered the position ¹⁵⁶³: the assumption behind these cases is that, once the seller has lost both his possession and his right to stoppage in transit, and has transferred the property in the goods to the buyer, he has no remedy against the goods themselves ¹⁵⁶⁴ and his only remedy is a claim for the price or for damages under the contract. ¹⁵⁶⁵ This submission is made despite ¹⁵⁶⁶ the fact that, in two other apparently similar situations, the property in the goods will revert in the seller, namely, when the buyer validly rejects the goods, ¹⁵⁶⁷ or the seller or buyer "rescinds" ¹⁵⁶⁸ the contract on the ground that the other's misrepresentation induced him to enter the contract. ¹⁵⁶⁹ Where a contract of sale of goods is voidable by the seller for the fraud of the buyer, a retaking of the goods by the seller without the knowledge of the buyer (but before a resale to an innocent sub-buyer) rescinds the contract and reverts the property in the goods in the seller ¹⁵⁷⁰; the retaking is treated as an unequivocal act of election to rescind the contract. ¹⁵⁷¹

Statutory right of resale

44-351

Section 48(3) provides that:

“Where the goods are of a perishable nature, or where the unpaid seller ¹⁵⁷² gives notice to the buyer of his intention to re-sell, and the buyer does not within a reasonable time pay or tender the price, the unpaid seller may re-sell the goods and recover from the original buyer damages for any loss occasioned by his breach of contract.” ¹⁵⁷³

Under his common law rights ¹⁵⁷⁴ the seller may terminate the contract and keep the goods for his own use; he may also be entitled to terminate for a breach other than a failure to pay the price. The assumption behind the part of s.48(3) dealing with perishable goods is that the seller retains possession of the perishable goods and is only willing (and contractually obliged) to deliver the goods to the buyer in return for contemporaneous payment. ¹⁵⁷⁵ Goods will be “perishable” within the meaning of the subsection when they are likely to deteriorate physically as time elapses, ¹⁵⁷⁶ and also, it is submitted, when they are likely to change in a commercial sense, ¹⁵⁷⁷ viz when “it is not dealt with by business people as the thing which it originally was”. ¹⁵⁷⁸ Although it has been argued ¹⁵⁷⁹ that for the resale of perishable goods the further condition set out in s.48(3) applies, viz “and the buyer does not within a reasonable time pay or tender the price”, it is submitted that the better view is that this condition is inapplicable. Benjamin submits ¹⁵⁸⁰ that it could be the purpose of the subsection, in the case of a contract relating to perishable goods, to make time of the essence of the contract, ¹⁵⁸¹ at least when payment and delivery were concurrent conditions, ¹⁵⁸² so that, upon the buyer’s failure to pay on the stipulated date, the seller is immediately entitled to resell. ¹⁵⁸³

Resale upon giving notice to the buyer

44-352

The second aspect of s.48(3) applies irrespective of the nature of the goods: it enables the unpaid seller, by giving notice, to make payment within a reasonable time ¹⁵⁸⁴ thereafter to be of the essence of the contract, ¹⁵⁸⁵ so that failure to pay within a reasonable time after notice will entitle the seller to treat the contract as repudiated: he can then terminate the original contract and resell the goods. ¹⁵⁸⁶

The seller’s power of resale when he is out of possession

44-353

There are a number of judicial statements which assume that the unpaid seller’s statutory power of resale under s.48(3) may be validly exercised only where the seller is in possession of the goods at the time of the resale. ¹⁵⁸⁷ But it is submitted that a seller has the right and the power to pass a good title to a second buyer under a resale, not only at common law, ¹⁵⁸⁸ but also under s.48(3) where, at the time of the resale, he has: (a) the property in the goods ¹⁵⁸⁹; or (b) possession of the goods ¹⁵⁹⁰; or (c) the immediate right to possession as against the original buyer. ¹⁵⁹¹

Resale terminates the original contract

44-354

Although s.48(3) does not expressly provide that the original contract is terminated by the resale, ¹⁵⁹²

the Court of Appeal has decided that, by exercising the statutory right of resale under the subsection, the seller thereby “rescinds” or terminates the original contract but may sue the original buyer for damages. ¹⁵⁹³ The result ¹⁵⁹⁴ of this interpretation of subs.(3) is that the seller who resells under s.48 cannot thereafter sue the buyer for the original price (even though he is willing to give the buyer credit against the price for the net proceeds of the resale); the seller is relegated by the subsection to his claim for damages for non-acceptance under s.50. ¹⁵⁹⁵ The practical result is that the seller is not accountable to the buyer for any profit above the original contract price which he makes on the resale; nor has the buyer a right of action against a seller who does not act with reasonable care in making the resale. ¹⁵⁹⁶

Express reservation of the right of resale

44-355

Section 48(4) of the Act provides:

“Where the seller expressly ¹⁵⁹⁷ reserves the right of resale in case the buyer should make default, ¹⁵⁹⁸ and on the buyer making default resells the goods, the original contract of sale is rescinded ¹⁵⁹⁹ but without prejudice to any claim the seller may have for damages.” ¹⁶⁰⁰

Since the original contract is terminated, the seller is entitled to retain any profit which he may make on the resale above the price in the original contract. If, however, the seller can resell only at a loss, the original buyer is, by this subsection, liable to pay damages, viz the amount by which the contract price exceeds the resale price, and the expenses of the resale. ¹⁶⁰¹

Express reservation not exclusive remedy

44-356

Where the contract confers an express right of resale or of repurchase on the innocent party, following a default by the other party, the former may pursue his ordinary remedies at common law without complying with the terms of the special remedy conferred by the contract. ¹⁶⁰² It is submitted that, in the same way, the seller could exercise his statutory right of resale under s.48(3) without relying on his contractual right to resell. ¹⁶⁰³

The method of reselling

44-357

Neither the Act nor the common law provides authority on the question of the method of exercising the seller's right to resell. It therefore seems that the seller is free to sell to anyone he chooses and that he is under no restriction as to the price he obtains, or whether the sale is by public auction or made privately, without advertisement. He is under no obligation to the buyer to act reasonably in deciding whether or not to resell; but if he acts unreasonably the rules of mitigation may limit the damages which he can recover from the original buyer following the resale.

Forfeiture of deposits

44-358

Whether the seller resells under his common law rights, under his statutory right, or under an express power, it is submitted that the same rules apply to the forfeiture of deposits ¹⁶⁰⁴ or other prepayments made by the buyer. The seller is bound to bring the deposit into account if he sues the buyer for damages, since he cannot allege a net deficiency without taking the deposit into account. ¹⁶⁰⁵ If, however, the seller makes no claim for damages under the original contract, he is entitled to keep all the proceeds of the resale and to forfeit the deposit ¹⁶⁰⁶ paid by the defaulting original buyer. ¹⁶⁰⁷ (The rules applicable to a clause “forfeiting” sums already paid by the buyer under a contract for payment of the price by instalments are discussed elsewhere. ¹⁶⁰⁸)

¹⁵¹⁴. For a suggestion as to the purpose of s.48(1), see RV Ward Ltd v Bignall [1967] 1 Q.B. 534, 549.

¹⁵¹⁵. See above, para.44-311.

¹⁵¹⁶. s.48(1) uses the term “rescinded” (as does s.48(4)) but the more usual terms now are “terminate” or “treat the contract as discharged”.

¹⁵¹⁷. e.g. reselling under s.48(3) (see below, para.44-346).

¹⁵¹⁸. See below, paras 44-346—44-349.

¹⁵¹⁹. The seller will be liable in damages to the original buyer for breach of contract (and in tort, if the property in the goods has passed to the original buyer).

¹⁵²⁰. This situation is not mentioned in s.48, but it is implicit in it: Benjamin at para.15-102; RV Ward Ltd v Bignall [1967] 1 Q.B. 534, 545.

¹⁵²¹. Lickbarrow v Mason (1793) 6 East 21, 24n., 25n.; Wait v Baker (1848) 2 Exch. 1.

¹⁵²². See above, paras 44-212 et seq. For a comparison of the statutory powers of resale (s.24 and s.48(2), see below) see Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.15-103.

¹⁵²³. The subsection assumes that the seller who has, in the past, validly exercised his right of lien or stoppage, continues in possession, with the right to possession as against the original buyer, up to the time of the resale: see Benjamin at para.15-102.

¹⁵²⁴. Who therefore could not sue the second buyer for trespass, or conversion. The limitation in the subsection “as against the original buyer” is included because the original seller’s own title to the goods may be inferior to that of a third party. cf. see above, paras 33-015—33-017.

¹⁵²⁵. R. v Ward Ltd v Bignall [1967] 1 Q.B. 534, 549. The seller will be liable in damages to the original buyer if he had no right to resell: Bloxam v Sanders (1825) 4 B. & C. 941, 949. (On the possibility of the original buyer claiming the difference between the higher resale price and the original price, on a principle analogous to “waiver of tort”, see Benjamin at para.15-104.)

¹⁵²⁶. Where there is a contract to sell unascertained or future goods by description, but the seller has not yet assumed any obligation to deliver particular goods, he is entitled to deal as owner with any goods of his which happen to meet the description.

¹⁵²⁷. 1979 Act s.48(4): (see below, para.44-355).

¹⁵²⁸. See below, para.44-351.

¹⁵²⁹. See below, paras 44-347—44-349.

¹⁵³⁰. See above, para.31-035, Vol.I, para.29-136; Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.15-106. cf. Prager v Blatspiel, Stamp and Heacock Ltd [1924] 1 K.B. 566.

¹⁵³¹. See Vol.I, para.24-018. The buyer must show by his actions, or his failure to fulfil his obligations, that he intended to abandon the contract, e.g. Bloomer v Bernstein (1874) L.R. 9

C.P. 588. cf. s.31(2) (see above, paras 44-262—44-265).

- 1532. But not obliged: he has the option of either affirming the contract, or of treating it as discharged in the sense of refusing further performance: Mersey Steel and Iron Co Ltd v Naylor, Benson Co (1884) 9 App. Cas. 434, 440; Michael v Hart Co [1902] 1 K.B. 482, 490. On the general principle, see White and Carter (Councils) Ltd v McGregor [1962] A.C. 413; Vol.I, paras 24-018 et seq.
- 1533. Cornwall v Henson [1900] 2 Ch. 298 (a contract for the sale of land). See below, paras 44-348, 44-349, 44-350.
- 1534. Re Phoenix Bessemer Steel Co (1876) 4 Ch. D. 108; Ex p. Stapleton (1879) 10 Ch. D. 586; Morgan v Bain (1874) L.R. 10 C.P. 15; Mess v Duffus (1901) 6 Com. Cas. 165. See above, para.44-313.
- 1535. A special term in the contract may entitle the other party to rescind or terminate the contract upon the occurrence of such an event, e.g. suspension of payment: Shipton, Anderson Co (1927) Ltd v Micks, Lambert Co [1936] 2 All E.R. 1032.
- 1536. Mess v Duffus (1901) 6 Com. Cas. 165.
- 1537. But not obliged: see n.1531, above.
- 1538. See Vol.I, paras 24-001 et seq. See s.10(1) and (2) (see above, para.44-128) and cf.s.11 (see above, para.44-056) and s.53(1) (see below, para.44-411). The power to terminate is implied by s.50(3) (see below, para.44-015) see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.15-109.
- 1539. If the price has been paid, s.48(3) (see below, para.44-351) is not applicable.
- 1540. Honck v Muller (1881) 7 Q.B.D. 92; Boston Deep Sea Fishing and Ice Co v Ansell (1888) 39 Ch. D. 339, 364-365; Heyman v Darwins Ltd [1942] A.C. 356, 399. See Vol.I, paras 24-001 et seq.
- 1541. Chinery v Viall (1860) 5 H. & N. 288. See below, paras 44-354 et seq.
- 1542. Michael v Hart Co [1902] 1 K.B. 482 at 490; Johnstone v Milling (1886) 16 Q.B.D. 460, 467; Moschi v Lep Air Services Ltd [1973] A.C. 331; Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827; cf. Johnson v Agnew [1980] A.C. 367.
- 1543. e.g. an arbitration clause: Heyman v Darwins Ltd [1942] A.C. 356. See Vol.I, para.24-049.
- 1544. Commission Car Sales (Hastings) Ltd v Saul [1957] N.Z.L.R. 144.
- 1545. It is submitted that it would be too late for the seller to purport to terminate the original contract if the buyer had already transferred the property in the goods to a third person. cf. s.23 (see above, paras 44-206—44-211).
- 1546. Cornwall v Henson [1900] 2 Ch. 298 (vendor held not entitled to terminate the contract).
- 1547. Ex p. Hunter (1801) 6 Ves.Jun. 94, 97.
- 1548. Noble v Edwards (1877) 5 Ch. D. 378, 385 (appeal allowed on a different point: (1877) 5 Ch. D. at 393-394).
- 1549. Howe v Smith (1884) 27 Ch. D. 89, 104-105 (vendor remained in possession). On the forfeiture of deposits, see below, para.44-358; Vol.I, paras 26-205—26-213, 29-068.
- 1550. Commission Car Sales (Hastings) Ltd v Saul [1957] N.Z.L.R. 144 (following Howe v Smith (1884) 27 Ch. D. 89).

- 1551. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.15-113.
- 1552. This position is accepted (without discussion) by the judge in Compagnie de Renflouement, etc. v W Seymour Plant Sales Hire Ltd [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 466, 482. As owner the unpaid seller may, of course, keep the goods for his own use instead of reselling.
- 1553. On the difference between a deposit and a part payment of the price, see Reid Motors Ltd v Wood [1978] 1 N.Z.L.R. 319, 325, 329.
- 1554. Commission Car Sales (Hastings) Ltd v Saul [1957] N.Z.L.R. 144 at 146. An earlier Canadian case is to the same effect: McCowan v Bowles [1923] 3 D.L.R. 756. cf. Clough Mill Ltd v Martin [1985] 1 W.L.R. 111, 118-119, 122 (retention of title clause on which see above, paras 44-174—44-186). cf. also Armour v Thyssen Edelstahlwerke AG [1991] 2 A.C. 339, 353.
- 1555. Hewison v Rickets (1894) 63 L.J.Q.B. 711; Att-Gen v Pritchard (1928) 97 L.J.K.B. 561. The situation is different in the case of a contract to let out goods on hire, with only an option to purchase: Brooks v Beinrstein [1909] 1 K.B. 98.
- 1556. See Benjamin at para.15-115. cf. Clough Mill Ltd v Martin [1985] 1 W.L.R. 111. But in Keetley v Quinton Pty Ltd (1991) 4 W.A.R. 133 it was held that the seller was not entitled to retake the goods in these circumstances (unless there was express power to do so conferred by the contract).
- 1557. In equity (see the cases in the following footnote) or at law: Williams on Vendor and Purchaser, 4th edn, pp.1004-1005.
- 1558. Clark v Wallis (1866) 35 Beav. 460. cf. King v King (1833) 1 My. K. 442; Hope v Hope (1856) 22 Beav. 351, 365. See Williams at pp.1004-1005, 1009. cf. also Misrepresentation Act 1967 s.1(b) (see Vol.I, para.7-142).
- 1559. cf. Howe v Smith (1884) 27 Ch. D. 89, 105 (vendor remained in possession).
- 1560. Under s.3(2)(a) of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 the court may make an order for delivery of the goods which does not give the defendant the alternative of retaining them on payment of their value as assessed by the court. See Benjamin at para.15-116. See CPR Pt 45 para.4(1). cf. s.52 (see below, paras 44-440—44-444).
- 1561. Benjamin at para.15-117. cf. retention of title clauses (n.1553, above).
- 1562. Page v Cowasjee Eduljee (1866) L.R. 1 P.C. 127 (see below, para.44-448). See also Stephens v Wilkinson (1831) 2 B. A. 320, 327; Gillard v Brittan (1841) 8 M. & W. 575; Re Humbertson (1846) De G. 262. The seller's seizure may also be a breach of s.12(2)(b) (see above, para.44-076): Healing (Sales) Pty Ltd v Inglis Electrix Pty Ltd (1968) 42 A.L.J.R. 280.
- 1563. See the dicta in Page v Cowasjee Eduljee (1866) L.R. 1 P.C. 127, 145. cf. Worcester Works Finance Ltd v Cooden Engineering Co Ltd [1972] 1 Q.B. 210 (voluntary transfer of title back to the seller).
- 1564. It is implicit in the decision in Healing (Sales) Pty Ltd v Inglis Electrix Pty Ltd (1968) 42 A.L.J.R. 280, that the seller cannot enforce his right to the price by seizing the goods from a buyer who has both the property in, and possession of the goods.
- 1565. Otherwise the statutory restrictions on the real remedies of lien and stoppage could easily be evaded. cf. s.11(4) which might provide an analogy (see above, para.44-068). An express power in the contract might entitle the seller to retake or to resell in these circumstances: Bines v Sankey [1958] N.Z.L.R. 886 (but the Bills of Sale Act 1878 might then apply).
- 1566. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.15-118.
- 1567. Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders and Shippers Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 459, 487; McDougall v

- Aeromarine of Emsworth Ltd [1958] 1 W.L.R. 1126, 1130.* See above, para.44-280. It could be argued, however, that rejection is a voluntary and deliberate act by the then owner (the buyer).
- 1568. This use of this word has different consequences in the context of misrepresentation from those when the contract is “rescinded” in the sense of terminated by the innocent party upon the other party’s repudiation or fundamental breach.
- 1569. See Vol.I, paras 7-111 et seq. See especially s.1(b) of the Misrepresentation Act 1967 (see Vol.I, para.7-142).
- 1570. Car and Universal Finance Co Ltd v Caldwell [1965] 1 Q.B. 525, 551, 554, 558 (the analogy with termination for breach (“repudiation”) was not accepted by the Lords Justices in another respect: at 550, 556, 559); Newtons of Wembley Ltd v Williams [1965] 1 Q.B. 560, 571. The difference is discussed by Beale, Remedies for Breach of Contract (1980), pp.117-118.
- 1571. Car and Universal Finance Co Ltd v Caldwell [1965] 1 Q.B. 525.
- 1572. For definition, see above, para.44-311. (The seller is “unpaid” when only part of the price has been paid. cf. on severable contracts: see above, paras 44-262, 44-286; Vol.I, paras 21-028, 21-038, 24-046.)
- 1573. This subsection confers a right (as against the original buyer) to resell, whereas s.48(2) conferred a power to confer a good title. cf. s.12(1) (see above, paras 44-075 et seq.).
- 1574. See above, paras 44-347—44-350.
- 1575. See s.28 (see above, para.44-235).
- 1576. e.g. potatoes are “a perishable commodity” in the sense that if they are held too long they become rotten: Sharp v Christmas (1892) 8 T.L.R. 687, 688. cf. the discussion of the meaning of the word “perish” in ss.6 and 7 (see above, paras 44-045—44-050).
- 1577. cf. on the concept of the goods having changed in nature in a commercial sense: Asfar Co v Blundell [1896] 1 Q.B. 123; Duthie v Hilton (1868) L.R. 4 C.P. 138 (cement, after being submerged, had ceased to be “cement”); Dakin v Oxley (1864) 15 C.B.(N.S.) 646 (entitlement of carrier to freight when goods are delivered in a damaged state).
- 1578. Asfar & Co v Blundell, above, at 128. An example would be a souvenir designed for sale on one specific occasion.
- 1579. Sutton, Sales and Consumer Law, 4th edn, p.620.
- 1580. Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.15-122.
- 1581. See Vol.I, paras 21-011—21-019. cf. a case before the Act: Sharp v Christmas (1892) 8 T.L.R. 687, 688, where the time for the buyer to take delivery of potatoes (“a perishable commodity”) was held to be of the essence of the contract.
- 1582. See s.28 (see above, para.44-235).
- 1583. cf. the power to sell any perishable goods in a bankrupt’s estate: Insolvency Act 1986 s.287(2)(b).
- 1584. This is a question of fact: s.59. The calculation of the time runs from the date the notice is given, and the reasonableness of any time fixed by the notice will be judged as at that time: Charles Rickards Ltd v Oppenheim [1950] 1 K.B. 616, 624-625 (not a case on s.48(3), but on a similar common law rule). The court will also take into account any previous delay on the buyer’s part: above.
- 1585. Apart from s.48(3), a stipulation as to time of payment would not normally be of the essence:

s.10(1) (see above, para.44-128).

1586. This is in accord with the common law: see Vol.I, paras 21-011—21-017.

1587. RV Ward Ltd v Bignall [1967] 1 Q.B. 534, 545; Commission Car Sales (Hastings) Ltd v Saul [1957] N.Z.L.R. 144, 146.

1588. See above, paras 44-347—44-350.

1589. See above, para.44-345. The seller may be able to retake the goods, or recover possession by bringing proceedings for wrongful interference with the goods in which he seeks an order for specific delivery of the goods.

1590. This is what the draftsman of s.48(3) had mainly in mind: cf. s.48(2) immediately preceding. The remedies of lien and stoppage (see above, paras 44-315 et seq., 44-326 et seq.) are aimed at giving the seller an entitlement to possession.

1591. There are a number of grounds on which the seller who is out of possession may be entitled to resume the right to possess them: see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.15-125. So long as the buyer continues in possession of the goods, there is a risk that the buyer may transfer a good title to a third party: s.25 (see above, paras 44-218—44-229).

1592. cf. s.48(4).

1593. RV Ward Ltd v Bignall [1967] 1 Q.B. 534. (A resale of part of the goods has the same effect: at 550.)

1594. A further implication is that the termination of the contract divests the original buyer of his property in the goods if the property had passed to him before the termination: RV Ward Ltd v Bignall, above.

1595. RV Ward Ltd v Bignall [1967] 1 Q.B. 534. Forfeiture of any deposit paid by the buyer is a separate question: see below, para.44-358.

1596. But if the seller sues for damages, it is submitted that a resale at a lower price than the seller ought reasonably to have obtained on the resale will constitute a failure to mitigate: see Vol.I, paras 26-081 et seq.; see below, paras 44-368 et seq.

1597. Similar rules apply where a relevant usage of trade confers a right of resale upon the seller: Re Tait (1841) 2 Mont.D. De G. 170.

1598. It is submitted in Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.15-129, that it would be possible for the parties to agree to an express right which arose upon an occurrence not involving the buyer's "default"; and that an express right to resell could be wider than s.48(4) in other ways.

1599. Thus the seller resells as owner, not as agent for the original buyer: RV Ward Ltd v Bignall [1967] 1 Q.B. 534, 551. cf. s.48(3), see above.

1600. The subsection follows the common law: Lamond v Davall (1847) 9 Q.B. 1030.

1601. See below, paras 44-382—44-383. The buyer is not liable to be sued for the whole of the agreed price: Lamond v Davall, above, at 1032. See also Hore v Milner (1797) Peake 58n.

1602. Shipton, Anderson Co (1927) Ltd v Micks, Lambert Co [1936] 2 All E.R. 1032. cf. the same rule for contracts for the sale of land: Howe v Smith (1884) 27 Ch. D. 89, 105.

1603. Unless the terms of the contract indicated that the contractual remedy was to be the exclusive remedy.

- 1604. “A deposit is ... a security for completion of the purchase”: Howe v Smith, above, at 98. See Vol.I, paras 26-205—26-213, 29-068. A “trade-in” of goods may be intended to be treated in the same way as a deposit: Commission Car Sales (Hastings) Ltd v Saul [1957] N.Z.L.R. 144, 145.
- 1605. [1957] N.Z.L.R. 144 at 146.
- 1606. The Privy Council has held, in a case on the sale of land, that a deposit must be “reasonable” in amount for the forfeiture rule to apply: Workers Trust Merchant Bank Ltd v Dojap Investments Ltd [1993] A.C. 573 (above, para.26-213). cf. Reid Motors Ltd v Wood [1978] 1 N.Z.L.R. 319, 325–329. The Unfair Terms in Consumer Contract Regulations 1999 or for contracts entered into on or after October 1, 2015, the Consumer Rights Act 2015 may now also apply: see above, paras 38-192 et seq.
- 1607. Commission Car Sales (Hastings) Ltd v Saul, above, at 146 (following the principles laid down in cases on contracts for the sale of land: Ockenden v Henly (1858) E.B. & E. 485; Howe v Smith (1884) 27 Ch. D. 89 at 104–105; Shuttleworth v Clews [1910] 1 Ch. 176). cf. Damon Compania Naviera SA v Hapag-Lloyd International SA [1985] 1 W.L.R. 435 (recovery of damages measured at the amount of unpaid deposit). See Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 15–132—15–133. (It is submitted that Gallagher v Shilcock [1949] 2 K.B. 765, having been overruled on another (but relevant) point (see RV Ward Ltd v Bignall [1967] 1 Q.B. 534 (see above, para.44-354)) should not be followed in regard to the recovery of deposits.)
- 1608. Vol.I, paras 26-210—26-212. cf. see above, paras 39-342—39-344.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 6. - Remedies of the Seller

(b) - Action for the Price

Action for price when property has passed

44-359

Section 49(1) provides ¹⁶⁰⁹ that:

“Where, under a contract of sale, ¹⁶¹⁰ the property in the goods has passed to the buyer and he wrongfully neglects or refuses ¹⁶¹¹ to pay for the goods according to the terms of the contract, the seller may maintain an action against him for the price of the goods.” ¹⁶¹²

The claim for the price is a claim for a debt, as distinct from a claim for damages. ¹⁶¹³ The property may pass to the buyer before delivery of the goods to him, and before his acceptance of the goods ¹⁶¹⁴; hence, the price may sometimes be claimed under s.49(1) even where the buyer refuses to accept the goods. ¹⁶¹⁵ The passing of the property will depend on the terms of the contract; e.g. since under a FOB contract property does not pass before shipment, ¹⁶¹⁶ the seller may sue for the price only after he has put the goods on board. ¹⁶¹⁷

44-360

Where the property in the goods has not passed to the buyer, no action for the price can be brought under s.49(1), ¹⁶¹⁸ despite the fact that it is a wrongful act of the buyer which prevents the passing of the property. ¹⁶¹⁹ Thus, where the buyer under a FOB contract failed (in breach of his contractual obligation) to designate an effective ship, the seller's remedy was not a claim for the price but a claim for damages for non-acceptance, because the property in the goods could not pass until the goods were actually put on board a ship. ¹⁶²⁰ There is a contrasting decision of the House of Lords in a Scottish appeal, where a machine had been delivered to the buyer, who was bound to keep and pay for it, unless it failed on a stipulated test to do specified work. The buyer neglected to put the machine to this test, but it was held that the seller could recover the price: the buyer's own failure to give it a fair test according to the contract relieved the seller of having to prove that the condition did not apply. ¹⁶²¹

Wrongful neglect or refusal to pay

44-361

The question whether the buyer has wrongfully ¹⁶²² neglected or refused to pay the price ¹⁶²³ depends on his duty to pay, ¹⁶²⁴ and this is not the same question as whether the seller is entitled to bring an action for the price, because other conditions must also be satisfied for such an action to lie in terms of either ss.49(1) or (2). Since the terms of the contract will specify when payment is due, the meaning of “wrongful” must be gathered from those terms ¹⁶²⁵; thus, where the contract entitles the buyer to a period of credit, he will not be liable to an action for the price until that period has expired. ¹⁶²⁶ The buyer may similarly show that his failure to pay the price is not “wrongful” where the seller has waived ¹⁶²⁷ the time for payment fixed by the contract.

Payment to be made in special way

44-362

Where payment is to be made in a special way the seller cannot sue for the price as an ordinary debt. ¹⁶²⁸ Thus, if it is agreed that the price of the goods should be an item in settlements of accounts between the parties at stated intervals, the seller can sue only by showing a settlement of accounts on which the balance is in his favour. ¹⁶²⁹

Justification for refusal to pay

44-363

The buyer's failure to pay the price may be justified on the ground that the seller had previously broken his contractual obligation in such a way as to disentitle him to the price, e.g. by failure to deliver, or by delivering defective goods ¹⁶³⁰ or the wrong quantity. Similarly, the seller cannot claim the price from the buyer if it turns out that the seller has no title to the goods. ¹⁶³¹ But the buyer may be liable to pay the price if, before the goods were delivered to him, they perished while the risk was on him. ¹⁶³² A previous breach of contract by the seller may not, however, be sufficiently serious to relieve the buyer of his entire obligation to pay the price: in these circumstances the buyer may rely on a set-off against the seller, ¹⁶³³ or may bring a counterclaim for damages.

Claim for price due on "a day certain"

44-364

⚠ Section 49(2) provides that:

"Where, under a contract of sale, the price is payable on a day certain irrespective of delivery and the buyer wrongfully neglects or refuses ¹⁶³⁴ to pay such price, the seller may maintain an action for the price, although the property in the goods has not passed and the goods have not been appropriated to the contract." ¹⁶³⁵

Where the goods have not been delivered to the buyer, the seller's entitlement to sue for the price depends on his continuing ability and willingness to deliver the goods to the buyer in accordance with the contract. ¹⁶³⁶ The meaning of "a day certain" in this provision has been held to be "a time specified in the contract not depending on a future or contingent event". ¹⁶³⁷ Thus, where the price was payable against delivery of the shipping documents, ¹⁶³⁸ the case did not fall within s.49(2). ¹⁶³⁹ It is submitted ¹⁶⁴⁰ that the better view is that a day can be "certain" under s.49(2) only if it is fixed in advance by the contract in such a way that it can be determined independently of the action of either party or of any third person. If, for example, an instalment of the price becomes due when the seller has reached a specified stage in the construction of the goods, it is submitted that the instalment should not be held to be "payable on a day certain" within the meaning of this subsection. ¹⁶⁴¹ It has been said that the section does not apply if the date for payment was initially fixed but subsequently has been varied to so that the payment is no longer due on "a day certain". ¹⁶⁴² However, the price must also be due "irrespective of delivery". This may not cover a case in which the price is due so many days or months after delivery, as is commonly provided in retention of title cases. ¹⁶⁴³ ⚠

Action for the price outside s.49

44-365

⚠ There are a number of judicial statements which assume that s.49, above, provides an exhaustive statement of the circumstances in which the seller may sue for the price.¹⁶⁴⁴ However, it is submitted that the seller should be entitled to sue for the price whenever the terms¹⁶⁴⁵ of the contract expressly or impliedly so provide¹⁶⁴⁶; and that by the terms of the contract, the time fixed for payment need not be related either to delivery or to the passing of property.¹⁶⁴⁷ The contract may provide that the price is to be paid before delivery is made (e.g. “net cash before delivery”)¹⁶⁴⁸ and that property is to pass only upon delivery.¹⁶⁴⁹ The implication of these provisions is that the price must be paid on demand¹⁶⁵⁰ or within a reasonable time,¹⁶⁵¹ and thus it has been held in Australia that the seller may sue for the price, although neither subsection of s.49 applied.¹⁶⁵² But in *Caterpillar (NI) Ltd (formerly FG Wilson (Engineering) Ltd) v John Holt & Co (Liverpool) Ltd*¹⁶⁵³ Popplewell J. held that, despite the arguments made in this paragraph, the seller can bring an action for the price only in the circumstances set out in s.49; and this was affirmed by unanimously by the Court of Appeal.¹⁶⁵⁴ In *PST Energy 7 Shipping LLC v OW Bunker Malta Ltd*¹⁶⁵⁵ ⚠ the Supreme Court held that the bunker supply contract fell outside the Sale of Goods Act and accordingly it was not necessary to decide whether an action for the price under the Act would have been maintainable in the circumstances. However, Lord Mance, delivering the unanimous judgment of the Court, said that he would have overruled the decision of the Court of Appeal in Caterpillar on this point. Section 49 was not a complete code of situations in which the price may be recoverable under a contract of sale. There was room for claims for the price in other circumstances, including the present case, where the bunkers remained the seller’s property but were at the buyer’s risk and where under the contract the buyer was permitted to use the goods before payment. In most cases there would in any event be a claim for damages for non-acceptance, but even if such a claim were not available, there is no reason why an inability to bring an action for the price under s.49 should prevent the seller from claiming damages for breach of the terms of the contract concerning payment.¹⁶⁵⁶ ⚠

Claim for consequential loss in addition to the price

44-366

The seller may wish to claim damages in addition to his claim for the agreed price, on the ground that the buyer’s failure to pay the price at the agreed time caused consequential loss to the seller. The traditional common law rule that interest cannot be awarded by way of general damages for delay in payment of a debt has recently been abandoned and (subject to the normal rules of remoteness and mitigation) damages for loss of interest may be recovered provided the loss is pleaded and proved.¹⁶⁵⁷ The contract itself may provide for interest to be payable; and interest can also be claimed under statute or statutory powers.¹⁶⁵⁸ The seller may also be entitled to claim damages for expenses incurred by him,¹⁶⁵⁹ e.g. for storage during the buyer’s delay in taking delivery, or for his own “care and custody of the goods” during such delay.¹⁶⁶⁰

¹⁶⁰⁹. This section follows the previous common law: Scott v England (1844) 14 L.J.Q.B. 43. See also Studdy v Sanders (1826) 5 B. & C. 628.

¹⁶¹⁰. It is submitted that any express provision of the contract should prevail over s.49 to the extent of any inconsistency: see Benjamin at para.16–003; cf. s.55, and see below, para.44-365.

¹⁶¹¹. See below, para.44-361.

¹⁶¹². Many cases before the Act illustrate the proposition that, where there is no specific term of the contract dealing with the time when the price is to be paid, the seller cannot sue for the price until the property in the goods has passed to the buyer: Atkinson v Bell (1828) 8 B. & C. 277; Boswell v Kilborn and Morrill (1862) 15 Moo. P.C.C. 309. The seller may, however, obtain a declaratory judgment to the effect that the buyer is bound to pay the price upon the seller’s fulfilling his obligations: see below, para.44-386. The seller cannot sue for the price if he has terminated the contract following the buyer’s repudiation or fundamental breach: Chinery v Viall (1860) 5 H. & N. 288; Att-Gen v Pritchard (1928) 97 L.J.K.B. 561. See above, paras

44-347—44-350.

- 1613. For the importance of this distinction, see Vol.I, para.26-008. Where the seller claims the price, he may be awarded damages if they are his correct remedy: Mediterranean and Eastern Export Co Ltd v Fortress Fabrics (Manchester) Ltd [1948] 2 All E.R. 186.
- 1614. On the passing of property, see above, paras 44-130 et seq. In special circumstances, the doctrine of estoppel by conduct may operate to prevent the buyer from disputing the fact that property has passed to him: Colley v Overseas Exporters [1921] 3 K.B. 302, 311–312. cf. Knights v Wiffen (1870) L.R. 5 Q.B. 660.
- 1615. Alternatively, the seller could claim damages under s.50(1) (see below, para.44-367). To claim the price the seller must show that he continues to be able and willing to deliver the goods: Maclean v Dunn and Watkins (1828) 6 L.J.(O.S.) C.P. 184, 190.
- 1616. Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.20–077.
- 1617. Green v Sichel (1860) 7 C.B.(N.S.) 747; Henderson and Glass v Radmore Co (1922) 10 Ll.L. Rep. 727. Even after shipment, however, the seller may have reserved a right of disposal, in which case he may sue for the price only if he has waived his right of disposal (where this is possible): Benjamin at para.20–133.
- 1618. See, however, s.49(2) (see below, para.44-364).
- 1619. Stein, Forbes Co v County Tailoring Co (1916) 86 L.J.K.B. 448; Colley v Overseas Exporters [1921] 3 K.B. 302. See also Nortier Co v Wm Maclean Sons Co (1921) 9 Ll.L. Rep. 192. The decision of the House of Lords in White and Carter (Councils) Ltd v McGregor [1962] A.C. 413 (see Vol.I, paras 24-010, 26-092) may affect the rule on wrongful prevention of the passing of property: see Benjamin at paras 16–021—16–022, 16–059, 20–140; White and Carter's case was distinguished in Attica Sea Carriers Corp v Ferrostal Poseidon Bulk Reederei GmbH (The Puerto Buitrago) [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 250 (CA: charterparty case); and cf. Anglo-African Shipping Co of New York Inc v J Mortner Ltd [1962] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 81, 94; on appeal, [1962] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 610. But see Gator Shipping Corp v Trans-Asiatic Oil Ltd SA (The Odenfeld) [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 357, 372–373.
- 1620. Colley v Overseas Exporters, above.
- 1621. Mackay v Dick (1881) L.R. 6 App. Cas. 251 (distinguished in Colley v Overseas Exporters, above, at 307-308, on the ground that Mackay v Dick concerned a condition subsequent, a “resolutive condition” after the property had passed to the buyer).
- 1622. It is normally the duty of a debtor to tender the amount due to his creditor without waiting for a demand: see Vol.I, para.21-010. On the effect of tender of the price to the seller, see Vol.I, paras 21-085 et seq.
- 1623. Both s.49(1) and (2) contain this phrase. (The definition of the price is found in ss.2(1), 8 and 9.)
- 1624. 1979 Act ss.27 and 28 (see above, paras 44-234—44-235).
- 1625. See s.10(1) (above, para.44-128).
- 1626. Ferguson v Carrington (1829) 9 B. & C. 59; Strutt v Smith (1834) 1 Cr. M. R. 312.
- 1627. See Vol.I, paras 22-040 et seq.
- 1628. Garey v Pyke (1839) 10 A. & E. 512. cf. Smith v Winter (1852) 12 C.B. 487. On payment by negotiable instrument, see Vol.I, paras 21-075—21-083; on payment by banker's commercial credit, see above, paras 34-445 et seq.
- 1629. Garey v Pyke (1839) 10 A. & E. 512.

- 1630. Wayne's Merthyr Steam Coal and Iron Co v Morewood (1877) 46 L.J.Q.B. 746; Underwood Ltd v Burgh Castle Brick and Cement Syndicate [1922] 1 K.B. 343 (goods damaged in process of loading before property passed to the buyer).
- 1631. Dickenson v Naul (1833) 4 B. & Ad. 638; Allen v Hopkins (1844) 13 M. & W. 94. (Although this decision is based also on the fact that the buyer had had to pay the value of the goods to the true owner, it is submitted that the principle need not be so limited.)
- 1632. See above, paras 44-187—44-190.
- 1633. See s.53(1)(a) (see below, paras 44-411 et seq.). See also s.53(4) (see below, para.44-411). cf. Berger Co Inc v Gill Duffus SA [1984] A.C. 382, 392 (see below, para.44-367).
- 1634. See above, paras 44-361—44-363.
- 1635. The subsection is based on Dunlop v Grote (1845) 2 Car. K. 153 ("if the delivery of the said iron should not be required before ... April 30", payment was to be made on that date).
- 1636. Maclean v Dunn and Watkins (1828) 6 L.J.(o.s.) C.P. 184, 190.
- 1637. Shell-Mex Ltd v Elton Cop Dyeing Co Ltd (1928) 34 Com. Cas. 39, 43 (sellers were entitled "at any time to invoice the buyers ...).
- 1638. Similarly, where the goods were sold on terms of "prompt cash against invoice": Henderson and Keay Ltd v AM Carmichael Ltd, 1956 S.L.T. (Notes) 58.
- 1639. Stein, Forbes Co v County Tailoring Co (1916) 86 L.J.K.B. 448. (An earlier case, Polenghi v Dried Milk Co Ltd (1904) 10 Com. Cas. 42, is inconsistent with this view: see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 19–238—19–240.) For other cases on overseas sales, see Muller, Maclean Co v Leslie and Anderson (1921) 8 L.I.L. Rep. 328, 330–331; Nortier Co v Wm Maclean Sons Co (1921) 8 L.I.L. Rep. 192, 194; Colley v Overseas Exporters [1921] 3 K.B. 302, 311; Tradax Internacional SA v Goldschmidt SA [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 604, 614.
- 1640. On the basis of the decisions in nn.1636–1639, above; see Benjamin at paras 16–027, 19–238—19–240.
- 1641. Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.16–027. Some dicta in the Court of Appeal cast doubt on this submission: Workman, Clark Co v Lloyd Brazileno [1908] 1 K.B. 968, 977, 978, 981; see Benjamin at paras 16–026, 19–238—19–240, 19–223 (s.50(1) also assumes that the normal remedy when the property has not passed is a claim for damages for non-acceptance).
- 1642. Caterpillar (NI) Ltd (formerly FG Wilson (Engineering) Ltd) v John Holt & Co (Liverpool) Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1232, [2014] 1 W.L.R. 2365 at [44]). The sellers did not rely on s.49(2) (at [23]).
- 1643.  cf. PST Energy 7 Shipping LLC v OW Bunker Malta Ltd [2015] EWHC 2022 (Comm) although held that the Sale of Goods Act did not apply to the bunker supply contract, the judge would have held that s.49(2) applies where payment is to be within a fixed period after delivery. This point was not considered in detail by the Court of Appeal [2015] EWCA Civ 1058 or Supreme Court [2016] UKSC 23. In Caterpillar (NI) Ltd (formerly FG Wilson (Engineering) Ltd) v John Holt & Co (Liverpool) Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1232, [2014] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 393 Longmore L.J. (at [44]) indicated that a term for payment 30 days after invoice would have fallen within s.49(2), but as the sending of an invoice itself depended on delivery, it seems questionable whether this is a term for payment on a day certain "irrespective of delivery". See below, para.44-365.
- 1644. Stein Forbes Co v County Tailoring Co (1916) 86 L.J.K.B. 448; Colley v Overseas Exporters [1921] 3 K.B. 302 at 310; Muller, Maclean Co v Leslie and Anderson (1921) 8 L.I.L. Rep. 328 at 330–331; Plaimar Ltd v Waters Trading Co Ltd (1945) 72 C.L.R. 304, 318; cf. Martin v Hogan (1917) 24 C.L.R. 234; White and Carter (Councils) Ltd v McGregor [1962] A.C. 413, 437; Otis Vehicle Rentals Ltd v Ciceley Commercials Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 1064 at [12].

- 1645. The terms must permit the seller to recover the price by action, and not merely specify when the price is payable; the buyer's duty to pay the price is not identical with the seller's entitlement to sue for the price. Retention of title clauses (see above, paras 44-174 et seq.) often provide that the seller may maintain an action for the price, notwithstanding that the property in the goods will not pass until full payment of the price has been made. See also Armour v Thyssen Edelstahlwerke AG [1991] 2 A.C. 339. However, in the light of the decisions in Caterpillar (NI) Ltd (formerly FG Wilson (Engineering) Ltd) v John Holt & Co (Liverpool) Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1232, [2014] 1 W.L.R. 2365, below, and of dicta in that case about when an action may be brought under s.49(2) (see above, para.43-364), there must now be doubt whether such a provision will be effective. Longmore L.J. found himself "in the somewhat unsatisfactory position of concluding that, if property never passed to Holt Liverpool, FG Wilson have no claim for the price nor even a claim to damages. That is just an inherent result of a retention of title clause and shows that it has dangers as well as benefits" (at [56]). That conclusion does indeed seem unsatisfactory.
- 1646. Benjamin at paras 16–028—16–029. It is, however, arguable that to increase the scope of the action for the price has the undesirable effect of limiting the scope of the mitigation rules.
- 1647. cf. s.28 (see above, para.44-235). The wide freedom of the parties to fix their own terms is supported by White and Carter (Councils) Ltd v McGregor [1962] A.C. 413 (see Vol.I, paras 24-010, 26-092).
- 1648. Minister for Supply and Development v Servicemen's Co-op Joinery Manufacturers Ltd (1951) 82 C.L.R. 621.
- 1649. Minister for Supply and Development v Servicemen's Co-op Joinery Manufacturers Ltd (1951) 82 C.L.R. 621, 636.
- 1650. Minister for Supply and Development v Servicemen's Co-op Joinery Manufacturers Ltd (1951) 82 C.L.R. 621, 636.
- 1651. Minister for Supply and Development v Servicemen's Co-op Joinery Manufacturers Ltd (1951) 82 C.L.R. 621, 642 (cf. the view of the dissenting judge at 644).
- 1652. Minister for Supply and Development v Servicemen's Co-op Joinery Manufacturers Ltd (1951) 82 C.L.R. 621, 636, 642.
- 1653. [2012] EWHC 2477 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 479 at [53]. In the previous edition of this work (at [43]–[402]) it was suggested that where it is agreed that until all the instalments are paid, the goods remain the property of the seller, and that upon default in payment of an instalment or upon the occurrence of a certain event (e.g. the bankruptcy of the buyer) the total amount is to become payable that the seller should be able to sue for the price even though the claim would be outside the scope of s.49. Reliance was placed in particular on McEntire v Crossley Bros Ltd [1895] A.C. 457, 465. The decision in Caterpillar (NI) Ltd (formerly FG Wilson (Engineering) Ltd) v John Holt & Co (Liverpool) Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1232, [2014] 1 W.L.R. 2365 that an action for the price can only be brought in accordance with the terms of s.49 seems to preclude such an argument.
- 1654. [2013] EWCA Civ 1232, [2014] 1 W.L.R. 2365. Section 49 is not just a default rule that can be negative or varied by agreement in accordance with s.55 of the Act: see at [53].
- 1655.  [2016] UKSC 23 at [40]–[58].
- 1656.  cf. Longmore L.J. in Caterpillar (NI) Ltd (formerly FG Wilson (Engineering) Ltd) v John Holt & Co (Liverpool) Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1232, [2014] 1 W.L.R. 2365, [54]–[56]. While noting the artificiality, Lord Mance, delivering the unanimous judgment of the Supreme Court in PST Energy 7 Shipping LLC v OW Bunker Malta Ltd [2016] UKSC 23, saw no reason why a claim for damages for non-payment should not in principle be available (at [48]–[49]).

- 1657. Sempra Metals Ltd v Commissioners of Inland Revenue [2007] UKHL 34, [2008] 1 A.C. 561. See Vol.I, para.26-230.
- 1658. See Vol.I, paras 26-232 et seq. Note especially the Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act 1998.
- 1659. See below, paras 44-382—44-383.
- 1660. s.37 (see above, paras 44-291—44-292).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 6. - Remedies of the Seller

(c) - Action for Damages ¹⁶⁶¹

Damages for non-acceptance

44-367

Where the property in the goods has not passed to the buyer, the seller's remedy in most circumstances ¹⁶⁶² is an action for damages: for damages for non-acceptance under s.50(1), for consequential losses or expenses under s.54, ¹⁶⁶³ or for losses or expenses under s.37. ¹⁶⁶⁴ Section 50 provides:

“(1)

Where the buyer wrongfully neglects or refuses to accept and pay for the goods, the seller may maintain an action against him for damages for non-acceptance. ¹⁶⁶⁵

(2)

The measure of damages is the estimated loss directly and naturally resulting, in the ordinary course of events, from the buyer's breach of contract. ¹⁶⁶⁶

(3)

Where there is an available market for the goods in question the measure of damages is prima facie to be ascertained by the difference between the contract price and the market or current price at the time or times when the goods ought to have been accepted or (if no time was fixed for acceptance) at the time of the refusal to accept.”

Section 50(1) is based on wrongful neglect or refusal by the buyer to pay the price, ¹⁶⁶⁷ and on wrongful neglect or refusal to accept the goods. ¹⁶⁶⁸ Where the buyer has not taken delivery of the goods and there is some doubt as to whether the property in the goods has passed to the buyer, the seller who sues for the price ¹⁶⁶⁹ runs the risk that the court may hold that property had not passed to the buyer: in this event, it follows that the seller's only remedy is a claim for damages for non-acceptance, and that the seller was subject to the rules on mitigating his loss (e.g. by reselling) as from the date when the buyer should have accepted the goods. The seller's damages (for the buyer's refusal to accept the goods, or the documents representing the goods) may be reduced “by any sum which the buyers could establish they would have been entitled to set up in diminution of the contract price” as a result of any previous breach by the sellers. ¹⁶⁷⁰ Section 50(2) comes into operation either where there is no available market (within the meaning of s.50(3)) ¹⁶⁷¹ or where the “prima facie” rule in s.50(3) is deemed to be inapplicable for some special reason. ¹⁶⁷²

An available market

44-368

⚠ The rule in s.50(3) is that when the buyer fails both to pay the price and to accept the goods, the seller's damages are calculated by deducting from the contract price the market price at the time and place fixed by the contract for acceptance. ¹⁶⁷³ ⚠ The doctrine of mitigation ¹⁶⁷⁴ is one of the bases of this principle: it is assumed that with this additional amount of money the seller could, by selling in the market at the current price, put himself into the same financial position he would have been in had the contract been performed according to its terms. ¹⁶⁷⁵ There have been different views as to the meaning of an "available market". ¹⁶⁷⁶ An early view was that an available market is some place (e.g. an exchange) where the goods in question can be sold ¹⁶⁷⁷; a later view was that it "means a particular level of trade" ¹⁶⁷⁸ in a particular locality; another that it refers to a sufficient demand for the goods "to absorb readily all the goods that were thrust on it" ¹⁶⁷⁹; yet another that it means a situation where the current price for the goods may fluctuate according to supply and demand ¹⁶⁸⁰ (which rules out the situation "where the goods can only be sold at a fixed retail price" ¹⁶⁸¹). It is submitted that the courts are likely to eschew formal limitations on the meaning of an "available market", ¹⁶⁸² especially in the light of the fact that the concept provides only a prima facie measure of damages which need not be applied when there is some justification for not doing so. The availability of buyers and sellers, and their ready capacity to supply or to absorb the relevant goods ¹⁶⁸³ ⚠ is the basic concept of an "available market": it is submitted that there is no need to add to this the test of a price liable to fluctuations in accordance with supply and demand, as occurs in official exchanges or certain commodity markets. A fixed market price may render s.50(3) ineffective as a ground for substantial damages, but it should not make the term "available market" inapplicable. ¹⁶⁸⁴ ⚠ A fluctuating market price indicates the existence of an available market, but it should not be a necessary test. In order to establish that there was a market for the goods at a particular price it is not necessary to identify a willing buyer at a specified price. The judge is entitled to infer the existence of a market from any sufficient evidence relevant to that issue. He is entitled to infer the value of goods from any sufficient relevant evidence of value. ¹⁶⁸⁵

44-369

The temporal test implied in the "ready" or "immediate" accessibility to substitute buyers or sellers should, it is submitted, ¹⁶⁸⁶ be a test of a reasonable time after the breach, given the nature of the goods in question ¹⁶⁸⁷ (e.g. whether they are perishable or durable goods) and the business situation of the claimant. ¹⁶⁸⁸ With many types of goods there would need to be the possibility of an immediate resale or new purchase before the test would be satisfied; but this test permits some flexibility in the particular circumstances. With some types (or quantities) of goods, negotiations with potential buyers would take several days to achieve a sale: in these circumstances, the market price should be fixed on the assumption that the hypothetical seller had begun to negotiate sufficiently far ahead to enable a sale to be made on the day in question. ¹⁶⁸⁹ The question also arises whether the concept of "market" extends to places other than the place of delivery. ¹⁶⁹⁰ It has been assumed by one judge that the seller might have to send the goods elsewhere, ¹⁶⁹¹ and, in another case where the seller's business area was the East Riding of Yorkshire, it was assumed that was the area in which he should seek a substitute buyer. ¹⁶⁹² It is submitted that the test is one of reasonableness, ¹⁶⁹³ in the light of the time, expense and trouble involved. ¹⁶⁹⁴

44-370

The size of the market is also relevant: thus, a few sales of small quantities of the relevant goods will not constitute an available market. ¹⁶⁹⁵ The House of Lords (in a case of a seller's breach) has been willing to accept that there could be a market in which to buy 15,000 tons of lard where the only purchases which could be made were of smaller quantities (up to 2,000 tons at a time) and spread over a period. ¹⁶⁹⁶ Thus, a seller who cannot find a substitute buyer for a large quantity of goods may have to mitigate by dividing it into separate sales of quantities which are readily saleable. ¹⁶⁹⁷ A very high or a very low price may ¹⁶⁹⁸ indicate that there is either a scarcity or glut ¹⁶⁹⁹ of the relevant goods, ¹⁷⁰⁰ and so no available market. But the fact that the market price is seriously affected by a governmental intervention (e.g. the sudden imposition of import restrictions) does not prevent there being an available market. ¹⁷⁰¹ A “black” market, where the goods are bought and sold surreptitiously to evade contractual restrictions (e.g. restrictions on price or supplies) may also be an available market. ¹⁷⁰²

Fixed retail price

44-371

A problem has arisen when the relevant goods can be sold only at a fixed retail price. It has been considered in two cases ¹⁷⁰³ where, after the buyer defaulted, the seller was able to resell only at the same fixed price: in both cases the court held that the same result would follow whether or not there was an available market, so that a definite decision on the meaning of the term was not necessary. The result of the two decisions is that if the seller had the ability and the opportunity to make a profit for every buyer he could find (because the supply of the goods exceeded the demand) he is entitled to the loss of profits on the sale to the defaulting buyer. ¹⁷⁰⁴ But if the demand for the goods exceeded the supply, so that the seller could readily sell every item he could obtain from the manufacturers, he is not entitled to loss of profits on the first sale when he made the same profit on a substituted sale following the first buyer's default. ¹⁷⁰⁵ The former situation is illustrated by Thompson Ltd v Robinson (Gunmakers) Ltd. ¹⁷⁰⁶ The plaintiffs, car dealers, agreed to sell a new Vanguard car to the defendants, at the retail price fixed by the manufacturers. On the defendants' refusal to accept the car, the plaintiffs persuaded the wholesale suppliers to take the car back. Although there was no difference between the current retail price and the contract price, Upjohn J. awarded damages for the loss of profit on the sale. There was no shortage of Vanguard cars to meet all immediate demands in the locality: since a substitute buyer could not be found readily, the judge thought that there was not an available market. ¹⁷⁰⁷ If the second buyer was an additional customer of the seller, and not merely a substituted customer, and the seller had the ability and the opportunity of making two profits on the two transactions, he is entitled to damages for his loss of the first profit when the first buyer defaults. ¹⁷⁰⁸

44-372

The second situation, where the demand for the goods in question exceeds the supply, occurred in Charter v Sullivan. ¹⁷⁰⁹ The defendant refused to accept delivery of a Hillman Minx car which he had agreed to buy from the plaintiff, a car dealer, at the fixed retail price. Within 10 days the plaintiff resold the car to another buyer at the same price. As the evidence showed that the plaintiff could find a buyer for every Hillman Minx car he could get from the manufacturers, the Court of Appeal refused to allow him to recover more than nominal damages: he made the same number of sales (and therefore the same number of fixed profits) as he would have done if the defendant had performed his contractual obligation; hence it was a substituted, not an additional sale, because the seller had the ability to make only one sale and one profit. ¹⁷¹⁰

The relevant “market”

44-373

Normally, the concept of “available market” should be the same, whether the defaulting party is the buyer or the seller. ¹⁷¹¹ But the claimant's position could be crucial: if he is a seller, the issue is the availability of alternative buyers; whereas, if he is a buyer, it is the availability of alternative sellers. ¹⁷¹² The selling, not the buying, price is relevant in one situation, but not necessarily the other, and vice versa. ¹⁷¹³ Thus, the relevant available market is that available to the innocent party in the circumstances in which he is placed by the breach. ¹⁷¹⁴ But there are other types of market relationships which may be relevant, ¹⁷¹⁵ e.g. between wholesaler and retailer, retailer and private buyer, as the prices for the goods in question may vary according to the particular relationship in which the claimant and defendant are involved. ¹⁷¹⁶

The relevant time

44-374

Section 50(3) provides that “the market or current price” is to be taken “at the time or times when the goods ought to have been accepted or (if no time was fixed for acceptance) at the time of the refusal to accept”. The contract itself will normally fix the exact time for acceptance. ¹⁷¹⁷ Where the goods are to be delivered within a stipulated period of time, the time when the goods ought to have been accepted is the time, within the period, when the goods were actually tendered to the buyer by the seller. ¹⁷¹⁸ Where the contract provides that delivery is to be made by separate deliveries of part of the goods at stated times or intervals, the damages in respect of the buyer’s failure to accept an instalment must be calculated by reference to the market price prevailing at the time fixed for delivery of that instalment. ¹⁷¹⁹

No time fixed for acceptance44-375

The final provision in s.50(3) deals with cases of the buyer’s refusal to accept delivery of the goods when tendered by the seller under a contract which did not fix a time for acceptance: in these circumstances, the prima facie rule for the assessment of damages is based on the market price “at the time of the refusal to accept”. But the calculation of the market price at the time of the buyer’s “refusal to accept” in terms of s.50(3) does not apply to an anticipatory breach by the buyer. ¹⁷²⁰ A Divisional Court has held ¹⁷²¹ that a contract for delivery within a reasonable time is not a contract with a fixed time for acceptance of the goods within the scope of the analogous s.51(3). ¹⁷²²

Postponement of time fixed for delivery44-376

Where the buyer requests and obtains the seller’s consent to postpone ¹⁷²³ the time for delivery fixed by the contract, but fails to accept the goods when the seller tenders them at the substituted time (or within the extended period), the calculation of the seller’s damages will be made on the basis of the market price at the substituted time (or at the last day of the extended period) ¹⁷²⁴; if the seller agreed to postpone the original delivery date but no definite date or period was substituted by agreement, the calculation of damages will be made at the market price at a reasonable time after the last request by the buyer for postponement of delivery, or at the date when the seller refused to give any further time. ¹⁷²⁵ Where the request for postponement of the agreed delivery date came from the seller, and at first the buyer agreed to waive delivery at that date but later repudiated his obligations in breach of the contract, the damages should be calculated on the basis of the market price at the time of the buyer’s repudiation. ¹⁷²⁶

Proof of the market price44-377

If there is proof of the market price at the date of the buyer’s breach, ¹⁷²⁷ the actual price obtained by the seller upon his reselling the goods at a later date is irrelevant to the assessment of damages, whether the resale price is higher or lower than the market price. ¹⁷²⁸ But where normal proof of the market price of the goods is not available (viz by reference to published or recorded prices of deals at the relevant date) the court may accept other evidence, e.g. proof of the price at which the seller in fact resold the goods to a new buyer, ¹⁷²⁹ or of an offer for the goods received by the seller, ¹⁷³⁰ or proof of compromises in other disputes relating to the market value of similar goods at the same time. ¹⁷³¹

44-378

If the seller has, at the date of the buyer’s breach, only the one set of the relevant goods, viz the set left on his hands following the buyer's breach, the price (higher ¹⁷³² than the market price) which he actually receives by reselling immediately is a direct consequence of the buyer's breach, and should be taken into account in assessing the seller's damages. ¹⁷³³ The seller should recover only his actual loss, viz the difference between the contract price and the actual resale price, since, but for the breach, he would not have had the opportunity of reselling. ¹⁷³⁴ If, on the other hand, the seller had, at the date of the breach, further supplies of the relevant goods, a resale of only some of his stock at a higher than market or current price could not necessarily be attributed to the buyer's breach and, in these circumstances, the seller should be entitled to the normal measure of damages under s.50(3). ¹⁷³⁵ Although there is no authority directly in point to support the submissions just made, inferences may be drawn from cases where the seller chooses to retain the goods for a period, instead of reselling them in the market immediately following the buyer's breach. The Court of Appeal has held ¹⁷³⁶ that if the seller subsequently resells the goods at a gain because the market price rises after the date of the breach, the enhanced price received by the seller does not reduce his damages, which are still to be determined by the difference between the contract price and the market price on the date of the breach. By retaining the goods after that date the seller is taking on himself the risk of fluctuations in the market price: if the price later fell, the buyer would not be liable for the seller's additional loss, and, correspondingly, the seller is entitled to the gain if the price later rises. ¹⁷³⁷ There should be symmetry of risk. From this reasoning it may be inferred that if the seller does not take a chance on later fluctuations in the market price, but chooses to sell the one set of goods immediately upon the breach and happens to obtain a price higher than the market price at that time, his damages should be limited to his actual loss. ¹⁷³⁸

Damages where there is no available market

44-379

If s.50(3) does not apply, because there is no available market, the court is thrown back on the general principle enunciated in s.50(2), see above. The seller's loss is the difference between the contract price and the value of the goods to the seller at the time and place of the breach, ¹⁷³⁹ and any relevant evidence may be admissible to prove this value. ¹⁷⁴⁰ The seller's damages will be assessed on the basis that he should have acted reasonably in mitigating his loss. ¹⁷⁴¹ He is entitled to deal with the goods "in any reasonable way", ¹⁷⁴² e.g. by adapting them to suit another customer, and his damages will then include the cost of the adaptation, as well as the loss of profit on the first sale. ¹⁷⁴³ Although the seller need not incur speculative expenditure, ¹⁷⁴⁴ there may be circumstances in which it would be reasonable for the seller, under the rules of mitigation, to incur a limited amount of expenditure to adapt the goods in such a way as to make them readily saleable. ¹⁷⁴⁵ If the seller has been able to resell, he may claim the loss of profits on the abortive sale on the ground that the second buyer was an additional, not a substituted, buyer. The test is whether the seller had the ability and the opportunity to make the two separate profits ¹⁷⁴⁶: if the seller had fulfilled the first contract, would he have been able to fulfil the second contract as well? If so, he is entitled to recover from the defaulting buyer his loss of profit on the first contract. ¹⁷⁴⁷

Anticipatory breach by the buyer: repudiation accepted ¹⁷⁴⁸

44-380

Where the buyer commits an anticipatory breach by repudiating, before the date fixed for delivery, his obligation to take delivery of the goods the seller has an option ¹⁷⁴⁹: he may either accept the repudiation and so treat it forthwith as a breach, or he may continue to treat the contract as binding and thus not accept the repudiation as a breach. ¹⁷⁵⁰ If the seller accepts the buyer's anticipatory repudiation, he may sue immediately for damages for breach of contract: but in those situations in which there is an available market for the goods, ¹⁷⁵¹ the relevant date for ascertaining the market price remains prima facie (and subject to any requirement of mitigation) the date fixed for delivery, ¹⁷⁵² since that is when the contract ought to be performed. ¹⁷⁵³ If the action is heard before the date for delivery arrives, the court should attempt to estimate what the market price is likely to be at that future date. ¹⁷⁵⁴ But if the seller does accept the buyer's anticipatory repudiation, he is forthwith subject to the rules on mitigation and must take reasonable steps to minimise his loss. ¹⁷⁵⁵ Where the seller should have mitigated by reselling, ¹⁷⁵⁶ the relevant market price is that existing at the date he ought reasonably to have resold, ¹⁷⁵⁷ not that at the date of the repudiation, nor that at the date when the repudiation is accepted. ¹⁷⁵⁸

Repudiation not accepted

44-381

If the seller does not accept the buyer's anticipatory repudiation, he may continue to treat the contract as binding on both himself and the buyer, and wait until the date fixed for delivery before he tenders the goods: if the buyer then fails to accept the goods, the seller thereupon should mitigate his loss by taking reasonable steps (viz in normal circumstances by reselling forthwith). ¹⁷⁵⁹ Where there is an available market for the goods, the relevant market price will be that at the date fixed for delivery: if the seller did not accept the buyer's anticipatory repudiation, a higher or a lower market price at the date of the repudiation, or at any date during the period up to the date fixed for delivery, is irrelevant, because the rules of mitigation do not apply until the date of the actual breach. ¹⁷⁶⁰ Of course, during the interval the contract is kept alive for the benefit of both parties ¹⁷⁶¹: the buyer may change his mind and accept the goods when tendered ¹⁷⁶²; or the seller may decide to accept the repudiation (before it has been retracted by the buyer) whereupon the rules of mitigation will forthwith apply to the seller; or the obligations of the parties may be determined by the occurrence of a frustrating event ¹⁷⁶³; or the buyer may exercise a right under the contract to cancel it. ¹⁷⁶⁴

Special cases of seller's damages ¹⁷⁶⁵

44-382

If the unpaid seller resells under his statutory powers (s.48(3) and (4)), ¹⁷⁶⁶ he may claim damages, which will be:

(a)

the difference between the original contract price (less any deposit ¹⁷⁶⁷ paid) and the price obtained on the resale (provided that it was not less than either the market price ¹⁷⁶⁸ or a reasonable price ¹⁷⁶⁹); and

(b)

any expenses reasonably incurred by the seller as a result of the buyer's breach of contract or in connection with the resale (e.g. reasonable advertising expenses ¹⁷⁷⁰ or storage charges). ¹⁷⁷¹

Similarly, where there is a market, and the seller resells at the market price immediately upon the buyer's failure to accept the goods, he will (in addition to damages under s.50) ¹⁷⁷² be entitled to damages for any expenses reasonably incurred in effecting the resale. ¹⁷⁷³

"Special damages"

44-383

Section 54 preserves the right of both the buyer and the seller to recover "special damages". ¹⁷⁷⁴ Consequential losses and expenses are often claimed by the buyer, ¹⁷⁷⁵ but seldom by the seller, who normally has not made other arrangements which both depend on the fulfilment of the contract and also involve losses or expenses which fall within the tests for remoteness. ¹⁷⁷⁶ The seller's normal loss when the buyer fails to pay the price on the agreed date is the loss of the use of the money: for this type of loss, the seller may claim interest ¹⁷⁷⁷ and, in some circumstances, damages, ¹⁷⁷⁸ provided that it was not unreasonable to think that the buyer was assuming responsibility for such a loss. ¹⁷⁷⁹

-
- 1661. The general rules on damages are examined in Vol.I, Ch.26.
- 1662. Except where s.49(2) applies or there is a special term in the contract: see above, paras 44-364, 44-365. The seller may only be able to bring an action for damages if it is or would have been willing and able to deliver the goods; see above, paras 44-235 and 44-266. If it is shown that on the balance of probabilities the seller would have been able to do so, the damages should not be discounted for the chance that it would not have been able to do so: AerCap Partners 1 Ltd v Avia Asset Management AB [2010] EWHC 2431 (Comm), [2010] 2 C.L.C. 578 at [76].
- 1663. See below, paras 44-382—44-383.
- 1664. See above, paras 44-291—44-292.
- 1665. This subsection is wide enough to cover non-acceptance when the property has already passed to the buyer, in which case it allows damages for non-acceptance as an alternative remedy to a claim for the price. But a claim in debt for the price is more advantageous to the seller (see above, para.44-359, Vol.I, paras 21-040 and 26-008).
- 1666. Subs.(2) uses the language of the first rule in Hadley v Baxendale (1854) 9 Exch. 341 (see above, Vol.I, para.26-109). It is submitted that the common law developments (since the date of the 1893 Act) in the rules for remoteness of damage may be used to aid the interpretation of the subsection (see Vol.I, paras 26-107 et seq.).
- 1667. See above, paras 44-361—44-363.
- 1668. See above, para.44-234 (s.27). cf. see above, para.44-291 (s.37).
- 1669. So long as the seller is claiming the price, he must hold the goods available for delivery to the buyer when the buyer pays the price.
- 1670. Berger Co Inc v Gill Duffus SA [1984] A.C. 382, 392.
- 1671. See below, para.44-368.
- 1672. See below, para.44-379. The Court of Appeal may now be more willing to depart from the prima facie rules on the Act: see Bence Graphics International Ltd v Fasson UK Ltd [1998] Q.B. 87 (see below, paras 44-413, 44-415). See also Bern Dis A Turk Ticaret SA TR v International Agri Trade Co Ltd [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 619 CA.
- 1673.  For a discussion of the market price rule generally and how it interacts with the compensation principle, see M. Bridge [2016] L.Q.R. 405. A claim under s.50(3) will not be affected by a clause excluding liability for loss of profit: Glencore Energy UK Ltd v Cirrus Oil Services Ltd [2014] EWHC 87 (Comm) (“The contract price/market price differential is not a computation of lost profit. Lost profit is the difference between the total net cost to the seller of acquiring the goods and bringing them to market on the one hand and the net sale price that would have been achieved on the other” (at [98])).
- 1674. See Vol.I, paras 26-079 et seq.
- 1675. But if s.50(3) applies, the plaintiff need not satisfy the requirements of reasonable mitigation: Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc v Maclaine Watson Co Ltd (No.2) [1990] 3 All E.R. 723, 726.
- 1676. See Waters (1958) 36 Can. Bar Rev. 360; Lawson (1969) 43 A.L.J. 52, 106.
- 1677. Dunkirk Colliery Co Ltd v Lever (1878) 9 Ch. D. 20, 25 (an obiter dictum made prior to the 1893 Act, which was not expressly accepted by the other Lords Justices; followed in Thompson Ltd v

Robinson (Gunmakers) Ltd [1955] Ch. 177.

- 1678. Heskell v Continental Express Ltd [1950] 1 All E.R. 1033, 1056. See also The Arpad [1934] P. 189, 191 (“Market means buyers and sellers”; at 202).
- 1679. Thompson Ltd v Robinson (Gunmakers) Ltd [1955] Ch. 177, 187. (See on this case see below, para.44-371). In Hughes v Pendragon Sabre Ltd (t/a Porsche Centre Bolton) [2016] EWCA Civ 18 a rare new limited edition Porsche was sufficiently specialised for there to be insufficient activity to evidence a market.
- 1680. Charter v Sullivan [1957] 2 Q.B. 117, 128 (see below, para.44-372). To the same effect, see Eclipse Motors Pty Ltd v Nixon [1940] V.L.R. 49. cf. Marshall Co v Nicoll Son, 1919 S.C. 244, 253.
- 1681. Charter v Sullivan [1957] 2 Q.B. 117, 128.
- 1682. Charrington Co Ltd v Wooder [1914] A.C. 71, 82 (“Market” is “a term of no fixed legal significance”: per Lord Dunedin). See also Charter v Sullivan above at 128; and ABD (Metals and Waste) Ltd v Anglo-Chemical Ore Company Ltd [1955] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 456, 466. (“... there must be sufficient traders who are in touch with each other ...”) (followed in the Shearson Lehman case (No.2) [1990] 3 All E.R. 730). The existence or absence of an available market need not be specifically contemplated by the parties: Coastal (Bermuda) Petroleum Ltd v VTT Vulcan Petroleum SA (No.2) (The Marine Star) [1994] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 629. “The best evidence of market value is constituted by arm’s length deals actually made in the market. The last transaction effected effectively sets the benchmark”: Glencore Energy UK Ltd v Cirrus Oil Services Ltd [2014] EWHC 87 (Comm) at [70].
- 1683.  Marshall Co v Nicoll Son, 1919 S.C. 244, 253; affirmed 1919 S.C.(H.L.) 129; Thompson Ltd v Robinson (Gunmakers) Ltd [1955] Ch. 177, 187. There is no “available market” for a unique article like a second-hand car: Lazenby Garages Ltd v Wright [1976] 1 W.L.R. 459 CA; nor is such a market likely in a “command economy”: Derby Resources AG v Blue Corinth Marine Co Ltd (The Athenian Harmony) [1998] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 410, 416. In Air Studios (Lyndhurst) Ltd v Lombard North Central Plc [2012] EWHC 3162 (QB), [2013] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 63, a case of non-delivery by a seller, it was said that there may be a market for used goods even if the precise model or brand sold was not available: “the availability of equivalent second-hand goods capable of performing the same functions in much the same way would constitute an available market for ‘the goods in question’. A buyer of such equivalent goods would be in the same financial position as if the contract had been performed” (at [93]). In Hughes v Pendragon Sabre Ltd (t/a Porsche Centre Bolton) [2016] EWCA Civ 18 a rare new limited edition Porsche was sufficiently specialised for there to be insufficient activity to evidence a market.
- 1684.  Waters (1958) 36 Can. Bar Rev. 360, 371; Lawson (1969) 43 A.L.J. 106, 110; see below, paras 44-371. cf. McGregor on Damages, 19th edn (2015), paras 23–118 et seq.
- 1685. Bulkhaul Ltd v Rhodia Organique Fine Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 1452, [2009] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 353 at [29].
- 1686. This submission is “consistent with the effect of the Garnac Grain case” (see below, para.44–370 n.1695) but it is not based on any express reference to “a reasonable time after breach” in any case: the Shearson Lehman case (No.2) [1990] 3 All E.R. 723 at 730.
- 1687. It is most unlikely that there will be an available market where the goods have been specially manufactured to suit the particular requirements of the buyer: Elbinger Aktien Gesellschaft v Armstrong (1874) 9 Q.B. 473, 476–477; Hinde v Liddell (1875) 10 Q.B. 265, 269. cf. Borries v Hutchison (1865) 18 C.B.(N.S.) 445, 447; Re Vic Mill Ltd [1913] 1 Ch. 183, 187; on appeal, above at 465, 472-473.
- 1688. It is submitted that the opinion of Sellers L.J. on this point in Charter v Sullivan [1957] 2 Q.B. 117, 133–134 is not correct. cf. Lesters Leather and Skin Co v Home and Overseas Brokers Ltd (1948) 64 T.L.R. 569 (eight or nine months’ delay in obtaining substitute goods: see below, para.44-389). In Air Studios (Lyndhurst) Ltd v Lombard North Central Plc [2012] EWHC 3162 (QB), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 63, a case of non-delivery by a seller, there was held to be no relevant market when there was only a possibility that equivalent goods would become available within about three months (at [95]).

- 1689. The Shearson Lehman (No.2) case [1990] 3 All E.R. 731.
- 1690. It is submitted that Wertheim v Chicoutimi Pulp Co [1911] A.C. 301 (see below, para.44-407: delayed delivery) which is often cited in this connection, really concerns the question of reaching a market value in one place by basing the calculation on the market price elsewhere; it did not decide that the latter place constituted an available market. cf. however, the approval of Wertheim's case by Auld L.J. in Bence Graphics International Ltd v Fasson UK Ltd [1998] Q.B. 87, 103–105 (see below, paras 44-413, 44-415).
- 1691. Dunkirk Colliery Co v Lever (1878) 9 Ch. D. 20, 25.
- 1692. Thompson Ltd v Robinson (Gunmakers) Ltd [1955] Ch. 177. cf. Lesters Leather and Skin Co v Home and Overseas Brokers Ltd (1948) 64 T.L.R. 569 (seller's breach: see below, para.44-389).
- 1693. Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders and Shippers Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 459, 499; Lesters Leather and Skin Co v Home and Overseas Brokers Ltd (1948) 64 T.L.R. 569 (seller's breach).
- 1694. cf. Ströms Brucks Aktie Bolag v Hutchinson [1905] A.C. 515 (breach of charterparty: plaintiffs recovered cost of transporting the substitute goods to the contractual place of delivery).
- 1695. Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders and Shippers Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 459, 498.
- 1696. Garnac Grain Co Inc v HMF Faure Fairclough Ltd [1968] A.C. 1130, 1138 (see below, para.44-389); cf. (in the Court of Appeal) [1966] 1 Q.B. 650, 687.
- 1697. Tredegar Iron and Coal Co v Gielgud (1883) 1 Cab. El. 27. In the case of the sale of 10,000 tonnes of gasoline it was held that there could be an available market where the seller could have disposed of the gasoline in smaller cargo loads of 1,000 to 3,000 tonnes over a period of about two weeks from the buyer's breach: Petrotrade Inc v Stinnes Handel GmbH [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 142.
- 1698. But not necessarily: Bradley Sons Ltd v Colonial and Continental Trading Ltd [1964] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 52, 64.
- 1699. Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders and Shippers Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 459 at 498; Campbell Mostyn (Provisions) Ltd v Barnett Trading Co [1954] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 65, 69.
- 1700. cf. O'Hanlan v GW Ry (1865) 6 B. S. 484, 494.
- 1701. Campbell Mostyn (Provisions) Ltd v Barnett Trading Co [1954] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 65, 69.
- 1702. Mouat v Betts Motors Ltd [1959] A.C. 71; British Motor Trade Association v Gilbert [1951] 2 T.L.R. 514. (These decisions imply that the sellers were entitled to mitigate by themselves going into the black market to buy a substitute. It is, however, doubtful whether a black market where the goods are available in breach of statutory controls would be treated similarly.)
- 1703. Thompson Ltd v Robinson (Gunmakers) Ltd [1955] Ch. 177; Charter v Sullivan [1957] 2 Q.B. 117.
- 1704. Thompson Ltd v Robinson (Gunmakers) Ltd [1955] Ch. 177 (following Re Vic Mill Ltd [1913] 1 Ch. 465).
- 1705. Charter v Sullivan [1957] 2 Q.B. 117.

- 1706. See above. In Lazenby Garages Ltd v Wright [1976] 1 W.L.R. 459, the Court of Appeal distinguished the sale of a second-hand car, a “unique article” for which there is no “available market”, from that of a new car.
- 1707. [1955] Ch. 177, 187. See above, paras 44–368—44–370. Moreover, since the market price rule in s.50(3) was only a “prima facie” rule, the judge held that it did not apply where it was clearly foreseeable by the parties that the rule would not compensate the seller for his loss of profit if the buyer defaulted: [1955] Ch. 177 at 188.
- 1708. Re Vic Mill Ltd [1913] 1 Ch. 465. cf. Interoffice Telephones Ltd v Robert Freeman [1958] 1 Q.B. 190 (hire of telephone equipment). cf. above, para.26-135.
- 1709. [1957] 2 Q.B. 117.
- 1710. The court considered it immaterial whether or not there was an “available market”: for tests for this, see above, paras 44–368—44–370.
- 1711. Lawson (1969) 43 A.L.J. 106, 113. The parties may in their contract agree which market is to be the relevant one for fixing market value: Orchard v Simpson (1857) 2 C.B.(N.S.) 299.
- 1712. Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders and Shippers Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 459, 497; C Czarnikow Ltd v Bunge Co Ltd [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 202, 205. The difference is referred to in The Arpad [1934] P. 189, 211; and in Dominion Motors Ltd v Grieves [1936] N.Z.L.R. 766, 771.
- 1713. Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders and Shippers Ltd, above at 497–498.
- 1714. But the individual characteristics of the claimant (e.g. his personal skill in negotiating) are not relevant: Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc v MacLaine Watson Co Ltd (No.2) [1990] 3 All E.R. 723, 726.
- 1715. FOB contracts raise problems as to the relevant market: see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 20–141 et seq. (cf. also at para.19-224).
- 1716. Heskell v Continental Express Ltd [1950] 1 All E.R. 1033. See also Rice v Baxendale (1861) 7 H. & N. 96, 100. cf. Charrington and Co Ltd v Wooder [1914] A.C. 71, where the House of Lords held that a contractual provision for the “fair market price” for beer meant, in the circumstances, the market for tied public houses and not that for free houses; cf. also James Buchanan Co Ltd v Babco Forwarding and Shipping (UK) Ltd [1978] A.C. 141 (there may be different market prices for the same type of goods, depending on whether the goods are intended for export or not). If the claimant cannot find a relevant market for the goods, he may try any reasonable alternative market relationship: O'Hanlan v GW Ry (1865) 6 B. & S. 484, 494.
- 1717. See above, paras 44-234, 44-235, 44-244 et seq. The time may be fixed by reference to the happening of an event, e.g. the arrival of a ship: Melachrino v Nickoll Knight [1920] 1 K.B. 693, 696 (on s.51(3)). Since the seller will normally know of the buyer's refusal to accept on the day he tenders delivery of the goods, he will in most cases (where there is an available market for the goods) be able to find a substitute buyer on the same day. cf. Kaines (UK) Ltd v Österreichische Warrenhandels-gesellschaft, etc [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1 (seller's breach: buyer should have re-purchased on the next day: at pp.11, 12). cf. see below, para.44-390.
- 1718. cf. the rule in cases of non-delivery: see below, para.44-390.
- 1719. 1979 Act s.50(3) above. There appear to be no reported cases directly in point, but the cases on the buyer's damages for non-delivery under an instalment contract are analogous: Brown v Muller (1872) L.R. 7 Ex. 319; Roper v Johnson (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 167 (see below, para.44-390).
- 1720. See below, paras 44–380—44–381.
- 1721. Millett v Van Heek Co [1920] 3 K.B. 535; Melachrino v Nickoll and Knight [1920] 1 K.B. 693, 696

- . In the Court of Appeal, opinions on the point were reserved: [1921] 2 K.B. 369; Atkin L.J. thought that there were arguments against the view taken by the Divisional Court: above at 378. The Privy Council, in a case on a seller's breach, doubted whether any meaning could be given to the similar concluding words of the corresponding provision (s.51(3)): Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Kamsing Knitting Factory [1979] A.C. 91, 104 (see below, para.44-393).
- 1722. See below, para.44-391.
- 1723. On waiver, see Vol.I, paras 4-082 et seq., paras 22-040 et seq.
- 1724. Hickman v Haynes (1875) 10 C.P. 598, 607 (following the similar rule in the case of the seller's failure to deliver: Ogle v Earl Vane (1868) L.R. 3 Q.B. 272 (see below, para.44-392)).
- 1725. Hickman v Haynes (1875) 10 C.P. 598. (This case was mentioned with approval by the HL in Johnson v Agnew [1980] A.C. 367, 401.)
- 1726. Hartley v Hymans [1920] 3 K.B. 475, 496 (following the similar rule in the case of the seller's failure to deliver: Tyers v Rosedale and Ferryhill Co (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 195 (see below, para. 44-392)). In Hartley v Hymans, above, the market price had fallen heavily between the contractual date for delivery and the date of the buyer's repudiation; but the judgment is very brief on the question of the assessment of damages.
- 1727. The court may infer the approximate market price on a given date from evidence that there was a steady decline in that price between an earlier and a later date: Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Kamsing Knitting Factory [1979] A.C. 91, 106 PC.
- 1728. Campbell Mostyn (Provisions) Ltd v Barnett Trading Co [1954] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 658.
- 1729. Maclean v Dunn (1828) 4 Bing. 722, 729; Ex p. Stapleton (1879) 10 Ch. D. 586, 590. (Aliter if the resale was on significantly different terms: Macklin v Newbury Sanitary Laundry (1919) 63 S.J. 337.) cf. Aryeh v Lawrence Kostoris Son Ltd [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 63, 73.
- 1730. The seller may be able to establish the "current price" by seeking several offers for the goods from prospective buyers, with a view to accepting the best price obtainable.
- 1731. Hong Guan Co Ltd v R Jumabhoy Sons Ltd [1960] A.C. 684, 703–704.
- 1732. If the seller resells at lower than the market price, he cannot recover the difference between the contract price and the actual resale price: s.50(3).
- 1733. See the second rule of mitigation: Vol.I, para.26-095; British Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co Ltd v Underground Electric Rys [1912] A.C. 673, 689.
- 1734. Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 16–075—16–076. cf. R Pagnan and Fratelli v Corbisa Industrial Agropacuaria [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1306 (see below, para.44-396).
- 1735. cf. the similar problem in Charter v Sullivan [1957] 2 Q.B. 117 (see above, para.44-372); InRe Vic Mill Ltd [1913] 1 Ch. 465.
- 1736. Campbell Mostyn (Provisions) Ltd v Barnett Trading Co [1954] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 65.
- 1737. The court followed the reasoning of the Privy Council in Jamal v Moolla Dawood [1916] 1 A.C. 175, 179. See also Koch Marine Inc v D'Amica Societa di Navigazione ARL (The Elena D'Amica) [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 75, 87–90.
- 1738. cf. below, para.44-396.
- 1739. Harlow and Jones Ltd v Panex (International) Ltd [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 509, 530.
- 1740. Harlow and Jones Ltd v Panex (International) Ltd [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 509 (seller able to find a substitute buyer: resale price evidence of seller's loss); Derby Resources AG v Blue Corinth Marine Co Ltd (The Athenian Harmony) [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 410, 416 (evidence of the market price of the goods at a different place and even at a different time may be the only available means of quantification.) See also Robbins of Putney Ltd v Meek [1971] R.T.R. 345.

- 1741. Gebruder Metelmann GmbH Co KG v NBR (London) Ltd [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 614 (where the physical goods cannot be immediately resold, it may be reasonable for the seller (e.g. when prices are falling) to resell in a "terminal" or "futures" market, which is a mechanism by which he can insulate himself from future changes in market values); Vol.I, paras 26-079 et seq.; Harlow and Jones Ltd v Panex (International) Ltd [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 530, 531.
- 1742. Re Vic Mill Ltd [1913] 1 Ch. 465, 473.
- 1743. [1913] 1 Ch. 465 at 473, 474. cf. see below, para.44-397.
- 1744. cf. Jewelowski v Propp [1944] K.B. 510.
- 1745. cf. below, para.44-396.
- 1746. Re Vic Mill Ltd [1913] 1 Ch. 465; Hill Sons v Edwin Showell Sons Ltd (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 1106 HL.
- 1747. Re Vic Mill Ltd [1913] 1 Ch. 465, 472, 474. cf. Charter v Sullivan [1957] 2 Q.B. 117, 130 (see above, para.44-372, and also paras 26-091 and 26-096). The burden of proof lies on the defaulting buyer to show that the seller could have earned only one profit: Hill Sons v Edwin Showell Sons Ltd (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 1108, 1114. See Thompson Ltd v Robinson (Gunmakers) Ltd [1955] Ch. 177 (see above, para.44-372) (distinguished in Lazenby Garages Ltd v Wright [1976] 1 W.L.R. 459 (seller able to find a substitute buyer for a second-hand car at a higher price: no damages awarded) (see above, para.44-371 n.1705)). See also Sony Computer Entertainment UK Ltd v Cinram Logistics UK Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 955, [2009] Bus. L.R. 529.
- 1748. See Vol.I, paras 24-022 et seq.; George [1971] J.B.L. 109. cf. see below, para.44-389.
- 1749. The seller is not obliged to act "reasonably" in exercising this choice: Tredegar Iron and Coal Co Ltd v Hawthorn Bros Co (1902) 18 T.L.R. 716, 716-717; White and Carter (Councils) Ltd v McGregor [1962] A.C. 413. See Vol.I, para.26-104.
- 1750. Fercometal SARL v Mediterranean Shipping Co SA [1989] A.C. 788.
- 1751. See above, paras 44-368 et seq.
- 1752. It is submitted that the provision in s.50(3) that, when no time is fixed for acceptance, damages should be assessed by reference to the market price "at the time of the refusal to accept" should not apply to an anticipatory breach by the buyer. cf. see below, paras 44-393—44-394.
- 1753. Frost v Knight (1872) L.R. 7 Ex. 111, 113; approved by the House of Lords in Fercometal SARL v Mediterranean Shipping Co SA [1989] A.C. 788; Melachrino v Nickoll and Knight [1920] 1 K.B. 693 (seller's anticipatory repudiation); Millett v Van Heek [1920] 3 K.B. 535, [1921] 2 K.B. 369 CA. It is submitted that the contrary statement in Tredegar Iron and Coal Co (Ltd) v Hawthorn Bros Co (1902) 18 T.L.R. 717, is incorrect. (On the question of discounting any sum not due until a future date, see below, para.44-393; Vol.I, para.26-008.)
- 1754. See the cases cited in the preceding note.
- 1755. Roth Co v Taysen Townsend Co (1895) 73 L.T. 628, 629-630; affirmed on appeal (1896) 12 T.L.R. 211, 212; Tredegar Iron and Coal Co (Ltd) v Hawthorn Bros Co, above; Sudan Import and Export Co (Khartoum) v Société Générale de Compensation [1958] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 310, 316. cf. below, paras 44-393—44-394.
- 1756. The onus of proof is on the buyer. cf. the analogous cases where the seller is in default: Roper

v Johnson (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 167; Garnac Grain Co Inc v HMF Faure and Fairclough Ltd [1968] A.C. 1130.

- 1757. Melachrino v Nickoll and Knight [1920] 1 K.B. 693, 697, 699; Sudan Import and Export Co (Khartoum) Ltd v Société Générale de Compensation [1958] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 310, 316. The same rule applies to the analogous case of the seller's anticipatory breach which is accepted by the buyer: Kaines (UK) Ltd v Österreichische Warrenhandels-gesellschaft, etc. [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1.
- 1758. Although the date of the seller's acceptance of the repudiation may be the date when he ought to have resold (e.g. if there was an available market), it will not always be the same date: Kaines (UK) Ltd v Österreichische etc. [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1 (seller's breach). Incorrect statements are found in earlier cases to the effect that the relevant date is the date of the seller's acceptance of the repudiation.
- 1759. For an illustration, see Tredegar Iron and Coal Co (Ltd) v Hawthorn Bros Co (1902) 18 T.L.R. 716.
- 1760. White and Carter (Councils) Ltd v McGregor; Tredegar Iron and Coal Co (Ltd) v Hawthorn Bros Co, above cf. Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Kamsing Knitting Factory [1979] A.C. 91, 102, 105 (see below, paras 44–393—44–394).
- 1761. Fercometal SARL v Mediterranean Shipping Co SA [1989] A.C. 788, 805.
- 1762. In which case, the buyer is not in breach of his contractual obligations, since his earlier repudiation is a “mere nullity” when not accepted by the seller: Phillpotts v Evans (1839) 5 M. & W. 475, 477; White and Carter (Councils) Ltd v McGregor [1962] A.C. 413, 444.
- 1763. Fercometal SARL v Mediterranean Shipping Co SA [1989] A.C. 788 at 805. See Vol.I, Ch.23.
- 1764. The Fercometal case, above, at 805–806.
- 1765. Where the buyer fails to pay the agreed deposit, and the seller later accepts the buyer's repudiation of the contract, the seller may recover damages measured at the amount of the deposit: Damon Compania Naviera SA v Hapag-Lloyd International SA [1985] 1 W.L.R. 435; Griffon Shipping LLC v Firodi Shipping Ltd (The Griffon) [2013] EWCA Civ 1567, [2014] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 593.
- 1766. See above, paras 44-351, 44-355.
- 1767. On the position in regard to the deposit if the seller does not claim damages, see above, para.44-358.
- 1768. If there was an available market: s.50(3) (see above, paras 44-367 et seq.).
- 1769. See above, para.44-379.
- 1770. RV Ward Ltd v Bignall [1967] 1 Q.B. 534.
- 1771. s.37 (see above, paras 44–291—44–292). See Vitol SA v Phibro Energy AG (The Mathraki) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 84 (buyer's breach caused seller to become liable in damages to the carrier).
- 1772. See above, paras 44-367 et seq.
- 1773. See the doctrine of mitigation: Vol.I, paras 26-079 et seq.
- 1774. See below, paras 44-387, 44–419—44–420. This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides special remedies for buyers in consumer sales contracts, see above paras 38-477 et seq.

1775. e.g. below, paras 44-400, 44-408.

1776. Vol.I, paras 26-107 et seq. The seller may claim expenses on resale, storage charges when the buyer delays in taking delivery, or cancellation expenses (Bem Dis Turk Ticaret SA TR v International Agri Trade Co Ltd [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 619).

1777. See Vol.I, paras 26-227 et seq. (s.54 preserves the right "... to recover interest ...").

1778. See Vol.I, para.26-228; and see above, para.44-366.

1779. See Transfield Shipping Inc v Mercator Shipping Inc (The Achilleas) [2008] UKHL 48, [2009] 1 A.C. 61, discussed above, Vol.I, paras 26-126 et seq.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 6. - Remedies of the Seller

(d) - Other Remedies of the Seller

Miscellaneous remedies of the seller ¹⁷⁸⁰

44-384

When the buyer has possession of the goods but not the property in them, he is the bailee of the seller who may be entitled, either under the terms of the contract ¹⁷⁸¹ or under the ordinary law of contract, to determine the bailment and demand the immediate return of the goods, if the buyer commits a breach of his obligations under the contract. ¹⁷⁸² The appropriate remedies are the proprietary ones for chattels under the law of torts, ¹⁷⁸³ viz proceedings for wrongful interference with the goods ¹⁷⁸⁴ in which the claimant seeks an order for the specific delivery of the goods, ¹⁷⁸⁵ or damages for conversion when the buyer has dealt with the goods in a manner which denies the seller's title to them. ¹⁷⁸⁶ In appropriate cases the seller may also be able to obtain an injunction against the buyer to prevent him from breaking his contractual obligation, e.g. under an exclusive purchasing agreement. ¹⁷⁸⁷

44-385

Remedies for mistake, fraud and misrepresentation are considered in Vol.I, ¹⁷⁸⁸ as is forfeiture of deposits and prepayments. ¹⁷⁸⁹ The seller may have special remedies where he has taken a negotiable instrument ¹⁷⁹⁰ or a documentary credit ¹⁷⁹¹ for the price, or an export credit guarantee ¹⁷⁹², or where the contract contains an arbitration clause. ¹⁷⁹³ The provisions of s.60 should also be noted.

Declarations

44-386

The seller may in appropriate circumstances obtain a declaration setting out his legal rights against the buyer. ¹⁷⁹⁴ For instance, although the seller who retains the property in the goods cannot normally sue for the price, ¹⁷⁹⁵ he may obtain a declaration that the buyer is bound to pay the price upon the seller's fulfilling his obligations, e.g. upon tender of the shipping documents. ¹⁷⁹⁶ But the Court of Appeal ¹⁷⁹⁷ has decided that a declaration of indemnity should not be made where, as a result of the buyer's breach of contract, a third party (e.g. the supplier to the seller) has a potential claim against the seller: if that liability is not too remote a head of loss in the seller's action against the buyer, the proper course is for the court to reserve that head of damages. ¹⁷⁹⁸

^{1780.} s.52 (specific performance) applies in practice only to claims by the buyer (see below, paras 44-440—44-444): Shell Mex Ltd v Elton Cop Dyeing Co Ltd (1928) 34 Com. Cas. 39, 46. (On the wording of the section, it is just possible to argue that the section could apply to the seller's claim to recover the goods.) See also Elliott v Pierson [1948] 1 All E.R. 939, 942; Treitel [1966] J.B.L. 211, 229-230.

- 1781. McEntire v Crossley Bros [1895] A.C. 457, 464; and see above, paras 44–347—44–350.
- 1782. On repudiatory breach, see Vol.I, paras 24-001 et seq. Under the terms of the contract, the seller may also be entitled to “trace” and recover the proceeds of sub-sales made by the buyer: Aluminium Industrie Vaassen BV v Romalpa Aluminium Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 676 (see above, paras 44–174—44–186).
- 1783. e.g. Bishop v Shillito (1818) 2 B. & A. 329n. (conversion); Rew v Payne, Douthwaite Co (1885) 53 L.T. 932. For these actions in general, see Salmond and Heuston, on the Law of Torts, 21st edn (1996), paras 6.1 et seq. cf. below, paras 44–447—44–448.
- 1784. Under the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977.
- 1785. See above, para.44-349; see below, para.44-440.
- 1786. The seller who is entitled to immediate possession may also have these proceedings against strangers who interfere with the possession of the buyer. cf. s.46(4) (see above, para.44-337).
- 1787. Metropolitan Electric Supply Co Ltd v Ginder [1901] 2 Ch. 799. See Vol.I, paras 27-065 et seq.; Sharpe, Injunctions and Specific Performance, looseleaf edition, paras 9–130 to 9–200. cf. below, para.44-445.
- 1788. Vol.I, Chs 6 and 7.
- 1789. Vol.I, paras 26-205 et seq. and 29-068. See also above, para.44-358.
- 1790. See above, paras 34-001 et seq.
- 1791. See above, paras 34-445 et seq.
- 1792. See Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), Ch.24.
- 1793. Above, Ch.32.
- 1794. e.g. Household Machines Ltd v Cosmos Exporters Ltd [1947] K.B. 217; Trans Trust SPRL v Danubian Trading Co Ltd [1952] 2 Q.B. 297 (see below). See Zamir and Woolf, The Declaratory Judgment, 4th edn, and see below, para.44–446 (buyer’s claim).
- 1795. s.49(1) (see above, para.44-359); but he may be entitled to do so under s.49(2) (see above, para.44-364) or an express term in the contract (see above, para.44-365).
- 1796. Polenghi Brothers v Dried Milk Co Ltd (1904) 10 Com. Cas. 42. The court has a discretion to make a negative declaration e.g. to the effect that the claimant is not liable to the defendant in respect of a certain matter: Messier-Dowty Ltd v Sabena SA [2000] 1 W.L.R. 2040 CA.
- 1797. Trans Trust SPRL v Danubian Trading Co Ltd [1952] 2 Q.B. 297.
- 1798. [1952] 2 Q.B. 297. cf. Deeny v Gooda Walker Ltd (No.3) [1995] 4 All E.R. 289 (not a sale of goods case).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 7. - Remedies of the Buyer

(a) - Damages for Non-Delivery

Introduction 1799

44-387

Section 51 of the Act 1800 lays down the following rules:

“(1)

Where the seller wrongfully neglects or refuses to deliver the goods to the buyer, the buyer may maintain an action against the seller for damages for non-delivery. 1801

(2)

The measure of damages is the estimated loss directly and naturally-resulting, in the ordinary course of events, from the seller's breach of contract. 1802

(3)

Where there is an available market for the goods in question the measure of damages is prima facie to be ascertained by the difference between the contract price and the market or current price of the goods at the time or times when they ought to have been delivered or (if no time was fixed) at the time of the refusal to deliver.”

In addition to this section, the buyer may by s.54 also recover interest 1803 and special damages, e.g. for expenses or for unusual loss resulting from special circumstances known to the seller, 1804 or, in certain circumstances, loss of profits under a resale. 1805 A clause in the contract may permit the buyer, upon the seller's default, to repurchase elsewhere, and to claim any loss from the seller. 1806 The minimum legal obligation 1807 of the seller is the basis for assessing damages against him for failure to deliver the goods. 1808 Thus, where the contract was for “200 tons, 5 per cent. more or less”, the margin was held to be at the seller's option and the damages were assessed on the basis of failure to deliver 190 tons. 1809

Damages where there is an available market

44-388

⚠ Section 51(3) spells out the normal application of the rule in s.51(2) to the situation where there is “an available market” for the goods. The normal measure of damages when the seller ¹⁸¹⁰ fails to deliver the goods is the difference between: (a) the market price of the relevant goods at the time fixed for delivery and at the place fixed for delivery; and (b) the contract price. ¹⁸¹¹ One of the grounds for this measure of damages is the doctrine of mitigation ¹⁸¹² since s.51(3) assumes that the reasonable buyer should have gone into the market, immediately following the seller’s breach of contract, and bought substitute goods. ¹⁸¹³ Section 51(3) is only a “prima facie” rule, and will not apply when the parties ought, at the time of making the contract, to have contemplated as reasonable men that the rule would not compensate the buyer for his loss, should the seller fail to deliver. ¹⁸¹⁴ Nor will it apply if it is inappropriate in special circumstances. ¹⁸¹⁵ ⚠

An available market

44-389

The meaning of “available market” has already been considered, ¹⁸¹⁶ which is in general as applicable to the buyer’s claim as it is to the seller’s. ¹⁸¹⁷ The buyer is naturally concerned with an available market in the sense of his ability to buy substitute goods, i.e. the ready capacity of willing sellers to supply quickly goods of the relevant category. ¹⁸¹⁸ Thus if the demand for the goods exceeds the supply, so that some prospective buyers are unable to obtain the goods they wish, the rule in s.51(3) will not apply. ¹⁸¹⁹ An excessive price may show that the supply of the goods is insufficient to constitute an “available market”. ¹⁸²⁰ The willing sellers should be immediately accessible to the buyer, and within a reasonable distance of the place fixed by the contract for delivery. ¹⁸²¹ But the question of the time within which the substitute goods are available may depend on the nature of the goods in question and the business situation of the buyer. ¹⁸²² Where the buyer needed to obtain 15,000 tons of lard for immediate delivery in the United Kingdom, the House of Lords apparently accepted ¹⁸²³ that there could be an available market from the buyer’s point of view when he could buy in the United States of America, for delivery to ports for shipment to the United Kingdom, smaller quantities separately (up to 2,000 tons at a time) and spread over a period. In another case, where the sellers failed to deliver goods of merchantable quality at a United Kingdom port, the Court of Appeal held ¹⁸²⁴ that the fact that there was a market for the purchase of similar goods in India did not require the buyers to mitigate by ordering substitute goods from India.

The relevant time for taking the market price

44-390

Section 51(3) specifies “the time or times when [the goods] ought to have been delivered or (if no time was fixed) ¹⁸²⁵ at the time of the refusal to deliver”. The terms of the contract will normally fix the relevant time. ¹⁸²⁶ When the contract specifies that delivery is to be made by separate instalments at different times, the market price for each instalment is taken separately at the date when the particular instalment should have been delivered. ¹⁸²⁷ Where the contract fixes a period within which the seller is to make delivery of the goods, the time for fixing the market price in the event of non-delivery is the last possible time within that period. ¹⁸²⁸ If the contract requires the seller to deliver the goods after transporting them to a specified destination, it is the normal ¹⁸²⁹ rule that the time and place of the final destination are the time and place which are relevant for fixing the relevant market price. ¹⁸³⁰ If the obligation imposed on the seller is to deliver the goods on a fixed date, it may be assumed that he has the whole of the usual business hours of that day in which to make delivery. ¹⁸³¹ In these circumstances the relevant time for taking the market price under s.51(3) should be the first practical opportunity which the buyer reasonably ¹⁸³² had to buy in the market, e.g. normally on the next business day. ¹⁸³³

No time fixed for delivery ¹⁸³⁴

44-391

A Divisional Court has decided ¹⁸³⁵ that a contract for delivery of the goods within a reasonable time is not a contract with a fixed time for delivery within s.51(3); but the Court of Appeal in the same case expressly reserved its opinion ¹⁸³⁶ on this point. ¹⁸³⁷ It is submitted that the natural application of the concluding words of s.51(3) would be to a contract where the seller was to deliver at the request of the buyer. ¹⁸³⁸ Where delivery is to be made within a reasonable time of the making of the contract, ¹⁸³⁹ the relevant market price should not necessarily be that prevailing at the date of the seller's refusal to deliver but at the time, perhaps later than the refusal, when it would have been reasonable for the seller to deliver. ¹⁸⁴⁰

Postponement of time fixed for delivery

44-392

If the time fixed for delivery was postponed at the seller's request, ¹⁸⁴¹ but he fails to deliver the goods at or before the postponed date of delivery, the breach occurs at the latter date ¹⁸⁴² and the damages should be assessed on the basis of the market price at that date. ¹⁸⁴³ If the request for postponement of the delivery date was made by the buyer, and the seller agreed to the postponement but later repudiated his obligation to deliver, ¹⁸⁴⁴ this repudiation will constitute a breach by the seller, ¹⁸⁴⁵ so that the damages should be calculated by reference to the market price at the date of the seller's repudiation. ¹⁸⁴⁶

The seller's anticipatory repudiation: repudiation accepted ¹⁸⁴⁷

44-393

Where the seller, before the date fixed for delivery of the goods, repudiates his liability under the contract, the buyer has a choice. ¹⁸⁴⁸ If he treats the repudiation as an immediate breach of contract, the relevant date for taking the market price is, prima facie, and subject to the rules on mitigation, the due date for delivery—not the date of the repudiation ¹⁸⁴⁹ nor the date of the buyer's acceptance of the repudiation. ¹⁸⁵⁰ If the buyer's claim is heard before the date for delivery arrives, the court must attempt to estimate what the market price is likely to be at that date, ¹⁸⁵¹ e.g. by taking into account the current trend of the market. However, under the rules of mitigation ¹⁸⁵² the buyer must, following his acceptance of the repudiation, take reasonable steps to reduce his loss, e.g. by buying substitute goods in the market. ¹⁸⁵³ If the seller ¹⁸⁵⁴ fails to produce evidence to show that the buyer ought reasonably to have bought substitute goods at a time earlier than the date fixed for delivery under the contract, the buyer's damages should be calculated with reference to the market price at that date. ¹⁸⁵⁵ But where the seller can prove that the buyer should have mitigated his loss by repurchasing before the due date, the relevant market price is that existing at the date the buyer ought reasonably ¹⁸⁵⁶ to have bought the substitute goods. ¹⁸⁵⁷ However, if the buyer accepts the anticipatory repudiation but does not in fact mitigate by repurchasing in the market when he ought reasonably to have done so, the market price may fall between that date and the date fixed for delivery: it has been held that in these circumstances the buyer's damages will be assessed by reference to the lower price at the later date. ¹⁸⁵⁸

Repudiation not accepted

44-394

If the buyer chooses not to accept the seller's anticipatory repudiation, it is treated as a "nullity" ¹⁸⁵⁹ and the contract continues to bind both parties ¹⁸⁶⁰; the buyer will then await the date fixed for delivery, and the seller will commit a breach of contract only if he then fails to deliver. Thus, the seller may change his mind before the due date and (without breach of contract) fulfil his contractual obligation by delivering on that date ¹⁸⁶¹; or the contract may be terminated without a breach by the seller, e.g. by the seller exercising a right under the contract to cancel it, ¹⁸⁶² or be discharged by frustration. ¹⁸⁶³ The rules on mitigation ¹⁸⁶⁴ do not apply to the buyer until the seller commits an actual breach, and thus the buyer's damages are assessed with reference to the market price at the date of the breach. ¹⁸⁶⁵

The market price

44-395

The methods of ascertaining the market price in a buyer's claim are the same as in a seller's claim ¹⁸⁶⁶; but when the buyer is claiming under s.51(3), the relevant price is the buying price at which the buyer could obtain equivalent goods. ¹⁸⁶⁷ In Williams Bros v Ed T Agius Ltd, ¹⁸⁶⁸ the House of Lords held that where there is evidence of the market price at the date of the seller's breach, the buyer's damages for non-delivery cannot be reduced by reference to the fact that he had actually resold goods of the same description at a price lower than what happened to be the market price at the time fixed for delivery. In these circumstances, the buyer is entitled to fulfil his obligations under the sub-contract by buying equivalent goods in the market at the price current at the time of nondelivery. ¹⁸⁶⁹ Where normal proof of the market price at the date of the seller's breach is not available, other evidence may be relied upon, e.g. the price at which a sub-buyer had agreed to take the goods from the buyer, ¹⁸⁷⁰ or the price in an offer to buy from a third party, or the amount paid by the buyer in compromising disputes relating to the market value of similar goods at the relevant time. ¹⁸⁷¹

Substitute goods obtained at below market price

44-396

Where there is normal proof of the market price at the place and date fixed for delivery, damages for nondelivery should be calculated by reference to that price despite the fact that the buyer had succeeded in obtaining substitute goods at a price lower than that price, or even at no cost to himself (e.g. by gift). ¹⁸⁷² If the buyer does not buy substitute goods in the market immediately following the seller's failure to deliver, his damages should be assessed by reference to the market price at that date despite the fact that the buyer later bought substitute goods at a lower price. ¹⁸⁷³ The position may be different if the buyer later bought the same goods from the seller at a price lower than the market price. In one case, ¹⁸⁷⁴ the buyer justifiably rejected the goods on the ground of their defective quality. There were continuous negotiations ¹⁸⁷⁵ between the parties following this rejection, leading to the buyer finally accepting the same goods from the seller at a reduced price. The Court of Appeal held that the market price rule in s.51(3) did not apply: the buyer had suffered no loss since the price at which he obtained the goods was less than the market price for similar goods at the date of the seller's breach of contract.

Damages for non-delivery in the absence of an available market

44-397

⚠ If there was no available market for goods of the contractual description at the time and place of the seller's failure to deliver (e.g. because the goods were to be specially manufactured ¹⁸⁷⁶) the buyer's damages must be assessed under the general rule of s.51(2), see above. ¹⁸⁷⁷ The assessment must be made on the basis of the value ¹⁸⁷⁸ of the contract goods at the time and place of the breach, ¹⁸⁷⁹ which may be ascertained by any relevant evidence, such as the cost of the nearest equivalent, ¹⁸⁸⁰ ⚠ or a resale price, or the profits which the buyer would have made had he acquired the goods and manufactured them into other articles, as the seller knew that he intended to do. ¹⁸⁸¹ The price under a resale may be put in evidence in order to show "the real value of the goods", despite the fact that the seller did not know of the resale ¹⁸⁸²; but a resale price fixed some months earlier is not satisfactory evidence of the value of the goods at the time of the breach of contract. ¹⁸⁸³ The buyer must mitigate if reasonable steps are open to him, but what is reasonable is a question of fact. ¹⁸⁸⁴ Thus, where the seller tendered to the buyer a bill of lading which was not accurately dated, but the buyer could nevertheless have legally compelled his sub-buyers to accept the goods, the Court of Appeal held that the buyer had not failed to mitigate when he refused to enforce the sub-contracts because to do so in the circumstances would have injured his commercial reputation by giving him a bad name in the trade. ¹⁸⁸⁵

Purchase of near equivalent

44-398

The buyer may ¹⁸⁸⁶ be able to buy substitute goods from another source: in these circumstances, the price at which he reasonably ¹⁸⁸⁷ bought them will be the basis for assessing his damages under the general principle of s.51(2). ¹⁸⁸⁸ Provided that the buyer's mitigating action was reasonable in all the circumstances, ¹⁸⁸⁹ he may recover as damages the reasonable cost of obtaining goods which are the nearest available equivalent in quality and price to goods of the contractual description ¹⁸⁹⁰; he may also claim the extra expense of adapting the substitute goods to suit his requirements, to the extent that goods of the contractual description would suit these requirements. ¹⁸⁹¹ However, the courts are anxious to prevent the buyer from receiving an extra benefit at the seller's expense. If the substitute goods bought by the buyer were later resold by him at an extra profit because they were of better quality or higher value than goods of the contractual description, the extra profit must be set off against the cost of buying the substitute goods which the buyer claims from the defaulting seller. ¹⁸⁹² But if the buyer acts reasonably in buying "near equivalent" goods for his own use (and not for resale nor for the purpose of making a profit through using them), ¹⁸⁹³ it is submitted that he should not be compelled, by a reduction in his damages for their cost, to "pay for" an extra benefit to himself because of some advantage which the substitute goods have over those of the contractual description. ¹⁸⁹⁴

Offers by the seller to mitigate his breach

44-399

The rules of mitigation do not oblige the buyer to accept from the seller goods which do not conform with the contractual standard and which he is therefore entitled to reject. ¹⁸⁹⁵ Thus, where the buyer properly rejects goods on the ground of their defective quality, he is not obliged to accept them when the seller offers them in mitigation of his breach of contract. ¹⁸⁹⁶ However, the buyer may be bound to accept a reasonable offer by the seller to mitigate his breach by supplying goods which are in fact up to the contractual standard, but are to be delivered on different terms so far as the timing and method of payment are concerned. ¹⁸⁹⁷ Thus, where sellers in breach offered to continue deliveries in accordance with the contract if the buyers would pay cash against each delivery in lieu of the agreed credit terms, the Court of Appeal held that it would have been reasonable for the buyers to have accepted the seller's bona fide offer and thus to have mitigated their loss. ¹⁸⁹⁸ Even where the seller fails to take the initiative, it may be reasonable for the buyer to minimise his loss by offering to repurchase the goods at a later date but at the original price. ¹⁸⁹⁹

Loss of profits under sub-sale

44-400

Where a market price at the date of the seller's breach is ascertainable, a higher or lower price at which the buyer has resold the goods to a sub-buyer is generally irrelevant to the assessment of damages for the seller's failure to deliver. ¹⁹⁰⁰ Thus, the seller cannot take advantage of the fact that the buyer, following the seller's failure to deliver, fulfilled his obligations under a resale by using other goods, and thereby made a greater profit on the resale than he would have done if the seller had not broken the contract. ¹⁹⁰¹ In the exceptional cases where the seller is liable for loss of profits or expenses under the sub-sale, his liability is based on the parties' reasonable contemplation of the consequences of a breach of the contract, ¹⁹⁰² and now, presumably, the limitation that there will not be liability if it was unreasonable to think that the buyer was assuming responsibility for such a loss. ¹⁹⁰³ The buyer may have contracted to sell to his sub-buyer the very same goods as he bought from the seller, ¹⁹⁰⁴ or he may have fixed the same delivery date in the contract of resale as in the original contract. ¹⁹⁰⁵ In these two situations, when the seller fails to deliver on the due date, the buyer cannot, despite the presence of an available market, avoid loss under the contract of resale: but the buyer can recover damages for that loss only where the seller should have contemplated, at the time the original contract was made, both that the buyer was, or was probably, ¹⁹⁰⁶ buying for resale, ¹⁹⁰⁷ and that the buyer could perform his obligations under a contract of resale only by delivering the same goods.¹⁹⁰⁸ Thus, in the leading case of Hall v Pim,¹⁹⁰⁹ the buyers bought a cargo under a CIF contract, which expressly contemplated that the buyer might resell during the voyage,¹⁹¹⁰ and that any resale would be of the identifiable or named cargo, which meant that the buyers would necessarily be in default under the sub-contract if the sellers failed to deliver under the original contract.¹⁹¹¹ The buyers were able to recover the difference between the contract price and the resale price since “the seller in such a case contracted to put the buyer in a position to fulfil his sub-contracts if he entered into them”.¹⁹¹² But the actual loss of profits on a resale will be awarded only if the terms of the resale were reasonable and usual.¹⁹¹³

44-401

Although the decision in Hall v Pim has been criticised,¹⁹¹⁴ it is submitted that it is sound in principle.¹⁹¹⁵ It can be distinguished¹⁹¹⁶ from another House of Lords’ decision, Williams v Agius,¹⁹¹⁷ on the ground¹⁹¹⁸ that the original contract of sale in Hall v Pim contemplated that the buyer might resell the identical cargo, so that he would necessarily be in default under the sub-sale if the seller failed to deliver under the original sale; whereas in Williams v Agius the buyer could reasonably, under the rules of mitigation, have gone into the market to procure a substitute. Since the resale was not “for the identical article which was the subject of the principal sale”,¹⁹¹⁹ the buyers were entitled to fulfil their contract of resale by buying in the market at the date of the breach.¹⁹²⁰

Assumption of responsibility

44-402

Following the recent decision of the House of Lords in *Transfield Shipping Inc v Mercator Shipping Inc (The Achilleas)*¹⁹²¹ it now seems that a claimant will not recover, even for losses that were not unlikely to occur in the usual course of things, if the defendant cannot reasonably be regarded as having assumed responsibility for losses of the particular kind suffered. In that case, time-charterers of a vessel that was re-delivered late were held not liable to the owners for loss of the following fixture; their liability was merely to pay the difference between the charter rate and the market rate for the period of delay. One of the principal reasons, at least by Lord Hoffmann (with whom the other members of the majority agreed), was that there was a general understanding in the industry that the charterer would be liable only for the lower amount.¹⁹²² Since *Hall v Pim*¹⁹²³ is said to be a decision that “astonished the Temple and surprised St Mary Axe”,¹⁹²⁴ it might seem to be open to the same criticism as the majority of the House of Lords made of the decision of the lower courts in The Achilleas. In that case only Lord Walker referred to Hall v Pim and he said that “[it] is now generally regarded as a sound decision on its special facts”. However, care must be taken in arguing by analogy to Hall v Pim, and when the facts are not on all fours with that case it must also be asked whether it was reasonable to think that the seller was assuming responsibility for the loss. That applies even if the loss was not unlikely to occur on the ordinary course of things or its likelihood been brought to the seller’s attention.

Loss of future business

44-403

Where, at the time they made their contract, it was within the reasonable contemplation of the parties that defects in the goods supplied by the seller (in breach of his warranty as to their quality) might lead to sub-buyers (customers of the buyer) withdrawing their custom from the buyer, damages have been awarded for loss of profits on “repeat orders” from the subbuyers.¹⁹²⁵ It is submitted that a similar principle should apply where the seller’s failure to deliver causes the buyer a general loss of custom which was within the reasonable contemplation of the parties at the time of contracting, subject again to whether it was reasonable to think that the seller was assuming responsibility for the loss.¹⁹²⁶

Loss of profits on resale: no available market

44-404

If there was no market for the goods in question but the seller knew, ¹⁹²⁷ or ought to have known, ¹⁹²⁸ that the buyer bought the goods with a view to resale, the buyer is entitled to his loss of profit on the resale ¹⁹²⁹ when the seller fails to deliver the goods. ¹⁹³⁰ Thus, if the goods were to be specially manufactured for the buyer, and the seller knew that they were to be resold by him, the buyer's loss of profit is the measure of damages when the seller fails to deliver. ¹⁹³¹

Damages payable by the buyer to the sub-buyer

44-405

Wherever the buyer can recover loss of profits on a resale, ¹⁹³² he is also entitled to recover the loss which he incurred as a result of being made liable in damages to his sub-buyer for breach of the terms of the contract of resale, ¹⁹³³ subject again to whether it was reasonable to think that the seller was assuming responsibility for the loss. ¹⁹³⁴ In Grébert-Borgnis v J and W Nugent ¹⁹³⁵ the seller had actual knowledge, at the time of contracting, that the buyer had already sold the goods on the same terms (except as to price) to a sub-buyer in France, and that the buyer was purchasing the goods in order to fulfil that contract. The Court of Appeal awarded the buyer damages ¹⁹³⁶ in respect of the compensation which the buyer had been compelled to pay to the sub-buyer in proceedings in France. ¹⁹³⁷ Where the buyer can recover damages in respect of compensation paid to his sub-buyer, he may also recover costs reasonably incurred by him in defending a claim made by his sub-buyer. ¹⁹³⁸ The buyer may be entitled to substantial damages from the seller even before he has discharged his liability to the sub-buyer by payment. ¹⁹³⁹ If the sub-buyer has not claimed damages from the buyer by the time the buyer's claim against the original seller is being decided by the court, the buyer may be entitled to a declaration of indemnity in respect of the sub-buyer's potential claim ¹⁹⁴⁰; or the court may reserve this item of the buyer's claim for assessment of damages if and when the sub-buyer's claim is met by the buyer. ¹⁹⁴¹

¹⁷⁹⁹. General principles on the law of damages are discussed in Vol.I, Ch.26. The rules to be discussed in this section are "default rules" in the sense that the parties are free to fashion their own compensatory scheme, subject to the rules on penalties (see Vol.I, paras 26-178 et seq.) and legislative controls such as the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 (see Vol.I, Ch.15). In Bunge SA v Nidera BV [2013] EWHC 84 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 621 Hamblen J. said, in relation to the Default Clause in a GAFTA sale contract, that: "There is nothing unusual about the parties seeking to set out the measure of damages in advance and being confined, for good or bad, to that measure even if it does not reflect the measure that would be available at common law" (at [51]). The penalty rules do not appear to have been argued. However, the judge thought that the measure applied by the Default Clause did not depart from the rules of common law. cf. the Supreme Court held that the clause was not intended to be a complete code for the assessment of damages but covered some of the same field [2015] UKSC 43, [32], [61]. In Novasen SA v Alimenta SA [2013] EWHC 345 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 648, at [18], Popplewell J. said that the Default Clause did not constitute a penalty clause, applying his dicta in Imam-Sadeque v Bluebay Asset Management (Services) Ltd [2012] EWHC 3511 (QB); see above, para.26-184.

¹⁸⁰⁰. This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides special rules in relation to buyer's remedies in consumer sales contracts; see above, paras 38-408 et seq.

¹⁸⁰¹. The buyer may claim damages for non-delivery even where the property in the goods has passed to the buyer; but, whether or not the property in the goods has passed to the buyer, his damages for the seller's failure to deliver should be assessed on the same basis.

¹⁸⁰². This subsection is in terms of the first rule in Hadley v Baxendale (1854) 9 Exch. 341 (see Vol.I, para.26-107). It does not refer to the further limitation that there will not be liability if it was unreasonable to think that the buyer was assuming responsibility for such a loss: see Transfield Shipping Inc v Mercator Shipping Inc (The Achilleas) [2008] UKHL 48, [2009] 1 A.C. 61, discussed above, Vol.I, paras 26-126 et seq. It may be argued that that the question of assumption of responsibility is merely an aspect of the remoteness rule, in which case s.51(2) might prevent it applying in sale of goods contracts, but s.51(2) is probably best viewed as a “default rule” which applies only when the circumstances do not indicate otherwise. If on the facts it was not reasonable for the buyer to think that the seller was assuming responsibility for a particular loss, the loss will not be recoverable even though it would otherwise fall under s.51(2). See above, Vol.I, para.26-126.

1803. Vol.I, paras 26-227 et seq.

1804. See below, paras 44-397, 44-405.

1805. See below, paras 44-400—44-405.

1806. It was held in Simmonds v Millar Co (1898) 15 T.L.R. 100 that, in making such a repurchase, the buyer is not acting as the seller’s agent: hence, the seller cannot claim any profit arising from the fact that the buyer was able to repurchase at a price lower than the contract price.

1807. See Vol.I, paras 26-001, 26-075.

1808. Cockburn v Alexander (1848) 6 C.B. 791, 814.

1809. Re Thornett and Fehr and Yuills Ltd [1921] 1 K.B. 219, 229–230. cf. Bunge Corp New York v Tradax Export SA, Panama [1981] 1 W.L.R. 711; Paula Lee Ltd v Robert Zehil Co Ltd [1983] 2 All E.R. 390 (not a sale of goods case).

1810. By analogy, the same measure of damages has been used when an auctioneer at an auction expressed to be “without reserve” is liable to the highest bidder under a collateral contract that he would sell to that bidder: Barry v Davies (trading as Heathcote Ball Co) [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1962 CA. (the goods were new).

1811. When s.51(3) applies, and the market price at the time of the breach is the same as, or less than, the contract price, the buyer is still entitled to nominal damages: Erie County Natural Gas and Fuel Co Ltd v Carroll [1911] A.C. 105, 117–118 PC (citing Valpy v Oakeley (1851) 16 Q.B. 941; and Griffiths v Perry (1859) 1 E. & E. 680). cf. Charter v Sullivan [1957] 2 Q.B. 117. See also Vol.I, para.26-009. “The contract price/market price differential is not a computation of lost profit”: Glencore Energy UK Ltd v Cirrus Oil Services Ltd [2014] EWHC 87 (Comm) at [98], see above, para.44-368.

1812. See Vol.I, paras 26-079 et seq.

1813. The injured party should ordinarily go out into the market to make a substitute contract to mitigate his loss: Golden Strait Corp v Nippon Yusen Kubishika Kaisha [2007] UKHL 12, [2007] 2 A.C. 353 at [79]; Deutsche Bank AG v Total Global Steel Ltd [2012] EWHC 1201 (Comm) at [160]. The purpose for which the buyer wanted the goods is normally irrelevant: hence, where the buyer is a non-profit-making organisation the ordinary rule still applies: Diamond Cutting-Works Federation Ltd v Triefus Co Ltd [1956] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 216, 227. On the possible relevance of the buyer’s lack of financial resources, see above paras 26-083—26-086.

1814. Bence Graphics International Ltd v Fasson UK Ltd [1998] Q.B. 87 (see below, paras 44-413, 44-415) cf. on the analogous s.50(3): Thompson Ltd v Robinson (Gunmakers) Ltd [1955] Ch. 177 (see above, para.44-371).

1815.  See below, paras 44-400, 44-405. Carbopego-Abastecimento de Combustives SA v Amci Export Corp [2006] EWHC 72 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 736 (date of breach assessment need not be followed if it would give rise to injustice). cf. Golden Strait Corp v Nippon Yusen Kubishika Kaisha (The Golden Victory) [2007] UKHL 12, [2007] 2 A.C. 353; in Bunge SA v

Nidera BV [2013] EWHC 84 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 621 at [55] the judge questioned whether the Golden Victory should apply to one-off sales contracts. An appeal was dismissed by the Court of Appeal on other grounds [203] EWCA Civ 1628, [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 404 (see above, para.26-074). The Supreme Court confirmed that the market price rule should be applied at the date of delivery. But disagreeing with the judge and Court of Appeal applied the principle in The Golden Victory which allows contingencies other than a change in the market price to be taken into account if subsequent events show that they would have reduced the value of performance even without the defaulter's renunciation [2015] UKSC 43, [16], [18], [85]. As to the question whether the subsection is appropriate when the buyer has paid the price to the seller in advance of the time fixed for delivery, and the market price rises between the time when the seller fails to deliver and the judgment in favour of the buyer, see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.17-009; Peel [2016] L.Q.R. 177 and Yip and Goh [2016] J.B.L. 335. On the possible relevance of the buyer's lack of financial resources, see above paras 26-083—26-086.

1816. See above, paras 44-368—44-378.

1817. Lawson (1969) 43 A.L.J. 106, 113.

1818. cf. see above, paras 44-368—44-378. Where goods are in short supply, so that retail sellers have agreed to a fixed price for selling the goods, a "black market" operating in defiance of contractual obligations has been treated as relevant to fix the market price when that is the only source of substitute goods available to the disappointed buyer: Mouatt v Betts Motors Ltd [1959] A.C. 71; British Motor Trade Association v Gilbert [1951] 2 T.L.R. 514. In Air Studios (Lyndhurst) Ltd v Lombard North Central Plc [2012] EWHC 3162 (QB), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 63, it was said that there may be a market for used goods even if the precise model or brand sold was not available: "the availability of equivalent second-hand goods capable of performing the same functions in much the same way would constitute an available market for 'the goods in question'. A buyer of such equivalent goods would be in the same financial position as if the contract had been performed" (at obtain the goods they [93]). However, it was held there was no relevant market when there was only a possibility that equivalent goods would become available within about three months (at [95]).

1819. cf. Charter v Sullivan [1957] 2 Q.B. 117 (the opposite case, where the buyer defaulted in this situation: see above, para.44-372).

1820. cf. O'Hanlan v GW Ry (1865) 6 B. S. 484, 494.

1821. Reasonableness is judged from the buyer's point of view: Garnac Grain Co Inc v HMF Faure and Fairclough Ltd [1968] A.C. 1130; Lesters Leather and Skin Co Ltd v Home and Overseas Brokers Ltd (1948) 64 T.L.R. 569. See above, paras 44-373—44-374, and cf. Hasell v Bagot, Shakes and Lewis Ltd (1911) 13 C.L.R. 374.

1822. cf. Charter v Sullivan [1957] 2 Q.B. 117 at 133-134 (see above, para.44-372).

1823. Garnac Grain Co Inc v HMF Faure and Fairclough Ltd, above, at 1138. cf. the different opinion in the same case in the Court of Appeal: [1966] 1 Q.B. 650, 687. cf. also Petrotrade Inc v Stinnes Handel GmbH [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 142 (see above, para.44-370).

1824. Lesters Leather and Skin Co Ltd v Home and Overseas Brokers Ltd (1948) 64 T.L.R. 569 (snake skins).

1825. Time may be fixed by reference to the happening of a future event, e.g. the arrival of a ship at a certain destination: Melachrino v Nickoll and Knight [1920] 1 K.B. 693, 696 ("if no time was fixed" does not apply to anticipatory repudiation by the seller: see below, paras 44-393—44-394).

1826. See above, paras 44-234, 44-235, 44-244 et seq.

1827. Brown v Muller (1872) L.R. 7 Ex. 319; Roper v Johnson (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 167; Re Voss (1873) L.R. 16 Eq. 155.

- 1828. Leigh v Paterson (1818) 8 Taunt. 540, 541. cf. see above, para.44-374.
- 1829. cf. Van den Hurk v R Martens Co Ltd [1920] 1 K.B. 850 (the parties knew that the goods could not be examined until the time they finally reached the sub-buyer: see below, para.44-410).
- 1830. Melachrino v Nickoll and Knight [1920] 1 K.B. 693; ABD (Metals and Waste) Ltd v Anglo Chemical and Ore Co Ltd [1955] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 456, 466. On the relevant time in FOB and CIF contracts, see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 19-192—19-203, 20-121 et seq., 21-032.
- 1831. cf. Leigh v Paterson (1818) 8 Taunt. 540. cf. also s.29(5) (see above, para.44-247).
- 1832. See Vol.I, para.26-082. In Bear Stearns Bank Plc v Forum Global Equity Ltd [2007] EWHC 1576 (Comm) (a case involving shares rather than goods) Andrew Smith J. held that the question is whether the buyer was reasonable in delaying making a purchase (at [214]).
- 1833. Kaines (UK) Ltd v Österreichische Warrenhandels-gesellschaft, etc. [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1, 11, 12. cf. Gainsford v Carroll (1824) 2 B. & C. 624, 625 (the buyer "might have purchased" similar goods "the very day after the contract was broken"); Roper v Johnson (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 167 at 179 ("... there is no breach until that day has passed"); Gelmini v Moriggia [1913] 2 K.B. 549 (duty to pay on a certain day: the cause of action is complete on the following day). It is submitted that the (obiter) view of Lord Wilberforce in Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Vanden Avenne-Izegem PVBA [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 109, 117, that s.51 provides "for damages to be ascertained by reference to the price as on the last day for performance" should not be followed. (The case concerned a special clause in the contract, referring to "the date of default" which was construed to mean the day immediately following the last day for performance, on the ground that this accorded "with commercial reality and business sense": [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 109 at 117, 129, 131.) See also C Czarnikow Ltd v Bunge Co Ltd [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 202, 205; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, para.17-008. cf. the Golden Strait case [2007] UKHL 12, [2007] 2 A.C. 353 at [79]–[80] (see above, para.26-074).
- 1834. On anticipatory repudiation, see below, paras 44-393—44-394.
- 1835. Millett v Van Heek Co [1920] 3 K.B. 535. cf. see above, para.44-375.
- 1836. [1921] 2 K.B. 369.
- 1837. In Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Kamsing Knitting Factory [1979] A.C. 91, 104, the Privy Council doubted whether the second limb of s.51(3) had any meaning at all.
- 1838. See the dictum of Atkin L.J. [1921] 2 K.B. 369 at 378. But see Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Kamsing Knitting Factory [1979] A.C. 91, 104.
- 1839. Or from some other fixed point of time.
- 1840. Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Kamsing Knitting Factory [1971] A.C. 91. cf. Melachrino v Nickoll and Knight [1920] 1 K.B. 693, 696.
- 1841. But a mere forbearance by the buyer from insisting upon delivery upon the original contractual date for delivery will not entitle him to claim damages on the basis of a higher market price at a later date: Re Voss (1873) L.R. 16 Eq. 155 (distinguishing Ogle v Earl Vane (1868) L.R. 3 Q.B. 272).
- 1842. If a period was fixed within which the postponed delivery was to take place, the last day of the period should be taken: Ogle v Earl Vane (1868) L.R. 3 Q.B. 272. cf. Leigh v Paterson (1818) 8 Taunt. 540, 541. If there was a simple waiver by the buyer of the date fixed for delivery, without a specific date being substituted, a reasonable time (presumably calculated from the due date) is taken as the new date for delivery: Sheik Mohammad Habib Ullah v Bird Co (1921) 37 T.L.R. 405, 406; Johnson Matthey Bankers Ltd v The State Trading Corp of India Ltd [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 427, 436–437.

- 1843. Ogle v Earl Vane (1868) L.R. 3 Q.B. 272 (this decision was mentioned with approval by the House of Lords in Johnson v Agnew [1980] A.C. 367, 401); Blackburn Bobbin Co Ltd v TW Allen Sons Ltd [1918] 1 K.B. 540, 553–554; affirmed on another ground: [1918] 2 K.B. 467; Sheik Mohammad Habib Ullah v Bird Co (1921) 37 T.L.R. 405, 406 (PC, accepting the principles in Tyers v Rosedale and Ferryhill Iron Co Ltd (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 195, where the buyer requested postponement) (see below); the Johnson Matthey case [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 427. cf. above, para.44-376.
- 1844. Unless there was a binding variation (viz supported by consideration), the seller may by giving reasonable notice to the buyer that he retracts his agreement to the postponement, oblige the buyer to accept the goods upon the expiry of that notice: see Vol.I, paras 4-082, 22-040 et seq.
- 1845. Tyers v Rosedale and Ferryhill Iron Co Ltd, above. cf. Hartley v Hymans [1920] 3 K.B. 475 (see above, para.44-376).
- 1846. Tyers v Rosedale and Ferryhill Iron Co Ltd (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 195. If at the request of the buyer, the delivery date was postponed indefinitely, the buyer may give notice fixing the date for delivery a reasonable time thereafter: (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 195 at 199. (As to postponement of delivery by instalments over a period, see also at 199.)
- 1847. cf. above, para.44-380. See George [1971] J.B.L. 109.
- 1848. Fercometal SARL v Mediterranean Shipping Co SA [1989] A.C. 788; Kaines (UK) Ltd v Osterreichische Warrenhandels-gesellschaft, etc. [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1. See Vol.I, para.24-022. The buyer is not bound to act "reasonably" in choosing between his alternative courses of action: see Vol.I, para.26-082.
- 1849. The last part of s.51(3), see above ("if no time was fixed ...") does not apply to an anticipatory breach by the seller: Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Kamsing Knitting Factory [1979] A.C. 91, following Millett v Van Heek Co [1921] 2 K.B. 369 (Court of Appeal affirmed [1920] 3 K.B. 535). See also Bunge SA v Nidera BV [2015] UKSC 43.
- 1850. Garnac Grain Co Inc v HMF Faure and Fairclough Ltd [1968] A.C. 1130, 1140; Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Kamsing Knitting Factory [1979] A.C. 91 at 102. (But in this case, the PC was not asked to consider whether the rules on mitigation applied.) See Note (1978) 41 M.L.R. 486. The earlier authorities were Roper v Johnson (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 167; and Melachrino v Nickoll and Knight [1920] 1 K.B. 693, 699.
- 1851. Melachrino v Nickoll and Knight [1920] 1 K.B. 693, 699; Millett v Van Heek Co [1921] 2 K.B. 369; Roper v Johnson (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 167. cf. The Mihalis Angelos [1971] 1 Q.B. 164. A discount should be made in respect of any accelerated receipt (through the damages award) of any sum due in the future: cf. Lavarack v Woods of Colchester Ltd [1967] 1 Q.B. 278; and see Vol.I, para.26-008.
- 1852. See Vol.I, paras 26-079 et seq. It is not strictly a "duty" to mitigate: the buyer's damages are assessed on the basis that he should have acted reasonably so as to mitigate his loss.
- 1853. Kaines (UK) Ltd v Osterreichische, etc. [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1; Melachrino v Nickoll and Knight [1920] 1 K.B. 697; Garnac Grain Co Inc v HMF Faure and Fairclough Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 650, 687 (on appeal [1968] A.C. 1130, 1140). If the buyer reasonably attempts to mitigate by buying substitute goods in the market, he is entitled to have his damages assessed by reference to the market price at the date of the repurchase, despite the fact that the market price happened to be lower by the time the due date for delivery arrived: Melachrino v Nickoll and Knight [1920] 1 K.B. 693 at 697, 699. cf. Roth Co v Taysen Townsend Co (1896) 12 T.L.R. 211 (buyer's anticipatory refusal: see above, para.44-380). See also Vol.I, para.26-102.
- 1854. The onus of proof is on the contract-breaker: Roper v Johnson (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 167; Garnac Grain Co Inc v HMF Faure and Fairclough Ltd [1968] A.C. 1130.
- 1855. Roper v Johnson, above; Garnac Grain Co Inc v HMF Faure and Fairclough Ltd, above, at

- 1140; Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Kamsing Knitting Factory [1979] A.C. 91 at 105. (The seller in this case did not argue that the buyer should have mitigated by buying in the market between the date he accepted the seller's repudiation and the date when delivery could have been required under the contract: the market price was falling between the two dates.)
- 1856. The buyer is allowed a "reasonable time" after his acceptance of the seller's breach before he must repurchase: Kaines (UK) Ltd v Osterreichische, etc. [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1 at 11, 12 (buyer should have repurchased on the next day). cf. Tredegar Iron and Coal Co Ltd v Hawthorn Bros Co (1902) 18 T.L.R. 716.
- 1857. Kaines (UK) Ltd v Osterreichische, etc. [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1; Melachrino v Nickoll and Knight [1920] 1 K.B. 693 at 697, 699. cf. above, para.44-380.
- 1858. This was the actual decision in Melachrino v Nickoll and Knight [1920] 1 K.B. 693, 698 (although the judgment contains many other propositions cited in this paragraph).
- 1859. Phillpotts v Evans (1839) 5 M. & W. 475, 477; White and Carter (Councils) Ltd v McGregor [1962] A.C. 413, 444.
- 1860. Fercometal SARL v Mediterranean Shipping Co SA [1989] A.C. 788.
- 1861. Leigh v Paterson (1818) 8 Taunt. 540.
- 1862. cf. the Fercometal case [1989] A.C. 788.
- 1863. Avery v Bowden (1855) 5 E. & B. 714; affirmed (1856) 6 E. & B. 953.
- 1864. During the interval, the buyer may at any time decide to accept the seller's repudiation (provided it has not been retracted by the seller), whereupon the rules on mitigation will apply.
- 1865. Leigh v Paterson, above (damages assessed by reference to the market price on the last day of the period fixed for delivery); Brown v Muller (1872) L.R. 7 Ex. 319; Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Kamsing Knitting Factory [1979] A.C. 91, 104. See also the explanation of C Sharpe Co Ltd v Nosawa [1917] 2 K.B. 814 in Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 19-195—19-197. The buyer's damages cannot be reduced because the market price was lower at the date of the repudiation (or at any date between the repudiation and the due date for delivery): Tredegar Iron and Coal Co Ltd v Hawthorn Bros Co (1902) 18 T.L.R. 716 (buyer's breach).
- 1866. See above, paras 44-377—44-378 (also paras 44-368—44-375).
- 1867. See above, para.44-373. In Air Studios (Lyndhurst) Ltd v Lombard North Central Plc [2012] EWHC 3162 (QB), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 63 it was said that there may be a market for used goods even if the precise model or brand sold was not available: "the availability of equivalent second-hand goods capable of performing the same functions in much the same way would constitute an available market for 'the goods in question'. A buyer of such equivalent goods would be in the same financial position as if the contract had been performed" (at [93]). "The best evidence of market value is constituted by arm's length deals actually made in the market. The last transaction effected effectively sets the benchmark": Glencore Energy UK Ltd v Cirrus Oil Services Ltd [2014] EWHC 87 (Comm) at [70]. The relevant market price may also depend on the relevant market relationship, e.g. whether between wholesaler and retailer, or between retailer and private buyer, or any other relationship. But the individual characteristics of the claimant (e.g. his personal skill in negotiating) are not relevant: Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc v MacLaine Watson Co Ltd (No.2) [1990] 3 All E.R. 723, 726.
- 1868. [1914] A.C. 510 (see below, para.44-401).
- 1869. Even if the sub-sale was of the identical goods bought by the buyer from the defaulting seller, the buyer's damages are nevertheless assessed with reference to the market price, since the buyer's liability in damages to the sub-buyer might easily exceed the price in the sub-sale: [1914] A.C. 510 at 523. But cf. Bence Graphics International Ltd v Fasson UK Ltd [1998] Q.B. 87 (see below, paras 44-413, 44-415).

- 1870. cf. Williams Bros v Ed T Agius Ltd, above. But a sub-sale with a different place of delivery, or under different terms, may not be relevant: Ayreh v Lawrence Kostoris Son Ltd [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 63, 72–73. cf. Macklin v Newbury Sanitary Laundry (1919) 63 S.J. 337 (buyer's breach: see above, para.44-377).
- 1871. Hong Guan Co Ltd v R Jumabhoy Sons Ltd [1960] A.C. 684, 703–704. The court may also infer the approximate market price on a given date from evidence that there was a steady decline in that price between an earlier and a later date: Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Kamsing Knitting Factory [1979] A.C. 91, 106.
- 1872. The buyer's opportunity to buy at the lower price did not arise only because of the seller's breach: see Joyner v Weeks [1891] 2 Q.B. 31, 34; and cf. Campbell Mostyn (Provisions) Ltd v Barnett Trading Co [1954] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 65. cf. also above, para.44-377; Erie County Natural Gas and Fuel Co Ltd v Carroll [1911] A.C. 105 (see below, para.44-398).
- 1873. This reasoning is supported by the analogous case of the buyer's breach: Campbell Mostyn (Provisions) Ltd v Barnett Trading Co, above; Jamal v Moolla Dawood [1916] 1 A.C. 175, 179 (on which cases, see above, paras 44-373—44-374).
- 1874. R Pagnan Fratelli v Corbisa Industrial Agropacuaria [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1306 (distinguished in Mobil North Sea Ltd v PJ Pipe Valve Co [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 289). cf. Bence Graphics International Ltd v Fasson UK Ltd [1998] Q.B. 87 (see below, paras 44-413, 44-415). cf. also Nimmo v Habton Farms [2003] 1 All E.R. 1136 (breach of warranty of authority).
- 1875. The final purchase was not “an independent or disconnected transaction”: [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1306 at 1315. The decision in Pagnan would not preclude a claim for any consequential loss caused by the delay between the date fixed for delivery in the original contract and the date of actual delivery under the new arrangements.
- 1876. Hinde v Liddell (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 265. The effect of governmental regulation of the market may also mean that there is no available market in which the buyer can obtain substitute goods: J Leavey Co Ltd v Geo H Hirst Co Ltd [1944] K.B. 24, 28.
- 1877. The fact that there is no available market in which the buyer can purchase the goods does not mean that the buyer's loss should be measured by the profit the buyer might have made from the goods: Air Studios (Lyndhurst) Ltd v Lombard North Central Plc [2012] EWHC 3162 (QB), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 63 at [100]. Nor does the fact that the buyer has not purchased a substitute mean that it has suffered no loss (at [102]). The buyer's damages should be assessed by reference to the cost of procuring the nearest equivalent goods (at [103]).
- 1878. The “value” of goods for which no substitutes are available may, in appropriate circumstances, include an element of subjective or idiosyncratic value: Harris, Ogus and Phillips (1979) 95 L.Q.R. 581 (applied, but not in the context of a sale of goods, in Ruxley Electronics and Construction Ltd v Forsyth [1996] A.C. 344 at 360; and in Farley v Skinner [2001] UKHL 49, [2002] 2 A.C. 732 at [21]) (see Vol.I, paras 26-140 et seq.).
- 1879. Borries v Hutchinson (1865) 18 C.B.(N.S.) 445, 465; Elbinger Actien-Gesellschaft v Armstrong (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 473, 476; Hinde v Liddell (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 265.
- 1880.  Hughes v Pendragon Sabre Ltd (t/a Porsche Centre Bolton) [2016] EWCA Civ 18.
- 1881. J Leavey Co Ltd v George H Hirst Co Ltd [1944] K.B. 24 at 29.
- 1882. Grebert-Borgnis v J W Nugent (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 85, 89–90; The Arpad [1934] P. 189, 210, 219–221, 230 (breach of contract of carriage treated as analogous to seller's failure to deliver: at 223, 233).
- 1883. The Arpad [1934] P. 189, 210 (five months earlier).
- 1884. Payzu Ltd v Saunders [1919] 2 K.B. 581 at 588, 589. cf. The Solholt [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 605

(see below, para.44-399). See Vol.I, para.26-094.

- 1885. James Finlay Co Ltd v NV Kwik Hoo Tong HM [1929] 1 K.B. 400, 410, 415, 418. Compare the case in which the victim of a breach pays compensation to a sub-purchaser though not legally obliged to do so: above, para.26-033 n.186.
- 1886. It is submitted that (despite the assumption to the contrary in C Sharpe Co Ltd v Nosawa [1917] 2 K.B. 814, 820) the buyer is not obliged to buy the nearest equivalent in mitigation of his loss: see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.17-025.
- 1887. The buyer has a reasonable time to decide whether or not to buy substitute goods: C Sharpe Co Ltd v Nosawa [1917] 2 K.B. 814, 820.
- 1888. cf. the similar rule in the case of a seller's claim for damages (see above, para.44-379).
- 1889. Hinde v Liddell (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 265, 268, 270; Erie County Natural Gas and Fuel Co Ltd v Carroll [1911] A.C. 105, 117. cf. Le Blanche v LNW Ry (1876) 1 C.P.D. 286, 302. It will normally be unreasonable for the buyer to order the manufacture of substitute goods, where none are readily available: Elbinger Actien-Gesellschaft v Armstrong (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 473; Sealace Shipping Co Ltd v Oceanvoice Ltd (The Alecos M) [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 120 (criticised by Treitel (1991) 107 L.Q.R. 364) ("spare propeller" not included in sale of ship).
- 1890. Hinde v Liddell (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 265. See also Blackburn Bobbin Co Ltd v TW Allen Sons Ltd [1918] 1 K.B. 540, 554 (the appeal was decided on another ground: [1918] 2 K.B. 467). The nearest equivalent may be of superior quality and so higher in price than the contract goods: Hinde v Liddell, above; Diamond Cutting Works v Treifus [1956] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 216. cf. Intertradex SA v Lesieur-Tourteaux SARL [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 509, 519. cf. also Le Blanche v LNW Ry (1876) 1 C.P.D. 286.
- 1891. Blackburn Bobbin Co Ltd v TW Allen Sons Ltd [1918] 1 K.B. 540, 554.
- 1892. Hinde v Liddell (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. at 270; Erie County Natural Gas and Fuel Co Ltd v Carroll, above (see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.17-024).
- 1893. cf. British Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co Ltd v Underground Electric Rys [1912] A.C. 673 (see below, para.44-414).
- 1894. cf. Harbutt's "Plasticine" Ltd v Wayne Tank and Pump Co Ltd [1970] 1 Q.B. 447. (This decision has been overruled on another point: Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827.)
- 1895. See above, para.44-066.
- 1896. Heaven and Kesterton Ltd v Etablissements Francois Albiac Cie [1956] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 316, 321. cf. R Pagnan Fratelli v Corbisa Industrial Agropacuaria [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1306 (see above, para.44-396). The buyer may also be required to act reasonably in considering an offer by the seller to modify defective goods: Manton Hire and Sales Ltd v Ash Manor Cheese Co Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 548 (on the facts the buyer had not acted unreasonably).
- 1897. Payzu Ltd v Saunders [1919] 2 K.B. 581; Heaven and Kesterton Ltd v Etablissements Francois Albiac Cie [1956] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 321. cf. Houndsditch Warehouse Co Ltd v Waltex Ltd [1944] K.B. 579 (genuine offer by seller to accept return of goods which buyer alleged not to correspond with sample).
- 1898. Payzu Ltd v Saunders [1919] 2 K.B. 581. (The goods could not be obtained from any other source; nor was there any doubt about the seller's ability and willingness to fulfil his offer.) cf. above, para.26-094 and the criticism of Bridge (1989) 105 L.Q.R. 398. cf. where the seller refused to "guarantee" a substituted delivery date: ABD (Metals and Waste) Ltd v Anglo-Chemical Ore Co Ltd [1955] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 456.

- 1899. Sotiros Shipping Inc and Aeeco Maritime SA v Sameiet Solholt (The Solholt) [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 605 (the buyer had cancelled the original contract on the ground of the seller's failure to deliver by the agreed date. The hypothetical offer by the buyer would have been without prejudice to his claim for damages for the delay).
- 1900. Williams Bros Ltd v Ed T Agius Ltd [1914] A.C. 510; James Finlay Co Ltd v NV Kwik Hoo Tong HM [1929] 1 K.B. 400, 411; The Arpad [1934] P. 189, 214, 223, 230; Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders and Shippers Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 459, 489–490. Where the buyer is a trader, most sellers would be able to contemplate the possibility of resale: The Arpad [1934] P. 189, 230; Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders and Shippers Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 489. cf. however, Bence Graphics International Ltd v Fasson UK Ltd [1998] Q.B. 87 (see below, paras 44–413, 44–415). But the Bence Graphics case was distinguished in Bear Stearns Bank Plc v Forum Global Equity Ltd [2007] EWHC 1576 (Comm) (a case involving shares rather than goods) on the grounds that the Bear Stearns case was a case of non-delivery rather than of delivery of defective goods (at [208]).
- 1901. Sheik Mohammad Habib Ullah v Bird Co (1921) 37 T.L.R. 405 PC.
- 1902. Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 422, 435–436. (Such contemplation depends on the knowledge, actual or imputed, of the seller at the time of the contract: see Vol.I, paras 26–107 et seq.)
- 1903. Transfield Shipping Inc v Mercator Shipping Inc (The Achilleas) [2008] UKHL 48, [2009] 1 A.C. 61; see below, para.44–402.
- 1904. Williams Bros v Ed T Agius Ltd [1914] A.C. 510 at 523; The Arpad [1934] P. 189 at 215.
- 1905. Patrick v Russo-British Grain Export Co Ltd [1927] 2 K.B. 535, 541; Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders and Shippers Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 459 at 489–490.
- 1906. Re R and H Hall Ltd and WH Pim (Junior) Co's Arbitration [1928] All E.R. Rep. 763, 766, 767, 769; Patrick v Russo-British Grain Export Co Ltd [1927] 2 K.B. 535, 540.
- 1907. e.g. Frank Mott Co Ltd v Muller Co (London) Ltd (1922) 13 Ll.L. Rep. 492; Household Machines Ltd v Cosmos Exporters Ltd [1947] K.B. 217, 219. The seller may even know that the buyer has already entered into an existing sub-contract and was buying in order to fulfil that particular contract: Aryeh v Lawrence Kistoris Son Ltd [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 63, 68.
- 1908. Re R and H Hall Ltd and WH Pim (Junior) Co's Arbitration [1928] All E.R. Rep. 763; Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders and Shippers Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 459 at 489–490; Aryeh v Lawrence Kistoris Son Ltd [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 63, 67–68, 72. cf. Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 422 at 436 (see below, para.44–435).
- 1909. Re R and H Hall Ltd and WH Pim (Junior) Arbitration [1928] All E.R. Rep. 763. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 17–030—17–033.
- 1910. [1928] All E.R. Rep. 763 at 765, 766, 768. This type of contract might, depending on the circumstances, be one where the sub-buyers are “identified” as third parties intended to have an enforceable claim against the seller under the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999: see above, Vol.I, para.18–090; see below, paras 44–428, 44–437.
- 1911. [1928] All E.R. Rep. 763 at 766, 768, 769, 771.
- 1912. [1928] All E.R. Rep. 763 at 765.
- 1913. [1928] All E.R. Rep. 763 at 767, 768, 773. In Household Machines Ltd v Cosmos Exporters Ltd [1947] K.B. 217, where there was no available market for the goods, the damages were less than the actual profit, which was held to be “too high” (at 219). (This was applied in Coastal International Trading Ltd v Maroil AG [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 92, 96.) cf. Horne v Midland Ry (1872) L.R. 7 C.P. 583; (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 131 (delayed delivery under contract of carriage);

Victoria Laundry (Windsor) Ltd v Newman Industries Ltd [1949] 2 K.B. 528 (delayed delivery under contract of sale: see below, para.44-408); The Arpad [1934] P. 189, 201.

- 1914. In the Court of Appeal the decision has been said to be dependent on the special fact that the contract expressly provided for resale: James Finlay Co Ltd v NV Kwik Hoo Tong HM [1929] 1 K.B. 400, 410–412, 417–418. (cf. at 415, where Greer L.J. approved the decision.)
- 1915. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), at paras 17–032–17–033. It is also significant that in Koufos v C Czarnikow Ltd [1969] 1 A.C. 350, the House of Lords frequently referred to statements made in Hall v Pim on the general question of remoteness of damage in contract, without any suggestion of disapproval of the actual decision in the case: above at 387–388, 405–406, 410, 414, 424. (See Vol.I, paras 26-115–26-117).
- 1916. This was considered to be a difficulty in James Finlay Co Ltd v NV Kwik Hoo Tong HM [1929] 1 K.B. 400, 410, 415, 417.
- 1917. Williams Bros v Ed T Agius Ltd [1914] A.C. 510 (see Benjamin at paras 17–032–17–033).
- 1918. A further distinction is that in Hall v Pim the buyer, by reference to a higher resale price, claimed as damages a larger sum than “the market price at the breach” test would have given him; whereas in Williams v Agius the innocent buyer claimed damages on the basis of this, the normal test, but the defaulting seller argued that the buyer was entitled only to a reduced sum because the resale price happened to be lower than the market price at breach. But cf. Bence Graphics International Ltd v Fasson UK Ltd [1998] Q.B. 87 (see below, paras 44-413, 44-415).
- 1919. [1914] A.C. 510, 523; The Arpad [1934] P. 189, 214, 215.
- 1920. Their Lordships followed Rodocanachi v Milburn (1886) 18 Q.B.D. 67 (“That case rests on the sound ground that it is immaterial what the buyer is intending to do with the purchased goods”: [1914] A.C. 510, 530–531).
- 1921. [2008] UKHL 48, [2009] 1 A.C. 61, discussed above, Vol.I, paras 26-126 et seq.
- 1922. See above, Vol.I, para.26-128.
- 1923. Re R and Hall Ltd and WH Pim (Junior) Co's Arbitration [1928] All E.R. Rep. 763.
- 1924. James Finlay & Co Ltd v Kwik Hoo Tong HM [1929] 1 K.B. 400, 417, per Sankey L.J. (echoing a submission of counsel); quoted by Lord Walker in Transfield Shipping Inc v Mercator Shipping Inc (The Achilles) [2008] UKHL 48 at [64].
- 1925. GKN Centrax Gears Ltd v Matbro Ltd [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 555, 573–574, 579–580 (not following Simon v Pawsons and Leafs Ltd (1933) 38 Com. Cas. 151, 158). See below, para.44-425. cf. Jackson v Royal Bank of Scotland [2005] UKHL 3, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 377 (loss of repeat orders caused by breach of obligation to maintain confidence; see Vol.I, para.26-138).
- 1926. See previous paragraph.
- 1927. e.g. Frank Mott Co Ltd v Muller Co (London) Ltd (1922) 13 Ll.L. Rep. 492. See also Grébert-Borignis v J and W Nugent (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 85, 89.
- 1928. Patrick v Russo-British Grain Export Co Ltd [1927] 2 K.B. 535, 541. See also above, para.44-400.
- 1929. The sub-contract must be of a usual type, and the profit must be reasonable in amount: see above, para.44-400.
- 1930. Patrick v Russo-British Grain Export Co Ltd [1927] 2 K.B. 535, 541; Household Machines Ltd v Cosmos Exports Ltd [1947] K.B. 217, 219; J Leavey Co Ltd v George H Hirst Co Ltd [1944] K.B. 24. See also Satef-Huttenes Albertus SpA v Paloma Tercera Shipping Co SA (The Pegase)

[1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 175, 183–184; Coastal (Bermuda) Petroleum Ltd v VTT Vulcan Petroleum SA (No.2) (The Marine Star) [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 629.

1931. Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders and Shippers Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 459, 489.

1932. See above, para.44-400.

1933. Re R and H Hall Ltd and WH Pim (Junior) Co's Arbitration [1928] All E.R. Rep. 763 at 767, 769 HL, following Grébert-Borgnis v J and W Nugent (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 85. The breach of the original contract must have been the cause of the breach of the contract of resale.

1934. See above, para.44-402 and, more generally, Vol.I, paras 26-126 et seq.

1935. See above, following Elbinger Actien-Gesellschaft v Armstrong (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 473: see below, para.44-410.

1936. In addition to the buyer's loss of profit under the contract of resale.

1937. The French award was not "necessarily" the sum to be awarded: (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 85, 93. The seller would not be liable in respect of unusual clauses in the contract of resale, of which he had no knowledge, e.g. a penalty clause: (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 85 at 90. It is submitted that the Grébert-Borgnis decision is to be preferred to that in Borries v Hutchinson (1865) 18 C.B.(N.S.) 445.

1938. cf. Agius v Great Western Colliery Co [1899] 1 Q.B. 413, 420 (analogous case where seller delayed delivery: see below, para.44-408); see also the analogous cases where the goods were defective in quality (see below, paras 44-411—44-435).

1939. Total Liban SA v Vitol Energy SA [2001] Q.B. 643 (referring to various techniques available to prevent any "windfall" recovery by the buyer).

1940. Household Machines Ltd v Cosmos Exporters Ltd [1947] 1 K.B. 217. (But see above, para.44-386.)

1941. Trans Trust SPRL v Danubian Trading Co [1952] 2 Q.B. 297, 303, 307; Total Liban SA v Vitol Energy SA [2001] Q.B. 643. cf. Deeny v Gooda Walker Ltd (No.3) [1995] 4 All E.R. 289 (not a sale of goods case). In another context it has been held that reasonable payments made when there was no obligation to make them may be recovered.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 7. - Remedies of the Buyer

(b) - Damages for Delay in Delivery

Delay in delivery

44-406

The Act contains no provision which expressly provides for the assessment of the buyer's damages when the seller fails to deliver on the date fixed for delivery, but the buyer accepts delivery of the goods from the seller at a later date. ¹⁹⁴² Where there is an available market ¹⁹⁴³ for the goods, the usual measure of the buyer's damages ¹⁹⁴⁴ is the difference between (a) their market value at the time and place ¹⁹⁴⁵ fixed by the terms of the contract for delivery; and (b) their market value at the time when (and the place where) ¹⁹⁴⁶ the goods were in fact delivered to the buyer. ¹⁹⁴⁷ Apart from consequential losses, such as extra or wasted expenses ¹⁹⁴⁸ or loss of profits, ¹⁹⁴⁹ this sum should put the buyer into the financial position he would have been in if the seller had fulfilled his contractual obligation. Where there is no available market for the goods, the court may use any relevant test to arrive at the "value" of the goods at the time fixed for delivery and at the actual date of delivery. Thus, when the goods were to be delivered at Hull, whence the buyer (to the seller's knowledge) intended to send them to a sub-buyer on the Continent, the value was said to be dependent on the relative cost of freight and insurance on the transport to the Russian destination at the different times. ¹⁹⁵⁰

Resale prices are irrelevant

44-407

The market prices at the due date for delivery and at the actual date of delivery cannot be proved (except in the absence of other evidence of market value) by either the contract price or by the price under a resale of the goods to a sub-buyer. Whether the resale price is higher or lower than the market price at the date of actual delivery, the buyer's damages must be calculated exclusively by reference to the market prices at the due date and at the actual date, since the buyer could have bought other goods to fulfil his obligations under the sub-contract and the market price of the goods delivered late by the seller would then be relevant to those goods left on his hands at that date. ¹⁹⁵¹

Loss of profit caused by delay in delivery

44-408

Where the seller makes a late delivery of a profit-earning chattel, ¹⁹⁵² the buyer may (in the absence of an available market for such a chattel ¹⁹⁵³) recover damages for loss of use, based on the normal use made of such a chattel, not on an exceptional use unknown to the seller. ¹⁹⁵⁴ The buyer's claim is for "user profits", viz the loss of profits which he would have made from use of the goods during the period after the goods should have been delivered until the actual date of delivery. ¹⁹⁵⁵ In Victoria Laundry (Windsor) Ltd v Newman Industries Ltd ¹⁹⁵⁶ the plaintiffs were launderers and dyers who wished to expand their business by installing a larger boiler. The defendants were engineers who agreed to sell them a large boiler, and a delivery date was fixed. While the boiler was being dismantled for delivery it was damaged, and delivery to the plaintiffs was not made until five months after the delivery date. The plaintiffs sued for damages for delay in delivery ¹⁹⁵⁷ and claimed loss of profits in respect of: the large number of new customers they could have taken on had the boiler been installed on the due date; and the amount which they could have earned under special, "highly lucrative", dyeing contracts with the Ministry of Supply.

(1)

(2)

The defendants knew that the plaintiffs were launderers and that they wanted the boiler for immediate use; the Court of Appeal held that with such knowledge the reasonable man could have foreseen that delay in delivery would lead to some loss of business (and therefore loss of profits) though he would not have foreseen the loss of profits under the special contracts with the Ministry, since these were special circumstances not within the defendant's actual knowledge. Hence, the plaintiffs could not recover the actual loss they had incurred under these contracts, but only the normal loss of business ¹⁹⁵⁸ in respect of dyeing and laundering contracts to be reasonably expected. ¹⁹⁵⁹

Contemplated loss as limit on liability

44-409

In Cory v Thames Ironworks and Shipbuilding Co Ltd ¹⁹⁶⁰ coal merchants bought the hull of a floating boom derrick from the sellers, who finally delivered it six months late. The normal use of the hull would have been as a coal store, but the buyers (unknown to the sellers) intended to use it for a new method of transferring coal from colliers to barges. Some loss of profits from delay was within the reasonable contemplation of the parties at the time the contract was made, and the buyers actually lost profits through the delay; but their recovery was limited to the extent of the profits which would have been made through the method of using the hull which the seller could reasonably have contemplated. The court did not hold that no loss of the reasonably contemplated type in fact occurred merely because the buyers did not intend to earn profits by the normal use of the hull; the buyers intended to earn profits by its use, and they had actually lost greater profits than they claimed.

Loss on resale

44-410

Normally, the buyer cannot recover his loss of profits under a resale when the seller makes a late delivery under the original contract. ¹⁹⁶¹ Where, however, the seller actually ¹⁹⁶² contemplated a resale by the buyer, he will be liable for the buyer's loss of profits under the resale caused by the seller's failure to deliver on time ¹⁹⁶³; in these circumstances, the seller may be liable to the buyer in respect of the latter's liability in damages to his sub-buyer caused by the seller's delay. ¹⁹⁶⁴

Again, there will now be liability only if it was reasonable to think that the seller was assuming responsibility for the loss. ¹⁹⁶⁵

¹⁹⁴². The case probably falls under the general provisions of s.53(2). See Taylor Sons Ltd v Bank of Athens (1922) 91 L.J.K.B. 776, 778. cf. s.54 (see above, para.44-383).

- 1943. On the meaning of this term, and the evidence to prove the market price, see above, paras 44-368—44-378.
- 1944. This is the same as in cases of delay in the carriage of goods by sea: see Koufos v C Czarnikow Ltd (The Heron II) [1969] 1 A.C. 350, especially at 400, 407, 417–418. (cf. at 392, 393, 427).
- 1945. Aryeh v Lawrence Kostoris Son Ltd [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 63, 73.
- 1946. In the cases cited in the next footnote, the place is assumed to be the same place as in (a).
- 1947. Addax Ltd v Arcadia Petroleum Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 493. See also Borries v Hutchinson (1865) 18 C.B.(N.S.) 445, 465; Elbinger Actien-Gesellschaft v Armstrong (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 473, 477; Koufos v C Czarnikow Ltd [1969] 1 A.C. 350 at 417–418; Taylor Sons Ltd v Bank of Athens (1922) 91 L.J.K.B. 776. It could be argued that the seller, by tendering the goods late, has estopped himself from relying on s.51(3). In Galaxy Energy International Ltd v Murco Petroleum Ltd [2013] EWHC 3720 (Comm), [2013] C.L.C. 1007 a spread of prices provided by Platts gave the best evidence of market value.
- 1948. e.g. extra freight and insurance incurred by the buyer: Borries v Hutchinson, above. See also Smeed v Foord (1859) 1 E. & E. 602; Hydraulic Engineering Co Ltd v McHaffie Goslett Co (1878) 4 Q.B.D. 670; Watson v Gray (1900) 16 T.L.R. 308; Steam Herring Fleet Ltd v VS Richards Co Ltd (1901) 17 T.L.R. 731; John M Henderson Co Ltd v Montague L Meyer Ltd (1941) 46 Com. Cas. 209; Aruna Mills Ltd v Dhanrajmal Gobindram [1968] 1 Q.B. 655. See Vol.I, paras 26-022 et seq.
- 1949. See below, paras 44-408—44-410.
- 1950. Borries v Hutchinson (1865) 18 C.B.(N.S.) 445. See also Fletcher v Tayleur (1855) 17 C.B. 21.
- 1951. Slater v Hoyle Smith Ltd [1920] 2 K.B. 11, 23–24, per Scrutton L.J., whose criticism of the inconsistent decision of the Privy Council in Wertheim v Chicoutimi Pulp Co [1911] A.C. 301 should, it is submitted, be accepted. But cf. Bence Graphics International Ltd v Fasson UK Ltd [1998] Q.B. 87 (see below, paras 44-413, 44-415). (See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.17–039.) In Wertheim the Privy Council assessed the damages as the difference between: (a) the market value at the port of delivery at the due date for delivery; and (b) the actual price obtained on their resale. But the buyer was not bound to fulfil the sub-contracts by delivering the specific goods which he received under the original contract (cf. above, para.44-401). It is submitted that the choice of the buyer not to repurchase in the market on the date of the breach should not benefit the defaulting seller any more than it should harm him by increasing the damages payable by him if the resale price is below the market price at that date. cf. the analogous position in Campbell Mostyn (Provisions) Ltd v Barnett Trading Co Ltd [1954] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 65 (see above, para.44-378).
- 1952. Or part of a profit-earning chattel: Victoria Laundry (Windsor) Ltd v Newman Industries Ltd [1949] 2 K.B. 528, 543–544; Elbinger Actien-Gesellschaft v Armstrong (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 473, 477.
- 1953. Where there is an available market, the buyer should normally be able to avoid loss of profits by immediately purchasing or hiring a substitute. cf. Smeed v Foord (1859) 1 E. & E. 602.
- 1954. Victoria Laundry (Windsor) Ltd v Newman Industries Ltd [1949] 2 K.B. 528. See also Cory v Thames Ironworks and Shipbuilding Co Ltd (1868) L.R. 3 Q.B. 181 (see below, para.44-409). cf. Re Trent and Humber Co (1868) L.R. 4 Ch. App. 112, 117; Fletcher v Tayleur (1855) 17 C.B. 21; Watson v Gray (1900) 16 T.L.R. 308; Satef-Huttenes Albertus SpA v Paloma Tercera Shipping Co SA (The Pegase) [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 175 (carrier's delay).
- 1955. The earlier cases concerned delay in delivery of ships or vessels which clearly were intended to earn profits for their owners, e.g. Cory v Thames Ironworks Co, above, Re Trent and Humber Co, above; Steam Herring Fleet Ltd v VS Richards Co Ltd (1901) 17 T.L.R. 731; or some essential part of a ship, e.g. Wilson v General Screw Colliery Co (1877) 37 L.T. 789 (propeller shaft); Saint Line Ltd v Richardsons Westgarth Co Ltd [1940] 2 K.B. 99, 104–105 (engines).

- 1956. [1949] 2 K.B. 528. (The language in which the judgment was expressed may need to be modified in the light of Koufos v C Czarnikow Ltd (The Heron II) [1969] 1 A.C. 350, but their Lordships appear to have accepted that the Victoria Laundry case was correctly decided even on the basis of their slightly different formulation of the remoteness test: [1969] 1 A.C. 350 at 389, 399, 414, 415. See Vol.I, paras 26-107 et seq.)
- 1957. A similar boiler was not readily available on the market.
- 1958. On the loss of custom in general, viz loss of business or custom resulting from the fact that the buyer was forced to default in fulfilling his sub-contract, see above, para.44-403, see below, para.44-425.
- 1959. cf. cases on delayed delivery of part of a machine in a contract of carriage (Vol.I, paras 26-109, 26-137); and cases concerning the buyer's loss of profit on a resale (see below, para.44-410).
- 1960. (1868) L.R. 3 Q.B. 181. See the analysis of the case in Victoria Laundry (Windsor) Ltd v Newman Industries Ltd [1949] 2 K.B. 528 at 538.
- 1961. cf. above, paras 44-400—44-405; and Portman v Middleton (1858) 4 C.B.(N.S.) 322.
- 1962. Or where he “ought” to have contemplated a resale as “probable”: see above, paras 44-400 n.1906.
- 1963. Hydraulic Engineering Co Ltd v McHaffie Goslett Co (1878) 4 Q.B.D. 670. It is submitted that the buyer should not be allowed to recover his gross profit (viz gross receipts) as well as his wasted expenses: cf. below, para.44-423.
- 1964. Elbinger Actien-Gesellschaft v Armstrong (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 473, 479; Hydraulic Engineering Co Ltd v McHaffie Goslett Co (1878) 4 Q.B.D. 670, 674, 677; Agius v Great Western Colliery Co [1899] 1 Q.B. 413 (where the buyer reasonably defends the claim brought against him by his subbuyer, he may also recover from the seller his reasonable costs: above; cf. below, paras 44-431—44-435; see above, para.44-405). The situation where the seller knew that the buyers were already contracted to deliver to a sub-buyer might, depending on the circumstances, in future give the sub-buyer a claim against the seller under the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999. See above, paras 18-090 et seq.; see below, paras 44-428, 44-437.
- 1965. See above, para.44-402 and, more generally, Vol.I, paras 26-126 et seq.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 7. - Remedies of the Buyer
(c) - Damages for Defective Quality
(i) - Diminution in Value

Breach of warranty

44-411

Section 53 of the Act 1966 prescribes the measure of damages for breach of warranty, viz a contractual undertaking which is not, or cannot be, treated by the buyer as a ground for rejecting the goods 1967.

“(1)

Where there is a breach of warranty by the seller, or where the buyer elects (or is compelled) to treat any breach of a condition on the part of the seller as a breach of warranty, the buyer is not by reason only of such breach of warranty entitled to reject the goods; but he may—

(a) set up 1968 against the seller the breach of warranty in diminution or extinction of the price, 1969 or maintain an action against the seller for damages for the breach of warranty.

(b)

(2)

The measure of damages for breach of warranty is the estimated loss directly and naturally resulting, in the ordinary course of events, from the breach of warranty. 1970

(3)

In the case of breach of warranty of quality 1971 such loss is prima facie the difference between the value of the goods at the time of delivery to the buyer and the value they would have had if they had fulfilled the warranty.

(4)

The fact that the buyer has set up the breach of warranty in diminution or extinction of the price does not prevent him from maintaining an action for the same breach of warranty if he has suffered further damage.” ¹⁹⁷²

The succeeding paragraphs in this part of the chapter cover all breaches of ss.13, 14 and 15 of the Act and any other breach of a contractual undertaking about the condition or attributes of the goods to be delivered. ¹⁹⁷³

Damages for diminution in market value

44-412

❗ As is illustrated by s.53(3) the usual measure of damages for breach of the seller’s contractual undertaking as to the quality or condition of the goods is the difference ¹⁹⁷⁴ between: (a) the value of the goods if they had complied with the undertaking, measured at the time ¹⁹⁷⁵ and place ¹⁹⁷⁶ of delivery; and (b) the actual value of the goods, in their actual condition, at the same time and place.

¹⁹⁷⁷ ❗ This is the “prima facie” measure of damages, which will be superseded where the buyer claims loss of profits or other consequential losses. ¹⁹⁷⁸ Where there is a market price ¹⁹⁷⁹ for goods of the contractual description and quality, this will fix their “value”; in the absence of an available market, any relevant ¹⁹⁸⁰ evidence should be admitted, e.g. the price at which a sub-buyer had agreed to buy the goods from the buyer before the defect was discovered may be some evidence of their value, ¹⁹⁸¹ as may the price at which an offer for the goods was made by a third person. ¹⁹⁸² The value of the defective goods actually delivered by the seller may be fixed by any relevant evidence, ¹⁹⁸³ e.g. the price at which the buyer has been able to resell the goods to a sub-buyer who has knowledge of their defective condition. ¹⁹⁸⁴ The courts may follow the commercial practice of fixing a “price allowance” for damaged goods. ¹⁹⁸⁵

Prima facie rule only

44-413

Section 53(3) lays down only a “prima facie” rule, from which the court may depart in appropriate circumstances. For instance, the time when the actual value of the goods in their defective state is assessed may be postponed until the defect is discovered. ¹⁹⁸⁶ Similarly, when the seller knows that the buyer intends to resell the goods to a sub-buyer at another place, and that the goods will not be examined until they reach the sub-buyer (e.g. because they are packaged), the date at which the latter examines the goods may be the date at which the market price should be taken to assess the buyer’s damages for the defective condition of the goods. ¹⁹⁸⁷ Again, a warranty as to quality may relate to the future (e.g. that seed will produce a certain crop) so that there can be no question of the buyer’s opportunity to resell the defective goods until the defect becomes apparent at a later date. The market value test should not be applied until the future event is known. ¹⁹⁸⁸ In Bence Graphics International Ltd v Fasson UK Ltd ¹⁹⁸⁹ the Court of Appeal held that s.53(3) provided only a “prima facie” rule, which should not be applied if it would give the buyer “more than his true loss”. ¹⁹⁹⁰ Section 53(2) should be the “starting point”. ¹⁹⁹¹

Damages for the cost of adaptations, or of substitute goods ¹⁹⁹²

44-414

❗ If there is no market, damages may be awarded on the basis of the cost of bringing the defective goods up to the contractual standard which would make them saleable. ¹⁹⁹³ ❗ In some circumstances the buyer may be entitled to claim, as damages for defective quality, the cost of buying substitute goods to perform the function intended to be performed by the contractual goods. ¹⁹⁹⁴ The House of Lords has been willing to award damages on this basis when machines were bought to perform in a specified way: but the House also held that the damages for the cost of the substitute machines should take account of any extra profit to the buyer resulting from the replacement of the defective machines. The evidence showed that the new machines bought by the buyer to replace the defective machines were so superior in efficiency and in economy of working expenses that it would have been to the buyer's pecuniary advantage to have replaced the seller's machines by them even if the seller's machines had complied with all the contractual specifications. The House held that, even though the buyers may not have been under a "duty" to mitigate their loss in this way, ¹⁹⁹⁵ when their action had in fact diminished their loss, their claim for damages for the cost of installing the newer machines must take account of the extra profit ¹⁹⁹⁶ (including the saving of expenses) resulting from this action. ¹⁹⁹⁷ Similarly, where the buyer claims damages for his loss of profit or other consequential losses caused by the defective quality of the goods delivered by the seller, the seller may show that the buyer ought reasonably to have mitigated his loss by acquiring substitute goods. ¹⁹⁹⁸

Buyer performing sub-contract despite seller's breach

44-415

It was held by the Court of Appeal in Slater v Hoyle and Smith Ltd ¹⁹⁹⁹ that where the seller delivers defective goods, but the buyer is nevertheless able to perform a sub-contract by delivering the goods to his sub-buyer, the buyer's damages against the seller should not be reduced by taking this into account; the buyer is entitled to rely on the normal measure of damages under s.53(3) viz the difference between (a) the market price, at the time and place of delivery, of goods up to the contractual quality; and (b) the market price, at the time and place of delivery, of the goods actually delivered. ²⁰⁰⁰ However, the authority of Slater v Hoyle and Smith Ltd has been severely undermined by the decision of the Court of Appeal in Bence Graphics International Ltd v Fasson UK Ltd. ²⁰⁰¹ The seller knew that the buyer would sell on to others (after manufacturing the goods into another product); the Court of Appeal held that the parties contemplated that the measure of damages for defects in the goods should be the extent of the buyer's liability (if any) to those others resulting from the defect. In Bence's case the decision in Slater's case was doubted, on the ground that s.53(3) laid down only a prima facie rule, which should not be applied if it would give the buyer "more than his true loss". ²⁰⁰²

^{1966.} s.53(5) relates only to Scots law and is therefore not reproduced here. Section 53 does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides special remedies for buyers in consumer sales contracts, see above, paras 38-408 et seq.

^{1967.} If the buyer is entitled to, and does reject the goods his damages are assessed on the basis of the seller's failure to deliver (s.51: see above, paras 44-387 et seq.). Completely different principles from those in s.53 may apply in the case of incorrect documents being supplied under overseas sales: see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 19-204 et seq., 20-115.

^{1968.} The meaning of set-off is examined in BICC Plc v Burndy Corp [1985] Ch. 232, 247-251, 254-259 (not a sale of goods case); and in Axel Johnson Petroleum AB v MG Mineral Group AG [1992] 1 W.L.R. 270. By a term in the contract, the buyer may agree to waive his right to a set-off against the price: see Caterpillar (NI) Ltd (formerly FG Wilson (Engineering) Ltd) v John Holt & Co (Liverpool) Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1232, [2014] 1 W.L.R. 2365. cf. also Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corp v Kloeckner Co AG [1990] 2 Q.B. 514 and Connaught Restaurants Ltd v Indoor Leisure Ltd [1994] 4 All E.R. 834 (not sale of goods cases). But such a term may be invalid under Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 or under the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contract Regulations 1999, or for contracts entered into on or after October 1, 2015, the Consumer Rights Act 2015, see above paras 38-192 et seq.

^{1969.} s.53(1)(a) and (4) follow the law in Mondel v Steel (1841) 8 M.W. 858. The buyer may also have a set-off (in respect of the seller's previous breach of warranty) when the seller claims damages for non-acceptance: see above, para.44-367. The buyer need not set up his defence: the fact that the buyer has paid the full price, or that the seller has recovered the full price by action against the buyer, does not prevent the buyer from subsequently bringing a separate action against the seller for breach of warranty: cf. the analogous case of a building contract: Davis v Hedges (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 687 (the sale of goods case is expressly said to be the same: at 690). The buyer cannot defend by way of set-off if the seller sues to enforce a negotiable instrument (Cebora SNC v SIP (Industrial Products) Ltd [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 271; cf. Nova (Jersey) Knit Ltd v Kammgarn Spinnerei GmbH [1977] 1 W.L.R. 713) or a different contract (Bow, McLachlan Co Ltd v Ship (Camosun) [1909] A.C. 597, 610–613 (mortgage back to the seller)). On the question of an equitable set-off against a claim in debt, see British Anzani (Felixstowe) Ltd v International Marine Management (UK) Ltd [1980] Q.B. 137 (a landlord and tenant case).

1970. This subsection is in terms of Hadley v Baxendale (1854) 9 Exch. 341 (see Vol.I, para.26-109); H Parsons (Livestock) Ltd v Uttley Ingham Co Ltd [1978] Q.B. 791, 800, 807. Consequential damages can be claimed under s.53(2) if they arise directly and naturally from the breach: Saipol SA v Inerco Trade SA [2014] EWHC 2211 (Comm). In addition, special damages may be claimed under s.54 (see below, para.44-416—44-435).

1971. It is submitted that a similar measure would apply to breaches of other undertakings, such as those relating to the fitness of the goods for a particular purpose (s.14(3)), or to the description of the goods (s.13).

1972. It is not clear whether the word “further” relates to fresh damage suffered after the first action was disposed of, or to damage which was not taken account of in assessing the extent of the reduction in the price in the first action. Mondel v Steel (1841) 8 M.W. 858, suggests the latter interpretation, but the former is probably the more normal meaning of the word “further”. (Another possible meaning could be that “further” refers to a sum “over and above” the price (at least in cases where the breach of warranty had been set up in “extinction” of the price).)

1973. Where the buyer is a consumer he has new remedies under Pt 5A of the Act or the Consumer Rights Act 2015 where the goods delivered to him do not conform to the contract: these remedies are likely to be more advantageous to him than those under s.53. See above, paras 38-408 et seq.

1974. s.53(3) assumes that the buyer has paid the full price for the goods (cf. s.53(1)(a)). The fact that the buyer has paid the price to the seller makes no difference to the measure of damages: Loder v Kekule (1857) 3 C.B.(N.S.) 128.

1975. The buyer is entitled to any rise in the market price between the date of the contract and the date of delivery: Jones v Just (1868) L.R. 3 Q.B. 197 (the court treated as irrelevant the actual resale price obtained by the buyer at a date later than the date of delivery).

1976. cf. the similar situation in assessing the market price: see above, paras 44-368—44-370.

1977.  If the goods were to be delivered by separate instalments, the measure of damages in s.53(3) should be applied separately to each delivery: Slater v Hoyle and Smith Ltd [1920] 2 K.B. 11, 19. See, applying the market price rule, Amira G Foods Ltd v RS Foods Ltd [2016] EWHC 76 (QB).

1978. Saipol SA v Inerco Trade SA [2014] EWHC 2211 (Comm). See below, paras 44-419 et seq.

1979. See above, paras 44-368 et seq.

1980. The contract price should not be taken: Loder v Kekule (1857) 3 C.B.(N.S.) 128; Slater v Hoyle and Smith Ltd [1920] 2 K.B. 11 at 17, 18. (cf. Dingle v Hare (1859) 29 L.J.C.P. 143; Minster Trust Ltd v Traps Tractors Ltd [1954] 1 W.L.R. 963, 988–989.)

1981. As suggested in Clare v Maynard (1837) 6 A. & E. 519. The sub-sale price is normally irrelevant: Slater v Hoyle and Smith Ltd [1920] 2 K.B. 11 cf. Bence Graphics International Ltd v

Fasson UK Ltd [1998] Q.B. 87 (see below, paras 44-413, 44-415). (cf. see above, paras 44-400—44-402, 44-407.)

1982. Cox v Walker (1835) 6 A. & E. 523n.

1983. There is normally no market in the ordinary sense for damaged or defective goods: Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 422, 438. (The appeal was allowed, but on a different ground: [1951] 2 K.B. 314.) As to damages in respect of goods not of merchantable quality, see Jackson v Chrysler Acceptances [1978] R.T.R. 474.

1984. Cox v Walker, above; Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 438. (But the evidence of “hypothetical buyers” may be weak: at 439.)

1985. [1951] 1 K.B. 422 at 439–440 (allowance of 15 per cent on the price); Cehave NV v Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH (The Hansa Nord) [1976] Q.B. 44, 63. cf. the remedy of a reduction in price where the buyer is a consumer: above, para.38-408.

1986. Naughton v O'Callaghan [1990] 3 All E.R. 191; Bominflot Bunkergesellschaft fur Mineralole mbH & Co v Petroplus Marketing AG (The Mercini Lady) [2012] EWHC 3009 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 360 at [60]-[61]; Saipol SA v Inerco Trade SA [2014] EWHC 2211 (Comm) (approving arbitrators' assessment of damages on that basis).

1987. Van den Hurk v Martens Co Ltd [1920] 1 K.B. 850. See above, para.44-376. cf. the similar ruling in Kwei Tek Chao v British Traders Ltd [1954] 2 Q.B. 459. Normally, the place of delivery is the place for examination of the goods under s.34.

1988. Ashworth v Wells (1898) 14 T.L.R. 227. cf. Loder v Kekule (1857) 3 C.B.(N.S.) 128, 140 (seller's negotiations with the buyer delayed the resale of the defective goods).

1989. [1998] Q.B. 87 (see below, para.44-415) (applied in Bern Dis A Turk Ticaret S/A v International Agri Trade Co Ltd [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 619 CA).

1990. [1998] Q.B. 87 at 102. See also Louis Dreyfus Trading Ltd v Reliance Trading Ltd [2004] EWHC 525 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 243; Choil Trading SA v Sahara Energy Resources Ltd [2010] EWHC 374 (Comm) at [124]-[139].

1991. [1998] Q.B. 87, 102.

1992. The consumer may now have the further remedies of repair or replacement: see above para.38-408.

1993.  Minster Trust Ltd v Traps Tractors Ltd [1954] 1 W.L.R. 963, 988-989. The cost of repairs to the goods was also accepted as a basis for damages in Mondel v Steel (1841) 8 M. & W. 858, 872. cf. buying the nearest equivalent goods and adapting them: see above, para.44-398. However, in Peebles v Rembrand Builders Merchants Ltd Unreported, April 18, 2017, Sherriff Court (Tayside, Central and Fife) (Dundee), the court refused to award the full cost of replacing defective roof tiles because the expense was unreasonable and the claimant had failed to mitigate its loss.

1994. British Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co Ltd v Underground Electric Rys Co of London Ltd [1912] A.C. 673.

1995. If the buyers had claimed the normal measure of damages under s.53(3) see above, there would have been no need to mitigate at a later date: see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.17-056. But cf. Bence Graphics International Ltd v Fasson UK Ltd [1998] Q.B. 87 (see above, para.44-413, see below, para.44-415).

1996. The extra profit in fact exceeded the cost of the substitute.

1997. cf. Erie County Natural Gas and Fuel Co Ltd v Carroll [1911] A.C. 105 (see above, para.44-398); Nadrep Ltd v Willmet Co [1978] 1 W.L.R. 1537 (not a sale of goods case). cf. also Hussey v Eels [1990] 2 Q.B. 227 (not a sale of goods case).

1998. British Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co Ltd v Underground Electric Railways Co of London Ltd [1912] A.C. 673.

1999. [1920] 2 K.B. 11.

2000. The buyers were not obliged to deliver to the sub-buyer the goods which they bought from the original seller, and in fact some of the goods which they delivered to the sub-buyer came from a different source. It is submitted that the decision in this case is to be preferred to the reasoning of the Privy Council in the analogous case of Wertheim v Chicoutimi Pulp Co [1918] A.C. 301 (late delivery), which is criticised see above, para.44-407 n.1951, and in Benjamin at paras 17-039, 17-057—17-058. However, in Bence Graphics International Ltd v Fasson UK Ltd [1998] Q.B. 87 at 103-105, Auld L.J. approved the decision in Wertheim's case (see below (this paragraph) and see above, para.44-413).

2001. [1998] Q.B. 87. See Louis Dreyfus Trading Ltd v Reliance Trading Ltd [2004] EWHC 525 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 243 (parties contemplated sale of the same goods to the sub-buyer under a specific contract); Choil Trading SA v Sahara Energy Resources Ltd [2010] EWHC 374 (Comm) at [124]-[139].

2002. [1998] Q.B. 87 at 102 (see above, para.44-413). But see the powerful criticism of Treitel (1997) 113 L.Q.R. 188. The Bence Graphics case was distinguished in Bear Stearns Bank Plc v Forum Global Equity Ltd [2007] EWHC 1576 (Comm) (a case involving shares rather than goods) on the grounds that in the Bear Stearns case the parties had not contemplated that the buyers would resell precisely the same shares (at [204]-[207]); and that it was a case of non-delivery rather than of delivery of defective goods (at [208]).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 7. - Remedies of the Buyer
(c) - Damages for Defective Quality
(ii) - Losses other than Diminution in Value

The buyer's actual or imputed knowledge of the defect

44-416

Where the seller delivers goods which fail to meet the contractual description or standard, the buyer may not immediately discover the defect or the failure of the goods to satisfy the description. As soon as the buyer knows of the defect, he will be unable to recover damages for any further or consequential loss which he ought reasonably to have avoided by taking remedial or precautionary steps. ²⁰⁰³ The buyer is not justified in continuing to rely on the seller's warranty after he knows that the goods are defective in that respect. ²⁰⁰⁴ After the buyer knew of the defect, he cannot, by reselling the goods to a third person, increase the original seller's liability by holding him liable for the buyer's own responsibility towards his subbuyer. ²⁰⁰⁵ If the buyer acquired knowledge of the defect at a time when the goods were already in the hands of the sub-buyer, he ought to have notified the subbuyer if the latter could take reasonable steps to avoid further loss or injury. ²⁰⁰⁶

The buyer's failure to discover the defect

44-417

It is not yet established, however, whether the same principle applies where the buyer ought reasonably to have discovered a defect which was not obvious. ²⁰⁰⁷ The buyer is not debarred from claiming damages merely because he did not make a thorough examination of the goods delivered by the seller to see whether they complied with the contract. Where the defect is not patent or obvious, he may rely on the seller's contractual undertaking as to quality or description. But in the cases ²⁰⁰⁸ supporting this proposition, there is an underlying assumption that the buyer acted reasonably in not examining the goods, or in not discovering the defect in question. The language used in the judgments, however, suggests that when the circumstances ought to have put the buyer on inquiry, so that as a reasonable man he ought then to have discovered the defect, he should not be able to recover damages in respect of further loss caused by the defect which he should reasonably have been able to avoid after the date when he ought to have discovered it. ²⁰⁰⁹ The first question will be whether the buyer's actions or omissions broke the chain of causation between the breach and any subsequent loss or damage. The buyer's knowledge is highly relevant to this. Reckless conduct on the buyer's part is likely to break the chain of causation, whereas merely unreasonable conduct will not necessarily do so. ²⁰¹⁰ The second question is, if the buyer was aware of the breach, or possibly if he should have been aware of it, ²⁰¹¹ whether he took reasonable steps to mitigate the loss. ²⁰¹²

44-418

Sometimes the seller knows that there are some possible defects in the goods which can be discovered only by the buyer, or the ultimate buyer, actually using them. ²⁰¹³ Thus, the presence of a deleterious substance in a fur skin collar could not be discovered until it was worn and the defect shown by the injury to the skin of the wearer. ²⁰¹⁴ And where seed of inferior quality is delivered to a farmer, the fact of the inferior quality may not become apparent until the crop has been grown. ²⁰¹⁵ In these circumstances there can be no question of the buyer failing to discover the defect before the use of the goods reveals it. ²⁰¹⁶

Additional or wasted expenses ²⁰¹⁷

44-419

If it was within the reasonable contemplation of the parties, at the time of making the contract, that the buyer was not unlikely to incur additional expenses if the seller delivered defective goods in breach of his undertaking as to their description or quality, the buyer may recover from the seller the reasonable amount of any expenses which he has reasonably incurred as the result of the seller's breach. ²⁰¹⁸ Thus, where defective steam turbines were delivered it was not disputed that the buyers could recover damages for the extra coal consumption and labour due to the defects in the machines during the period of their use. ²⁰¹⁹ Similarly, the buyer may be able to recover expenses incurred by him in reliance on the seller's undertaking as to the quality of the goods, where the breach of the undertaking made the expenditure futile. ²⁰²⁰

Limits on recovery of reliance loss

44-420

But the buyer may recover his wasted expenditure only to the extent that it would have been covered by the gross return which he would have made from his use of the goods if the seller had fully performed the contract. ²⁰²¹ This proposition refers only to expenditure which the buyer intended to recoup from his gross return, not to additional expenditure incurred by the buyer after, and as a result of, the breach. It is unsettled how far the buyer can recover damages in respect of both his "expectation interest" (the profit or gain which he expected to receive from performance of the contract but which was prevented by the seller's breach of contract) and his "reliance interest" (wasted expenditure). ²⁰²²

Fines paid by the buyer

44-421

If it was within the reasonable contemplation ²⁰²³ of the parties at the time of making the contract that the buyer might be prosecuted if the goods supplied by the seller were defective, e.g. food unfit for human consumption, ²⁰²⁴ the buyer (in the absence of fault on his part) has been held entitled to recover from the seller both the fine and the costs of his defence. ²⁰²⁵ If, however, the buyer's own negligence led, at least partly, to the imposition of the fine, it has been said that the buyer is not entitled to recover damages in respect of it. ²⁰²⁶ However, a number of later cases ²⁰²⁷ have raised the issue of public policy. ²⁰²⁸ In these it has been said that if the punishment inflicted by a criminal court is personal to the offender, the civil courts should not entertain an action by the offender to recover an indemnity against the consequences of that punishment. ²⁰²⁹ It is submitted that the issue should turn on whether or not the buyer had mens rea ²⁰³⁰: if he had not, the court should be willing to award him damages in respect of a fine imposed on him.

The buyer's loss of profit

44-422

Where, at the time of making the contract, the seller knew, or ought reasonably to have contemplated, that the buyer intended to use the goods to produce a profit, ²⁰³¹ and that a breach of the seller's undertaking as to description or quality of the goods would impede that profit-making, the buyer may recover damages for his loss of profits caused by the breach. ²⁰³² Where the goods sold were a profit-earning machine, ²⁰³³ which the seller undertook would perform in a specified manner or at a specified rate, the buyer may claim (subject to his taking reasonable steps to mitigate his loss) his loss of profits caused by the failure of the machine to perform as warranted. Thus, in Cullinane v British "Rema" Manufacturing Co Ltd ²⁰³⁴ where the seller warranted that a clay-pulverising machine had a certain productive capacity, but the machine failed to achieve this, the Court of Appeal held that the buyer was entitled to recover his net ²⁰³⁵ loss of profits during the normal commercial life of the machine. ²⁰³⁶ But any claim for loss of profits must be considered in the light of the requirement to mitigate: for a period after delivery it may be reasonable for the buyer to use the machine to see if it meets the warranty, but as soon as a reasonable buyer would have replaced the defective machine with one which functioned properly or efficiently, ²⁰³⁷ the buyer should not be entitled to claim for any further loss of profits. ²⁰³⁸ Only if no suitable replacement can reasonably be found should the buyer's claim for loss of profits extend over the full period of the original machine's expected life. ²⁰³⁹

Claims for both wasted expenses and loss of profits ²⁰⁴⁰

44-423

Difficult problems arise from a split claim for damages which is based partly on the expenses incurred by the claimant which the breach renders useless, and partly on the loss of profits caused by the breach. In Cullinane v British "Rema" Manufacturing Co Ltd ²⁰⁴¹ (discussed in the preceding paragraph), the majority of the Court of Appeal held that the plaintiff could not claim both his capital loss (expenditure incurred) and his loss of profits ²⁰⁴²: in their opinion, the plaintiff must elect ²⁰⁴³ between these two claims, and either seek to be put back into the position he would have been in if the contract had not been made (viz recover his net outlay, his "reliance expenditure") or, alternatively, claim what he would have received if the contract had been fully performed (viz the gross profit he would have received if the machine had functioned in accordance with the contractual warranty). It is submitted that the position taken by the majority in this case is confusing: their concern to avoid double recovery led them to overlook the fact that a net loss of profit can be calculated in such a way as to avoid overlapping with the wasted capital expenditure. As Morris L.J. pointed out in his dissent, ²⁰⁴⁴ the plaintiff was claiming only his net profit calculated after a deduction of depreciation, which represented the return to the buyer of the capital element; therefore, his claim for his net capital outlay did not overlap with his claim for loss of net profits. ²⁰⁴⁵ It is submitted that the view of Morris L.J. is to be preferred, and that a split claim should be permitted so long as the calculations show that no overlapping occurs in the different heads of claim. ²⁰⁴⁶

Loss of profits under a sub-sale

44-424

Where the seller knew that the buyer intended to resell the goods, and ought reasonably to have contemplated that a breach of his contractual undertaking as to the description or condition of the goods would be not unlikely to cause the buyer to lose the profit he hoped to make under the sub-sale, ²⁰⁴⁷ the buyer may recover damages in respect of such a loss of profits caused by a breach of the seller's undertaking, ²⁰⁴⁸ provided it was reasonable to think that the seller was assuming responsibility for the loss. ²⁰⁴⁹

Loss of future business

44-425

Where, at the time they made their contract, it was within the reasonable contemplation of the parties that defects in the goods supplied by the seller (in breach of his warranty as to their quality) might lead to sub-buyers (customers of the buyer) withdrawing their custom from the buyer, damages may be awarded for loss of profits on "repeat orders" from the subbuyers ²⁰⁵⁰ and for expenses reasonably incurred by the buyer in attempting to minimise a possible loss of business. ²⁰⁵¹

Loss of amenity

44-426

In the chapter on Damages in Vol.I ²⁰⁵² there is an examination of the recent authorities on damages for “loss of amenity”. In no reported cases has such an award been made to a buyer of goods, but it is possible that an analogy might be drawn from the cases on the purchase of land or building construction.

Physical injury to the buyer44-427

If it was in the reasonable contemplation of the parties, at the time of making the contract, that the seller's breach of his contractual undertaking as to quality or description was not unlikely to cause physical injury to the buyer's person ²⁰⁵³ or property, the buyer may recover damages for such injury. ²⁰⁵⁴ Thus, where the buyer of woollen underwear contracted dermatitis through the defective condition of the garment, he recovered substantial damages from the retailers for breach of the statutory condition imposed by s.14 of the Act. ²⁰⁵⁵ (There may often be concurrent liability in tort, ²⁰⁵⁶ but the advantage of suing in contract is that the claimant may not have to prove the negligence of the defendant.)

Loss through injury to others44-428

Where it was within the reasonable contemplation of the parties that the goods sold to the buyer would be used by members of the buyer's family, and that a defect in them was not unlikely to cause injury to them, the buyer is entitled to recover damages (in contract) for any pecuniary loss (such as expenses) caused to him by such injury. ²⁰⁵⁷ So where food for human consumption was sold to the buyer and eaten by his wife who died as a result, the buyer recovered damages for the medical and funeral expenses he had paid, and for the loss of his wife's services which led to his employing extra staff. ²⁰⁵⁸ But it should be noted that under the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999 members of the buyer's family may be sufficiently “identified” as third parties intended to have conferred on them the benefit of a term of the contract, so as to be entitled to enforce that term directly against the seller. ²⁰⁵⁹

Damage to other property of the buyer ²⁰⁶⁰44-429

Where it was within the reasonable contemplation of the parties that a defect in the goods bought by the buyer was not unlikely to cause loss of, or damage to, other property belonging to the buyer, his damages may include compensation for this loss or injury. ²⁰⁶¹ So where game farmers bought compounded meal for feeding to their pheasants and many chicks died and others grew up stunted because the meal contained a toxic substance, the farmers recovered damages for the loss of the birds and the reduced value of the survivors. ²⁰⁶² If the other property was damaged in the course of the use made of the goods by the buyer, the category of use in question must be one which was within the reasonable contemplation of the parties as a not unlikely use of the goods. If there are several categories of ordinary or common use, the buyer may recover if his use of the goods was within one of these categories, ²⁰⁶³ even though it may not have been the main type of use. ²⁰⁶⁴

Disruption to buyer's business ²⁰⁶¹44-430

Where defective performance of a contract causes disruption to a business, for example because its staff have to spend time dealing with the ensuing problems, the reasonable costs can be recovered. ²⁰⁶⁵

Compensation paid to a stranger (other than a sub-buyer) ²⁰⁶⁶

44-431

It may have been within the reasonable contemplation of the parties at the time of making the contract that: (a) if the goods were defective, a third person (or his property) was not unlikely to be injured as a result of the defect; and (b) as a result the buyer was not unlikely to be held legally liable to compensate the third party for his injury or loss. In these circumstances, if such an injury occurs, and the defect was in breach of the seller's contractual obligations to the buyer, the latter may recover as damages from the seller the damages ²⁰⁶⁷ and costs paid to the third party, ²⁰⁶⁸ and the buyer's own costs incurred in reasonably defending the third party's claim. ²⁰⁶⁹ The legal basis of the buyer's liability towards the stranger is normally under the law of torts, ²⁰⁷⁰ but it could be under a contract, e.g. a contract of employment.

Buyer must not act unreasonably

44-432

The buyer is not justified in continuing to rely on the seller's warranty after he knows that the goods are defective in that respect. ²⁰⁷¹ Where a buyer bought a trailer coupling, the House of Lords held that the warranty ²⁰⁷² that it was reasonably fit for towing trailers would continue in effect for a reasonable time after delivery, so long as it remained in the same apparent state as that in which it was delivered (apart from normal wear and tear). But as soon as the buyer learned ²⁰⁷³ that the handle of the locking mechanism of the coupling was missing, he could no longer rely on the seller's warranty to excuse him from making his own examination to see if it was still safe to use. The buyer was held liable ²⁰⁷⁴ to third parties injured when the trailer broke away, but he could not recover from the seller the damages paid to them, because his reliance on the warranty was no longer justified. The buyer's actions or omissions may break the chain of causation between the breach and any subsequent loss or damage. The buyer's knowledge is highly relevant to this. Reckless conduct on the buyer's part is likely to break the chain of causation, whereas merely unreasonable conduct will not necessarily do so. ²⁰⁷⁵ If the buyer was aware of the breach, and possibly if he should have been aware of it, ²⁰⁷⁶ he will not be able to recover for losses he could have avoided by taking reasonable steps to mitigate the loss. ²⁰⁷⁷

Compensation paid by the buyer to a sub-buyer ²⁰⁷⁸

44-433

⚠ This paragraph is concerned with the situation where the seller was in breach of his contractual undertaking as to the description or condition of the goods and (1) it was within the reasonable contemplation of the parties, at the time of making the contract, that ²⁰⁷⁹ (a) the buyer would, or probably ²⁰⁸⁰ would, resell the goods to a subbuyer; and (b) that the contract of sub-sale would, or probably would, contain the same, ²⁰⁸¹ or a similar, ²⁰⁸² contractual undertaking as to the description or condition of the goods; and (c) that it was not unlikely ²⁰⁸³ that a breach of the seller's undertaking would cause the buyer to be in breach of his undertaking to the subbuyer who would claim damages from the buyer for the loss or damage he suffered; and (2) it was reasonable to think that the seller was assuming responsibility for the loss. ²⁰⁸⁴ If loss or injury occurs in these circumstances, the buyer who has paid damages and costs ²⁰⁸⁵ to his sub-buyer for breach of the undertaking in the sub-sale may recover this amount from the seller, together with his own costs ²⁰⁸⁶ in reasonably defending the sub-buyer's claim, as damages for the seller's breach of the original contract. ²⁰⁸⁷ A reasonable settlement with the subbuyer out of court may be the basis of the buyer's claim for damages ²⁰⁸⁸ ⚠; but the seller may attempt to show that the buyer was not liable to pay anything to the sub-buyer ²⁰⁸⁹ or may produce new evidence or new factors to show that the sum paid was not reasonable. ²⁰⁹⁰ As soon as the buyer, whether before or after reselling the goods, has discovered ²⁰⁹¹ the defect in their description or condition, he is unable to pass on to his seller any liability which he thereafter incurred towards his sub-buyer (but which he could reasonably have avoided) in respect of that defect, ²⁰⁹² e.g. where he could, by passing on the knowledge to his sub-buyer, reduce his liability towards the sub-buyer. ²⁰⁹³

Compensation paid to sub-buyers in a series of “string contracts” ²⁰⁹⁴

44-434

This paragraph is concerned with the situation where the seller was in breach of his contractual undertaking as to the description or condition of the goods, and it was within the reasonable contemplation of the parties, at the time of making the contract, that:

(a)

the buyer intended ²⁰⁹⁵ to resell, or probably ²⁰⁹⁶ would do so, and that his sub-buyer would probably resell, and so on, so that there would be a series of sub-sales or “string contracts” of the same goods; and that each contract in the series would, or probably would, contain the same, ²⁰⁹⁷ or a similar, ²⁰⁹⁸ contractual undertaking as to the description or condition of the goods; and that it was not unlikely that a breach of the seller’s undertaking would cause the buyer and each sub-buyer in the series to be in breach of his undertaking to his own buyer ²⁰⁹⁹; and that it was not unlikely that, in the case of such a breach, the ultimate buyers would recover damages from their sellers, so that liability would in turn be passed up the chain of sellers and buyers. ²¹⁰⁰

(b)

(c)

(d)

In these circumstances, the buyer who has paid to his sub-buyer damages and costs ²¹⁰¹ for breach of the undertaking in the first contract of sub-sale (which the sub-buyer claimed from the buyer, as the result of similar payments of compensation between successive sub-buyers down the chain) may recover the amount paid by him to the sub-buyer, ²¹⁰² together with his own reasonable costs ²¹⁰³ in reasonably defending the sub-buyer’s claim against him; the damages and costs paid or incurred by the buyer are taken as the measure of damages for the seller’s breach of the original contract. ²¹⁰⁴

44-435

In a chain of sales, the buyer may sometimes be precluded from relying on the normal rule for the assessment of damages laid down by s.53(3). In Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd Devlin J. held that where the sub-sale was within the contemplation of the parties, the original buyer’s damages must be assessed by reference to it, whether he likes it or not: if it is the original buyer’s “liability to the ultimate user that is contemplated as the measure of damage and if in fact it is used without injurious results so that no such liability arises, the [original buyer] could not claim the difference in market value, and say that the sub-sale must be disregarded”. ²¹⁰⁵

Variations in descriptions or undertakings

44-436

The question whether the contractual undertakings as to the description or condition of the goods in the string contracts must be the same as in the original contract caused difficulty in the earlier cases. ²¹⁰⁶ In Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd, ²¹⁰⁷ Devlin J. said:

“If the variation to a description is such that it is impossible to say whether the injury that ultimately results would have flowed from the breach of the original warranty, the parties must as reasonable men be presumed to have put the liability for the injury outside their contemplation as a measure of compensation. If this is, as I believe, the nature of the principle, it must be applied very differently according to whether the injury for which the defendant is being asked to pay is a market loss or physical damage. In the former case ²¹⁰⁸ ... any variation that is more than a matter of words is likely to be fatal, because there is no way of telling its effect on the market value. In the latter case the nature of the physical damage will show whether the variation was material or not.”

It is submitted that this passage states the correct principle. If one of the buyers in the chain added to the description of the goods sold to him, or varied the undertaking as to their condition, the original seller should still be liable for the loss or injury suffered by the ultimate buyer if it was caused by a defect in the goods covered both by the original seller's description or undertaking and also by the descriptions or undertakings in all the intervening contracts. ²¹⁰⁹

A direct claim by the sub-buyer against the seller

44-437

Under the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999 ²¹¹⁰ a sub-buyer as a “third party” may be able to enforce ²¹¹¹ a term in the main contract between the seller and the buyer if either the contract expressly provides that he may; or the term purports to confer a benefit on him and he is sufficiently “identified” (e.g. as a sub-buyer, an agent or employee of the buyer). But the contract may show that the third party was not intended to be entitled to enforce the term. Where the buyer has already agreed to sell the goods to the sub-buyer, the 1999 Act will not apply merely if the seller knows that the buyer is buying the goods in order to fulfil that contract; the contract must purport to benefit the third party which seems to require at a minimum that it refers to the third party. ²¹¹² It is conceivable that the contract between the buyer and the seller might expressly entitle the sub-buyer to enforce an obligation on the seller (e.g. an obligation to deliver to the sub-buyer's premises) or it might “purport to confer” such a benefit on the sub-buyer so as to bring the case within the Act.

^{2003.} This principle is implicit in the decision of the House of Lords in Lambert v Lewis [1982] A.C. 225. (See below, para.44-432.) See also British Oil and Cake Co Ltd v Burstall Co (1923) 39 T.L.R. 406, 407; Hammond Co v Bussey (1887) 20 Q.B.D. 79, 86.

^{2004.} Lambert v Lewis [1982] A.C. 225. The rules of mitigation apply to this situation.

^{2005.} Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 422, 435 (the appeal was decided on another point). See also GC Dobell Co Ltd v Barber and Garratt [1931] 1 K.B. 219, 238, 246-247.

^{2006.} Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 422, 435.

^{2007.} Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 422, 435. See also Smith v Johnson (1899) 15 T.L.R. 179, 180.

^{2008.} Pinnock Bros v Lewis and Peat Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 690, 698; British Oil and Cake Co Ltd v Burstall Co (1923) 39 T.L.R. 406 at 407. cf. GC Dobell Co Ltd v Barber and Garratt [1931] 1

K.B. 219. cf. also the analogous cases of Mowbray v Merryweather [1895] 2 Q.B. 640, 644, 646, 647; Scott v Foley, Aikman Co (1899) 16 T.L.R. 55.

- 2009. Lambert v Lewis [1982] A.C. 225 was based partly on the buyer's actual knowledge and partly on his imputed knowledge: see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.17-060. cf. Vol.I, para.26-087. It is submitted that the speech of Lord Diplock indicates that he would treat imputed knowledge of the defect as actual knowledge for the purpose of the legal principle in question. See also Smith v Johnson (1899) 15 T.L.R. 180; Wagstaff v Shorthorn Dairy Co (1884) Cab. Ell. 324.
- 2010. The authorities on when the claimant's intervening act or omission will break the chain of causation are helpfully reviewed in Borealis AB v Geogas Trading SA [2010] EWHC 2789 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 482 at [42]-[47]. See above, para.26-063. Applied in Stacey (t/a The New Gailey Caravan/Motorhomes Centre) v Autosleeper Group Ltd [2014] EWCA Civ 1551.
- 2011. See para.44-417.
- 2012. See paras 26-079 et seq.; Borealis AB v Geogas Trading SA [2010] EWHC 2789 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 482 at [49]-[50].
- 2013. Kasler and Cohen v Slavouski [1928] 1 K.B. 78, 85-86.
- 2014. Kasler and Cohen v Slavouski, above, at 84. See also Hammond Co v Bussey (1887) 20 Q.B.D. 79, 86.
- 2015. Wagstaff v Shorthorn Dairy Co (1884) Cab. Ell. 324.
- 2016. See also the facts of George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] 2 A.C. 803, where the House of Lords' decision was based on the assumption that the farmer was entitled to recover all his costs wasted in cultivating the worthless crop, as well as the net profit he would have made from a successful crop: see below, para.44-423.
- 2017. See Vol.I, paras 26-022 et seq. This heading may even cover pre-contract expenditure if it was in the reasonable contemplation of the parties as not unlikely to be wasted in the event of a breach: Anglia Television Ltd v Reed [1972] 1 Q.B. 60; Lloyd v Stanbury [1971] 1 W.L.R. 535 (neither case is on the sale of goods). See Vol.I, para.26-030.
- 2018. Smith v Johnson (1899) 15 T.L.R. 179.
- 2019. British Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co Ltd v Underground Electric Railways Co of London Ltd [1912] A.C. 673, 683. (In fact, the buyers later replaced the defective turbines with a newer, more efficient, model: see above, para.44-414.) See also Molling Co v Dean Son Ltd (1901) 18 T.L.R. 217 (wasted freight and customs duty; on avoidance of double recovery in such cases, see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.17-062).
- 2020. Illustrations of this type of recovery are Cullinane v British "Rema" Manufacturing Co Ltd [1954] 1 Q.B. 292 (see below, para.44-422); Molling Co v Dean Son Ltd, above; Richard Holden Ltd v Bostock Co Ltd (1902) 18 T.L.R. 317; Bostock Co Ltd v Nicholson Sons Ltd [1904] 1 K.B. 725. If s.53(3) applies, so that the buyer could buy substitute goods in the market, he will not be able to claim for wasted expenditure. See also Stoljar (1975) 91 L.Q.R. 68.
- 2021. See Vol.I, paras 26-024, 26-028. (The onus of proof is on the seller to show that the buyer would not have recouped all of his expenditure if the contract had been fully performed by the seller: para.26-024.)
- 2022. See below, para.44-423; Vol.I, para.26-029.
- 2023. And if it was reasonable to think that the seller was assuming responsibility for the loss: see above, para.44-402 and, more generally, Vol.I, paras 26-126 et seq.

- 2024. But see s.21 of the Food Safety Act 1990 (defence of due diligence).
- 2025. Cointat v Myham Son [1913] 2 K.B. 220 (reversed on question of warranty: (1914) 30 T.L.R. 282). cf. Crage v Fry (1903) 67 J.P. 240 (no evidence as to what influenced the court in imposing the fine); Marles v Philip Trant Sons Ltd [1954] 1 Q.B. 29, 39-40. cf. also Osman v J Ralph Moss Ltd [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 313.
- 2026. Cointat v Myham Son [1913] 2 K.B. 220, 222.
- 2027. R Leslie Ltd v Reliable Advertising and Addressing Agency Ltd [1915] 1 K.B. 652; Proops v WH Chaplin Co (1920) 37 T.L.R. 112, 114; Askey v Golden Wine Co Ltd (1948) 64 T.L.R. 379 (only the third case concerned the sale of goods).
- 2028. If the buyer is acquitted, he may recover his costs in defending a prosecution resulting from the seller's breach of warranty, since public policy is not in question: Proops v WH Chaplin Co (1920) 37 T.L.R. 112.
- 2029. See also Payne v Ministry of Food (1953) 103 L.J. 141.
- 2030. There was mens rea in the plaintiff in both R Leslie Ltd v Reliable Advertising and Addressing Agency Ltd [1915] 1 K.B. 652; and Askey v Golden Wine Co Ltd (1948) 64 T.L.R. 379.
- 2031. The seller must have actual or imputed knowledge of the category of use intended by the buyer: Bunting v Tory (1948) 64 T.L.R. 353 (seller did not know that buyer intended to use a bull for breeding): see the discussion in Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 17-066; and cf. see above, paras 44-400, 44-413.
- 2032. Richard Holden Ltd v Bostock Co Ltd (1902) 18 T.L.R. 317. See also Wagstaff v Shorthorn Dairy Co (1884) Cab. Ell. 324; Ashworth v Wells (1898) 14 T.L.R. 227; Randall v Raper (1858) E.B. & E. 84; and the facts of Wallis, Son and Wells v Pratt and Haynes [1910] 2 K.B. 1003; on appeal [1911] A.C. 394 where the sub-buyer had grown inferior seeds, and his damages appear to have been assessed on the above basis.
- 2033. Or part thereof: cf. see above, para.44-408 for authority in an analogous situation.
- 2034. [1954] 1 Q.B. 292.
- 2035. viz after deducting from his expected gross profits (or gross receipts) the necessary expenditure in earning it.
- 2036. [1954] 1 Q.B. 292, 303, 308 (at 315, Morris L.J., dissenting, accepted this proposition).
- 2037. In the Cullinane case [1954] 1 Q.B. 292 it was held that the buyer did not act unreasonably in continuing to use the machine after he knew that its performance was defective: [1954] 1 Q.B. 292, 314, 316. But cf. Lambert v Lewis [1982] A.C. 225 (see above, para.44-417 and below, para.44-432).
- 2038. British Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co Ltd v Underground Electric Railways Co of London Ltd [1912] A.C. 673 (see above, para.44-414); Cullinane v British "Rema" Manufacturing Co Ltd [1954] 1 Q.B. 292, 314, 316. cf. Lambert v Lewis above (see below, para.44-432). If the substitute machine made extra profits, these will be taken into account in assessing damages for the cost of the substitute: British Westinghouse case, above (see above, para.44-414).
- 2039. Macleod [1970] J.B.L. 19, 26; Stoljar (1975) 91 L.Q.R. 68, 77-78.
- 2040. The question would also arise of a ceiling on recovery imposed by the gross return expected by the buyer: see Vol.I, paras 26-024, 26-028.
- 2041. [1954] 1 Q.B. 292 (criticised by Macleod [1970] J.B.L. 19; Stoljar (1975) 91 L.Q.R. 68; and Street, Principles of the Law of Damages (1962), pp.242-245).

2042. [1954] 1 Q.B. 292, 302, 303, 308, 311, 312.

2043. The Court of Appeal took the same position in cases not concerned with the sale of goods: Anglia Television Ltd v Reed [1972] 1 Q.B. 60, 63-64; CCC Films Ltd v Impact Quadrant Films Ltd [1985] Q.B. 16. cf. George Mitchell (Chesterhall) Ltd v Finney Lock Seeds Ltd [1983] 2 A.C. 803, 812 (the leading speech approved damages which included both wasted costs and loss of profit).

2044. [1954] 1 Q.B. 292, 315, 317-318.

2045. Macleod [1970] J.B.L. 19. The distinction between gross and net profits is recognised (in relation to recoupment of expenditure) in the CCC Films case [1985] Q.B. 16, 32.

2046. See TC Industrial Plant Pty Ltd v Robert's Queensland Pty Ltd [1964] A.L.R. 1083. See also Vol.I, para.26-029. Split claims were allowed in two earlier cases at first instance (neither of which was referred to in the Cullinane case [1954] 1 Q.B. 314): Foaminol Laboratories v British Artid Plastics [1941] 2 All E.R. 393; and Molling Co v Dean Son Ltd (1901) 18 T.L.R. 217.

2047. Or under potential sub-sales: see Richard Holden Ltd v Bostock Co Ltd (1902) 18 T.L.R. 317.

2048. Molling Co v Dean Son Ltd, above, at 218. cf. above, paras 44-400, 44-404, 44-422.

2049. See above, para.44-402 and, more generally, Vol.I, paras 26-126 et seq.

2050. GKN Centrax Gears Ltd v Matbro Ltd [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 555, 573-574, 577, 579-580 (not following Simon v Pawsons and Leaf's Ltd (1933) 38 Com. Cas. 151, 158). See also Aerial Advertising v Batchelor's Peas [1938] 2 All E.R. 788. cf. Cointat v Myham Son [1913] 2 K.B. 220 reversed on another point (1914) 30 T.L.R. 282. cf. also Amstrad Plc v Seagate Technology Inc (1998) 86 B.L.R. 34. cf. also Jackson v Bank of Scotland [2005] UKHL 3, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 377 (see Vol.I, para.26-138).

2051. Richard Holden Ltd v Bostock Co Ltd (1902) 18 T.L.R. 317.

2052. See Vol.I, paras 26-141 et seq.

2053. Grant v Australian Knitting Mills Ltd [1936] A.C. 85. See also Wren v Holt [1903] 1 K.B. 610; Gedding v Marsh [1920] 1 K.B. 668; Morelli v Fitch Gibbons [1928] 2 K.B. 636; Andrews v Hopkinson [1957] 1 Q.B. 229; Godley v Perry [1960] 1 W.L.R. 9. (The damages may include the normal heads of damages in the assessment in tort for personal injuries or death: [1960] 1 W.L.R. 9 at 13.) Special rules apply to the award of interest on such damages: see Vol.I, para.26-236.

2054. Grant v Australian Knitting Mills Ltd [1936] A.C. 85. The buyer will not be able to continue to rely on the undertaking after he knew (or ought reasonably to have known) that the goods were defective: cf. Lambert v Lewis [1982] A.C. 225 (see below, para.44-432).

2055. Grant v Australian Knitting Mills Ltd [1936] A.C. 85. (The relevant provision was s.14 of the South Australian Act, which was identical with s.14 of the 1893 United Kingdom Act before the 1973 amendment.)

2056. See above, Vol.I, paras 1-165 et seq.

2057. Priest v Last [1903] 2 K.B. 148; Frost v Aylesbury Dairy Co Ltd [1905] 1 K.B. 608; Jackson v Watson Sons [1909] 2 K.B. 193; Square v Model Farm Dairies (Bournemouth) Ltd [1939] 2 K.B. 365, 374. On the recovery of damages in respect of loss suffered by third parties, see Vol.I, paras 18-051 et seq.

2058. Jackson v Watson Sons [1909] 2 K.B. 193 CA.

- 2059. See Vol.I, paras 18-090 et seq.
- 2060. cf. above, para.44-428, last sentence.
- 2061. Borradaile v Brunton (1818) 8 Taunt. 535 (defective anchor cable caused loss of the anchor); Randall v Newson (1877) 2 Q.B.D. 102 (pole for a carriage broke in use, frightening the horses, which were injured); Bostock Co Ltd v Nicholson Sons Ltd [1904] 1 K.B. 725 (impure acid caused waste of other ingredients mixed with it); Wilson v Rickett Cockerell Co Ltd [1954] 1 Q.B. 598 (coalite exploded when burning in grate causing damage to the room and furniture); H Parsons (Livestock) Ltd v Uttley Ingham Co Ltd [1978] Q.B. 791. See above, para.44-427 n.2054 and Vol.I, para.26-118.
- 2062. Hardwick Game Farm Ltd v SAPP [1969] 2 A.C. 31. (The decision of the House of Lords assumes that the game farmers were entitled to recover damages for these losses.) See also Smith v Green (1875) 1 C.P.D. 92 (cow with infection infected others); H Parsons (Livestock) Ltd v Uttley Ingham Co Ltd [1978] Q.B. 791 (defective hopper caused mouldy food, which was fed to pigs).
- 2063. Bostock Co Ltd v Nicholson Sons Ltd [1904] 1 K.B. 725.
- 2064. Hardwick Game Farm Ltd v SAPP [1969] 2 A.C. 31. cf. Bunting v Tory (1948) 64 T.L.R. 353. cf. also Christopher Hill Ltd v Ashington Piggeries Ltd [1972] A.C. 441 (claim against the third party under s.14).
- 2065. See above, para.26-172. Azzurri Communications Ltd v International Telecommunications Equipment Ltd [2013] EWPC 17 (the exercise of pulling out and replacing handsets caused significant disruption to business but investigation of faults was part of the normal support function: at [93]).
- 2066. Compare below, para.44-433.
- 2067. A reasonable settlement out of court would be included: see the analogous situation, see below, para.44-433, and Mowbray v Merryweather [1895] 2 Q.B. 640.
- 2068. This principle is implicit in the decision of the House of Lords in Lambert v Lewis [1982] A.C. 225. The previous cases were not on sale of goods but on contracts where chattels were to be supplied for the use of the plaintiff and others: Mowbray v Merryweather [1895] 2 Q.B. 640 (approved by the House of Lords in Lambert v Lewis, above); Scott v Foley, Aikman Co (1899) 16 T.L.R. 55 (breach of a warranty as to the condition of appliances on a ship). cf. Hadley v Droitwich Construction Co Ltd [1968] 1 W.L.R. 37.
- 2069. Scott v Foley, Aikman Co (1899) 16 T.L.R. 55 at 56. On reasonableness in appealing, cf. Vogan v Oulton (1899) 81 L.T. 435 (a case of hire). The buyer may also recover the costs incurred by him in successfully defending a claim brought against him by a stranger as a result of the seller's breach of contract: see the analogous case where the plaintiff's lorry was negligently repaired by the defendants: Britannia Hygienic Laundry Co Ltd v John I Thorneycroft Co Ltd (1925) 41 T.L.R. 667 (reversed by the Court of Appeal on a different view of the facts: (1926) 42 T.L.R. 198). On the basis for the assessment of costs, see below, para.44-433 n.2086.
- 2070. Mowbray v Merryweather [1895] 2 Q.B. 640; Scott v Foley, Aikman Co (1899) 16 T.L.R. 55.
- 2071. Lambert v Lewis [1982] A.C. 225 (cf. see above, para.44-416).
- 2072. Under s.14(1) of the 1893 Act. (See now s.14(3) of the 1979 Act.)
- 2073. Although the House of Lords did not advert to the situation where the buyer ought reasonably to have known of the missing handle, it is submitted that the same legal consequences should apply in the case of imputed knowledge (see above, para.44-417).
- 2074. On the ground of his negligence in continuing to use the coupling without having it examined.

- 2075. The authorities on when the claimant's intervening act or omission will break the chain of causation are helpfully reviewed in Borealis AB v Geogas Trading SA [2010] EWHC 2789 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 482 at [42]–[47] and applied in Stacey (t/a The New Gaiety Caravan/Motorhomes Centre) v Autosleeper Group Ltd [2014] EWCA Civ 1551. See above, para.26-063.
- 2076. See para.44-417.
- 2077. See paras 26-079 et seq.; Borealis AB v Geogas Trading SA [2010] EWHC 2789 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 482 at [49]–[50].
- 2078. The sub-buyer may possibly have a direct claim against the seller: see below, para.44-437.
- 2079. The composite propositions in the first two sentences of this paragraph are supported by the cases cited in the following footnotes. In particular, the propositions are supported by the judgment of Bowen L.J. in Hammond Co v Bussey (1887) 20 Q.B.D. 79, 94-95 (a passage cited with approval by the Court of Appeal in Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 2 K.B. 314, 318-319). The cases on a chain of sub-sales (see below, para.44-434) also support these propositions. In one case, Bostock Co Ltd v Nicholson Sons Ltd [1904] 1 K.B. 725, the buyer's claim failed, but it is submitted in Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.17-076, that the case is no longer authoritative.
- 2080. Hammond Co v Bussey (1887) 20 Q.B.D. 88, 89.
- 2081. As in Hammond Co v Bussey (1887) 20 Q.B.D. 88, 89.
- 2082. The possibility of a “similar” warranty leading to recovery of damages by the buyer was mentioned (obiter) in Hammond Co v Bussey (1887) 20 Q.B.D. 89, 96. See further the discussion, see below, para.44-436.
- 2083. In Hammond Co v Bussey (1887) 20 Q.B.D. 89, 96, reference was made at 93 to the parties' reasonable contemplation that “the highly probable result of a breach” of the original undertaking would be a lawsuit between the buyers and their sub-buyers. But it is submitted that the “not unlikely” test is now the correct one (see Vol.I, para.26-121).
- 2084. Transfield Shipping Inc v Mercator Shipping Inc (The Achilles) [2008] UKHL 48, [2009] 1 A.C. 61, described as exceptional in Saipol SA v Inerco Trade SA [2014] EWHC 2211 (Comm). See above, para.44-402 and, more generally, Vol.I, paras 26-126 et seq.
- 2085. The costs must be reasonably incurred (and will be assessed on the standard basis): Hammond Co v Bussey, above; Pinnock Bros v Peat and Lewis Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 690, 698; Sidney Bennett Ltd v Kreeger (1925) 41 T.L.R. 609. See Benjamin at para.17-077, and cf. above, para.44-400; see below, para.44-436.
- 2086. The buyer's own reasonable (see para.44-431 n.2070, above) costs will be assessed on the standard basis which is now the proper basis for the recovery of the claimant's costs incurred in litigation with a third party: British Racing Drivers' Club Ltd v Hextall Erskine Co [1996] 3 All E.R. 667 (not a sale of goods case). cf. the analogous case in delayed delivery: Agius v Great Western Colliery Co [1899] 1 Q.B. 413.
- 2087. In some situations, the buyer's damages may be restricted by reference to the extent of the buyer's liability towards his sub-buyer (see below, para.44-435).
- 2088.  Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 2 K.B. 314 (applied in Meadowbank Vac Alloys Ltd v Eurokey Recycling Ltd, Unreported, May 16, 2016 (QBD Manchester District Registry)). (It is also implicit in this case that it may be reasonable for the buyer to submit his dispute with the sub-buyer to arbitration.) cf. Grébert-Borgnis v JW Nugent (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 85.
- 2089. Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 2 K.B. 314, 320 (applied in Meadowbank Vac Alloys Ltd v Eurokey Recycling Ltd, Unreported, May 16, 2016 (QBD Manchester District Registry)) (citing Kiddle v Lovett (1885) 16 Q.B.D. 605). The principle in Biggin's case covers compromises of issues of liability as well as of quantum: Royal Brompton Hospital NHS Trust v Hammond (1999) 149 N.L.J. 89.

- 2090. Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 2 K.B. 314, 321, 325. No matter how reasonable a settlement may appear to the parties, it does not determine the liability of a third party: PO Developments Ltd v Guy's and St Thomas' NHS Trust (1998) 62 Con. L.R. 38 (not a sale of goods case). The reasonableness of a settlement must be judged in the light of the facts available at the time it was made: General Feeds Inc Panama v Slobodna Plovidba Yugoslavia [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 688.
- 2091. On the question of imputed knowledge, see above, paras 44-416—44-428.
- 2092. British Oil and Cake Co Ltd v Burstall Co (1923) 39 T.L.R. 406, 407; GC Dobell Co Ltd v Barber and Garratt [1931] 1 K.B. 219, 238 (cf. at 246-247); Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 2 K.B. 314 at 435. cf. Lambert v Lewis [1982] A.C. 225 (see above, para.44-432).
- 2093. The sub-buyer would thereupon come under a duty towards the buyer to take reasonable steps to mitigate his loss caused by the defect.
- 2094. This paragraph was cited in Louis Dreyfus Trading Ltd v Reliance Trading Ltd [2004] EWHC 525 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 243 at [24].
- 2095. e.g. GC Dobell Co v Barber and Garratt [1931] 1 K.B. 219 at 231; Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 422, 431; reversed by the Court of Appeal on another ground: [1951] 2 K.B. 314.
- 2096. cf. Hammond Co v Bussey (1887) 20 Q.B.D. 79, 88, 89.
- 2097. e.g. Kasler and Cohen v Slavouski [1928] 1 K.B. 78, 85; GC Dobell Co v Barber and Garratt [1931] 1 K.B. 219 (warranty as to quality implied by statute).
- 2098. See below, para.44-436.
- 2099. But consider the question of a buyer's knowledge (actual or implied) at a date after the contract was made: see above, para.44-432.
- 2100. Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 422 at 431-432. See also Kasler and Cohen v Slavouski [1928] 1 K.B. 78 at 85, 87.
- 2101. The total costs may include both those incurred by the buyer and also by sub-buyers lower in the chain, provided each acted reasonably in incurring the costs: Kasler and Cohen v Slavouski [1928] 1 K.B. 78; Godley v Perry [1960] 1 W.L.R. 9, 16-17. See also Pinnock Bros v Lewis and Peat Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 690. (cf. above, para.44-433.) The costs will be each party's own reasonable costs assessed on the standard basis (see above, para.44-433 n.2086) and the assessed costs paid to the next person in the chain. cf. the similar situation where there is a breach of the implied condition as to title in a chain of sub-sales: Butterworth v Kingsway Motors [1954] 1 W.L.R. 1286, 1297-1300; Bowmaker (Commercial) Ltd v Day [1965] 1 W.L.R. 1396.
- 2102. Pinnock Bros v Lewis and Peat Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 690; GC Dobell Co v Barber and Garratt [1931] 1 K.B. 219; Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 422.
- 2103. Kasler and Cohen v Slavouski [1928] 1 K.B. 89. cf. see above, para.44-433.
- 2104. See also the limitation in the last sentence of para.44-433, see above.
- 2105. [1951] 1 K.B. 422 at 436. The principle stated in the text was followed in Bence Graphics International Ltd v Fasson UK Ltd [1998] Q.B. 87 (see above, paras 44-413, 44-415); but see the criticism of Treitel (1997) 113 L.Q.R. 188, who argues that Biggin & Co Ltd v Permanite Ltd

[1951] 1 K.B. 422, was a “consequential loss” case where the remoteness rules were relevant. See also Louis Dreyfus Trading Ltd v Reliance Trading Ltd [2004] EWHC 525 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 243.

2106. In Dexters Ltd v Hill Crest Oil Co (Bradford) Ltd [1926] 1 K.B. 348, 359, it was held to be “essential” that the contractual description should be the same; but recovery was allowed in British Oil and Cake Co Ltd v Burstall Co (1923) 39 T.L.R. 406 despite some differences in the wording of the contracts.

2107. [1951] 1 K.B. 422, 433-434; reversed by the Court of Appeal on a different point: [1951] 2 K.B. 314.

2108. As illustrated by Dexters Ltd v Hill Crest Oil Co (Bradford) Ltd, above.

2109. cf. Pinnock Bros v Lewis and Peat Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 690, at 696-697, 698-699; cf. also Lambert v Lewis [1982] A.C. 225, 275-278 (see above, para.44-432).

2110. See above, Vol.I, paras 18-090 et seq.

2111. As far as remedies are concerned, the third party is treated as a party to the contract: s.5(1).

2112. See above, paras 18-093—18-096.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods

Section 7. - Remedies of the Buyer

(d) - Other Remedies of the Buyer ²¹¹³

Rejection of the goods: termination of the contract

44-438

Where the seller repudiates his obligations under the contract, or commits a fundamental breach of contract or a breach of condition, the buyer may choose to treat the contract as terminated, reject the goods, ²¹¹⁴ and sue for damages. Where the buyer justifiably rejects the goods, he can treat the seller's failure to deliver goods in conformity with the contract as a simple case of failure to deliver, and the buyer's damages will be assessed in accordance with s.51. ²¹¹⁵

Restitution: recovery of money paid to the seller

44-439

⚠ Section 54 of the Act ²¹¹⁶ provides that:

"Nothing in this Act affects the right of the buyer or the seller ... to recover money paid where the consideration for the payment of it has failed." ²¹¹⁷

The claim referred to in this provision is one in restitution where the claimant has failed to receive the benefit of the other party's performance. ²¹¹⁸ ⚠ For instance, the buyer has a claim in restitution to recover the price he has paid to the seller if the seller, in breach of his obligation under s.12(1), failed to pass a good title to the goods sold. ²¹¹⁹ Similarly, if the seller failed to deliver the goods ²¹²⁰ or delivered goods which the buyer was entitled to and did reject, the buyer may recover the deposit ²¹²¹ or prepayment of the price ²¹²² (or part of the price) which he paid to the seller. ²¹²³ Even where the buyer himself is in default as to his obligations, he may be entitled to claim restitution of advance payments made to the seller. ²¹²⁴

Specific performance ²¹²⁵

44-440

Section 52 ²¹²⁶ provides:

"(1)

In any action for breach of contract to deliver specific or ascertained goods ²¹²⁷ the court may, if it thinks fit, on the plaintiff's ²¹²⁸ application, by its judgment or decree direct that the contract shall be performed specifically, without giving the defendant the option of retaining the goods on payment of damages.

(2)

The plaintiff's application may be made at any time before judgment or decree.

(3)

The judgment or decree may be unconditional, or on such terms and conditions as to damages, payment of the price and otherwise as seem just to the court." ²¹²⁹

Before the 1893 Act, the remedy of specific performance was an equitable one, ²¹³⁰ and the courts have used the cases in equity to guide their use of s.52. ²¹³¹

Specific or ascertained goods

44-441

"Specific goods" are defined by s.61(1) as "goods identified and agreed on at the time a contract of sale is made ²¹³² and includes an undivided share, specified as a fraction or percentage, of goods identified and agreed on as aforesaid". ²¹³³ "Ascertained goods", according to Atkin L.J. in Re Wait, ²¹³⁴ "probably means identified in accordance with the agreement after the time a contract of sale is made", i.e. goods which were unascertained ²¹³⁵ at the time the contract was made. ²¹³⁶ The 1995 extension of the definition ²¹³⁷ means that if a bulk (such as the cargo of a ship) was identified and agreed upon when the contract was made, an order of specific performance may be made under s.52 in respect of a fraction or percentage of the bulk. But where the part sold is a specified quantity to be taken from an identified bulk it appears that no order can be made, because the goods are not "specific" in terms of the new definition, and they remain unascertained. In Re Wait, ²¹³⁸ the majority of the Court of Appeal held that no order for specific performance should be made of a sub-contract to sell 500 tons out of a consignment of 1,000 tons of wheat bought by the seller, because the 500 tons were neither specific nor ascertained goods. ²¹³⁹ (This decision preceded the new definition, but the facts fall outside it, because no "fraction or percentage" was specified).

Order for specific delivery

44-442

Instead of asking for an order under s.52, the buyer who has the property in the goods may, in proceedings for wrongful interference with the goods, seek an order for specific delivery of the goods which does not give the seller the alternative of retaining them on payment of their value as assessed by the court. ²¹⁴⁰ But in such proceedings the court has a discretion whether or not to make such an order. ²¹⁴¹

Discretion of the court

44-443

Section 52 confers a wide discretion on the court, similar to the discretionary nature of the equitable remedy of specific performance. ²¹⁴² No order should be made if the goods sold were "of a very ordinary description" ²¹⁴³ and were not alleged to be "peculiar" in the sense that similar goods could not be obtained elsewhere. ²¹⁴⁴ (The award of damages is considered to be an "adequate" remedy in such cases.) An order has been made in respect of a ship, which “was of peculiar and practically unique value to” the buyer, who wanted it for immediate use ²¹⁴⁵; another order was made for the specific delivery of an ornamental door designed by the famous architect Adam. ²¹⁴⁶ Similarly, before the 1893 Act, specific performance could be granted to compel sellers to transfer rare or unique articles such as a jewel, ²¹⁴⁷ china vases, ²¹⁴⁸ particular stones from Old Westminster Bridge, ²¹⁴⁹ and, in some cases, chattels which (although not unique) possessed a special value to the plaintiff. ²¹⁵⁰

44-444

In addition to considering the type of goods in question, the court is entitled to look at all the circumstances of the case, ²¹⁵¹ including the conduct of both the buyer ²¹⁵² and the seller, ²¹⁵³ and to consider the hardship which an order would inflict on the seller. ²¹⁵⁴ If the seller becomes insolvent after he has received the price from the buyer but before he has delivered the goods and before the property in them has passed to the buyer, an order for specific performance will give the buyer priority over other creditors of the seller by taking the goods out of the seller's estate: for this reason an order is unlikely to be made in these circumstances. ²¹⁵⁵ Conversely, if the property has passed to the buyer before the seller becomes insolvent, an order will normally be made. ²¹⁵⁶ By subs.(3) of s.52, the court, when making an order for specific performance, also has a wide discretion to impose conditions: thus, the buyer may be ordered to pay the price into court as a condition of the order being made against the seller. ²¹⁵⁷ In another case, a court of first instance made an order in favour of sub-buyers upon payment of their share in the freight of the consignment. ²¹⁵⁸

Injunction

44-445

This is the appropriate remedy when the buyer seeks an order of the court restraining the breach of a purely negative promise by the seller. ²¹⁵⁹ Like specific performance, an injunction is an equitable ²¹⁶⁰ and discretionary ²¹⁶¹ remedy, but, unlike specific performance, it is not expressly referred to in the Act. ²¹⁶² An order for specific delivery of the chattel sold may be supported by an injunction restraining the seller from parting with the chattel to anyone but the buyer. ²¹⁶³ Similarly, the court has power by injunction to prevent a specific chattel from being removed out of the jurisdiction until a question relating to it has been decided by the court, ²¹⁶⁴ or to restrain the seller from preventing the due execution of the contract where the goods sold to the buyer are on the land of the seller, and the contract gives the buyer a right to enter the land to remove the goods. ²¹⁶⁵ But an affirmative obligation will not be enforced by injunction merely because it implies a negative obligation: where a colliery agreed to sell to the buyer all the coal produced for five years, an injunction was not granted to prevent the colliery from being sold to third parties within the five years. ²¹⁶⁶

Declaration ²¹⁶⁷

44-446

In appropriate circumstances, the buyer may obtain a declaration setting out his legal rights against the seller. ²¹⁶⁸ A declaration may be made before any breach of contract has occurred, and may thus guide the parties in the implementation of a contract whose performance is spread over a long period. ²¹⁶⁹ Even where the defendant is liable to pay damages, the claimant may claim only a declaration that the defendant was in breach of contract and that the damages for the loss caused by the breach amounted to a stated sum. ²¹⁷⁰ In one case, ²¹⁷¹ the buyers obtained against the sellers, who had committed a breach of their obligation to deliver, a declaration of indemnity that the buyers were entitled to recover from the sellers such damages as the buyers might be held liable to pay (as a result of the seller's breach) in respect of their legal liability to a sub-buyer. ²¹⁷² However, the Court of Appeal, in another case, ²¹⁷³ has said that the proper course in this situation is for the court to reserve that head of damages.

Claims for possession or damages for conversion

44-447

Where the property in the goods and the immediate right to possession ²¹⁷⁴ of them has passed to the buyer, he may bring against the seller ²¹⁷⁵ a proprietary action for chattels under the law of torts, viz proceedings for wrongful interference with the goods seeking an order for specific delivery of the goods, ²¹⁷⁶ or damages for conversion when the seller's detention of the goods amounts to a denial of the buyer's title to them. ²¹⁷⁷ In Chinery v Viall, ²¹⁷⁸ where the unpaid seller, without a right to resell, wrongfully resold the goods at a time when the original buyer was entitled to possession of them (the sale being on credit terms), ²¹⁷⁹ the seller was held liable to the original buyer for damages for non-delivery, ²¹⁸⁰ or for conversion. ²¹⁸¹

Wrongful re-taking by seller

44-448

Where the property in the goods has passed to the buyer, and the seller has delivered them to him, but the price remains unpaid, the contract of sale is not terminated by the act of the seller in tortiously retaking the goods and reselling them. ²¹⁸² In these circumstances, the seller still has his action for the price, while the buyer (even where his failure to pay the price is a breach of contract) has an independent claim ²¹⁸³ for conversion for the full value of the goods at the time of the retaking ²¹⁸⁴: these are separate claims and neither is a defence to the other. ²¹⁸⁵

²¹¹³. Remedies in cases of illegality, mistake, misrepresentation, frustration and other invalidating causes, are examined in Vol.I.

²¹¹⁴. See above, para.44-056.

²¹¹⁵. See above, paras 44-387 et seq. Under Pt 5A of the Act and now the Consumer Rights Act 2015, the consumer's remedies where the goods do not conform to the contract include "rescission". The traditional remedy of rejection is also available to the consumer, who must therefore compare the relative advantages in pursuing either remedy. See above, paras 38-408 et seq.

²¹¹⁶. This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In consumer contracts for the sale of goods the 2015 Act provides special rules in relation to rejection in consumer sales contracts and provides that in principle the trader has a duty to give the consumer a refund; see above, paras 38-417, 38-419, 38-420.

²¹¹⁷. Other aspects of s.54 are mentioned see above, paras 44-387, 44-419, 44-421.

²¹¹⁸.  See Vol.I, paras 29-057 et seq. Goff and Jones, Law of Unjust Enrichment, 9th edn (2016).

²¹¹⁹. Rowland v Divall [1923] 2 K.B. 500 (see Vol.I, para.29-060; see above, para.44-083; and Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 4-002 et seq.); Barber v NWS Bank Plc [1996] 1 W.L.R. 641. cf. Yeoman Credit Ltd v Apps [1962] 2 Q.B. 508. See the Law Commission's Report No.160 (1987), paras 6.1-6.5.

²¹²⁰. If the contract was divisible, the buyer could recover only the part of the money paid which was apportioned to that part of the contract which the seller had failed to perform: Fibrosa Spolka Akcyjna v Fairbairn Lawson Combe Barbour Ltd [1943] A.C. 32, 77; Devaux v Conolly (1849) 8 C.B. 640. See also Biggerstaff v Rowatt's Wharf Ltd [1896] 2 Ch. 93; Behrend Co Ltd v Produce Brokers Co Ltd [1920] 3 K.B. 530; Ebrahim Dawood Ltd v Heath Ltd [1961] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 512.

²¹²¹. Fitt v Cassanet (1842) 4 M. G. 898.

- 2122. e.g. Comptoir D'Achat et De Vente du Boerenbond Belge SA v Luis de Ridder Limitada (The Julia) [1949] A.C. 293; the Fibrosa case [1943] A.C. 32.
- 2123. The claim in restitution can avoid the rules on damages: see Vol.I, para.29-062. (The buyer could, alternatively, sue for damages—which would include the amount paid to the seller—but he would then have to prove his loss and would be subject to all the rules on damages.)
- 2124. Vol.I, paras 26-209—26-212.
- 2125. Treitel [1966] J.B.L. 211; Sharpe, Injunctions and Specific Performance (looseleaf), paras 8-230—8-510; Jones and Goodhart, Specific Performance, 2nd edn, pp.143-154; Spry, The Principles of Equitable Remedies, 9th edn (2012), Ch.3; and Vol.I, Ch.27, especially paras 27-012—27-018.
- 2126. This section does not apply to consumer contracts for the sale of goods which fall within Ch.2 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. Under Pt 5A of the Act and the Consumer Rights Act 2015, the remedy of specific performance is available to a consumer-buyer to enforce his requirement of the repair or replacement of non-conforming goods. See Harris (2003) 119 L.Q.R. 541. However, the use of specific performance under those provisions is subject to different rules from those governing its use under s.52. See above, para.38-485 on the discretion to order specific performance of the trader's obligations under the Act and para.38-477 in relation to consumer's other remedies generally.
- 2127. See above, paras 44-040 et seq. Provided that the goods are specific or ascertained, s.52 applies whether or not the property in the goods has passed to the buyer: James Jones Sons Ltd v Tankerville [1909] 2 Ch. 440, 445; Re Wait [1927] 1 Ch. 606, 617; Cohen v Roche [1927] 1 K.B. 169, 180. Goods are not ascertained for the purposes of s.52 if they are yet to be manufactured and even then will form an unidentifiable part of the seller's output: TTK LIG Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 1170, [2012] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 429 at [89].
- 2128. If a third party is entitled to enforce a term of the contract under the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999, he may claim any remedy which would be available to him if he were a party: see above, Vol.I, para.18-100.
- 2129. The last subsection, which refers to Scots law, is omitted. The implementation of s.52 is covered by a procedural rule, which provides that a judgment or order for the delivery of goods which does not give the defendant the alternative of paying the assessed value of the goods may be enforced by a "writ of specific delivery" without alternative provision for recovery of the assessed value of the goods: CPR r.83.14.
- 2130. Details must be sought in standard works on equity: Fry, Specific Performance of Contracts, 6th edn, especially pp.36-41; Snell's Principles of Equity, 33rd edn (2015), Ch.17; Ashburner's Principles of Equity, 2nd edn, pp.382-408. See also Vol.I, Ch.27.
- 2131. e.g. Re Wait [1927] 1 Ch. 606 CA.
- 2132. Thus, an order for specific performance could not be made where the seller agreed to supply all the coal that might be required for the buyer's steel works: Dominion Coal Co Ltd v Dominion Iron and Steel Co Ltd [1909] A.C. 293, 311. For an examination of the problems of enforcing longterm supply contracts, see Sharpe at paras 8-390—8-510, 9-130—9-200. Jones and Goodhart at pp.148-149, argue that English courts should follow US practice in being willing to grant specific performance of contracts to sell all the seller's output or to satisfy all the buyer's requirements.
- 2133. The words "and includes ... as aforesaid" were added by s.2(d) of the Sale of Goods (Amendment) Act 1995. The effect of this change on the availability of specific performance is examined see above, para.27-014; paras 44-160 et seq.
- 2134. [1927] 1 Ch. 606 at 630.

- 2135. See above, paras 44-040 et seq., para.44-131. cf. see above, para.44-149.
- 2136. Thames Sack and Bag Co Ltd v Knowles Co Ltd (1918) 88 L.J.K.B. 585, 588 ("ascertained" means that the individuality of the goods must in some way be found out"); cf. Laurie and Morewood v Dudin Sons [1926] 1 K.B. 223 CA (no appropriation by a warehouseman of 200 quarters of maize out of a bulk of 618 quarters). cf. also ss.16, 17 (see above, paras 44-131, 44-134).
- 2137. See above, n.2135.
- 2138. [1927] 1 Ch. 606. (The dissenting judge, at 656, held that s.52 included "the enforcement of a specific equitable assignment or lien".)
- 2139. See also Re London Wine Co (Shippers) [1986] P.C.C. 121. On the facts of Re Wait an order of specific performance would have given the buyer priority over the general creditors in the seller's bankruptcy.
- 2140. Under s.3(2)(a) of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977: see above, para.44-440 n.2131. (By s.2(1) of this Act, the old action of detinue was abolished.) See Cohen v Roche [1927] 1 K.B. 169, 179-180.
- 2141. 1977 Act s.3(3)(b), (4) and (6). See Howard E Perry Co Ltd v British Railways Board [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1375, 1382-1383; Cohen v Roche, see above, at 180-181; above, para.33-013; see below, paras 44-443—44-444.
- 2142. See Fry, Specific Performance of Contracts, 6th edn, pp.36-41. In view of this discretion, the buyer should always ask for damages in the alternative. The buyer may be estopped from seeking an order for specific performance after he has elected to accept damages in lieu thereof: Meng Leong Development Pte Ltd v Jip Hong Trading Co Pte Ltd [1985] A.C. 511 (sale of land).
- 2143. Where damages would be an adequate remedy: Re Wait [1927] 1 Ch. 606, 630 ("Possibly the statutory remedy [s.52] was intended to be available even in those cases"). See Treitel [1966] J.B.L. 211; and Vol.I, paras 27-005 et seq. The wider use of specific performance in the sale of goods is discussed in Butler v Countrywide Finance Ltd [1993] 3 N.Z.L.R. 623. See also Vol.I, paras 27-012—27-015.
- 2144. Fothergill v Rowland (1873) L.R. 17 Eq. 132, 139; Cohen v Roche [1927] 1 K.B. 169 at 179-181 ("ordinary Hepplewhite furniture" which "possessed no special features at all"). See also Re Clarke (1887) 36 Ch. D. 348, 352; and Whiteley Ltd v Hilt [1918] 2 K.B. 808, 819 (a hire-purchase case); Société des Industries Metallurgiques SA v The Bronx Engineering Co Ltd [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 465 CA. cf. Lingen v Simpson (1824) 1 S. S. 600; Sky Petroleum Ltd v VIP Petroleum Ltd [1974] 1 W.L.R. 576 (interlocutory injunction granted to protect the plaintiff's supply of scarce goods).
- 2145. Behnke v Bede Shipping Co Ltd [1927] 1 K.B. 649, 661. See also Allseas International Management Ltd v Panroy Bulk Transport SA [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 370; CN Marine Inc v Stena Line A/B (The Stena Nautica) (No.2) [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 336, 341, 348-349; Eximenco Handels AG v Partrederiet Oro Chief (The Oro Chief) [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 509, 521. cf. a case where the buyer merely intended to resell at a profit: Cohen v Roche, above, at 179–181.
- 2146. Phillips v Lamdin [1949] 2 K.B. 33, 41-42. In Australia, an order has been made in respect of a taxi-cab to which a taxi-cab licence was attached: Dougan v Ley (1946) 71 C.L.R. 142.
- 2147. Pearne v Lisle (1749) Amb. 75, 77.
- 2148. Falcke v Gray (1859) 4 Drew. 651, 658.
- 2149. Thorn v Commissioners of Public Works (1863) 32 Beav. 490.

- 2150. Fry at p.39, citing North v Great Northern Ry (1860) 2 Giff. 64, 69 (an injunction case). See also Harris, Ogus and Phillips (1979) 95 L.Q.R. 581 and cf. the assessment of damages for a personal and subjective “loss of amenity” in Ruxley Electronics and Construction Ltd v Forsyth [1996] A.C. 344; and in Farley v Skinner [2001] UKHL 49, [2002] 2 A.C. 732 (see Vol.I, paras 26-140 et seq.).
- 2151. Fry at Pt III. It is submitted that inadequacy of the price should not be a ground for refusing an order: cf. cases on the sale of land: Coles v Trecothick (1804) 9 Ves. 234, 246; Sullivan v Jacob (1828) 1 Moll. 472, 477. cf. also Falcke v Gray (1859) 4 Drew. 651 at 664-665 (specific performance denied when parties had not been on an equal footing). The defence of set-off is available in a claim for non-money relief (such as specific performance) which itself arises upon non-payment of money: BICC Plc v Burndy Corp [1985] Ch. 232.
- 2152. e.g. Snell’s Equity, 33rd edn (2015), paras 17-038, 17-039; Vol.I, paras 27-037, 27-040.
- 2153. e.g. whether the seller had entered into the contract as the result of a mistake.
- 2154. The authorities for the latter part of this proposition are not sale of goods cases: Tamplin v James (1880) 15 Ch. D. 215, 221; Stewart v Kennedy (1890) 15 App. Cas. 75, 105; Patel v Ali [1984] Ch. 283.
- 2155. See Re Wait [1927] 1 Ch. 606, 640. See Jones and Goodhart at pp.150-152. cf. Anders Utkilens Rederi A/S v O/Y Louisa Stevedoring Co A/B (The Golfstrum) [1985] 2 All E.R. 669, 674.
- 2156. Re BA Peters [2008] EWHC 2205 (Ch), [2008] B.P.I.R. 1180 at [65]-[66].
- 2157. Hart v Herwig (1873) L.R. 8 Ch. App. 860, 864 (a similar injunction case). cf. Langen and Wind Ltd v Bell [1972] Ch. 685. cf. also Harvela Investments Ltd v Royal Trust Co of Canada (CI) Ltd [1986] A.C. 207 (sale of shares: buyer to pay interest on purchase price retained until order made).
- 2158. Re Wait [1926] Ch. 962, 972. The Court of Appeal, however, did not consider this, as it held that no order should have been made: [1927] 1 Ch. 606.
- 2159. e.g. the seller’s express undertaking not to sell similar goods during the two-year period of the contract to any other manufacturer than the buyer: Donnell v Bennet (1883) 22 Ch. D. 835.
- 2160. Sharpe, Injunctions and Specific Performance, 3rd edn, Pt I; Kerr, Injunctions, 6th edn, pp.409 et seq.; Ashburner’s Principles of Equity, 2nd edn, pp.384-387; Snell’s Equity, 33rd edn (2015), Ch.18; Spry, The Principles of Equitable Remedies, 8th edn (2010), Chs 4 and 5; Doherty v Allman (1878) 3 App. Cas. 709, 719-721. See also Vol.I, paras 27-065 et seq.
- 2161. Snell at para.18-36; James Jones Sons Ltd v Tankerville [1909] 2 Ch. 440, 445-446. (But see Snell at para.18-35 (quoting Doherty v Allman, above, at 720).)
- 2162. See, however, s.62(2) preserving “the rules of common law”, which might include the rules of equity: Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 1-007—1-011.
- 2163. Behnke v Bede Shipping Co Ltd [1927] 1 K.B. 649. cf. Dominion Coal Co Ltd v Dominion Iron and Steel Co Ltd [1909] A.C. 293, 310.
- 2164. Hart v Herwig (1873) L.R. 8 Ch. App. 860. cf. North v Great Northern Ry (1860) 2 Giff. 64 (plaintiff hired coal wagons of special value to him: railway company could be restrained from selling them).
- 2165. James Jones Sons Ltd v Tankerville, above (timber growing on the seller’s land). cf. Astro Exito Navegacion SA v Chase Manhattan Bank NA [1983] 2 A.C. 787 (injunction to buyers to sign document needed by sellers to comply with letter of credit: Master of Supreme Court to sign if buyers failed to do so). cf. also an injunction to enforce a buyer’s agreement to obtain all his supplies from the seller: Metropolitan Electric Supply Co Ltd v Ginder [1901] 2 Ch. 799; and an injunction to enforce a “solus agreement”: Esso Petroleum Co Ltd v Harper’s Garage (Stourport) Ltd [1968] A.C. 269 (see Vol.I, paras 16-132, 27-074).

- 2166. Fothergill v Rowland (1873) L.R. 17 Eq. 132. (Such an injunction would have amounted to specific performance “by a roundabout method”: at 140.) cf. Sky Petroleum Ltd v VIP Petroleum Ltd [1974] 1 W.L.R. 576 (interlocutory injunction).
- 2167. See Zamir and Woolf, The Declaratory Judgment, 3rd edn. cf. above, para.44-386.
- 2168. Declaratory proceedings in the Commercial Court are often quicker and cheaper than arbitration: JH Vantol Ltd v Fairclough Dodd Jones Ltd [1955] 1 W.L.R. 642, 648 (approved by the House of Lords in the same case: [1957] 1 W.L.R. 136, 137, 138, 144).
- 2169. Spettabile Consorzio Veneziano di Armamento e Navigazione v Northumberland Shipbuilding Co Ltd (1919) 121 L.T. 628, 635.
- 2170. Louis Dreyfus Co v Parnaso Cia Naviera SA [1959] 1 Q.B. 498, [1960] 2 Q.B. 49. If it would serve a useful purpose, the court may use its discretion to make a negative declaration e.g. to the effect that the claimant is not liable to the defendant in respect of a certain matter: Messier-Dowty Ltd v Sabena SA [2000] 1 W.L.R. 2040 CA.
- 2171. Household Machines Ltd v Cosmos Exporters Ltd [1947] K.B. 217.
- 2172. The amount of this liability was not ascertained at the time of the hearing between the buyer and seller. On this type of liability, see above, para.44-405. cf. Total Liban SA v Vitol Energy SA [2001] Q.B. 643.
- 2173. Trans Trust SPRL v Danubian Trading Co Ltd [1952] 2 Q.B. 297. But see the uncertainty which this decision has created: British Electrical and Associated Industries (Cardiff) Ltd v Patley Pressings Ltd [1953] 1 W.L.R. 280, 284. cf. Deeny v Gooda Walker Ltd (No.3) [1995] 4 All E.R. 289 (not a sale of goods case).
- 2174. cf. the seller’s right to a lien: see above, paras 44-315 et seq.
- 2175. Such an action may also lie against strangers: Chinery v Viall (1860) 5 H. & N. 288 (stranger taking goods out of seller’s possession); cf. Lord v Price (1874) L.R. 9 Ex. 54 (buyer did not have immediate right to possession); Langton v Higgins (1859) 4 H. & N. 402 (wrongful second sale by seller to second buyer); Denny v Skelton (1916) 115 L.T. 305 (part of a cargo taken mistakenly in the name of the wrong sub-buyer). Quaere whether the buyer could bring an action on the case for injury to his reversionary interest in the goods: cf. Mears v L and SW Ry (1862) 11 C.B.(N.S.) 850; and see Bloxam v Sanders (1825) 4 B. & C. 941, 949.
- 2176. See above, para.33-013. cf. s.52 (see above, para.44-440). In proceedings for wrongful interference, the court has a discretion not to order specific delivery of the goods: see above, paras 33-013, 44-443, 44-444.
- 2177. cf. see above, para.44-384.
- 2178. (1860) 5 H. & N. 288.
- 2179. Even where the buyer had failed to pay the price on the date fixed by the contract, he would be entitled to possession of the goods if he tendered the price to the seller within a reasonable time and before the seller had justifiably resold or terminated the contract: Martindale v Smith (1841) 1 Q.B. 389. See also Bloxam v Sanders (1825) 4 B. & C. 941.
- 2180. Fitt v Cassanet (1842) 4 M. & G. 898.
- 2181. Bloxam v Sanders, above, at 949. The damages for conversion are assessed on the basis of the buyer’s actual loss, which is the difference between the market price of the goods at the time of the conversion and the contract price: Chinery v Viall (1860) 5 H. & N. 288. See also above, paras 33-017, 33-018. cf. Johnson v Stear (1863) 15 C.B.(N.S.) 330; Brierly v Kendall (1852) 17 Q.B. 937 (wrongful sale by pledgee); Wickham Holdings Ltd v Brooke House Motors Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 295 (wrongful sale of goods held on hire-purchase terms; distinguished in Chubb Cash Ltd v John Crilley Son [1983] 1 W.L.R. 599).

2182. Page v Cowasjee Eduljee (1866) L.R. 1 P.C. 127.

2183. Proceedings for wrongful interference under the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977.

2184. Stephens v Wilkinson (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 320, 327; Page v Cowasjee Eduljee, above, at 147.

2185. Page v Cowasjee Eduljee (1866) L.R. 1 P.C. 127; Stephens v Wilkinson (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 320, 327; Gillard v Brittan (1841) 8 M. & W. 575; Re Humberston (1846) De & G. 262.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 44 - Sale of Goods
Section 8. - Consumer Protection Act 1987 ²¹⁸⁶

Part I of the 1987 Act

44-449

Part I of the Consumer Protection Act 1987 ²¹⁸⁷ is intended to implement Council Directive 85/374 ²¹⁸⁸ on the approximation of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions of the Member States concerning liability for defective products. Very broadly the effect of the Directive is to impose liability on manufacturers and certain other persons for death, personal injury and physical damage to property caused by defective, i.e. unsafe, products. The liability imposed is (subject to certain defences) a strict liability and does not depend upon proof of negligence. The claimant still bears the burden of proving that the injury or damage complained of was caused by the product and that the product was defective. ²¹⁸⁹ But, where Pt I of the 1987 Act applies, he is relieved from the necessity of proving—as would be the case at common law—either that he was in a contractual relationship with the defendant or that the defendant was negligent. The Act is therefore of particular significance (inter alia) in relation to pharmaceutical products, chemical compounds, foodstuffs, machinery, vehicles and building materials, where a claimant might otherwise encounter difficulty in proving fault on the part of the producer.

Products covered by Pt I

44-450

All goods are covered, ²¹⁹⁰ including component parts and raw materials. ²¹⁹¹

Meaning of “defect”

44-451

⚠ The definition of “defect” in s.3 is closely related to the type of damage which is remediable. There is a defect in a product for the purposes of Pt I if “the safety of the product is not such as persons generally are entitled to expect”; and for those purposes “safety” in relation to a product includes safety with respect to products comprised in that product and safety in the context of risks of damage to property, as well as in the context of risks of death or personal injury. ²¹⁹² By s.3(2) all the circumstances are to be taken into account in determining that standard. ²¹⁹³ ⚠ But three circumstances are specifically mentioned. First:

“the manner in which, and purposes for which, the product has been marketed, its getup, the use of any mark in relation to the product and any instructions for, or warnings with respect to, doing or refraining from doing anything with or in relation to the product.” ²¹⁹⁴

Secondly, “what might reasonably be expected to be done with or in relation to the product”. ²¹⁹⁵ Thirdly, “the time when the product was supplied ²¹⁹⁶ by its producer to another”. ²¹⁹⁷ However, the subsection recognises that improvements over time may render a product progressively more safe, since it provides that a defect is not necessarily to be inferred from the fact alone that the safety of a product which is supplied after that time is greater than the safety of the product in question. ²¹⁹⁸ It will nevertheless be appreciated that the safety standard embodied in this provision is one which is extremely difficult to apply: the product does not have to be absolutely safe and the degree of safety which persons generally are entitled to expect may well depend upon the practicability, and cost, of rendering the product more safe.

Damage giving rise to liability

44-452

By s.5(1), “damage” means death or personal injury ²¹⁹⁹ or any loss of or damage to property (including land). It should be noted that no claim can be made for economic loss incurred by the fact that the product cannot be used or that its use is impaired, or for expenses incurred in replacing or repairing the product or rendering it safe for use. Further s.5 proceeds to impose important restrictions in the case of loss of or damage to property.

Causation

44-453

The claimant must prove that the defect in the product caused the damage. ²²⁰⁰

Damage to product itself

44-454

First, there is no liability under Pt I where a defect in the product causes loss of or damage to the product itself; nor can the producer of a component or materials be liable for loss of or damage to the product of which the component or materials form part. Section 5(2) provides:

“A person shall not be liable ... for the loss of or any damage to the product itself or for the loss of or damage to the whole or any part of any product which has been supplied with the product in question comprised in it.”

Property not for private use

44-455

Secondly, by s.5(3), liability will not be incurred for:

“any loss of or damage to property which, at the time it is lost or damaged, is not–

(a)

of a description of property ordinarily intended for private use, occupation or consumption; and

(b)

intended by the person suffering the loss or damage mainly for his own private use, occupation or consumption.” ²²⁰¹

Damage not exceeding £275

44-456

Thirdly, by s.5(4), no claim can be made by a person for loss of or damage to property if the amount which would fall to be awarded to that person does not exceed £275.

Who can sue

44-457

The right of action conferred by Pt I is not expressly limited to “consumers”. Any person can sue. An action may be brought in respect of death or personal injury even though the product was acquired by a person for the purposes of his business. However, in respect of loss of or damage to property, the restriction imposed by s.5(3) (see above) virtually limits the right of action to consumers.

Upon whom liability is imposed

44-458

Section 2(2) of the Act lists the persons upon whom liability for any damage is imposed. The first such person is “the producer of the product”. ²²⁰² In this context it is necessary to bear in mind that both the producer of a defective component or defective materials and the producer of the finished product which is rendered defective by the inclusion of the defective component or materials may be liable. ²²⁰³ The second is “any person who, by putting his name on the product or using a trade mark or other distinguishing mark in relation to the product, has held himself out to be the producer of the product”. ²²⁰⁴ The third is “any person who has imported the product into a Member State from outside the Member States in order, in the course of a business of his, to supply it to another”. ²²⁰⁵ No doubt the person upon whom liability will most frequently be sought to be imposed will be the producer, e.g. the manufacturer of the product. But the second case mentioned is important for “own brand” products and the third is a novel imposition of liability in tort upon traders who are merely importers. Where two or more persons are liable by virtue of Pt I for the same damage, their liability is joint and several. ²²⁰⁶

Supplier

44-459

By a somewhat complicated provision, s.2(3) further extends liability in certain circumstances to any supplier of the product, i.e. “any person who supplied the product (whether to the person who suffered the damage, to the producer of any product in which the product in question is comprised or to any other person)”. ²²⁰⁷ One purpose of this provision is to enable the person who has suffered the damage, e.g. a retail customer, to trace back the chain of supply to a person or persons who will be liable to him in situations where the identification of those persons is not reasonably practicable, for example, where the product does not bear the manufacturer’s name. A supplier will be liable if he fails to comply with a request made by the person who has suffered the damage to identify one or more of the persons mentioned in s.2(2) (para.44-458, above). However, a supplier may avoid such liability if, on receiving the request, he identifies the person who supplied the product to him. So, for example, a retail customer who is injured by a defective product may first make such a request to the retailer, who can avoid liability by identifying the wholesaler who supplied him with the product. Subsequent requests may then be made to the prior wholesaler, etc. up the chain of supply until the retail customer has identified the persons referred to in s.2(2) upon whom liability is imposed.

Defences

44-460

Section 4(1) of the Act sets out six defences that are available notwithstanding the strict liability imposed. It is a defence for the person proceeded against to show:

- “(a)
 - that the defect is attributable to compliance with any requirement imposed by or under any enactment or with any Community obligation; or
- (b)
 - that the person proceeded against did not at any time supply 2208 the product to another; or
- (c)
 - that the following conditions are satisfied, that is to say—
 - (i)
 - that the only supply 2209 of the product to another by the person proceeded against was otherwise than in the course of a business of that person's; and
 - (ii)
 - that s.2(2) does not apply to that person or applies to him by virtue only of things done otherwise than with a view to profit; or
- (d)
 - that the defect did not exist in the product at the relevant time 2210; or
- (e)
 - that the state of technical and scientific knowledge at the relevant time 2211 was not such that a producer of products of the same description as the product in question might be expected to have discovered the defect if it had existed in his products while they were under his control; or
- (f)
 - that the defect—

- (i) constituted a defect in a product ('the subsequent product') in which the product in question had been comprised; and
- (ii) was wholly attributable to the design of the subsequent product or to compliance by the producer of the product in question with instructions given by the producer of the subsequent product."

Only two of these defences require comment. The defence set out in s.4(1)(d), enables a person to escape liability if he can prove that the defect arose after the time when he supplied the product to another, for example, because of subsequent contamination, or improper treatment, storage, installation or maintenance. ²²¹² The defence set out in s.4(1)(e), sometimes referred to as "the state of the art" or "development risks" defence, is controversial. The Directive allowed Member States, if they so wished, to adopt such a defence, and the United Kingdom exercised this option. ²²¹³ It is of particular importance in relation to pharmaceutical and medical products, to which the thalidomide cases bear witness.

Contributory negligence

44-461

Contributory negligence on the part of the person suffering the damage is also a defence. ²²¹⁴

Limitation

44-462

The Act establishes ²²¹⁵ a three-year limitation period in which to commence proceedings. ²²¹⁶ Actions are also subject to an overriding 10-year cutoff period. ²²¹⁷

Liability in contract ²²¹⁸

44-463

Part I of the Act in no way affects the remedies of a buyer of goods against his immediate seller for breach of the express or implied terms of the contract of sale.

Consumer safety

44-464

Part II of the 1987 Act ²²¹⁹ deals with consumer safety. Section 11 of the Act enables the Secretary of State to make regulations for the purposes of securing that goods are safe, that unsafe goods are not made available to persons generally or to persons of a particular description, and as to information provided in respect of goods. A considerable number of regulations has been made. ²²²⁰ Contravention of the regulations constitutes a criminal offence. ²²²¹ But a failure to perform an obligation imposed by the regulations is also actionable as a breach of statutory duty owed to any person who may be affected by the failure. ²²²²

44-465

The Secretary of State is also empowered to issue prohibition notices ²²²³ and notices to warn ²²²⁴ in respect of goods which he considers are unsafe, and the enforcement authority ²²²⁵ may issue a notice (a suspension notice) prohibiting a person for a limited period from supplying goods if it has reasonable grounds for suspecting that a safety provision has been contravened in relation to the goods in question. ²²²⁶ Goods which contravene a safety provision may be the subject of a forfeiture order. ²²²⁷

The General Product Safety Regulations 2005 ²²²⁸

44-466

These regulations implement Directive 2001/95 of the European Parliament and Council on general product safety. They apply to nearly all products, ²²²⁹ including second-hand or reconditioned goods, intended for consumers or likely to be used by consumers. The central obligation in the Regulations is imposed by reg.5(1): “No producer shall place a product on the market unless it is a safe product”. But “producer” is widely defined ²²³⁰ and a person may also be liable as a “distributor” of a product. ²²³¹ The Regulations contain detailed enforcement provisions.

Misleading price indications

44-467

Part III of the 1987 Act ²²³² rendered it an offence to give, in the course of a business, a misleading price indication to consumers. ²²³³ This was intended to deal (inter alia) with the abuses that can arise from the making of so-called “bargain offers”. Part III ceased to have effect as a result of the Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2008 ²²³⁴ which impose a more general prohibition on misleading commercial practices.

^{2186.} See Miller, Product Liability and Safety Encyclopaedia (1979-date), Div. V; Miller and Goldberg, Product Liability (2004); Miller and Goldberg, Product Liability (1994); Whittaker, Liability for Products (2005); Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.14-0894.

^{2187.} 1987 Act ss.1-9.

^{2188.} [1985] O.J. L210/29.

^{2189.} See paras 44-451, 44-453, below.

^{2190.} “Product” is defined in s.1(2) to mean any goods or electricity. “Goods” are defined in s.45(1) to include substances, growing crops and things comprised in land by virtue of being attached to it and any ship, aircraft or vehicle.

^{2191.} 1987 Act s.1(2). But see ss.1(3), 4(1)(f). The exception for game and primary agricultural produce was removed by SI 2000/2771, implementing Directive 1999/34 ([1999] O.J. L141/20).

^{2192.} 1987 Act s.3(1).

^{2193.}  See Richardson v LRC Products [2000] Lloyd's Rep. Med. 280 (bursting condom leading to pregnancy); A v National Blood Authority [2001] 3 All E.R. 289 (blood infected with hepatitis C); Abouzaid v Mothercare (UK) Ltd, The Times, February 20, 2001 (cover attachment to child's pushchair snaps back); Foster v Biosil (2001) 59 B.M.L.R. 178 (breast implants); B v McDonald's Restaurants Ltd [2002] EWHC 490 (Q.B.D.) (scalding coffee); Palmer v Estate of Palmer [2006] EWHC 1284 (QB) (seat belt); Ide v ATB Sales Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 424, [2009] R.T.R. 8 (handlebar of bicycle); Wilkes v Depuy International Ltd [2016] EWHC 3096 (QB) (failed hip replacement not defective).

2194. 1987 Act s.3(2)(a).

2195. 1987 Act s.3(2)(b).

2196. 1987 Act s.46.

2197. 1987 Act s.3(2)(c).

2198. 1987 Act s.3(2).

2199. Defined in s.45(1). See also s.6(3) (congenital disabilities).

2200. But see Ide v ATB Sales Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 424, [2009] R.T.R. 8 (where various possible explanations exist); Lexus Financial Services T/A Toyota Financial Services UK Plc v Russell [2008] EWCA Civ 424, [2008] P.I.Q.R.P. 13 (probability).

2201. Despite the clumsy double negative, and the use of the word “and” in subs.(3), it is clear that for damage to property to be compensatable the property must fall within both (a) and (b) of this subsection.

2202. 1987 Act s.2(2)(a). “Producer” is defined in s.1(2).

2203. But see s.4(1)(f).

2204. 1987 Act s.2(2)(b). cf. Tesco Stores Ltd v Pollard [2006] EWCA Civ 393.

2205. 1987 Act s.2(2)(c). “Supply” is defined in s.46. See also Ide v ATB Sales Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 424, [2009] R.T.R. 8.

2206. 1987 Act s.2(5).

2207. See s.1(3). See also s.46 (“supply”).

2208. Defined in s.46.

2209. 1987 Act s.46.

2210. “The relevant time” is defined in s.4(2). In essence, it is the time of supply to another. See Piper v JRI Manufacturing Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 1344, [2006] All E.R. (D) 181 (Oct).

2211. 1987 Act s.4(2).

2212. Piper v JRI Manufacturing Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 1344, [2006] 92 B.J.M.L.R. 141 (hip prosthesis).

2213. In Commission of the EC v UK (C300/95) [1997] All E.R. (EC) 481, it was held that s.4(1)(e) had fully implemented art.7 of the Directive. For a discussion of the defence, see Newdick (1988) 47 C.L.J. 55, (1992) 20 Anglo-Am L.R. 309; Hodge (1998) 61 M.L.R. 560. The defence was not made out in A v National Blood Authority [2001] 3 All E.R. 289; and in Abouzaid v Mothercare (UK) Ltd, The Times, February 20, 2001.

2214. 1987 Act s.6(4)(5).

2215. Through s.6 and Sch.1, inserting s.11A into the Limitation Act 1980.

2216. See Vol.I, para.28-009. For substitution under the general provisions of the Limitation Act 1980

- s.35, see OB v Aventis Pasteur SA [2008] UKHL 34, [2008] 4 All E.R. 881; O'Byrne v Aventis Pasteur SA (C-358/08) (ECJ).
- 2217. Limitation Act 1980 s.11A(3); Vol.I, para.28-009.
- 2218. Liability under Pt I is a liability in tort: s.6(7).
- 2219. ss.10–19.
- 2220. Or under the Consumer Safety Act 1978. See Miller, Product Liability and Safety Encyclopedia (1979-date), Div.IV; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.14-129.
- 2221. 1987 Act s.12.
- 2222. 1987 Act s.41.
- 2223. 1987 Act s.13(1)(a). But see the limit imposed by s.13(7), added by SI 2005/1803 reg.46(4).
- 2224. 1987 Act s.13(1)(b), i.e. to warn consumers.
- 2225. Defined in s.45(1) and by reference to s.27. For enforcement, see Pt IV of the Act (ss.27-35).
- 2226. 1987 Act ss.14, 15.
- 2227. 1987 Act s.16.
- 2228. SI 2005/1803. See Miller, Product Liability and Safety Encyclopedia (1979-date), Div.IV; Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), para.14-133.
- 2229. Defined in reg.2(1).
- 2230. SI 2005/1803 reg.2(1).
- 2231. SI 2005/1803 reg.2(1).
- 2232. ss.20–26.
- 2233. s.20(1). See R. v Warwickshire CC Ex p. Johnson [1993] A.C. 583.
- 2234. SI 2008/1277. These Regulations were amended in 2014 (see SI 2014/870 above, para.38-007 and Vol.I, paras 28-055 et seq.).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 45 - Suretyship
Section 1. - In General

General nature of the contract

45-001

A contract of suretyship is in essence a contract by which one person (the surety) agrees to answer for some liability of another (the principal debtor) to a third person (the creditor). The contract may be constituted by a personal engagement on the part of the surety, or by a charge on property without any personal liability, or by both. ¹ Prima facie a surety does not merely undertake to perform if the principal debtor fails to do so; he undertakes to see that the principal debtor will perform. ² Important results flow from this prima facie rule of construction. In particular it means that a surety is normally liable to the same extent as the principal debtor for damages for breach of the latter's obligations even though he has not in terms guaranteed the payment of damages. ³

Parties to the contract

45-002

In Duncan Fox & Co v North & South Wales Bank ⁴ it was pointed out by Lord Selborne that there are three possible variations in the parties to a contract of suretyship. The first and simplest case is that in which all three parties concerned are parties to the contract in the sense that both the principal debtor and the creditor agree that the surety's liability is a secondary liability only, and that the principal debtor is primarily liable for the obligations guaranteed. But it also is possible that the contract of suretyship may be recognised only as between the principal debtor and the surety, or as between the creditor and the surety, in which event the rights and duties arising out of the contract of suretyship only affect those parties.

Contract of suretyship as against principal debtor alone ⁵

45-003

It is by no means unusual for a party to a contract to be a principal debtor as against the creditor, but a surety as against another debtor. Such an arrangement is commonly entered into where the creditor wishes to avoid the technical rules relating to contracts of suretyship under which the surety may become discharged from liability in various circumstances. ⁶ In this event, the transaction takes effect according to its terms, ⁷ that is to say, there will be a contract of suretyship between the principal debtor and the surety, but there will be no contract of suretyship between the surety and the creditor. The creditor is accordingly entitled to treat the surety as a principal debtor in every respect. ⁸

Creditor knows or later discovers that not principal but surety

45-004

However, the mere fact that two parties have, on the face of some written document or instrument, apparently contracted as joint (or joint and several) debtors does not preclude the possibility that one of the debtors is in fact a surety: it is still open to one of the debtors to prove by parol evidence that the creditor knew that the intention of the debtors was that one should be a surety and not a principal debtor.⁹ Thus, it has been held that an agreement expressly declaring a party to be liable “as a primary obligor and not merely as a surety” does not prevent that party being a surety for the purpose of determining the effect of the voidness of the main agreement.¹⁰ Furthermore, even if the creditor does not know that one of the debtors intends to contract only as surety at the time of making the contract, but subsequently has notice of this fact, he will thereafter have to treat that debtor as a surety, with the consequence that any variation by the creditor and principal debtor will discharge the surety.¹¹ And if two parties contract as joint principals in the first instance, but they subsequently agree between themselves that one of them is to assume primary liability, the creditor will, on acquiring notice of this fact, be obliged to treat the other as a surety only.¹²

Contract of suretyship as against creditor alone

45-005

It is also perfectly possible for a surety to guarantee the liability of a third person in such circumstances that a contract of suretyship is created as against the creditor, but not as against the principal debtor. Normally a guarantee is entered into at the request, express or implied, of the principal debtor, and this suffices to create a contract of suretyship as against him, but the contract may not be entered into at his request at all. For example, a “recourse agreement”¹³ entered into by a dealer at the request of a finance company, whereby the dealer guarantees the due performance of a hire-purchase agreement, may be a contract of suretyship as against the creditor (the finance company) but there will not be a contract of suretyship as against the debtor (the hirer). Similarly, it often happens that a surety guarantees a loan made to a company at the request of the company's parent or holding company, and the company-debtor may not itself be in a contractual relationship with the surety.¹⁴ In practice, however, this will usually make little difference to the rights and duties of the parties. The principal right of a surety as against the debtor is his right to be indemnified by him if called on to meet the liability,¹⁵ and even if there is no contract of suretyship as against the debtor, there will still be a right to an indemnity, though in this case it will arise only by way of subrogation or by way of a right to restitution.¹⁶ Such a right may be less extensive than a contractual right to an indemnity in some cases. For example, a surety has a right that the principal debtor should meet his obligations and this right may be enforceable to some extent even before the surety has been called upon to pay¹⁷; but a guarantor who has no contract of suretyship as against the debtor probably has no right to require the debtor to meet his obligations, and subrogation and restitution probably give no remedy until actual payment.¹⁸ There is also a danger that subrogation rights may be lost by a technical “payment” of the debt, even though the money is provided by the surety.¹⁹

Indemnities

45-006

The term “indemnity” is used in the law in several different senses. In its widest sense it means recompense for any loss or liability which one person has incurred, whether the duty to indemnify comes from an agreement or not.²⁰ For example, where a breach of contract gives rise to a claim for damages, that claim may include a claim to be indemnified against some loss or liability.²¹ So also, on rescission of a contract for misrepresentation, the representee may be entitled to an indemnity against liabilities incurred under the contract even where there is no claim to damages.²² In cases of this nature the claim to an indemnity arises by operation of law, not out of a contract of indemnity.²³ A person who breaks a contract or makes a misrepresentation is not agreeing to indemnify the other party against the loss he may suffer. Indemnities of this nature fall outside the scope of this chapter. But an obligation to indemnify another may also arise out of a contract of indemnity, and the term “contract of indemnity” is also used in more than one sense. In its widest sense a contract of indemnity includes all contracts of guarantee and many contracts of insurance; in its narrow sense, a contract of indemnity is used in contrast to a contract of guarantee, and it is in this narrow sense that the term is generally used in this chapter.

Guarantees and indemnities: the significance of the distinction

45-007

The distinction between a contract of indemnity and a contract of guarantee was originally evolved by the courts in the process of construing s.4 of the Statute of Frauds 1677 which required writing for certain classes of contracts including contracts of guarantee, and it is therefore dealt with in detail in the consideration of that section.²⁴ But the distinction has also come to have a more general importance throughout the law of suretyship and it is therefore necessary to explain it briefly here. Thus, apart from the fact that contracts of guarantee but not of indemnity must be evidenced by a note or memorandum in writing under the Statute of Frauds, the distinction is of importance in at least three other situations. First, the question whether a surety is liable where the main contract is void because of the principal debtor's incapacity, has been said to depend on the distinction between guarantees and indemnities,²⁵ and the same may also be true of other invalidating causes. Secondly, the liability of a guarantor is normally co-extensive with the liability of the principal debtor, so that if the debtor is discharged the surety will also be discharged, whereas if the contract is one of indemnity, the surety is not necessarily discharged.²⁶ Thirdly, certain other rules of law apply to guarantees (where only a secondary liability is undertaken) but not to indemnities (where a primary liability is undertaken), for example, the rule that any material variation of the contract between the debtor and the creditor will in principle discharge a guarantor but not a person undertaking a primary liability.²⁷

Guarantees and indemnities: the distinction itself

45-008

The distinction between the two contracts is, in brief, that in a contract of guarantee the surety assumes a secondary liability to answer for the debtor who remains primarily liable; whereas in a contract of indemnity the surety assumes a primary liability, either alone or jointly with the principal debtor.²⁸ Whether a contract falls into one class or the other, and whether the normal incidents of a contract of that class are modified, are ordinary questions of construction.²⁹ In this respect, while the presence or absence of the language of "guarantee" in the document is not conclusive, outside the context of documents issued by banks,³⁰ the absence of language appropriate to provide for the creditor "the additional security of a demand bond" creates a strong presumption in favour of a merely secondary liability.³¹ Moreover:

"with the parties free to agree whatever terms they choose, there is in this field of law a spectrum of contractual possibilities ranging from the classic contract of guarantee, properly so called, at the one end, where liability of the guarantor is exclusively secondary and will be discharged if, for example, there is any material variation to the underlying contract between principal and creditor, to the performance or demand bond (or demand guarantee)³² at the other end, where liability in the giver of the bond may be triggered by mere demand and without proof of default by the principal (and indeed where it may be apparent that the principal is not in default)."³³

However, as has been explained, the nature of the relationship between the creditor and the surety may differ from the nature of the relationship between the debtor and the surety. It is therefore possible that even where the relationship between the surety and the creditor is that of a contract of indemnity, the debtor may still be primarily liable as between himself and the surety.³⁴ Thus although a contract of indemnity cannot itself be a contract of suretyship, the party liable under such a contract may be a surety as against the debtor and it is common and convenient to speak of him as such, even though he has assumed a primary liability towards the creditor. On the other hand, it is of course perfectly possible to have a contract of indemnity in which there is no suretyship at all, because, for example, the party liable under the indemnity has not contracted at the request of another debtor. Thus a dealer who agrees by a "recourse agreement" to indemnify a finance company against any loss under a hire-purchase transaction is not a surety either against the creditor or against the debtor. And even where, as between two debtors, one is primarily liable and the other only secondarily liable, there is not necessarily a contract of suretyship. For instance, where a tenant assigns his interest under a lease and the assignee covenants to indemnify the assignor against liability for breach of covenants in the lease, the assignee is, as between himself and the assignor, primarily liable, but there is no contract of suretyship between them. ³⁵ And similarly, where property is sold subject to a mortgage, the mortgagor is not surety for the purchaser. ³⁶

Performance guarantees ³⁷

45-009

⚠ A number of cases have involved discussion of the nature of “performance guarantees” which are, in essence, exceptionally stringent contracts of indemnity. ³⁸ They are contractual undertakings, normally granted by banks, to pay or repay, a specified sum in the event of any default in performance by the principal debtor of some other contract with a third party, the creditor. Sometimes the bank’s liability arises on mere demand by the creditor, notwithstanding that it may appear on the evidence that the principal debtor is not in any way in default, or even that the creditor himself is in default under the principal contract. ³⁹ Such guarantees are sometimes called “first demand guarantees” ⁴⁰ or “demand bonds”. ⁴¹ It has been held that performance guarantees of this nature are analogous to a bank’s letter of credit, and that the bank’s liability is of a primary nature which is unaffected by allegations that the creditor is in breach of the main contract between him and the principal debtor. ⁴² The question whether a particular instrument (such as a “refund guarantee”) takes the form of an independent performance bond (or stand-by letter of credit) or a true “see to it” guarantee is one of construction of the instrument in its factual and contractual context having regard to its commercial purpose. ⁴³ While there may be a number of indications in an instrument which argue in favour of it being a “true guarantee” or, conversely, an “on-demand bond”,

“[w]here an instrument (i) relates to an underlying transaction between the parties in different jurisdictions, (ii) is issued by a bank, (iii) contains an undertaking to pay ‘on demand’ (with or without the words ‘first’ and/or ‘written’) and (iv) does not contain clauses excluding or limiting the defences available to a guarantor, it will almost always be construed as a demand guarantee.” ⁴⁴ ⚠

On the other hand, there is a “strong presumption” that a “guarantee” concluded other than by a bank is not a demand or independent performance bond, ⁴⁵ ⚠ although this presumption may be rebutted.

⁴⁶ ⚠ In the event of fraud the court may be able to intervene to protect the surety; but the court has refused to imply a term to the effect that the beneficiary of such a guarantee will give notice of a claim only if there is reasonable cause. ⁴⁷ Clear evidence is needed that the beneficiary’s demand is fraudulent to the knowledge of the bank if the bank is to be restrained from paying under such a guarantee or bond, but this does not mean that all possible explanations other than fraud must be totally ruled out. It means that fraud must be the “only realistic inference”. ⁴⁸

Performance guarantees: counter-guarantee or indemnity

45-010

The bank or other financial institution which grants a performance guarantee will, of course, demand a counter-guarantee or indemnity from the customer at whose request the guarantee is granted. ⁴⁹ As the customer will be liable to reimburse the bank on their payment under the guarantee, and as he will be unable to prevent the bank from paying (except in cases of fraud) when demand is made on the bank, his position is clearly perilous: “these performance guarantees are virtually promissory notes payable on demand”. ⁵⁰ Such a counter-indemnity by a customer in favour of a guaranteeing bank takes effect according to its terms. For example, where the customer agrees to indemnify the bank in respect of claims made “under or in connection with the issue of the guarantee” and the guarantee obligations are expressed not to be “in any way discharged or diminished” by the guarantee’s total or partial invalidity, then the bank may claim on the indemnity in respect of payments made by it under or in connection with the guarantee even if the latter was at no time legally valid. ⁵¹ Of course, the party at whose request a performance guarantee is issued, may have his remedy on the contract in the event of his being wrongfully called upon to pay, as the result of his bank's being similarly called upon. But where the other contracting party is abroad, and the contract is governed by the law of a foreign country, this remedy may in practice be of small value.

Performance guarantees: injunction to restrain creditor

45-011

It may, however, be somewhat easier to obtain an injunction to restrain the creditor himself from receiving payment from the bank, particularly where an interim remedy is being sought; but even in this sort of procedure, it has been held that an interim remedy should not normally be given unless the validity of the bond or guarantee is itself being challenged, or unless the circumstances are such that they would justify the grant of a freezing injunction. ⁵²

Performance guarantees: implied term for repayment

45-012

In Cargill International SA v Bangladesh Sugar and Food Industries Corp ⁵³ the Court of Appeal held that a party to a contract who has paid money under a performance bond to the other party may recover it, provided that the latter has suffered no damage in consequence of the first party's breach. According to Potter L.J., in view of the very considerable commercial advantages which a performance bond gives to its beneficiary, "the obligation to account later to the seller, in respect of what turns out to be an overpayment, is a necessary corrective if a balance of commercial fairness is to be maintained between the parties". ⁵⁴ Furthermore, the court construed a clause of the contract between the parties which referred to the bond being "forfeited" as referring to the bond (i.e. the exercise of party's right to call on the bond as against the bank), not to the moneys paid under the bond, a result which, according to the learned Lord Justice, "accords more with reason, fairness and commercial good sense" as to exclude the obligation to account "would be to provide the defendant with a substantial windfall in any case where it had suffered no loss or relatively nominal loss, and would run counter to the general proposition that compensation for breach of contract depends on proof of loss". ⁵⁵ On the other hand, in Uzinterimpex JSC v Standard Bank Plc ⁵⁶ a demand guarantee was given by a seller's bank to a buyer's bank (which financed the transaction) in respect of advance payments of the purchase price of goods not delivered. In these circumstances, the Court of Appeal refused to imply a term that, if any demand made under it should exceed the loss sustained by the buyer of goods or the buyer's bank, or should otherwise be excessive, the buyer's bank would repay the excess to the seller's bank/guarantor on the basis that if such a term were not implied, the buyer's bank would obtain a windfall. ⁵⁷ According to Moore-Bick L.J.,

"The guarantee stands as an independent contract between [the seller's bank] and the [buyer's bank] and is capable of operating effectively without the need for such a term. If a demand under the guarantee resulted in the wrongful refund of part of the price due to the seller, the seller would have a remedy against [the buyer] under the contract of sale. ... That provides the answer to the 'windfall' argument, despite the fact that in this case the remedy may be of little practical value because [the buyer] is insolvent." ⁵⁸

Moreover, in the learned Lord Justice's view, there are:

"... other, and perhaps even stronger, reasons why [the argument for an implied term] must be rejected. It is essential to the maintenance of international commerce, much of which is supported by undertakings of this kind given by banks and other financial institutions, that the documents by which those undertakings are given should operate in accordance with the terms which appear on their face ... [Banks] cannot be expected to be aware of, or to implement, terms that do not appear on the face of the documents. The implied term for which [the seller's bank] contends would have the potential effect of imposing on [the buyer's bank] a liability which could not be identified from the face of the document and which would be very uncertain in its effect.”⁵⁹

And in *Wuhan Guoyu Logistics Group Co Ltd v Emporiki Bank of Greece SA*⁶⁰ the Court of Appeal rejected an analogous claim by a bank based on constructive trust. There the bank had paid under an on-demand performance guarantee in respect of a buyer's obligations to a seller, but it was later established by arbitration that the sums paid had not fallen due by the buyer. According to Christopher Clarke L.J. (with whom Rimer and Longmore L.JJ. agreed), the principles according to which such a guarantee is independent of disputes between the seller and the buyer:

“are completely inimical to the implication of a trust impressed upon the monies in the Seller's hands by reason of circumstances arising after accrual of the Seller's completed cause of action under the guarantee. It is critical to the efficacy of these financial arrangements that as between beneficiary and bank the position crystallises as at presentation of documents or demand as the case may be, and that it is only in the case of fraudulent presentation or demand by the beneficiary that the bank can resist payment against an apparently conforming presentation or demand.”⁶¹

Nor is there anything unconscionable in the seller retaining sums paid by the bank in these circumstances.⁶²

“Charge-back transactions”

45-013

In *Tam Wing Chuen v Bank of Credit & Commerce Hong Kong Ltd*⁶³ the Privy Council considered the legal effect of a deposit of funds by A to B to be used to secure a loan by B to C, a transaction known as a “charge-back”. It held that the question whether A (the depositor) should be considered personally liable to B in respect of the loan (and therefore a guarantor) is a question of construction of the contract under which he made the deposit. In this respect, Lord Mustill observed that the mere “[c]onsistency with [such a personal] liability [in the depositor] which could have been expressed is no ground for imposing a liability which was not expressed”.⁶⁴

Assignment by creditor of benefit of contract guaranteed

45-014

In Kumar v Dunning, the Court of Appeal held that an assignment of the reversion of a lease may pass the benefit of a covenant by a surety which guaranteed the tenant's covenants, even in the absence of an express assignment of such benefit.⁶⁵ The court was satisfied that such a covenant by the surety “touches and concerns the land” so as to come within the general rules as to the running of positive covenants with land⁶⁶ and that this result accorded with “the commercial common sense and justice of the case”.⁶⁷ However, the court⁶⁸ distinguished the position in an Australian case, in which it was held that an assignment of a mortgage did not operate to transfer the benefit of a covenant by a surety that the borrower would repay the principal debt on the basis that neither the borrower's nor the surety's covenant to pay the principal could “touch and concern” the land.⁶⁹ This approach was followed by the House of Lords in *P & A Swift Investments v Combined English Stores Group Plc*⁷⁰: as Lord Templeman observed, “[a] covenant by a surety that a tenant's covenant which touches and concerns the land shall be performed and observed must itself be a covenant which touches and concerns the land”.⁷¹ However, this position at common law was changed as regards “new tenancies” (notably, those which were entered on or after January 1, 1996)⁷² by s.3(1) of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995, which provides that:

“... the benefit and burden of all landlord and tenant covenants of a tenancy—shall be annexed and incident to the whole, and to each and every part, of the premises demised by the tenancy and of the reversion in them, and shall in accordance with this section pass on an assignment of the whole or any part of those premises or of the reversion in them.”

(a)

(b)

Thus, with the qualifications which appear in s.3(3) of this Act, the benefit of a covenant by a surety guaranteeing the tenant's covenants will pass on assignment by the landlord whether or not it “touches and concerns the land”.

Guarantees of tenancy covenants on assignment: common law

45-015

At common law, a tenant remains liable on assignment of his interest under the lease for the payment of rent and due performance of other tenants' covenants, this being the result of privity of contract remaining between the landlord and original tenant, even though assignment creates privity of estate between the landlord and tenant's assignee. ⁷³ Furthermore, any guarantee of a tenant's covenants in principle also remains enforceable by the landlord (and, as we have seen, often by the landlord's assignees) ⁷⁴ notwithstanding assignment by the tenant.

New tenancies: breaking privity of contract

45-016

⚠ However, this position was radically altered by the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995. ⁷⁵ First, the key purposes of this Act were to “break privity of contract” after assignment by the tenant and, on the fulfilment of certain conditions, by the landlord, terminating their contractual obligations inter se, but to preserve and extend the effectiveness of tenancy obligations for those within privity of estate. ⁷⁶ However, this “breaking of privity” does not rule out the creation of liability in a former tenant for the performance of the tenant's covenants by his assignee as s.16(1) of the 1995 Act provides that “where on an assignment a tenant is to any extent released from a tenant covenant of a tenancy by virtue of this Act ... nothing in this Act ... shall preclude him from entering into an authorised guarantee agreement with respect to the performance of that covenant by the assignee”, s.16(8) expressly declaring that “the rules of law relating to guarantees (and in particular those relating to the release of sureties) are, subject to its terms, applicable in relation to any authorised guarantee agreement as in relation to any other guarantee agreement”. ⁷⁷ It is clearly important to note that s.16 applies only to “new tenancies” as defined by s.1 of the Act, which include, notably, those made on or after January 1, 1996 ⁷⁸ and is carefully restricted by subss.3 and 4 of s.16, to which further reference should be made. On the other hand, a landlord is not automatically entitled to require as a condition for his consent to an assignment under the terms of a lease granted before the coming into force of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 the entering by the assigning tenant of an “authorised guarantee agreement” under s.16 of that Act, for by s.19(1) of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 such a consent to assignment can be refused only if it is reasonable for him to do so ⁷⁹ and any unreasonable refusal would prevent a landlord's requirement of such a guarantee from being “lawfully imposed” as the 1995 Act requires.⁸⁰ Moreover, where the renewal of a tenancy granted before the coming into force of the 1995 Act is to be ordered under Pt 2 of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954,⁸¹ the landlord may not as a condition of his consent to renewal of the lease require a clause in the new lease to allow him automatically to require an “authorised guarantee agreement” be entered by the tenant on the latter’s assignment.⁸² Given that the 1995 Act prevents a landlord from enjoying the rights on assignment of the term of the lease which he had enjoyed under the old law, the 1954 Act does not entitle the landlord to say that on renewal under that Act, he should be given as generous terms as the 1995 Act provides:

“The 1995 Act represents a sea change in the law relating to the tenant’s liability after he assigns the lease, and it also alters the law relating to the landlord’s power to impose terms on assigning the lease. It does not merely represent a sea change in what had been common practice, but in what a landlord can lawfully require, both in terms of what is to be included in the lease initially and what he can demand on assignment.”⁸³

Instead, at least in some circumstances, a clause allowing a landlord to require such a guarantee by the tenant only if reasonable represents a fair balance between the interests of the landlord and of the tenant.⁸⁴ If, prior to assignment, performance of the tenant’s covenants is guaranteed by a third party, that person will be released on assignment to the same extent as the tenant.⁸⁵  And if the landlord purports to require such a third party surety to guarantee performance by the assignee, that agreement will not count as an “authorised guarantee agreement” (as not being made with the tenant⁸⁶) and may be void as frustrating the operation of the Act for his release.⁸⁷ The Court of Appeal has held that a clause in a contract of guarantee of a tenant’s obligations under a lease which requires the guarantor to give a further guarantee in respect of an assignee of a lease is not enforceable, as this would frustrate the operation of the Act.⁸⁸

All tenancies: former tenants and guarantors

45-017

Secondly, s.17 of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995, which applies to all tenancies whether new or otherwise,⁸⁹ subjects the liability of a former tenant or his guarantor for rent, service charge or liquidated damages for breach of covenant, to a condition of service by the landlord within six months of the charge becoming due of a notice informing either the tenant, or the guarantor as the case may be, “that the charge is now due; and that in respect of the charge the landlord intends to recover from the former tenant [or guarantor] such amount as is specified in the notice and (where payable) interest calculated on such basis as is so specified”.⁹⁰ Where such a notice has been served, the former tenant or guarantor’s liability is in principle restricted to the amount specified in it.⁹¹ Moreover, s.19(1) of the same Act provides that where any person makes full payment as he has been duly required to under s.17, then he “shall be entitled ... to have the landlord under that tenancy grant him an overriding lease of the premises demised by the tenancy”. The purpose of such a legally imposed lease is to give the claimant some control over the defaulting tenant and in this respect s.19(8)(a) provides that where two or more requests for such an overriding lease are made on the same day, then a request by a former tenant shall be treated as made before a request made by a guarantor.

All tenancies: new variations

45-018

Thirdly, s.18(1) and (2) provide that a former tenant “shall not be liable ... to pay any amount in respect of the covenant to the extent that the amount is referable to any relevant variation of the tenant covenants of the tenancy effected after the assignment”, “relevant variation” being defined by s.18(4). Similarly, s.18(3) provides that a guarantor of a former tenant’s covenants “(where his liability ... is not wholly discharged by any such variation of the tenant covenants of the tenancy) shall not be liable under the agreement to pay any amount in respect of the covenant to the extent that the amount is referable to any such variation". It is to be noted that s.18 applies to all tenancies whether new or otherwise,⁹² but only to new variations of tenant covenants (i.e. those effected on or after January 1, 1996).⁹³

-
1. Smith v Wood [1929] 1 Ch. 14; Re Conley [1938] 2 All E.R. 127.
 2. Moschi v Lep Air Services Ltd [1973] A.C. 331. cf. Trafalgar House Construction (Regions) Ltd v General Surety & Guarantee Co Ltd [1996] 1 A.C. 199; Sunbird Plaza Pty Ltd v Maloney (1988) 166 C.L.R. 245 HC Aus.
 3. Moschi [1973] A.C. 331. For other consequences of this rule of construction, see paras 45-040, 45-086.
 4. (1880) 6 App. Cas. 1, 11–12. See also Selous Street Properties Ltd v Oronel Fabrics Ltd (1984) 270 E.G. 643.
 5. This paragraph was quoted by Rix L.J. (with whom Sir Anthony Clarke M.R. and Arden L.J. agreed) with apparent approval in Berghoff Trading Ltd v Swinbrook Developments Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 413, [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 233 at [25].
 6. See below, paras 45-085 et seq.
 7. Duncan Fox & Co v North and South Wales Bank, above, at 11–12; Nicholas v Ridley [1904] 1 Ch. 192.
 8. See footnote above. See also Esso Petroleum Co Ltd v Alstonbridge Properties Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1474.
 9. Mutual Loan Fund Association v Sudlow (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 449.
 10. Heald v O'Connor [1971] 1 W.L.R. 497; cf. General Produce Co v United Bank Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 255.
 11. Oakeley v Pasheller (1836) 4 Cl. & Fin. 207; Overend Gurney & Co v Oriental Financial Corp (1874) L.R. 7 H.L. 348; Goldfarb v Bartlett [1920] 1 K.B. 639 and see below, para.45-104.
 12. Rouse v Bradford Banking Co Ltd [1894] A.C. 586.
 13. As to these, see above, para.39-180. Recourse agreements will usually be drafted as indemnities and not guarantees (see below, paras 45-006 et seq., 45-044 as to this distinction) but there is nothing to prevent such an agreement being drafted as a guarantee, though it will not be a security within the meaning of s.189(1) of the Consumer Credit Act 1974, for it is not entered into at the request (express or implied) of the debtor or hirer.
 14. See, e.g. Brown Shipley & Co Ltd v Amalgamated Investment (Europe) BV [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 488.
 15. See below, para.45-125.
 16. See below, para.45-126.
 17. See below, para.45-133.
 18. See also below, paras 45-131, 45-132. And see above, para.42-114, as to subrogation.
 19. Brown Shipley & Co Ltd v Amalgamated Investment (Europe) BV [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 488.

- 20. Pitts v Jones [2007] EWCA Civ 1301, [2008] 2 W.L.R. 1289 at [21]. Cf. Vol.I, paras 15-018 and 15-088—15-090 (indemnity clauses).
- 21. See, e.g. Lister v Romford Ice & Cold Storage Co Ltd [1957] A.C. 555 (employer's right to indemnity in respect of vicarious liability arising from employee's negligence); cf. Morris v Ford Motor Co Ltd [1973] Q.B. 792.
- 22. See Vol.I, paras 7-129—7-130.
- 23. There are some cases in which it is hard to say whether the liability arises by operation of law or from an implied contract of indemnity; see, e.g. Secretary of State v Bank of India [1938] 2 All E.R. 797, 800.
- 24. See below, paras 45-042 et seq.
- 25. See below, para.45-040.
- 26. See below, paras 45-086 et seq.
- 27. Holme v Brunskill (1877) 3 Q.B.D. 495 (on which see below, paras 45-104 et seq.); Marubeni Hong Kong and South China Ltd v The Mongolian Government [2005] EWCA Civ 395, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 2497.
- 28. This sentence was quoted by the Court of Appeal with apparent approval in Marubeni Hong Kong and South China Ltd v The Mongolian Government [2005] EWCA Civ 395, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 2497 at [20]. See also Vossloh Aktiengesellschaft v Alpha Trains (UK) Ltd [2010] EWHC 2443 (Ch), [2010] All E.R. (D) 86 (Oct) at [23]–[25].
- 29. Moschi v Lep Air Services Ltd [1973] A.C. 331; Associated British Ports v Ferryways NV [2009] EWCA Civ 189, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 595.
- 30. See below, para.45-009 (performance guarantees).
- 31. Marubeni Hong Kong and South China Ltd v The Mongolian Government [2005] EWCA Civ 395, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 2497 at [30].
- 32. On which see below, para.45-009.
- 33. Vossloh Aktiengesellschaft v Alpha Trains (UK) Ltd [2010] EWHC 2443 (Ch), [2010] All E.R. (D) 86 (Oct) at [34], per Sir William Blackburne.
- 34. But the “common form” provision stating that the guarantor is liable as a principal debtor does not convert every guarantee into an indemnity: General Produce Co v United Bank Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 255.
- 35. Baynton v Morgan (1888) 22 Q.B.D. 74 and see Allied London Investments Ltd v Hambro Life Assurance Ltd (1983) 269 E.G. 41; and Selous Street Properties Ltd v Oronel Fabrics Ltd (1984) 270 E.G. 643 and 743. On the effect of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 on tenant's covenants on assignment see below, paras 45-015—45-017.
- 36. Re Errington [1894] 1 Q.B. 11.
- 37. See further above, paras 37-126 et seq.
- 38. Edward Owen Engineering Ltd v Barclays Bank International Ltd [1978] Q.B. 159; RD Harbottle (Mercantile) Ltd v National Westminster Bank Ltd [1978] Q.B. 146; Howe Richardson Scale Co Ltd v Polimex-Cekop [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 161; Bolivinter Oil SA v Chase Manhattan Bank NA [1984] 1 W.L.R. 392; Attaleia Marine Co Ltd v Bimeh Iran (Iran Insurance Co) (The Zeus) [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 497. cf. Trafalgar House Construction (Regions) Ltd v General Surety & Guarantee Co Ltd [1996] 1 A.C. 199; Frans Maas (UK) Ltd v Habib Bank AG Zurich [2001]

Lloyd's Rep. Bank 14; Solo Industries UK Ltd v Canara Bank [2001] EWCA Civ 1059, [2001] 1 W.L.R. 1800; Banque Saudi Fransi v Lear Siegler Services Inc [2005] EWHC 2395, [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 273; Wuhan Guoyu Logistics Group Co Ltd v Emporiki Bank of Greece SA [2012] EWCA Civ 1629, [2012] 2 C.L.C. 986.

39. See cases cited in previous note; cf. General Surety & Guarantee Co Ltd v Francis Parker Ltd (1977) 6 Build. L.R. 16. This does not mean, though, that a bank must always pay when asked: "a Bank is not obliged to accept without investigation a demand which is ambiguous, or potentially misleading": Frans Maas (UK) Ltd v Habib Bank AG Zurich, above, at [27].
40. See further on the nature and variety of such guarantees, Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), Ch.24 especially at paras 24-003—24-006, contrasting "orthodox guarantees" and "autonomous guarantees". Benjamin's Sale of Goods, paras 24-007—24-008 explains the various international uniform rules which may be incorporated into an "autonomous guarantee", notably the I.C.C. Uniform Rules on Demand Guarantees (URDG 458) whose revised version URDG 758 applies, subject to contrary intention, to any guarantee incorporating the URDG issued on or after July 1, 2010. For an example of the application of the URDG 458 see Meritz Fire & Marine Insurance Co Ltd v Jan de Nul NV [2011] EWCA Civ 827, [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 379.
41. Marubeni Hong Kong and South China Ltd v The Mongolian Government [2005] EWCA Civ 395, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 2497 at [30].
42. See cases cited in n.38 above. As to bankers' letters of credit, see above, paras 34-445 et seq.
43. Gold Coast Ltd v Caja de Ahorros del Mediterraneo [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 617, 620; Marubeni Hong Kong and South China Ltd v The Mongolian Government [2005] EWCA Civ 395, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 2497 at [28].
44.  Paget's Law of Banking, 11th edn (1996), quoted with approval by the Court of Appeal in Caja de Ahorros v Gold Coast Ltd [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 617 at [16]; Wuhan Guoyu Logistics Group Co Ltd v Emporiki Bank of Greece SA [2012] EWCA Civ 1629, [2012] 2 C.L.C. 986 at [26]–[27]; Caja de Ahorros v Gold Coast Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1806, [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 617 at [16]; Caterpillar Motoren GmbH & Co KG v Mutual Benefits Assurance Co [2015] EWHC 2304 (Comm), [2016] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 322 at [13]–[15], [19]–[22] and [25]–[27]; Spliethoff's Bevrachtungskantoor BV v Bank of China Ltd [2015] EWHC 999 (Comm), [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 123 at [69]–[85]. But where a contract contains a clause as is mentioned in (iv) of "Paget's presumption" this may be explicable as inserted so as to put beyond doubt that the rule applicable to true guarantees does not apply: [2015] EWHC 2304 (Comm) at [21], referring to Caja de Ahorros v Gold Coast Ltd del Mediterraneo [2001] EWCA Civ 1806, [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 617 at [25]. The passage quoted appears in almost identical words in Paget's Law of Banking, 14th edn (2014), para.34.8.
45.  Marubeni Hong Kong and South China Ltd v The Mongolian Government [2005] EWCA Civ 395, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 2497 at [30]; IIG Capital LLC v Van Der Merwe [2008] EWCA Civ 542, [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 187 at [8]. cf. Caterpillar Motoren GmbH & Co KG v Mutual Benefits Assurance Co [2015] EWHC 2304 (Comm), [2016] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 322 at [20] (no material distinction between bank and other financial institution, such as an insurance company engaged in the business of providing bonds to its customers).
46.  IIG Capital LLC v Van Der Merwe [2008] EWCA Civ 542, [2008] EWCA Civ 542 at [33], per Waller L.J. (with whom Lawrence Collins and Rimer L.J.J. agreed). cf. Carey Value Added SL v Grupo Urvasco SA [2010] EWHC 1905 (Comm), [2011] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 140 at [38]–[43]; Vossloh Aktiengesellschaft v Alpha Trains (UK) Ltd [2010] EWHC 2443 (Ch), [2010] All E.R. (D) 86 (Oct) at [53]; North Shore Ventures Ltd v Anstead Holdings Inc [2011] EWCA Civ 230, [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 45 at [46]–[47]. Where the main contract is in the nature of a financing transaction (even though in the form of a sale and demise charter with a "deed of guarantee" as part of it), any presumption generally applicable to non-banking cases will more readily give way to language to the contrary: Bitumen Invest AS v Richmond Mercantile Ltd FZC [2016]

- EWHC 2957 (Comm)*, [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 219 at [17] (where the fact that the trigger for payment was the issue of a demand for an amount certified by the beneficiary of the guarantee provided the key feature in finding it to be an "on demand guarantee" ([2016] EWHC 2957 (Comm) esp. at [21]–[26])).
- 47. State Trading Corp of India Ltd v ED & F Man (Sugar) Ltd [1981] Com. L.R. 235.
- 48. United Trading Corp SA v Allied Arab Bank Ltd [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 554; TTI Team Telecom International Ltd v Hutchison 3G UK Ltd [2003] EWHC 762, [2003] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 914 at [29] et seq.; Korea Industry Co v Andoll [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 183 CA Sing. cf. Themehelp Ltd v West [1995] 3 W.L.R. 751 which concerned a claim by the principal debtor for an injunction to restrain the beneficiary of the bond from serving notice under the guarantee.
- 49. cf. Wahda Bank v Arab Bank Plc [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 470 in which the Court of Appeal held that such a counter-guarantee was intimately connected with such a performance bond with the result that, in the absence of any express choice, it felt entitled to find that the parties intended the counterguarantee to be governed by the same law as governed the guarantees.
- 50. Edward Owen Engineering Ltd v Barclays Bank International Ltd [1978] Q.B. 159 at 170, per Lord Denning M.R.
- 51. Gulf Bank KSC v Mitsubishi Heavy Industries (No.2) [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 145.
- 52. Bolivinter Oil SA v Chase Manhattan Bank SA [1984] 1 W.L.R. 392; Potton Homes Ltd v Coleman (Contractors) Overseas Ltd (1984) 28 Build. L.R. 19.
- 53. [1998] 1 W.L.R. 461 applied by Tradigrain SA v State Trading Corp of India [2005] EWHC 2206 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 216.
- 54. [1998] 1 W.L.R. 461 at 469.
- 55. [1998] 1 W.L.R. 461 at 469.
- 56. [2008] EWCA Civ 819, [2008] Bus. L.R. 1762.
- 57. [2008] EWCA Civ 819 at [19].
- 58. [2008] EWCA Civ 819 at [20], per Moore-Bick L.J.
- 59. [2008] EWCA Civ 819 at [23], per Moore-Bick L.J.
- 60. [2013] EWCA Civ 1679, [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 273. cf. Wuhan Guoyu Logistics Group Co Ltd v Emporiki Bank of Greece SA [2012] EWCA Civ 1629, [2012] 2 C.L.C. 986 (where the Court of Appeal decided that the instrument was an on-demand performance guarantee); above, para.45-009.
- 61. [2013] EWCA Civ 1679 at [22] and see similarly at [25], relying on Uzinterimpex JSC v Standard Bank Plc [2008] EWCA Civ 819, [2008] Bus. L.R. 1762. Moore-Bick L.J. held, in the alternative, that if it were relevant to have regard to matters arising after the accrual of the seller's cause of action against the bank (which he considered it was not) then the seller's contractual obligation to account to the buyer for any sums paid by the bank to the seller which were not owed to the seller would be "diametrically inconsistent with the notion of the Seller holding the money on trust for the Bank": [2013] EWCA Civ 1679 at [27].
- 62. [2013] EWCA Civ 1679 at [23].
- 63. [1996] B.C.C. 388.
- 64. [1996] B.C.C. 388 at 393.

65. [1989] 1 Q.B. 193; Harpum [1988] 47 C.L.J. 180; not following the decisions at first instance in Pinemain Ltd v Welbeck International Ltd (1984) 272 E.G. 1166; Re Distributors and Warehousing Ltd [1986] B.C.L.C. 129; and Coastplace Ltd v Hartley [1987] 1 Q.B. 948. The Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 ss.17–19 restrict the liability of former tenants and their guarantors in various respects, these provisions applying to tenancies made before as well as after this Act: s.1(2) and see below, paras 45-016 et seq.
66. Mayor of Congleton v Pattison (1808) 10 East 130, 138; Vernon v Smith (1821) 5 B. & Ald. 1.
67. Kumar v Dunning [1989] 1 Q.B. 193, 201, per Sir Nicolas Browne-Wilkinson V.C.
68. [1989] 1 Q.B. 193 at 206–207.
69. Consolidated Trust Co Ltd v Naylor (1936) 55 C.L.R. 423.
70. [1989] 1 A.C. 632 and see Coronation Street Industrial Properties Ltd v Ingall Industries Plc [1989] 1 W.L.R. 304.
71. [1989] 1 A.C. 632, 637.
72. Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s.1(3); Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act (Commencement) Order 1995 (SI 1995/2963).
73. City of London Corp v Fell [1994] 1 A.C. 458, 465.
74. See above, para.45-014.
75. See generally Megarry & Wade, The Law of Real Property, 7th edn (2008) by Harpum, paras 20–064 et seq.
76. Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 especially ss.3–8. For analysis of these and other provisions of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995, see Bridge (1996) 55 C.L.J. 313.
77. cf. Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v Ayres [2008] EWCA Civ 52, [2008] L. & T.R. 30 at [46] where the “ordinary rules of law relating to guarantees (in particular those relating to the discharge of sureties)” were excluded by the terms of the guarantee.
78. Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s.1(1); Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act (Commencement) Order 1995 (SI 1995/2963).
79. Wallis Fashion Group Ltd v CGU Life Assurance Ltd [2000] L. & T.R. 520, 526, (2001) 81 P. & C.R. 28.
80. Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s.16(3)(b).
81. Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s.35.
82. Wallis Fashion Group Ltd v CGU Life Assurance Ltd [2000] L. & T.R. 520, 528–529.
83. [2000] L. & T.R. 520 at 529, per Neuberger J.
84. [2000] L. & T.R. 520 at 531. cf. Legends Surf Shops Plc v Sun Life Assurance Soc Plc [2005] EWHC 1438 (Ch), [2006] 1 P. & C.R. D. G1.
85.  Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 ss.16(4), 24(2). An assignment by a tenant of the lease to the guarantor of that tenant’s covenants (the guarantee being expressed as imposing the same liability as if principal debtor) has been held void under the 1995 Act: EMI Group Ltd v O & H Q1 Ltd [2016] EWHC 529 (Ch), [2016] Ch. 586 at [77]–[91]. This is because on such an assignment the provisions of the Act would apply as follows: (i) the original tenant (T1) is released from the tenant covenants (s.5(2)(a)); (ii) the guarantor is released from the tenant covenants as from T1's release (s.24(2)); (iii) the effect of s.24(2) is that as from the release of T1 (i.e. as from the assignment to the guarantor/second tenant (T2)), the guarantor should be released from its liabilities as guarantor; however, (iv) as from the assignment to T2/the guarantor, T2 becomes bound by the tenant covenants (s.3(2)(a)). As a result, the assignment releases the guarantor from the tenant covenants but at the same moment binds the guarantor to them as T2, the liability under the guarantee being the same or essentially the same as the liability of T1. Such an assignment "frustrates" the operation of s.24(2)(b) and is therefore rendered void by s.25(1)(a): [2016] EWHC 529 (Ch) at [79]–[80]. Given that the assignment is void, the lease remains vested in the original tenant and the purported assignee remains bound as guarantor of that tenant's covenants: [2016] EWHC 529 (Ch) at [89]–[91].

86. Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 ss.16(4), 16(1), above.

87. Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 ss.16(4), 25(1).

88. K/S Victoria Street (A Danish Partnership) v House of Fraser (Stores Management) Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 904, [2012] 2 W.L.R. 470 at [21]–[24], [34], [44], [46], [51], [53], considering that (i) "any agreement which involves a guarantor of the assignor guaranteeing that assignor's assignee" is invalidated under s.25(1) except to the extent that such an agreement requires a guarantor to guarantee a liability undertaken by a tenant under an "authorised guarantee agreement"; but that (ii) a guarantor of an assignor can validly guarantee the liability of an assignee on a further assignment (largely approving Good Harvest Partnership LLP v Centaur Services Ltd [2010] EWHC 330 (Ch), [2010] Ch. 426 especially at [22]–[23]). The question whether a clause comes within s.25(1) depends on ordinary rules of construction and the maxim verba intelligenda ut res magis valeat quam pereat (on which see Vol.I, para.13-084) should not be used simply as a means to avoid the consequences of s.25 being applied to the contract which the parties have made: Tindall Cobham 1 Ltd v Adda Hotels [2014] EWCA Civ 1215, [2015] 1 P. & C.R. 5 at [29]–[32] (where the proper meaning of a condition of consent by landlord to assignment by tenant required tenant to procure a continuing guarantee from an existing guarantor, and therefore fell within s.25). cf. Pavilion Property Trustees Ltd v Permira Advisers LLP [2014] EWHC 145 (Ch), [2014] 1 P. & C.R. 21 at [15]–[20] (not discussed by the Court of Appeal in Tindall Cobham 1 Ltd v Adda Hotels [2014] EWCA Civ. 1215) where the court found that the language of a guarantee was "open to interpretation" and felt able to avoid the illegality required by s.25 by construction under the maxim. It has also been held that a court can sever parts of a contract which cannot have effect under s.25 (Pavilion Property Trustees Ltd v Permira Advisers LLP [2014] EWHC 145 (Ch) at [21]–[22]), though the Court of Appeal in Tindall Cobham 1 Ltd v Adda Hotels [2014] EWCA Civ 1215 at [46] considered that the principle of severance would not be applied for this purpose unless the unenforceable provision is capable of being removed without the necessity of adding to or modifying the wording that remains, the remaining terms are supported by consideration and the removal of the unenforceable provisions does not alter the character of the contract: Sadler v Imperial Life Assurance Co of Canada [1988] I.R.L.R. 388, 393 and see generally Vol.I, paras 16-211 et seq. See also UK Leasing Brighton Ltd v Topland Neptune [2015] EWHC 53 (Ch), [2015] 2 P. & C.R. 2 (assignment by tenant in breach of covenant; re-assignment back and fresh guarantee).

89. Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s.1(2).

90. Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s.17(2), (3); Scottish & Newcastle Plc v Raguz [2007] EWCA Civ 150, [2007] 1 Bus. L.R. 851. Notice sent to the intended recipient at last residential address is effective notice: Commercial Union Life Assurance Co Ltd v Moustafa [1999] L. & T.R. 489. There is no requirement that a landlord must, in enforcing a guarantee, also serve the former tenant with the notice required under s.17(2) of the 1995 Act: Cheverell Estates Ltd v Harris [1998] 1 E.G.L.R. 27. The requirements contained in s.17 do not apply to a claim by a tenant sued by its landlord for an indemnity or contribution "in quasi contract" from an assignee or its guarantor (Fresh (Retail) Ltd v Emsden [1999] C.L.Y. 3693) nor to such a claim under an express indemnity contained in the assignment, the latter on the basis that it is not a "tenant covenant" for these purposes: MW Kellogg Ltd v Tobin [1999] L. & T.R. 513.

91. Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s.17(4).

- 92. Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s.1(2).
- 93. Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s.18(6); Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act (Commencement) Order 1995 (SI 1995/2963).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 45 - Suretyship

Section 2. - Formation of the Contract

(a) - Agreement

Offer and acceptance: revocation of offers

45-019

A contract of suretyship is formed, like any other contract, by offer and acceptance, supported by consideration. But difficulty has been encountered in applying the ordinary principles to contracts of this nature, particularly with regard to the revocation of guarantees. The difficulty stems largely from the fact that it is frequently hard to say whether the contract is intended to be unilateral or bilateral. ⁹⁴ If the guarantee is given in return for a promise by the creditor that he will enter into some transaction with the principal debtor, then the guarantee will constitute a binding bilateral contract as soon as it is given and accepted, and it cannot then be revoked. ⁹⁵ But if (as is more usually the case) the guarantee is given in return for an act or forbearance on the part of the creditor, the contract will not be made until the act is done or the forbearance is given, and until then, the guarantee remains revocable. ⁹⁶

Continuing guarantees

45-020

Where the guarantee is a continuing one, the question whether it can be revoked after the consideration has been partly performed depends on whether the consideration is divisible or entire. In the former situation the guarantee is treated rather like a standing offer which is accepted pro tanto by part performance of the consideration, but remains revocable at all times as to future liabilities. ⁹⁷ Therefore, in the case of a continuing guarantee to secure the balance of a running account at a bank, a surety may at any moment revoke his guarantee in respect of future advances. ⁹⁸ But it is common practice to require a specified period of notice to be given before such a guarantee can be revoked and this is thought to be binding on the surety. ⁹⁹ But this would not be so if the guarantee were in all respects treated as a standing offer, ¹⁰⁰ and it is therefore uncertain whether the surety would be liable for advances made by the creditor after receipt of notice of termination of the guarantee, but before its expiry. ¹⁰¹ However, in National Westminster Bank Plc v Hardman, ¹⁰² a surety guaranteed payment on demand to a creditor of the continuing liability of a principal debtor, subject to a condition that the guarantee be terminable by three months' notice. The surety gave such notice, but no demand was made before the expiry of the three months. The Court of Appeal held the surety not liable on the guarantee, even in respect of advances made until the date of expiry. As a matter of construction, no sums fell due on the guarantee until demand was made and after the period of notice, the guarantee terminated. Where, on the other hand, the consideration for the guarantee is entire and indivisible, the surety has no right to revoke his guarantee unless such a right is expressly conferred by the agreement. ¹⁰³ Thus the guarantor of rent payable under a lease for 14 years could not revoke his guarantee before the expiry of the lease, though the guarantor of rent under a weekly tenancy can do so. ¹⁰⁴ It has been held that a surety cannot revoke a fidelity bond given to secure the due performance of some office by the debtor, on the ground that the appointment of the debtor is an indivisible consideration ¹⁰⁵, but if the appointment can be terminated by notice there seems no reason why the consideration should not be treated as divisible. The principle underlying these cases seems to be that if, in reliance on the guarantee, the creditor has entered into an irrevocable transaction with the debtor, he should not be deprived of his security by revocation of the guarantee. But where the transaction entered into by the creditor is itself terminable, he would not be prejudiced if the guarantee were revoked as to the future, for the creditor could then decide whether or not to terminate the main transaction.

Revocation by death

45-021

Death of the surety does not by itself operate to revoke a guarantee,¹⁰⁶ but notice of his death will do so provided that the guarantee was itself revocable,¹⁰⁷ and that there is nothing to the contrary in the terms of the guarantee.¹⁰⁸ Where specified notice is required to be given to revoke a guarantee, the executors of the surety will normally have to give the required notice after his death.¹⁰⁹ But where the executor of a deceased surety was himself the principal debtor, and he failed to give notice of revocation, it was held that knowledge of the facts by the creditor was sufficient to bring the guarantee to an end.¹¹⁰ Where a guarantee is continuing, it has been held that the supervening insanity of the guarantor revokes the guarantee as from notice to the creditor.¹¹¹

-
- ^{94.} As to this distinction, see Vol.I, paras 1-107, 2-082 et seq.
 - ^{95.} But a guarantee of a future consumer credit agreement generally remains revocable until the credit agreement is made, see Consumer Credit Act 1974 s.113(6).
 - ^{96.} See Vol.I, paras 2-082—2-084; Offord v Davies (1862) 12 C.B.(N.S.) 748.
 - ^{97.} Vol.I, para.2-086.
 - ^{98.} Coulthart v Clementson (1879) 5 Q.B.D. 42; Lloyd's v Harper (1880) 16 Ch. D. 290; and see Hamilton's Executor v Bank of Scotland, 1913 S.C. 743.
 - ^{99.} Paget's Law of Banking, 14th edn (2014) by Malek and Odgers, para.18–30.
 - ^{100.} See Vol.I, para.2-083.
 - ^{101.} See n.95 above.
 - ^{102.} [1988] F.L.R. 302.
 - ^{103.} Lloyd's v Harper (1880) 16 Ch. D. 290.
 - ^{104.} Wingfield v De St Croix (1919) 35 T.L.R. 432.
 - ^{105.} Re Crace [1902] 1 Ch. 733.
 - ^{106.} Bradbury v Morgan (1862) 1 H. & C. 249.
 - ^{107.} Coulthart v Clementson (1879) 5 Q.B.D. 42.
 - ^{108.} Re Silvester [1895] 1 Ch. 573; Basch v Stekel [2001] L. & T.R. 1, 7–8 CA applying the general rule stated in Vol.I, para.20-005.
 - ^{109.} Re Silvester, above.
 - ^{110.} Harriss v Fawcett (1873) L.R. 8 Ch. App. 866.
 - ^{111.} Bradford Old Bank Ltd v Sutcliffe [1918] 2 K.B. 833.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 45 - Suretyship

Section 2. - Formation of the Contract

(b) - Consideration

General

45-022

A contract of suretyship, like any other contract, must be supported by consideration if it is not contained in a deed. ¹¹² Where the surety guarantees some future debt or transaction, the consideration may be a promise on the part of the creditor to grant the credit or enter into the transaction, or the actual act of doing so. ¹¹³ Even if (as is commonly the case) the surety derives no benefit from the transaction, the creditor suffers a detriment which is sufficient consideration. More difficulty arises where the surety guarantees some past debt or transaction. Prima facie such a guarantee is given merely for past consideration and is void. ¹¹⁴ So where a surety guaranteed payments under a hire-purchase agreement entered into four days previously, it was held that the guarantee was given for past consideration only and was void. ¹¹⁵ However, if the consideration is expressed so as to be ambiguous whether it is past or not, it is open to the creditor to show that the consideration was not past. Thus where a guarantee was expressed to be given "in consideration of your having this day advanced to" the principal debtor some £750, it was held that parol evidence was admissible to prove that the money was advanced simultaneously with the giving of the guarantee, and that there was therefore good consideration. ¹¹⁶ Moreover, in accordance with the position as regards contracts in general, consideration to support a promise of guarantee may be found in an act done before it is made, provided that the act is done at the guarantor's request, that the parties understood that the act was to be remunerated in some way and that the conferment of a benefit would have been legally enforceable had it been promised in advance. ¹¹⁷

Forbearance as consideration for past debt or transaction

45-023

A guarantee even of a past debt or transaction will be valid if the creditor promises to forbear from suing, or to give time to, the principal debtor, or if he actually does so at the request of the surety. The mere fact of forbearance, however, is not enough: there must be an actual promise to do so, or the forbearance must be at the request (express or implied) of the surety. ¹¹⁸ It is unnecessary that the forbearance should be for any specific length of time; forbearance for a reasonable time will suffice, and a promise or request to forbear will (if no time is stipulated for) normally be construed as referring to forbearance for a reasonable time. ¹¹⁹ Actual withdrawal of proceedings against the principal debtor at the request of the surety will be a good consideration even if there is no promise that new proceedings will not be started. ¹²⁰

Guarantee of past and future transactions

45-024

⚠ If the surety guarantees past transactions in return for an undertaking by the creditor to continue to deal with the debtor, or to grant him further credit, there will be good consideration. In practice the surety frequently guarantees both past and future transactions in return for such an undertaking, and such a guarantee is good as to both sets of transactions,¹²¹  for consideration to be executed on the one side is at all events prima facie consideration for all that is done on the other, and all the promises are to be referred to all the considerations.¹²²

45-025

Difficult questions of construction may arise in these cases, since guarantees may be expressed in terms which leave it doubtful whether the surety is guaranteeing past and future transactions, or past ones only.¹²³ In these circumstances extrinsic evidence is admissible to show that the parties contemplated future transactions as falling within the guarantee, and that the whole guarantee is therefore valid.¹²⁴ But if it is evident that the guarantee was intended to be limited to past transactions alone, for example, because the surety knew that the principal debtor was already indebted to the creditor in an amount exceeding the limit of the surety's guarantee, the guarantee will be void as being given without consideration.¹²⁵ On the other hand, a guarantee to a bank in consideration of the bank's agreeing to advance £750 to the principal debtor was held to be good although in fact the debtor already owed the bank more than £750 and the new advance was merely used to pay off the existing debt without any money actually passing.¹²⁶

45-026

Where a guarantee is given in respect of both past and future transactions it is sometimes important to distinguish between cases where the consideration consists of a promise by the creditor to enter into the future transactions and cases where the consideration is the creditor's act of entering into those transactions. In the former event the guarantee will be binding as to the past transactions as soon as the contract is made; in the latter case the guarantee will not be binding unless in fact the creditor does enter into future transactions.¹²⁷ So where A guaranteed past debts owed by B to C in consideration of C "recommencing to supply" B, and in fact C never did recommence to supply B because B never asked him to, it was held that the guarantee was void as lacking consideration.¹²⁸ So also where the surety guaranteed past debts in consideration of the creditor agreeing to supply such goods as he might think fit to the debtor, it was held that the guarantee was not binding in the absence of evidence that goods had in fact been supplied¹²⁹; although the creditor had apparently promised to supply the debtor, the promise was illusory since the creditor was not obliged to supply unless he wished, and the consideration had therefore to be found in an actual supply.

^{112.} For the requirements for deeds, see Vol.I, paras 1-113 et seq. It was suggested in Amalgamated Investment & Pty Co Ltd v Texas Commerce International Bank Ltd [1982] Q.B. 84 that promissory estoppel could operate in the case of a representation that a transaction (there a guarantee) had legal effect even if the transaction was not binding (notably for want of consideration). The possibility of a guarantee being enforceable by way of estoppel in the absence of consideration is an example of the wider question of the relationship between the defensive nature of promissory estoppel and the doctrine of consideration which is discussed in Vol.I at para.4-099.

^{113.} cf. Pitts v Jones [2007] EWCA Civ 1301, [2008] 2 W.L.R. 1289 (consideration for promise of guarantee found in promisors' cooperation in making other transactions).

^{114.} French v French (1841) 2 M. & G. 644. As to a guarantee of past and future transactions, see below, paras 45-024—45-026.

^{115.} Astley Industrial Trust Ltd v Grimston Electric Tools (1965) 109 S.J. 149.

^{116.} Goldshede v Swan (1847) 1 Ex. 154.

^{117.} Pau On v Lau Liu Long [1980] A.C. 614, 629 and see Vol.I, para.4-031.

^{118.} Crears v Hunter (1887) 19 Q.B.D. 341; Miles v New Zealand Alford Estate Co (1886) 32 Ch. D.

266; Provincial Bank of Ireland v Donnell [1934] N.I. 33.

119. Oldershaw v King (1857) 2 H. & N. 517; Crears v Hunter, above.

120. See footnote above. See also Clarke & Walker Pty v Thew (1967) 116 C.L.R. 465.

121.  Johnston v Nicholls (1845) 1 C.B. 251; Boyd v Moyle (1846) 2 C.B. 644; White v Woodward (1848) 5 C.B. 810. cf. Tailby v HSBC Bank Plc [2015] B.P.I.R. 143 Ch D (earlier provision of a continuing facility to principal debtor was a “real commercial benefit” to the guarantor and this constituted consideration).

122. Harris v Venables (1872) L.R. 7 Ex. 235, 240.

123. See, e.g. Chapman v Sutton (1846) 2 C.B. 634; Morrell v Cowan (1877) 7 Ch. D. 151.

124. Butcher v Steuart (1843) 11 M. & W. 857; Goldshede v Swan (1847) 1 Ex. 154; Steele v Hoe (1849) 14 Q.B. 431; Edwards v Jevons (1849) 8 C.B. 436; Colbourn v Dawson (1851) 10 C.B. 765; Broom v Batchelor (1856) 1 H. & N. 255.

125. Bell v Welch (1850) 9 C.B. 154.

126. Hamilton v Watson (1845) 12 Cl. & F. 109; cf. Glyn v Hertel (1818) 8 Taunt. 208 and, as to the meaning of an “advance”, Burnes v Trade Credits Ltd [1981] 1 W.L.R. 805.

127. Unless, of course, there is a separate consideration in respect of the past transactions, i.e. a requested forbearance or promise to forbear, see above, para.45-023. If the guarantee is expressed to be in consideration both of a forbearance in respect of past transactions, and entry into future transactions, it is presumably a question of construction whether the guarantee is conditional on the future transactions.

128. Greenham Ready Mixed Concrete v CAS (Industrial Developments) (1965) 109 S.J. 209.

129. Westhead v Sproson (1861) 6 H. & N. 728.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 45 - Suretyship

Section 2. - Formation of the Contract

(c) - Grounds of Vitiating of the Contract

Introduction

45-027

In general, a contract of suretyship may be vitiated on the same grounds as other contracts, for example, it may be voidable on the ground of the creditor's fraud or undue influence. However, contracts of suretyship give rise to three particular questions which relate to possible vitiating elements: the first is under what circumstances the contract may be vitiated by the pre-contractual conduct not of the creditor but of a third party, notably, the principal debtor; the second is whether the nature of the contract demands a duty of disclosure on the part of the creditor by way of exception to the rule for contracts generally ¹³⁰; and the third is whether the consumer's new rights to redress in relation to certain unfair commercial practices in traders are available to a guarantor acting other than in the course of business against a creditor acting in the course of a business. The answer to this third question (which is in the negative) will be discussed in the wider context of the legislative protection of sureties. ¹³¹

Vitiating of the contract and third party behavior

45-028

As regards the first of these questions, a distinction can be drawn between those cases in which the ground on which the surety is seeking to avoid the contract depends on an action or omission on the part of the creditor or on the existence of a particular relationship between the creditor and himself, and those where it does not.

Mistake

45-029

In the case of vitiating on the ground of common fundamental mistake, the conditions for relief do not include any requirement as to the action or omission of the other party to the contract, nor do they rest on any special relationship between the parties, as does vitiating on the ground of presumed undue influence. Thus, where a surety seeks to avoid the contract on the grounds of common fundamental mistake by way of application of the doctrine in Bell v Lever Bros Ltd, ¹³² it is irrelevant whether his mistake was caused by any (equally mistaken) action or omission of the creditor or whether it was caused by a third party. In Associated Japanese Bank (International) Ltd v Crédit du Nord SA ¹³³ a bank, A, entered a sale and leaseback agreement with B in relation to four specified engineering machines and under which B received a sum of money from the bank. As a condition of the transaction, another bank, C, agreed to guarantee B's obligations under it. It was later discovered that the leaseback transaction was a fraud by B who had deceived both banks, there being no machines in fact in existence. In an action by A against C under the guarantee, C's defence of common fundamental mistake was upheld: for both banks, the non-existence of the machines made the contract of guarantee essentially different from the one which they had believed they entered at contract. ¹³⁴ The fact that the mistake of the guarantor was induced by the fraud of a third party is relevant only in that it provides a reasonable ground for the guarantor's belief, in the absence of which relief on this ground may be denied.

Non est factum

45-030

The position is similar in relation to non est factum. This ground of vitiation of a contract arises where a person who suffers from a disability, for example, blindness or illiteracy, signs or otherwise executes a document believing it to be essentially different from that which he has in fact signed, as long as he commits no negligence in so doing. ¹³⁵ Although such a belief is often brought about by fraud or misrepresentation by the other party to the document, it appears that this is not necessary for the defence to apply. ¹³⁶ In principle, therefore, a guarantor may rely on the defence of non est factum even where his mistake is induced by a third party (notably by the fraud of the principal debtor). For example, in Lloyds Bank Plc v Waterhouse ¹³⁷ an illiterate farmer had signed a guarantee of a loan by a bank to his son, allegedly on the basis of a misrepresentation by the latter as to its effect. However, the Court of Appeal did not rely on this misrepresentation, by which the bank could also be said to be affected, as the basis for refusing to enforce the guarantee for the benefit of the bank, ¹³⁸ but instead did so by upholding his defence of non est factum.

Fraud, misrepresentation or undue influence by the creditor

45-031

It is clear that a surety who has been induced to enter the contract by the fraud or misrepresentation of the creditor can avoid the contract, whether or not the latter has acted on the contract by granting credit to the principal debtor. ¹³⁹ Similarly, a contract of suretyship may be avoided by the surety where the creditor has exercised actual undue influence on him in relation to the contract ¹⁴⁰ or where the relationship between them gives rise to a presumption of undue influence. ¹⁴¹ It is clear, however, that the relationship between a bank and its customer is not one which ordinarily gives rise to a presumption of undue influence, ¹⁴² although on the facts actual undue influence may be proved. ¹⁴³

Fraud, misrepresentation or undue influence by a third party

45-032

For a party to a contract to avoid it on the ground of fraud, misrepresentation or actual undue influence, he must show some action or conduct by the other party to the contract, whether this is a misrepresentation of fact or wrongful conduct amounting to undue influence. ¹⁴⁴ In the case of presumed undue influence, a party must show the existence of a relationship which gives rise to that presumption between himself and the other party. ¹⁴⁵ More difficult, therefore, is the question whether a creditor may be affected by the fraud, misrepresentation or actual undue influence of a third party, often the principal debtor, on the surety and whether he will be affected by the existence of a relationship which gives rise to a presumption of undue influence between such a third party and the surety. ¹⁴⁶ Older authorities give clear support for three propositions. First, a creditor is responsible for the actions and is imputed with the knowledge of any agent whom he chooses to employ in the transaction. ¹⁴⁷ For example, in Lloyds Bank Ltd v Bundy, ¹⁴⁸ a transaction entered by a bank with the defendant as a result of the actual undue influence of its bank manager was set aside, the manager acting for the bank in the transaction. Secondly, where the creditor knows of or is otherwise a direct party to the misrepresentation or undue influence by the principal debtor to the surety, then the contract of suretyship is voidable at the latter's option. ¹⁴⁹ Similarly, where a creditor knows of the existence of a relationship giving rise to a presumption of undue influence between a third party and the surety, then the contract of suretyship is voidable at the surety's option (though this proposition has been qualified by the decision of the House of Lords in Etridge's case as described below ¹⁵⁰). ¹⁵¹ Thirdly, as Lord Cranworth L.C. stated in Owen v Homan, ¹⁵² where:

“... the dealings are such as fairly to lead a reasonable man to believe that fraud must have been used in order to obtain [the surety's] concurrence, [the creditor] is bound to make inquiry, and cannot shelter himself under the plea that he was not called on to ask, and did not ask, any questions on the subject. In some cases wilful ignorance is not to be distinguished in its equitable consequences from knowledge.” ¹⁵³

45-033

In the modern law, a not infrequent problem has arisen in which a bank (the creditor) agrees to lend money to a husband (the principal debtor) ¹⁵⁴ if his wife agrees to stand surety or to a charge on the matrimonial home. The husband often undertakes to obtain his wife's agreement to the transaction and in order to do so he may resort to misrepresentation or the exercise of actual undue influence (there being no presumption of undue influence between a husband and wife). ¹⁵⁵ The courts have used various analyses to determine whether the creditor bank is to be affected by this wrongful conduct in the principal debtor. While older authority recognised that in some circumstances the creditor could be affected by the wrongful act of the husband, ¹⁵⁶ after 1985 the courts distinguished two types of situation. Where the bank was able to be said to have entrusted to the principal debtor the task of obtaining the execution of the document, then the latter is constituted the creditor's agent for this purpose so as to infect the creditor with any undue influence he may have exercised or misrepresentation which he may have made. ¹⁵⁷ On the other hand, where the bank had not so entrusted the principal debtor, it was unaffected by any undue influence or misrepresentation of the principal debtor, nor is it under an obligation to see that the surety is separately advised. ¹⁵⁸

Creditor on constructive notice: Barclays Bank Plc v O'Brien. ¹⁵⁹

45-034

However, in Barclays Bank Plc v O'Brien, ¹⁶⁰ the House of Lords rejected this resort to the notion of agency to analyse the relationships of the parties in this type of case, stigmatising it as artificial. ¹⁶¹ The House of Lords preferred to rely instead on the ordinary equitable doctrine of notice. ¹⁶² Thus, according to Lord Browne-Wilkinson, with whom the rest of their Lordships agreed:

“A wife who has been induced to stand as a surety for her husband's debts by his undue influence, misrepresentation or some other legal wrong has an equity as against him to set aside that transaction. Under the ordinary principles of equity, her right to set aside that transaction will be enforceable against third parties (e.g. against a creditor) if either the husband was acting as the third party's agent ¹⁶³ or the third party had actual or constructive notice of the facts giving rise to her equity.” ¹⁶⁴

Lord Browne-Wilkinson indicated that constructive notice would be found by the courts where the creditor knew of certain facts which put him on inquiry as to the possible existence of the rights of the other and he failed to make such inquiry or take such other steps as were reasonable to verify whether such earlier right did or did not exist. ¹⁶⁵ In the present context, this would be the case where the transaction to be guaranteed is on its face of no financial advantage to the wife and, secondly, where the relationship between the parties is such that there is a substantial risk that the husband has committed some legal or equitable wrong in obtaining her consent which would allow the wife to set it aside. ¹⁶⁶ His Lordship noted that in the ordinary case:

“... a creditor will have satisfied these requirements if it insists that the wife attend a private meeting (in the absence of the husband) with a representative of the creditor at which she is told of the extent of her liability as surety, warned of the risk she is running and urged to take independent legal advice.” ¹⁶⁷

It was further observed that this doctrine of notice could apply wherever there is an emotional relationship of cohabitation between the principal debtor and the would-be surety or where otherwise the creditor is aware that the surety reposes trust and confidence in the principal debtor in relation to his or her financial affairs.¹⁶⁸ Finally, it is clear that this approach based on notice of an equitable right can also apply to cases where a third party is in a relationship with the surety which gives rise to a presumption of undue influence, as long as the creditor has notice of the circumstances from which the court derives the presumption.¹⁶⁹ So, for example, where a bank is aware that the principal debtor is the surety's solicitor, it would be put on notice as to the presumption of undue influence which arises between a solicitor and his client.¹⁷⁰

Etridge's case

45-035

*Barclays Bank Plc v O'Brien*¹⁷¹ was later followed by the House of Lords in Royal Bank of Scotland v Etridge (No.2),¹⁷² where the foundation and implications of the doctrine of constructive notice were explained and refined.¹⁷³ In Etridge (No.2), the House of Lords made clear that this doctrine was to be confined to cases of suretyship where the relationship between the principal debtor and the surety is non-commercial¹⁷⁴ and where the transaction between the lender and the surety is on its face to the disadvantage of the latter.¹⁷⁵ Where this is the case, the lender is said to be "put on inquiry" as to the circumstances in which the suretyship contract was made. As to past cases, the lender will escape being fixed with constructive notice if it took:

"steps to bring home to the wife the risk she is running by standing as surety and to advise her to take independent advice ... For the future a bank satisfies these requirements if it insists that the wife attend a private meeting with a representative of the bank at which she is told of the extent of her liability as surety, warned of the risk she is running and urged to take independent legal advice. In exceptional cases the bank, to be safe, has to insist that the wife is separately advised."¹⁷⁶

Where a lender entrusts this task to an independent legal adviser, the House of Lords indicated the steps which such an adviser ought to take.¹⁷⁷

Non-disclosure

45-036

Some early nineteenth century authority suggests that a creditor owes a duty of disclosure to a would-be surety as to those facts which are material to the risk which the surety would run if he enters the contract. In Railton v Mathews,¹⁷⁸ a case which concerned the situation of a person standing surety for the fidelity of a person who is the servant or agent of the creditor, Lord Campbell stated that "if the [creditors] had facts within their knowledge which it was material the surety should be acquainted with, and which [they] did not disclose ... the undue concealment of those facts discharges the surety".¹⁷⁹ However, in Hamilton v Watson the House of Lords held that a bank which knew of the existence of a debt already owed by the debtor did not have to disclose this fact to the guarantor of a further loan, which was used to repay the first.¹⁸⁰ Lord Campbell rejected the guarantor's argument that "it is essentially necessary that every thing should be disclosed by the creditor that is material for the surety to know".¹⁸¹ In his view:

"If such was the rule, it would be indispensably necessary for the bankers to whom the security is to be given, to state how the account has been kept: whether the debtor was in the habit of overdrawing; whether he was punctual in his dealings; whether he performed his promises in an honourable manner—for all these things are extremely material for the surety to know. But unless questions be particularly put by the surety to gain this information, I hold that it is quite unnecessary for the creditor, to whom the suretyship is to be given, to make any such disclosure.” ¹⁸²

However, Lord Campbell considered the following to be:

“the criterion whether the disclosure ought to be made voluntarily, namely, whether there is anything that might not naturally be expected to take place between the parties who are concerned in the transaction, that is, whether there be a contract between the debtor and the creditor, to the effect that his position shall be different from that which the surety might naturally expect.” ¹⁸³

For this purpose, the courts distinguished clearly between contracts of guarantee and contracts of insurance, which at common law require disclosure of all material facts. ¹⁸⁴ However, in London General Omnibus Company Ltd v Holloway, ¹⁸⁵ the Court of Appeal allowed a surety for the fidelity of a servant to avoid the contract on the ground of the creditor's failure to disclose previous known dishonesty of the servant by treating this failure as a misrepresentation:

“Not to disclose such dishonesty is a misrepresentation ... because by non-disclosure the master must be assumed to be contracting on the assumption ... that the suretyship relates to a servant whom the master at the time of taking the security does not know to have been guilty of dishonesty in such service.” ¹⁸⁶

This approach clearly seeks to assimilate the position governing contracts of suretyship to the rule applicable to contracts generally which, while denying the existence of a duty of disclosure, allows a partial disclosure of facts to be treated as misrepresentation. ¹⁸⁷ On the other hand, it has been held that there is no duty on a banker to disclose to a surety the fact that the principal debtor's husband is an undischarged bankrupt and has authority to draw on her account. ¹⁸⁸ And it has been held that the scope for non-disclosure or incomplete disclosure amounting to implied misrepresentation is considerably reduced where the contract is made in the context of an elaborate regime of disclosure undertaken by the parties in response to specific requests for information by the would-be surety: here there is “essentially the environment of caveat emptor”. ¹⁸⁹

45-037

The question of the existence or extent of a duty of disclosure in contracts of suretyship was the subject of comment by their Lordships in Royal Bank of Scotland Plc v Etridge (No.2). ¹⁹⁰ While it was accepted that a suretyship contract is not a contract uberrimae fidei and that there is no general duty of disclosure, ¹⁹¹ Lord Scott quoted with approval Vaughan Williams L.J.'s statement in London General Omnibus Co Ltd v Holloway to the effect that there is a “general proposition that a creditor must reveal to the surety every fact which under the circumstances the surety would expect not to exist, for the omission to mention that such a fact does exist is an implied representation that it does not”. ¹⁹² He referred to a dictum of King C.J. in the Supreme Court of South Australia, according to whom the duty of disclosure extends to:

“... unusual features surrounding the transaction between the creditor and the surety: (1) of which the creditor is or ought to be aware; (2) of which the surety is unaware and (3) which the creditor appreciates, or ought in the circumstances to appreciate might be unknown to the surety and might affect his decision to enter into the guarantee.” ¹⁹³

In Lord Scott's view:

“... this statement of the extent of the disclosure obligation may be too wide. But at least, in my opinion, the obligation should extend to unusual features of the contractual relationship between the creditor and the principal debtor, or between the creditor and other creditors of the principal debtor, that would or might affect the rights of the surety.”¹⁹⁴

Moreover, Lord Nicholls regarded it as “a well-established principle that ... a creditor is obliged to disclose to a guarantor any unusual feature of the contract between the creditor and the debtor which makes it materially different in a potentially disadvantageous respect from what the guarantor might naturally expect”.¹⁹⁵ However, “[t]he precise ambit of this disclosure obligation remains unclear”.¹⁹⁶

45-038

However, further light is cast on the creditor's duty of disclosure by North Shore Ventures Ltd v Anstead Holdings Inc,¹⁹⁷ where the Court of Appeal reviewed earlier authorities.¹⁹⁸ The court concluded that the instrument before it was “not a contract uberrimae fidei but a loan guarantee. The authorities are clear that in such a case the duty of disclosure does not go further than the limit set by Lord Campbell in Hamilton v Watson and by Lord Scott of Foscote in Royal Bank of Scotland plc v Etridge (No. 2).¹⁹⁹ Accordingly there is no duty to disclose facts or matters which are not unusual features of the contractual relationship between the creditor and the debtor, or between the creditor and other creditors of the debtor.”²⁰⁰

The Court of Appeal therefore held the contract of guarantee binding on the surety, even though the creditor had failed to disclose that the principal debtors were being investigated for embezzlement and that their bank accounts had been frozen as these were not “unusual features of the contractual relationship between the creditor and the debtor”.²⁰¹ Although it was not therefore necessary for its decision, the Court of Appeal also expressed the view that where a duty of disclosure does arise the creditor is not absolved from it because he reasonably believes that the surety knows of it already: “[i]f the belief of the creditor turns out to be not well founded then ... he should suffer the consequences not the surety”.²⁰²

Liability in damages for misrepresentation and non-disclosure

45-039

A creditor who induces a surety to enter the contract by fraud²⁰³ or misrepresentation of fact²⁰⁴ may clearly be liable in damages in tort in accordance with the general position. More difficult is the extent of a creditor's liability in damages in the tort of negligence. In Perry v Midland Bank Plc,²⁰⁵ it was held that once a bank had undertaken the task of explaining the nature and effect of a transaction, then its failure to do so adequately would entail liability in damages by way of application of Hedley Byrne & Co Ltd v Heller & Partners Ltd.²⁰⁶ Moreover, in Cornish v Midland Bank Plc, Kerr L.J. expressed the view that a bank is under a duty at least to its own customers to proffer some adequate explanation of the nature and effect of the document which is executed between them.²⁰⁷ In Barclays Bank Plc v O'Brien,²⁰⁸ as a result of which in certain circumstances a creditor would find it necessary to proffer such an explanation,²⁰⁹ Scott L.J. accepted that “if the surety is a customer²¹⁰ or if the creditor assumes the role of advisor, it may be that the creditor will be found to have owed a contractual or a tortious duty of care to the surety”.²¹¹ But he added that:

“... if there is no more than that the creditor, in an attempt to satisfy itself that the surety properly understands the proposed transaction and that the transaction will not subsequently be impeachable, offers an explanation of the transaction and of the security document, I do not think that the creditor should be taken to have assumed a tortious duty of care. If the explanation was inadequate, the security might not be enforceable but it would not follow that liability in damages would attach.” ²¹²

-
- ^{130.} For the general position, see Vol.I, para.7-017 and see below, paras 45-036—45-039.
- ^{131.} Below, paras 45-147—45-148.
- ^{132.} [1932] A.C. 161. See also Great Peace Shipping Ltd v Tsavliris Salvage Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 1407, [2003] Q.B. 679 where the existence of a distinct equitable jurisdiction for mistake was denied on the ground of its being irreconcilable with Bell v Lever Bros, on which see Vol.I, paras 6-055—6-060.
- ^{133.} [1989] 1 W.L.R. 255.
- ^{134.} The court also held that as a matter of construction the guarantee contained an implied condition that the machines in fact existed.
- ^{135.} See, e.g. O'Brien v Australia and New Zealand Bank Ltd (1971) 5 S.A.S.R. 347 (difference between a guarantee of future indebtedness and a guarantee and indemnity of future indebtedness not sufficiently fundamental to sustain a plea of non est factum).
- ^{136.} See Saunders v Anglia Building Society [1971] A.C. 1004 and Vol.I, paras 3-049 et seq.
- ^{137.} [1991] Fam. Law 23. cf. Barclays Bank Plc v Schwartz, The Times, August 2, 1995.
- ^{138.} This defence had been pleaded at first instance but was abandoned on appeal.
- ^{139.} Mackenzie v Royal Bank of Canada [1934] A.C. 468; and see s.1(b) of the Misrepresentation Act 1967 and Vol.I, para.7-142. An “entire agreement clause” in a contract of suretyship may, depending on its terms, exclude liability in the creditor based on collateral warranty or misrepresentation, subject to applicable legislative controls: Pananicola v Sandhu [2011] EWHC 1431 (QB), [2011] 2 B.C.L.C. 811, [41], [44], [46] and cf. Vol.I, paras 7-143, 7-149 and 13-107.
- ^{140.} Lloyds Bank Ltd v Bundy [1975] Q.B. 326.
- ^{141.} See Vol.I, paras 8-057 et seq.
- ^{142.} National Westminster Bank Plc v Morgan [1985] A.C. 686, 708–709; Goldsworthy v Brickell [1987] Ch. 378.
- ^{143.} Lloyds Bank Ltd v Bundy [1975] Q.B. 326.
- ^{144.} See Barclays Bank Plc v O'Brien [1994] 1 A.C. 180; and see CIBC Mortgages Plc v Pitt [1994] 1 A.C. 200, 209, in which Lord Browne-Wilkinson expressed the view that actual undue influence is a species of fraud.
- ^{145.} See Vol.I, para.8-061 where the important decision of the HL on the proper categorisation of undue influence in Royal Bank of Scotland v Etridge (No.2) [2001] UKHL 44, [2002] 2 A.C. 773 is discussed.
- ^{146.} See generally Vol.I, paras 8-108—8-125.
- ^{147.} Barwick v English Joint Stock Bank (1867) 2 L.R.Ex. 259, 265; Bank of Montreal v Stuart [1911] A.C. 120; and see UBAF v European American Banking Corp [1984] Q.B. 713 (company liable for misrepresentation by duly authorised agent); O'Sullivan v Management Agency and Music

- Ltd* [1985] 1 Q.B. 428, 470 (company affected by undue influence of share-holding directors).
- 148. [1975] Q.B. 326.
- 149. Spencer v Handley (1842) 4 M. & G. 414; O'Sullivan v Management Agency and Music Ltd, above, at 447–448 and 464.
- 150. See para.45-035.
- 151. cf. O'Sullivan v Management Agency and Music Ltd [1985] 1 Q.B. 428 at 464.
- 152. (1853) IV H.L.C. 997.
- 153. (1853) IV H.L.C. 997 at 1035.
- 154. In some cases, the husband is not the principal debtor but, for example, a director of a limited company which is the principal debtor. As long as the surety has no direct financial interest in the company, this situation is treated no differently from where it is the principal debtor himself who defrauds the surety: see Barclays Bank Plc v O'Brien [1994] 1 A.C. 180, 199.
- 155. Mackenzie v Royal Bank of Canada [1934] A.C. 468; Kings North Trust Ltd v Bell [1986] 1 W.L.R. 119; Midland Bank Plc v Sheppard [1988] 2 All E.R. 17. See further Royal Bank of Scotland v Etridge (No.2) [2001] UKHL 44, [2002] 2 A.C. 773 at [32]–[33], [36]; Thompson v Foy [2009] EWHC 1076 (Ch) at [100]–[101]; Hewett v First Plus Financial Group Plc [2010] EWCA Civ 312, [2010] 2 F.L.R. 177 at [29]–[30] (relating the parties' relationship of trust and confidence to a duty of disclosure in the husband); Royal Bank of Scotland v Chandra [2011] EWCA Civ 192, [2011] Bus. L.R. D149 especially at [31]–[32]; Annulment Funding Co Ltd v Cowey [2010] EWCA Civ 771, [2010] B.P.I.R. 1304 and Vol.I, para.8-089.
- 156. Turnbull & Co v Duval [1902] A.C. 429. The basis of this decision was considered “obscure” by Lord Browne-Wilkinson in Barclays Bank Plc v O'Brien [1994] 1 A.C. 180 at 191.
- 157. Kings North Trust Ltd v Bell, above; Coldunell Ltd v Gallon [1986] Q.B. 1184; Avon Finance Co Ltd v Bridger (1979) reported [1985] 2 All E.R. 281 (both cases of adult children obtaining elderly parents' agreements).
- 158. Coldunell v Gallon [1986] Q.B. 1184; Bank of Baroda v Shah [1988] 3 All E.R. 24.
- 159. For more detailed discussion of this topic, see Vol.I, paras 8-110—8-124.
- 160. [1994] 1 A.C. 180.
- 161. [1994] 1 A.C. 180 at 195. cf. [1993] Q.B. 109, 113, 144 CA.
- 162. [1994] 1 A.C. 180, 195.
- 163. Lord Browne-Wilkinson made clear that the term agent here was to be understood in a real sense and that such cases will be rare: [1994] 1 A.C. 180 at 195.
- 164. [1994] 1 A.C. 180 at 195.
- 165. [1994] 1 A.C. 180 at 195–196.
- 166. In CIBC Mortgages Plc v Pitt [1994] 1 A.C. 200, the House of Lords followed this approach based on notice, but held that on the facts there was nothing in the nature of the transaction to put the lender on notice of the risk of either undue influence or fraud by a husband to his wife.
- 167. [1994] 1 A.C. 180 at 196.
- 168. [1994] 1 A.C. 180 at 198.

- 169. This was assumed by the House of Lords in CIBC Mortgages Plc v Pitt [1994] 1 A.C. 200 at 211 and cf. Bainbrigge v Browne (1881) 18 Ch. D. 188, 197.
- 170. See Vol.I, para.8-080. In Barclays Bank Plc v O'Brien, Scott L.J. noted that none of the decided cases of the previous decade had concerned a case of presumed undue influence by the principal debtor over the surety: [1993] Q.B. 109, 113.
- 171. [1994] 1 A.C. 180.
- 172. [2001] UKHL 44, [2002] 2 A.C. 773.
- 173. See further Vol.I, paras 8-114—8-124.
- 174. Moody v Condor Insurance Ltd [2006] EWHC 100 (Ch), [2006] 1 All E.R. 934 (fraud in the principal debtor practised on a commercial guarantee corporation and unknown to the creditor does not affect the validity of the guarantee).
- 175. [2001] UKHL 44 at [41], [44]–[49] and see Mahon v FBN Bank (UK) [2011] EWHC 1432 (Ch) [2011] B.P.I.R. 1029 at [51], [59]; Vol.I, para.8-117.
- 176. [2001] UKHL 44 at [50] and see Vol.I, paras 8-118—8-119.
- 177. [2001] UKHL 44 at [56], [64]–[67]. See Vol.I, para.8-120.
- 178. (1844) 10 Cl. & Fin. 934.
- 179. (1844) 10 Cl. & Fin. 934 at 943. cf. Owen v Homan (1851) 3 Mac. & G. 378, 396, where Lord Truro stated that the rule as to disclosure is the same for contracts of suretyship and of insurance.
- 180. (1845) 12 Cl. & Fin. 109, 118.
- 181. (1845) 12 Cl. & Fin. 109 at 119.
- 182. (1845) 12 Cl. & Fin. 109 at 119.
- 183. (1845) 12 Cl. & Fin. 109 at 119.
- 184. The North British Insurance Co v Lloyd (1854) 10 Ex. 523, 533. See further Seaton v Heath [1899] 1 Q.B. 782, 792 and see above, paras 42-033 et seq. The position at common law as regards insurance is the subject of radical legislative change by the Consumer Insurance (Disclosure and Representations) Act 2012 and the Insurance Act 2015, as explained above, paras 42-046 et seq.
- 185. [1912] 2 K.B. 72.
- 186. [1912] 2 K.B. 72 at 77, per Vaughan Williams L.J. cf. Smith v Bank of Scotland (1813) 1 Dow. 272, 292; and Lee v Jones (1864) 17 C.B.(N.S.) 482, 503. In the case of a continuing guarantee this limited duty of disclosure will continue to operate as regards the future liability of the surety. If, therefore, the surety engages for the honesty of an employee, and the employer discovers that the employee has been dishonest, but instead of dismissing him, continues him in his employment without notifying the surety of the facts, the surety will not be liable for subsequent defaults by the employee: Phillips v Foxall (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 666; Sanderson v Aston (1873) L.R. 8 Ex. 73.
- 187. See Vol.I, paras 7-017, 7-020.
- 188. Cooper v National Provincial Bank [1946] K.B. 1; and see National Provincial Bank v Glanusk [1913] 3 K.B. 335; Westpac Securities Ltd v Dickie [1991] 1 N.Z.L.R. 657.

- 189. Geest Plc v Fyffes Plc [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 672, 685.
- 190. [2001] UKHL 44, [2002] 3 W.L.R. 1021.
- 191. [2001] UKHL 44, [2002] 3 W.L.R. 1021 at [112], per Lord Hobhouse of Woodborough; at [185], per Lord Scott of Foscote.
- 192. [1912] 2 K.B. 72, 78.
- 193. Pooraka Holdings Pty Ltd v Participation Nominees Pty Ltd (1991) 58 S.A.S.R. 184.
- 194. [2001] UKHL 44 at [188].
- 195. [2001] UKHL 44 at [81]. cf. Levett v Barclays Bank Plc [1995] 1 W.L.R. 1260 at 1273 and Crédit Lyonnais Bank Nederland v Export Credit Guarantee Department [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 200, 227 (affirmed on other grounds [2000] 1 A.C. 486) in which it was accepted that a creditor must disclose any unusual features in the transaction, but that this did not extend to unusual features of the risk.
- 196. [2001] UKHL 44 at [81].
- 197. [2011] EWCA Civ 230, [2012] Ch. 31.
- 198. Notably, Hamilton v Watson (1845) 12 Cl. & Fin. 109; National Provincial Bank v Glanusk [1913] 3 K.B. 335; Smith v Bank of Scotland 1997 SC (HL) 111, especially at 118; London General Omnibus Company Ltd v Holloway [1912] 1 K.B. 72; Royal Bank of Scotland Plc v Etridge (No.2) [2001] UKHL 44, [2002] 3 W.L.R. 102.
- 199. [2001] UKHL 44 at [188], above, para.45-037.
- 200. [2011] EWCA Civ 230 at [31], per Sir Andrew Morritt C. (with whom Smith L.J. agreed).
- 201. [2011] EWCA Civ 230 at [32]. The CA did not express a view on the question whether a suitably drafted term of the guarantee could exclude the effect of an otherwise operative nondisclosure on the validity of the contract of guarantee: [2011] EWCA Civ 230.
- 202. [2011] EWCA Civ 230 at [37], per Sir Andrew Morritt C.
- 203. See Vol.I, para.7-047.
- 204. Misrepresentation Act 1967 s.2(1). See further Vol.I, para.7-074. This would apparently apply also to misrepresentations of law: Vol.I, para.7-016.
- 205. [1987] F.L.R. 237 (decision at first instance not challenged on appeal).
- 206. [1964] A.C. 465. It is unclear how the interpretation of Hedley Byrne on the basis of "assumption of responsibility" taken by the House of Lords in Henderson v Merrett Syndicates Ltd [1995] 2 A.C. 145; White v Jones [1995] 2 A.C. 207; and Williams v Natural Life Health Foods Ltd And Mistlin [1998] 1 W.L.R. 830 will affect the approach of the courts to liability in the tort for negligent non-disclosure, but the tendency of these decisions has been to extend liability for pure economic loss: see further Vol.I, paras 1-210 et seq.
- 207. [1985] 3 All E.R. 513, 522–523.
- 208. [1993] Q.B. 109 (affirmed on different grounds [1994] 1 A.C. 180).
- 209. [1993] Q.B. 109, 140 and see above, para.45-034.
- 210. Purchas L.J. expressed the view that the duty of care in Perry v Midland Bank Plc [1987] F.L.R. 237 arose purely from the fact that the surety was also the bank's customer: [1993] Q.B. 109, 147.

211. [1993] Q.B. 109, 140–141.

212. [1993] Q.B. 109 at 140–141. No view was expressed on this issue in the House of Lords: [1994] 1 A.C. 180.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 45 - Suretyship

Section 2. - Formation of the Contract

(d) - Effect on Surety of Vitiating of the Transaction Guaranteed

Incapacity of principal debtor: minors

45-040

Formerly, the question whether a surety who had undertaken to meet a liability which was void as against the principal debtor on account of the latter's minority, was himself liable was said to depend on whether the contract was a guarantee or an indemnity. If he had merely guaranteed the liability, it was held that he could not be liable because there was no default by the minor in not meeting the liability, and the surety could not be called upon to meet his liability unless there was such default.²¹³ Where, on the other hand, the surety had assumed a primary liability to indemnify the creditor in any event, the minority of the debtor provided no defence to the surety.²¹⁴ The significance of this distinction here, which had been the subject of criticism, was removed by s.2 of the Minors' Contracts Act 1987 which provides that where a guarantee is given in respect of an obligation of a party to a contract which is itself unenforceable against that party because he was a minor, then the guarantee shall not for that reason alone be unenforceable against the guarantor.²¹⁵

It is uncertain whether the distinction drawn formerly between guarantees and indemnities in relation to a minor's obligations applies to a surety who engages to answer for the ultra vires liability of a company (though the impact of the ultra vires doctrine has been considerably attenuated²¹⁶). In *Garrard v James*²¹⁷ it was held that the question was one of construction. If the surety intends to assume the risk of non-payment by the debtor on the grounds of financial inability only, he will not be liable if the reason for the non-payment is legal incapacity rather than financial inability; if, on the other hand, the surety intends to assume the risk of non-payment for any reason, then he is liable even if the reason for non-payment is legal incapacity.²¹⁸ It is thought that this is a better approach than that adopted in the cases concerned with minors, but in *Yeoman Credit Ltd v Latter*²¹⁹ (itself such a case) it seems to have been assumed that the distinction between a guarantee and an indemnity governs the company cases in the same way as it did the minority cases.

Other invalidating cause

45-041

Where the transaction guaranteed by the surety is affected by some other invalidating cause, e.g. fraud or misrepresentation, the question whether the surety is liable may again depend on the distinction between a contract of guarantee and a contract of indemnity. If the contract is one of guarantee the surety cannot be liable if the principal debtor is not liable.²²⁰ But there is no reason why a contract of indemnity should not be so drafted as to extend to losses incurred by the creditor even under a void transaction, though clear words would probably be needed to produce such a result.²²¹ On the other hand, where a contract of suretyship guarantees the payment of a certain sum, this sum having been agreed by the parties to represent the amounts payable under a contract for services rendered to the principal debtor, the surety cannot avoid liability by pointing to a "manifest error" as regards the computation of the liabilities of the principal debtor.²²²

- 213. Coutts & Co v Browne-Lecky [1947] K.B. 104; Stadium Finance Co Ltd v Helm (1965) 102 S.J. 471. The correctness of Coutts & Co v Browne-Lecky, above, was reserved in Argo Caribbean Group Ltd v Lewis [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 288.
- 214. Wauthier v Wilson (1912) 28 T.L.R. 239; Yeoman Credit Ltd v Latter [1961] 1 W.L.R. 828.
- 215. The Minors' Contracts Act 1987 also repealed s.1 of the Infants' Relief Act 1874 whose provisions were the basis for the distinction definitively removed by s.2 of the 1987 Act in relation to minors.
- 216. See above, Vol.I, paras 10-020 et seq.
- 217. [1925] Ch. 616; see also Heald v O'Connor [1971] 1 W.L.R. 497, 506. The ultra vires doctrine was largely, though not wholly, abrogated by s.9 of the European Communities Act 1972: see Vol.I, paras 10-027 et seq. and TCB Ltd v Gray [1985] Ch. 621 (affirmed [1987] Ch. 458).
- 218. [1925] Ch. 616 at 622.
- 219. See above, in which Yorks Ry Wagon Co v Maclure (1881) 19 Ch. D. 478, another company case, was explained in this way.
- 220. Swan v Bank of Scotland (1836) 10 Bligh.(N.S.) 627; Brown v Blaine (1884) 1 T.L.R. 158; Temperance Loan Fund Ltd v Rose [1932] 2 K.B. 522; Barclays v Prospect Mortgages Ltd [1974] 1 W.L.R. 837. But cf. Vol.I, para.8-052, as to duress.
- 221. cf. Bentworth Finance Ltd v Lubert [1968] 1 Q.B. 680, 686; Gulf Bank KSC v Mitsubishi Heavy Industries (No.2) [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 145.
- 222. Try Build Ltd v Blue Star Garages Ltd [1999] 66 Con. L.R. 90.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 45 - Suretyship
Section 3. - Formalities

Statute of Frauds 1677 s.4. ²²³

45-042

This section provides that:

“... no action shall be brought ... whereby to charge the defendant upon any special promise to answer for the debt default or miscarriage of another person ... unless the agreement upon which such action shall be brought or some memorandum or note thereof shall be in writing and signed by the party to be charged therewith or some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorised.”

“Debt, default or miscarriage”

45-043

These words appear to cover any form of legal liability, so that a promise by A to pay compensation to B for a tort committed by C against B in consideration of B not suing C, is within the statute and must be evidenced in writing. ²²⁴ Moreover, they have been held to cover an agreement to give a guarantee, as well as an actual guarantee. ²²⁵ On the other hand, it has been said that:

“... since a contract of guarantee is a contract to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another who is primarily liable to the creditor, it follows that if, or at any rate in so far as, a contract covers loss to the creditor which does not involve a liability of the other to him, that contract cannot be a contract of guarantee.” ²²⁶

Thus, a contract under which a person stands “surety” for a building contractor’s due performance of a contract and which is subject to a condition of automatic termination on that contractor’s voluntary liquidation is not a contract of guarantee since it imposes responsibility on the “surety” on the mere non-performance of the contractor’s obligations and not only on their breach, there being no breach on operation of the condition. ²²⁷ The requirements of the section do not apply to an agreement which varies a guarantee and which is relied on by a guarantor as a defence to an action on the guarantee, ²²⁸ but they do apply to any subsequent agreement between the guarantor and the creditor which creates a new contract of guarantee. ²²⁹

Guarantees and indemnities distinguished

45-044

It has been established from a very early date that the words “debt, default or miscarriage of another person” mean that the section only applies where there is some person other than the surety who is primarily liable. ²³⁰ The section therefore applies when the surety assumes a secondary liability and agrees to be answerable if the principal debtor fails to meet his liability, but it does not apply where the surety assumes a primary liability. This is the origin of the distinction between contracts of guarantee and contracts of indemnity, the former falling within the section, and the latter outside it.

A question of substance rather than of form of the Statute of Frauds. ²³² ❗ In Actionstrength Ltd v International Glass Engineering INGLLEN SpA, ²³³ the claimant was a building sub-contractor which, fearing non-payment by the main contractor, obtained a promise from the employer that the latter “would ensure that the claimant would receive any amount due to it from [the main contractor] ... if necessary by redirecting to the claimant payments due by [the employer] to the [main contractor]”. ²³⁴ The main contractor was not party to this agreement nor had it accepted that money due to it could be paid to the claimant. The employer applied to the court to strike out the sub-contractor’s claim as possessing no reasonable prospect of success on the ground, inter alia, that even on the assumption that the factual allegations of the sub-contractor were true, the agreement constituted a guarantee and failed for lack of the requisite formalities under the Statute of Frauds. The Court of Appeal agreed, holding that the agreement as alleged was a guarantee. According to Simon-Brown L.J.:

45-045

❗ The question whether or not a person agrees “to answer for the debt ... of another person” is one of substance rather than of form. ²³¹ So, where a chairman of a company (the principal debtor) told a creditor that he would make sure that the money owed would be forthcoming, it was held that in substance the chairman had promised to answer for payment by the debtor so as to come within s.4

“If payment to the creditor (of an assumed contingent liability) is to be made only from funds which the promisor would otherwise have to pay the debtor, that is one thing and understandably outside the Statute. The payment claimed here seems to me quite another thing. It is, indeed, on analysis quite inaccurate to describe it as a payment out of funds otherwise due to the [main contractor]. Rather it would be a payment out of the [employer’s] own funds since the [main contractor] would still remain entitled to be paid.” ²³⁵

Thus, the absence of the agreement of the main contractor to the redirection of the funds by the employer (and therefore the potential for discharge of the debt owed to it by the employer by the latter’s payment of the sub-contractor) was crucial to determining whether it was a guarantee. If agreement by the main contractor had been forthcoming, the agreement would have created a primary liability in the employer (the agreement being “tantamount to, if not in strict law, a novation or assignment of liability”), but in its absence it was clear that the employer had agreed to accept a secondary liability in respect of the main contractor’s liabilities. ²³⁶

A question of construction

45-046

According to Lord Diplock in Moschi v Lep Air Services Ltd, in distinguishing between guarantees and indemnities, “every case must depend upon the true construction of the actual words in which the promise is expressed”. ²³⁷ However, it has been said that:

“The fact that the parties have used the word ‘guarantee’ is not itself conclusive, but in doubtful cases it may provide some guide, especially if the word is repeated a number of times in the document. ... Another guide is whether the creditor’s rights against the principal debtor and against the guarantor, or indemnifier, are co-extensive. If the person liable under the contract may be liable for a greater amount than the principal debtor, the contract is probably one of indemnity.”²³⁸

On the other hand, it has been held that the absence of usual provisions included in contracts of guarantee (for example, to permit variation of the obligations or giving of time without discharge of the surety) is “at best neutral” in construing a promise as a guarantee or an indemnity.²³⁹ In common with the general position, this process of construction should bear in mind the factual matrix in which the words were used by the parties.²⁴⁰

Examples

45-047

Given that s.4 applies only where there is some person other than the surety who is primarily liable, it does not apply where there has never been any party liable other than the defendant.²⁴¹ So, if A orders goods and instructs them to be delivered to B, and the intention of the parties is that A alone is to be liable for the price, this does not fall within the section.²⁴² This is not indeed a contract of suretyship at all but a mere contract for the sale of the goods to A. But if the intention of the parties is that the recipient of the goods is to be primarily liable, and the other party is only to be liable if the recipient does not pay, this is a contract of guarantee within the section.²⁴³ Similarly, the section does not apply where there was originally another party liable to the creditor but his liability has been discharged. So if A agrees to pay B a debt owed to B by C, and B agrees to discharge C, this is a novation and not within the section.²⁴⁴ A is not agreeing to meet C’s liability, for that liability has gone; he is agreeing to meet a new liability which is his alone, and the section does not apply.²⁴⁵ The same is true where C owes a debt to B and B agrees to discharge C in return for a new joint obligation undertaken by A and C together; A is not undertaking to answer for C’s old debt (for that has gone) but for the new joint debt on which he is primarily liable.²⁴⁶ It has also been held that a promise by A to B that A will pay to C a debt due from B to C is not within the section; if the promise were made by A to C it would be a promise to answer for the debt “of another”, but where the promise is made to B himself, it is a promise to answer for the promisee’s own debt and not for the debt “of another”.²⁴⁷ So also a promise by a principal debtor to indemnify another if he will act as surety for him is not within the section for the debtor is undertaking to answer for his own debt or default and not for that “of another”.²⁴⁸ Moreover, a clause according to which the promisor agrees to be “bound by any acknowledgment or admission by the [first debtor] and by any judgment” in favour of the creditor against the first debtor provides, when coupled with language of indemnification, “a compelling indication that the [promisor’s] liability under the deed of indemnity is primary rather than secondary”.²⁴⁹

45-048

Even where there is another debtor it does not necessarily follow that the contract is one of guarantee within the section. Thus if two debtors contract jointly (or jointly and severally) each is answerable for his own debt, and not for the debt of the other, and the case is not within the section. And where the liability assumed by the defendant is different from the liability assumed by the other debtor the case will not be within the section, for it cannot be said here that the defendant has promised to answer for the debt or default of another. Thus where a person acts as surety for a debtor under a consumer credit agreement, but the surety’s liability extends to situations in which the debtor himself is not liable, this is a contract of indemnity not within the section, for the surety has clearly assumed a separate and distinct obligation, and is not merely guaranteeing the debtor’s obligations.²⁵⁰ On the other hand, where A agrees to “assume full responsibility for ensuring” that B “has and will at all times have sufficient funds and other resources to fulfil and meet all duties, commitments and liabilities” to C, then this promise gives rise to a “see to it” obligation: B’s liability is primary, A’s is secondary and A’s agreement constitutes a guarantee.²⁵¹

Guarantee only if secondary liability as against creditor

45-049

In considering whether the surety has undertaken a primary or a secondary liability, it must be recalled that the position as between the creditor and the surety may differ from the position as between the surety and another debtor.²⁵² If two joint debtors agree as between themselves that one is to be primarily liable and the other to bear a secondary liability only, this will create the relationship of principal debtor and surety as between them. But if they both assume a joint primary liability as against the creditor there will be no contract of guarantee within the section.²⁵³

Guarantee as incident to wider transaction

45-050

Even where a person clearly does promise to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another, the promise will not be within the section where it is merely an incident to a wider transaction. The question is whether the main object of the parties is that one should guarantee the liability of another or whether the promise arose as an incident to a wider transaction with a different object (where the promise is to be seen as one of indemnity).²⁵⁴ So, for example, where a person contracts to buy goods as agent for a principal on the terms that he is to be liable for the price if the principal fails to pay, this does not fall within s.4 even though the agent is in a sense promising to answer for the debt of the principal, for the object of the parties is to effect a sale of goods, not to enter into a contract of guarantee.²⁵⁵ Similarly, where a person promises to pay off an encumbrance on property in which he has an interest in order to secure its release, the mere fact that the encumbrance arose out of another's debt does not bring the case within the section.²⁵⁶ On the other hand, where a company director guarantees the debts of a company, this falls squarely within the section²⁵⁷ even though the director may himself have a charge on the company's assets.²⁵⁸ And the mere fact that the promise is related to one or more other transactions does not take the promise outside s.4. So, in Pitt v Jones, the managing director and major shareholder in Company A wished to sell his shares to Company B (which was to finance the purchase by borrowing the money from Company A).²⁵⁹ In order to effect the sale, the director persuaded the minor shareholders (and employees) of Company A not to exercise their right of pre-emption over his own shares and to agree to the loan by Company A; he also arranged that the minority shareholders should enjoy an option to sell their own shares to Company B and agreed with them that if Company B could not pay for their shares on exercise of this option, he would do so. In these circumstances, the Court of Appeal held that while these transactions were linked, they were not one identical transaction: the director had no interest in the contract between the minority shareholders and Company B "in the sense that he could not possibly benefit" from the share-options, though the latter were a way of persuading the minority shareholders to cooperate with the sale of his own shares.²⁶⁰ As a result, the director's promise to pay for their shares if Company B did not do so fell within s.4 and was unenforceable for want of formality.

"Implied guarantees"

45-051

In Silverburn Finance (UK) Ltd v Salt,²⁶¹ continuing written personal guarantees by a company's directors had been terminated by guarantors at the same time as the termination by the company of the main contract in respect of which the guarantees had been made. About a month later, a new main contract was concluded by the company on the same terms as previously and the question arose as to the position of the guarantors. Although it had not been pleaded, the question was raised by the Court of Appeal as to whether the guarantees could be implied on the renewal of the earlier main agreement. In Mummery L.J.'s opinion:

"... any implication of an agreement to supply a guarantee would face the difficulty of non-compliance with the statutory requirement of writing. That requirement cannot be satisfied by reference back to the guarantees [earlier supplied in writing], as they had been revoked. They are only written evidence of guarantees that have since ceased to exist.” ²⁶²

Rix L.J. agreed at least in the absence of an express agreement that the old guarantees would stand as a sufficient note or memorandum of the new or revived guarantees. ²⁶³

Requirements of the section ²⁶⁴

45-052

The section requires that the agreement or a note or memorandum thereof should be in writing, and this has been held to mean that all the material terms of the contract must be stated in the writing. ²⁶⁵ It was formerly held that the writing should also include a statement of the consideration but this gave rise to many difficulties, and it was eventually provided by s.3 of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act 1856 that this should no longer be necessary in the case of contracts of guarantee.

Written agreement or note or memorandum

45-053

As Lord Brandon observed in Elpis Maritime Co Ltd v Marti Chartering Inc Co (The Maria D), ²⁶⁶s.4 provides two ways in which a guarantee may be enforceable: the first is by having a written agreement signed by the party to be charged or by his agent and the second is by having a note or memorandum of the agreement similarly signed. ²⁶⁷ Where, therefore, A has previously made an oral agreement with B to guarantee C's liabilities to B, it is immaterial whether A's subsequent signature of a document incorporating the terms of such a guarantee was made on its own behalf or only as agent for C. For if A signed on its own behalf as a contracting party, then the oral agreement became subsumed in the written one and is enforceable in the first way which s.4 provides. On the other hand, if A signed as agent for C, the oral agreement of guarantee between A and B does not become subsumed in the written one, but the written one duly signed is nevertheless a memorandum of the oral agreement so as to satisfy the second way which s.4 provides. ²⁶⁸ The memorandum need not be prepared for the purpose of satisfying the statutory requirement of written evidence. Any writing which contains the requisite particulars will suffice so long as it comes into existence before an action is brought on the contract. ²⁶⁹

Written agreement

45-054

The Court of Appeal has held that the written agreement for the purposes of the Statute can be contained in “a sequence of negotiating emails or other documents of the sort which is commonplace in ship chartering and ship sale and purchase”, although it reserved the question whether “the pattern of contract negotiation and formation habitually adopted in other areas of commercial life” would present difficulty for the adoption of the same approach. ²⁷⁰

Note or memorandum

45-055

In order to satisfy the Statute the document which is relied on as a note or memorandum of the agreement must itself acknowledge or recognise the existence of a contract and this cannot be the case where it is expressed as “subject to contract”. ²⁷¹ It must also contain a statement of its material terms. ²⁷² On the other hand, it has been held that:

“... where ... there is an offer in writing made by the party to be bound which contains the essential terms of what is offered and the party to be bound accepts that his offer has been accepted unconditionally, albeit orally, there is a sufficient note or memorandum to satisfy section 4.” ²⁷³

It is sometimes possible for two documents to be read together so as to find a note or memorandum satisfying the section, but in order for this to be done it is necessary that the document containing the defendant's signature should contain some reference, express or implied, to the other document which it is sought to read with the first. ²⁷⁴

Rectification and the Statute

45-056

Where as a result of a shared mistake a guarantee instrument does not record the common intention of the parties, and the creditor is entitled to invoke the court's equitable jurisdiction to rectify the instrument so as to accord with their common intention, the creditor's claim under the instrument as so rectified does not offend s.4 of the Statute of Frauds. ²⁷⁵

Signature to agreement or memorandum ²⁷⁶

45-057

The note or memorandum of the guarantee must be “signed by the party to be charged” or by his agent. ²⁷⁷ It is not necessary that it should be signed by the other party to the transaction. ²⁷⁸ Nor for this purpose need it be a “signature” in the popular sense for it suffices if the defendant's name is written or printed by himself or even by an agent ²⁷⁹; and it may appear anywhere in the document so long as it is intended to authenticate the whole document. ²⁸⁰ Where the defendant wrote and signed a guarantee which contained a mistake, and on the mistake being discovered, he wrote a memorandum across the original guarantee correcting the mistake, but did not sign it afresh, it was held that his original signature was a signature of the whole and satisfied the section. ²⁸¹ And where the director of a company agreed orally to guarantee the company's liabilities and signed a contract on behalf of the company, but omitted to sign a guarantee form in the same document, it being orally agreed that his one signature should be sufficient to deal also with his personal capacity, it was held that the requirements of the statute had been satisfied. ²⁸² Moreover, as has been indicated, where an agent has orally agreed to a personal guarantee, but signs a document which includes such a guarantee only on behalf of his principal, he is bound personally: “[t]he question is not what is the intention of the person signing the memorandum, but is one of fact, viz. is there a note or memorandum of the promise signed by the party to be charged?”. ²⁸³ On the other hand, it has been held that where an alleged guarantee was contained in an email sent with the would-be guarantor's authority, the automatic insertion of an email address in the message by an internet service provider did not constitute a signature by its writer within the meaning of s.4 as it did not represent any intention to authenticate the message by the writer. ²⁸⁴ However, the court accepted that:

“... if a party or a party's agent sending an e-mail types his or her or his or her principal's name to the extent required or permitted by existing case law in the body of an e-mail, then ... that would be sufficient signature of the purposes of section 4 [of the Statute of Frauds].” ²⁸⁵

Alteration in memorandum

45-058

Where a memorandum is altered after it has been signed either in order to correct a mistake in the written statement of an existing contract ²⁸⁶ or before the parties are contractually bound at all, ²⁸⁷ parol evidence is admissible to show that the signature was intended to apply to the memorandum as altered. ²⁸⁸ But such signature cannot authenticate subsequent alterations which effect a variation of a contract concluded and binding on the parties at some time previous to the alterations. ²⁸⁹

Effect of non-compliance with the section

45-059

It is well settled that a failure to comply with the section renders the contract unenforceable rather than void. ²⁹⁰ So far as contracts of guarantee are concerned, the principal consequence of this is that the section may be satisfied by a written document which is made or signed only after the contract was originally created. Thus a recital in a will confirming a guarantee previously given orally has been held to satisfy the section. ²⁹¹

Estoppel

45-060

In Actionstrength Ltd v International Glass Engineering IN GL EN SpA ²⁹² the House of Lords considered how, if at all, a person could be estopped from relying on the invalidity of a guarantee owing to its failure to fulfil the requirements of s.4 of the Statute of Frauds. There a sub-contractor entered into an agreement with the main contractor to supply labour to enable the latter to build a factory for an employer. When arrears built up on the sums due to it from the contractor, the sub-contractor threatened to withdraw its labour and, it alleged, concluded a contract with the employer by which the latter promised to ensure that the sub-contractor received any amount due to it from the main contractor. The sub-contractor then continued to supply labour for the project, allegedly in reliance on this contract. The Court of Appeal had held that the alleged agreement fell within s.4 of the Statute ²⁹³ and before the House of Lords the sub-contractor did not challenge this decision, but argued either as a matter of estoppel or otherwise, more generally, that it would be unconscionable for the employer to rely on the Statute and to go back on its promise on which it had relied. ²⁹⁴ However, the House of Lords rejected these arguments. For Lord Hoffmann,

“The terms of the Statute of Frauds ... show that Parliament, although obviously conscious that it would allow some people to break their promises, thought that this injustice was outweighed by the need to protect people from being held liable on the basis of oral utterances which were ill-considered, ambiguous or completely fictitious. This means that while normally one would approach the construction of a statute on the basis that Parliament was unlikely to have intended to cause injustice by allowing people to break promises which had been relied upon, no such assumption can be made about the Statute of Frauds. Although the scope of the Statute of Frauds must be tested on the assumption that the facts alleged by [the sub-contractor] are true, it must not be construed in a way which would undermine its purpose.” ²⁹⁵

None of the facts before the House distinguished the case from those which attend the giving of every guarantee: the only assurance given to the subcontractor was the promise of guarantee itself. ²⁹⁶ On these facts, therefore, the purpose of the Statute should not be subverted by the acceptance of an estoppel. ²⁹⁷ On the other hand, two of their Lordships indicated the circumstances in which an estoppel could apply so as to prevent reliance on the Statute. ²⁹⁸ So, Lord Clyde suggested that what is required is “some additional encouragement, inducement or assurance” and “some influence exerted by [the employer] on [the sub-contractor] to lead it to assume that the promise would be honoured”. ²⁹⁹ For Lord Walker of Gestingthorpe, an example of when estoppel may arise in this context would be where there was some “unambiguous representation that there was an enforceable contract, or that [the employer] would not take any point on s.4 of the Statute of Frauds”. ³⁰⁰

Consumer credit agreements

45-061

Contracts of guarantee (which for this purpose include certain contracts of indemnity) relating to consumer credit agreements and to consumer hire agreements may also be affected by the special requirements of the Consumer Credit Act 1974, for the details of which reference should be made to Ch.39.³⁰¹

-
- ^{223.} See generally, Actionstrength Ltd v International Glass Engineering INGLEN SpA [2003] UKHL 17, [2003] 2 A.C. 541. On satisfying the statutory requirements of form as regards contracts concluded by electronic means, see Vol.I, paras 5-006—5-009.
- ^{224.} Kirkham v Marter (1819) 2 B. & Ald. 613.
- ^{225.} Compagnie Generale d'Industrie v Myson Group Ltd (1984) 134 New L.J. 788.
- ^{226.} Northwood Development Co Ltd v Aegon Insurance Co (UK) Ltd (1994) 10 Const. L.J. 157, 163, per HH Judge Harvey Q.C.
- ^{227.} Northwood Development Co Ltd v Aegon Insurance Co (UK) Ltd, above.
- ^{228.} In re a Debtor (No.517 of 1991), The Times, November 25, 1991.
- ^{229.} Samuels Finance Group Plc v Beechmanor Ltd (1994) 67 P. & C.R. 282, 284–285.
- ^{230.} Birkmyr v Darnell (1805) 1 Salk. 27; and see cases cited in 1 Sm.L.C., 13th edn, 331.
- ^{231.} Motemtronic Ltd v Autocar Equipment Ltd Unreported June 20, 1996, CA (Civ) transcript No.656 of 1996, referred to by CA in Actionstrength Ltd v International Glass Engineering INGLEN SpA [2001] EWCA Civ 1477, [2002] 1 W.L.R. 566 (affirmed on other grounds [2003] UKHL 17, [2003] 2 A.C. 541) both citing with approval the dictum to this effect of Vaughan Williams L.J. in Harburg India Rubber Comb Co v Martin [1902] 1 K.B. 778, 784–785; Quest 4 Finance Ltd v Maxfield [2007] EWHC 2313 (QB), [2007] 2 C.L.C. 706.
- ^{232.}  Motemtronic Ltd v Autocar Equipment Ltd, above. See also Erith Holdings Ltd v Murphy [2017] EWHC 1364 (TCC) at [88] and [90].
- ^{233.} [2001] EWCA Civ 1477, [2002] 1 W.L.R. 566. The decision of the Court of Appeal on this point was not appealed to the House of Lords, on whose decision on a defence of estoppel; see [2003] UKHL 17, [2003] 2 A.C. 541 and below, para.45-060.
- ^{234.} [2001] EWCA Civ 1477, [2002] 1 W.L.R. 566 at [17].
- ^{235.} [2001] EWCA Civ 1477, [2002] 1 W.L.R. 566 at [35]. The CA rejected the contention that there is a rule of law according to which there is no guarantee within the Statute of Frauds where the promisor does not undertake to be liable generally but only in respect of specific funds or sources within his control: at [47]-[51], not following in this respect Harvey v Edwards Dunlop & Co Ltd (1927) 39 C.L.R. 302, 311, per Higgins J.
- ^{236.} [2001] EWCA Civ 1477 at [34]-[35].
- ^{237.} [1973] A.C. 331, 349.
- ^{238.} Clement v Clement (1996) 71 P. & C.R. D19 CA, per Warner J., quoted with approval by Peter

Gibson L.J. in the CA.

- 239. Associated British Ports v Ferryways NV [2008] EWHC 1265 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 353 at [61], per Field J., quoted with approval by Maurice Kay L.J. (with whom Sir Anthony Clarke M.R. and Jacob L.J. agreed) [2009] EWCA Civ 189, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 595 at [12].
- 240. Clement v Clement, above and see below, paras 45-064 et seq. and Vol.I, paras 13-051, 13-123.
- 241. Lakeman v Mountstephen (1874) L.R. 7 H.L. 17.
- 242. Birkmyr v Darnell (1805) 1 Salk. 27.
- 243. Simpson v Penton (1834) 2 C. & M. 430.
- 244. As to novation, see Vol.I, para.19-087.
- 245. Goodman v Chase (1818) 1 B. & Ald. 297; Butcher v Steuart (1843) 11 M. & W. 857.
- 246. Ex p. Lane (1846) 1 De G. 300.
- 247. Eastwood v Kenyon (1840) 11 A. & E. 438; Guild & Co v Conrad [1894] 2 Q.B. 885.
- 248. Thomas v Cook (1828) 8 B. & C. 728.
- 249. ABM AMRO Commercial Finance Plc v McGinn [2014] EWHC 1674 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 333 at [36], per Flaux J.
- 250. Yeoman Credit Ltd v Latter [1961] 1 W.L.R. 828; Unity Finance Ltd v Woodcock [1963] 1 W.L.R. 455; Goulston Discount Co Ltd v Clark [1967] 2 Q.B. 493. See also Consumer Credit Act 1974 s.113(7).
- 251. Associated British Ports v Ferryways NV [2008] EWHC 1265 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 353 at [60], per Field J., quoted with approval by Maurice Kay L.J. (with whom Sir Anthony Clarke M.R. and Jacob L.J. agreed) [2009] EWCA Civ 189, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 595 at [11] (not in the context of the Statute of Frauds).
- 252. See above, paras 45-003—45-005.
- 253. But it has been held that there may still be a contract of guarantee for other purposes: Heald v O'Connor [1971] 1 W.L.R. 497. cf. the position in relation to bills of exchange. While the position of a person liable as drawer or indorser of a bill of exchange is in some respects similar to that of a surety for the acceptor (Duncan Fox & Co v North & South Wales Bank (1880) 6 App. Cas. 1, 19), he cannot set up the Statute of Frauds as a defence to an action on the bill: McCall Brothers Ltd v Hargreaves [1932] 2 K.B. 423. But he can do so if it is sought to impose on him a liability under a parol agreement, and the liability does not arise simply from his position as drawer or indorser under the Bills of Exchange Act 1882: Steele v M'Kinlay (1880) 5 App. Cas. 754; Jenkins & Sons v Coomber [1898] 2 Q.B. 168. But contrast Lombard Banking Ltd v Central Garage & Engineering Co [1963] 1 Q.B. 220; Yeoman Credit v Gregory [1963] 1 W.L.R. 343.
- 254. Sutton v Grey [1894] 1 Q.B. 285; Harburg India Rubber Co v Martin [1902] 1 K.B. 778, 786; Pitt v Jones [2007] EWCA Civ 1301, [2008] 2 W.L.R. 1289 at [32].
- 255. Couturier v Hastie (1852) 8 Exch. 40; reversed on other grounds (1856) 5 H.L.C. 673; Sutton v Grey, above.
- 256. Fitzgerald v Dressler (1859) 7 C.B.(N.S.) 374; Marginson v Ian Potter & Co (1976) 136 C.L.R. 161.
- 257. Harburg India Rubber Co v Martin [1902] 1 K.B. 778.

- 258. Davys v Buswell [1913] 2 K.B. 47.
- 259. Pitt v Jones [2007] EWCA Civ 1301, [2008] 2 W.L.R. 1289.
- 260. [2007] EWCA Civ 1301 at [36]-[38], per Smith L.J.
- 261. [2001] EWCA Civ 279, [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 438.
- 262. [2001] EWCA Civ 279, [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 438 at [32].
- 263. [2001] EWCA Civ 279, [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 438 at [40].
- 264. There is authority on earlier provisions governing contracts for the sale or other disposition of an interest in land under the Statute of Frauds s.4 and s.40 of the Law of Property Act 1925 for the view that if a material term has been omitted from the memorandum, a claimant may waive such a term where it is solely for his benefit and not of a major importance, and enforce the contract without the term in question: Morrell v Studd and Millington [1913] 2 Ch. 648, 660; North v Loomes [1919] 1 Ch. 378, 385-386; Ram Narayan s/o Shankar v Rishad Hussain Shah s/o Tusaduq Hussain Shah [1979] 1 W.L.R. 1349, 1351. Conversely, a party may cure the omission of a term to his detriment by consenting to perform it: Martin v Pycroft (1852) 2 De G.M. & G. 785; Scott v Bradley [1971] Ch. 850. Contrast Burgess v Cox [1951] Ch. 383, 391. The formal requirements governing contracts for the sale or other disposition of land are now contained in s.2 of the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, on which see Vol.I, paras 5-010 et seq.
- 265. Holmes v Mitchell (1859) 7 C.B.(N.S.) 361; State Bank of India v Kaur [1996] 5 Bank L.R. 158; MP Services Ltd v Lawyer (1996) 72 P. & C.R. D49.
- 266. [1992] 1 A.C. 21; and see Baughen (1992) Conv. 330. There is no requirement that any note or memorandum must always postdate the “main contract”, i.e. the contract whose obligations are guaranteed or be contemporaneous with it: Golden Ocean Group Ltd v Salgaocar Mining Industries PVT Ltd [2011] EWHC 56 (Comm), [2011] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 95 at [77], per Christopher Clarke J. (affirmed without reference to this point [2012] EWCA Civ 265, [2012] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 542).
- 267. [1992] 1 A.C. 21 at 27.
- 268. [1992] 1 A.C. 21 at 33; and see below, para.45-057.
- 269. See Lucas v Dixon (1889) 22 Q.B.D. 357 (sale of goods); cf. Farr, Smith & Co Ltd v Messers Ltd [1928] 1 K.B. 397 (sale of goods); Daniels v Trefusis [1914] 1 K.B. 788 (contracts for the sale of an interest in land).
- 270. Golden Ocean Group Ltd v Salgaocar Mining Industries Pvt Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 265, [2012] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 542 at [22], per Tomlinson L.J. and see further at [29] (with whom Rix L.J. and Sir Mark Waller agreed).
- 271. Carlton Communications Plc v Football League [2002] EWHC 1650 at [78] applying Tiverton Ltd v Wearwell Ltd [1975] Ch. 146 (Law of Property Act 1925 s.40); Motemtronic Ltd v Autocar Equipment Ltd Unreported June 20, 1996, CA, transcript No.656 of 1996, per Aldous L.J.; Fairstate Ltd v General Enterprise & Management Ltd [2010] EWHC 3072 (QB), [2010] All E.R. (D) 301 (Nov) at [58] and [88] (identification of principal debtor and duration of guarantee both material).
- 272. [2002] EWHC 1650 at [79] and cf. above, n.264.
- 273. J Pereira Fernandes SA v Mehta [2006] EWHC 813 (Ch) at [16], [2006] 2 All E.R. 881, per Judge Pelling Q.C.
- 274. Timmins v Morland Street Property Ltd [1958] Ch. 110 (a case on s.40 of the Law of Property

- Act 1925); Golden Ocean Group Ltd v Salgaocar Mining Industries Pvt Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 265, [2012] Lloyd's Rep. 542 at [24].
- 275. GMAC Commercial Credit Development Ltd v Sandhu [2004] EWHC 716 (Comm), [2006] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 268, especially at [58]; following USA v Motor Trucks Ltd [1924] A.C. 196 PC (land contract) and see Vol.I, paras 3-057 et seq. on rectification more generally.
- 276. cf. the contrasting position under s.2 of the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, on which see Vol.I, para.5-037.
- 277. Where the original signed guarantee document cannot be found, signature may be established by other evidence: Bank of Scotland v Mazamal Hussain [2011] EWHC 1934 (QB) at [42]-[44]; Mitsui OSK Lines Ltd v Salgaocar Mining Ltd [2015] EWHC 565 (Comm) at [41].
- 278. Laythoarp v Bryant (1836) 2 Bing. N.C. 735.
- 279. Leeman v Stocks [1951] Ch. 941. And see Vol.I, para.5-008 on the status of “electronic signatures” for this purpose.
- 280. Caton v Caton (1867) L.R. 2 H.L. 127.
- 281. Bluck v Gompertz (1852) 7 Exch. 862.
- 282. VSH Ltd v BKS Air Transport Ltd [1964] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 460.
- 283. Re Hoyle [1893] 1 Ch. 84, 100, per Smith L.J., quoted with approval by Lord Brandon in Elpis Maritime Co Ltd v Marti Chartering Co Ltd (The Maria D) [1992] 1 A.C. 21 at 32-33; Golden Ocean Group Ltd v Salgaocar Mining Industries Pvt Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 265, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 542
- 284. J Pereira Fernandes SA v Mehta [2006] EWHC 813 (Ch), [2006] 2 All E.R. 881 at [25]-[30], per Judge Pelling Q.C.
- 285. J Pereira Fernandes SA v Mehta, above, at [31]. It was common ground before (and accepted by) the CA that an electronic signature is sufficient and that a first name, initials or perhaps a nickname will suffice, as long as it was done in a manner which indicates that it is intended to authenticate the document: Golden Ocean Group Ltd v Salgaocar Mining Industries Pvt Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 265, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 542 at [32].
- 286. Bluck v Gompertz (1852) 7 Exch. 862.
- 287. Stewart v Eddowes (1874) L.R. 9 C.P. 311 (sale of goods); Koenigsblatt v Sweet [1923] 2 Ch. 314 (sale of land).
- 288. New Hart Builders Ltd v Brindley [1975] Ch. 342 (sale of land). On the effect of alteration of the instrument of guarantee in any material particular without the knowledge or consent of the surety while in the hands of the party to whom it was given see below, para.45-115.
- 289. New Hart Builders Ltd v Brindley [1975] Ch. 342 although the court considered that there was no logical ground for this distinction, 352.
- 290. Leroux v Brown (1852) 12 C.B. 801; Maddison v Alderson (1883) 8 App. Cas. 467, 474.
- 291. Re Hoyle [1893] 1 Ch. 84.
- 292. [2003] UKHL 17, [2003] 2 All E.R. 615.
- 293. [2001] EWCA 1477, [2002] 1 W.L.R. 566, see above, para.45-045.
- 294. [2003] UKHL 17 at [16], [42].

- 295. [2003] UKHL 17 at [20].
- 296. [2003] UKHL 17 at [9], [28], [35], [53]-[54].
- 297. [2003] UKHL 17 at [9], [53]. See similarly Bank of Scotland v Wright [1990] B.C.C. 663, see below, para.45-082 (no estoppel so as to extend guarantor's liability beyond that to which it applies as a matter of construction of the document which satisfies the Statute of Frauds s.4).
- 298. Lord Hoffmann explicitly reserved this question: [2003] UKHL 17 at [29]. Lord Bingham implicitly agreed with the position taken by Lord Walker of Gestingthorpe noted in the text: [2003] UKHL 17 at [9].
- 299. [2003] UKHL 17 at [35].
- 300. [2003] UKHL 17 at [51] referring to Shah v Shah [2001] EWCA Civ 527, [2002] Q.B. 35 (in the context of deeds) on which see Vol.I, para.1-132.
- 301. Above, paras 39-180 et seq.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 45 - Suretyship

Section 4. - Construction of the Contract

General

45-062

Difficult questions frequently arise as to the extent of the liability which the surety has undertaken. These are essentially questions as to the true construction of the contract in each particular case, and it is sufficient here to indicate the general approach of the courts to these questions and to draw attention to some of the principal types of difficulty which have arisen. ³⁰² Despite some contradictory dicta in the cases, ³⁰³ the general approach seems to be that contracts of this kind must be strictly construed in favour of the surety and that no liability is to be imposed on him which is not clearly and distinctly covered by the contract. ³⁰⁴ The strict approach applies also to attempts to exclude rules of common law or equity incidental to the contract of suretyship. As Lord Jauncey of Tullichettle observed, "there is no doubt that in a modern contract of guarantee parties may, if so minded, exclude any one or more of the normal incidents of suretyship. However if they choose to do so clear and unambiguous language must be used". ³⁰⁵ The reasons for this strict construction are that, in general, the surety receives no benefit from the contract which is, so far as he is concerned, gratuitous; and secondly, that in most cases these days the contract is drafted by the creditor and, in accordance with the contra proferentem maxim, is accordingly to be construed in favour of the surety in cases of doubt. ³⁰⁶ It may be that where these reasons are inapplicable, the court would not construe the contract so strictly. ³⁰⁷

45-063

The principle of strict construction does not mean that the court should not look beyond the terms of the written instrument. As in all cases of construction, the court is entitled to look at the surrounding circumstances in order to see what was the subject matter which the parties had in contemplation at the time the contract was made, and to determine the scope and object of the guarantee. ³⁰⁸ A guarantee of a tenant's obligations under a lease may extend, on its true construction, to the liabilities of the tenant under a statutory continuation of the lease, ³⁰⁹ but prima facie it seems that a guarantee of the covenants of a tenant on a lease do not so extend. ³¹⁰ On the other hand, the court should not "disregard the clear wording of a document simply on the basis of an abstract expectation as to the bargain the parties might have struck". ³¹¹ Instead, there should be an indication in the document itself that general words were not intended to cover a particular circumstance. So, for example, the stipulation of a particular rate of interest on amounts owed under a secured guarantee indicated that an "all moneys and liabilities" clause should not include liability for assigned debts, since the opposite construction would allow the creditor to change the debtor's unsecured debts into secured ones and to alter the rate of interest without any consent on the part of the debtors, still less on the part of the guarantor. ³¹²

Modern approach to construction

45-064

Some of the cases decided on the construction of guarantees and indemnities upholding a strict construction were decided at a time before the modern approach to the construction of contracts in general had become firmly established and it may be questioned whether they are compatible with it.

According to the modern approach to construction:

“... against the background of the admissible matrix of facts known to or at least reasonably available to the parties, the meaning sought is that of the language in question would convey to the reasonable man. In that context, the language used is to be given its natural and ordinary meaning, unless the reasonable man would conclude that something has gone wrong in expressing the parties’ intentions.” ³¹³

Viewed in this way, the reasonable man might conclude that the parties must, for whatever reason, have used wrong words or syntax. ³¹⁴

Application by courts to contracts of guarantee

45-065

This approach to construction has been applied by the courts to contracts of guarantee ³¹⁵ and, most recently, in Kookmin Bank v Rainy Sky SA was applied by the Supreme Court to an “advance payment bond”, a form of refund guarantee. ³¹⁶ So, it has been held that where a promise of guarantee is ambiguous on its face as to who is to benefit from the guarantor’s undertaking, the court may look at extrinsic evidence to ascertain the proper meaning which the guarantee would convey to a reasonable person having all the background knowledge which would reasonably have been available to the parties at the time it was given. ³¹⁷ Moreover, a contract of guarantee has also been construed so as to correct a clear mistake in its drafting. In Vodafone Ltd v GNT Holdings (UK) ³¹⁸ a director of a company, company A, had signed on its notepaper a guarantee of the obligations of its subsidiary, company B, and this was expressed to be for the benefit of company C. However, company B had entered an agreement not with company C but with company D, which was in the same group of companies as company C: company C was merely a holding company and no company in the group other than company D had entered such an agreement. In these circumstances, it was held that the guarantee was given by company A in respect of company B’s liabilities to company D: “something went wrong with the drafting of the [guarantee] letter To construe it literally would be a commercial nonsense.” ³¹⁹

45-066

However, courts have at times sounded more cautious notes as to the implications of the modern approach to construction in the context of guarantees. In Fairstate Ltd v General Enterprise & Management Ltd ³²⁰ the court followed the modern approach to construction, considering that these principles meant that, in a suitable case “extrinsic evidence may be relied upon to identify the guarantor, the creditor, the principal debtor or the obligation to be guaranteed, where any of these have been inadequately or ambiguously described in the relevant document”. But “the Court will be slow to deprive the defendant of a legitimate statutory defence [under the Statute of Frauds] on the basis of contested oral evidence alone”. ³²¹ In particular, as earlier noted, where a mistake has led to the omission of a material term from any writing, the contract may be unenforceable under the Statute of Frauds, unless the court is able to rectify the written instrument under normal rules. ³²² In Fairstate itself, “the sheer length of the catalogue of corrections and additions that [the court] should have to make to the Guarantee Form in order to turn it into an effective guarantee for this transaction” preventing it from so doing: to do so would “be writing a new and different contract for the parties”. ³²³ Moreover, in Dumford Trading AG v OAO Atlantrybflot ³²⁴ the Court of Appeal considered that (apart from the doctrines of rectification or misnomer ³²⁵), where an existing person is named as guarantor in the guarantee document, there is a danger that extrinsic evidence from the surrounding matrix of facts could create an ambiguity otherwise not present. ³²⁶ Where, therefore, company A in a group of companies was identified as guarantor by the document of guarantee, the court should not look at extrinsic evidence (such as the postal address given for this company) so as to construe this unambiguous reference as being to company B, a very similarly-named company in the same group. ³²⁷

“Clear words” and “strict construction”

45-067

It has been suggested that “it may be that the concept that a guarantee should be ‘strictly construed’ now adds nothing” to the modern approach to interpretation,³²⁸ but in *Liberty Mutual Insurance Co (UK) Ltd v HSBC Bank Plc*³²⁹ the Court of Appeal took the view that the modern approach is not inconsistent with a maxim of construction which requires “clear words” to exclude or limit prevailing rules,³³⁰ since “the reasonable man does not expect fundamental principles of law, equity and justice, such as rights of set-off or of subrogation to be excluded unless the contract clearly says so”.³³¹

The role of “business common sense”

45-068

❗ In *Kookmin Bank v Rainy Sky SA*³³² Lord Clarke of Stone-cum-Ebony J.S.C. (with whom Lord Phillips of Worth Matravers P.S.C., Lords Mance, Kerr of Tonaghmore, and Wilson J.J.S.C. agreed) agreed with Lord Neuberger M.R. in *Pink Floyd Music Ltd v EMI Records Ltd*³³³ in considering that the Investors Compensation case and *Chartbrook Ltd v Persimmon Homes Ltd*³³⁴ show that:

“the ultimate aim of interpreting a provision in a contract, especially a commercial contract, is to determine what a reasonable person would have understood the parties to have meant ... the relevant reasonable person is one who has all the background knowledge which would have reasonably have been available to the parties in the situation in which they were at the time of the contract.”³³⁵

The particular issue before the Supreme Court was “the role to be played by considerations of business common sense in determining what the parties meant”,³³⁶ there being a contrast of approach in the Court of Appeal below.³³⁷ In Lord Clarke’s view, it is not necessary “to conclude that, unless the most natural meaning of the words produces a result so extreme as to suggest that it was unintended, the court must give effect to that meaning”.³³⁸ Rather, “[i]f there are two possible constructions, the court is entitled to prefer the construction which is consistent with business common sense and to reject the other;”³³⁹ but “[w]here the parties have used unambiguous language, the court must apply it”.³⁴⁰ ❗ The Supreme Court applied this approach to the construction of the advance payment bonds before it, with the result that, in the context, in the bank’s “promise to pay ... on your first written demand, all such sums due to [the buyer] under the [ship-building] Contract” the words “such sums” referred to refunds to which the buyer was entitled in the case of any insolvency event and not merely to “pre-delivery instalments” (as the banks had argued). For this purpose, the Court took into account the view of the experienced commercial judge at trial that the bank’s construction would have “the surprising and uncommercial result that the Buyers would not be able to call on the Bonds on the happening of the event, namely the insolvency of the Builder, which would be most likely to require first class security”.³⁴¹

Construction so as to “validate if possible”

45-069

In *Pavilion Property Trustees Ltd v Permira Advisers LLP*³⁴² a contract of guarantee was concluded between a landlord of premises and the assignee of the tenant of those premises, but its terms were ambiguous as to whether the guarantor’s obligation related only to the obligations of the assignee or also to those of the “next assignee”. The effect of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s.25(1)³⁴³ was held to be that:

“if the guarantee is held to extend to the obligations of the Assignee and the Next Assignee, then the guarantee is either void in its entirety or void as to some part, if one can sever the provisions which impose a liability in relation to the obligations of the Next Assignee.” ³⁴⁴

Given this effect, Morgan J. considered that it was proper “to recall the Latin maxim verba ita sunt intelligenda ut res magis valeat quam pereat or, in English, ‘validate if possible’” ³⁴⁵ and, as a result, to construe the guarantee in a way which avoided the illegality by holding that it extended only to the obligations of the assignee. ³⁴⁶ On the other hand, in Tindall Cobham 1 Ltd v Adda Hotels ³⁴⁷ (which concerned a clause in a lease which allowed the landlord to give consent to an assignment on the condition that the “tenant shall procure that the guarantor and any other guarantor of the tenant shall covenant by deed with the landlord” on certain terms), the Court of Appeal noted that the maxim ut res magis valeat originated in a concern in the courts to choose a meaning which will “produce the most commercial workable version of the contract” and “was not devised as a means of avoiding the consequences of legislation being applied to the contract which the parties had made”. ³⁴⁸ The maxim should therefore not be used “to create an interpretation of the contract or other instrument which on ordinary principles of construction cannot be justified”. ³⁴⁹ And as a matter of ordinary language the clause in the lease imposed a condition on the tenant that he should procure a new guarantee from the guarantors and such a clause falls within s.25 of the 1995 Act. ³⁵⁰

Co-extensiveness principle

45-070

In contracts of guarantee there has traditionally been a strong prima facie rule of construction that the surety’s obligations are co-extensive with those of the principal debtor. ³⁵¹ Indeed as has been noted above, if the surety’s obligations are not co-extensive with, but greater than those of the principal debtor, the contract is normally thought to be an indemnity and not a guarantee. ³⁵² Many consequences flow from the principle of co-extensiveness; in particular many of the rules relating to the discharge of the surety are often treated as dependent on this principle. ³⁵³ But there is also a tendency to decide new questions by reference to the principle. ³⁵⁴ For example, it has been held that where a surety has guaranteed fulfilment of a party’s obligations under a contract containing an arbitration clause and expressly extending to any award made under it, the surety will be liable in full for an award made under the clause including interest and costs. ³⁵⁵ In another case, it was held that the guarantor of a tenant’s obligations under the lease had undertaken a primary liability, and was therefore liable not only for rent payable under the lease, but also for damages in tort (for mesne profits) where the tenant had wrongfully retained possession after expiry of the lease. ³⁵⁶ Similarly, where a surety agreed to pay interest as a secondary rather than a primary liability this “can only ... mean that he guaranteed to pay interest on the loan at the contractual rate payable by the principal debtor”. ³⁵⁷ On the other hand, the House of Lords sanctioned what appears to be a major breach of the co-extensiveness principle by holding that a guarantor may be liable for instalments accrued due even though the debtor’s primary obligation to pay these instalments has been transmuted into a secondary obligation to pay damages for breach. ³⁵⁸ But no reference was made to the co-extensiveness principle in the speeches in this case, so the present status of this principle remains somewhat uncertain.

Certification of amounts due to creditor

45-071

In North Shore Ventures Ltd v Anstead Holdings Inc, ³⁵⁹ the Court of Appeal was prepared to accept that a “conclusive evidence clause” by which “[a] certificate signed by [the creditor] of the amount for the time being of the Indebtedness and/or the amounts due to [the creditor] shall be conclusive evidence for all purposes against the guarantors unless manifestly incorrect” could take effect on its terms, though it was to be strictly construed so that any ambiguity is resolved in favour of the guarantor. ³⁶⁰ The Court of Appeal held that, in its contractual context, the proper construction of the clause before it was that the guarantors “did not agree to pay the indebtedness as certified, rather the entitlement to certify was limited to the indebtedness for the time being”, ³⁶¹ distinguishing for this purpose the position in IIG Capital LLC v Van der Merwe ³⁶² where the definition of “guaranteed moneys” which the guarantors there agreed to pay included those “expressed to be due, owing or payable, to the Lender from or by the Borrower”, which showed that the guarantors “were undertaking more than a secondary obligation, thereby approximating to a performance bond”. ³⁶³ The Court of Appeal further held that there had been an enforceable variation between the creditor and the principal debtor and that this meant that the certification (which related to the amount due under the unvaried principal agreement) was subject to a manifest error on the face of the certificate, even though this error was not manifest at the time of the certification. ³⁶⁴

Arbitration awards

45-072

Another possible departure from the co-extensiveness principle is to be found in the well established rule that general words in a guarantee, by which a surety guarantees all the obligations of a principal debtor, do not of themselves have the effect of making the surety bound by an arbitration award, even though the guaranteed contract contained an arbitration clause out of which the arbitration arose. ³⁶⁵

Liability under a guarantee and entitlement to petition in bankruptcy

45-073

As has been noted, ³⁶⁶ prima facie a surety does not merely undertake to perform if the principal fails to do so; he undertakes to see that the principal debtor will perform and this means that a guarantor is liable in damages to the creditor for loss caused by the principal debtor’s failure to perform and not merely to any sum owed by the principal debtor to the creditor. Under the Insolvency Act 1986 a creditor’s ability to present a bankruptcy petition exists only where the liability is “for a liquidated sum”. ³⁶⁷ In McGuinness v Norwich and Peterborough Building Society ³⁶⁸ the question arose as to the circumstances in which a creditor benefiting from a guarantee could petition for bankruptcy of the guarantor. Having reviewed the development of the bankruptcy legislation and earlier authorities, the Court of Appeal held that for these purposes

“a debt for a liquidated sum must be a pre-ascertained liability under the agreement which gives rise to it. This can include a contractual liability where the amount due is to be ascertained in accordance with a contractual formula or contractual machinery which, when operated, will produce a figure.” ³⁶⁹

“The issue therefore in relation to guarantees is whether the liability of the guarantor can be treated as one which is reduced to a specified and agreed sum by the guarantee itself.” ³⁷⁰

In the court’s view, this causes no difficulty where the guarantee is construed as containing a promise by the guarantor to pay the principal sum due and interest in the event of the debtor failing to pay, but where a guarantee is of the “see to it” type liability under it would not constitute a debt for a liquidated sum. ³⁷¹ The Court of Appeal accepted that a guarantee can be drafted so as to create liabilities both in debt and for damages. ³⁷² As regards the contract before the court, a clause which made the sums due under the guarantee payable on demand was to be read as a direct promise to pay the principal debtor’s liabilities when they fell due and this meant that the guarantor’s liabilities were for a liquidated sum. ³⁷³ While expressly obiter, the Court of Appeal considered that in its context a second clause in the contract under which the guarantor undertook “obligations ... [as] principal, not just as surety” confirmed that the “on demand clause” created a liability in debt. ³⁷⁴

Guarantee and penalty clause in main contract

45-074

⚠ In Azimut-Benetti SpA (Benetti Division) v Healey ³⁷⁵ the question arose whether a guarantor's liability could include liability for a sum agreed as payable on breach by the principal debtor which fell foul of the common law rule against penalty clauses. Blair J. concluded (though obiter given that the relevant clause in the main contract was held not to be a penalty ³⁷⁶ ⚠) that while "by clear drafting a guarantor's liability may be other than co-extensive with that of the principal debtor", the standard clause in the guarantee before him by which the liability of the guarantor was not to be "impaired, diminished, discharged or released by reason or in consequence of ... the irregularity, illegality, unenforceability or invalidity in whole or in part" of the main contract made by the principal debtor was not apt to impose on the guarantor a liability for a sum irrecoverable against the principal debtor as a penalty. ³⁷⁷ This was so on its terms, because the invalidity of the clause in the main contract meant that there was no relevant "liability" in the principal debtor but there was a more general reason in the fact that the rule against penalties is based on public policy and "it would be contrary to principle to allow the indirect enforcement of a claim for a penalty in this manner". ³⁷⁸

Conditional guarantees ³⁷⁹

45-075

⚠ A guarantee may, on its true construction, be conditional. ³⁸⁰ So, for example, where a person executed a guarantee on the faith of a representation that it would also be executed by another person as co-surety, the liability of the former was held to be conditional on the execution of the guarantee by the latter. ³⁸¹ ⚠ Similarly, if a loan is guaranteed and the loan is expressed to be secured, the guarantee may be conditional on the existence of the security. So in Greer v Kettle where a person guaranteed a loan which was expressed to be secured by a charge on certain shares, and the shares had not been validly issued, it was held that the surety was not liable. ³⁸² In order to establish such a condition, the guarantor must show that the giving of some other valid security formed part of the contract of guarantee: it must have been brought home to and accepted by the lender. ³⁸³ A guarantee which shows on its face that it was intended to be a joint guarantee, executed by several parties, is not binding on a party who has properly signed it, if it transpires that the signatures of other intended guarantors have been forged, and it is immaterial that the other party is unaware of the forgery. ³⁸⁴ While a guarantee may also be held to be conditional on the execution of a second guarantee on identical terms contained in a different document, the fact that the documents formed part of some larger transaction is not by itself sufficient. ³⁸⁵ On the other hand, the Privy Council distinguished Greer v Kettle in Australia & New Zealand Banking Group Ltd v Beneficial Finance Corp Ltd ³⁸⁶ where a letter of guarantee contained a recital stating that the debt to be guaranteed was secured by a floating charge, and the floating charge, though in existence, was not executed for some eight months. It was held that the recital could not have been literally intended to mean that the charge had already been granted because the loan was not being provided (or the charge given) until after the letter of guarantee was signed. It was therefore sufficient that the floating charge should be in existence and available to be assigned to the guarantors, if and when they were called upon to meet their liability.

Guarantees to, or for, a firm

45-076

Prima facie, a surety who engages to be answerable for a particular person is not to be understood as engaging himself to answer for that person's partners. ³⁸⁷ But if in the light of the surrounding circumstances it is evident that the surety intended to guarantee the liabilities of a person as a partner in a firm, the mere fact that the guarantee is expressed in terms to relate only to the one partner, will not protect the surety from liability for the firm's debts. ³⁸⁸ By s.18 of the Partnership Act 1890, a continuing guarantee given either to a firm, or to a third person in respect of the transactions of a firm, is, in the absence of agreement to the contrary, revoked as to future transactions by any change in the constitution of the firm in question. Any change in the identity of the creditor will discharge the surety unless the contract otherwise provides. ³⁸⁹

Continuing guarantees

45-077

It is often a difficult question whether a guarantee, for example, of the price of goods to be supplied, or money to be lent up to a specified amount, is intended to extend to a single or definite number of transactions, or whether it is intended to be continuing. ³⁹⁰ In the former event, payment by the principal debtor for the goods sold, or repayment of the money lent, brings the surety's liability to an end; in the latter event, the surety remains liable if further goods are supplied or money lent up to the limit of the guarantee. Whether the guarantee is continuing in any given case is a question of construction; no hard and fast rule can be laid down, and the construction of one document affords little or no guidance to the construction of another. ³⁹¹ Each case depends entirely on the language used, and the document must be looked at with reference to the circumstances under which it was given. ³⁹² A guarantee which was expressed to cover "further advances" has been held not to extend to the situation where, on the date for repayment, a fresh loan is arranged at an enhanced rate of interest, but no money actually passes. ³⁹³ On the other hand, a contract of guarantee may be construed as having been given in respect of obligations arising out of a contemplated course of dealing rather than under a specific contract; where this is the case:

"provided the course of dealing remains within the scope of that contemplated by the guarantee, the details of the manner of dealing as between principal and creditor are no concern of the guarantor; and any variations in them will not affect the continuing nature of his liability." ³⁹⁴

A typical example of this may be found in the "freestanding 'all moneys' guarantee" in respect of present and future indebtedness commonly given by directors to banks in respect of their company's liabilities. ³⁹⁵ Where the guarantee is a continuing one, in the absence of any express provision in the contract providing for termination of the guarantee by the giving of a prescribed period or form of notice, a guarantor is entitled at any time to revoke the guarantees in respect of the future liabilities, but the guarantor remains responsible for any sums incurred by the principal debtor which are the subject of the guarantee up to the time of revocation. ³⁹⁶ Even where the guarantee is a continuing one, a further question of construction may sometimes arise which may determine the running of time for the purpose of the Limitation Act 1980. This is discussed elsewhere. ³⁹⁷

Limited guarantee

45-078

Where a guarantee, whether continuing or for a particular transaction, is given subject to a limit on the amount for which the surety may be held liable, one important question of construction often causes difficulty. This is whether the surety has guaranteed the whole liability or debt, though his own liability is for the limited amount, or whether he has guaranteed only part of the liability or debt. The distinction is important principally where the debtor or the surety becomes bankrupt. If the surety has guaranteed only part of the debt, and he pays the creditor the amount for which he is liable, then, in the event of the debtor's bankruptcy, the creditor can only prove against the bankrupt's trustee for the balance of the debt, while the surety can prove against the bankrupt's trustee for the amount he has paid. ³⁹⁸ Similarly, where it is the surety himself who becomes bankrupt, the creditor can only prove against his trustee for the part of the debt which he has guaranteed. On the other hand, where the surety has guaranteed the whole debt, though subject to a limit on his liability, the position is different. In this event, the creditor can prove for the whole debt against the bankrupt debtor even though the surety has paid under his guarantee, and the surety has no right of proof of his own, at least until the creditor has recovered 100 pence in the pound. ³⁹⁹ Similarly, if the surety is bankrupt, and has guaranteed the whole debt, the creditor can prove against his trustee for the whole amount though he cannot of course recover more than 100 pence in the pound. ⁴⁰⁰ Even where no bankruptcy is involved, the distinction may sometimes be important, for it seems that the creditor can recover judgment against the debtor for the whole debt even though the surety has paid under his guarantee, unless the guarantee is for part of the debt alone, though if the creditor recovers more than the balance remaining unpaid, he must account for the surplus to the surety. ⁴⁰¹

45-079

The principle of construction which has been laid down for determining, in the absence of express agreement, whether the surety has undertaken to answer for the whole debt or only a part of it, is as follows. ⁴⁰² Where the surety has given a continuing guarantee, limited in amount, to secure the floating balance which may from time to time be due from the principal debtor to the creditor, the guarantee is prima facie to be construed as being of part only of the debt. This is because in such a case the creditor can increase the total debt without reference to the surety, and if the surety was to be understood as guaranteeing the whole debt his rights could be gravely prejudiced in the event of the debtor's bankruptcy. On the other hand, where the surety has given a guarantee limited in amount for a debt already ascertained which exceeds that limit, the guarantee is prima facie to be construed as a guarantee of the whole debt, though subject to the limit specified.

Variation between guarantee and transaction guaranteed

45-080

Where a surety guarantees performance of a transaction subsequently to be entered into between the principal debtor and the creditor, the surety will not be liable if the transaction as entered into is different in terms from that guaranteed, and this principle is very strictly applied. ⁴⁰³ For example, a guarantee of a loan to be repayable in instalments was held not enforceable when the loan agreement provided that the whole loan was to be repayable if default was made in the payment of one instalment. ⁴⁰⁴ So also where a surety guaranteed the floating balance on a current account up to a specified amount, she was held not liable when the bank simply credited the debtor with the whole amount guaranteed instead of advancing it as and when required. ⁴⁰⁵ And where the surety guaranteed repayment of a loan to be repayable in three months' time, and the loan was made so as to be immediately repayable, the surety was not liable even though repayment was not in fact sought for over three months. ⁴⁰⁶ On the other hand, where a surety guaranteed a loan to be made by a bank, and in fact the loan was provided through a subsidiary of the bank with the knowledge of all parties concerned, the guarantee was held enforceable at the suit of the bank. ⁴⁰⁷

Conditions precedent to liability of surety

45-081

Prima facie the surety may be proceeded against without demand against him, and without first proceeding against the principal debtor. ⁴⁰⁸ But the contract may, of course, lay down conditions precedent to the surety's liability. It may, for instance, provide that the creditor is first to take proceedings (civil ⁴⁰⁹ or criminal ⁴¹⁰) against the debtor; it may provide that the surety is to be liable only where the debtor repudiates his obligations and the repudiation has been accepted by the creditor ⁴¹¹; or that the surety is to be liable only after previous demand against him, ⁴¹² or after notice of the debtor's default has been given. ⁴¹³

Estoppel by convention

45-082

Estoppel by convention may arise where the parties to a transaction have acted on the agreed assumption that a state of facts can, for the purpose of that transaction, be regarded as true, and where this is the case, the parties are precluded from denying the truth of those assumed facts if it would be unjust to allow them or only one of them to do so. ⁴¹⁴ Estoppel by convention may apply in the context of the enforcement of contracts of guarantee. ⁴¹⁵ For example, in Bank of Scotland v Wright, ⁴¹⁶ the defendant guarantor argued that his liability did not extend to the liability of one of the two companies of which he was a director. While Brooke J. rejected this argument as a matter of construction, he considered the question whether in any event the defendant was estopped by convention from asserting that the guarantee did not extend to the liability of the second company. However, in this respect he held that one of the conditions for the application of the doctrine was not present as he was not satisfied that the defendant had behaved in any way towards the creditor which would make it unconscionable for him to deny that his guarantee covered the liability in question or to rely on the Statute of Frauds. ⁴¹⁷ For, according to Brooke J., while estoppel by convention may apply to the enforcement of a guarantee, for the court to allow it to do so in order to extend the guarantor's liability beyond that to which it applies as a matter of construction, "would deprive the Statute of Frauds of much of its effectiveness". ⁴¹⁸

-
- ^{302.} See Vol.I, paras 13-041 et seq. on the modern approach of the courts to construction of contracts generally.
 - ^{303.} See Eshelby v Federated European Bank Ltd [1932] 1 K.B. 254, 266.
 - ^{304.} Blest v Brown (1862) 4 De G.F. & J. 367, 376.
 - ^{305.} Trafalgar House Construction (Regions) Ltd v General Surety & Guarantee Co Ltd [1996] 1 A.C. 199, 208.
 - ^{306.} Eastern Counties Building Society v Russell [1947] 1 All E.R. 500, 503; affirmed [1947] 2 All E.R. 734; West Horndon Industrial Park Ltd v Phoenix Timber Group Plc [1995] 1 E.G.L.R. 77.
 - ^{307.} See, e.g. Harvell v Foster [1954] 2 Q.B. 367. And see below, para.45-068.
 - ^{308.} Heffield v Meadows (1869) L.R. 4 C.P. 595; Leathley v Spyer (1870) L.R. 5 C.P. 595; Nottingham, etc. Hide Co Ltd v Bottrill (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 694; Bank of Scotland v Wright [1990] B.C.C. 663, 675; Grovewood (LE) v Lundy Properties (1995) 69 P. & C.R. 507.
 - ^{309.} Associated Dairies Ltd v Pierce (1982) 265 E.G. 127; Capital and City Holdings Ltd v Dean Warburg Ltd (1989) 58 P. & C.R. 346 CA.
 - ^{310.} A Plessner & Co Ltd v Davis (1983) 267 E.G. 1039.
 - ^{311.} Kova Establishment v Sasco Investments [1998] 2 B.C.L.C. 83, 88, per John Martin Q.C.
 - ^{312.} Kova Establishment v Sasco Investments [1998] 2 B.C.L.C. 83, 89.
 - ^{313.} Liberty Mutual Insurance Co (UK) Ltd v HSBC Bank Plc [2002] EWCA Civ 691 at [54], per Rix L.J. The modern approach can be seen very clearly in the speech of Lord Wilberforce in Prenn v Simmonds [1971] 1 W.L.R. 1381 at 1385 but is now particularly associated with the "principles of construction" set out by Lord Hoffmann in The Investors Compensation Scheme Ltd v West Bromwich Building Society [1998] 1 W.L.R. 896, especially 912-913, per Lord Hoffmann. See also Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA v Ali [2001] UKHL 8, [2002] 1 A.C. 251 at [9]-[11]; Chartbrook Ltd Persimmon Homes Ltd [2009] UKHL 38, [2009] 1 A.C. 1101 and Vol.I, paras 13-041 et seq.
 - ^{314.} The Investors Compensation Scheme Ltd v West Bromwich Building Society [1998] 1 W.L.R. 896 at 913; Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v Ayres [2008] EWCA Civ 52, [2008] L. & T. R. 30 at [22] and see below, para.45-068.
 - ^{315.} Liberty Mutual Insurance Co (UK) Ltd v HSBC Bank Plc [2002] EWCA Civ 691 at [19]; Static Control Components (Europe) Ltd v Egan [2004] EWCA Civ 392, [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 429

- especially at [13] and [15]; Dumford Trading AG v OAO Atlantrybflot [2005] EWCA Civ 24, [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 289 at [34]; Fairstate Ltd v General Enterprise & Management Ltd [2010] EWHC 3072 (QB), [2011] 2 All E.R. 497 (Comm) at [75]; Cattles Plc v Welcome Financial Services Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 599, [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 514 at [34]-[35], [43]; National Merchant Buying Society Ltd v Bellamy [2013] EWCA Civ 452, [2013] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 674 at [40]; Harvey v Dunbar Assets Plc [2013] EWCA Civ 952, [2013] B.P.I.R. 722 at [28]-[30].
316. [2011] UKSC 50, [2011] 1 W.L.R. 2900 and see above, para.45-009.
317. Gastronome (UK) Ltd v Anglo Dutch Meats (UK) Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 1233, [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 587 at [14], [18]-[19]; cf. Amalgamated Investment & Property Co Ltd (In Liquidation) v Texas Commerce International Bank Ltd [1982] Q.B. 84 (guarantee expressed on its terms to cover loan by bank held in the "factual matrix" of the contract also to cover loan by bank's subsidiary).
318. [2004] EWHC 1526 (QB), [2004] All E.R. (D) 194 (Mar).
319. [2004] EWHC 1526 (QB) at [74], per Christopher Moger Q.C. sitting as a deputy judge of the High Court; cf. Fairstate Ltd v General Enterprise & Management Ltd [2010] EWHC 3072 (QB), [2011] 2 All E.R. 497 (Comm) at [75] (number of corrections and additions prevented court from so construing it).
320. [2010] EWHC 3072 (QB), [2011] 2 All E.R. 497 (Comm).
321. [2010] EWHC 3072 (QB) at [76].
322. Above, paras 45-055—45-056 and see above, Vol.I, paras 3-057 et seq. especially at para. 3-060 for the relationship between the modern approach to construction and rectification.
323. [2010] EWHC 3072 (QB) at [82].
324. [2005] EWCA Civ 24, [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 289 (application for summary judgment under Pt 24 CPR).
325. On which see Vol.I, paras 3-057 et seq. and 13-077 respectively.
326. [2005] EWCA Civ 25, [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 289 at [36].
327. [2005] EWCA Civ 25, [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 289 at [36].
328. Static Control Components (Europe) Ltd v Egan [2004] EWCA Civ 392, [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 429 at [19], per Holman J.
329. [2002] EWCA Civ 691.
330. Trafalgar House Construction (Regions) Ltd v General Surety & Guarantee Co Ltd [1996] 1 A.C. 199, 208.
331. [2002] EWCA Civ 691 at [56], per Rix L.J., relying in particular on Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA v Ali [2001] UKHL 8, [2002] 1 A.C. 251 at [10] (Lord Bingham).
332. [2011] UKSC 50, [2011] 1 W.L.R. 2900.
333. [2010] EWCA Civ 1429, [2011] 1 W.L.R. 770 at [17].
334. [2009] UKHL 38, [2009] 1 A.C. 1101, [21]-[26].
335. [2011] UKSC 50 at [14], per the Lord Clarke of Stone-cum-Ebony J.S.C.
336. [2011] UKSC 50 at [15], per the Lord Clarke of Stone-cum-Ebony J.S.C.

- 337. cf. [2010] EWCA Civ 582 at [19] (Sir Simon Tuckey) and [35]-[44] (Patten L.J.).
- 338. [2011] UKSC 50 at [20].
- 339. [2011] UKSC 50 at [21].
- 340.  [2011] UKSC 50 at [23] quoting with approval Society of Lloyd's v Robinson [1999] 1 W.L.R. 756, 763, per Lord Steyn. See also (though not in the context of suretyship) Arnold v Britton [2015] UKSC 36, [2015] A.C. 1619 at [15]-[23], [66] and [76]-[77]; Wood v Capita Insurance Services Ltd [2017] UKSC 24, [2017] 2 W.L.R. 1095 at [8]-[15].
- 341. [2011] UKSC 50 at [21] at [41], per the Lord Clarke of Stone-cum-Ebony J.S.C. and see also at [45].
- 342. Pavilion Property Trustees Ltd v Permira Advisers LLP [2014] EWHC 145 (Ch), [2014] 1 P. & C.R. 21.
- 343. ss.5, 24 and 25. See above, para.45-016.
- 344. [2014] EWHC 145 (Ch), [2014] 1 P. & C.R. 21 at [19], per Morgan J.
- 345. [2014] EWHC 145 (Ch) at [20], referring to Lewison, The Interpretation of Contracts, 5th edn (2011), para.7.16. And see Vol.I, para.13-084.
- 346. [2014] EWHC 145 (Ch) at [20]. Morgan J. held, in the alternative, that if the guarantee were to be construed so as to extend to the obligations of the next assignee, he could sever “the good from the bad” so as to leave a guarantee extending only to the assignee: [2014] EWHC 145 (Ch) at [21]-[22].
- 347. [2014] EWCA Civ 1215, [2015] 1 P. & C.R.
- 348. [2014] EWCA Civ 1215 at [30], per Patten L.J. (with whom Ryder and Longmore L.JJ. agreed).
- 349. [2014] EWCA Civ 1215 at [31], per Patten L.J.
- 350. [2014] EWCA Civ 1215 at [33], [36] and [43].
- 351. Moschi v Lep Air Services Ltd [1973] A.C. 331. See Steyn (1974) 90 L.Q.R. 246.
- 352. See above, paras 45-007—45-008, 45-044.
- 353. See below, paras 45-085 et seq.
- 354. See also the significance of the “co-extensiveness principle” in the context of statutory demands under the Insolvency Act 1987 in Octagon Assets Ltd v Remblance [2009] EWCA Civ 581, [2010] Bus. L.R. 119; White v Davenham Trust Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 747, [2011] Bus. L.R. 1443, below, para.45-123.
- 355. Compañía Sudamericana De Fletes SA v African Continental Bank Ltd [1973] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 21.
- 356. Associated Dairies Ltd v Pierce (1982) 265 E.G. 127.
- 357. MP Services Ltd v Lawyer (1996) 72 P. & C.R. D49 at D50, per Millett L.J.
- 358. Hyundai Heavy Industries Co Ltd v Papadopoulos [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1129, see below, para.45-100.
- 359. [2011] EWCA Civ 230, [2012] Ch. 31.

- 360. [2011] EWCA Civ 230 at [46] citing British Linen Asset Finance Ltd v Ridgeway [1999] G.W.D. 2-78 (Sheriff Principal).
- 361. [2011] EWCA Civ 230 at [46], per Sir Andrew Morritt (with whom Smith L.J. agreed at [56]).
- 362. [2008] EWCA Civ 542, [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 187 at [31] and cf. above, para.45-009.
- 363. [2011] EWCA Civ 230 at [46], per Sir Andrew Morritt C.
- 364. [2011] EWCA Civ 230 at [50]-[53], [58]-[61] cf. [68] (Tomlinson L.J.). While a majority of the Court of Appeal in North Shore Ventures Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 230 considered that the error in the certificate need not be manifest at the time of certification, in ABM AMRO Commercial Finance Plc v McGinn [2014] EWHC 1674 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 333 at [51] Flaux J. held that these observations were obiter to the Court of Appeal's decision (which rested on the fact that there was a manifest error on the face of the certificate) and needed to be "viewed with some circumspection". In his view, the possibility of establishing manifest error later (notably, at "a full blown trial as to which debts might or might not have led to recovery") "would render the conclusive evidence clause nugatory": [2014] EWHC 1674 (Comm) at [52].
- 365. Re Kitchin (1881) 17 Ch. D. 668; Bruns v Colocotronis [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 412; Ards BC v Northern Bank Ltd [1994] N.I. 121 CA NI; Sabah Shipyard (Pakistan) Ltd v Pakistan [2007] EWHC 2602 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 210.
- 366. Above, para.45-001.
- 367. Insolvency Act 1986 s.267(2)(b).
- 368. [2011] EWCA Civ 1286, [2012] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 265; applied in Dunbar Assets Plc v Fowler [2013] B.P.I.R. 46, [2013] All E.R. (D) 02 (Jan).
- 369. [2011] EWCA Civ 1286 at [36], per Patten L.J. (with whom Moses and Ward L.JJ. agreed) and see at [39].
- 370. [2011] EWCA Civ 1286 at [42], per Patten L.J.
- 371. [2011] EWCA Civ 1286 at [42]-[43].
- 372. [2011] EWCA Civ 1286 at [58].
- 373. [2011] EWCA Civ 1286 at [61].
- 374. [2011] EWCA Civ 1286 at [67].
- 375. [2010] EWHC 2234 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 473.
- 376.  [2010] EWHC 2234 (Comm) at [29]. On the general common law governing penalty clauses see Main Work, Vol.I, paras 26-178 et seq.
- 377. [2010] EWHC 2234 (Comm) at [23] and [24], per Blair J.
- 378. [2010] EWHC 2234 (Comm) at [24] approving Citicorp Australia Ltd v Hendry (1985) 4 N.S.W.L.R. 1 at 21D (CA NSW).
- 379. In Harvey v Dunbar Assets Plc [2013] EWCA Civ 952, [2013] B.P.I.R. 722 at [21]-[22] the Court of Appeal quoted with approval the text of this paragraph up to n.385.
- 380. English law does not recognise any wider relief in equity based on a mere expectation on the part of a guarantor that a further guarantee will be executed by a third person: Capital Bank Cashflow Finance Ltd v Southall [2004] EWCA Civ 817, [2004] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 675 at [16], discussing Bleyer v NevilleJefferson Advertising Pty Ltd Unreported 1987 NSW.

- 381. ! Evans v Bremridge (1855) 25 L.J.Ch. 102, 334; but the position is otherwise if another person fails to execute a guarantee for a different liability for there would then be no right to contribution (see below, para.45-135) and the surety who has executed would not be prejudiced: Coope v Twynham (1823) 1 T. & R. 426. And if A (a bank) requires B (the director of C Co) to provide both real security and his own personal guarantee for a loan to C Co, but executes only the guarantee, A may enforce the guarantee against B as A may waive the condition designed to protect its position: Barclays Bank Plc v Sutton [2015] EWHC 3192 (QB) at [21] and [26].
- 382. [1938] A.C. 156.
- 383. Byblos Bank SAL v Al-Khudhairy [1987] B.C.L.C. 232; Gray v TCB Ltd [1988] F.L.R. 116. cf. Barclays Bank Plc v Quincecare (1988) reported [1992] 4 All E.R. 363.
- 384. James Graham & Co (Timber) Ltd v Southgate Sands [1985] 2 All E.R. 344; Harvey v Dunbar Assets Plc [2013] EWCA Civ 952, [2013] B.P.I.R. 722 at [23], [25]-[26], [32]-[33], [44] where the Court of Appeal emphasised that the prima facie position described in the text to which this note refers may be displaced as a matter of construction of the contract (though it was not so displaced in the terms of the contract before it).
- 385. Capital Bank Cashflow Finance Ltd v Southall [2004] EWCA Civ 817, [2004] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 675 at [17].
- 386. (1982) 44 A.L.R. 241.
- 387. Montefiore v Lloyd (1863) 15 C.B.(N.S.) 203.
- 388. Leathley v Spyer (1870) L.R. 5 C.P. 595.
- 389. First National Finance Corp Ltd v Goodman (1983) Com. L.R. 184.
- 390. Silverburn Finance (UK) Ltd v Salt [2001] EWCA Civ 279, [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 438.
- 391. Coles v Pack (1869) L.R. 5 C.P. 65, 70.
- 392. Nottingham Hide Co v Bottrill (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 694.
- 393. Burnes v Trade Credits Ltd [1981] 1 W.L.R. 805.
- 394. National Merchant Buying Society Ltd v Bellamy [2013] EWCA Civ 452, [2013] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 674 at [33], per Rimer L.J. (with whom Kitchin and Longmore L.JJ. agreed).
- 395. [2013] EWCA Civ 452 at [33].
- 396. Silverburn Finance (UK) Ltd v Salt [2001] EWCA Civ 279, [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 438 at [28].
- 397. Vol.I, paras 28-046—28-048.
- 398. Re Sass [1896] 2 Q.B. 12.
- 399. Re Sass [1896] 2 Q.B. 12.
- 400. Re Houlder [1929] 1 Ch. 205; see also Commercial Bank of Australia Ltd v Official Assignee [1893] A.C. 181. Similarly, if one co-surety pays part of what is due, the creditor can prove against another for the whole debt where it is the whole debt which has been guaranteed; but payment by the debtor of part of the debt before proof discharges the debt pro tanto and the creditor can then only prove against a surety for the balance in any event.

- 401. Ulster Bank Ltd v Lambe [1966] N.I. 161.
- 402. Ellis v Emmanuel (1876) 1 Ex. D. 157.
- 403. Cases of this nature are often treated on the same principle as cases in which there is a subsequent variation of the contract between the creditor and the principal debtor (as to which see below, paras 45-104—45-114) but although the questions are clearly analogous, the cases here discussed concern the question whether the surety is ever bound at all, not whether the surety is discharged.
- 404. Clarke v Green (1849) 3 Exch. 619; and see Pickles v Thornton (1876) 33 L.T. 658.
- 405. Archer v Hudson (1844) 7 Beav. 551.
- 406. Bonser v Cox (1844) 6 Beav. 110, 117.
- 407. Amalgamated Investment & Pty Co Ltd v Texas Commerce International Bank Ltd [1982] Q.B. 84.
- 408. Moschi v Lep Air Services Ltd [1973] A.C. 331, 348; and see DFC Financial Services Ltd v Coffey [1991] B.C.C. 218; cf. Esso Petroleum Co Ltd v Alstonbridge Properties Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1474, 1483.
- 409. Holl v Hadley (1835) 2 A. & E. 758; Lawrence v Walmsley (1862) 12 C.B.(N.S.) 799.
- 410. cf. London Guarantee Co v Fearnley (1880) 5 App. Cas. 911 (prosecution of employee required expressly by contract of insurance against employee's dishonesty).
- 411. Reliance Car Facilities Ltd v Roding Motors [1952] 2 Q.B. 844.
- 412. Re Brown's Estate [1893] 2 Ch. 300; Bradford Old Bank Ltd v Sutcliffe [1918] 2 K.B. 833; Bank of Adelaide v Lorden (1970) 127 C.L.R. 185; General Surety & Guarantee Co Ltd v Francis Parker Ltd (1977) 6 Build. L.R. 18; Duchess Theatre Co v Lord [1993] N.P.C. 163; Hampton v Minns [2002] 1 W.L.R. 1. Where the surety's obligation is primary rather than secondary (as with a true guarantee), a requirement of payment on demand will not import a contingency, so that the cause of action accrues when the debt falls due rather than only on demand, but this does not apply where payment is promised within a period after demand: Re Brown's Estate [1893] 2 Ch. 300; M & S Fashions Ltd v Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA [1993] Ch. 425, 435–436, 447; Levin v Tannenbaum [2013] EWHC 4457 (Ch) at [25]–[37].
- 413. cf. United Dominions Trust (Commercial) Ltd v Eagle Aircraft Services Ltd [1968] 1 W.L.R. 74. See also Bache & Co (London) Ltd v Banque Vernes et Commerciales de Paris [1973] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 437 (notice of default conclusive evidence of guarantor's liability).
- 414. See generally, Vol.I, paras 4-108—4-115.
- 415. Amalgamated Investment & Property Co Ltd v Texas Commerce International Bank Ltd [1982] Q.B. 84; Bank of Scotland v Wright [1990] B.C.C. 663; Actionstrength Ltd v International Glass Engineering INGLEN SpA [2003] UKHL 17, [2003] 2 A.C. 541 and see above, para.45-060.
- 416. Bank of Scotland v Wright [1990] B.C.C. 663. See similarly Ing Lease (UK) Ltd v Harwood [2008] EWCA Civ 786, [2009] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 1055 where such a common understanding was held not established on the facts.
- 417. [1990] B.C.C. 663 at 679 and 681.
- 418. [1990] B.C.C. 663 at 680. And see similarly Actionstrength Ltd v International Glass Engineering INGLEN SpA [2003] UKHL 17, [2003] 2 A.C. 541 on estoppel and the Statute of Frauds more generally, see above, para.45-060.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 45 - Suretyship

Section 5. - Discharge of Debtor

General

45-083

No special rules apply to the discharge of a debtor whose debt is guaranteed where this results either from payment of the debt or release by deed. As to the effect of part payment of the debt by the debtor or an agreement to accept part payment of a debt, reference should be made to the relevant passages of Vol.I. ⁴¹⁹

Discharge of debtor by payment by surety

45-084

Where a surety enters the contract at the request of the principal debtor, it is clear that payment of the debt by the surety discharges that debt as between the creditor and principal debtor. ⁴²⁰ Indeed, “[a] creditor cannot sue the principal debtor for an amount of the debt which the creditor has already received from a guarantor”. ⁴²¹ In Milverton Group Ltd v Warner World Ltd, ⁴²² the Court of Appeal held that part payment of a debt by a surety would discharge the principal debtor by the amount of the payment. That case concerned the liabilities of an original tenant under a lease whose assignees’ sureties had paid monies to the landlord’s assignee in consideration of their release by deed. The landlord’s assignee argued that these payments did not affect the original tenant’s liability to pay rent under the lease: but the Court of Appeal rejected this argument. According to Hoffmann L.J.:

“... for the purpose of deciding whether money owed by more than one person has been paid, I do not think that it is possible for the creditor and one of the debtors to characterise a payment in return for a release as anything other than a part performance of the obligation. If this were possible, a creditor could pick off his debtors one by one and recover in total more than the whole debt. For the payment to count as part discharge of the common obligation, it is sufficient for the payment to be referable to the guarantee.” ⁴²³

^{419.} See paras 4-117 et seq.

^{420.} More controversial is the question whether payment of the debt by an unrequested surety discharges the debt as between the creditor and principal debtor, this question being linked to the question of recovery of an indemnity by that surety against the principal debtor: see Birks and Beatson (1976) 92 L.Q.R. 188; Friedmann (1983) 99 L.Q.R. 534; Burrows, The Law of Restitution, 3rd edn (2010), pp.460–468. On the question of restitutionary recovery, see below, para.45-126.

^{421.} M & S Fashions Ltd v Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA (In Liquidation) [1993] 3

W.L.R. 220, 239, per Dillon L.J.

422. [1995] 2 E.G.L.R. 28.

423. [1995] 2 E.G.L.R. 28 at 31.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 45 - Suretyship
Section 6. - Discharge of Surety
(a) - Discharge of Surety by Payment or Set-off

General

45-085

Clearly, payment by a surety of amounts owed under the guarantee discharges the surety either wholly or pro tanto. More difficult, however, is the question whether on the insolvency of the creditor a surety may set-off sums owed to it by the creditor against its liability on the guarantee. Where the creditor's claim against the surety has already accrued at the date of the insolvency, then the surety is entitled to set-off against it any claim against the insolvent's estate. ⁴²⁴ Moreover, where a guarantee is expressed so that the liability of the surety is immediate as opposed, for example, to being contingent on a demand by the creditor, then the surety may also set-off its own claim against the creditor ⁴²⁵ and it would appear that this rule also applies to a case where the contingency accrues due after the date of the commencement of the insolvency but in the course of the insolvency. ⁴²⁶ However, where a surety's liability remains contingent, no such set-off can be relied on by the surety against an insolvent creditor as there is no method for valuing the contingency, in contrast to the position as regards contingent debts owed by the insolvent creditor. ⁴²⁷ In this case of a contingent liability in the surety, therefore, any crossclaim by the surety could not be relied on by the debtor as discharging its liability to the insolvent creditor.

^{424.} Insolvency Act 1986 s.323 (individuals); Insolvency Rules 1986 (SI 1986/1925) r.90 (companies). See Stein v Blake [1996] 1 A.C. 243; Re Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA (No.8) [1998] A.C. 214.

^{425.} M & S Fashions Ltd v Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA [1993] Ch. 425. cf. Re Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA (No.8) [1998] A.C. 214 at 224–225 (referring to the contract in M & S Fashions as “a very unusual document”).

^{426.} Andrews and Millett, Law of Guarantees, 6th edn (2012), pp.567–568.

^{427.} Andrews and Millett, Law of Guarantees, p.567.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 45 - Suretyship

Section 6. - Discharge of Surety

(b) - Discharge of Surety through Discharge of Principal Debtor

Discharge of principal debtor by performance

45-086

If the contract is one of guarantee, then performance by the principal debtor which discharges him will necessarily also discharge the guarantor. So, for instance, where the surety guaranteed the due performance by the debtor of his obligations under a hirepurchase agreement, and the hirer terminated the agreement in accordance with its terms and paid the full amounts due under the agreement, the surety was held to be discharged, even though the hire-purchase company did not receive the full amounts it might have expected to receive had the agreement run its full course. ⁴²⁸ So also, partial performance by the debtor (e.g. part payment of the debt guaranteed) will discharge the surety pro tanto. ⁴²⁹ On the other hand, if the contract on its true construction is a contract of indemnity under which the surety assumes a greater liability than the principal debtor, ⁴³⁰ he will not necessarily be discharged merely because the debtor is discharged. So in another hire-purchase case where the surety agreed to indemnify the hire-purchase company against any loss which it might suffer from premature termination of the agreement, it was held that the surety was liable despite the discharge of the hirer. ⁴³¹

Set-off by principal debtor to be enjoyed by surety

45-087

The general rule is that on being sued by the creditor for payment of the debt guaranteed, a surety may avail himself of any right to set-off or counterclaim which the principal debtor possesses against the creditor. ⁴³² However, parties to a contract of suretyship may contract out of this general rule either expressly or impliedly, the contract requiring to be interpreted in its factual matrix. ⁴³³ A number of factors have been discerned by the courts in determining whether the parties have intended that the surety should be liable to the creditor "whatever the state of play" between the creditor and the principal debtor:

"... the inclusion in the guarantees of a conditional agreement to pay; the accruing of the guarantors' liability to pay at a time when the principal debtors did not yet have any arguable right of set-off (because the default preceded the termination of the [principal] contracts); the guarantors' obligation to pay 'forthwith'; and the overall context (factual matrix) of the contractual arrangements." ⁴³⁴

Rules of appropriation not affected

45-088

Difficulty sometimes arises in deciding whether a performance by the debtor discharges him in respect of the guaranteed liability or in respect of a separate obligation which is not subject to the guarantee. If, for example, the debtor owes two distinct debts to the creditor, only one of which is guaranteed by the surety, and the debtor pays part of the money to the creditor, the question may arise as to which debt is discharged. In these circumstances the general rule is that the contract of suretyship does not affect the normal rights which the debtor and the creditor have of appropriating the payment to a particular debt. ⁴³⁵ Thus if the debtor pays without making any appropriation the creditor is entitled to appropriate the money to the debt which is not guaranteed. ⁴³⁶ Where, however, the surety guarantees a running account the rule in Clayton's case ⁴³⁷ normally applies so that payments in must normally be treated as discharging the earliest debts. ⁴³⁸ But where a surety guaranteed a running account with a bank and the account was closed, and a new one opened which was not guaranteed, it was held that the bank was entitled to appropriate payments to the new account as the debtor had not appropriated them to the current account. ⁴³⁹

Discharge other than by performance

45-089

If the debtor is discharged not so much because the agreement is fully performed, but rather because, in point of law, he is not liable to the creditor under his agreement in the events which have happened, as, e.g. where a bailee is discharged because the goods are stolen from him without any negligence on his part, a guarantor will also be discharged. ⁴⁴⁰ Here again, there could, of course, be a liability on the part of the surety if he were made answerable for loss of the goods by any means, and not merely for default by the bailee in his obligations, i.e. if the contract were an indemnity and not a guarantee.

Discharge of debtor must be effective

45-090

In order to discharge a surety, payment by the debtor must be an effective discharge for him. So where, after making such a payment, the debtor became bankrupt and the payment was avoided as a fraudulent preference, the surety was not discharged. ⁴⁴¹ Hence, where it is sought to challenge a payment as a fraudulent preference, a surety for that payment should be joined as a party. ⁴⁴²

Discharge of debtor by agreement with creditor

45-091

The traditional approach to the question whether an agreement by a creditor not to enforce his right against his debtor has the effect of discharging a surety has been to distinguish between cases of a binding release of the debtor and cases in which the creditor merely agrees not to sue the debtor.

Release of debtor

45-092

According to this traditional approach, the release of the principal debtor discharges the surety, ⁴⁴³ a rule which reflects the more general effect of release of one of two or more joint (or joint and several) debtors on his co-debtors. ⁴⁴⁴ There are two reasons which may be advanced to support the argument that this general approach should be applied to the suretyship context. First, there is a logical argument, linked to the co-extensiveness principle ⁴⁴⁵: for if the principal debtor is discharged, then so should the surety whose liability is secondary to the principal debtor. Secondly, it may be argued that any other rule would lead to one or other of two strange results, having regard to the surety's normal right to an indemnity from the debtor. ⁴⁴⁶ If the surety were compelled to meet the liability, any attempt by him to sue the debtor for an indemnity might be met by the defence that the debt had gone and that the debtor was no longer liable. But if this were a defence, the surety would be deprived by the act of the creditor of a right which he would have expected to have.⁴⁴⁷ On the other hand, if the debtor remained liable to indemnify the surety despite his own discharge, the effect would be to render the discharge largely nugatory.⁴⁴⁸ Sometimes this is put another way, so that it is said that to release the principal debtor without releasing the surety would deprive the latter of his right to pay off the creditor and sue the principal in the creditor's name by way of subrogation.⁴⁴⁹ However, there are three qualifications to this general rule of discharge of the surety on release of the principal debtor. First, it does not apply where the original contract of suretyship itself provides for the preservation of the surety's liability⁴⁵⁰; secondly, where there is a reservation of the creditor's rights against the surety at the time of discharging the debtor⁴⁵¹ and, thirdly, where the surety agrees to the continuation of his liability with the creditor before the release of the debtor by the creditor.⁴⁵² In at least some of these circumstances, some of the arguments in favour of discharge of the surety no longer hold good. As to the "logical argument", it may be countered that where a contract of suretyship contains a clause preserving the surety's liability on release of the debtor, it may no longer count as an "ordinary contract of suretyship", but it may nonetheless take effect on its terms.⁴⁵³ Where the agreement of release provides for the preservation of the surety's liabilities, then the principal debtor is on notice of the possible and eventual recourse of the surety against him.⁴⁵⁴ As to the preservation of the surety's liability in the contract of suretyship, this can be supported simply on the basis of the need to preserve the binding force of contracts.⁴⁵⁵

Agreement not to sue

45-093

By contrast, the effect of a mere agreement by a creditor not to sue the debtor as regards discharge of the surety (in the absence of any reservation of rights by the creditor) is less clear. For while the established rule as regards the case of an agreement not to sue an ordinary joint (or joint and several debtor) is that it does not discharge the other debtors,⁴⁵⁶ in view of the well-settled rule that a binding agreement to give time to the debtor will discharge a surety, it may be thought anomalous if an agreement not to sue at all were not to have the same effect.⁴⁵⁷ What is clear, though, is that where an agreement not to sue a principal debtor provides that the surety's liability will be preserved, then the surety will not be discharged.⁴⁵⁸ Indeed, for some courts, the presence of such a provision is inconsistent with the interpretation of the contract as one of release⁴⁵⁹ and has therefore encouraged them to interpret the words of release as a promise not to sue.⁴⁶⁰

Release with implied reservation

45-094

However, the force of this traditional distinction between agreements to release and agreements not to sue a debtor has itself been challenged by the Court of Appeal in two more recent decisions and while these cases both concerned the position of co-debtors, the approach of the judges in them may apply also to the context of suretyship. In Watts v Aldington, Tolstoy v Aldington A had gained judgment for £1.5 million plus costs against W and T in respect of libels made against him.⁴⁶¹ T was adjudicated bankrupt on his own application, whereas W was adjudicated bankrupt on A's petition. Subsequently, A agreed with W (with whom he had four outstanding proceedings) to accept £10,000 from W's family "in full and final settlement of judgment and orders and any liability however arising" (cl.6) and in return for not opposing W's appeal from his bankruptcy order. W also made various undertakings not to repeat the libels made about A. A and W's contract further stipulated (by cl.9) that breach of any term by W would give rise to a right in A "to treat the contract as at an end and to proceed for the full entirety under those judgments as though the agreement had never been entered into". The question arose whether this contract discharged T from his liabilities to A under the judgment debt. At first instance, Morritt J. construed A's promise under the contract as one not to sue W rather than one to release him, principally on the basis that, as cl.9 made clear, its terms were conditional on performance by W of his side of the bargain: this meant that T was not discharged by A's agreement with W. While the Court of Appeal ultimately affirmed this result, all its members (Neill, Steyn and Simon Brown L.J.J.) disapproved the approach taken by Morritt J., even though they saw that it enjoyed support in the authorities. For Simon Brown L.J., the difficulty of applying to the contract before the court the distinction between agreements to release and not to sue illustrated "the technicality and intrinsic artificiality of the conventional approach to this rule”⁴⁶² as to discharge of co-debtors. In the leading judgment, Neill L.J. described how historically the purpose of this distinction was to carve out an exception to the established rule that release of one joint tortfeasor released them all,⁴⁶³ which was founded on the unity of the cause of action against them, but he noted how this rule, while still formally valid, had itself been much qualified.⁴⁶⁴ Given these changes, Neill L.J. considered that “it will often be more satisfactory to consider whether the relevant document is an absolute release or a release with a reservation rather than to consider whether the document can be fitted into the strait jacket of a covenant or agreement not to sue”.⁴⁶⁵ Moreover, for the Court of Appeal, this question should be resolved by construing the contract as a whole in its factual matrix and implying any terms in it which were necessary.⁴⁶⁶ According to Neill L.J.:

“In the cases there is much emphasis on an express reservation of rights. But there is apparently no authority holding that an implied reservation is insufficient. That is not surprising because a rule that an implied term, complying with the stringent tests applicable to the implication of terms, cannot render the same service as an express term in this corner of the law would be a curiosity.”⁴⁶⁷

On the facts before it, the Court of Appeal held that there was clearly an implied reservation by A of his rights against T.

45-095

In *Johnson v Davies*⁴⁶⁸ a differently constituted Court of Appeal⁴⁶⁹ adopted the approach taken in Watts v Aldington, *Tolstoy v Aldington*⁴⁷⁰ and extended it so as to apply to a joint (but not joint and several) debt.⁴⁷¹ In Johnson v Davies the plaintiffs were sureties for the debts of a company, the majority of whose shares they owned and which was a tenant under a lease. Under a contract of sale of its shares to the defendants and one Hopkins (“H”), the purchasers agreed, inter alia, to indemnify the plaintiffs against claims brought under the lease. Subsequently, H entered an individual voluntary arrangement with his creditors under Pt VIII of the Insolvency Act 1986, under which he was to pay to the supervisor 75 per cent of his net income for five years and any “windfall” assets he may receive within that period. The arrangement further provided that when all moneys to be made available had been distributed to the creditors, he would be released. The plaintiffs were given notice of the creditors’ meeting (as required by statute) and were therefore deemed parties to the arrangement following the provisions of the 1986 Act. Later, they were required to pay as sureties for the company under its lease and so claimed to be indemnified for these sums by the defendants, but the defendants countered that they had been released from their obligations under the sale by the release of their co-debtor, H, by the voluntary arrangement. On the facts, the court found that the contract did not on its express or implied terms intend to discharge all the co-debtors on the (conditional) release of one of their number under a “voluntary arrangement”.⁴⁷² Indeed, while it was necessary to imply a term in the contract that the creditors bound by the proposals would take no steps to enforce their debts against the debtor while the debtor complied with his obligations under it, it was not necessary, even if it would be a “convenient and tidy result” that the creditors should take no steps to enforce their debts against any co-debtors.⁴⁷³ The Court of Appeal has held that the burden of proof as to implied reservation of rights by creditor against co-debtor is on the creditor.⁴⁷⁴

Application to surety

45-096

Johnson v Davies concerned the case of an agreement by a creditor and one of several jointly liable persons: it is to be noted that while H and the defendants in that case were liable under a contract of indemnity, this was not a contract of indemnity in the sense of a contract which, while imposing a primary liability on a debtor vis-à-vis the creditor, created a relationship of suretyship with some other person.⁴⁷⁵ Johnson v Davies is not, therefore, direct authority for the proposition that the question whether an agreement between a creditor and a principal debtor as to the latter’s future obligations (whether put in terms of “release” or “agreement to sue”) will operate to discharge a surety, whether the suretyship is a contract of guarantee or one of indemnity. However, it is submitted that the same approach as was taken by the Court of Appeal in that case should be extended to these particular examples of joint obligation, with the result that the question of discharge of the surety would be determined as a matter of the construction of the agreement between the creditor and principal debtor and that, following ordinary principles, this should take into account any implied as well as any express terms. This approach was approved by Richards J. in Finley v Connell Associates (Application to Strike Out) in the context of considering the effect on a surety of an agreement between the creditor and principal debtor which was expressed as an agreement not to sue the principal debtor.⁴⁷⁶ The learned judge noted that the traditional distinction between releases and covenants not to sue had been criticised by the Court of Appeal in the context of joint debtors in Watts v Aldington,⁴⁷⁷ in particular on the basis that the traditional approach emphasised the significance of an express reservation of rights in order to retain the liability of a joint debtor, whereas such a reservation may, in accordance with the general legal position, be implied. Richards J. observed:

“The authorities on sureties often refer in general terms to the distinction between an agreement whereby the creditor releases the debtor (which also discharges the surety) and an agreement whereby the creditor covenants not to sue the debtor (which does not discharge the surety). But it does appear that ... the existence of a reservation of rights against the surety is an essential ingredient in the categorisation of an agreement not to sue. The mere use of the language of a covenant not to sue is not decisive.”⁴⁷⁸

In his view, moreover, there is no reason why a reservation of rights against a surety should not be implied as well as express: “the reasoning in [Watts v Aldington is] compelling and [it is] right to follow it even if it is not strictly binding in relation to the effect of an agreement on sureties”.⁴⁷⁹

45-097

If this approach were more generally followed, then, as under the traditional approach, effect would be given to an express reservation of rights against the surety by the creditor, but the absence of such a reservation would not be taken necessarily to imply an intention that the surety should be discharged: a court could hold a principal debtor released, but the surety's liability and right of indemnity against the principal debtor would be preserved. For in answer to the concern that such a construction of the contract would impose a liability on the principal debtor after his release, it may be countered that it would substitute a possible claim by the surety for a claim by the creditor. While this is an unlikely construction in the context of suretyship, it is by no means impossible: to adapt Chadwick L.J.'s words in Johnson v Davies, to give a principal debtor a complete protection against all claimants may be a “convenient and tidy result” but may not be a necessary implication of the agreement between the creditor and principal.⁴⁸⁰ A possible remaining difficulty with such an approach might be seen to lie in the disharmony created with the rule according to which an agreement to give time to the principal debtor discharges the surety, but this disharmony is only apparent for the latter rule does not apply where the creditor reserves his rights against the surety by notifying the debtor when time is given to him.⁴⁸¹

Discharge of debtor by bankruptcy

45-098

⚠ It is expressly provided by s.281(7) of the Insolvency Act 1986, which substantially re-enacted the earlier law,⁴⁸² that: “[d]ischarge does not release any person ... from any liability as surety for the bankrupt or as a person in the nature of such a surety”. But a surety who guarantees the payment of interest on a principal sum so long as it remains due, is not liable to the creditor in respect of interest which would have accrued if the debtor had not become bankrupt and been discharged,⁴⁸³ as the principal is no longer due.⁴⁸⁴ The question of the effect on a co-debtor of a “voluntary arrangement” made between a debtor and his creditors under Pt VIII of the Insolvency Act 1986 was considered by the Court of Appeal in Johnson v Davies.⁴⁸⁵ There, as has been seen,⁴⁸⁶ creditors had entered an “individual voluntary arrangement” under Pt VIII of the Insolvency Act 1986 with H, one of their joint debtors, under which he was to pay to the supervisor 75 per cent of his net income for five years and any “windfall” assets he may receive within that period and according to which when all moneys to be made available had been distributed to the creditors, he would be released. The creditors were given notice of the creditors' meeting (as required by statute) and were therefore deemed parties to the arrangement following the provisions of the 1986 Act. Later, when the creditors made claims against the joint debtors other than H, those joint debtors countered that they had been released from their obligations by the release of H, their co-debtor, by the voluntary arrangement. The Court of Appeal was able to dispose of this argument and hold for the creditors on the ground that the agreement before them did not on its terms intend to discharge the co-debtors,⁴⁸⁷ but Chadwick L.J. (with whom Ward and Kennedy L.J.J. agreed) went on to consider whether, as had been argued, a debtor's voluntary arrangement with his creditors under the 1986 Act necessarily discharges his co-debtors.⁴⁸⁸ In this respect, he noted that s.260(2)(b) of the Insolvency Act 1986 provides that such voluntary arrangements "bind every person who in accordance with the rules had notice of, and was entitled to vote at, the meeting ... as if he were a party to the arrangement", but that, unlike the Bankruptcy Act

1914, the 1986 Act makes no express provision for the effect of these arrangements on sureties.⁴⁸⁹

❗ In Chadwick L.J.'s view, the legislature's failure to adopt the earlier statutory precedents gave rise to a strong inference of its deliberate decision that voluntary arrangements should take effect in the same way as did consensual deeds.⁴⁹⁰ Finally, the 1986 Act's provision that a voluntary arrangement "binds every person ... as if he were a party" to it requires the creditor to be treated as if he had consented to the arrangement and so a voluntary arrangement made under the Act does not discharge a co-debtor or surety unless it is to be so construed on its terms, express or implied.⁴⁹¹ This consensual nature of individual voluntary arrangements suggests that the rule according to which they discharge the surety attracts the same qualifications as apply to voluntary deeds of release and this has been held to be the case as regards the position where a individual voluntary arrangement is agreed on the basis that a creditor reserves his rights against the surety.⁴⁹² Moreover, such a reservation may be made clear to the principal debtor in all the circumstances, including the dealings of the parties before the arrangement is made, and need not be included as a term of the arrangement itself.⁴⁹³

Discharge of debtor through creditor's breach of contract

45-099

❗ Where a person guarantees payment of a sum due from the debtor under an entire contract and the creditor cannot sue the debtor because there has been no complete performance,⁴⁹⁴ the surety is also not liable.⁴⁹⁵ Similarly, if the creditor is guilty of a breach of contract as against the debtor, and as a result the debtor is discharged, a guarantor cannot be liable any more than the debtor.⁴⁹⁶ While, therefore, a repudiatory breach of contract by the creditor once accepted by the debtor discharges both the latter and the guarantor, a non-repudiatory breach will not discharge the guarantor, unless it involves a "not unsubstantial" departure from a term of the principal contract which has been itself

"embodied" into the guarantee.⁴⁹⁷ ❗ If such a departure is established, then discharge occurs on the ground of variation of the surety's obligations.⁴⁹⁸ ❗ If there is a breach of contract by the creditor which does not discharge the debtor but gives him a right to counterclaim for damages, the surety may be able to avail himself of this right by way of set-off, but he can normally only do this if the principal debtor is joined as a party to the proceedings.⁴⁹⁹ Similarly, if the debtor has some other valid defence to a claim by the creditor, for example, that the creditor has already elected to exercise a remedy inconsistent with a claim for damages⁵⁰⁰ or that the sum claimed is a penalty,⁵⁰¹ or that the creditor has failed to mitigate the damage resulting from the debtor's breach of contract,⁵⁰² a guarantor can take advantage of the defence available to the debtor. But in all these cases the position is different where the contract is one of indemnity and not guarantee. If, on the true construction of the contract, the surety has undertaken to pay a given sum on a given event, then he is liable to pay it on that event, and it is immaterial that the principal debtor could not be sued for it by the creditor.⁵⁰³ ❗

Discharge of debtor through debtor's breach of contract

45-100

Where the debtor himself is guilty of a breach of contract in consequence of which the creditor elects to treat the contract as discharged, the possibility of the surety being discharged gives rise to considerable difficulty. It must first be seen whether the surety has guaranteed complete performance of the contract by the principal debtor. Prima facie the surety is treated as guaranteeing that the debtor will perform his contract; consequently, if the debtor is in breach so that the creditor exercises his rights to cancel the whole contract the debtor's liability is transmuted into a liability for damages, but the surety remains liable for the performance of that duty, as he is liable for the performance of the original duty. ⁵⁰⁴ As has been observed,

"A repudiatory breach [by the debtor] will in the normal course of events lead to the termination of the repudiated contract (although of course it may not do so). It would be extraordinary if a performance guarantee was intended to cease to operate in exactly the situation in which its beneficiary most needs it—when the contract has failed because the principal has repudiated it." ⁵⁰⁵

It is possible, though, that the surety may be held to have guaranteed only the debtor's primary obligations under the contract and not his secondary obligation (to pay damages) in the event of breach; in this event it seems that the surety would remain liable for his accrued liability in respect of the primary obligations. ⁵⁰⁶

Guarantees of payment by instalments

45-101

More problems arise with contracts involving payment in instalments, where payment is guaranteed by the surety. The creditor's right to claim payment of instalments, whether from the debtor or the surety, prima facie arises only where the events specified in the contract have occurred; thus, where the contract is prematurely terminated (whether for breach or any other reason) the debtor may never become liable for instalments thereafter due. In this event, the surety cannot be liable either. But the position is different as regards instalments which have accrued due. So where instalments under a shipbuilding contract have accrued due, the fact (if it is a fact) that the buyer's obligation to pay the instalments has been replaced by a general claim for damages as a result of the shipbuilder's exercise of his right to rescind or cancel the contract, will not deprive the shipbuilder of his accrued rights against the guarantor. ⁵⁰⁷ It is immaterial whether the shipbuilder issues proceedings against the guarantor before ⁵⁰⁸ or after ⁵⁰⁹ he has rescinded or cancelled the contract. In fact it will be unusual for rescission or cancellation of the contract in such circumstances to deprive the shipbuilder of accrued rights to instalments from the principal debtor, ⁵¹⁰ but it may do so in some circumstances, ⁵¹¹ and where this occurs there will now, it seems, be a major breach in the co-extensiveness principle. ⁵¹² The surety will remain liable for instalments, while the principal debtor's liability will be a liability for damages—which may, of course, in particular circumstances, be for sums significantly less. The surety's right to an indemnity from the principal debtor ⁵¹³ will presumably remain unaffected by this breach of the co-extensiveness principle which means only that the suretyship contract will be treated as an indemnity rather than a guarantee for some limited purposes.

Discharge of debtor as a result of surety's breach of contract

45-102

Where a surety has given an undertaking to ensure that something occurs on which the debtor's liability is contingent, but fails to do so, any resulting lack of liability in the debtor does not prevent liability arising in the surety. Thus, in Cerium Investments Ltd v Evans, ⁵¹⁴ a landlord had granted licences to the defendants to assign a lease and an underlease, the defendants covenanting as surety that the assignees would pay the rents and perform the covenants in the leases. The licences further provided that they should become "null and void" if the assignments were not registered with the landlords within a month. Assignments were made but not registered within this time by the assignees. The Court of Appeal upheld a claim by the landlords against the defendants as sureties in respect of arrears of rent not paid by the assignees, holding that the licences were initially effective and that on assignment the defendants as sureties became immediately contractually liable to the landlords in respect of any breach of covenant in the assignees, including their failure to register their assignments. Thus, the defendants could not rely on the subsequent nullity of the licence as a defence to a claim against them as sureties as this nullity was the consequence of their own wrongdoing in failing to ensure that the assignments were registered.

Discharge of debtor by operation of law

45-103

A guarantor is generally discharged if the debtor is discharged by operation of law. Thus, where a mortgagee forecloses and thereafter sells the mortgaged property, a guarantor of the mortgage debt is discharged by operation of law because the mortgage debt itself is discharged in these circumstances.⁵¹⁵ And where a finance company retook the goods from the hirer in breach of the provisions of the Hire-Purchase Act so that the hirer was discharged under that Act, the guarantor was also discharged.⁵¹⁶ On the other hand, the House of Lords has held that a disclaimer of a lease by a corporate tenant debtor's liquidator does not discharge the liability of a guarantor of the tenant's liabilities.⁵¹⁷ The reason for this failure to discharge the tenant's guarantors is to be found in s.178(4) of the Insolvency Act 1986, which provides that such a disclaimer "does not, except so far as is necessary for the purpose of releasing the company from any liability, affect the rights or liabilities of any other person". A surety liable under a contract of indemnity is not necessarily discharged if the debtor is discharged by operation of law; but if the creditor is tainted with any illegality this may protect the surety under a contract of indemnity as much as under a contract of guarantee.⁵¹⁸ Where a guarantee is expressed to render the guarantor liable even if the principal debtor's liability is discharged, the liability which began as a guarantee is in effect transmuted into a liability under an indemnity.⁵¹⁹

^{428.} Western Credit Ltd v Alberry [1964] 1 W.L.R. 945.

^{429.} Perry v National Provincial Bank [1910] 1 Ch. 464.

^{430.} See above, paras 45-007—45-008.

^{431.} Goulston Discount Co Ltd v Clark [1967] 2 Q.B. 493; cf. Bentworth Finance Ltd v Lubert [1968] 1 Q.B. 680. Contrast Consumer Credit Act 1974 s.113 on which see above, para.39-190.

^{432.} Hyundai Shipbuilding and Heavy Industries Co Ltd v Pournaras [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 502, 508; BOC Group Plc v Centeon LLC [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 53; Lombard North Central Plc v Nugent [2013] EWHC 1588 (QB) at [90].

^{433.} Hyundai Shipbuilding and Heavy Industries Co Ltd v Pournaras [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 502, 506 and 508; BOC Group Plc v Centeon LLC [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 53, 64 and see above, paras 45-064—45-068.

^{434.} BOC Group Plc v Centeon LLC [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 53, per Rix J.

^{435.} See Vol.I, paras 21-061 et seq.

^{436.} Re Sherry (1884) 25 Ch. D. 692.

^{437.} (1816) 1 Mer. 529.

^{438.} Re Sherry (1884) 25 Ch. D. 692.

^{439.} Re Sherry (1884) 25 Ch. D. 692.

- 440. Walker v British Guarantee Association (1852) 18 Q.B. 277.
- 441. Petty v Cooke (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 790.
- 442. Re Idenden [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1015.
- 443. Commercial Bank of Tasmania v Jones [1893] A.C. 313. This rule does not apply to an “on-demand guarantee”, where questions whether the debtor is liable under the underlying contract are irrelevant: see Meritz Fire & Marine Insurance Co Ltd v Jan de Nul NV [2011] EWCA Civ 827 [2011] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 379 at [27] and above, para.45-009.
- 444. See Vol.I, paras 17-017 et seq.
- 445. See above, para.45-070.
- 446. See below, para.45-125.
- 447. cf. Polak v Everett (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 669, 673–674 (in the context of giving the principal debtor time).
- 448. Oriental Financial Corp v Overend, Gurney & Co [1871] 7 Ch. App. 142, 150.
- 449. Mahant Singh v U Ba Yi [1939] A.C. 601, 606, per Lord Porter.
- 450. Cowper v Smith (1838) 4 M. & W. 519; Perry v National Provincial Bank [1910] 1 Ch. 464.
- 451. Kearsley v Cole (1846) 16 M. & W. 128, 135; Bateson v Gosling (1871) L.R. 7 C.P. 9; Cole v Lynn [1942] 1 K.B. 142; Greene King Plc v Stanley [2001] EWCA Civ 1966, [2001] B.P.I.R. 491 at [67], [74] and [81] (where the proposition in the text was expressly approved).
- 452. Davidson v McGregor (1841) 8 M. & W. 755.
- 453. Perry v National Provincial Bank [1910] 1 Ch. 464, especially at 471 and 476.
- 454. Kearsley v Cole (1846) 16 M. & W. 128, 135, per Parke B.
- 455. Perry v National Provincial Bank [1910] 1 Ch. 464, especially at 476.
- 456. See Vol.I, para.17-017.
- 457. Bailey v Edwards (1864) 4 B. & S. 761, 771 where Blackburn J. based the rule discharging a surety on the giving of time to the debtor by the creditor on the fact that otherwise surety would be prevented from exercising his right to call upon the creditor to enforce the debt in equity, even though this right was termed by him “of very little practical value, and is seldom, if ever, exercised”. See further, below, para.45-107.
- 458. Bateson v Gosling (1871) L.R. 7 C.P. 9.
- 459. Commercial Bank of Tasmania v Jones [1893] A.C. 313.
- 460. e.g. Solley v Forbes (1820) 2 Br. & B. 38; Duck v Mayeu [1892] 2 Q.B. 511.
- 461. [1999] L. & T.R. 578.
- 462. [1999] L. & T.R. 578 at 598.
- 463. [1999] L. & T.R. 578 at 589; Clayton v Kynaston (1701) 2 Salk. 573.
- 464. Notably, by s.6(1) of the Law Reform (Married Women and Tortfeasors) Act 1935, re-enacted by s.3 of the Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978.

- 465. [1999] L. & T.R. 578, 590.
- 466. cf. above, paras 45-064 et seq.
- 467. [1999] L. & T.R. 578 at 595.
- 468. [1999] Ch. 117.
- 469. Chadwick, Ward and Kennedy L.JJ.
- 470. See above, para.45-094.
- 471. [1999] Ch. 117, 127. See also Sun Life Assurance Society Plc v Tantofex (Engineers) Ltd [1999] L. & T.R. 568; Chelsea Building Society v Nash [2010] EWCA Civ 1247, [2011] B.P.I.R. 381 at [33]–[38].
- 472. See below, para.45-098 on the status of a “voluntary arrangement” for these purposes.
- 473. [1999] Ch. 117, 128.
- 474. Chelsea Building Society v Nash [2010] EWCA Civ 1247, [2011] B.P.I.R. 381 at [38].
- 475. See above, paras 45-002 et seq.
- 476. [1999] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 895, The Times, June 23, 1999.
- 477. [1999] L. & T.R. 578 and see above, para.45-094.
- 478. [1999] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 895, 906-907.
- 479. [1999] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 895, 906-907.
- 480. [1999] Ch. 117, 128.
- 481. See below, para.45-114.
- 482. Insolvency Act 1985 s.128(7), itself replacing Bankruptcy Act 1914 s.28(4).
- 483. Re Moss [1905] 2 K.B. 307.
- 484. See Insolvency Act 1986 s.281(1).
- 485. [1999] Ch. 117; cf. IRC v Adam & Partners [1999] 2 B.C.L.C. 730, 737 (corporate insolvency).
- 486. See above, para.45-095.
- 487. [1999] Ch. 117 at 124-129.
- 488. [1999] Ch. 117 at 129 et seq. and see Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v PRG Powerhouse Ltd [2007] EWHC 1002 (Ch), [2007] Bus. L.R. 1771.
- 489.  [1999] Ch.117 at 129–130. (The wording of s.260(2) of the 1986 Act has been amended, but without relevant substantive change.)
- 490. [1999] Ch. 117 at 131. Chadwick L.J. considered that Megrath v Gray, Gray v Megrath (1874) L.R. 9 C.P. 216; Ellis v Wilmot (1874) L.R. 10 Ex. 10; Ex p. Jacobs (1875) 10 Ch. App. 211 which held that arrangements between debtors and creditors made under the Bankruptcy Act 1869 by their nature discharged a surety were inapplicable to voluntary arrangements under the Insolvency Act 1986 because under the latter the discharge of the debtor depends entirely on the terms of the arrangement rather than by operation of law (as under the 1869 Act): [1999] Ch. 117, 137-138. The Court of Appeal therefore disapproved the views of Jacobs J. expressed in the case below at [1997] 1 All E.R. 921, 927; and in RA Securities Ltd v Mercantile Credit Co Ltd [1995] 3 All E.R. 581, 586-587.

491. [1999] Ch. 117, 137-138.

492. Greene King Plc v Stanley [2001] EWCA Civ 1966, [2002] B.P.I.R. 491 at [82]; Koutrouzas v Lombard Natwest Factors Ltd [2002] EWHC 1084 (QB).

493. Greene King Plc v Stanley [2001] EWCA Civ 1966, [2002] B.P.I.R. 491 at [83].

494. See Vol.I, paras 21-028 et seq.

495. Eshelby v Federated European Bank Ltd [1932] 1 K.B. 423, 431. See also Blest v Brown (1862) 4 De G.F. & J. 367.

496. Watts v Shuttleworth (1861) 7 H. & N. 353.

497.  National Westminster Bank Plc v Riley [1986] B.C.L.C. 268, 275-276, explaining Vavasour Trust Co Ltd v Ashmore Unreported (1976); Spliethoff's Bevrachtungskantoor BV v Bank of China Ltd [2015] EWHC 999 (Comm), [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 123 at [183]–[199].

498.  National Westminster Bank Plc v Riley [1986] B.C.L.C. 268, 275–276 (referring to Holme v Brunskill (1878) 3 Q.B.D. 495 (on which see Main Work, Vol.II, para.45-104) Cf. Spliethoff's Bevrachtungskantoor BV v Bank of China Ltd [2015] EWHC 999 (Comm), [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 123 at [185]–[186], which distinguished between discharge of the guarantor on the ground of not unsubstantial non-repudiatory breach by the creditor and on the ground of variation by reference to Wardens and Commonality of the Mystery of the Mercers of the City of London v New Hampshire Insurance Co [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 365 (though the contract there was held not to be a guarantee at least in the ordinary sense (at 369, 371, 374 and 375) and the distinction between discharge by variation and discharge by breach by the creditor reflected a concession by counsel (at 367)).

499. Bechervaise v Lewis (1872) L.R. C.P. 372; but cf. Trafalgar House Construction (Regions) Ltd v General Surety & Guarantee Co Ltd [1996] 1 A.C. 199; Wilson v Mitchell [1939] 2 K.B. 869. There is an exhaustive discussion of this question in Cellulose Products Pty Ltd v Truda (1971) 92 W.N. (N.S.W.) 561; and see Indrisie v General Credits Ltd (1985) V.R. 251 in which the Supreme Court of Victoria held that a surety cannot take advantage of any equitable right of set-off which the principal debtor may have against the creditor. cf. Ashley Guarantee Plc v Zacaria [1993] 1 W.L.R. 62 (equitable set-off not a ground for refusing creditor's right to possession as mortgagee).

500. Hewison v Ricketts (1894) 63 L.J.Q.B. 711. But contrast Hyundai Heavy Industries Co Ltd v Papadopoulos [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1129, see below, para.45-101.

501. Cellulose Products Pty Ltd v Truda, above, at 565. Sterling Industrial Facilities Ltd v Lydiate Textiles Ltd (1962) 106 S.J. 669 is inconclusive on this point.

502. cf. Scottish Midland Guarantee Trust v Wooley (1964) 114 L.J. 272.

503.  Trafalgar House Construction (Regions) Ltd v General Surety & Guarantee Co Ltd [1996] 1 A.C. 199. cf. Spliethoff's Bevrachtungskantoor BV v Bank of China Ltd [2015] EWHC 999 (Comm), [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 123 at [172]–[181] (a term in a contract (assumed to be a true guarantee for this purpose, though held to be a performance bond) whereby the guarantor's obligations "shall not be affected or prejudiced by any dispute" between the creditor and principal debtor held to cover disputes involving an allegation of fraud in the creditor so that guarantor not discharged).

- 504. Moschi v Lep Air Services Ltd [1973] A.C. 331.
- 505. Manx Electricity Authority v JP Morgan Chase Bank [2003] EWCA Civ 1324, (2003) 147 S.J.L.B. 1205 at [37], per Rix L.J. See similarly at [47], per Chadwick L.J.
- 506. Hyundai Heavy Industries Co Ltd v Papadopoulos [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1129.
- 507. Hyundai Heavy Industries Co Ltd v Papadopoulos [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1129.
- 508. Hyundai Heavy Industries Co Ltd v Pournaras [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 502.
- 509. Papadopoulos case [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1129.
- 510. Rescission ab initio may have this effect, but cancellation will normally only operate prospectively: Johnson v Agnew [1980] A.C. 367, 393.
- 511. See Dies v British International Mining & Finance Corp [1939] 1 K.B. 724, the correctness of which was assumed but not decided in the Papadopoulos case, see above. For some of the difficulties arising out of these cases, see Beatson (1981) 97 L.Q.R. 389.
- 512. For the co-extensiveness principle, see above, para.45-070.
- 513. See below, paras 45-125 et seq.
- 514. (1991) 62 P. & C.R. 203.
- 515. Lloyds & Scottish Trust Ltd v Britten (1982) 44 P. & C.R. 249.
- 516. Unity Finance Ltd v Woodcock [1963] 1 W.L.R. 455. The Consumer Credit Act 1974 ss.91 and 113 (replacing Hire-Purchase Act 1965 s.34(2)) indeed expressly provide for this result in the case of a guarantee or indemnity which is a "security" as defined by s.189(1), but this definition does not include "recourse agreements": see above, para.45-005 n.13.
- 517. Hindcastle Ltd v Barbara Attenborough Associates Ltd [1997] A.C. 10 applied in Scottish Widows Plc v Tripipatkal [2003] EWHC 1874 (Ch), [2003] B.P.I.R. 1413.
- 518. See Unity Finance Ltd v Woodcock [1963] 1 W.L.R. 455 as explained in Goulston Discount Co Ltd v Clark [1967] 2 Q.B. 493.
- 519. General Produce Co v United Bank Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 255; cf. Heald v O'Connor [1971] 1 W.L.R. 497, 503.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 45 - Suretyship

Section 6. - Discharge of Surety

(c) - Discharge of Surety through Variation of Contract between Debtor and Creditor

Variation of contract between creditor and debtor

45-104

It is a well established and strictly applied principle that any variation in the terms of the agreement between the creditor and the debtor which could prejudice the surety will, unless he consents thereto, discharge him from liability, ⁵²⁰ unless the contract of suretyship provides to the contrary. ⁵²¹ It is immaterial that the variation has not in fact prejudiced the surety, or that the likelihood that it may do so is remote. ⁵²² If the variation could prejudice the surety it alters the nature of the risk which he has undertaken and he is entitled to decide whether he wishes to continue bound or not. But if it is self-evident that the variation is unsubstantial or could not prejudice the surety he will not be discharged. ⁵²³ The principle is applied very strictly so that even the most trifling variation may discharge the surety. In the leading case of Holme v Brunskill ⁵²⁴ the defendant joined in a bond to guarantee that the tenant of a farm would deliver up the farm and a flock of sheep thereon at the expiration of the lease. The lease was later varied without the knowledge of the surety by the surrender of a small field by the tenant in return for a reduction in the rent. It was held that the surety was discharged since it was possible that the surrender of the field might have affected the tenant's ability to pasture the sheep and so to return them in good condition, and the surety might therefore have been prejudiced by the variation. On the other hand, a guarantor who has entered into a fidelity bond to answer for the conduct of a servant has been held not discharged by trifling variations in the contract of employment, such as an increase in salary, ⁵²⁵ or an alteration of the length of notice required to terminate the employment, ⁵²⁶ since it was held that such variations could not have prejudiced the surety. So also a purported variation of the agreement between the creditor and debtor which is, for some reason, ineffective in law will not discharge the surety since he cannot be prejudiced thereby. ⁵²⁷ At common law a deed could not be varied by a parol agreement, and therefore such a variation did not affect the surety, ⁵²⁸ but the position was different in equity ⁵²⁹ and the rules of equity now prevail.

Effect of breach of contract by debtor

45-105

The acceptance by the creditor of a fundamental breach or a wrongful repudiation by the principal debtor, with consequential discharge of the principal contract, is not such a variation or discharge of the contract as will discharge the guarantor. ⁵³⁰

Agreement by debtor to pay earlier

45-106

Where the creditor and principal debtor enter a binding agreement under which the debtor is bound to pay earlier than originally agreed, the surety will be discharged on the ground that this agreement varies the principal contract, unless such an agreement is on the facts obviously incapable of prejudicing him. ⁵³¹ On the other hand, the surety is not discharged if the principal debtor merely chooses to pay before the expiry of any period of credit allowed, even if the early payment is made at the creditor's request, since such a payment is not inconsistent with the contract guaranteed and involves no variation of it. ⁵³² Moreover, where a payment is made by the principal debtor to the creditor under a separate agreement rather than under the original contract guaranteed (and so as not to take effect as a variation of that original contract, save in immaterial respects), the surety will not be discharged. ⁵³³ Here, "[t]he surety remains liable in respect of the original contract, but not of course in respect of the separate payments or loans which have been made". ⁵³⁴

Agreement by creditor to give time to the debtor

45-107

A binding agreement by the creditor to give time to the debtor is, in effect, one instance of variation, and also discharges the surety ⁵³⁵:

"It has been established for a very long time, beginning with Rees v Berrington ⁵³⁶ to the present day, without a single case going to the contrary, that on the principles of equity a surety is discharged when the creditor, without his assent, gives time to the principal debtor, because by so doing he deprives the surety of part of the right he would have had from the mere fact of entering into the suretyship, namely, to use the name of the creditor to sue the principal debtor, and if this right be suspended for a day or an hour, not injuring the surety to the value of one farthing, and even positively benefiting him, nevertheless, by the principles of equity, it is established that this discharges the surety altogether." ⁵³⁷

This rule has been said to be based on "highly technical reasoning", ⁵³⁸ for, as appears from the above quotation, it is justified by the theoretical possibility that the surety may at any time choose to pay off the creditor and sue the principal debtor for an indemnity. ⁵³⁹ This right would be prejudiced where time has been given to the debtor, if the surety could not then sue him until the time had expired; while if the surety could sue at once the agreement to give time would be deprived of all effect. ⁵⁴⁰ But in practice the surety would rarely think of exercising this right in any event, and indeed Blackburn J. once said ⁵⁴¹ that he was "not aware of any instance in which a surety ever in practice exercised this right". ⁵⁴² But he also admitted that the rule itself was firmly established.

Binding agreement

45-108

It is not the mere giving of time which discharges the surety: there must be a binding agreement to give time. ⁵⁴³ An agreement by a bank to allow a customer to increase his overdraft is not a binding agreement not to sue for the original debt forthwith. ⁵⁴⁴ Where the principal debtor gives the creditor additional security after the contract of suretyship has been made, such as a promissory note payable in some months' time, the surety will be discharged if the creditor has thereby agreed to waive his rights on the original debt and to give time. ⁵⁴⁵ But it is otherwise if the promissory note is merely a collateral security not affecting the creditor's rights on the original debt.

45-109

The granting of time does not release the surety where the agreement is made with someone other than the principal debtor, as, for example, where the agreement to give time is made with another surety. ⁵⁴⁶ Nor does an agreement to give time release the surety where the creditor has already obtained judgment against both debtor and surety; for after judgment both are equally liable to the creditor even though as between themselves the surety's liability remains a secondary one. ⁵⁴⁷

Security given by surety also released

45-110

The principle that the variation of the contract between creditor and debtor, or the giving of time, discharges the surety, also has the effect of releasing any securities given by the surety to the creditor. ⁵⁴⁸

Distinct obligations not discharged

45-111

Where the surety has guaranteed several distinct obligations, whether they arise under separate contracts or one contract, ⁵⁴⁹ a variation or a giving of time in respect of one obligation will discharge the surety as to that obligation, but not as to the others. ⁵⁵⁰ So where a surety guarantees payment of the price of any goods supplied by the creditor to the debtor, the giving of time in respect of the price of one lot of goods will not discharge the surety with respect to the price of another lot. ⁵⁵¹ But where the obligations are indivisible, as, for example, with regard to the payments of instalments under a hire-purchase agreement, the giving of time with respect to one instalment will discharge the surety with respect to all. ⁵⁵²

Agreement to allow variation or giving of time

45-112

The effect of the rules discussed in the preceding paragraphs is so technical and inconvenient that in practice any well-drawn contract of suretyship will nowadays expressly permit variation of the obligations or the giving of time, without discharging the surety. ⁵⁵³ At common law, such an agreement takes effect according to its terms, ⁵⁵⁴ but in cases of doubt or uncertainty will be construed in favour of the surety. ⁵⁵⁵ So, for example, where a contract of guarantee provided that the guarantor's liability "under or pursuant" to the loan agreement was not to be affected by an arrangement which the creditor may make with the principal debtor and that the creditor could "agree to any amendment, variation, waiver or release ... in respect of an obligation of the [principal debtor] under the Loan Agreement", the question remained whether subsequent contracts of loan between the principal debtor and the creditor which "replaced" the loans guaranteed were indeed "amendments" or "variations" of the guarantor's liability "under or pursuant to" the loans guaranteed or whether they were "substantially different", whether in purpose, amount or terms, so as to fall outside the permitted variation provision in the guarantee contract. ⁵⁵⁶ In so holding, the Court of Appeal approved the statement of the law found in Rowlatt on the Law of Principal and Surety (1898), according to which "assent, whether previous or subsequent to a variation, only renders the surety liable for the contract as varied, where it remains a contract within the general purview of the original guarantee ... If a new contract is to be secured there must be a new guarantee". ⁵⁵⁷ On the other hand, where a clause in a contract of guarantee allows the creditor to vary the loan with the principal debtor but the creditor later agrees in writing with the guarantor not to renegotiate the loan without the latter's consent, then this subsequent agreement in effect reinstates the rule in Holme v Brunskill, ⁵⁵⁸ with the result that any variation of the loan to the potential detriment or disadvantage of the guarantor discharges him. ⁵⁵⁹ And a clause in a contract of guarantee of a lessee's obligations to its lessor which preserved the guarantor's liability "notwithstanding any neglect or forbearance on the part of the Lessor" to enforce the lessee's covenants has been held not to extend to a license by the lessor to allow the lessee to perform its covenants, as it concerned instead decisions by the lessor not to enforce the performance of a covenant against the lessee when in breach of that covenant: as a result, on the grant of such a license, the clause did not protect the lessor/creditor from the effect of the rule in Holme v Brunskill. ⁵⁶⁰ Finally, a change in the obligations of the principal debtor (for example, as to the rate of interest payable) under a term of the main contract which provides an option in the creditor to do so is not a variation in the contract at all, but the performance of it on its terms and so will not discharge the surety. ⁵⁶¹

Guarantee of liability after variation

45-113

Even where there is no express agreement to allow variation it is sometimes possible for a court to hold that a variation does not discharge the surety because on the true construction of the contract he has guaranteed the liability as varied. Thus where the surety guaranteed the liability of a commission agent up to a specified amount, but nothing was said as to the mode of accounting between the agent and the creditor, it was held that a variation in the mode did not discharge the surety, because he had guaranteed the liability irrespective of changes in the mode of accounting.⁵⁶² Similarly, where a guarantee is expressed as being in respect of "all sums which are now or may hereafter become owing" to the creditor by the principal debtor, the surety will remain liable for sums so owing even if they were not foreseen by the original contract guaranteed.⁵⁶³

Reservation of rights against surety

45-114

Even if the contract of suretyship itself does not permit variations or the giving of time, the surety will not be released by an agreement to give time if the creditor reserves his rights against the surety by notifying the debtor when time is given to him.⁵⁶⁴ The consent of the surety is not necessary in this event,⁵⁶⁵ though it would doubtless be sufficient, but the position is different where there is a variation of the terms of the contract other than a giving of time. In this event a reservation of the creditor's rights will be ineffective unless the surety consents to it.⁵⁶⁶ If the surety is informed and consents, he will remain bound in any event, and no further consideration need be provided,⁵⁶⁷ but mere knowledge of the creditor's intention to give time or vary the contract is not equivalent to consent unless some estoppel arises.⁵⁶⁸

^{520.} Whitcher v Hall (1826) 5 B. & C. 269; Holme v Brunskill (1877) 3 Q.B.D. 495; National Bank of Nigeria Ltd v Awolesi [1964] 1 W.L.R. 1311; West Hordon Industrial Park Ltd v Phoenix Timber Group Plc [1995] 1 E.G.L.R. 77; Howard de Walden Estates Ltd v Pasta Place Ltd [1995] 1 E.G.L.R. 79; Marubeni Hong Kong and South China Ltd v Government of Mongolia [2004] EWHC 471 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 198 at [58]–[60]; affirmed [2005] EWCA Civ 395, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 2497; Associated British Ports v Ferryways NV [2009] EWCA Civ 189, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 595 at [12]; Aviva Insurance Ltd v Hackney Empire Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 1716, [2013] B.L.R. 57 at [56]–[79]. For the effect of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s.18 on the effectiveness of some variations of a tenant's covenants on guarantees by either a former tenant or his guarantor, see above, para.45-018.

^{521.} cf. below, para.45-159, concerning the possible effect of the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/2083) or Consumer Rights Act 2015 Pt 2 on such an exclusion.

^{522.} Bonar v Macdonald (1850) 3 H.L.C. 226; Holme v Brunskill (1877) 3 Q.B.D. 495.

^{523.} Holme v Brunskill (1877) 3 Q.B.D. 495 at 505; and see National Westminster Bank Plc v Riley [1986] B.C.L.C. 268, 276–277; Howard de Walden Estates Ltd v Pasta Place Ltd [1995] 1 E.G.L.R. 79; De Montfort Insurance Co Plc v Lafferty (1997) G.W.D. 4–140, [1997] C.L.Y. 5722 Outer House of Ct of Sess.; Barclays Bank Plc v Kingston [2006] EWHC 533, [2006] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 519. In Topland Portfolio No.1 Ltd v Smiths News Trading Ltd [2014] EWCA Civ 18, [2014] 1 P. & C.R. 17 at [20] it was noted (with apparent approval but expressly obiter) that the H.C. of Australia in Ankar Pty Ltd v National Westminster Finance (Australia) Ltd (1987) 162 C.L.R. 549 at 559 (Mason A.C.J, Wilson, Brennan and Dawson JJ.) considered that the burden of proof is on the creditor to show that the nature of the alteration can only be beneficial to the surety or that by its nature it cannot in any circumstances increase the surety's risk.

- 524. (1877) 3 Q.B.D. 495.
- 525. Frank v Edwards (1852) 8 Exch. 214.
- 526. Sanderson v Aston (1873) L.R. 8 Exch. 73.
- 527. Egbert v National Crown Bank [1918] A.C. 903, 909–910 (increase in rate of interest forbidden by statute).
- 528. Davey v Prendergrass (1821) 5 B. & Ald. 187.
- 529. Prendergast v Devey (1821) 6 Madd. 124.
- 530. Moschi v Lep Air Services Ltd [1973] A.C. 331. See above, para.45-100.
- 531. St Microelectronics NV v Condor Insurance Ltd [2006] EWHC 977 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 525 at [36], [38].
- 532. [2006] EWHC 977 at [37].
- 533. Aviva Insurance Ltd v Hackney Empire Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 1716, [2013] B.L.R. 57 at [67]–[80], [86]–[89], following Trade Indemnity Co Ltd v Workington Harbour and Dock Board [1937] A.C. 1, 21–22.
- 534. [2012] EWCA Civ 1716 at [78], per Jackson L.J.
- 535. Polak v Everett (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 669; Overend Gurney & Co v Oriental Financial Corp (1874) 7 H.L. 348; Mahant Singh v U Ba Yi [1939] A.C. 601.
- 536. Rees v Berrington (1795) 2 Ves. 540.
- 537. Polak v Everett (1876) 1 Q.B.D. at 669, 673–674.
- 538. Petty v Cooke (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 790, 795.
- 539. See below, para.45-125.
- 540. Oriental Financial Corp v Overend Gurney & Co (1871) L.R. 7 Ch. App. 142, 150.
- 541. Swire v Redman (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 536, 541. The actual decision in this case was in part overruled in Rouse v Bradford Banking Co Ltd [1894] A.C. 586.
- 542. But this happened in Drager v Allison, 19 D.L.R. (2d) 431 (1959).
- 543. Overend Gurney & Co Ltd v Oriental Financial Corp Ltd (1874) L.R. 7 H.L. 348.
- 544. Rouse v Bradford Banking Co Ltd [1894] A.C. 586, 594 et seq.
- 545. See Wyke v Rogers (1852) 21 L.J.Ch. 611; cf. Mercantile Bank of Sydney v Taylor [1893] A.C. 317.
- 546. Frazer v Jordan (1858) 8 E. & B. 303; Clarke v Birley (1889) 41 Ch. D. 422.
- 547. Re a Debtor [1913] 3 K.B. 11.
- 548. Bolton v Salmon [1891] 2 Ch. 48; Smith v Wood [1929] 1 Ch. 14.
- 549. Harrison v Seymour (1866) L.R. 1 C.P. 518.

- 550. Croydon Commercial Gas Co v Dickinson (1876) 2 C.P.D. 46; WR Simmonds Ltd v Meek [1939] 2 All E.R. 645.
- 551. WR Simmonds Ltd v Meek [1939] 2 All E.R. 645.
- 552. Midland Motor Showrooms Ltd v Newman [1929] 2 K.B. 256.
- 553. Having noted the observation in the text, the CA has held that the absence of such a usual express term is neutral as to the question whether the agreement constitutes a guarantee or an indemnity: Associated British Ports v Ferryways NV [2009] EWCA Civ 189, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 595 at [12].
- 554. British Motor Trust Co Ltd v Hyams (1934) 50 T.L.R. 230; Perry v National Provincial Bank [1910] 1 Ch. 464; Trade Indemnity Co v Workington Harbour, etc. [1937] A.C. 1, 21. cf. Trafalgar House Construction (Regions) Ltd v General Surety & Guarantee Co Ltd [1996] A.C. 199, 205; Aviva Insurance Ltd v Hackney Empire Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 1716, [2013] B.L.R. 57 at [71]. For discussion of the possibility that such a term is not effective to retain the surety's liability by reason of the effect of the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/2083) or the Consumer Rights Act 2015 Pt 2; see below, paras 45-155 et seq.
- 555. See West Hordon Industrial Park Ltd v Phoenix Timber Group Plc [1995] 1 E.G.L.R. 77. cf. Samuels Finance Group Plc v Beechmanor Ltd (1994) 57 P. & C.R. 282, 285.
- 556. Triodosbank NV v Dobbs [2005] EWCA Civ 630, [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 588 at [11]–[13], [19], per Longmore L.J., with whom Neuberger and Chadwick L.JJ. at [27] and [29] respectively agreed; CIMC Raffles Offshore (Singapore) Ltd v Schahin Holdings SA [2013] EWCA Civ 644, [2013] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 575 especially at [41]–[53], [61]–[63].
- 557. [2005] EWCA Civ 630 at [14].
- 558. (1877) 3 Q.B.D. 495, on which see above, para.45-104.
- 559. Lloyds TSB Bank Plc v Hayward [2005] EWCA Civ 466.
- 560. Topland Portfolio No.1 Ltd v Smiths News Trading Ltd [2014] EWCA Civ 18, [2014] 1 P. & C.R. 17 at [34]–[37].
- 561. Nationwide Building Society v Christie [2013] EWHC 127 (Ch) at [15].
- 562. Stewart v M'Kean (1855) 10 Exch. 675.
- 563. National Merchant Buying Society Ltd v Bellamy [2013] EWCA Civ 452, [2013] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 674 at [30]–[33].
- 564. Overend Gurney & Co v Oriental Financial Corp (1874) L.R. 7 H.L. 348; Mahant Singh v U Ba Yi [1939] A.C. 601.
- 565. Kearsley v Cole (1846) 16 M. & W. 128, 135; Bateson v Gosling (1871) L.R. 7 C.P. 9. cf. Greene King Plc v Stanley [2001] EWCA Civ 1966, [2002] B.P.I.R. 491 at [74]–[81] (release of debtor subject to reservation of rights against surety), see above, para.45-092.
- 566. This seems implicit in Holme v Brunskill (1877) 3 Q.B.D. 495.
- 567. Yates v Evans (1892) 61 L.J.Q.B. 446, 449.
- 568. Polak v Everett (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 669.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 45 - Suretyship
Section 6. - Discharge of Surety
(d) - Discharge of Surety on Other Grounds

Altering the terms of guarantee

45-115

If, while the instrument of guarantee is in the hands of the party to whom it was given, it is altered in any material particular without the knowledge or consent of the surety, it will become void and the surety will be discharged. ⁵⁶⁹ The test of materiality for this purpose has been held to be whether there is an alteration which affects “the very nature and character of the instrument” or “one which ... is potentially prejudicial to [the nonconsenting party’s] legal rights and obligations under the instrument”. ⁵⁷⁰ On the other hand, where a guarantee document is altered in good faith by a third party in circumstances where the guarantee would have been enforceable without the alteration, then the guarantee is valid. ⁵⁷¹ Furthermore, it has been held that where a guarantee document consists otherwise of print, type and ink writing, the most natural inference to draw of an amendment to that document in pencil is that it is not, and is not intended to be, an operative and final alteration with the result that it does not count as an alteration of the document so as to discharge the guarantor. ⁵⁷² This decision was explained by the court on the basis that the rule as to alteration of a guarantee leading to discharge rests on a policy of deterrence or punishment of attempted fraud, a policy which cannot apply where, as with a pencilled alteration to a document of this kind, there is no chance of committing a fraud. ⁵⁷³

Breach by creditor of terms of contract of suretyship. ⁵⁷⁴

45-116

If the creditor is guilty of a breach of the terms of the contract of suretyship, the question whether the surety is wholly discharged depends on whether the breach goes to the root of the contract, or evinces an intention to repudiate the contract. ⁵⁷⁵ If it does so, the breach will, in accordance with normal principles, discharge the surety entirely. If, on the other hand, the breach is of a less serious character, the surety will merely have a counterclaim for damages, so that he will, in effect, be discharged to the extent that he has been prejudiced by the breach, but not wholly. It is often difficult to say whether breach by the creditor of a term in a contract of suretyship goes to the root of the contract or not, as may be seen from a number of hire-purchase cases. For example, where the finance company was unable to deliver the goods to the surety this was held in one case to discharge the surety completely, ⁵⁷⁶ and in another case merely to give rise to a counterclaim in damages. ⁵⁷⁷ If the creditor fails to perform some act required by the contract (e.g. to give notice to the surety of the debtor’s default), this may be construed as the failure of a condition precedent and the surety cannot then be liable. ⁵⁷⁸ Similarly, breach of a proviso to a term in the contract of surety which allows the creditor to give the debtor time may take the creditor outside the permission of the term, so as to allow the operation of the rules as to discharge by reason of variation. ⁵⁷⁹

Release of co-surety

45-117

As will be seen below, one surety has in some circumstances a right of contribution from other co-sureties, ⁵⁸⁰ so that the release of a surety by the creditor could prejudice this right of contribution if the release were effective against co-sureties. Accordingly, such a release may also discharge the surety, though here again it is sometimes difficult to say whether he is discharged wholly or only to the extent that he has in fact been prejudiced. If the sureties are jointly or jointly and severally liable it seems that the liability of all the sureties will be treated as an essential part of the contract and a release of one without the consent of the others will therefore discharge all. ⁵⁸¹ But where they are only severally liable the position seems to be different. ⁵⁸² Even in this case a right to contribution would arise between the sureties so that the release of one may discharge the others to the extent (if any) that they have been prejudiced thereby, i.e. to the extent that they are unable to recover contribution which they could otherwise have recovered. ⁵⁸³ It has been held that an appropriately drafted clause in a contract of guarantee may oust the normal rule by which the release of one jointly and severally liable surety discharges the others. ⁵⁸⁴

Release or surrender of securities

45-118

The release or surrender of securities held by the creditor could operate to the prejudice of the surety in the same way as the release of a co-surety, so that this also may discharge the surety. The principle to be applied in determining whether the surety is wholly discharged or is only discharged pro tanto seems to be the same as in the case of a release of a co-surety. That is to say, if the existence of the security was an essential part of the contract of suretyship, then release of the security will discharge the surety entirely, ⁵⁸⁵ but if it was not an essential part of the bargain (for example, because it was supplied by the debtor after the contract of suretyship was made) ⁵⁸⁶ the surety will only be discharged to the extent that he has been prejudiced. ⁵⁸⁷ And if he has not been prejudiced at all, for example, because the security was worthless, ⁵⁸⁸ or because the security was not one to which the surety was entitled, ⁵⁸⁹ he remains liable in full. A similar principle operates where a surety is entitled to the benefit of an insurance policy. So, for example, where a car which was let under a hire-purchase agreement was destroyed in an accident, and the finance company settled the claim against the insurers for less than they should have done, the surety was not liable for the amount which the finance company had failed to claim. ⁵⁹⁰

45-119

⚠ But the contract of suretyship may, expressly or impliedly, give the creditor the right to release securities without thereby prejudicing his rights against the surety. So, for example, where the debtor had mortgaged his farm and stock to a bank for a liability guaranteed by the surety, it was held that the consent of the bank to a sale of some of the stock by the debtor did not discharge the surety, for such normal dealings must have been contemplated by the parties. ⁵⁹¹ And if the surety has engaged to answer for the debtor's fraud, he will not be discharged if the debtor fraudulently secures the release of some security. ⁵⁹² Where the debtor becomes bankrupt, a secured creditor who exercises his statutory right under the Insolvency Act 1986 ⁵⁹³ ⚠ to surrender his security and prove for the total liability does not thereby prejudice his rights against a surety. ⁵⁹⁴

Neglect of creditor in relation to securities

45-120

⚠ It is clear that in some cases equity will intervene so as to discharge a surety where the creditor has failed to deal with the security for the debt as he ought. ⁵⁹⁵ For example, in The Mutual Loan Association v Sudlow, ⁵⁹⁶ A had obtained a loan from B upon the security of a bill of sale of A's furniture and of C standing surety for him. On A falling into arrears, the agents of B, his creditor, seized the goods and sold them, apparently at a considerable undervalue. The Court of Common Pleas held that the jury was entitled to hold that C, the surety, was discharged as it was through the misconduct of B's agents that the proceeds of sale were not enough to cover the debt. Secondly, it is also clear that in principle the effect of this equitable relief is to reduce or to extinguish the liability of the surety to the extent to which the security would have satisfied the debt, rather than absolutely. ⁵⁹⁷

In Skipton Building Society v Stott ⁵⁹⁸  the Court of Appeal held that where the liability of a surety is reduced on account of the negligent realisation of security, the basis of this reduction is the difference in value between the amount realised and the market value of the security at the relevant time (although it is to be noted that this case concerned the breach of an implied term in the contract of guarantee). This effect on the liability of a guarantor of neglect of a creditor in relation to securities may be excluded by the terms of the guarantee, and it has been said that the proper approach to such an alleged exclusion “should seek to interpret the guarantee as a whole as a commercial document and to give it a sensible meaning”, rather than treat it “with the traditional hostility shown to exemption clauses”. ⁵⁹⁹ Nevertheless, where such an alleged exclusion was contained in the creditor’s standard document in circumstances where the guarantor had been encouraged to give the guarantee on the basis that the principal debtor had given valuable security and that, if need be, the creditor would realise the market value of that security properly, then it was held that neglect would reduce the guarantor’s liability “unless the terms of the guarantor clearly indicate otherwise”. ⁶⁰⁰ It is submitted with respect that this approach to the construction of such an exclusion is to be approved: a contract term excluding the reduction of a guarantor’s liability is not an exclusion clause properly so-called as it seeks to preserve the guarantor’s liability where equity would reduce or extinguish it; and the approach just described reflects both the modern approach to construction of commercial contracts which sets them in their factual matrix and at the same time preserves a certain force to the traditional requirement of “clear words” to exclude this equitable protection for guarantors. ⁶⁰¹

Creditor free to decide whether to realise security

45-121

 In Standard Chartered Bank v Walker ⁶⁰² relief on the ground of neglect of creditor in relation to securities was expressed by Lord Denning M.R. very broadly, linking it to the existence of a duty of care owed by the creditor to the surety in the tort of negligence and suggesting that it may apply even to a case of the failure by the creditor to realise the security at an advantageous time, although he acknowledged that “the creditor can choose the time of sale within a considerable margin”. ⁶⁰³ Such a broad approach was firmly rejected by the Privy Council in China and South Sea Bank Ltd v Tan

Soon Gin, ⁶⁰⁴  in which Lord Templeman observed that while older authority justified the intervention of equity where the security is surrendered, lost, ⁶⁰⁵ not properly perfected ⁶⁰⁶ or altered in its condition by reason of what has been done by the creditor, where none of these are the case, the creditor is entitled freely to decide whether to sue the principal debtor, the surety, or to realise the security, or to do none of these. ⁶⁰⁷ Thus, while the negligent sale at an undervalue of the property discharges the surety, ⁶⁰⁸ the failure to realise the security at all while it declines in value does not, unless the creditor was personally responsible for that decline. ⁶⁰⁹ Moreover, it has been held that where a guarantee was given on terms that “all amounts payable by the Guarantor ... shall be paid in full free of set-off or counterclaim”, this was effective to prevent resistance of the creditor’s claim for summary judgment by the guarantor on the ground of the creditor’s negligent realisation of the security for the loan. ⁶¹⁰ “Guarantees such as these are the equivalent of letters of credit and only in exceptional circumstances should the Court exercise its power to stay execution”. ⁶¹¹ Finally, the Privy Council in China and South Sea Bank Ltd v Tan Soon Gin ⁶¹² also rejected the idea that the creditor could be liable in damages in the tort of negligence to the surety for failing to exercise reasonable care in the realisation of securities ⁶¹³: “the tort of negligence has not yet subsumed all torts and does not supplant the principles of equity or contradict contractual promises”. ⁶¹⁴

Implied term

45-122

 On the other hand, in Skipton Building Society v Stott ⁶¹⁵ the County Court below had apparently accepted an implied term in a contract of guarantee on a building society lender towards a guarantor “to take reasonable care to ensure that the price at which the land [the security] is sold is the best price that can reasonably be obtained” ⁶¹⁶ on the basis that this “implied term reflects the statutory duty of the building society under para.1(1)(a) of Sch.4 to the Building Societies Act 1986".⁶¹⁷ While the legal basis of the lender's duty to take care of the security was not in issue before the Court of Appeal, no adverse comment was directed to the decision below in this respect. Clearly, however, if the legal basis for the duty is an implied term in the contract of suretyship, a lender's breach would give rise to damages for consequential loss and not merely to the reduction or extinction of the surety's liability. While such an implied term may be justified in the special circumstances of lending by a building society (owing to the influence of the statutory duty noted above), more generally such a term would be unlikely to pass the traditional test of necessity for the implication of terms in general

⁶¹⁸  In this respect, the courts' rejection of a duty of care in the tort of negligence in relation to the realisation of securities suggests an unwillingness to extend the protection which equity has traditionally given to sureties.⁶¹⁹ On the other hand, where a lease purchase agreement (the principal contract) contains an express obligation in the creditor on its termination to sell the goods, a court may imply a term that the lessor/creditor will take reasonable care to obtain the true value of the goods; if the creditor breaches such an implied obligation, the surety may take advantage of the right of set-off or counterclaim of the lessee/principal debtor.⁶²⁰ Such a guarantee may properly be construed as being given in respect of obligations arising out of a contemplated course of dealing rather than a specific contract, with the result that any variation in the obligations of the principal debtor under a specific contract will not discharge the surety.⁶²¹

Statutory demands under Insolvency Act against guarantor

45-123

 The questions have arisen as to whether the existence of a set-off as between the principal debtor and creditor, or of security provided by a principal debtor to the creditor, provide grounds under the Insolvency Rules 1986 r.6.5.(4) for setting aside a statutory demand against a guarantor under the Insolvency Act 1986.⁶²² In *Octagon Assets Ltd v Remblance*⁶²³ a majority of the Court of Appeal held that, since r.6.5.(4)(a) provides for the setting aside of such a demand against a debtor where he enjoys a "counter-claim, set-off or cross-demand which equals or exceeds the amount of the debt ... specified in the statutory demand", then, where a principal debtor enjoys a counter-claim etc. such a statutory demand against a guarantor should be set-aside under the discretion under r.6.5(4)(d) for cases "where the court is satisfied, on other grounds, that the demand ought to be set aside": "[h]aving regard to the principle of co-extensiveness, it is equally unjust in such circumstances to require the guarantor to face the consequences of bankruptcy" as it is for the debtor.⁶²⁴ However, in

*White v Davenham Trust Ltd*⁶²⁵  the Court of Appeal distinguished this situation from the position where a creditor enjoys security provided by the principal debtor (and cannot therefore serve a statutory demand against him by reason of r.6.5(4)(c)) and brings a statutory demand against a guarantor. Given that a creditor who has several remedies can choose which remedy is enforced, at what time, in which order and in what way,⁶²⁶ "it is not open to a guarantor to argue that the creditor should pursue the principal debtor first or should realise security given by the principal debtor first".⁶²⁷ The "co-extensiveness principle" as between principal debtor and guarantor does not apply so as to create a proper analogy between the position of a creditor bringing a statutory demand against the principal debtor who has provided security under r.6.5.(4)(c) and a creditor bringing a statutory demand against a surety where the principal debtor has provided security for the purposes of the discretion under r.6.5.(4)(d).⁶²⁸ With effect from April 6, 2017, the Insolvency Rules 1986 are replaced by the Insolvency (England and Wales) Rules 2016,⁶²⁹  but the provisions formerly contained in the 1986 Rules r.6.5(4) which are the subject of the cases discussed in this paragraph are re-enacted without substantive change in r.10.5(5) of the 2016 Rules.⁶³⁰

Other conduct of creditor prejudicial to surety

45-124

In certain types of transaction, and in particular where a surety engages to answer for the honesty of an employee, the wilful connivance of the creditor in the default of the principal debtor may discharge the surety. In Dawson v Lawes,⁶³¹ where a surety had signed a fidelity bond for an employee who was from time to time entrusted with money by his employer, the creditor, it was said that there must be:

“... such an act of connivance as enabled the party [sc. the debtor] to get the fund in his hands, or such an act of gross negligence as to amount to a wilful shutting of the person's eyes to the fraud which the party was about to commit, or something approximating to it, to discharge the surety.”

But mere negligence on the part of the creditor will not normally discharge the surety except, as seen in the preceding paragraph, where the neglect affects some security which would otherwise have accrued to the benefit of the surety. So the negligence of a creditor in not demanding accounts from an employee whose conduct and honesty have been guaranteed will not discharge the surety,⁶³² nor will acquiescence by the creditor in an irregular mode of accounting,⁶³³ nor will the failure to demand payment of a debt as soon as it is due.⁶³⁴ Moreover, the Court of Appeal has affirmed⁶³⁵ that there is no general principle that “irregular” conduct on the part of the creditor, even if prejudicial to the interests of the surety, will discharge him.⁶³⁶ Short of bad faith, misrepresentation or concealment amounting to misrepresentation, connivance with the default of the principal debtor, or variation of the terms of the contract to the possible prejudice of the surety, the creditor can act as he chooses. Finally, as has been seen,⁶³⁷ the courts have clearly set their face against imposing a duty of care in the tort of negligence on a creditor to the surety to safeguard the economic welfare of the latter's position.⁶³⁸ Thus, in Barclays Bank Plc v Quincecare Ltd,⁶³⁹ it was held that a creditor owes no duty to a guarantor of a loan to act reasonably to ensure that the loan is applied for the purposes for which it is given, whether that duty is put by way of an implied term in the contract or of the tort of negligence.

Creditor estopped from enforcing guarantee

45-124A

⚠ In principle, a creditor may be estopped from enforcing a guarantee under the doctrine of promissory estoppel (sometimes known as forbearance in equity).⁶⁴⁰ ⚠ However, where, for example, a creditor promises not to enforce a guarantee “indefinitely” while the guarantor works (unpaid) for the principal debtor, such a promise to postpone enforcement is likely to be interpreted as applying only where the creditor agrees to the continuation of the work rather than so as to allow the guarantor unilaterally to prevent the enforcement of the guarantee by continuing to undertake the work.⁶⁴¹ ⚠

^{569.} Davidson v Cooper (1844) 13 M. & W. 343; and see Vol.I, paras 25-020 et seq.

^{570.} Raiffeisen Zentralbank Osterreich AG v Crossseas Shipping Ltd [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1135 at 1146-1148, per Potter L.J. cf. Bank of Scotland v Henry Butcher & Co [2003] EWCA Civ 67, [2003] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 557 at [72]-[74] where an alteration by some co-guarantors was held to be plainly beneficial to the others who were not as a result discharged.

^{571.} Lombard Finance Ltd v Brookplain Trading Ltd [1991] 1 W.L.R. 271.

^{572.} Co-operative Bank v Tipper [1996] 4 All E.R. 366, 372 per Roger Cooke J.

^{573.} Co-operative Bank v Tipper [1996] 4 All E.R. 366, 372 per Roger Cooke J.

^{574.} Skipton Building Society v Stott [2001] Q.B. 261, 269-170 where this paragraph was cited with apparent approval.

- 575. See Vol.I, paras 24-035 et seq.
- 576. Watling Trust Ltd v Briffault Range Co Ltd [1938] 1 All E.R. 525.
- 577. Bowmaker (Commercial) Ltd v Smith [1965] 1 W.L.R. 855.
- 578. United Dominions Trust (Commercial) Ltd v Eagle Aircraft Services Ltd [1968] 1 W.L.R. 74; cf. Australia & New Zealand Banking Group Ltd v Beneficial Finance Corp Ltd (1983) 44 A.L.R. 241 and Barclays Bank Plc v Quincecare Ltd (1988) reported [1992] 4 All E.R. 363, 381–382. See also Greene King Plc v Quisine Restaurants Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 698, [2012] 2 E.G.L.R. 64 (notice of arrears held neither a condition nor its breach going to root of contract).
- 579. Midland Counties Motor Finance Co Ltd v Slade [1951] 1 K.B. 346.
- 580. See below, para.45-135.
- 581. Mercantile Bank of Sydney v Taylor [1893] A.C. 317; Smith v Wood [1929] 1 Ch. 14; Liverpool Corn Trade Association v Hurst [1936] 2 All E.R. 309; cf. Commercial Bank of Australia Ltd v Official Assignee [1893] A.C. 181; Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce v Vopni, 86 D.L.R. (3d) 383 (1978). cf. the approach to the release of one of joint debtors (and joint and several debtors) in Watts v Aldington, Tolstoy v Aldington [1999] L. & T.R. 578; and Johnson v Davies [1999] Ch. 117 above, paras 45-091—45-097.
- 582. Ward v National Bank of New Zealand Ltd (1883) 8 App. Cas. 755.
- 583. Ward v National Bank of New Zealand Ltd (1883) 8 App. Cas. 766.
- 584. Bank of Montreal v Dobbin and Dobbin [1996] 5 Bank. L.R. 190 Court of Queen's Bench of New Brunswick.
- 585. Smith v Wood [1929] 1 Ch.14; Re Darwen & Pearce [1927] 1 Ch. 176.
- 586. Polak v Everett (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 669, 676.
- 587. Carter v White (1883) 25 Ch. D. 666, 670.
- 588. Rainbow v Juggins (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 422; Musket v Rogers (1839) 5 Bing. N.C. 728, 732.
- 589. Chatterton v Maclean [1951] 1 All E.R. 761, 766.
- 590. Goulston Discount Co Ltd v Sims (1967) 111 S.J. 682 (contract of indemnity; a fortiori for contracts of guarantee).
- 591. Taylor v Bank of New South Wales (1886) 11 App. Cas. 596; cf. Dowling v Ditenda, The Times, April 15, 1975.
- 592. Hull Corp v Harding [1892] 2 Q.B. 494.
- 593.  Insolvency Act 1986 s.322, Sch.9 para.17; Insolvency (England and Wales) Rules 2016 (SI 2016/1024) r.14.19(2) (in force April 6, 2017).
- 594. Rainbow v Juggins (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 422. cf. Re Hallett [1894] 2 Q.B. 256.
- 595. The Mutual Loan Association v Sudlow (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 449; Strange v Fooks (1863) 4 Giff. 408; Wulff v Jay (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 756.
- 596. (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 449.
- 597. Watts v Shuttleworth (1860) 7 H. & N. 353, 354; Taylor v Bank of New South Wales (1886) 11

App. Cas. 596, 603. cf. the position where the release or other dealing constitutes a variation of the principal obligation, in which case the surety is entirely discharged: see Polak v Everett (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 669, 676–677, and see above, paras 45-104 et seq.

- 598.  Skipton Building Society v Stott [2001] Q.B. 261, 270–271; Alpstream AG v PK Airfinance Sarl [2015] EWCA Civ 1318, [2016] 2 P. & C.R. 2 at [115]–[118].
- 599. Barclays Bank Plc v Kingston [2006] EWHC 533, [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. at [29], per Stanley Burton J. cf. American Express International Banking Corp v Hurley [1985] 3 All E.R. 564 at 571 where Mann J. treated such an exclusion as “exclusion of liability for negligence” and Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co of Chicago v Papanicolaou (The Fedora) [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 441 at 444, where a clause which ruled out any “deductions or withholdings” by the guarantor was not treated as an exclusion of liability by the creditor as it did not prevent the guarantor later claiming independently against the creditor.
- 600. Barclays Bank Plc v Kingston [2006] EWHC 533 at [29].
- 601. See above, paras 45-064–45-068 and especially Liberty Mutual Insurance Co (UK) Ltd v HSBC Bank Plc [2002] EWCA Civ 691 at [56], above, para.45-067.
- 602. [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1410; and see also American Express International Banking Corp v Hurley [1985] 3 All E.R. 564.
- 603. [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1410, 1416, per Lord Denning M.R.
- 604.  [1990] 1 A.C. 536; Alpstream AG v PK Airfinance Sarl [2015] EWCA Civ 1318, [2016] 2 P. & C.R. 2 at [121]–[124].
- 605. Strange v Fooks (1863) 4 Giff. 408 (security lost by neglect of creditor to give notice of assignment of mortgage to trustees of settlement in which the debtor had an equitable interest); Wulff v Jay (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 756 (failure to enter and take possession of property under a mortgage when interest became due).
- 606. Wulff v Jay (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 756 (failure of creditor to register bill of sale).
- 607. China and South Sea Bank Ltd v Tan Soon Gin [1990] 1 A.C. 536, 545 and see White v Davenham Trust Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 747, [2011] Bus. L.R. 1443 at [38].
- 608. The Mutual Loan Association v Sudlow (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 449; Standard Chartered Bank v Walker [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1410; American Express International Banking Corp v Hurley [1985] 3 All E.R. 564; cf. Taylor v Bank of New South Wales (1886) 11 App. Cas. 596.
- 609. [1990] 1 A.C. 536, 545; Mahomed v Morris (No.2) [2001] B.C.C. 233 (no duty in secured creditor to consult debtor or surety before realising the charged assets).
- 610. Continental Illinois National Bank, etc. v Papanicolaou [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 441.
- 611. Continental Illinois National Bank, etc. v Papanicolaou [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 441, at 445, per Parker L.J.
- 612. [1990] 1 A.C. 536.
- 613. Standard Chartered Bank Ltd v Walker [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1410 at 1415; American Express International Banking Corp v Hurley [1985] 3 All E.R. 564; and cf. Cuckmere Brick Co Ltd v Mutual Finance Ltd [1971] Ch. 949, 966.
- 614. [1990] 1 A.C. 536, 543–544, per Lord Templeman; cf. Parker-Tweedale v Dunbar Bank Plc (No.1) [1991] Ch. 12; and AIB Finance v Debtors [1998] 2 All E.R. 929, 937 and Vol.I, para.1-178.

- 615. [2001] Q.B. 261.
- 616. [2001] Q.B. 261 at 265.
- 617. [2001] Q.B. 261 at 265.
- 618. ! On the general approach to the implication of terms, see Main Work, Vol.I, Ch.14. See also General Mediterranean Holding SA.SPF (aka General Mediterranean Holding SA) v Qucomhops Holdings Ltd [2017] EWHC 1409 (QB) (no implied term in principal contract that creditor should take a particular step in foreign court proceedings to protect security).
- 619. See especially, China and South Sea Bank Ltd v Tan Soon Gin [1990] 1 A.C. 536. cf. the rejection by the CA of implied term as the legal basis of the duty of disclosure in contracts of insurance in Banque Keyser Ullman SA v Skandia (UK) Insurance Co [1990] 1 Q.B. 665 (affirmed [1991] 2 A.C. 249) and see above, para.42-040.
- 620. Lombard North Central Plc v Nugent [2013] EWHC 1588 (QB) at [95]–[98] (no such breach on the facts). The general rule is stated in para.45-087.
- 621. [2013] EWHC 1588 (QB) at [53] and cf. above, para.45-077.
- 622. s.267–268. See also Re Salt [2011] EWHC 2105 (Ch) (no good reason in the circumstances for construing guarantee as implying that a statutory demand could not be made against a guarantor).
- 623. [2009] EWCA Civ 581, [2010] Bus. L.R. 119.
- 624. [2009] EWCA Civ 581 at [46], per Nicholls L.J., and see at [72] (Ward L.J.).
- 625. ! [2011] EWCA Civ 747, [2011] Bus. L.R. 1443; applied in Inbakumar v United Trust Bank Ltd [2012] EWHC 845 (Ch), [2012] B.P.I.R. 758.
- 626. China and South Sea Bank Ltd v Tan Soon Gin [1990] 1 A.C. 536, 545 above, para.45-121.
- 627. [2011] EWCA Civ 747 at [39], per Lloyd L.J
- 628. [2011] EWCA Civ 747 at [40] and see at [44].
- 629. ! SI 2016/1024.
- 630. ! The equivalent provisions are: 2016 Rules rr.10.5(5)(a), 10.5(5)(c) and 10.5(5)(d) replacing 1986 Rules rr.6.5(4)(a), 6.5(4)(c) and 6.5(4)(d) respectively.
- 631. (1854) 23 L.J. Ch. 434, 441.
- 632. Mansfield Union v Wright (1882) 9 Q.B.D. 683, 688.
- 633. Durham Corp v Fowler (1888) 22 Q.B.D. 394.
- 634. Black v Ottoman Bank (1862) 15 Moo. P.C. 472.
- 635. Bank of India v Trans Continental Commodity Merchants Ltd [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 298; Westpac Securities Ltd v Dickie [1991] 1 N.Z.L.R. 657; Socomex Ltd v Banque Bruxelles Lambert SA [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 156, 197–199; Dubai Islamic Bank PJSC v PSI Energy Holding Co BSC [2011] EWHC 2718 (Comm) at [37]–[43] and see Phillips (1990) J.B.L. 325.
- 636. cf. Hackney Empire Ltd v Aviva Insurance UK Ltd [2011] EWHC 2378 (TCC), [2011] B.L.R. 726 especially at [92] and [124] where the court “tentatively” recognised “the rule, if it is a rule” in General Steam Navigation Co v Rolt (1858) 6 C.B.(N.S.) 556 especially at 604–605 that where a creditor acts in a manner in relation to the principal contract which, whilst not amounting to an alteration of its terms, is prima facie prejudicial to the surety who has guaranteed the principal debtor's obligations under the contract, the surety will be discharged (absent any relevant indulgence clause), while holding that on the facts there was no such prima facie prejudicial conduct and so the guarantor was not discharged: [2011] EWHC 2378 (TCC) at [131] and [142]. On appeal, the Court of Appeal affirmed the decision below, but did not treat General Steam Navigation Co v Rolt as authority for a general proposition that creditor conduct prejudicial to the surety will discharge the surety, although it recognised a “common principle” underlying the categories of case where the surety will be discharged to the effect “that the creditor must not transact the surety's affairs without consulting him”: [2012] EWCA Civ 1716, [2013] B.L.R. 57 at [70], per Jackson L.J. It is submitted that Rolt's case itself can be seen as an example of early payment of instalments being treated as analogous to release of security (“the withdrawal of a fund which is a security for the thing in respect of the not doing of which [the surety] is now called upon to pay damages”: (1858) 6 C.B.(N.S.) 556 especially 604–605, per Pollock C.B.), on which see above, para.45-118), or as a case of variation of the principal contract (as per its head-note and (1858) 6 C.B.(N.S.) 556 especially at 595, Cockburn C.J. referring to “the alteration of the contract for the performance of which he consented to be bound”).

637. See above, para.45-121.

638. Hull Corp v Harding [1892] 2 Q.B. 494; Barclays Bank Ltd v Thienel (1978) 242 E.G. 385; Latchford v Beiren [1981] 3 All E.R. 705; China and South Sea Bank Ltd v Tan Soon Gin [1990] 1 A.C. 536.

639. (1988) reported [1992] 4 All E.R. 363.

640.  Dunbar Assets Plc v Butler [2015] EWHC 2546 (Ch), [2015] B.P.I.R. 1358. On this doctrine generally see Vol.I, paras 3-085 et seq.

641.  Dunbar Assets Plc v Butler [2015] EWHC 2546 (Ch) at [49]–[50].

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 45 - Suretyship

Section 7. - Surety's Right to Indemnity and Contribution

Surety's right to indemnity against principal debtor ⁶⁴²

45-125

! A surety who has actually met the liability which he has undertaken to answer for is entitled to be indemnified by the principal debtor; and if he alone is sued by the creditor he can bring in the debtor by a Pt 20 claim (the third-party procedure). ⁶⁴³ Where the surety has undertaken his liability at the request, express or implied, of the debtor, this right to an indemnity may be said to arise in one of two ways ⁶⁴⁴; that is, either from an implied actual contract between surety and debtor, ⁶⁴⁵ or it may be said to be a restitutionary remedy arising from the fact that the surety has been compelled by law to discharge a debt for which the debtor is ultimately liable. ⁶⁴⁶

Payment without request

45-126

! Where the surety's liability does not arise from any request by the debtor ⁶⁴⁷ his right to an indemnity must, it seems, be placed on the law of restitution or unjust enrichment. However, in Owen v Tate ⁶⁴⁸ it was held that a right of indemnity is not normally available to a person who has assumed or discharged the liability of another, without any antecedent request of that other. Such a right may arise exceptionally where the claimant has assumed (or paid) the debtor's obligation under some practical necessity, and it is in all the circumstances just and reasonable that he should be indemnified. But it is not clear if the debtor can take the benefit of the payment by the third party without coming under a liability to him. ⁶⁴⁹ It is also not entirely clear whether Owen v Tate can be reconciled with the general principle that, wherever two persons are liable for the same debt, and as between them, one of them is primarily liable, that party is liable to indemnify the other if the other meets the liability. This broad principle, which is known as the principle of Moule v Garrett, ⁶⁵⁰ is apparently that which underlies the third case referred to by Lord Selborne in Duncan Fox & Co v North & South Wales Bank ⁶⁵¹ and has been applied in two decisions at first instance to give an indemnity to a lessee who had assigned the lease, not only against the assignee, but also against a surety for the assignee. ⁶⁵² One possible reconciliation of these decisions with Owen v Tate ⁶⁵³ may be made by reference to the purpose of its requirement of a request, which is to exclude from restitutionary relief a person who has officiously exposed himself to the liability to make payment. ⁶⁵⁴

! It has been convincingly argued that the requirement of a request has been more broadly interpreted than is necessary to effect this purpose. ⁶⁵⁵ ! In the case of a lessee's rights against a guarantor of the assignee of the lease, the payer (lessee) has not officiously exposed himself to liability to pay the rent and, even though he cannot be said to have paid at the guarantor's request, he should not on that ground alone be excluded from recovery: both the transaction of assignment and guarantee took as their assumption the existence of the lessee's obligations and also assumed that, to use the expression in Moule v Garrett, ⁶⁵⁶ as between the lessee and the guarantor, the latter's would be the primary or ultimate liability. ⁶⁵⁷

Payment under unenforceable guarantee

45-127

The surety's right to an indemnity is not affected by the fact that the liability which he has discharged was not enforceable against him because of the absence of a written note or memorandum,⁶⁵⁸ nor that the liability was not enforceable against the debtor because of an infringement of the Consumer Credit Act.⁶⁵⁹ This result has been supported on the ground that the prima facie construction of the debtor's request for an indemnity is: "'Pay if I do not,' and [not]: 'Pay if I do not and if I am legally compellable to pay'." ⁶⁶⁰ On the other hand, it has been held that if the surety pays a statute-barred debt he has no right to an indemnity.⁶⁶¹

Presumption of advancement inapplicable45-128

A surety may, of course, agree that he is not to have any right to be indemnified by the debtor, but a husband who has guaranteed his wife's overdraft will not generally be prevented from recovering an indemnity by an application of the presumption of advancement.⁶⁶²

When right to indemnity arises45-129

Prima facie the surety's right to an indemnity arises only on actual payment by him,⁶⁶³ though if he pays before the principal debt becomes due he will have no right to be indemnified until the debtor could have been sued by the creditor.⁶⁶⁴ Thus until actual payment by the surety, no debt is due to him from the debtor.⁶⁶⁵ Similarly, it has been held that a right to an indemnity (at least a general indemnity, for example, an indemnity against legal liability arising from specified events) does not arise until the person entitled to the indemnity is called upon to pay the principal claim and it is ascertained. Hence the limitation period under such an indemnity agreement does not begin to run until that time.⁶⁶⁶ This has also been applied to an implied general indemnity, as where charterers are liable to indemnify shipowners for liability on bills of lading signed by the ship's master.⁶⁶⁷ But it seems that the position is different where the indemnity arises out of an express contract which creates a right to an indemnity on a liability "arising". In such a case the time for limitation purposes will run from the date when the right to an indemnity arises.⁶⁶⁸ So also, it seems that where the right to an indemnity arises by way of a claim to damages for breach of contract, the limitation period would run from the date of the breach, and not later.

Amount of indemnity45-130

A surety is in principle entitled to be indemnified for monies paid to the creditor in respect of the principal debtor's liabilities. The question arises, though, whether such an indemnity may include recovery in respect of expenses (notably, legal expenses) incurred by a surety as a result of his liability to the creditor under the contract of suretyship. In this respect, it has been stated that in order to be recoverable from the principal debtor the legal costs in question must have been caused by the default of the principal debtor.⁶⁶⁹ Therefore, a "surety is entitled to be reimbursed as to the costs reasonably incurred by him in investigating the validity and quantum of the creditor's claim against the principal debtor", ⁶⁷⁰ but any entitlement to the costs of investigating the enforceability of the guarantee is "more doubtful", as they appear to be incurred for the benefit of the surety alone.⁶⁷¹

Surety's right to indemnity in cases of contracts of indemnity45-131

There does not appear to be any explicit authority on the surety's right to an indemnity where he is himself liable to the creditor under a contract of indemnity as opposed to a contract of guarantee, but equally there does not appear to be any reason to doubt that such a right usually exists. Prima facie, if the contract of indemnity were entered into at the request of the debtor, there seems no reason why the surety should not be entitled to an indemnity from the debtor on the normal principle that any person who does something involving him in legal liability at the request of another is entitled to be indemnified by that other. ⁶⁷² And this would presumably remain the case even where the surety's liability is wider than that imposed on the debtor under the principal transaction. But special considerations would obviously apply where the principal debtor was a minor. ⁶⁷³ If, on the other hand, the contract of indemnity was entered into without any request by the debtor, then (as seen above) ⁶⁷⁴ there would be no relationship of principal and surety at all between the debtor and the party liable under the indemnity. In such circumstances the party liable under the indemnity could only claim subrogation or restitutionary rights against the debtor, and the debtor's liability would probably be limited by the terms of the original transaction.

Arrangements between principal debtor and guarantor incompatible with guarantor's right of indemnity

45-132

A guarantor is not entitled to an indemnity by way of restitution from a principal debtor where these same parties contemplated that, as between themselves, only the principal debtor would bear a primary liability to the creditor. In Berghoff Trading Ltd v Swinbrook Developments Ltd ⁶⁷⁵ the partners (A) in a Scottish partnership (B) entered a contract as "guarantors" and "obligors" of the partnership which had been lent money by a bank (C) as part of a wider arrangement under which the partners had sold their interests. The interests were later sold to third parties under a "forced sale" by the bank under a power of attorney, and the loan paid out of the proceeds of sale directly to the bank. ⁶⁷⁶ According to Rix L.J. (with whom Sir Anthony Clarke M.R. and Arden L.J. agreed):

"From beginning to end of the arrangement ... it was always contemplated and expressly provided for that the loan ... would be paid out of the proceeds of sale, directly to the bank's own account. Since the proceeds would come from the sale of [A's] partnership interest in [B], it would follow that the loan would be repaid by [A], not by [B]. This therefore is not the normal situation where a guarantor's right of indemnification or reimbursement from the principal debtor is designed to ensure that the guarantor does not lose out merely from the choice of the creditor as to the source of his payment. This is not the normal situation where as between a principal debtor and his guarantor it is agreed or understood that the debt is only that of the former and that if the guarantor is called upon to pay, he will be reimbursed. This is an entirely special case where, from beginning to end, the funds with which to repay the loan were to come from [A]." ⁶⁷⁷

In these circumstances, the Court of Appeal held that, in the absence of express agreement between A and B to the contrary, A (as guarantor) had no reasonable prospect of success in establishing a claim to an indemnity in respect of its discharge of the debt owed by B (the principal debtor) to C (as creditor). ⁶⁷⁸

Surety's rights before payment

45-133

Even before he makes payment the surety has certain potential or inchoate rights against the principal debtor which may have important practical consequences. Thus it has already been seen that if the creditor prejudices these rights, the surety may be discharged from liability. ⁶⁷⁹ And in exceptional circumstances these potential rights may justify the principal debtor in taking appropriate steps to prevent the creditor from enforcing the guarantee against the surety. ⁶⁸⁰ Moreover, as soon as the surety's liability to the creditor arises in the sense that it is currently enforceable, the surety has a right that the debtor should meet the liability. The surety can enforce this right by suing in a quia timet action for a declaration that he is entitled to be exonerated and an order that the debtor pay whatever is due to the creditor. ⁶⁸¹ The court cannot order the debtor to pay the money to the surety for this would not discharge the debtor's liability to the creditor, but it can order him to pay the money to the creditor. ⁶⁸² Such a quia timet action can be brought even if there is no particular fund which can be protected by the court's order. ⁶⁸³ It is immaterial that the creditor has not yet demanded payment, or indeed, that he is unlikely to do so in the immediate future, ⁶⁸⁴ even though the surety's liability is expressly conditioned on a demand ⁶⁸⁵; but the amount must be due in the sense that the creditor could proceed against the surety forthwith. ⁶⁸⁶ It is uncertain whether the surety can proceed in this way before payment where there is no contract of suretyship as against the debtor, i.e. where the surety has guaranteed the debt at the request of the creditor and not at the request of the debtor. On principle it would seem not, for in this event the surety's rights arise only by way of subrogation or by way of a claim to restitution, either of which would seem to require actual payment by the surety. These inchoate rights of a party entitled to an indemnity do not generally result in time commencing to run under the Limitation Act. ⁶⁸⁷

Surety's rights against bankrupt debtor

45-134

Complex problems sometimes arise in connection with the surety's right to indemnity when the debtor has been adjudicated bankrupt. The Supreme Court has held that, so long as a creditor had not been paid in full, a surety could not compete with the creditor either directly, by proving against the principal debtor for an indemnity, or indirectly, by setting off his right to an indemnity against any separate debt owed by the surety to the principal debtor. ⁶⁸⁸ This position reflects the well-established principle in bankruptcy that there cannot be double proof in respect of the same liability in the same estate. ⁶⁸⁹ If the surety discharges the whole liability the creditor has no further interest, and the surety is entitled to prove in the debtor's bankruptcy. It has already been seen that if the surety discharges part of the liability, his right to prove against the bankrupt debtor depends on whether he has guaranteed the whole debt, or whether he has only guaranteed part. ⁶⁹⁰

Surety's right to contribution from co-sureties ⁶⁹¹

45-135

⚠ It is an old rule of equity that a surety is entitled to contribution from his co-sureties so that none of them should be required, as between themselves, to pay more than his due share. ⁶⁹² The rules of equity continue to apply to claims for contribution between codebtors; but they have been superseded by the Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978 in respect of claims between sureties arising out of a liability for damage as opposed to debt. An example of where a surety would be liable for damage may be found in a case where he guaranteed a seller's liability in respect of goods sold, but where the goods caused damage to the buyer's other property. Similarly, where (as is prima facie the case) ⁶⁹³ a contract of suretyship guarantees performance by the principal debtor of its payment obligations, the surety is liable in damages rather than in debt to the creditor; whereas, where a surety agrees to pay to the creditor whatever the principal debtor owes to the creditor, then the surety is liable in debt rather than in damages. ⁶⁹⁴ This means that in the former, but not the latter circumstances, a claim by a surety for contribution from a co-surety will be governed by the two-year limitation period imposed by s.10 of the Limitation Act 1980. ⁶⁹⁵ The main features of the statutory right to contribution have been dealt with in an earlier chapter. ⁶⁹⁶ The equitable right to contribution arises whether the sureties are joint, joint and several, or several; and whether they are liable on the same or different instruments. ⁶⁹⁷ And one surety has a right to contribution from another even though he did not know of the other's existence at the time he gave his guarantee. The one essential is that the sureties must all be liable in respect of the same debt or liability. ⁶⁹⁸ There will, however, be no right of contribution where one surety is a guarantor for another surety. ⁶⁹⁹ In this event the second surety is only liable to the extent that the first surety does not pay, so that on payment by the first the second is discharged; conversely if the second surety is called upon to pay he will have a right of indemnity (and not merely contribution) against the first surety, for the first surety is in the position of a principal debtor in this case. The right to contribution may, of course, be excluded or modified by express contract. ⁷⁰⁰ For example, if a third party guarantees a bill of exchange for the benefit of a bank which discounts it, the normal understanding will be that the surety guarantees that payment will be made by one or other of the parties to the bill who are liable on it, whether as acceptor, or drawer or indorser. It will not be the normal understanding that the surety intends to place himself on a level with the drawer. So where bills were guaranteed and, on default by the acceptor, were paid by the drawer, it was held that the drawer had no claim for contribution against the surety. ⁷⁰¹

Right of contribution in cases of contracts of indemnity

45-136

It is uncertain how far equitable rights of contribution exist between parties liable under contracts of indemnity, as opposed to contracts of guarantee, or where one is liable under a contract of guarantee and another is liable under a contract of indemnity. ⁷⁰² Where all are liable under contracts of indemnity there seems no reason why contribution should not be ordered on similar principles to those governing contribution between insurers. ⁷⁰³ But where one person is liable under a guarantee and another under a contract of indemnity it is difficult to see how contribution could be ordered if only because the latter may be a more extensive liability than the former. However, if the liability of the sureties is a liability for damage as opposed to debt, then contribution will always be recoverable in principle under the Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978 s.1.

Amount of contribution

45-137

The equitable rule is that prima facie all sureties are required as between themselves to contribute to the liability equally and if one of them receives any security from the creditor on discharging his liability, the security must, as between the sureties, be brought into account. ⁷⁰⁴ If the security is worth more than the amount paid by the one surety, but less than the amount paid by all the sureties together, it must be apportioned equally between them. ⁷⁰⁵

Effect of insolvency of one co-surety

45-138

At common law, the amount of contribution to which a co-surety was entitled depended on the number of sureties originally liable. So that if there were three sureties and one of them paid the whole debt, he could not recover more than a third from a second surety even though the third surety was insolvent. ⁷⁰⁶ But in equity the amount of contribution depends on the number of solvent sureties at the time when contribution is sought, ⁷⁰⁷ so that in the above case contribution of half the debt could be ordered, and the equitable rule now prevails. ⁷⁰⁸

Sureties liable for different amounts

45-139

If the sureties are not liable for the whole of the amount due from the principal debtor, and they are liable for different amounts, then the equitable rule is that contribution will be ordered so that in the result they will pay in proportion to the maximum liability which each assumed. Thus if one surety is liable up to a maximum of £50 and another up to a maximum of £25, contribution will be ordered between them so as to leave the liability in the proportion of two to one. ⁷⁰⁹

Set-off between sureties

45-140

If the co-sureties run accounts together, the general rule is that a surety may set-off any monies owing against a claim for contribution by his co-surety. However, if the creditor's claim against the sureties is secured by a charge, then the surety's subrogated claim to contribution is also secured and not subject to set-off. ⁷¹⁰

Contribution where liable for same damage

45-141

The right of contribution under the Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978 s.1 is entirely dependent on the discretion of the court to order such contribution as "may be found by the court to be just and equitable having regard to the extent of that person's responsibility for the damage in question". ⁷¹¹ Consequently, contribution under the Act need not be based on the principle of equality of treatment among the sureties but may have regard to wider considerations.

Enforcement of right to contribution

45-142

Prima facie the equitable right to contribution arises only when one surety has actually paid more than his due share. So, for example, where there are two sureties equally liable, and one paid half the debt, but the other was not called on to pay anything by the creditor, the former was held not to be entitled to contribution. ⁷¹² But where the liability guaranteed is a debt payable in instalments, one surety cannot claim contribution from another merely because he has paid more than his share of some of the instalments; he must wait until all the instalments have been paid. ⁷¹³ The position might be different if separate debts were involved, or even if each instalment created a separate and distinct liability. ⁷¹⁴ As with the surety's right to an indemnity, ⁷¹⁵ the surety may be able to take steps to enforce his potential right to contribution even before he has paid anything. Thus a surety who has had judgment given against him for the full amount of the liability may obtain a prospective order directing a co-surety on payment by the surety of his own share, to indemnify him against further liability and if the principal creditor is a party to the proceedings, the surety can obtain an order directing the co-surety to pay his share directly to the creditor. ⁷¹⁶ The principal debtor should normally be made a party to any proceedings for contribution unless it is plain that no useful purpose would be served by doing so, for example, because he is manifestly insolvent. ⁷¹⁷ The statutory right to contribution does not appear to be limited in the same way as the equitable right, ⁷¹⁸ so contribution in respect of liability for damage may be sought even prior to payment but no doubt the court will protect the position of the paying surety by appropriate orders.

Surety's right to securities held by creditor

45-143

A surety who pays the creditor is subrogated to the creditor's rights against the debtor. ⁷¹⁹ This means, inter alia, that he is entitled to the benefit of all securities belonging to the debtor and charged with the liability which the surety has been called upon to meet. ⁷²⁰ This right extends to securities given to the creditor after the contract of suretyship was entered into. ⁷²¹ As in the case of the right to indemnity and contribution, this right does not arise until actual payment by the surety; but (also as in those cases) the surety's potential right to the securities is recognised and protected even before payment. Thus, as already seen, any release of securities by the creditor may discharge the surety. ⁷²² Furthermore, if the creditor makes further advances to the debtor (for which the surety is not liable) on the same security as the original guaranteed loan, the creditor will be postponed, in respect of these advances, to the surety. ⁷²³ Thus, the surety may, on paying off the original debt, require the securities to be transferred to him to satisfy his right to an indemnity in priority to the creditor's later rights. ⁷²⁴ But where the debtor became bankrupt and the creditor released a security to the trustee in bankruptcy who sold it, it was held that a surety had no equitable charge on the property before payment such as might have justified complaint on the ground that the sale had been made at an undervalue. ⁷²⁵ Prima facie it is not to be expected that the surety should be entitled to recover more than an indemnity by claiming securities or pursuing other subrogation rights, and any surplus must be paid over to the principal debtor.⁷²⁶ Very clear words would be required to exclude or modify the principal debtor's rights in this respect.⁷²⁷ As has been seen,⁷²⁸ if the creditor's claim against the surety is secured by a charge, then the surety's subrogated claim to contribution is also secured and not subject to set-off.⁷²⁹

Mercantile Law Amendment Act 1856 s.5

45-144

The surety's right to securities is reinforced by s.5 of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act 1856 which declares that the surety is entitled to have assigned to him "every judgment, specialty or other security which shall be held by the creditor" in respect of the debt.⁷³⁰ Under this section it has been held that it is unnecessary that the surety should actually take an assignment of a judgment against the debtor,⁷³¹ but he cannot enforce such a judgment without permission of the court.⁷³² The section in effect gives a surety who has paid the guaranteed debt an additional right (both against the debtor and against the co-sureties) to be treated as a statutory assignee of the creditor, and in some respects this right may be wider than his right to indemnity and contribution. For example, a surety who has paid a debt can prove in the bankruptcy of a co-surety for the whole debt though he cannot actually recover more than his due share.⁷³³

Surety who has paid in same position as creditor

45-145

The effect of the equitable principles discussed above and of s.5 of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act 1856 is that in general the surety is, on payment of the debt, in the same position as the creditor himself. Thus, a surety who has paid a Crown debt is entitled to the Crown rights of priority in the bankruptcy of the principal debtor.⁷³⁴ And a surety paying a debt which has preference under s.386 of the Insolvency Act 1986 is also entitled to the same priority as the original creditor.⁷³⁵ But there may be some rights of the principal creditor which are so personal that they do not pass to the surety. It has been held, for example, that the right of a finance company to seize goods let on hire-purchase does not pass to the surety on the ground that it is a "personal right".⁷³⁶ But this decision is hard to understand for the right to seize the goods is merely an incident of the title to the goods and this would seem plainly to pass to the surety under s.5 of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, though no mention of the section was made in this case.⁷³⁷

^{642.} See Goff and Jones, The Law of Unjust Enrichment, 9th edn (2016), paras 19-16–19-21.

^{643.} CPR Pt 20 r.5.

^{644.} See Anson v Anson [1953] 1 Q.B. 636, 641–643.

^{645.} Re a Debtor [1937] Ch. 156.

^{646.} Moule v Garrett (1872) L.R. 7 Ex. 101, 104; Brook's Wharf v Goodman Brothers [1937] 1 K.B. 534. A third possibility is to treat the right as arising by way of subrogation, but this would require proceedings to be brought in the name of the creditor. At times it may be important to distinguish between a surety's right to an indemnity and any right of the creditor against the principal debtor which the surety may enjoy by way of subrogation: e.g. Re Empire Paper Ltd (In Liquidation) [1999] B.C.C. 406 (compromise agreement preserved "any subrogated claims").

^{647.} See Vol.I, para.29-119.

^{648.} [1976] Q.B. 402; The Zuhul K [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 151; and see Birks and Beatson, The Use and Abuse of Unjust Enrichment (1991), Ch.7.

- 649. See generally Birks and Beatson, The Use and Abuse of Unjust Enrichment (1991).
- 650. (1872) L.R. 7 Ex. 101 and See Vol.I, paras 29-105 et seq.
- 651. (1880) 6 App. Cas. 1, 11, 12.
- 652. Selous Street Properties Ltd v Oronel Fabrics Ltd (1984) 270 E.G. 643; Becton Dickinson Ltd v Zwebner [1989] Q.B. 208.
- 653. [1976] Q.B. 402.
- 654.  Goff and Jones, The Law of Restitution, 7th edn (2007), pp.430–432 et seq. (this point not being addressed by the 9th edn) cf. Burrows, The Law of Restitution, 3rd edn (2010), pp.449–452.
- 655.  Goff and Jones, The Law of Restitution, 7th edn (2007) p.431. cf. Goff and Jones, The Law of Unjust Enrichment, 9th edn (2016), para.20-02 which states that it is not “automatically fatal that [a claimant's] liability to the third party was voluntarily assumed without any prior request from the defendant: this is merely one factor which may bear on the court's decision whether to allow a claim”.
- 656. (1872) L.R. 7 Ex. 101.
- 657. Becton Dickinson Ltd v Zwebner [1989] Q.B. 208 at 217–218; and see Kumar v Dunning [1989] Q.B. 193, 201.
- 658. Alexander v Vane (1836) 1 M. & W. 511.
- 659. Re Chetwynd's Estate [1938] Ch. 13 (decided under the Moneylenders Acts, which were repealed from May 19, 1985, by the Consumer Credit Act 1974).
- 660. Argo Caribbean Group Ltd v Lewis [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 288, 295, per curiam. But it was suggested (at 295–296) that if the debtor cancels the indemnitor's instructions to pay the debt, there will no longer be a right of indemnity. This presumably would only be so if the indemnitor is not contractually bound to the creditor.
- 661. Coneys v Morris [1922] 1 Ir.R. 81.
- 662. Re Salisbury-Jones [1938] 3 All E.R. 459; Anson v Anson [1953] 1 Q.B. 636.
- 663. Re Richardson [1911] 2 K.B. 705; Re Beavan [1913] 2 Ch. 595.
- 664. Drager v Allison, 19 D.L.R. (2d) 31 (1959).
- 665. Re Mitchell [1913] 1 Ch. 201; Re Fenton [1931] Ch. 85; Re a Debtor [1956] 1 W.L.R. 1226.
- 666. R & H Green & Silley Weir Ltd v British Rys Board (1980) reported [1985] 1 W.L.R. 570.
- 667. Telfair Shipping Corp v Inersea Carriers SA [1985] 1 W.L.R. 553.
- 668. Bosma v Larsen [1966] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 22; followed in National House-Building Council v Fraser [1983] 1 All E.R. 1090. cf. City of London v Reeve & Co Ltd [2000] C.P. Rep. 73 at [30] (question when cause of action on a contractual indemnity arises an issue of construction) and see Vol.I, para.28-049.
- 669. Re Empire Paper Ltd (In Liquidation) [1999] B.C.C. 406, 412; citing Howard v Lovegrove (1870) 6 Exch. 43; and Pierce v Williams (1854) 23 L.J. Ex. 322, 323.

- 670. Re Empire Paper Ltd (In Liquidation) [1999] B.C.C. 406, 412, per Stanley Burnton Q.C. (the report adds “and himself” but this is belied by what follows).
- 671. Re Empire Paper Ltd (In Liquidation) [1999] B.C.C. 406.
- 672. Sheffield Corp v Barclay [1905] A.C. 392.
- 673. Thus the defendant in Yeoman Credit Ltd v Latter [1961] 1 W.L.R. 828 could hardly have obtained an indemnity from the minor hire-purchaser.
- 674. See above, para.45-005.
- 675. [2009] EWCA Civ 413.
- 676. [2009] EWCA Civ 413 at [34].
- 677. [2009] EWCA Civ 413 at [34].
- 678. [2009] EWCA Civ 413 at [35].
- 679. See above, paras 45-117—45-124.
- 680. Elian and Rabbath v Matsas and Matsas [1966] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 495. In this case an injunction was granted to prevent the creditor going to arbitration. Presumably, if he sues, the debtor could ask for a stay of proceedings under s.49(3) of the Senior Courts Act 1981. The exceptional nature of the Elian case was stressed in Howe Richardson Scale Co Ltd v Polimex-Cekop [1978] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 161, 165.
- 681. Wolmershausen v Gullick [1893] 2 Ch. 514, 528; Ascherson v Tredegar Dock, etc. Co Ltd [1909] 2 Ch. 401.
- 682. Wolmershausen v Gullick [1893] 2 Ch. 514, 528; Ascherson v Tredegar Dock, etc. Co Ltd [1909] 2 Ch. 401.
- 683. Watt v Mortlock [1964] Ch. 84.
- 684. Re Anderson-Berry [1928] Ch. 290.
- 685. Thomas v Notts Incorporated Football Club Ltd [1972] Ch. 596.
- 686. Tate v Crewdon [1938] Ch. 869; Morrison v Barking Chemicals Co [1919] 2 Ch. 325.
- 687. cf. above, para.45-129.
- 688. In Re Kaupthing Singer & Friedlander Ltd (In Administration) (No.2) [2011] UKSC 48, [2011] 3 W.L.R. 939 especially at [12], [53]–[54], [55]. As a result, the SC held that “rule in Cherry v Boulton” which was described as “a simple technique of netting-off reciprocal monetary obligations” (at [8], per Lord Walker of Gestingthorpe J.S.C.) as well as statutory set-off was ousted by the policy of the law underlying the rule against double proof: [2011] UKSC 48 at [48], [53] and [55].
- 689. In Re Kaupthing Singer & Friedlander Ltd (In Administration) (No.2) [2011] UKSC 48 at [11]–[12]; Re Oriental Commercial Bank (1871) L.R. 7 Ch. App. 99; Re Fenton [1931] 1 Ch. 85; Re Glen Express Ltd [2000] B.P.I.R. 456.
- 690. See above, para.45-078.
- 691. See Goff and Jones, The Law of Unjust Enrichment, 9th edn (2016), paras 19-9–19.13.
- 692. Dering v Earl of Winchelsea (1787) 2 B. & P. 270.

- 693. Moschi v Lep Air Services [1973] A.C. 331.
- 694. Hampton v Minns [2002] 1 W.L.R. 1. cf. the position under the Insolvency Act 1986 as regards a principal debtor's liability for a "liquidated sum" as explained in McGuiness v Norwich and Peterborough Building Society [2011] EWCA Civ 1286, [2012] B.P.I.R. 145 above, para.45-073.
- 695. Hampton v Minns [2002] 1 W.L.R. 1 at 28. Where the claim is for debt the appropriate period has been said to be six years by analogy with the Limitation Act 1980 s.5: [2002] 1 W.L.R. 1 at 33.
- 696. See Vol.I, paras 17-029 et seq.
- 697. Re Ennis [1893] 3 Ch. 238.
- 698. Coope v Twynam (1823) 1 T. & R. 426; Ellis v Emmanuel (1876) 1 Ex. D. 157, 162; and see Frydman Properties v Bejam (1987) C.L.Y. 1841; Stimpson v Smith [1999] Ch. 340.
- 699. Craythorne v Swinburne (1807) 14 Ves. 160; Re Denton's Estate [1904] 2 Ch. 178.
- 700. Pendlebury v Walker (1841) 4 Y. & C.Ex. 424; Re Ennis [1893] 3 Ch. 238; Arcedeckne v Howard (1875) 45 L.J. Ch. 622; Stimpson v Smith, above at 348. It has been assumed that such a modification may be made by implied term: Hampton v Minns [2002] 1 W.L.R. 1 at 16-17; Marsden v Elston [2001] EWCA Civ 1746. To the extent that such an exclusion affects a "business liability", the exclusion may be subject to a test of reasonableness under the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 s.3 (on which, see Vol.I, paras 15-084—15-087). It may also be affected by the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/2083) or Consumer Rights Act 2015 Pt 2, on which see generally above, paras 38-201 et seq. and see below, paras 45-155 et seq.
- 701. Scholefield Goodman & Sons Ltd v Zyngier [1986] A.C. 562; Caledonia North Sea Ltd v British Telecommunications Plc [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 553, 566-567.
- 702. This situation could well arise where a hire-purchase contract is guaranteed by a surety, and the dealer also enters into a "recourse agreement" under which he agrees to indemnify the finance company against any loss.
- 703. See above, para.42-117.
- 704. Steel v Dixon (1881) 17 Ch. D. 825. cf. Official Trustee in Bankruptcy v Citibank Savings Ltd [1999] B.P.I.R. 754 Sup Ct NSW (wider equitable considerations relevant to amount of contribution between co-sureties).
- 705. Berridge v Berridge (1890) 44 Ch. D. 168.
- 706. Browne v Lee (1827) 6 B. & C. 689.
- 707. Peter v Rich (1830) 1 Ch. Cas. 19, 34.
- 708. Lowe v Dixon (1885) 16 Q.B.D. 455.
- 709. Ellesmere Brewery Co v Cooper [1896] 1 Q.B. 75; Re Denton's Estate [1903] 2 Ch. 670.
- 710. Brown v Cork (1986) P.C.C. 78.
- 711. Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978 s.2(1).
- 712. Davies v Humphreys (1840) 6 M. & W. 153; see also Ex p. Snowdon (1881) 17 Ch. D. 44.
- 713. Stirling v Burdett [1911] 2 Ch. 418.

- 714. Stirling v Burdett, above, at 429.
- 715. See above, para.45-125.
- 716. Wolmershausen v Gullick [1893] 2 Ch. 514. For form of order, see Kent v Abrahams [1928] W.N. 266.
- 717. Hay v Carter [1935] Ch. 397.
- 718. See s.1(1) of the Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978.
- 719. Hodgson v Shaw (1834) 3 My. & K. 183, 190-191.
- 720. It is uncertain whether Quennell v Maltby [1979] 1 W.L.R. 318 illustrates any general principle limiting rights of subrogation where a debt is discharged for some ulterior purpose.
- 721. Forbes v Jackson (1882) 19 Ch. D. 615.
- 722. See above, para.45-118.
- 723. Forbes v Jackson (1882) 19 Ch. D. 615.
- 724. Forbes v Jackson (1882) 19 Ch. D. 615; Craythorne v Swinburne (1807) 14 Ves. 160, 162, 169; Liberty Mutual Insurance Co (UK) Ltd v HSBC Bank Plc [2002] EWCA Civ 691 at [43].
- 725. Pratt's Trustee v Pratt [1936] 3 All E.R. 901.
- 726. L Lucas Ltd v Export Credits Guarantee Department [1974] 1 W.L.R. 909.
- 727. L Lucas Ltd v Export Credits Guarantee Department [1974] 1 W.L.R. 909, at 922.
- 728. See above, para.45-140.
- 729. Brown v Cork (1986) P.C.C. 78.
- 730. This provision was introduced to overcome the logical problem that on payment by the surety, the principal debtor's debt was discharged and the creditor's rights thereby extinguished: for this effect, see Hodgson v Shaw (1834) 3 My. K. 183 at 191.
- 731. Re M'Myn (1886) 33 Ch. D. 575; Batchellor v Lawrence (1861) 9 C.B.(N.S.) 543.
- 732. CPR Pt 50.1, Sch.1 r.46.2; and see Kayley v Hothersall [1925] 1 K.B. 607.
- 733. Re Parker [1894] 3 Ch. 400; and see Brown v Cork (1986) P.C.C. 78.
- 734. Re Lord Churchill (1888) 39 Ch. D. 174; and see R. v Fay (1878) 4 L.R.Ir. 606.
- 735. Re Lamplugh Iron Ore Co Ltd [1927] 1 Ch. 308; cf. Re Walters' Deed of Guarantee [1933] Ch. 321 (both decided under earlier legislation).
- 736. Chatterton v Maclean [1951] 1 All E.R. 761, 766.
- 737. However, the case was cited without disapproval in the decision of the House of Lords in Moschi v Lep Air Services Ltd [1973] A.C. 331.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 45 - Suretyship

Section 8. - Legislative Protection of Sureties

Introduction

45-146

⚠ Contracts of guarantee and indemnity have not been the object of general legislative intervention, unlike, for example, contracts of sale of goods ⁷³⁸ or of consumer credit, ⁷³⁹ but they have been subject to more general legislative controls on the parties' freedom of contract, such as those created by the Misrepresentation Act 1967 and the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 as regards exemption clauses. Moreover, most clauses in consumer contracts of suretyship may be subject to a general test of unfairness under the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 ⁷⁴⁰ or, for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015, Pt 2 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. ⁷⁴¹ ⚠ And as has been noted, contracts of guarantee (which for this purpose include certain contracts of indemnity) relating to consumer credit agreements and to consumer hire agreements may be affected by the special requirements of the Consumer Credit Act 1974. ⁷⁴² Finally, a "consumer surety" may be protected by the preventive measures against unfair commercial practices put in place by the Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2008, but will not benefit from the new rights to redress for consumers introduced by amendment of these regulations in 2014. ⁷⁴³

^{738.} Sale of Goods Act 1979; and see above, paras 44-001 et seq. See also the special provisions governing consumer sales contracts in Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015, above, paras 38-431 et seq.

^{739.} Consumer Credit Act 1974; and see above, paras 39-335 et seq.

^{740.} SI 1999/2083 implementing in UK law Council Directive 93/13 of April 5, 1993, [1993] O.J. L95/29.

^{741.} ⚠ On the temporal application of the Consumer Rights Act 2015, see above, para.38-335 (as amended by this Supplement). Under earlier law, EU and UK legislation governing "off-premises contracts" could apply to contracts of suretyship: see Bayerische Hypotheken-und Wechselbank AG v Dietzinger (C-45/96) [1998] E.C.R. I-1199, so interpreting Directive 85/577 of December 20, 1985 to protect the consumer in respect of contracts negotiated away from business premises [1985] O.J. L372/31, which was implemented in UK law by the Cancellation of Contracts made in a Consumer's Home or Place of Work, etc. Regulations 2008 (SI 2008/1816). However, Directive 85/577 was repealed and replaced by Directive 2011/83/EU on consumer rights O.J. L304/64, art.3(3)(d) of which excludes from its scope "contracts for financial services" and this exclusion was reflected on the directive's implementation in the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013 (SI 2013/3134) reg.6(1)(b) (excluding from their scope "services of a banking, credit, insurance, personal pension, investment or payment nature"). The question whether a contract of suretyship made by a consumer surety would fall within this exclusion and therefore outside the requirements of the 2013 Regulations is considered above, paras 38-074, 38-078 and 38-083.

- 742. See above, paras 39-180 et seq. On the other hand, the ECJ held that contracts of suretyship do not themselves fall within Directive 87/102 of December 12, 1986 concerning consumer credit even where neither the principal debtor nor the surety are acting in the course of their trade, business or profession: Berliner Kindl Brauerei AG v Andreas Siepert (C-208/1998) [2000] E.C.R. I-1741.
- 743. Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2008 (SI 2008/1277). The amendments were made by the Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2014 (SI 2014/870).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 45 - Suretyship

Section 8. - Legislative Protection of Sureties

(a) - Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2008

Unfair Commercial Practices by creditors against consumer sureties

45-147

As explained generally in Ch.38, ⁷⁴⁴ the Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2008 (which implement the Unfair Commercial Practices Directive 2005) prohibit “unfair commercial practices” by traders ⁷⁴⁵ against consumers. ⁷⁴⁶ For this purpose, “commercial practices” are unfair if they fail a general test (that a commercial practice “contravenes the requirements of professional diligence” and “materially distorts, or is likely, to materially distort the economic behaviour of the average consumer with regard to the product” ⁷⁴⁷); if they constitute misleading actions, ⁷⁴⁸ misleading omissions ⁷⁴⁹ or aggressive commercial practices ⁷⁵⁰; or if they are included in a list of “commercial practices which are in all circumstances considered unfair”. ⁷⁵¹ Under the 2008 Regulations, a “commercial practice” is defined as:

“any act, omission, course of conduct, representation or commercial communication (including advertising and marketing) by a trader, which is directly connected with the promotion, sale or supply of a product to or from consumers, whether occurring before, during or after a commercial transaction (if any) in relation to a product.” ⁷⁵²

Furthermore, “consumer” means “any individual who in relation to a commercial practice is acting for purposes that are wholly or mainly outside that individual's business” ⁷⁵³ and “product” includes goods, a service, digital content, immoveable property, and rights or obligations. ⁷⁵⁴ It will be seen, therefore, that the prohibitions (and consequential enforcement measures ⁷⁵⁵) in the 2008 Regulations may apply to the relationship between a commercial lender (the “trader”) and a “consumer surety” (i.e. an individual who concludes a contract of suretyship for purposes which are wholly or mainly outside that individual's business), for in this situation, the consumer surety may be said to supply a “product” (the financial service of undertaking to be answerable for the principal debtor's debts ⁷⁵⁶) to the commercial lender, it being expressly stated by the Regulations that a “commercial practice” by a trader may be “directly connected with the promotion, sale or supply of a product to or from consumers”. ⁷⁵⁷

No “rights of redress” for consumer sureties

45-148

⚠ The Unfair Commercial Practices Directive states that it is “without prejudice to contract law” ⁷⁵⁸ and as originally issued the 2008 Regulations did not provide a remedy to a consumer who had been affected by an unfair commercial practice by a trader. ⁷⁵⁹ However, on the recommendation of the Law Commissions, ⁷⁶⁰ in 2014 the 2008 Regulations were amended by the Consumer Protection (Amendment) Regulations 2014 ⁷⁶¹ so as to create new “rights to redress” in consumers against traders in respect of certain unfair commercial practices prohibited by the 2008 Regulations. The details of these rights are explained above in Ch.38, ⁷⁶² but here it should be noted that they are generally available to consumers who are victims of only two forms of unfair commercial practice—“misleading actions” and “aggressive practices” and who have entered a contract with or made a payment to the trader as a result. ⁷⁶³ For present purposes, however, it is to be noted that a consumer surety does not enjoy any of the “rights to redress” created by the 2014 Regulations, as the first condition for the existence of these rights is that:

“(a)

the consumer enters into a contract with a trader for the sale or supply of a product by the trader (a ‘business to consumer contract’), the consumer enters into a contract with a trader for the sale of goods to the trader (a ‘consumer to business contract’), or the consumer makes a payment to a trader for the supply of a product (a ‘consumer payment’).” ⁷⁶⁴

(b)

(c)

It will be seen that a consumer surety will not be in a position to satisfy any one of these conditions, given that he or she is not supplied with “a product” by the trader (so as to fall under (a)), does not contract to sell goods to the trader (so as to fall under (b)), nor makes any payment to a trader for the supply of a product (so as to fall under (c)): as a result, the new rights to redress arise in “consumer to business contracts” only in the case of contracts of sale of goods. ⁷⁶⁵ This absence of any rights to redress in a consumer surety against a trader/lender under the 2008 Regulations means that a consumer surety will continue to enjoy any right to damages to which he or she is entitled under the Misrepresentation Act 1967 s.2. ⁷⁶⁶

^{744.} Above, paras 38-145 et seq.

^{745.} For the definition of “trader” see 2013 Regulations reg.4 “trader” and reg.5 “business”, and above, para.38-156.

^{746.} Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2008 (SI 2008/1277) (“2008 Regulations”); Directive 2005/29 on unfair commercial practices [2005] O.J. L149/22.

^{747.} 2008 Regulations reg.3(3).

^{748.} 2008 Regulations regs 3(4)(a) and 5.

^{749.} 2008 Regulations regs 3(4)(b) and 6.

^{750.} 2008 Regulations regs 3(4)(c) and 7.

^{751.} 2008 Regulations regs 3(4)(d) and Sch.1.

^{752.} 2008 Regulations reg.2(1) “commercial practice”. On this definition and the question whether an isolated event may constitute a commercial practice for this purpose, see above, paras 38-154—38-155.

- 753. 2008 Regulations reg.2(1) “consumer” (as amended by the Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2014 (SI 2014/870) reg.2(3).
- 754. 2008 Regulations reg.2(1) “product” (as amended by 2014 Regulations reg.2(6)).
- 755. Notably, criminal offences and the possibility of injunctions brought by designated enforcement authorities: 2008 Regulations Pts 3 and 4 respectively and see above, paras 38-158—38-159, which also explain the possible availability of enforcement orders under Pt 8 of the Enterprise Act 2002.
- 756. “Financial services” are clearly included within “product” as the 2005 Directive (which the 2008 Regulations implement) makes special provision for “financial services” on this premise: 2005 Directive art.3(9), which refers to the definition of “financial service” in Directive 2002/65/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of September 23, 2002 concerning the distance marketing of consumer financial services [2002] O.J. L271/16, art.2(b), being “any service of a banking, credit, insurance, personal pension, investment or payment nature”.
- 757. 2008 Regulations reg.2(1) “commercial practice” (emphasis added).
- 758. 2005 Directive art.3(2).
- 759. 2008 Regulations reg.29 in its original form. See above, para.38-145.
- 760. Law Commission, Scottish Law Commission, Consumer Redress for Misleading and Aggressive Practices (2012) Law Com No.332, Scot Law Com No.226.
- 761. SI 2014/870.
- 762. Above, paras 38-160—38-191.
- 763. 2008 Regulations reg.27A(4) (as inserted by the 2014 Regulations).
- 764. 2008 Regulations reg.27A(2) (as inserted by the 2014 Regulations).
- 765. Moreover, the definition of “product” for the purposes of Pt 4A rights to redress is restricted by 2008 Regulations reg.27D so as to restrict its application to financial services: see above, paras 38-161. The Law Commissions’ Report, Consumer Redress for Misleading and Aggressive Practices (noted above) did not discuss the position of consumer sureties.
- 766.  Where a consumer enjoys a right of redress under Pt 4A of the 2008 Regulations (as inserted by the 2014 Regulations) the consumer no longer possesses any right to damages under the Misrepresentation Act 1967 s.2: s.2(4) as inserted by 2014 Regulations reg.5 and see above, para.38-188.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 45 - Suretyship
Section 8. - Legislative Protection of Sureties
(b) - Misrepresentation Act 1967

Misrepresentation Act 1967 and Consumer Rights Act 2015

45-149

Until the coming into force of the Consumer Rights Act 2015, ⁷⁶⁷ any attempted exclusion by the creditor of his liability for misrepresentation which induces the surety to contract was subject to a test of reasonableness under s.3 of the Misrepresentation Act 1967, ⁷⁶⁸ whether or not the surety “deals as consumer” in entering the contract ⁷⁶⁹ and this control affects attempts to exclude the creditor’s liability in damages or to have the contract of suretyship rescinded by the surety. ⁷⁷⁰ However, with the coming into force of the 2015 Act, s.3 of the 1967 Act no longer applies to “consumer contracts” within the meaning of Pt 2 of the 2015 Act, ⁷⁷¹ and so where a trader/creditor seeks to exclude or restrict its liabilities for misrepresentation under a contract of suretyship with a consumer/surety, this exclusion or restriction will fall under the general requirements of fairness and transparency which Pt 2 of the 2015 Act contains. ⁷⁷²

^{767.} Pt 2 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 came into force on October 1, 2015 so as to apply to contracts made on or that date: see above, para.38-197.

^{768.} See Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 s.11 and generally, Vol.I, paras 15-096 et seq.

^{769.} Misrepresentation Act 1967 s.3 (as amended by Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 s.8).

^{770.} Misrepresentation Act 1967 s.3(b) (as amended by Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 s.8).

^{771.} 2015 Act s.75, Sch.4 para.1, creating new subs.(2) to s.3 of the 1967 Act.

^{772.} 2015 Act ss.62 and 68-69, on which see above, paras 38-334 et seq.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 45 - Suretyship
Section 8. - Legislative Protection of Sureties
(c) - Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977

Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 and Consumer Rights Act 2015

45-150

⚠ Until the coming into force of the Consumer Rights Act 2015, ⁷⁷³ ⚠ the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 ss.2 and 3 provide controls on exemption clauses which seek to exclude a person's business liability for negligence or for breach of contract respectively, in the latter case being restricted to cases where a party contracts on the other's "written terms of business" or "deals as consumer". ⁷⁷⁴ However, with the coming into force of the 2015 Act, the references in ss.2 and 3 of the 1977 Act to "dealing as consumer" are deleted ⁷⁷⁵ and these sections no longer apply to "consumer contracts" within the meaning of Pt 2 of the 2015 Act, the terms in these contracts instead falling within the controls on the fairness and transparency of terms which Pt 2 of the Act itself provides. ⁷⁷⁶

Application of 1977 Act to contracts of suretyship

45-151

Exemption clauses in contracts of suretyship may be caught by ss.2 or 3 of the 1977 Act. Thus, any attempt by a creditor acting in the course of business to exclude his liability in the tort of negligence, for example, as a result of explaining inadequately the effect of a guarantee, ⁷⁷⁷ is subject to a test of reasonableness. ⁷⁷⁸ Again, as against a surety dealing as a consumer or on the written standard terms of business ⁷⁷⁹ of the creditor who enters the contract in the course of a business, ⁷⁸⁰ any exclusion of a surety's right of set-off against the creditor would also be subject to a test of reasonableness. ⁷⁸¹

Exclusion of surety's rights to be discharged

45-152

On the other hand, the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 does not affect any exclusion in the contract of suretyship of the surety's various rights to be discharged. These rights include a right of a guarantor at common law to be discharged if the principal debtor is discharged, ⁷⁸² a right which can clearly be excluded as this is one of the important distinguishing features between contracts of guarantee and contracts of indemnity, where the surety undertakes a primary liability to the creditor, independent of any liability to him in the principal debtor. ⁷⁸³ Moreover, it has also become not infrequent for creditors to exclude a surety's "equitable rights" against the creditor, such as his right to be discharged if the creditor agrees to discharge the principal debtor ⁷⁸⁴ or if the creditor varies the terms of the contract with the principal debtor to his prejudice. ⁷⁸⁵ At common law, it is clear that these rights in the surety can be excluded by the contract of suretyship. ⁷⁸⁶ These clauses are not caught by the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 because, despite common use of the terminology of exclusion, they are not "exemption clauses" within the meaning of s.13 of that Act, for this section ties their effect to the exclusion or restriction of any liability, whether by way of subjecting its enforcement to restrictive conditions ⁷⁸⁷ or excluding any right or remedy in respect of the liability. ⁷⁸⁸ By contrast, a clause in a contract of suretyship which excludes the discharge of the surety as a result, for example, of the creditor's variation of the contract, does not exclude any right of the surety in respect of a liability in the creditor: rather, it prevents the discharge of the surety from liability to the creditor.

45-153

⚠ However, the position is different if the circumstances which give rise to the right in the surety to be discharged also give rise to liability in the creditor, for example, where the latter has undertaken by its contract the validity of a security provided by the principal debtor. ⁷⁸⁹ In these circumstances, any exclusion of liability in the creditor in respect of the validity of the security would be subject to a reasonableness test under s.3(1) of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, where the surety contracted on the creditor's written standard terms of business, ⁷⁹⁰ ⚠ or, until the coming into force of the Consumer Rights Act 2015, was "dealing as consumer". ⁷⁹¹ Similarly, in principle if the creditor's conduct were to give rise to a liability in tort for negligence, then any exclusion of such a liability would be subject to a test of reasonableness where the contract of suretyship was made in the course of the creditor's business. ⁷⁹² Formerly an example of such a liability in tort could be found in the case of the creditor's neglect in relation to securities, ⁷⁹³ but the existence of such a tortious liability has been disapproved by the Privy Council. ⁷⁹⁴ Finally, if the creditor has undertaken under the contract of guarantee to extend credit to the principal debtor, but has failed to do so in conformity with the contract, then any term of the contract purporting to exclude liability in the creditor for any loss which this causes to the guarantor would be caught by s.3(1) of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 if the creditor acted in the course of business and on his written standard terms of business or the guarantor "deals as consumer" (with the qualifications earlier noted). However, while a "no set off" clause in a contract of guarantee (which intends to prevent a guarantor from setting off any claims against the creditor's claim for payment under the contract) has been held capable of falling within s.3, ⁷⁹⁵ in the circumstances of the case (which included the guarantor's access to legal advice at the time of signing the contract) the clause was held reasonable for the purposes of s.11 of the 1977 Act. ⁷⁹⁶

^{773.} ⚠ Pt 2 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 came into force on October 1, 2015 so as to apply to contracts made on or after that date: see above, para.38-197.

^{774.} Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 ss.2 and 3 and see Vol.I, paras 15-081—15-087.

^{775.} 2015 Act s.75 Sch.4 paras 5(2) and 11 and see Vol.I, para.15-079.

^{776.} 2015 Act s.75, Sch.4 paras 4 and 5 inserted new s.2(4) and 3(3) in the 1977 Act. On these changes see generally Vol.I, paras 15-083 and 15-087.

^{777.} Perry v Midland Bank Plc [1987] F.L.R. 237; and see above, para.45-039 for the ambit of such a liability in the tort of negligence.

^{778.} Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 s.2(2); and cf. Smith v Eric S Bush [1990] 1 A.C. 831.

^{779.} But see para.45-150 on the effect of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 in this respect.

^{780.} Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 ss.1(3) and 3(1).

^{781.} Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 s.3(2)(a) and cf. WRM Group Ltd v Wood [1998] C.L.C. 189.

^{782.} See above, para.45-086, where it is noted that this rule does not apply to contracts of indemnity.

^{783.} See above, paras 45-008, 45-044.

- 784. See above, para.45-091.
- 785. See above, paras 45-104 et seq.
- 786. See above, paras 45-092, 45-112.
- 787. Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 s.13(1)(a). This definition applies to the controls found in ss.2(2) and 3(1) of this Act. While not concerned with exemption clauses in this sense, s.3(2)(b) of the same Act (on which see Vol.I, para.15-085) is not likely to come to the aid of the surety in these circumstances. For it is difficult to see how an exclusion by a creditor of the surety's rights to be discharged would constitute as against the surety an attempt "(i) to render a contractual performance substantially different from that which was reasonably expected of him, or (ii) in respect of the whole or any part of his contractual obligation, to render no performance at all".
- 788. 1977 Act s.13(1)(b).
- 789. TCB Ltd v Gray [1987] Ch. 458n (in which the court rejected the contention that there was such an undertaking).
- 790.  Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 s.3(1). It would appear that if such a clause failed the reasonableness test, it could nevertheless still be effective to prevent the surety from being discharged from his liability, as the effect of s.3 is to prevent the creditor from "excluding or restricting any liability of his in respect of breach ... except in so far as ... the contract term satisfies the requirement of reasonableness". cf. Peel, Treitel on The Law of Contract, 14th edn (2015), paras 7-074—7-075.
- 791. 1977 Act s.12(1) states that "[a] party to a contract 'deals as consumer' in relation to another party if—(a) he neither makes the contract in the course of a business nor holds himself out as doing so; and (b) the other party does make the contract in the course of a business". See above, para.45-150.
- 792. Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 ss.1(3) and 2(2).
- 793. Standard Chartered Bank v Walker [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1410, 1416.
- 794. China and South Seas Bank v Tan Soon Gin [1990] 1 A.C. 536, 543-544; and see above, para.45-121.
- 795. The Governor and Co of the Bank of Scotland v Singh Unreported June 17, 2005 (QB Mercantile Ct, Manchester) at [71]-[75] (although the decision of HH Judge Kershaw Q.C. on this point is not free from doubt given the points which he makes at [75]). On the application of s.3 of the 1977 Act to exclusions of rights of set off more generally see Vol.I, para.15-069 at n.373.
- 796. The Governor and Co of the Bank of Scotland v Singh Unreported June 17, 2005 (QB Mercantile Ct, Manchester) at [80]-[81], [84].

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 45 - Suretyship
Section 8. - Legislative Protection of Sureties
(d) - Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts

Introduction

45-154

The Unfair Terms in Consumer Regulations 1999 implement in English law the Directive on unfair terms in consumer contracts of 1993,⁷⁹⁷ but, for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015 the Consumer Rights Act 2015 revokes the 1999 Regulations and sets its own controls on unfair terms in consumer contracts, implementing the 1993 Directive and in certain respects going beyond its requirements. These legislative controls and their differences have been discussed earlier in the present volume,⁷⁹⁸ but here some account will be made of their possible effects on contracts of suretyship.

The ambit of the controls on unfair terms in consumer contracts

45-155

As earlier noted, both the Unfair Terms in Consumer Regulations 1999 and the Consumer Rights Act 2015 Pt 2 implement in English law the Directive on unfair terms in consumer contracts of 1993 and for present purposes the ambit of their general controls is broadly similar. So, both the 1999 Regulations and the 2015 Act govern most terms in consumer contracts and provide that a term will be unfair:

“if, contrary to the requirement of good faith, it causes a significant imbalance in the parties’ rights and obligations arising under the contract, to the detriment of the consumer.”⁷⁹⁹

For present purposes, the most important difference between the 1999 Regulations and the 2015 Act (on the one hand) and the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 (on the other) is that the latter is all but restricted to the control of exemption clauses,⁸⁰⁰ whereas the former control all types of contract term, with the principal exception of those falling within the “core exclusion”.⁸⁰¹ There are, however, some differences between the two controls: in particular, the definition of “consumer” in the 2015 Act extends to a person who contracts “wholly or mainly” for purposes outside that individual’s trade, etc.,⁸⁰² whereas it is not entirely clear whether a person who contracts mainly for such purposes is a “consumer” under the 1999 Regulations.⁸⁰³ And, the test of unfairness in the 2015 Act applies to terms whether or not they are “individually negotiated”, whereas the test in the 1999 Regulations exclude “individually negotiated” terms.⁸⁰⁴

Application of these controls to contracts of suretyship

45-156

⚠ The question whether the 1999 Regulations and, for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015, the Consumer Rights Act 2015 Pt 2, apply to contracts of suretyship received no definitive answer until the recent decision of the Court of Justice of the EU in Tarc#u v Banca Comercial# Intesa Sanpaolo România SA.⁸⁰⁵ ⚠ The 1999 Regulations (following the 1993 Directive itself) did not specify the types of contract to which they applied beyond defining their parties; and these parties were referred to as the “seller and supplier” (the person contracting in the course of business) and “consumer” (the individual not contracting in the course of business), this reflecting closely the terminology used by the English language version of the 1993 Directive.⁸⁰⁶ ⚠ This terminology suggested that the business sells goods (or other property) or supplies services (including financial services) to the consumer,⁸⁰⁷ ⚠ and this in turn suggested that the 1993 Directive (and therefore also the 1999 Regulations) applied to contracts of suretyship only in the rare situation where the creditor is a consumer, and the surety the person acting in the course of business.⁸⁰⁸ ⚠ However, other language versions of the 1993 Directive instead refer more openly to a “professional” or “tradesman” defined in a similar manner,⁸⁰⁹ ⚠ and, noting this, the Court of Justice of the EU has clarified that the 1993 Directive applies to all types of consumer contract, defined merely by reference to their parties: persons contracting in the course of business on the one hand, and consumers, viz, natural persons contracting other than in the course of business, on the other.⁸¹⁰ ⚠ According to the Court of Justice, this interpretation gives effect to the purpose of the Directive in the protection of consumers as “weaker parties” as regards both their bargaining power and their level of knowledge.⁸¹¹ ⚠ This general view was then applied to the context of contracts of suretyship by the Court of Justice in Tarc#u.⁸¹² ⚠ There, the parents of the director and sole shareholder of a commercial company had guaranteed and provided real security for the payment of sums owed by that company to a bank. The national court making the preliminary reference considered that the 1993 Directive (and therefore its national implementing legislation) applied only to contracts for the supply of goods or services to consumers,⁸¹³ ⚠ but the Court of Justice confirmed that the Directive applies to “all contracts” between consumers and sellers or suppliers and that “[t]he purpose of the contract is thus, subject to the exceptions listed in the recital 10 of the Directive⁸¹⁴ ⚠ ... irrelevant in determining the scope of the directive”.⁸¹⁵ ⚠ As a result, the 1993 Directive could apply to a contract of guarantee undertaken by a “consumer” or to another contract under which a “consumer” provides security for the performance of an obligation by another person, even if that other person is a commercial company rather than another consumer.⁸¹⁶ ⚠ Indeed, in the view of the Court of Justice, the protection provided by the 1993 Directive for consumers as “weaker parties”

“is particularly important in the case of a contract providing security or a contract of guarantee concluded between a banking institution and a consumer. Such a contract is based on a personal commitment of the surety or guarantor to pay a contractual debt owed by a third party. That commitment involves onerous obligations for the person entering into it, the effect of which is to subject that person’s own property to a financial risk which is often difficult to quantify.”⁸¹⁷ ⚠

For this purpose, “consumer” is an “objective” concept (and therefore does not depend on the knowledge or bargaining power of the individual) and is to be assessed by reference to the “functional criterion” of whether the contract arose in the course of activities outside his trade, business or profession.⁸¹⁸ ⚠ The question whether a particular person is to be categorised as a “consumer” in this way remains for the national court to determine taking into account of all the circumstances,⁸¹⁹ ⚠ but in the case of security being provided for performance of the obligations of a commercial company, this would turn on whether he “acted for purposes relating to his trade, business or profession or because of functional links he has with that company, such as a directorship or non-negligible shareholding” or whether instead “he acted for purposes of a private nature”.⁸²⁰ ⚠ Earlier English decisions on the application of the 1999 Regulations to contracts of suretyship must now be read subject to this very clear ruling by the Court of Justice on the application of the 1993 Directive. ⁸²¹  Similarly, the provisions of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 which implement the 1993 Directive by subjecting the terms of a consumer contract to a test of unfairness must also be interpreted as applying to contracts by which a “consumer” guarantees the debt or other obligation of a third party. ⁸²²  This interpretation fits more naturally the terminology used by the 2015 Act, as it calls the business party the “trader” rather than the seller or supplier. ⁸²³  It should also be noted that the 2015 Act extends (or appears to extend) the definition of “consumer” to an individual contracting “wholly or mainly” for purposes outside that individual’s trade, etc. ⁸²⁴

 [Paragraphs 45-157 and 45-158 have been removed]

Vulnerable types of clause

45-159

 There are a number of areas where the terms of a contract of suretyship by a consumer surety and a creditor acting in the course of business (and therefore a “trader”) may be open to the charge of unfairness within the meaning of the 1999 Regulations or Pt 2 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. In this respect, it is submitted that those clauses under which the creditor excludes the various rights of the surety to be discharged would be particularly vulnerable. ⁸²⁵ Perhaps most difficult in this respect is the application of the Regulations to clauses in the contract of suretyship which retain the liability of the surety even where the principal debtor is discharged. In the case of a contract of guarantee, such a clause excludes a right in the surety against the creditor, ⁸²⁶ and could well be seen as causing a “significant imbalance in the parties’ rights and obligations under the contract to the detriment of the consumer”. ⁸²⁷ However, it is of the nature of a contract of indemnity that liability in the surety exists irrespective of the liability (and therefore of the discharge) of the principal debtor. It could, therefore, be argued that a clause or clauses which merely create this result thereby define the main subject matter of the contract so as to fall within the first limb of the “core exclusion” from the test of unfairness under reg.6(2) of the 1999 Regulations or s.64 of the 2015 Act. ⁸²⁸

45-160

 At first sight, more straightforward is the impact of the 1999 Regulations or, for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015, the 2015 Act Pt 2 ⁸²⁹ on clauses in a contract of guarantee which on their terms exclude the right of the surety to be discharged by reason of the variation by the creditor of the contract with the principal debtor, ⁸³⁰ including making a binding agreement to give the latter time, ⁸³¹ by reason of the release of any co-surety, ⁸³² or by dealing negligently with any security for the debt. ⁸³³ Again, such clauses could well be regarded as creating a “significant imbalance in the parties’ rights and obligations under the contract to the detriment of the consumer”. ⁸³⁴ In the case of a clause in the contract of suretyship which allows the creditor to vary the interest rate which the principal debtor must pay and for which the surety will therefore in principle also be liable, one of the terms listed in Sch.2 to the Regulations which “may be regarded as unfair”, ⁸³⁵ appears relevant, as para.1(j) of this Schedule contains a term whose object or effect is to enable “the seller or supplier to alter the terms of the contract unilaterally without a valid reason which is specified in the contract”. ⁸³⁶ However, later in the Schedule the scope of this example is limited ⁸³⁷ as para.1(j) is stated to be “without hindrance to terms under which a supplier of financial services reserves the right to alter the rate of interest payable by the consumer”. ⁸³⁸ This limitation is clearly intended to deal with terms which allow for a variable interest rate in contracts of loan to consumers, but it could be used by a creditor (the “supplier”) or “trader” ⁸³⁹  to argue that what is fair as regards a (consumer) principal debtor should also be regarded as fair for a (consumer) guarantor. Moreover, Sch.2 further qualifies the possible unfairness of clauses which reserve a right to unilateral variations, ⁸⁴⁰ stating that para.1(j) is to be “without hindrance to terms under which a seller or supplier reserves the right to alter unilaterally the conditions of a contract of indeterminate duration, provided that he is required to inform the consumer with reasonable notice and that the consumer is free to dissolve the contract”. ⁸⁴¹ This qualification could well apply to a “continuing guarantee” ⁸⁴² made by a consumer which is of indefinite duration.

45-161

Perhaps the strongest candidate to be regarded as unfair in a contract of suretyship is where the creditor excludes a consumer surety's right to be discharged on the ground of the creditor's neglect in relation to security.⁸⁴³ Such a clause, which is aimed at defeating the clear policy of protection which equity established for sureties and which is conditional on some negligence in the creditor,⁸⁴⁴ may well be held to be contrary to the requirement of good faith.⁸⁴⁵

^{797.} Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/2083); Directive 93/13 of April 5, 1993 on unfair terms in consumer contracts [1993] O.J. L95/29. The following notes refer to the 1999 Regulations.

^{798.} Above, paras 38-201 et seq.

^{799.} 1999 Regulations reg.5; 2015 Act s.62(4).

^{800.} See Vol.I, para.15-066 which explains the qualifications on this general position.

^{801.} 1999 Regulations reg.6(2); 2015 Act s.64 above, paras 38-224—38-241 and 38-363—38-368 respectively.

^{802.} 2015 Act s.2(3); s.76(2).

^{803.} See above, paras 38-033—38-034 and 38-206.

^{804.} 2015 Act s.62; 1999 Regulations reg.5, above, para.38-221 and 38-358.

^{805.}  C-74/15 (Order of CJEU) November 19, 2015 ("Tarcău (C-74/15)"). Vol.II, para.45-156 and corresponding paragraphs in earlier editions have argued that the 1993 Directive (and, therefore, its UK implementing legislation, the 1999 Regulations) apply to contracts of suretyship where the surety is a "consumer" by reference to the same textual and teleological grounds as formed the basis of the reasoning of the CJEU in Brusse v Jahani BV (C-488/11) May 30, 2013 and Siba v Devènas (C-537/13) January 15, 2015, on which its decision in Tarcău (C-74/15) was based.

^{806.}  See Vol.II, para.38-207.

^{807.}  See Vol.II, para.38-207.

^{808.}  An example of a contract covered in this way would be a loan by a private individual to another person, whether for that person's business or not, which is guaranteed by a bank or other financial institution. Here, the guarantor (the bank) would be acting in the course of a business and the creditor (the lender of the money) could fall within the definition of a "consumer".

^{809.}  The non-consumer party to the contract is termed professionnel in the French and Gewerbetreibender in the German versions of Directive 93/13/EEC art.2(c).

^{810.}  Brusse v Jahani BV (C-488/11) May 30, 2013; Siba v Devènas (C-537/13) January 15, 2015, on which see Vol.II, para.38-203.

- 811. ! Brusse v Jahani BV (C-488/11) at para.31.
- 812. ! C-74/15 (Order of CJEU) November 19, 2015.
- 813. ! Tarcău (C-74/15) at para.14.
- 814. ! On these “exceptions” see Vol.II, para.38-203 n.1280.
- 815. ! Tarcău (C-74/15) at para.22. On the status of these “exceptions” see para.1280 n.1280. The CJEU contrasted the position under the former Council Directive 87/102/EEC of 22 December 1986 concerning consumer credit (itself repealed by Directive 2008/48/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 23 April 2008 on credit agreements for consumers) which applied only to “contracts whereby a creditor grants or promises to grant a consumer a credit” which has led the Court to exclude contracts of guarantee from its scope: Tarcău (C-74/15) at para.22, citing Berliner Kindl Brauerei AG v Siepert (C-208/98) [2000] E.C.R. I-1741 at paras 17-23.
- 816. ! Tarcău (C-74/15) paras 24–25. The CJEU therefore confirmed the view taken by the para.45-156 that the 1993 Directive clearly applies to contracts of suretyship. It is submitted that no distinction is to be made for this purpose between contracts of guarantee and contracts of indemnity as this distinction is understood by English law and as explained in the Vol.II, paras 45-006—45-008. Indeed, in Bucura v SC Bancpost SA (C-348/14) July 9, 2015 (available only in French) at paras 35–38 the CJEU held that the 1993 Directive could apply to a contract under which the alleged “consumer” contracted as “co-debtor” to a person concluding a contract of consumer credit.
- 817. ! Tarcău (C-74/15) at para.25.
- 818. ! Tarcău (C-74/15) at para.27 citing Costea v SC Volksbank România SA (C-110/14) April 23, 2015 para.21, on which see above, para.38-032.
- 819. ! Tarcău (C-74/15) at para.28.
- 820. ! Tarcău (C-74/15) at para.29.
- 821. ! Governor and Co of the Bank of Scotland v Singh, Unreported June 17, 2005 (QB, Mercantile Ct, Manchester); Manches LLP v Freer [2006] EWHC 991 (QB) at [25]; Williamson v Governor of the Bank of Scotland [2006] EWHC 1289 (Ch) (1999 Regulations cannot apply to contracts of guarantee undertaken by a natural person acting other than in the course of business). cf. Barclays Bank Plc v Kufner; Royal Bank of Scotland v Chandra [2010] EWHC 105 (Ch), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 677 at [102] (affirmed [2011] EWCA Civ 192, [2011] Bus. L.R. D149 on other grounds); United Trust Bank Ltd v Dohil [2011] EWHC 3302 (QB) at [73] (1999 Regulations can apply to contracts of guarantee undertaken by a natural person acting other than in the course of business).
- 822. ! The 2015 Act sets out the general scheme of controls of unfair contract terms in Pt 2: see Vol.II, paras 38-334 et seq.
- 823. ! Consumer Rights Act 2015 s.2(2), above, para.38-352.
- 824. ! 2015 Act s.2(3); s.76(2).
- 825. These are not caught by the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 for the reasons explained see above, para.45-152. For other examples, see O'Donovan and Phillips, The Modern Contract of Guarantee, 2nd English edn (2010) by Phillips paras 4-185—4-193.

- 826. See above, paras 45-086 et seq. as to the nature of this right.
- 827. 1999 Regulations reg.5(1); 2015 Act s.62(4).
- 828. On the “core exclusion” see above, paras 38-224—38-241 and 38-363—38-368.
- 829. See above, para.45-145.
- 830. See above, para.45-104.
- 831. See above, paras 45-108—45-109.
- 832. See above, para.45-117.
- 833. See above, para.45-120.
- 834. 1999 Regulations reg.5(1); 2015 Act s.62(4).
- 835. 1999 Regulations reg.5(5); 2015 Act s.63(1).
- 836. The equivalent provision in the 2015 Act is found in Sch.2 Pt 1 para.11.
- 837. 1999 Regulations Sch.2 para.2(b).
- 838. The equivalent provision in the 2015 Act is found in Sch.2 Pt 2 para.22.
- 839.  See above, para.45-156.
- 840. 1999 Regulations Sch.2 para.2(b).
- 841. The equivalent provision in the 2015 Act is found in Sch.2 Pt 2 para.23.
- 842. See above, para.45-077.
- 843. See above, para.45-120.
- 844. See above, para.45-124 as to the significance of the term negligence in this context.
- 845. 1999 Regulations reg.5(1); 2015 Act s.62(4).