

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 31 - Agency

Section 1. - Agency in General ¹

Concept of agency

31-001

At common law the word “agency” can be said to represent a body of general rules under which one person, the agent, has the power to change the legal relations of another, the principal. ² It is sometimes indeed said that prima facie what a person can do himself he can do by an agent; but this is not always so. ³ The main areas in which this power is analysed are the law of contract, where an agent may have power to bind and entitle his principal by contract and by acts connected with the performance of a contract, and the law of property, where he may have power to receive property for his principal or make a valid disposition of his principal's property; and these are dealt with in this chapter. Similar reasoning may appear in other areas (e.g. torts, evidence); but the doctrines of agency are not always so well worked out beyond the main spheres of their operation, and the context in which the reasoning is used and the extent of its use may therefore require careful consideration in each case. The legal doctrines which have been developed stress the generality of the agent's power to bind and entitle his principal, while himself dropping out of the transaction and incurring neither rights nor liabilities, though sometimes the agent may himself be liable and entitled in addition. ⁴ These may be said to concern the external aspect of agency. But there are also certain typical rules, less fully developed, concerning the rights and liabilities of principal and agent inter se. In particular, these deal with the agent's duties (normally of reasonable care), impose fiduciary duties on the agent, and regulate his rights to remuneration (typically by commission) and to indemnity. ⁵ They may be said to concern the internal aspect of agency.

Incomplete agency: canvassing agents

31-002

There are other persons who, because they represent others in certain respects, may in common speech be called agents, yet who cannot be said to come within the full scope of the law of agency as defined above. These are agents whose function is to introduce business, such as (in England at least) real estate agents, ⁶ and insurance agents ⁷: they are sometimes referred to as “canvassing agents”. In the terminology of the previous paragraph, they have an internal relationship with their principals, but their external power to change their principal's legal relations may be very limited indeed or even non-existent. It can indeed be said that persons acting in such a capacity are not agents at all ⁸; yet, apart from the fact that the term agent is commonly used of them, most of the typical rules regulating the internal relation between principal and agent, especially those relating to fiduciary obligations, ⁹ may be applicable. Hence they are normally, and, it is submitted, correctly, subsumed under the law of agency, though its full consequences do not apply: they may be called examples of “incomplete agency”.

Distributors and franchisees

31-003

A third group to which the term “agent” may be applied in common speech is that of franchise holders and distributors of particular products. Though it is possible that such a person is an agent in the sense that his obligation to his principal is that of an agent even though he deals with the outside world in his own name,¹⁰ it is in fact more likely that the common law will classify such persons as purchasers for resale¹¹; and as such no attempt has been made to extend any principles of agency law to them—an extension which would necessarily be by analogy only.¹²

Foreign law

31-004

⚠ Civil law systems may tend to stress the unity of the (internal) notion of representation described above, sometimes deriving the agent's external power from a separate source.¹³ They may in consequence classify, sometimes elaborately, different types of representative, developing special rules for the powers, rights and duties of each; and the term “agent” or its translation may carry a specific rather than a general meaning. Also, a distinction is often (but not universally) taken in civil law between “direct representation” and “indirect representation”, the latter connoting a method of dealing whereby the “agent” deals personally, but remains on an agency basis with his principal internally.¹⁴ While there can be no objection to a party acting in such a way, such a conceptual distinction is not recognised by the common law.¹⁵ ⚠ A further feature of foreign agency law which has surprised some English lawyers is that certain agents may be protected against what is thought to be the unfair termination of authority by means of a statutory right to indemnity or compensation for loss of goodwill built up.¹⁶ Some of these typical rules may be extended to franchise holders and distributors. Some intermediaries may also be entitled to the protections of employment law. Since under English law agents are not necessarily independent and may be employees, this last proposition may be true in England also, but would not normally be considered under the head of agency.

Use of the terms “agent”, “agency”

31-005

It follows from the indications given earlier of the ways in which the notion of the agency can be viewed, and the terms “agent” and “agency” used, that when it falls to be considered whether a person is an agent, and if so of which party to a transaction, it is often true that no simple answer can be given.¹⁷ Some persons who describe themselves or are described by others as agents are not really such in any legal sense of the word, but rather independent merchants, dealers, consultants or intermediaries. Others may be agents in the sense that they owe the internal duties of the agent to his principal (mainly the fiduciary duties)¹⁸ and are paid by commission, but have no external powers (for example, estate agents). Others may be agents in the full sense that they have power to bind and entitle their principals contractually or by disposition of property: but it does not follow from this that they may not be parties to any contract made also.¹⁹ Some persons, again, may be parties to what is in the previous paragraph referred to as an “indirect representation” situation. The substance of the matter prevails over the form²⁰ and the use of the words “agent” or “agency”, or even a denial that they are applicable, is not conclusive that any particular type of relationship exists. It has however been said that where the term “agent” is used in a formal document (to which English principles of interpretation are to be applied), it may be presumed that the word is used in its proper legal connotation (viz of a person having power to bind his principal) unless there are strong indications to the contrary²¹; and though this was said in a dissenting judgment it may well be a reasonable guide.

Relationship of principal and agent

31-006

⚠ On the orthodox and accepted analysis, the full paradigm relationship of principal and agent arises where one party, the principal, consents that another party, the agent, shall act on his behalf, and the agent consents so to act. This consent is said to confer “authority” on the agent; and from this authority stems his power to affect the principal’s legal position. The relationship between principal and agent need not be contractual: an agent can act gratuitously,²² as many do under powers of attorney. There will usually however be a contract accompanying the grant of authority, which is conceptually separate.²³ An extension of this reasoning is that the consent may also be given subsequently, by ratification.²⁴ Except perhaps in the case of agency of necessity,²⁵ such consent is however essential for the full agency relationship.²⁶ But under the doctrine of apparent authority, a further extension, a third party may be entitled to rely on the appearance of authority and hold the principal liable as if there had been such consent. This, since it only benefits the third party, is expounded under a different head.²⁷ The consent of the principal, which is regarded as the basic justification for the agent’s power to affect his principal’s legal relations, may of course be implied from his conduct or from his position with regard to the agent, and vice versa.²⁸ It has been suggested that “some wider conception of vicarious responsibility other than that of agency, as normally understood, may have to be recognised in order to accommodate some of the more elaborate cases which arise where there are two persons who become mutually involved or associated in one side of a transaction”.²⁹ At present, however, this remains no more than a suggestion by a distinguished judge which has not been developed; and the trend of subsequent cases remains inconsistent with it.³⁰

General and special agents

31-007

For the purpose of determining the authority of any particular one, agents were sometimes in the past classified as general or special. A general agent has authority to act in all matters of a particular nature or concerning a particular trade or business; or to act in the ordinary course of a business or profession, e.g. as a solicitor, broker or factor.³¹ A special agent has authority only to do some particular act or act in some particular transaction which is not in the ordinary course of his business or profession as an agent. But the matter is one of degree, and it is doubtful whether the distinction (which was formerly significant in the emergence of the doctrine of apparent authority³²) is nowadays of much utility.³³

Servant (employee) and independent contractor

31-008

The traditional formulation is that a servant (or employee) is under the control of his master (or employer) not only as to what he does but also as to the manner in which he executes his work³⁴; the independent contractor, on the other hand, undertakes to produce, or to endeavour to produce, a given result and is not under the orders or control of the principal in his manner of execution.³⁵ This distinction is principally used in the law of tort, where it retains some validity despite considerable recent modifications of the test for vicarious liability in general³⁶ and extensions of the law relating to breach of non-delegable duties.³⁷ Much energy has been devoted to attempts to systematise the relations between these figures and the agent. Though there are interconnections between tort and contract, the use of tort terminology is not usually appropriate in pure contract cases, and such attempts are probably of little practical value for the law as it stands at present. Some employees have agency powers, some not; the same is true of independent contractors. Some owe fiduciary duties, some not. Some agents fall into neither group (e.g. gratuitous agents).³⁸

¹⁻ The writer of this chapter is much indebted for advice from Professor Peter Watts of the University of Auckland.

²⁻ Restatement, Third, Agency, paras 1.01, 2.01 (action that has “legal consequences for the principal”).

3. The power to act by an agent is sometimes expressly recognised by statute: e.g. Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss.22–26, 91 (see below, paras 31-066, 31-089); Limitation Act 1939 s.24 (now s.30 of the Limitation Act 1980) (see Wright v Pepin [1954] 1 W.L.R. 635; Re Transplanters (Holding Co) Ltd [1958] 1 W.L.R. 822). The power of trustees to delegate to others is regulated by Trustee Delegation Act 1999; Trustee Act 2000 ss.11–23. As to rights to conduct litigation for another see Gregory v Turner [2003] EWCA Civ 183, [2003] 1 W.L.R. 1149; as to verification of documents for another by affidavit see Clauss v Pir [1988] Ch. 267. Where a statute is silent, the normal implication is that, in the absence of other indications, the basic rule permitting acts by an agent applies: see R. v Kent Justices (1873) L.R. 8 Q.B. 305; Re Whitley Partners Ltd (1886) 32 Ch. D. 337; R. v Assessment Committee of St Mary Abbot's, Kensington [1891] 1 Q.B. 378; LCC v Agricultural Food Products Ltd [1955] 2 Q.B. 218; McRae v Coulton (1986) 7 N.S.W.L.R. 644 (containing illuminating discussion as to forms of signature); General Legal Council (on the application of Whitter) v Frankson [2006] UKPC 42, [2006] 1 W.L.R. 2803. The Statute of Frauds Amendment Act 1828 s.6 (as to which, see Vol.I, para.7-042) has been held to require personal signature, which has caused difficulties as to signature by agents of companies: see Hirst v West Riding Union Banking Co [1901] 2 K.B. 560; UBAF Ltd v European American Banking Corp (The Pacific Colocotronis) [1984] Q.B. 713 (noted [1984] J.B.L. 248); and see McRae v Coulton, above. A signature may be in electronic form: Lindsay v O'Loughnane [2010] EWHC 529 (QB) at [95]; in the context of the Statute of Frauds and guarantees: Golden Ocean Group Ltd v Salgaocar Mining Industries Pvt Ltd [2011] EWHC 56 (Comm), [2011] 1 W.L.R. 2575 at [95] (discussing different possible meanings of “electronic signature”); on appeal [2012] EWCA Civ 265, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 542 at [31] et seq. See also Ramsay v Love [2015] EWHC 65 (Ch) (writing machine operated by person with general authority).
4. See below, paras 31-083, 31-084.
5. See below, paras 31-112 et seq.
6. See below, para.31-012.
7. See below, para.31-015.
8. See Vogel v R & A Konstamm Ltd [1973] Q.B. 133, 136–137, 147. But cf. Freehold Land Investments Ltd v Queensland Estates Pty Ltd (1970) 123 C.L.R. 418, and it seems likely that some such persons involved in the sale of goods can be commercial agents: below, para.31-017.
9. Below, paras 31-118 et seq.; Premium Real Estate Ltd v Stevens [2009] 2 N.Z.L.R. 384 (real estate agent); McWilliam v Norton Finance (UK) Ltd [2015] EWCA Civ 186 (credit broker); Tigris International BV v China Southern Airlines Co Ltd [2014] EWCA Civ 1649.
10. See, e.g. Bolus & Co Ltd v Inglis Bros Ltd [1924] N.Z.L.R. 164, 175; Fraser v Equitorial Shipping Co Ltd (The Ijaola) [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 10. Such an arrangement may be called “indirect agency” and would be similar to the contract of commission in civil law systems: see below, n.15. There could also be true agency functions as regards guarantees, servicing, repairs and the like.
11. See below, para.31-022.
12. But the use of “Romalpa” clauses in sale contracts raises problems which can be related to agency, for it may appear that the buyer under reservation of title resells as agent for the seller: see Aluminium Industrie Vaassen BV v Romalpa Aluminium Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 676; below, paras 44-170 et seq.; Michelin Tyre Co Ltd v Macfarlane (Glasgow) Ltd (1916) 55 Sc.L.Rep. 35 HL. And it may sometimes be arguable that distributors and franchisees are subject to fiduciary duties: see Feuer Leather Corp v Frank Johnstone & Sons [1981] Com. L.R. 251; also Artifakts Design Group Ltd v NP Rigg Ltd [1993] 1 N.Z.L.R. 196 (sale of competing goods); cf. Lothian v Jenolite Ltd, 1969 S.C. 111; Hospital Products Ltd v US Surgical Corp (1985) 156 C.L.R. 41, especially at 92; Jani-King (GB) Ltd v Pula Enterprises Ltd [2007] EWHC 2433 (QB), [2008] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 451. In Toycorp v Milton Bradley Australia Pty Ltd [1992] 2 V.R. 572 a franchisor was held to have ordered goods as agent for its franchisee.

13. See Schmitthoff, Recueil des Cours 115.
14. This forms a basic category in the Principles of European Contract Law (2000).
15.  In civil law countries such a party may sometimes be referred to as a commission agent or commissionnaire, to whom it is said that the common law undisclosed principal (below, para.31-063) offers a parallel. The similarity is limited: the doctrine of the undisclosed principal requires that the principal authorise the agent to bind him by contract, which is not true of commissionnaires. Such a figure occasionally appears in the English cases: e.g. Ireland v Livingston (1872) L.R. 5 H.L. 395, 407–408; Armstrong v Stokes (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 598, 605; Robinson v Mollett (1875) L.R. 7 H.L. 802, 809–810 (three expositions by Blackburn J.); Maspons y Hermano v Mildred, Goyeneche & Co (1882) 9 Q.B.D. 530; affirmed (1883) 8 App. Cas. 874; R & J Bow Ltd v Hill (1930) 37 Ll.L. Rep. 46, 47–48; Triffit Nurseries v Salads Etcetera Ltd [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 697, 700; Brandeis Brokers Ltd v Black [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 359; Royal & Sun Alliance Insurance Plc v MK Digital FZE (Cyprus) Ltd [2006] EWCA 629, [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 110; OMV Petrom SA v Glencore International AG [2015] EWHC 666 (Comm); cf. Anglo-African Shipping Co Ltd v J. Mortner Ltd [1962] 1 Lloyd's Rep 610 CA. It seems that such a mode of operation is sometimes artificially adopted for tax reasons. In that respect it risks being caught by the undisclosed principal rules: see especially below, paras 31-063, 31-065. See Hill (1968) 31 M.L.R. 623; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), paras 1–020, 1–021, 12–029; Kortmann and Kortmann, Agency Law in Commercial Practice (OUP, 2016).
16. This is now part of UK Law. See below, para.31-153.
17. See, e.g. Wong Mee Wan v Kwan Kin Travel Services Ltd [1996] 1 W.L.R. 38 (tour operator held principal and so liable for negligence of sub-contractor); Titshall Ltd v Qwerty Travel Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 1569; cf. Shepperd v Crystal Holidays Ltd [1997] C.L. 500 (holiday company agent to make contract with skiing instructor); IRC v SecretHotels2 Ltd [2014] UKSC 16, [2014] 2 All E.R. 685 (intermediary making hotel bookings: context, VAT). The Package Travel, Package Holidays and Package Tours Regulations 1992 (SI 1992/3288, as amended) place certain obligations on package tour organisers or retailers: see reg.115, discussed above, Vol.I, para.14-044. See also below, para.31-022.
18. Below, paras 31-118 et seq.
19. Below, para.31-084.
20. Kennedy v De Trafford [1897] A.C. 180, 188; below, para.31-022. See an elaborate discussion of agency in the context of commercial lenders, “originators” and “introducers” in Tonto Home Loans Australia Pty Ltd v Tavares [2011] NSWCA 389.
21. Shell Co of Australia Ltd v Nat Shipping Bagging Services Ltd (The Kilmun) [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1, 16, per Sir Denys Buckley. This problem may occur, for example, in the case of legislative or contractual provisions forbidding the use of “agents” and/or requiring disclosure of “commission” paid to “agents”. If a tenderer for a contract uses the services of a local person or company to assist in the preparation of the tender and promises a commission, is he using the services of an “agent”? Not of an agent in the full legal sense.
22. See below, para.31-117.
23. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.1–006. A recent illustration is Blankley v Central Manchester Children's University Hospitals NHS Trust [2015] EWCA Civ 18, [2015] 1 Costs L.R. 119, where the authority might have at some points not existed by reason of mental incapacity, but the accompanying solicitor's retainer remained valid and was not frustrated.
24. See below, paras 31-027 et seq.
25. See below, para.31-035.

- 26. Pole v Leask (1863) 33 L.J.Ch. 155, 161–162; Garnac Grain Co Inc v HMF Faure & Fairclough Ltd [1968] A.C. 1130n., 1137; Fridman (1968) 84 L.Q.R. 224.
- 27. Below, paras 31-056 et seq.
- 28. Branwhite v Worchester Works Finance Ltd [1969] 1 A.C. 552, 587; Hely-Hutchinson v Brayhead Ltd [1968] 1 Q.B. 549, 583; and see below, paras 31-027 et seq. as to ratification.
- 29. Branwhite v Worchester Works Finance Ltd, above, at 587, per Lord Wilberforce. See also Heaton's Transport (St Helen's) Ltd v TGWU [1973] A.C. 15; Ismail v Polish Ocean Lines [1976] Q.B. 893; but cf. Rose v Plenty [1976] 1 W.L.R. 141.
- 30.  The cases plainly assert orthodox principles: Sorrell v Finch [1977] A.C. 728; Moorgate Mercantile Co v Twitchings [1977] A.C. 890; Kooragang Investments Pty Ltd v Richardson & Wrench Ltd [1982] A.C. 462; British Bank of the Middle East v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada (UK) Ltd [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 9. But cf. First Energy (UK) Ltd v Hungarian International Bank Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 194; below, para.31–056. In Plevin v Paragon Personal Finance Ltd [2014] UKSC 61, [2014] 1 W.L.R. 4222, Lord Sumption said, in the context of s.140A of the Consumer Credit Act 1974, that “In their ordinary and natural meaning the words ‘on behalf of’ import agency”: at [30]. The effect was to narrow the broad protective discretion in respect of liability of a lender for acts of others given by s.140A. See comment by McMeel, Agency Law in Commercial Practice (2016) paras 10.25 et seq.
- 31. As to factors and brokers see below, para.31-009.
- 32. See Smith v M'Guire (1858) 3 H. & N. 554; Brady v Todd (1861) 9 C.B.(N.S.) 592; and Barrett v Irvine [1907] 2 I.R. 462. See also Brown [2004] J.B.L. 391.
- 33. But the notion was invoked (unsuccessfully) in the context of a company said to be general agent for its wholly owned subsidiary: Dun & Bradstreet Software Services (England) Ltd v Provident Mutual Life Assn [1998] 2 E.G.L.R. 175 CA.
- 34. Mersey Docks & Harbour Board v Coggins & Griffiths (Liverpool) Ltd [1947] A.C. 1; Hewitt v Bonvin [1940] 1 K.B. 188, 191.
- 35. For a standard formulation see Honeywill & Stein Ltd v Larkin [1934] 1 K.B. 191, 196.
- 36. See Lister v Hesley Hall Ltd [2001] UKHL 22, [2002] 1 A.C. 215; Various Claimants v Catholic Child Welfare Society [2012] UKSC 56, [2013] 2 A.C. 1.
- 37. Woodland v Essex CC [2013] UKSC 66, [2014] A.C. 537.
- 38. Below, para.31-117.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 31 - Agency

Section 2. - Examples of Types of Agent

Factors and brokers ³⁹

31-009

The distinction between these was important in nineteenth-century commerce and is still important for the understanding of old cases. A factor was:

“a person to whom goods are consigned for sale by a merchant residing abroad or at a distance from the place of sale; and he usually sells in his own name without disclosing that of his principal.” ⁴⁰

A factor was therefore entitled to contract in his own name ⁴¹ and to receive payment, ⁴² and his possession of the goods and lien over them for his charges and expenses gave him the right to sue the third party on the contract of sale of them which he had made. ⁴³ He might instead sometimes sell goods which he had bought from the person consigning the goods, and the third party might not always know which the factor was doing. These propositions were not normally true of brokers, who negotiated and often concluded contracts in respect of goods which they did not hold at all, and might be assumed to be dealing for others. ⁴⁴ The factor is central to the development of the doctrine of the undisclosed principal, ⁴⁵ under which the principal can sue or be sued directly on a contract with a person authorised to make it, who does not indicate at the time of contracting that he is acting for another—but subject to safeguards. This wider doctrine made it unnecessary to resolve all of the puzzles about the factor's position vis-à-vis the agent and third party, which was in effect superseded by a theory based in general agency law. The term “factor” is however not used in this sense in England nowadays, and the term “broker” has subsequently been applied to a much wider range of occupations, starting with stockbrokers but extending much further.

Del credere agents

31-010

An agent for the sale of goods sometimes acts under a del credere commission; that is, for a special commission, ⁴⁶ he becomes responsible to his principal for the solvency of a buyer; or, in other words, he guarantees to his principal, in cases of sale, the payment of the price of the goods sold, when ascertained and due. ⁴⁷ His liability is however limited to ascertained sums which become due as debts: the principal may not litigate with a del credere agent disputes arising out of contracts made by the agent. ⁴⁸ Such an agent does not become responsible to the buyer for due performance by his principal, ⁴⁹ nor can he sue the third party on the contract. ⁵⁰ A del credere agency may be implied, or inferred from a course of conduct, ⁵¹ and does not need to be evidenced in writing because, being merely incidental to another transaction, it is not a promise to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another within s.4 of the Statute of Frauds, i.e. not a guarantee. ⁵² In modern commerce, such agency could involve enormous liabilities, and it has largely been superseded by credit guarantees, confirmations ⁵³ and the like.

Auctioneers

31-011

The auctioneer has a lien over the goods which he sells and an interest in their proceeds which is nowadays explained as a collateral contract, separate from that between vendor and purchaser, entitling him not only to receive the price but also to sue for it. ⁵⁴

“The auctioneer sues for the price by virtue of his special property and his lien, and also, in most cases, by virtue of his contract with the buyer that the price shall be paid into his hands.” ⁵⁵

An auctioneer is agent to sell at an open sale, but it has been held that he has no authority to give warranties as to the property auctioned unless he has been expressly authorised to do so ⁵⁶; authority to receive a contract deposit may be implied. ⁵⁷ Although the auctioneer is primarily an agent for the vendor, he was also the agent of a purchaser to sign a contemporary memorandum sufficient to satisfy s.40 of the Law of Property Act 1925 ⁵⁸; and it may be that the same reasoning applies now that the actual contract has to be in writing under the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s.2. ⁵⁹ The authority of the auctioneer to sign was held to arise directly the contract is concluded, and, at any rate on the part of the vendor, was said to be irrevocable. ⁶⁰ The authority did not extend to the auctioneer's clerk unless the purchaser assented to the clerk's signing for him. ⁶¹

Real estate agents ⁶²

31-012

In England and Wales, an agent employed by the vendor to find a purchaser is an agent in a limited sense only. ⁶³ He has authority to describe the property and make statements as to its value so as to bind his principal, ⁶⁴ but he has no implied authority to receive a pre-contract deposit on such terms as to make the prospective vendor liable ⁶⁵ and no power, without express authority, to conclude a contract for a lease ⁶⁶ or a sale. ⁶⁷ He therefore provides an example of what has been called above “incomplete” or “canvassing agency”. ⁶⁸ It has been held that if he is instructed to sell, he is impliedly authorised to sign on behalf of his principal an open contract of sale, but not a contract containing special conditions. ⁶⁹ It is his duty to communicate to his principal the best offer received by him at any time before a binding contract for the sale of the property has been actually signed by the principal, ⁷⁰ unless, of course, he has been informed by his principal that such an offer is not acceptable ⁷¹; and in general he owes fiduciary duties to his principal. ⁷²

Solicitors ⁷³

31-013

⚠ Solicitors provide professional services, but may also have agency functions. In litigation, there are decisions that a solicitor, acting under a general retainer, has implied authority to accept service of process and appear for the client, but has no authority to commence an action. ⁷⁴ As between client and opponent, the former is in general bound by the acts of his solicitor done in the ordinary course of practice. Solicitors and counsel were said to have a general implied authority to effect a reasonable compromise (unless forbidden) in all matters connected with the suit in question and not merely collateral to it. They would therefore have apparent authority ⁷⁵ to do so even if forbidden by the client, against a third party without notice of the limitation ⁷⁶; though if the consent was given under a misapprehension it may be withdrawn before a consent order is drawn up. ⁷⁷ But it is not clear that such authority would be easily inferred today ⁷⁸ ⚠. By s.69 of the Law of Property Act 1925, the production of a deed containing a receipt for consideration money is authority for payment of that money in cash to the solicitor.

Partners

31-014

The law of partnership raises many questions of agency law. The authority of partners is primarily ⁷⁹ set out in s.5 of the Partnership Act 1890, which provides that:

“Every partner is an agent of the firm ⁸⁰ and his other partners for the purpose of the business of the partnership; and the acts of every partner who does any act for carrying on in the usual way business of the kind carried on by the firm of which he is a member bind the firm and his partners, unless the partner so acting has in fact no authority to act for the firm in the particular matter, and the person with whom he is dealing either knows that he has no authority, or does not know or believe him to be a partner.” ⁸¹

This section sets out the principles of actual and apparent authority as applicable to partners. As a consequence of this general rule, the firm will prima facie be liable for any act done by a partner on behalf of the firm ⁸² if it was done for the purpose of carrying on the partnership business in the usual way, even though it was not in fact authorised by the other partners. The wording of the section, which dates from a time when the distinction between actual and apparent authority, and between them and vicarious liability in tort, was less well understood than it is now, has been held wide enough to make a partner liable for the fraud of another partner outside the scope not only of actual or apparent authority, but sufficiently connected with the acts he was asked to do to be regarded as done in the course of the firm's business. ⁸³

Insurance agents and brokers ⁸⁴

31-015

The agent of an insurance company, working on commission or as an employee, normally acts for the company, though his authority may not extend far beyond the submission of proposals. ⁸⁵ It has however been held that he may become the agent of the proposer if he assists in the completion of the proposal form. ⁸⁶ An insurance broker, on the other hand, is prima facie an agent of the assured and not of the underwriter ⁸⁷; though he may also act as the underwriter's agent in certain respects, e.g. the handling of claims—a situation which has been construed as giving rise to a conflict of interests. ⁸⁸ He may also act on behalf of reinsurers required by the insuring underwriter. ⁸⁹

Deemed agency: credit transactions

31-016

A dealer may be deemed to be the agent of the creditor if he negotiates a regulated consumer credit agreement, e.g. a loan, hire-purchase, credit-sale or conditional sale agreement, as regards representations made to the debtor, and for the purpose of receiving notice of cancellation, revocation of offer and rescission. ⁹⁰ He may also at common law be its agent in other respects ⁹¹; but there is no general agency relationship, and he acts primarily on his own behalf. ⁹²

^{39.} See Munday (1977) 6 Anglo-Am.L.Rev. 221 (a valuable survey). As to the converse situation of buying for another, see Feise v Wray (1802) 3 East 93; below, para.31-165.

- 40. Baring v Corrie (1818) 2 B. & Ald. 137, 143 per Abbott C.J.; see also Stevens v Biller (1883) 25 Ch. D. 31, 37. The definition of mercantile agent in the Factors Act 1889 has no relevance to the definition of a factor at common law: Rolls Razor Ltd v Cox [1967] 1 Q.B. 552, 568. See further below, paras 31-079 et seq.
- 41. Baring v Corrie, above.
- 42. Drinkwater v Goodwin (1775) 1 Cowp. 251.
- 43. Drinkwater v Goodwin, above; see Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.9-009; Lomnicka and Morse, Contemporary Issues in Commercial Law (1997), p.161; below, para.31-099.
- 44. Baring v Corrie (1818) 2 B. & Ald. 137; Linck, Moeller & Co v Jameson & Co (1885) 2 T.L.R. 206.
- 45. See Goodhart and Hamson (1932) 4 C.L.J. 320; below, paras 31-063 et seq.
- 46. See JM Weatherspoon & Co Ltd v Henry Agency House (1961) 28 Malaya L.J. 86.
- 47. Morris v Cleasby (1816) 4 M. & S. 566, 574; Hornby v Lacy (1817) 6 M. & S. 166. See Chorley (1929) 45 L.Q.R. 221; (1930) 46 L.Q.R. 11.
- 48. Thomas Gabriel & Sons v Churchill & Sim [1914] 2 K.B. 1272; cf. Rusholme & Bolton & Roberts Hadfield v SG Read & Co [1955] 1 W.L.R. 146 (confirming house).
- 49. Churchill & Sim v Goddard [1937] 1 K.B. 92.
- 50. Bramwell v Spiller (1871) 21 L.T. 672.
- 51. Shaw v Woodcock (1827) 7 B. & C. 73. But this would be rare nowadays: cf. Nouvelles Huileries Anversoises SA v HC Mann & Co (1924) 40 T.L.R. 804.
- 52. Couturier v Hastie (1852) 8 Exch. 40; reversed on another point (1856) 5 H.L. Cas. 673. See below, para.45-050
- 53. As to confirming houses, see Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.9-021.
- 54. Chelmsford Auctions Ltd v Poole [1973] Q.B. 542. See below, para.31-099; Reynolds, n.43 above, pp.265-266. In general the third party cannot avoid his liability by paying the vendor directly: Robinson v Rutter (1855) 4 E.& B. 954, as explained in the Chelmsford Auctions case. The implication is more restricted in the case of land. The existence of the right does not mean that the auctioneer is liable to the vendor for not exercising it: Fordham v Christie, Manson & Woods Ltd [1977] E.G.D. 94.
- 55. Benton v Campbell, Parker & Co Ltd [1925] 2 K.B. 410, 416.
- 56. Payne v Lord Leconfield (1882) 51 L.J.Q.B. 642. See also Overbrooke Estates Ltd v Glencombe Properties Ltd [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1335; Collins v Howell-Jones [1981] E.G.D. 207.
- 57. See Mynn v Joliffe (1834) 1 Moo. & Rob. 326.
- 58. Chaney v Maclow [1929] 1 Ch. 461. But not where he was himself plaintiff: see Farebrother v Simmons (1822) 5 B. & Ald. 333; cf. Wilson & Sons v Pike [1949] 1 K.B. 176; below, para.31-055; Vol.I, paras 5-036 et seq.
- 59. But the section does not apply to sales by “public auction”: so that in such cases a written contract is not normally required.

- 60. Phillips v Butler [1945] Ch. 358 (highest bidder allowed to send deposit next day and in the meantime vendor withdraws auctioneer's authority—withdrawal ineffective). In principle authority is revocable: below, para.31-166. The reason given here is that a different rule "would be opening a wide door to fraud": Van Praagh v Everidge [1902] 2 Ch. 266, 270; but it is difficult to square with theory. See Reynolds in Cranston, Making Commercial Law (1997), pp.265–266.
- 61. Bell v Balls [1897] 1 Ch. 663. See in general Murdoch, Law of Estate Agency, 5th edn (2009).
- 62. See above, para.31-002; below, paras 31-115, 31-140 et seq. The qualifications and activities of estate agents are affected by the Estate Agents Act 1979: see Murdoch, Law of Estate Agency, 5th edn (2009), Ch.7. See also Consumers, Estate Agents and Redress Act 2007 Pt 3, as amended.
- 63. It should be noted that practice may differ in other jurisdictions.
- 64. Mullens v Miller (1882) 22 Ch. D. 194; Sorrell v Finch [1977] A.C. 728, 753. But he has no authority to warrant that it may lawfully be used for a particular purpose: Hill v Harris [1965] 2 Q.B. 601; and the possibility of warranty may be expressly excluded: Overbrooke Estates v Glencombe Properties Ltd [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1335; Collins v Howell-Jones [1981] E.G.D. 207.
- 65. Sorrell v Finch, above, explaining Ryan v Pilkington [1959] 1 W.L.R. 403 and overruling Goding v Frazer [1967] 1 W.L.R. 286; Burt v Claude Cousins & Co Ltd [1971] 2 Q.B. 426 and (in part) Barrington v Lee [1972] 1 Q.B. 326. But not payment: Petersen v Moloney (1951) 84 C.L.R. 91. As to deposits, see further below, para.31-109.
- 66. Thuman v Best (1907) L.T. 239; cf. Walsh v Griffiths-Jones (1980) 259 E.G. 331.
- 67. Hamer v Sharp (1874) L.R. 19 Eq. 108; Chadburn v Moore (1892) 61 L.J.Ch. 674; cf. Keen v Mear [1920] 2 Ch. 574; Rosenbaum v Belson [1900] 2 Ch. 267; Wragg v Lovett [1948] 2 All E.R. 968; Law v Robert Roberts & Co [1964] I.R. 292 (authorities reviewed). cf. Spiro v Lintern [1973] 1 W.L.R. 1002; and Jawara v Gambian Airways [1992] C.L.Y. 95, where there was authority on the facts.
- 68. Above, para.31-002.
- 69. Keen v Mear, above.
- 70. Keppel v Wheeler [1927] 1 K.B. 577.
- 71. See Burchell v Gowrie & Blockhouse Collieries [1910] A.C. 614, 625.
- 72. e.g. Regier v Campbell-Stuart [1939] Ch. 766; see below, paras 31-118 et seq.
- 73. See Cordery on Legal Services, 9th edn (looseleaf). But note United Bank of Kuwait Ltd v Hammoud [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1051, 1063, per Staughton L.J.: "I prefer to have regard to the expert evidence of today in deciding what is the ordinary authority of a solicitor". See further below, para.31-131.
- 74. Wright v Castle (1817) 3 Mer. 12.
- 75. See below, paras 31-056 et seq.
- 76. Strauss v Francis (1866) L.R. 1 Q.B. 379; Re Newen [1903] 1 Ch. 812; Little v Spreadbury [1910] 2 K.B. 658; Welsh v Roe (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 520; Thompson v Howley [1977] 1 N.Z.L.R. 16; Waugh v HB Clifford & Sons Ltd [1982] Ch. 374 (authorities reviewed); Penman v Parker [1986] 1 W.L.R. 882 (notice under Road Traffic Act); Marsden v Marsden [1972] Fam. 280 (barrister). As to the authority of a representative from a Citizens' Advice Bureau see Freeman v Sovereign Chicken Ltd [1991] I.R.L.R. 408. See below, para.31-056 (apparent authority).
- 77. Shepherd v Robinson [1919] 1 K.B. 474. See Foskett, Law and Practice of Compromise, 7th edn (2010), Ch.21.

78.  The modern position regarding solicitor's authority to bind his or her client, at any rate in Australia, is discussed at length in Pavlovic v Universal Music Australia Pty Ltd [2015] NSWCA 313.
79. See also ss.6, 7, 8, 9, 14, 17, 36, 38; and in general Lindley and Banks on Partnership, 19th edn (2010).
80. As to the meaning of "firm", see s.4.
81. But a "limited partner" has no power to bind his firm: Limited Partnerships Act 1907 s.6 (though a member of a limited liability partnership has: Limited Liability Partnerships Act 2000 s.6); and joint adventurers are not necessarily partners with power to bind each other: Heaps v Dobson (1863) 15 C.B.(N.S.) 460; cf. United Dominions Corp Ltd v Brian Pty Ltd (1985) 157 C.L.R. 1. The last 11 words of s.5 are notoriously ambiguous: see Montrose (1939) 17 Can. Bar Rev. 700-701; Thomas (1971) 6 Victoria U. of Wellington L.R. 1.
82. But not if done on his own account, or as trustee for the firm: Construction Engineering (Aust) Pty Ltd v Hexyl Pty Ltd (1985) 155 C.L.R. 541.
83. Dubai Aluminium Co Ltd v Salaam [2002] UKHL 48, [2003] 2 A.C. 366 (dishonest assistance in fraudulent scheme); Bank of Scotland v Henry Butcher & Co [2003] EWCA 67, [2003] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 557; JJ Coughlan Ltd v Ruparella [2003] EWCA Civ 1057; Northampton Regional Livestock Centre Co Ltd v Cowling [2015] EWCA Civ 651. See also the cases on solicitors, above, para.31-013.
84. See Hodgkin, Insurance Intermediaries: Law and Regulation (1992) (looseleaf).
85. See above, para.31-002. See Bawden v London, Edinburgh and Glasgow Assurance Co [1892] 2 Q.B. 534; Stone v Reliance Mutual Insurance Society Ltd [1972] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 469 (noted (1972) 88 L.Q.R. 462); Blackley v National Mutual Life Assn of Australasia Ltd [1972] N.Z.L.R. 1038; British Bank of the Middle East v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada Ltd [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 9.
86. Biggar v Rock Life Assurance Co [1902] 1 K.B. 516; Newsholme Bros v Road Transport and General Insurance Co Ltd [1929] 2 K.B. 356; contrast the cases cited above, n.84.
87. Rozanes v Bowen (1929) 32 Ll.L. Rep. 98, 101; Con-Stan Industries of Australia Pty Ltd v Norwich Winterthur (Australia) Ltd (1986) 160 C.L.R. 226; Callaghan and Hedges v Thompson [2000] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 125. But cf. Stockton v Mason [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 430, a puzzling case.
88. Anglo-African Merchants Ltd v Bayley [1970] 1 Q.B. 311; North and South Trust Co v Berkeley [1971] 1 W.L.R. 470. But see Goshawk Dedicated Ltd v Tyser & Co Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 54, [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 566 (brokers must produce documents to underwriters).
89. See General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corp Ltd v Tanter (The Zephyr) [1984] 1 W.L.R. 100; [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 529.
90. Consumer Credit Act 1974 ss.56(2), 57(3), 69(6), 102(1). See Powell v Lloyd's Bowmaker Ltd, 1996 S.L.T. 117 Sh Ct (agency as regards property sold or to be sold by dealer only; not as regards car traded in); CF Asset Finance Ltd v Okonji [2014] EWCA Civ 870, [2014] E.C.C. 23 (agency to receive notice of revocation of offer). See below, para.39-075.
91. See Financings Ltd v Stimson [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1184; cf. Campbell Discount v Gall [1961] 1 Q.B. 431; Northgran Finance v Ashley [1963] 1 Q.B. 476; Car & Universal Finance Co Ltd v Caldwell [1965] 1 Q.B. 525; Mercantile Credit Co Ltd v Hamblin [1965] 2 Q.B. 242.
92. Branwhite v Worcester Works Finance Ltd [1969] 1 A.C. 552 (but Lord Reid and Lord Wilberforce took a different view); Shogun Finance Ltd v Hudson [2003] UKHL 62, [2004] 1 A.C. 919 at [51], [52].

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 31 - Agency

Section 3. - Commercial Agents

Commercial agents

31-017

⚠ An EC Directive, the most conspicuous effect of which is to confer special rights for certain agents, designated “commercial agents”, in the event of termination of authority ⁹³ has fairly recently been brought into effect in Great Britain by regulation, ⁹⁴ ⚠ and although the notion is unfamiliar in Great Britain, ⁹⁵ cases in which agents have argued that they are entitled to the benefit of the Regulations are now appearing. They “govern the relations between commercial agents and their principals”. ⁹⁶ “Commercial agent” is defined as “a self-employed intermediary ⁹⁷ who has continuing authority ⁹⁸ to negotiate ⁹⁹ the sale or purchase of goods ¹⁰⁰ ⚠ on behalf of another person (the ‘principal’), or to negotiate and conclude the sale or purchase of goods on behalf of and in the name of ¹⁰¹ that principal”. ¹⁰² There are specific exceptions for officers of companies or associations, partners, insolvency practitioners, ¹⁰³ gratuitous agents, agents operating on commodity exchanges or in commodity markets, the Crown Agents, ¹⁰⁴ and persons whose activities as commercial agents are to be considered secondary. ¹⁰⁵ ⚠ This latter must be assessed by reference to the particular arrangement rather than the general balance of the agent’s activities. ¹⁰⁶

31-018

The main effects of the regulations are referred to at appropriate points in this chapter. They cover the duties of agent to principal and principal to agent, ¹⁰⁷ remuneration and commission, ¹⁰⁸ termination of the contract, ¹⁰⁹ (most conspicuously) rights to indemnity and compensation on such termination, ¹¹⁰ and restraint of trade clauses. ¹¹¹ Except in the case of sums payable on termination of agency, the rules do not differ much from the common law, though it is necessary to watch for differences of detail that may arise because of the specific wording of the regulations (e.g. in the case of entitlement to commission) when they apply. It should be noted also that under the regulations each party is entitled to a signed written document setting out the terms of the agency contract, including any terms subsequently agreed. ¹¹²

31-019

The notion of a “commercial agent” is not known to the common law. It has fairly narrow limits. Apart from the specific exceptions, in the United Kingdom it only applies to agents acting in respect of sales of goods and does not cover agents acting in regard to land, nor to those arranging services; it does not cover distributors who purchase for resale ¹¹³; it only applies to self-employed agents, and only to those with continuing authority. It is uncertain to what extent markets in the United Kingdom are penetrated by agents of the sort referred to. It seems likely that when the Regulations do apply, it is sometimes by accident.

The Commercial Agents Regulations: conflict of laws ¹¹⁴

31-020

❗ By virtue of reg.1(2) the regulations apply “in relation to the activities of commercial agents in Great Britain”. It is not clear how this is to be interpreted where the agent also conducts activities elsewhere,¹¹⁵ nor to what extent the word “conduct” requires the agent's presence.¹¹⁶ But a further provision, reg.1(3)(a), a modification introduced in 1998,¹¹⁷ provides that where the parties have agreed¹¹⁸ that the agency contract is to be governed by the law of another Member State,¹¹⁹ the law of that State (which is of course likely to be to similar effect) is to be applied. Assuming that the limitation in reg.1(2) continues to be valid in the absence of other indications, this rule is presumably still confined to activities in Great Britain. However, a second provision, reg.1(3)(b), introduced at the same time and in response to representations from the EC Commission, then provides that the regulations are to be applied where the law of another Member State corresponding to the regulations enables the parties to agree that the agency contract is to be governed by the law of a different Member State and the parties have agreed that it is to be governed by the law of England and Wales or Scotland. It would appear that this is directed at activities outside Great Britain, but in another Member State, where the law referred to has been chosen. The meaning and purport of these changes is extremely obscure. In particular, there is no indication of which Member State would be relevant to its application, nor of where the activities are envisaged as being conducted.¹²⁰ It has been held that the Regulations apply where an agent acts in Great Britain but under a contract governed by the law of a non-Member State, e.g. California.¹²¹ ❗

^{93.} Commercial Agents Regulations [1986] O.J. L382/17.

^{94.} ❗ By the Commercial Agents (Council Directive) Regulations 1993 (SI 1993/3053) as amended by SI 1993/3173 and SI 1998/2868; Northern Ireland is covered by the Commercial Agents (Council Directive) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1993 (SI 1993/483), effective from January 14, 1994. There is a full discussion in Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), Ch.11. For specialised works see Saintier and Scholes, Commercial Agents and the Law (2005); Randolph and Davey, The European Law of Commercial Agency, 3rd edn (2010); Singleton, Commercial Agency Agreements: Law and Practice, 4th edn (2015).

^{95.} A useful analysis of the functions of a commercial agent is given by A.G. Trstenjak in Wood Floor Solutions Andreas Domberger GmbH v Silva Trade SA (C-19/09) [2010] I.L.Pr. 21 at AG53 et seq.

^{96.} Commercial Agents Regulations reg.1(2). In Wood Floor Solutions Andreas Domberger GmbH v Silva Trade SA (C-19/09) [2010] 1 W.L.R. 900 the CJEU treated such a contract as one for the provisions of services for the purposes of Council Regulation 44/2001 on jurisdiction and the enforcement of judgments. (This report does not include the opinion of A.G. Trstenjak, above.)

^{97.} Such agency is not confined to natural persons: Bell Electric Ltd v Aweco Appliance Systems GmbH & Co [2002] EWHC 872, [2002] Eu. L.R. 443. The intermediary may have several principals: Rossetti Marketing Ltd v Diamond Sofa Co Ltd [2011] EWHC 2482 (QB), [2011] E.C.C. 28; point not referred to on appeal [2012] EWCA Civ 1021, [2013] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 308.

^{98.} This might exclude some agents whose functions were purely canvassing (above, para.31-002), i.e. introducing business in some limited way. But in many cases there is an appointment of an agent whose main or even sole function is to introduce business over a period, and several cases accept such persons as coming within the definition: e.g. the cases cited below, n.98 and Fern Computer Consultancy Ltd v Intergraph Cadworx & Analysis Solutions Inc [2014] EWHC 2908 (Ch), [2014] Bus. L.R. 1397. Authority may be “continuing” if there is authority to conclude a single contract plus authority to negotiate extensions: Poseidon Chartering BV v Marianne Zeeschip VO (C-3/04) [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 105.

^{99.} “Negotiate” does not require that the agent have authority to agree terms: PJ Pipe & Valve Co Ltd v Audco India Ltd [2005] EWHC 1904 (QB), [2006] Eu. L.R. 368; Nigel Fryer Joinery

Services Ltd v Ian Firth Hardware Ltd [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1080; Invicta UK v International Brands Ltd [2013] EWHC 1564 (QB), [2013] E.C.C. 30.

100.

❗As to which see Tamarind International Ltd v Eastern Natural Gas (Retail) Ltd [2000] Eu. L.R. 708 (gas). This would include computer software supplied together with some hardware: whether software would rank as “goods”, or a “perpetual” licence with end users would rank as “sale” for the purpose of these European regulations (as opposed to under the Sale of Goods Act 1979: see below, para.44-015), is considered in Fern Computer Consultancy Ltd v Intergraph Cadworx & Analysis Solutions Inc [2014] EWHC 2908 (Ch), [2014] Bus. L.R. 1397 at [61] et seq. See also Software Incubator Ltd v Computer Associates Ltd [2016] EWHC 1587 (QB).

101.

This would appear to include situations where the principal is unidentified: see below, para. 31-089. But it does not include indirect agents (commissionnaires, above, para.31-004, n.15): Mavrona & Sia OE v Delta Etaireia Symettochon AE (C-85/03) [2004] O.J. C94/17; or in general agents who contract in their own name, which would cover agents for undisclosed principals: Sagal v Atelier Bunz GmbH [2009] EWCA Civ 700, [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 303.

102.

Commercial Agents Regulations reg.2(1). A national law requiring such agents to register cannot prevent the application of the Directive: Bellone v Yokohama SpA (C-215/97) [1998] E.C.R. I-2191.

103.

As defined in s.388 of the Insolvency Act 1986 (as amended).

104.

Commercial Agents Regulations reg.2(1), (2).

105.

❗Commercial Agents Regulations reg.1(3). This provision is defined specifically for the UK by a Schedule. The vires of this part of the regulations was unsuccessfully challenged in Crane v Sky In-Home Services Ltd [2007] EWHC 66 (Ch), [2007] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 599. The commodity exception is considered in W Nagel v Pluczenik Diamond Co NV [2017] EWHC 1750 (Comm), when it was held that the activities of a diamond broker were in the commodity market, some particular operations outside the exception ranking as secondary.

106.

See AMB Imballaggi Plastics SRL v Pacflex Ltd [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 249, 254; Tamarind International Ltd v Eastern Natural Gas (Retail) Ltd [2000] Eu. L.R. 708; Edwards v International Connection (UK) Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 662; Crane v Sky In-Home Services Ltd [2007] EWHC 66 (Ch), [2007] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 599 (extended discussion). UK courts, interpreting an extremely obscure definition contained in the Schedule to the regulations (described as “an almost impenetrable piece of drafting” in AMB Imballaggi v Pacflex Ltd [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 249, 254), have used the restriction to impose quite strict limits on when the regulations apply, seeking to confine them to what may be called “goodwill-generating” functions even when some other agency function is more prominent. See Gailey v Environmental Waste Controls 2004 Scot SC 300 (OH), [2004] Eu.L.R.423; McAdam v Boxpak Ltd [2006] CSIH 9, 2006 S.L.T. 217. See a careful discussion of the genesis of the provision by Saintier [2012] J.B.L. 128; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), paras 11-020 et seq. On a smaller scale, an argument, based on Crane v Sky In-Home, above, that where software is sold linked to hardware the hardware is the goods and the software only secondary was rejected in Fern Computer Consultancy Ltd v Intergraph Cadworx & Analysis Solutions Inc [2014] EWHC 2908 (Ch), [2014] Bus. L.R. 1397.

107.

Below, paras 31-112—31-115, 31-136.

108.

Below, para.31-149.

109.

Below, para.31-152.

110.

Below, paras 31-153 et seq.

111.

Below, para.31-159.

- 112. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.13(1); a purported waiver is void: reg.13(2). The consequences of non-compliance are not stated.
- 113. AMB Imballaggi Plastics SRL v Pacflex Ltd [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 249; Crane v Sky In-Home Service Ltd [2007] EWHC 66 (Ch), [2007] Eu. L.R. 549; Sagal v Atelier Bunz GmbH [2009] EWCA 700, [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 303. But a commercial agent may be remunerated by markup: Mercantile International Group Plc v Chuan Soon Huat Industrial Group Plc [2002] EWCA Civ 288, [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 788.
- 114. See Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn (2012), paras 33-420 et seq.
- 115. See discussion in Fern Computer Consultancy Ltd v Intergraph Cadworx & Analysis Solutions Inc [2014] EWHC 2908 (Ch), [2014] Bus. L.R. 1397 at [108] et seq.
- 116. See Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn (2012), para.33-422.
- 117. By the Commercial Agents (Council Directive) (Amendment) Regulations 1998 (SI 1998/2868).
- 118. A commercial agency contract was held subject to Spanish law in Lawlor v Sandrik Mining & Construction, etc., Co [2012] EWHC 1188 (QB), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep 25, apparently on the basis of art.4(2) of the Rome Convention (operative at the relevant time). A point is that some of the activities appear to have taken place outside Great Britain.
- 119. This includes a state which is a party to the Oporto EEA agreement of 1992 as adjusted by the Brussels Protocol of 1993: reg.2 of SI 1993/3173 as amended by reg.2 of SI 1998/2868, above.
- 120. The meaning of this amendment is considered in Fern Computer Consultancy Ltd v Intergraph Cadworx & Analysis Solutions Inc [2014] EWHC 2908 (Ch), [2014] Bus. L.R. 1397 at [114]-[115]. See also Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn (2012), para.33-423.
- 121.  Ingmar GB Ltd v Leonard Technologies Inc [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 329 ECJ. See this case criticised by Verhagen (2002) 51 I.C.L.Q. 135; Roth (2002) 3 C.M.L.Rev. 369. See further Accentuate Ltd v Asigra Inc [2009] EWHC 2655 (QB), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 599, where an arbitration clause in a contract governed by the law of Ontario was held void even though the arbitration had already taken place. In that case service out of the jurisdiction was permitted, though the (contractual) justification for this was later rejected in Fern Computer Consultancy Ltd v Intergraph Cadworx & Analysis Solutions Inc [2014] EWHC 2908 (Ch), [2014] Bus. L.R.1397 at [114]-[115], on the basis that the claim for compensation under the regulations, was statutory, or at best tortious. Where no ground for service out can be found, it seems that the regulations can thus be evaded by choice of a foreign law and (preferably) jurisdiction: see the Fern case, above, at [54]. See discussion in Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), pp.724-725; Carruthers, Agency Law in Commercial Practice (2016).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 4. - Creation of Agency

Creation of agency

31-021

The relationship of principal and agent is created by an express or implied agreement conferring authority on the agent, which usually is but need not be accompanied by a contract. Authority can also be conferred retrospectively by ratification, and may perhaps arise by operation of law where the old doctrine of agency of necessity applies. Furthermore, the principal may be bound to the third party under the doctrine of apparent authority or in some cases under the general doctrine of estoppel: this is dealt with in the section on the principal's relations with third parties. ¹²²

¹²². Below, para.31-056.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 31 - Agency

Section 4. - Creation of Agency

(a) - Express Agreement

How agency constituted

31-022

The appointment must be by the principal or by someone else with authority (actual or apparent) to act for him. An agent may of course be appointed in formal words, as by a power of attorney or a specific letter of appointment. But a grant of authority may be informal. In all situations, the substance of the matter is more important than the form. A retailer who describes himself as agent for a manufacturer is in fact more likely to buy from the manufacturer and sell to the customer, ¹²³ and a person who agrees to procure goods may do so as agent, but may equally purport to do no more than buy them and offer or resell them to his principal. ¹²⁴ A contract describing the parties respectively as principal and agent may in law have the effect, not of constituting agency, but of establishing a relationship between the parties as principals. ¹²⁵ On the other hand, the relationship of agency may be created by an express agreement although the contract nowhere actually describes the parties as principal and agent. For example, where a director was authorised by a general meeting of shareholders to carry out negotiations for the sale of the shares of the company, the shareholders were held to have appointed him as their agent. ¹²⁶ So also, where a letter of credit is opened, the relationship between the issuing and confirming bank is in certain respects that of principal and agent. ¹²⁷ There may be agency even where the parties by their agreement purport to exclude such a possibility, if this is the true interpretation of their relationship. ¹²⁸

Form

31-023

An agent, for whatever purpose he is appointed, may, in general, be appointed orally. There are some statutory exceptions. Thus ss.53 and 54 of the Law of Property Act 1925 which require certain instruments to be in writing, require written authorisation for signature by an agent. By s.53(1)(b) of that Act it is provided that a declaration of trust respecting any land or any interest therein must be manifested and proved by some writing signed by some person who is able to declare such trust or by will. But where land is bought by an agent, the principal may prove a trust in his favour by parol evidence even where the land has been conveyed to the agent, for otherwise the statute would serve as a cloak for fraud. ¹²⁹ Writing was not necessary to empower an agent to act in cases within s.40 of the Law of Property Act 1925, requiring a "note or memorandum" in certain land transactions ¹³⁰; and the position remains the same under s.2 of the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, which requires that the actual contract be in writing. ¹³¹ Nor is it necessary to authorise an agent in writing to sign an acknowledgement for the purposes of the Limitation Acts. ¹³² Nor need a del credere agent be appointed in writing. ¹³³

Deeds

31-024

But sometimes statutes require the appointment of an agent to be by deed.¹³⁴ And a deed can only be executed by an agent, so as to bind his principal, if the authority to execute it is conferred by deed,¹³⁵ unless the deed is executed in the actual presence of the principal,¹³⁶ or its execution is not required by law in the particular case.¹³⁷ But by virtue of the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s.1, a deed is no longer required to authorise delivery of a deed (e.g. by a solicitor).¹³⁸

Powers of attorney

31-025

⚠ A power of attorney is a formal granting of authority by one person to another to act on the first person's behalf, usually in situations of illness or absence, though sometimes for commercial purposes.¹³⁹ By virtue of the Powers of Attorney Act 1971 s.1,¹⁴⁰ an instrument creating a power of attorney must be executed as a deed¹⁴¹ by the donor of the power.¹⁴² ⚠ The use of a prescribed form is also required for a Lasting Power of Attorney under the Mental Capacity Act 2005.¹⁴³

^{123.} See, e.g. WT Lamb & Sons v Goring Brick Co Ltd [1932] 1 K.B. 710; Michelin Tyre Co Ltd v MacFarlane (Glasgow) Ltd (1917) 55 Sc.L.Rep. 35 HL; Sproule v Triumph Motor Cycle Co [1927] N.I. 83; International Harvester Co of Australia Pty Ltd v Carrigan's Hazeldene Pastoral Co (1958) 100 C.L.R. 644. See also above, para.31-003 n.12. The distinction turns largely but not entirely on whether he takes the profit on resale or is remunerated by commission: see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 1-048, 1-049. The question has arisen in the context of the Commercial Agents Regulations, above, para.31-019; also in the specialised context of Value Added Tax. See Commissioners of Customs and Excise v Johnson [1980] S.T.C. 624 (provision of educational courses); Potter v Commissioners of Customs and Excise [1985] S.T.C. 45 ("Tupperware" sold at specially convened functions); Hill v Commissioners of Customs and Excise [1988] S.T.C. 424 (craft pottery); Commissioners of Customs and Excise v Paget [1989] S.T.C. 773 (school photographs sold to parents); Cornhill Management Ltd v Commissioners of Customs and Excise [1991] 1 V.A.T.T.R. 1 (fund managers); Commissioners of Customs and Excise v Music and Video Exchange Ltd [1992] S.T.C. 220 (profit on resale as commission). See also Welsh Development Agency v Export Finance Co Ltd [1992] B.C.L.C. 148. As to the distinction between agent and borrower in the context of subsidiary companies, see Atlas Maritime Co SA v Avalon Maritime Co Ltd (The Coral Rose) (No.1) [1994] 4 All E.R. 769.

^{124.} See, e.g. Ireland v Livingston (1871) L.R. 5 H.L. 395; Brown & Gracie Ltd v FW Green & Co Pty Ltd [1960] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 289; Anglo-African Shipping Co of New York Inc v J Mortner Ltd [1962] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 610.

^{125.} Motor Union Insurance Co Ltd v Mannheimer Versicherungs Gesellschaft [1933] 1 K.B. 812 (reinsurance).

^{126.} Briess v Woolley [1954] A.C. 333.

^{127.} Bank Melli Iran v Barclays Bank (DCO) [1951] 2 T.L.R. 1057. See below, paras 34-524, 34-525.

^{128.} Ex p. Delhasse (1878) 7 Ch. D. 511. But see below, para.31-063, as to undisclosed principals.

^{129.} Rochefoucauld v Boustead [1897] 1 Ch. 196; Heard v Pilley (1869) L.R. 4 Ch. App. 548; Cave v Mackenzie (1877) 46 L.J.Ch. 564; Du Boulay v Raggett (1988) 58 P. & C.R. 138. See also Hodgson v Marks [1971] Ch. 892, 933.

^{130.} Grindell v Bass [1920] 2 Ch. 487. See the 30th edition of the present work, Vol.I, paras 4-031, 4-036, 4-072 et seq.

- 131. See McLaughlin v Duffill [2008] EWCA Civ 1627, [2010] Ch. 1, distinguishing the position under s.53(1) of the Law of Property Act 1925. For further discussion see Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.8-004.
- 132. Limitation Act 1980 s.30(2); see Wright v Pepin [1954] 1 W.L.R. 635. See Vol.I, para.28-101.
- 133. Couturier v Hastie (1852) 8 Exch. 400; 5 H.L. Cas. 673; Sutton & Co v Grey [1894] 1 Q.B. 285. See above, para.31-010; below, para.45-049.
- 134. e.g. Trustee Act 1925 s.25 as substituted by Trustee Delegation Act 1999 s.5.
- 135. Berkeley v Hardy (1826) 5 B. & C. 355; Powell v London & Provincial Bank [1893] 2 Ch. 555, 563; Windsor Refrigerator Co v Branch Nominees [1961] Ch. 88; Phoenix Properties Ltd v Wimpole Street Nominees Ltd [1992] B.C.L.C. 737.
- 136. R. v Longnor (Inhabitants) (1833) 4 B. & Ad. 647.
- 137. Hunter v Parker (1840) 7 M. & W. 322, 344; Marchant v Morton, Down & Co [1901] 2 K.B. 829; Windsor Refrigerator Co v Branch Nominees [1961] Ch. 88, on appeal [1961] Ch. 375.
- 138. There is a conclusive presumption of authority in the case of delivery by a solicitor or licensed conveyancer in certain circumstances: see s.1(5). See in general Virgo and Harpum [1991] L.M.C.L.Q. 209.
- 139. See Aldridge, Powers of Attorney, 10th edn (2007).
- 140. As amended by the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s.4 and Sch.1.
- 141. As to the requisites of a deed (e.g. as to witnesses) see Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s.1. An imperfect power of attorney may rank as an informal authorisation in writing: Rose v Rose (1986) 7 N.S.W.L.R. 679.
- 142.  The Act also makes provision for proof of powers of attorney (s.3), and provides a form of general power of attorney (s.10 and Sch.1). Depositing or filing of instruments creating powers of attorney is not now necessary: s.2. The donee may normally execute any instrument, sign or do any act in his own name: s.7 (as amended by the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s.4 and Sch.1). Guidance as to wording to be used for execution in the attorney's name is given in Yu Hing Tong Ltd v Fung Hing Chiu Cyril [2016] 5 H.K.L.R.D. 567.
- 143. Mental Capacity Act 2005 s.9 and Sch.1. See below, paras 31-168, 31-172.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 4. - Creation of Agency
(b) - Implied Agreement

Implied agreement

31-026

There are cases in which agency may be implied, although no authority was ever specifically given in fact. "While agency must ultimately derive from consent, the consent need not necessarily be to the relationship of principal and agent itself (indeed the existence of it may be denied) but it may be to a state of fact upon which the law imposes the consequences which result from agency". ¹⁴⁴ The most usual way in which this occurs is by an unwritten request, or by implication from the recognition of the principal of, or from his acquiescence in, the acts of another. ¹⁴⁵ The conduct of both parties is interpreted objectively: it is sufficient if the agent is reasonable in forming the opinion that he is authorised. ¹⁴⁶ On the other side therefore, the consent of the agent may be inferred from his acting on behalf of the principal ¹⁴⁷; but the mere fact that he does what was requested by the principal does not necessarily mean that he does it on the principal's behalf. ¹⁴⁸

^{144.} Branwhite v Worcester Works Finance Ltd [1969] 1 A.C. 552, 587, per Lord Wilberforce; see also Pole v Leask (1862) 33 L.J.Ch. 155, 161-162.

^{145.} Little v Spreadbury [1910] 2 K.B. 658; Hely-Hutchinson v Brayhead Ltd [1968] 1 Q.B. 549; see also Garnac Grain Co Inc v HMF Faure & Fairclough Ltd [1968] A.C. 1130n., 1137; Swiss Air Transport Co Ltd v Palmer [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 604; Townsend's Carriers Ltd v Pfizer Ltd (1977) 33 P. & C.R. 361 (landlord and tenant situation). But mere silence need not always import acquiescence: Burnside v Dayrell (1849) 3 Exch. 244.

^{146.} See Hudson Bay Apparel Brands LLC v Umbro International Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 949 at [49], [50], [2010] E.T.M.R. 15.

^{147.} Roberts v Ogilby (1821) 9 Price 269; Moore v Peachey (1891) 7 T.L.R. 748.

^{148.} Kennedy v De Trafford [1897] A.C. 180; Garnac Grain Co Inc v HMF Faure & Fairclough Ltd, above.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 31 - Agency

Section 4. - Creation of Agency

(c) - Ratification

General rule

31-027

⚠ An act done for another by a person not assuming to act for himself, but for such other person, though without any precedent authority, may rank as the act of the principal if subsequently ratified by him. ¹⁴⁹ ⚠ This can be regarded as a retrospective conferring of authority and much of its reasoning proceeds on the basis of that analogy. Although it is here classified as a method of creation of agency, it applies more frequently to persons already agents who are not authorised in the relevant respect. It operates on the act ratified only and does not confer any future authority, though a series of ratifications might give rise to apparent authority. ¹⁵⁰ A purported ratification in advance can be no more than a promise to ratify, enforceable if supported by consideration. Ratification is in principle to be confined to situations where the third party did not at the time of contracting know that the agent was unauthorised. At common law, situations where the third party did have such knowledge at the time of contracting would require a different analysis. ¹⁵¹ Views vary as to whether or not the doctrine is anomalous. It is certainly often convenient; but it requires safeguards to prevent unfair results.

Proof of ratification

31-028

⚠ Ratification will be implied from any act showing an intention to adopt the transaction, including commencement of or pleading in an action at law on the transaction in question. ¹⁵² No action in reliance is required. It may be inferred in appropriate cases even from silence or mere acquiescence ¹⁵³ ⚠; and it seems clear that, like the grant of authority, it need not be communicated to the third party. ¹⁵⁴ But if an act is adopted at all, it will be held to have been adopted throughout. ¹⁵⁵ Ratification of a contract required to be in writing need not be in writing, ¹⁵⁶ but ratification of a contract required to be made by deed must be by deed. ¹⁵⁷

Who can ratify

31-029

A contract can only be ratified by the person on whose behalf it was purportedly made: an undisclosed principal cannot ratify. ¹⁵⁸ But if the contract was purportedly made on behalf of a principal, the fact that the agent actually intended to act for himself is irrelevant. ¹⁵⁹ Despite difficulties in earlier cases, it has been held in the context of insurance that an unidentified principal ¹⁶⁰ may ratify, and there seems no reason why this should not be true in all contexts, despite difficulties in ascertaining the actual party for whom the agent acted. ¹⁶¹ But a person who was not in existence and contemplated at the time a contract was made, e.g. a person who might in the future come within a particular class, cannot do so, though he can be the beneficiary of a trust, ¹⁶² a third party beneficiary of a contract ¹⁶³ or perhaps the offeree of a unilateral contract. ¹⁶⁴ It is not clear whether the personal representatives of a deceased person may ratify contracts made on his behalf, but they can plainly ratify contracts made for the estate. ¹⁶⁵

Knowledge of circumstances

31-030

It is often said that a person ratifying a contract must, at least in order to be bound, know fully of all the material circumstances in which the act is done ¹⁶⁶; so a principal does not ratify a wrongful distress by receiving the proceeds of it unless he has full knowledge of the wrongful act, ¹⁶⁷ and will not be deemed to have ratified a voidable transaction if he did not know that it was voidable. ¹⁶⁸ But the principal will obviously be bound if he intends to ratify the act in any event; thus where an agent had wrongfully signed a distress warrant and levied distress, and the principal, when informed, had said that he would leave the matter in the agent's hands, the principal was held to have ratified the agent's act and to be responsible for irregularities in the levying of the distress. ¹⁶⁹ And the principal may be liable even though he has no knowledge of the legal effect of the act ratified ¹⁷⁰ or of collateral matters affecting its nature, e.g. that a purchase amounted to a conversion. ¹⁷¹ It seems that this is correctly analysed as an internal principle, i.e. one referable to the position between principal and agent. Where a third party is involved, a lower degree of knowledge by the principal may entitle the third party to rely on ratification: thus it has been said that he might do so despite the fact that the principal in fact was unaware that the act was unauthorised, and hence that there was anything to ratify. ¹⁷² Although it has been said that in such a situation what occurs is still ratification, ¹⁷³ it is close to estoppel. In general however the very broad nature of the internal rules as to ratification by conduct will make estoppel, or similar reasoning directed only to the third party, unnecessary.

Capacity: void and voidable acts

31-031

The doctrine of ratification presupposes that the principal could validly have done the act at the time it was done. Thus a company not formed at the time of the act, but formed before the time of purported ratification, cannot ratify ¹⁷⁴; and a person in some other way lacking capacity at the time of the original act ¹⁷⁵ cannot ratify. Beyond this, it is sometimes said that whereas a voidable act can be ratified, a void one cannot, and this idea can be used to justify the proposition that a forgery cannot be ratified. ¹⁷⁶ But the word "void" is not helpful: almost any unauthorised act on behalf of another could be called void, yet it is precisely such acts which are the subject matter of the doctrine of ratification. ¹⁷⁷ The capacity cases can be explained as a separate category, and in the central case of forgery the forger does not profess to act for but as another. ¹⁷⁸

Effect of ratification between principal and agent

31-032

It is often said that the effect of ratification is to put all parties in the position in which they would have been had the transaction been authorised. This is not entirely correct. The third party is entitled to take advantage of the ratification with such a result against the principal, and the principal against the third party: but it does not follow that the agent is freed from liability to the principal for exceeding his authority. The principal might have ratified out of commercial necessity, to preserve his reputation, or might have been held to have ratified as against the third party despite not being fully aware of the circumstances. ¹⁷⁹ It may therefore be necessary to determine whether the principal's ratification as regards the third party was a waiver or exoneration as regards the agent or not. ¹⁸⁰

Third parties

31-033

As stated above, as regards the third party a ratified transaction is valid as if authorised. Thus if an action is commenced without authority and is not properly constituted, the plaintiff can ratify his solicitor's act, so that it is not open to the defendant to object that the action is not properly brought. ¹⁸¹ Ratification is effective notwithstanding that the person ratifying at first repudiated the act. ¹⁸² More surprisingly it has been held that the retrospective effect of ratification may be such that a ratified contract is valid even though the third party has between formation and ratification purported to withdraw from it ¹⁸³ unless it was made subject to ratification ¹⁸⁴ or has been rescinded. ¹⁸⁵ This rule, often referred to as the rule in Bolton Partners v Lambert ¹⁸⁶ is controversial, and is subject to various limits, as appears from what follows.

Limits on ratification

31-034

It is plain that there must be some limits on the applicability of ratification, which is a sensible and practical idea in many situations, but could give rise to obviously unfair results in others. There has been little agreement, however, on what technique is to be used for this purpose. In the famous case of Bird v Brown ¹⁸⁷ it was held that stoppage in transitu could not be ratified after the transitus had ended. This can be explained on the basis that to allow ratification would have been to divest a property interest, that of the consignee; or more generally that it would allow a time limit to be extended by ratification. The notion that a property interest cannot be divested by a ratification must certainly, if confined to the strict sense of property rights and their validity against third parties, ¹⁸⁸ be correct, and may explain this case and another holding that the unauthorised exercise of an option cannot be ratified after the expiry of the relevant period. ¹⁸⁹ But the contractual aspect of the second situation can be considered separately, and in general a time limit rule is too narrow to provide a solution. There are in fact other situations where it is thought that ratification should be permitted even though the effect is to extend a time limit. It has been said that ratification must be within a reasonable time "which cannot extend after the time at which the contract is to commence". ¹⁹⁰ But although it has been suggested that such a reasonable time rule should be the main control ¹⁹¹ there are numerous dicta against the existence of such a rule. ¹⁹² It has fairly recently been held that ratification of an act which if authorised would have prevented the limitation period from running is effective though it takes place after the expiry of the period. ¹⁹³ The question is elaborately discussed in this case (where many different lines of reasoning are deployed) and in two more recent decisions, one not allowing ratification, ¹⁹⁴ the other permitting it. ¹⁹⁵ What emerges from these three cases is that the matter can only be solved by a general principle, of which even the property cases are perhaps to be treated as examples, that ratification is not effective where to allow it would be unfairly prejudicial to the other party. ¹⁹⁶ On this basis, a ratification on which the ratifier does not rely against the third party might, in some circumstances, be effective against the ratifier.

^{149.}  Wilson v Tumman (1843) 6 M. & G. 236, 242; Bird v Brown (1850) 4 Exch. 786; Firth v Staines [1897] 2 Q.B. 70. For more modern formulations see Suncorp Insurance and Finance Co Ltd v Milano Assicurazioni SpA [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 225; Yona International Ltd v La Réunion Française Société Anonyme d'Assurances et de Réassurances [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 84, 103, 106. See in general Krebs, Agency Law in Commercial Practice (2016).

^{150.} See below, para.31-056.

^{151.} Normally, as a contract "subject to ratification". See below, n.183; Watson v Davies [1931] 1 Ch. 455; Warehousing and Forwarding Co of East Africa v Jafferli & Sons [1964] A.C. 1; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.2-050.

^{152.} Celthene Pty Ltd v WKJ Hauliers Pty Ltd [1981] 1 N.S.W.L.R. 606, 614. But this must perhaps occur within a reasonable time: see below, para.31-034.

^{153.}  Bank Melli Iran v Barclays Bank (DCO) [1951] 2 T.L.R. 1057, 1063; see also Lyell v Kennedy

- (1889) 14 App. Cas. 437. Ratification by acquiescence may be more difficult to establish in the case of an executory contract than in the case of an executed one, for in the latter there may be no choice but to take the benefit of the transaction. See, e.g. Foreman & Co Pty Ltd v The Liddesdale [1900] A.C. 190. But a person who did not intend to ratify may in appropriate cases be estopped from proving that he did not do so. See also Sino Channel Asia Ltd v Dana Shipping and Trading Pte Singapore [2016] EWHC 1118 (Comm) (no ratification of arbitration held without valid service (because of lack of authority to receive it), and hence without participation, by inactivity after award made).
- 154. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.2-076; accepted in Pagnan SpA v Feed Products Ltd [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 601, 613; Shell Co of Australia Ltd v Nat Shipping Bagging Services Ltd (The Kilmun) [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1, 8, 11, 14; AMB Generali Holding AG v SEB Trygg Holding Aktiebolaget [2005] EWCA Civ 1237, [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 318 at [37].
- 155. Union Bank of Australia v McClintock [1922] 1 A.C. 240; Bank Melli Iran v Barclays Bank (DCO), above; Commercial Banking Co of Sydney v Mann [1961] A.C. 1. But where particular matters can be separated out, the operation of this principle can give rise to difficulty: cf. Harrisons & Crossfield Ltd v LNWR [1917] 2 K.B. 755; Hughes v Hughes (1971) 115 S.J. 911 (ratification of sale of house does not cover contract with estate agent); Accidia Foundation Ltd v Simon C. Dickinson Ltd [2010] EWHC 3058 (Ch) (ratification of sale does not involve ratification of commission agreement); and see Canadian Laboratory Supplies Ltd v Engelhard Industries of Canada Ltd [1979] 2 S.C.R. 787, 801 et seq.; (1979) 97 D.L.R. (3d) 1, 11 et seq.
- 156. Macleay v Dunn (1828) 4 Bing. 722; Soames v Spencer (1822) 1 D. & R. 32; Sheridan v Higgins [1971] I.R. 291.
- 157. Hunter v Parker (1840) 7 M. & W. 322; Kidderminster Corp v Hardwick (1873) L.R. 9 Ex. 13 (unless a deed was not necessary in any case). But see Tupper v Foulkes (1861) 9 C.B.(N.S.) 797 (ratification treated as redelivery). As to ratification by companies see Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.2-067.
- 158. Keighley, Maxsted & Co v Durant [1901] A.C. 240. As to undisclosed principals see below, paras 31-063 et seq. It is surprising that this rule applies, as here, even though the agent is clearly such (but has exceeded his authority) and the case is one where it is sought to hold the ratifying principal liable, as opposed to one where he seeks to intervene or the person whose act is purportedly ratified is not an agent of the ratifier at all.
- 159. Re Tiedemann & Ledermann Frères [1899] 2 Q.B. 66 (where the agent thought that the third party would not deal with him personally so purported to act for another).
- 160. Below, paras 31-054, 31-089.
- 161. National Oilwell (UK) Ltd v Davy Offshore Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 582, 592-597; see Reynolds in Rose, Consensus ad Idem (1996), p.77. Proof of the agent's subjective intention to act for the person concerned will be required. cf. below, para.31-054.
- 162. See Trident General Ins Co Ltd v McNiece Bros Pty Ltd (1987) 8 N.S.W.L.R. 270, 276-277 (insurance for "all contractors and subcontractors and/or suppliers": plaintiffs not appointed at time of insurance). But cf. Celthene Pty Ltd v WKJ Hauliers Pty Ltd [1981] 1 N.S.W.L.R. 606, 615. As to trust in this context, see A Tomlinson (Hauliers) Ltd v Hepburn [1966] A.C. 451 (bailee). See in general Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.2-065. In the Trident case the contractor was held entitled to sue as third party beneficiary of a contract. The actual decision was affirmed by the High Court of Australia without deciding on the agency points: (1988) 165 C.L.R. 107.
- 163. Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999 s.1(3).
- 164. cf. AM Satterthwaite Ltd v New Zealand Shipping Co Ltd (The Eurymedon) [1975] A.C. 154.
- 165. See Foster v Bates (1843) 12 M. & W. 226; Powell, Law of Agency, 2nd edn (1961), p.388.

- 166. De Bussche v Alt (1878) 8 Ch. D. 286, 313; cf. Brennan v O'Connell [1980] I.R. 13.
- 167. Lewis v Read (1845) 14 L.J. Ex. 295.
- 168. Savery v King (1856) 5 H.L.C. 627.
- 169. Haseler v Lemoyne (1858) 28 L.J.C.P. 103.
- 170. Powell v Smith (1872) L.R. 14 Eq. 85; AMB Generali Holding AG v SEB Liv Holding Aktiebolaget [2005] EWCA Civ 1237, [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 318 at [34]-[47].
- 171. Hilberry v Hatton (1864) 2 H. & C. 822. See also Brennan v O'Connell [1980] I.R. 13 (ratification of contract by estate agent).
- 172. This is suggested in ING Re (UK) Ltd v R&V Versicherung AG [2006] EWHC 1544 (Comm), [2006] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 870 at [155]-[156], though the reliance was in fact held unjustified.
- 173. Suncorp Insurance and Finance v Milano Assicurazioni SpA [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 225, 243-235; and see Great Atlantic Insurance Co v Home Insurance Co [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 219, 227.
- 174. Kelner v Baxter (1866) L.R. 2 C.P. 174. This result is in some countries changed by statute. Capacity at the time of ratification is obviously required: Firth v Staines [1987] 2 Q.B. 70, 75.
- 175. Boston Deep Sea Fishing and Ice Co v Farnham [1957] 1 W.L.R. 1051; Kuenigl v Donnersmarck [1955] 1 Q.B. 515 (alien enemies).
- 176. Brook v Hook (1871) L.R. 6 Ex. 89. See also Bedford Ins Co v Instituto de Resseguros do Brasil [1985] Q.B. 966, 986-987 ("life cannot be given by ratification to prohibited transactions"). There may have been some connection with problems regarding marriage settlements by infants, which do not of course involve agency at all: see Edwards v Carter [1893] A.C. 360.
- 177. See Danish Mercantile Co v Beaumont [1951] Ch. 680 (unauthorised institution of proceedings held not a nullity and ratifiable); Hooper v Kerr, Stuart & Co Ltd (1901) 83 L.T. 729 (unauthorised summoning of company meeting); Bamford v Bamford [1970] Ch. 212; Winthrop Investments Ltd v Winns Ltd [1975] 2 N.S.W.L.R. 666 (voidable issue of shares); Alexander Ward & Co Ltd v Samyang Navigation Co Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 673 (arrest of ship); Presentaciones Musicales SA v Secunda [1994] Ch. 271 (issue of writ); applied in Adams v Ford [2012] EWCA Civ 544, [2012] 1 W.L.R. 3211.
- 178. This principle may have been lost sight of in English v English [2010] EWHC 2058 (Ch). But unauthorised signature or affixing of a seal may also amount to forgery, and in this case there probably can be ratification: see Campbell (1960) 76 L.Q.R. at 130 et seq.; M'Kenzie v British Linen Co (1881) 6 App. Cas. 82, 99-100; Northside Developments Pty Ltd v Registrar-General (1990) 170 C.L.R. 146, especially at 199-200. And a person may be estopped from setting up forgery or want of authority: see Greenwood v Martins Bank Ltd [1933] A.C. 51; Fung Kai Sing v Chang Fui Hing [1951] A.C. 489; Welch v Bank of England [1955] Ch. 508.
- 179. See above, para.31-030. See also below, para.31-112.
- 180. Suncorp Insurance and Finance v Milano Assicurazioni SpA [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 225, 243-235; also Great Atlantic Insurance Co v Home Insurance Co [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 219, 227.
- 181. Danish Mercantile Co v Beaumont [1951] Ch. 680.
- 182. Soames v Spencer (1822) 1 D. & R. 32. Unless there is prejudice to the third party, which might give rise to estoppel: McEvoy v Belfast Banking Co [1935] A.C. 24, 45.
- 183. Bolton Partners v Lambert (1889) 41 Ch. D. 295 (but note that the case is often misunderstood:

at the time of withdrawal the third party did not know that the contract was unauthorised, but appears to have thought that the stage of contract formation had not been reached); cf. Kidderminster Corp v Hardwick (1873) L.R. 9 Ex. 13; Athy Guardians v Murphy [1896] 1 I.R. 65; Fleming v Bank of New Zealand [1900] A.C. 577.

- 184. Watson v Davies [1931] 1 Ch. 455; Warehousing & Forwarding Co v Jafferli [1964] A.C. 1. In such a case, of course, there would be no contract from which to withdraw. The “ratification” would be an acceptance and would require notice: Jafferli’s case, at 9.
- 185. Walter v James (1871) L.R. 6 Ex. 124.
- 186. Above, n.182.
- 187. (1850) 4 Exch. 786. See The Borvigilant [2003] EWCA Civ 935, [2003] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 520 at [79] et seq.
- 188. And hence not taking in notions operating only between the parties such as an accrued cause of action (see The Borvigilant, above at [89]) or an accrued defence (see Smith v Henniker-Major & Co [2002] EWCA Civ 762, [2003] Ch. 182 at [71]).
- 189. Dibbins v Dibbins [1996] 2 Ch. 348. See also Re Construction Forestry Mining and Energy Union (1994) 181 C.L.R. 539, 545 (act must be valid and effective when done).
- 190. Metropolitan Asylums Board v Kingham & Sons (1890) 9 T.L.R. 217, 218, per Fry L.J.
- 191. C.-H. Tan (2001) 117 L.Q.R. 626.
- 192. See Celthene Pty Ltd v WJK Hauliers Ltd [1981] 1 N.S.W.L.R. 606, 615; Bedford Ins Co Ltd v Instituto de Resseguros do Brasil [1985] Q.B. 966, 986-987.
- 193. Presentaciones Musicales SA v Secunda [1994] Ch. 271.
- 194. Smith v Henniker-Major & Co [2002] EWCA Civ 762, [2003] Ch. 182 (no ratification of deed of assignment three years after execution).
- 195. The Borvigilant [2003] EWCA Civ 935, [2003] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 520 (ratification by subcontractor of clause conferring immunity).
- 196. See Smith v Henniker-Major & Co, above, at [71]; The Borvigilant, above, at [70], [78], [79], [88].

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 31 - Agency

Section 4. - Creation of Agency

(d) - Agency of Necessity

Agency of necessity

31-035

⚠ A number of decisions establish a doctrine whereby one person may in circumstances of emergency be regarded as empowered to act for another without prior authorisation. The traditional examples are those of the shipmaster, who has (or had) wide powers to contract on behalf of the shipowner ¹⁹⁷ (or demise charterer) and also in some cases on behalf of the cargo owner ¹⁹⁸ ⚠; and of the person who accepts a bill of exchange for the honour of the drawer. ¹⁹⁹ Strict rules of quite ancient origin are usually attributed to this type of agency, though they are really relevant only to the shipmaster and not to the acceptor for honour. It must be impracticable for the agent to communicate with the principal ²⁰⁰; the steps taken must be necessary for the benefit of the principal ²⁰¹; and the agent must act bona fide in the interests of the principal. ²⁰² The requirement of impracticability of communication suggests that the authority does not exist if the principal had forbidden the act in advance. ²⁰³

First type of case

31-036

As will be seen from the two main examples, the cases are in fact of two different types. The first type involves an agent who purports to bind his principal by contract. It has been suggested that the term "agency of necessity" should be restricted to such situations, and that it is in such cases only that the strict requirements mentioned above are applicable. ²⁰⁴ Where the person concerned is already an agent, it may be possible to say that there is a general implied authority to act appropriately in an emergency, ²⁰⁵ regardless of the rather rigid ancient requirements for agency of necessity. ²⁰⁶ It was however fairly recently held that a master can only bind the cargo owner (as opposed to shipowner) by signing a salvage agreement when the requirements of the ancient rules are satisfied: thus the contract was not binding on that person where he could have been consulted. ²⁰⁷ The law on this point was determined by statute in 1994, under which the master has authority to sign a salvage agreement for cargo. ²⁰⁸ But the reasoning of the case suggests that where the person acting does not already have an agency relationship, authority of an abnormal sort only arises by operation of law under the old agency of necessity rules. It is however doubtful whether this should be so: the rules antedate the development of the modern principles of apparent and even implied authority, and if it is correct that they do not apply if the principal has forbidden the act, they should on more modern analysis be based on some form of implied, and hence apparent, authority. Further, though the master may have no relationship with the cargo owner, he is employed by the shipowner, who is bailee of the cargo: and the powers of a bailee have been established in the second type of case, as appears below. The difference between the traditional strict and a more general approach in such cases would not normally be great. ²⁰⁹ But it could be significant where one of the rather specific requirements is not fulfilled but the third party has no way of knowing that. If such a case arose the whole doctrine might merit reconsideration at the highest level. ²¹⁰

Second type of case

31-037

⚠ The second type of case covers situations where one party deals in some way on another's behalf and claims protection against an action for interference with the other's property, or goes further and seeks reimbursement for the cost of so acting. This type of situation raises restitutionary issues and is similar to the negotiorum gestio of Roman law. It seems that here the conduct will be more easily justified if there is already a pre-existing relationship between the parties, whether of agency or of some other sort such as that of bailor and bailee. ²¹¹ Thus it has recently been held that a salvor was entitled to reimbursement from the cargo owner for warehousing cargo after the termination of the salvage services, although it had not been impracticable to communicate with the cargo owner and it was at least arguable that the salvor had acted partly in his own interest, to preserve his lien. ²¹² So also carriers have been held entitled to reimbursement for expenses incurred in stabling uncollected horses, ²¹³ and it has been implied that they would have a defence to an action of conversion if they disposed of perishable goods in circumstances of necessity. ²¹⁴ It can also be said that there may in such cases be an actual duty on the bailee to act in the bailor's interests, ²¹⁵ which justifies his action and entitles him to reimbursement. ²¹⁶ In the absence of such an existing relationship, however, there is at present no general principle (outside the specialised area of marine salvage ²¹⁷ ⚠) entitling a person who protects or benefits the property of another to reimbursement or even to a lien. ²¹⁸ Whether the cases on the acceptor for honour should be extended, with certain other miscellaneous cases, or some other line of reasoning employed to give such a right is a question for the law of restitution. ²¹⁹ ⚠ But it is true that in some of the cases in which the existence of such a general right was denied, the matter was not really in issue, since any necessity concerned the interests of the agent rather than the principal. ²²⁰

^{197.} See The Australia (1859) 13 Moo. PCC. 132 (sale of ship); The Renpor (1883) 8 P.D. 115 (salvage). As to hypothecation see The Karnak (1869) L.R. 2 P.C. 505.

^{198.} ⚠ Australasian SN Co v Morse (1872) L.R. 4 P.C. 222 (sale of cargo). As to hypothecation see The Karnak, above. As to salvage see The Renpor, above; Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s.224(1) and Sch.11 art.6. And see in general Scrutton on Charterparties, 23rd edn (2015), Arts 139–142.

^{199.} Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s.65; below, para.34-142. See Hawtayne v Bourne (1841) 7 M. & W. 595, 599.

^{200.} Springer v GW Ry [1921] 1 K.B. 257, 265; cf. Prager v Blatspiel, Stamp and Heacock Ltd [1924] 1 K.B. 566, 571. See also John Koch Ltd v C & H Products Ltd [1956] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 59. Modern communications make such impracticability less common. But even where modern methods are available, it may be impracticable to communicate with, say, 250 holders of bills of lading.

^{201.} Prager v Blatspiel, Stamp and Heacock Ltd, above, at 571-572. It is enough if a reasonable man would think that there was a necessity: Tetley & Co v British Trade Corp (1922) 10 L.L. Rep. 678.

^{202.} Prager v Blatspiel, Stamp and Heacock Ltd, above, at 572-573.

^{203.} But see Graanhandel T Vink BV v European Grain and Shipping Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 531, 533.

^{204.} China Pacific SA v Food Corp of India (The Winson) [1982] A.C. 939, 958.

^{205.} e.g. De Bussche v Alt (1878) 8 Ch. D. 286 (subdelegation); Montaignac v Shitta (1890) 15 App.

- Cas. 357 (unusual terms); Gokal Chand-Jagan Nath v Nand Ram Das-Atma Ram [1939] A.C. 106 (giving credit); cf. John Koch Ltd v C & H Products Ltd [1956] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 59 (no authority to cancel contract).
- 206. See the reasoning employed in The Unique Mariner [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 438.
- 207. The Choko Star [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 516; The Pa Mar [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 338, 341-342.
- 208. Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s.224(1) and Sch.11, implementing a Convention of 1989; applied in The Altair [2008] EWHC 612 (Comm), [2008] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 805.
- 209. Some but not all of the problems could be solved by reasoning such as that used in United Bank of Kuwait v Hammoud [1988] 1 W.L.R. 145; below, para.31-056 n.336.
- 210. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.4-008.
- 211. China Pacific SA v Food Corp of India (The Winson) [1982] A.C. 939 at 960-961. See Jebara v Ottoman Bank [1927] 2 K.B. 254, 270-271; reversed on other grounds [1928] A.C. 269.
- 212. China Pacific SA v Food Corp of India, above: see at 964-966.
- 213. GN Ry v Swaffield (1874) L.R. 9 Ex. 132.
- 214. Sims & Co v Midland Ry Co [1913] 1 K.B. 103; cf. Springer v GW Ry [1921] 1 K.B. 257 (no necessity). A bailee may now have power to sell under s.12 of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977, but this would not always be adequate in emergencies.
- 215. Notara v Henderson (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 225; GN Ry v Swaffield, above.
- 216. Petroleo Brasileiro SA v ENE 1 Kos Ltd [2012] UKSC 17, [2012] 2 A.C. 164 at [18] et seq. (carrier in possession of cargo after ship withdrawn from charterparty); Cargo ex Argos (1873) L.R. 5 P.C. 134; Garriock v Walker (1873) 1 Rettie 100 (where the cargo owner knew what was being done and did not acquiesce). See also as to agency of bailees Tappenden v Artus [1964] 2 Q.B. 185.
- 217.  See Goff and Jones, Law of Unjust Enrichment, 9th edn (2016), Ch.18.
- 218. Nicholson v Chapman (1793) 2 Hy.Bl. 254; Falcke v Scottish Imperial Insurance Co (1886) 34 Ch. D. 234; but see Vol.I, para.29-142. However, limited powers are conferred by the Mental Capacity Act 2005 s.9, which may enable a person acting for the benefit of a mentally incapable person to pledge his credit (relevant to the first type of agency of necessity) and to obtain reimbursement (relevant to the second).
- 219.  See Goff and Jones, Law of Unjust Enrichment, 9th edn (2016), Ch.17; Burrows, Law of Restitution, 3rd edn (2011), pp.470 et seq.; Vol.I, paras 29-1136 et seq.
- 220. Falcke v Scottish Imperial Insurance Co, above; Sachs v Miklos [1948] 2 K.B. 23, 26. See also Munro v Wilmott [1949] 1 K.B. 295; Coldman v Hill [1919] 1 K.B. 443; Ridyard v Roberts Unreported May 16, 1980 CA.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 31 - Agency

Section 4. - Creation of Agency

(e) - Capacity

Capacity to act as principal

31-038

As a general rule a person has capacity to authorise an agent, or to ratify the acts of one purporting to act as an agent, where the act can be done by an agent and the principal would have capacity to make the contract or to do the act himself. Thus a corporation could not in former times appoint an agent to act outside the scope of its charter or memorandum of association, ²²¹ and an alien enemy may not normally appoint an agent at all. ²²² A minor may appoint an agent: it has been said that "whenever a minor can lawfully do an action on his own behalf, so as to bind himself, he can instead appoint an agent to do it for him". ²²³ It was sometimes said that he cannot execute a power of attorney ²²⁴, but the true position may be rather that any deed disposing of property executed by an agent so appointed is voidable by the minor as if he had executed it himself ²²⁵—"An infant cannot appoint an agent so as to bind him irrevocably". ²²⁶ There is support for the view that a mentally disordered person incapable of understanding what he is doing, on the other hand, can neither execute a power of attorney ²²⁷ nor (perhaps) appoint an agent at all, ²²⁸ even though the contract made by the agent would, if made by the principal himself, have been voidable only. ²²⁹ But it is not clear that this is the best solution, and the whole area may require reconsideration. ²³⁰

Capacity to act as agent

31-039

A contract made by an agent as such, is, in law, the contract of the principal. The agent is considered merely as the medium by which the contract is effected; and his assent is merely the assent of his principal. He need not, therefore, be a person himself having full contractual capacity so long as he can understand what he is doing. ²³¹ But any liability to his principal in contract would depend on his contractual capacity: so, probably, should his contractual liability to the third party. ²³² A party to a contract may not be able to act as agent for the other party: thus it was held that one party to the contract cannot sign the agreement or memorandum as agent for the other so as to bind the other for the purposes of s.40 of the Law of Property Act 1925. ²³³ This rule presumably survives the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989, under which the contract must itself be in writing, signed by or on behalf of each party to it. ²³⁴ This is not however a rule of capacity but of statutory interpretation.

Acting for both parties

31-040

As a matter of the general law on capacity, however, an agent for one party may act as agent of the other party also, provided he acts within his obligations to his principal. ²³⁵ There is again no formal incapacity so to act. There are however many judicial warnings as to the danger of the practice, ²³⁶ for such an agent may be the subject of a conflict of interests, and hence potentially at least in breach of his fiduciary duty to one of his principals.²³⁷ Hence a transaction entered into may sometimes be voidable at the instance of that principal²³⁸; though sometimes an act done by the agent may be valid though wrongful.²³⁹

-
- ^{221.} Montreal Assurance Co v M'Gillivray (1859) 13 Moo. P.C.C. 87; Ashbury Railway Carriage Co Ltd v Riche (1875) L.R. 7 H.L. 653. And see Re Banque des Marchands de Moscou [1952] 1 All E.R. 1269 (dissolved foreign corporation can have no agent of necessity). But this principle is modified in its operation by s.39 of the Companies Act 2006: below, para.31-059.
- ^{222.} Sovfracht, etc. v Van Udens, etc. [1943] A.C. 203; Boston Deep Sea Fishing & Ice Co v Farnham [1957] 1 W.L.R. 1051. But cf. Lepage v San Paulo Copper Estates Ltd (1917) 33 T.L.R. 457 (agent appointed by foreign court); Hangkam Kwintong Woo v Liu Lan Fong [1951] A.C. 707.
- ^{223.} G(A) v G(T) [1970] 2 Q.B. 643, 652, per Lord Denning M.R., limiting earlier dicta of his own in Shephard v Cartwright [1953] Ch. 728, 735.
- ^{224.} Cases sometimes cited are Zouch d Abbott and Hallett v Parsons (1765) 3 Burr. 1794; Oliver v Woodroffe (1839) 4 M. & W. 650. See also Gibbons v Wright (1954) 91 C.L.R. 423, 447 et seq. But a person under the age of 18 cannot create a lasting power of attorney: Mental Capacity Act 2005 s.9(2)(c).
- ^{225.} See Edwards v Carter [1893] A.C. 360. The position as to dispositions not by deed is unclear: see Chaplin v Leslie Frewin (Publishers) Ltd [1966] Ch. 71, 90, 93-94, 97.
- ^{226.} G(A) v G(T) [1970] 2 Q.B. 643 at 652, per Lord Denning M.R.
- ^{227.} Daily Telegraph Co Ltd v McLaughlin (1904) 1 C.L.R. 243; affirmed [1904] A.C. 776 (but based on non est factum doctrine); Gibbons v Wright (1954) 91 C.L.R. 423, especially at 444 et seq.
- ^{228.} Gibbons v Wright (1954) 91 C.L.R. 423, especially at 444 et seq. See Yonge v Toynbee [1910] 1 K.B. 215 (agent liable for breach of warranty of authority); but cf. Taylor v Walker [1958] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 490, 514; Gibbons v Wright, above. See Watts, below, arguing that the initial manifestation is valid except against a third party with notice. Where the principal becomes incapable after granting authority he may be liable under the doctrine of apparent authority: Drew v Nunn (1879) 4 Q.B.D. 661. As to supervening incapacity of the agent see below, para.31-166.
- ^{229.} Imperial Loan Co v Stone [1892] 1 Q.B. 599.
- ^{230.} See in general Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.10-020; Watts [2015] C.L.J. 140, suggesting that actual authority can exist if the agent did not know of the principal's incapacity (including supervening incapacity). This approach receives a measure of approval in Blankley v Central Manchester Children's University Hospitals NHS Trust [2015] EWCA Civ 18, [2015] 1 Costs L.R. at [34], [36]. The case holds that an accompanying contract (a solicitor's retainer) need not be frustrated by supervening incapacity of the donor.
- ^{231.} Co.Litt. 54a; Foreman v GW Ry (1878) 38 L.T. 851 (the principal of an illiterate agent is in the same position as if he and not the agent had signed a document); Re D'Angibau (1880) 15 Ch. D. 228, 246 (minor). A person under the age of 18 cannot be an attorney under a Lasting Power of Attorney (below, para.31-172): Mental Capacity Act 2005 s.10(1)(a). As to the defence of non est factum when the agent does not understand the transaction, see Norwich and Peterborough BS v Steed [1993] Ch. 116.
- ^{232.} The contrary result was reached in Commonwealth Trust Co v De Witt (1974) 40 D.L.R. (3d) 113 (contract ultra vires company, but agency not: company liable as agent for undisclosed principal). See Weinrib (1975) 21 McGill L.J. 298; (1976) 40 Sask.L.Rev. 291.

- 233. Sharman v Brandt (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 720.
- 234. s.2. See Vol.I, paras 5-032 et seq.
- 235. Durrell v Evans (1862) 31 L.J. Ex. 337 (factor); Chaney v Maclow [1929] 1 Ch. 461; Wilson & Son v Pike [1949] 1 K.B. 176 (auctioneer); Gavaghan v Edwards [1961] 2 Q.B. 220 (solicitor); Briess v Woolley [1954] A.C. 333 (director); Newcastle United Plc v Revenue & Customs Commrs [2007] EWHC 612 (Ch), [2007] S.T.C. 1330 (football agent).
- 236. See Moody v Cox and Hatt [1917] 2 Ch. 71, 91; Spector v Ageda [1973] 1 Ch. 30, 47; Eagle Star Insurance Co Ltd v Spratt [1971] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 116, 133 (insurance).
- 237. Fullwood v Hurley [1928] 1 K.B. 498, 502 (hotel broker); Anglo African Merchants Ltd v Bayley [1970] 1 Q.B. 311 (insurance broker: above, para.31-015); Imageview Management Ltd v Jack [2009] EWCA Civ 63, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep.436. On which of two principals he is acting for in a particular respect, see UBS v Kommunale Wasserwerke Leipzig GmbH [2014] EWHC 3615 (Comm) at [615]-[620]. See in general below, paras 31-118 et seq. The situation must be distinguished from that where a professional has knowledge from previous dealings with the other party. Here the question is likely to be one of confidential information. See Prince Jefri Bolkiah v KPMG [1999] 2 A.C. 222, 234-235.
- 238. North & South Trust Co v Berkeley [1971] 1 W.L.R. 470, 485. It may sometimes even be void for lack of authority: see below, paras 31-044, 31-074.
- 239. North & South Trust Co v Berkeley, above. See also Gamba Holdings UK Ltd v Minorities Finance Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1231 (receivership: ownership of documents).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 31 - Agency

Section 4. - Creation of Agency

(f) - Delegation

When delegation permissible

31-041

An agent cannot, except with the express or implied assent of the principal, delegate his authority, and the principal will not be bound by the act or contract of a sub-agent whose appointment is not thus sanctioned. This is often expressed in the maxim delegatus non potest delegare, and especially applies where the personal skill of the agent is essential; or where there is a trust, confidence, or discretionary power reposed in the agent. ²⁴⁰ But the assent of the principal may and ought to be implied wherever, from the conduct of the parties to the original contract of agency, or from the usage of trade, or from the nature of the particular business which is the subject of the agency, it may reasonably be presumed that the parties originally intended that the agent should have such authority, or where, in the course of the employment, unforeseen emergencies arise which impose upon the agent the necessity of employing a substitute. ²⁴¹ Thus, while solicitors may not normally delegate, ²⁴² in former times a country solicitor was impliedly authorised by his client to delegate to his London agent where this was appropriate in the ordinary course of his business as a solicitor. ²⁴³ And the performance of purely ministerial acts may be delegated. ²⁴⁴

Effect of delegation

31-042

The normal effect of valid delegation is that the subagent is responsible to the agent; there is no privity of contract between a principal and a sub-agent merely because delegation has been authorised. ²⁴⁵ This may be so even where the sub-agent is authorised to make contracts binding the principal. ²⁴⁶ Privity may be created if the agent has clear authority (which could be apparent ²⁴⁷) to create such privity, i.e. to appoint another agent to the principal ²⁴⁸ or his act in doing so is ratified, ²⁴⁹ but the principal's knowledge of or consent to the employment of a sub-agent is not in itself sufficient to imply authority to create privity. ²⁵⁰ In the normal case the agent is liable to the principal for money received by the sub-agent for the principal ²⁵¹ and he is liable for the sub-agent's breaches of duty, ²⁵² whether the sub-agent is appointed with, ²⁵³ or without, the principal's knowledge. However, this might not be so in all situations, especially if he was authorised to establish privity between principal and sub-agent and had taken reasonable care in selection. ²⁵⁴ Where there is no privity between the principal and the sub-agent, it is generally thought that the principal cannot sue the sub-agent for money received by the sub-agent in the course of his agency ²⁵⁵ unless, perhaps, the sub-agent acknowledges to the principal that he holds the money on the principal's behalf. ²⁵⁶ It has also been held that the subagent is entitled to commission from the agent notwithstanding that the agent has not received his own commission from the principal. ²⁵⁷ But outside the field of pure contract, other techniques may apply. The sub-agent is liable to repay secret profits to the principal ²⁵⁸ and may have a lien against the principal. ²⁵⁹ And there are cases where he is liable to the principal in tort, whether as sub-bailee ²⁶⁰ or where more generally there can be said to have been an assumption of responsibility by him. ²⁶¹ Other tort actions are possible. ²⁶² Hence it may be that the special position of a sub-agent could be further developed. ²⁶³

-
- 240. De Bussche v Alt (1878) 8 Ch. D. 286, 310-311. For a more recent example see John McCann & Co v Pow [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1643 (estate agent). As to delegation by trustees, see Trustee Act 1999 s.5.
- 241. De Bussche v Alt (1878) 8 Ch. D. 286, 310 (merchants authorised to sell ship wherever it might be); Quebec & Richmond Railroad v Quinn (1858) 12 Moo. P.C.C. 232, 265; Harris v Fiat Motors (1906) 22 T.L.R. 556; Gwilliam v Twist [1895] 2 Q.B. 85. As to apparent authority to delegate, see below, para.31-060 n.371.
- 242. Re Becket [1918] 2 Ch. 72.
- 243. Re Newen [1903] 1 Ch. 812. But he cannot make the London agent the client's solicitor: Wray v Kemp (1884) 26 Ch. D. 169; Re Becket, above.
- 244. Ex p. Sutton (1788) 2 Cox 84; Lord v Hall (1848) 2 C. & K. 698; Ex p. Birmingham Banking Co (1868) L.R. 3 Ch. App. 651; Allam & Co v Europa Poster Services Ltd [1968] 1 W.L.R. 638; The Berkshire [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 185, 188; Parkin v Williams [1986] 1 N.Z.L.R. 294.
- 245. Calico Printers' Association v Barclays Bank (1931) 145 L.T. 51 (HL; a leading case); New Zealand and Australian Land Co v Watson (1881) 7 Q.B.D. 374; Kahler v Midland Bank Ltd [1950] A.C. 24; Prentis Donegan & Partners Ltd v Leeds & Leeds Co Inc [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 326, suggesting (in the context of producing and placing brokers) that "since Calico Printers the influence of De Bussche v Alt would seem to have waned"(at 331); Grosvenor Casinos Ltd v National Bank of Abu Dhabi [2008] EWHC 511 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1 (customer of remitting bank and collecting bank); cf. Velos Group Ltd v Harbour Insurance Services Ltd [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 461. It is possible, but unlikely, that such authorisation would confer on the sub-agent a right to sue the principal under s.1 of the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999.
- 246. See Temple Legal Protection Ltd v QBE Insurance (Europe) Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 453, [2010] 1 All E.R.(Comm) 703 at [21].
- 247. See AJU Remicon Co Ltd v Alida Shipping Co Ltd [2007] EWHC 2246 (Comm).
- 248. De Bussche v Alt (1878) 8 Ch. D. 286; Powell & Thomas v Evan Jones & Co [1905] 1 K.B. 11.
- 249. Keay v Fenwick (1876) 1 C.P.D. 745.
- 250. New Zealand and Australian Land Co v Watson (1881) 7 Q.B.D. 374.
- 251. Matthews v Haydon (1796) 2 Esp. 509; National Employers', etc. Assn v Elphinstone [1929] W.N. 135; Trading & General Investment Corp v Gault (The Okeanis) [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 195, 201.
- 252. Meyerstein v Eastern Agency Co (1885) 1 T.L.R. 595; Re Mitchell (1884) 54 L.J.Ch. 342; Ecossaise SS Co Ltd v Lloyd, Low & Co (1890) 7 T.L.R. 76; Stewart v Reavell's Garage [1952] 2 Q.B. 545. This result is attributed to the notion of non-delegable duty in Involnert Management Inc v Aprilgrange Ltd [2015] EWHC 2225 (Comm) at [280].
- 253. Mackersy v Ramsays, Bonars & Co (1843) 9 Cl. & F. 818; Trading & General Investment Corp v Gault Armstrong & Kemble Ltd (The Okeanis), above.
- 254. Thomas Cheshire & Co v Vaughan Bros & Co [1920] 3 K.B. 240, 259; Involnert Management Inc v Aprilgrange Ltd [2015] EWHC 2225 (Comm) at [280].
- 255. Robbins v Fennell (1847) 11 Q.B. 248; Cobb v Becke (1845) 6 Q.B. 930; New Zealand and Australian Land Co v Watson (1881) 7 Q.B.D. 374. But this is doubted by Tettenborn (1999) 115 L.Q.R. 655.

- 256. See Shamia v Joory [1958] 1 Q.B. 448; Davies (1959) 75 L.Q.R. 220.
- 257. Crema v Cenkos Securities Plc [2010] EWCA Civ 1444, [2011] 1 W.L.R. 2066, denying the existence of a custom to the contrary.
- 258. Powell & Thomas v Evan Jones & Co [1905] 1 K.B. 11; Markel International Insurance Co Ltd v Surety Guarantee Consultants Ltd [2008] EWHC 1135 (Comm), [2009] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 77.
- 259. Fisher v Smith (1878) 4 App. Cas. 1; Lawrence v Fletcher (1879) 12 Ch. D. 858. See further Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), art.68.
- 260. See Lee Cooper v CH Jeakins & Sons [1967] 2 Q.B. 1; The Pioneer Container [1994] 2 A.C. 324.
- 261. Henderson v Merrett Syndicates Ltd [1995] 2 A.C. 145 ("managing agents" held liable to Lloyd's "names"); and see Riyad Bank v Ahli United Bank (UK) Plc [2005] EWHC 279 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 409 at [64]; BP Plc v AON Ltd (No.2) [2006] EWHC 424 (Comm), [2006] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 577. But the matter turns on the closeness of the relationship, bearing in mind the possible presence of an agreed contractual structure: cf. Balsamo v Medici [1984] 1 W.L.R. 951; Pangood Ltd v Barclay Brown & Co Ltd [1999] P.N.L.R. 678; Involnert Management Inc v Aprilgrange Ltd [2015] EWHC 2225 (Comm) at [291].
- 262. e.g. Markel International Insurance Co Ltd v Surety Guarantee Consultants Ltd [2008] EWHC 1135 (Comm), [2009] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 77 (procuring breach of contract, conspiracy, dishonest assistance).
- 263. See Tettenborn, above, n.254; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), paras 5-011, 5-012. It seems that a sub-agent who has no privity with the principal cannot be a commercial agent under the Commercial Agents Regulations (above, para.31-017) because these are geared to a contractual relationship between principal and agent: Light v Ty Europe Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 1238, [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 693.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 5. - Authority
(a) - General Principles

Distinction between actual and apparent authority

31-043

An agent's power to affect the legal position of his principal rests upon his authority: it may in fact be said that his authority is a power to affect his principal's position by doing acts on his behalf, though the ideas are slightly different inasmuch as authority is regarded as a fact, while power is a legal relation. Authority may be actual or apparent. ²⁶⁴ Actual authority is "a legal relationship between principal and agent created by a consensual agreement to which they alone are parties". ²⁶⁵ Apparent, or ostensible, authority is "the authority of an agent as it appears to others" ²⁶⁶; under the doctrine of apparent authority the principal may be bound to third parties because the agent appeared to have authority, though as between principal and agent there was in fact no such authority granted and the normal consequences of such authority did not arise. This section deals primarily with actual authority only, apparent authority being dealt with in the section on the relationship between principal and third parties. ²⁶⁷ But the basis of the doctrine of apparent authority is that a third party is in many situations entitled to assume that an agent has such authority as he appears to have or would normally have, whether or not the principal has in fact granted such authority: decisions as to what authority agents do in fact normally possess as between themselves and their principals are obviously, therefore, relevant to the doctrine. Indeed, actual and apparent authority generally co-exist and coincide, ²⁶⁸ and it is only comparatively recently that a clear analytical distinction has been made. ²⁶⁹

Express and implied authority

31-044

These are types of actual authority. Express authority is that "given by express words": implied authority is that "inferred from the conduct of the parties and the circumstances of the case". ²⁷⁰ This distinction, though useful, cannot always be definitively applied, since (apart from anything else) the meaning of express words may require interpretation. Implied authority may for convenience be divided into four types: incidental authority, usual authority, customary authority, and authority derived from the circumstances of the case. A general limit on all types of implied (but not apparent) authority is the fairly obvious proposition that there is no such authority to act other than for the principal's benefit, ²⁷¹ and this may be taken into account in interpretation also. Of course, the principal may expressly authorise or even require actions which the agent thinks contrary to the principal's interests ²⁷²; and where the agent does exactly what was authorised it may be possible to say that his motives for doing so were irrelevant. ²⁷³ However, equity sometimes gives relief on a more sensitive basis where a fiduciary does something that is authorised but for inappropriate motives, describable as a "fraud on a power" or exercise of power for an "improper purpose". ²⁷⁴

Express authority: construction of documents

31-045

Normally speaking, the usual principles apply in the construction of documents conferring authority "including any proper implications from the express words used, the usages of the trade, or the course of business between the parties".²⁷⁵ And where the authority is conferred in ambiguous terms, acts done by an agent in good faith upon a reasonable interpretation of the instructions will usually be regarded as authorised.²⁷⁶ But it is a well-established rule that powers of attorney must be strictly construed,²⁷⁷ and this latter rule may apply in other cases where the authority is conferred in a formal manner, i.e. by deed.²⁷⁸

Implied authority: incidental authority

31-046

An agent has implied authority to do whatever is ordinarily or necessarily incidental to the due performance of his express authority.²⁷⁹ Thus a person authorised to sell land for another had authority to sign a memorandum of the transaction sufficient to satisfy s.40 of the Law of Property Act 1925²⁸⁰ and presumably now also the written contract required by s.2 of the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989; and estate agents employed to find purchasers have authority to do various subordinate acts in connection with the property to be sold.²⁸¹ But an agent authorised to negotiate contracts may well have no authority to receive payment²⁸²; and persons authorised to sign bills of lading will usually have no authority to settle claims under them.²⁸³

Usual authority²⁸⁴

31-047

Agents appointed to positions involving the conduct of particular trades or businesses normally have implied authority to do whatever is usually done by persons occupying such positions²⁸⁵; and agents whose occupation involves acting in certain ways (e.g. solicitors, auctioneers, insurance brokers) have the authority usually possessed by persons in such occupations.²⁸⁶ This is regularly referred to as "usual authority". Some old cases refer to those having usual authority, as above described, as general agents²⁸⁷; but, as has been said above,²⁸⁸ it is doubtful whether the distinction between general and special agents is of much utility.

Customary authority

31-048

Agents are sometimes found to have implied authority to act in accordance with the customs and usages of the places where they act, provided that such customs and usages are reasonable,²⁸⁹ even where the principal had no notice of the custom²⁹⁰; but they have no authority to act in accordance with an unreasonable custom unless the principal had notice of it, in which case he may sometimes be regarded as having assented to it.²⁹¹ "Unreasonable" here seems to bear a special meaning: it does not mean harsh or oppressive, but rather inconsistent with the nature of the transaction which the agent was employed to carry out, or with the contract of agency itself.²⁹² Thus a usage whereby an agent buying for a principal becomes in effect a seller to his principal has been held unreasonable in this context; for the relationship of principal and agent is inconsistent with that of buyer and seller and specific consent to the adoption of a position within the latter relationship would be required.²⁹³ The same applies to a usage whereby the agent can receive payment by way of setoff.²⁹⁴

Authority derived from the circumstances of the case

31-049

It is obvious that these categories cannot be exhaustive: there must also be a residual category of authority derived from the circumstances of the case.²⁹⁵

Presumed authority: married women

31-050

Until 1970 married women were normally treated as a separate topic in the law of agency, for special rules applied to them. These rules stemmed from two factors: the husband's obligation to support his wife, and the wife's inability until the late nineteenth century to own separate property and thus to be liable on contracts. They also reflect a method of buying on informal credit which does not correspond with modern trading patterns in England. Under the rules there was a presumption of authority in a wife arising from cohabitation; a special agency, sometimes referred to as an agency of necessity, in a wife who had been deserted; and a sizeable amount of case law, the true basis of which was not in all respects clear, on the position of a wife living apart from her husband by agreement.²⁹⁶ The special powers of a deserted wife were however abolished by statute in 1970,²⁹⁷ and any implied or apparent authority of a wife, since it must clearly stem only from normal principles, is no longer appropriate for separate treatment.²⁹⁸ All that remains therefore is a presumption of authority from cohabitation, which in fact need not be confined to wives (or indeed women) at all. In contemporary English conditions it is doubtful whether the topic any longer has much relevance.²⁹⁹

^{264.} See Freeman & Lockyer v Buckhurst Park Properties (Mangal) Ltd [1964] 2 Q.B. 480, 502.

^{265.} See Freeman & Lockyer v Buckhurst Park Properties (Mangal) Ltd [1964] 2 Q.B. 480, 502.

^{266.} Hely-Hutchinson v Brayhead Ltd [1968] 1 Q.B. 549, 583.

^{267.} See below, para.31-056.

^{268.} Hely-Hutchinson v Brayhead Ltd, above, at 583, 588; Freeman & Lockyer v Buckhurst Park Properties (Mangal) Ltd [1964] 2 Q.B. 480 at 502. It is therefore often easier to plead apparent authority than to assume the burden of proving actual authority.

^{269.} See Burt v Claude Cousins & Co Ltd [1971] 2 Q.B. 426, 454; Barrington v Lee [1972] 1 Q.B. 326, 336.

^{270.} Hely-Hutchinson v Brayhead Ltd [1968] 1 Q.B. 549, 583.

^{271.} See Lysaght v Falk Bros & Co Ltd (1905) 2 C.L.R. 421, 430; Tobin v Broadbent (1947) 75 C.L.R. 378 (power of attorney); Heini v Jyske Bank (Gibraltar) Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 511, 521; Hopkins v TL Dallas Group Ltd [2004] EWHC 1379, [2005] 1 B.C.L.C. 543 at [89]; also Criterion Properties Plc v Stratford UK Properties LLC [2004] UKHL 28, [2004] 1 W.L.R. 1846; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), art.23. As to authority to act illegally, see Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.2–026.

^{272.} See Volkers v Midland Doherty (1985) 17 D.L.R. (4th) 343 (instructions to stockbroker).

^{273.} See Macmillan Inc v Bishopsgate Investment Trust Plc [1995] 1 W.L.R. 978, 984; affirmed on other grounds [1996] 1 W.L.R. 387.

^{274.} See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.8–219.

^{275.} Freeman & Lockyer v Buckhurst Park Properties (Mangal) Ltd [1964] 2 Q.B. 480, 502; Pole v Leask (1860) 28 Beav. 562, 574; affirmed (1863) 33 L.J.Ch. 155.

^{276.} Ireland v Livingston (1872) L.R. 5 H.L. 395; Loring v Davies (1886) 32 Ch. D. 625; Weigall & Co v Runciman & Co (1916) 85 L.J.K.B. 1187. But for more modern discussion see European Asian Bank AG v Punjab and Sind Bank (No.2) [1983] 1 W.L.R. 642, 656; Veljkovic v Vrybergen [1985] V.R. 419; Patel v Standard Chartered Bank [2001] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 229, 234. With modern communications it may be the agent's duty to seek clarification: Woodhouse AC Israel Cocoa Ltd SA v Nigerian Produce Marketing Co Ltd [1972] A.C. 741, 772.

- 277. Bryant v Banque du Peuple [1893] A.C. 170, 177; Jonmenjoy Coondoo v Watson (1884) 9 App. Cas. 561; Re Dowson & Jenkins' Contract [1904] 2 Ch. 219. And see Jacobs v Morris [1902] 1 Ch. 816; Danby v Coutts & Co (1885) 29 Ch. D. 500; Reckitt v Barnett, Pembroke & Slater [1929] A.C. 176. See Dal Pont, Agency Law and Commercial Practice (2015), Ch.12.
- 278. Powers of attorney must be executed by deed: Powers of Attorney Act 1971 s.1. But quare whether this principle of interpretation applies to powers of attorney used in a commercial context.
- 279. Pole v Leask (1860) 28 Beav. 562, 574–575; affirmed (1863) 33 L.J.Ch. 155; Howard v Baillie (1796) 2 H.Bl. 618; Collen v Gardner (1856) 21 Beav. 540; SMC Electronics v Akhtar Computers Ltd [2001] 1 B.C.L.C. 433.
- 280. Rosenbaum v Belson [1900] 2 Ch. 267.
- 281. See above, para.31-012.
- 282. Below, para.31-051.
- 283. Kenya Rys v Antares Co Pte Ltd (The Antares) (Nos 1 and 2) [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 424.
- 284. See further as to this term Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.3–006.
- 285. Hely-Hutchinson v Brayhead Ltd [1968] 1 Q.B. 549, 583; see, e.g. Re Pearson [1899] 2 Q.B. 618 (estate manager); The Huntsman [1894] P. 214 (managing owner of vessel); Smith v Hull Glass Co (1852) 11 C.B. 897 (company manager); Linford v Provincial Insurance Co (1864) 34 Beav. 291 (insurance agent); Walker v GW Ry (1867) L.R. 2 Ex. 228 (general manager of railway ordering medical attendance: cf. Cox v Midland Ry (1849) 3 Exch. 268). See also Crabb v Arun DC [1976] Ch. 179, 188, 193 (authority to negotiate).
- 286. e.g. Hatch v Hale (1850) 15 Q.B. 10 (bailiff); Richardson v Anderson (1805) 1 Camp. 43n. (insurance broker); Howard v Sheward (1866) L.R. 2 C.P. 148 (horse dealer). And see above, paras 31-011, 31-012, as to estate agents and auctioneers.
- 287. In particular the 19th-century cases distinguishing between the powers of the agents of horse dealers, or the dealers themselves, and persons selling horses on behalf of private individuals: see Howard v Sheward, above; Brady v Todd (1861) 9 C.B.(N.S.) 592; Brooks v Hassall (1883) 49 L.T. 569; Baldry v Bates (1885) 52 L.T. 620; Barrett v Irvine [1907] 2 I.R. 462.
- 288. See above, para.31-007.
- 289. Robinson v Mollett (1875) L.R. 7 H.L. 802, 817–818; Anglo Overseas Transport Ltd v Titan Industrial Corp [1959] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 152, 160. Most of the cases concern the Stock Exchange as it then operated: see, e.g. Coles v Bristowe (1868) L.R. 4 Ch. App. 3. As to officially determined rules (as opposed to customs) see Benjamin v Barnett (1903) 19 T.L.R. 564; Harker v Edwards (1887) 57 L.J.Q.B. 147; Cunliffe-Owen v Teather and Greenwood [1967] 1 W.L.R. 1421; Doyle v White City Stadium [1935] 1 K.B. 110. Rules cannot confer the power on an official body to alter a contract: Benjamin v Barnett, above. In the present context “customs” means more than “what is customarily done” and may be extremely difficult to establish: see, e.g. Re North Western Rubber Co Ltd and Hüttenbach & Co [1908] 2 K.B. 907, 919; Stag Line v Board of Trade (1950) 83 L.L. Rep. 356, 359, 360; Cunliffe-Owen v Teather and Greenwood, above, at 1438–1439; Bell Group Ltd v Herald & Weekly Times Ltd [1985] V.R. 613 (Stock Exchange dispute procedure).
- 290. Robinson v Mollett (1875) L.R. 7 H.L. 802, 817–818; Pollock v Stables (1848) 12 Q.B. 765.
- 291. Robinson v Mollett, above. For an example of assent see Limako BV v Hentz & Co Inc [1978] 1

Lloyd's Rep. 400.

- 292. Robinson v Mollett, above; Limako BV v Hentz & Co Inc [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 400.
- 293. Limako BV v Hentz & Co Inc [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 400. See also Anglo-African Merchants Ltd v Bayley [1970] 1 Q.B. 311; North & South Trust Co v Berkeley [1971] 1 W.L.R. 470 (insurance brokers acting for both parties); cf. Scott and Horton v Godfrey [1901] 2 K.B. 726; Jones v Canavan [1972] 2 N.S.W.L.R. 236 (stockbroker).
- 294. Sweeting v Pearce (1859) 7 C.B.(N.S.) 449 (insurance); Pearson v Scott (1878) 9 Ch. D. 198 (Stock Exchange).
- 295. Hely-Hutchinson v Brayhead Ltd [1968] 1 Q.B. 549, 583; and in the context of apparent authority, see Gurtner v Beaton [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 369, 379. The word “necessarily”, relevant to implied terms, is too strict to be a determinant of implied authority: Targe Towing Ltd v Marine Blast Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 346, [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 721 at [22].
- 296. A full account was given in Bowstead on Agency, 13th edn (1968), arts 37–41. On both topics see Hardingham (1980) 54 A.L.J. 661 (discussing the cases here cited and additional Commonwealth authorities).
- 297. Matrimonial Proceedings and Property Act 1970 s.41(1): the wife is now protected by the powers of the court.
- 298. For examples of implied authority see Waithman v Wakefield (1807) 1 Camp. 120; Millard v Harvey (1864) 34 Beav. 237; of apparent authority, Ryan v Sams (1848) 12 Q.B. 460; Jetley v Hill (1884) Cab. & El. 239; Drew v Nunn (1879) 4 Q.B.D. 661. See also Miss Gray Ltd v Earl Cathcart (1922) 38 T.L.R. 562, 565.
- 299. An account was given in Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 16th edn (1996), paras 3–039–3–051.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 5. - Authority
(b) - Examples ³⁰⁰

Authority to receive payment

31-051

"An agent employed to negotiate and conclude contracts is not thereby authorised to ... receive money which may become due under such contracts, but the course of employment may justify the agent in so ... receiving money if known to the principal and not objected to by him". ³⁰¹ There is thus no rule that an agent who has authority to sell goods has authority to receive payment for them: all depends on the circumstances and the relevant business practices. ³⁰² Even if the agent is authorised to receive payment, he may in some situations have prima facie no authority to receive it otherwise than in cash ³⁰³ (though a cheque that is honoured is equivalent to cash ³⁰⁴), or on different terms, ³⁰⁵ or in a different manner, ³⁰⁶ from that authorised by the contract. But standard practices and business usages to the contrary may be established, ³⁰⁷ and emergencies may arise where the agent discharges his duty by getting what cash he can and giving credit for the rest. ³⁰⁸

Waiver or repudiation by agent

31-052

An agent may sometimes have authority to waive or vary terms of his principal's contract. ³⁰⁹ Whether he can evince an intention to repudiate a contract on behalf of his principal must again depend on his authority. If an agent is to deliver goods on behalf of his principal, and because of a mistake refuses to do so, it must depend on the particular circumstances of each case whether the agent's conduct shows, on behalf of the principal, an intention not to be further bound by the contract. ³¹⁰

Joint and several authority

31-053

Where authority is given to two or more persons jointly without any provision as to action by a quorum, they must all join together in exercising it, or the principal will not be bound. ³¹¹ But this rule does not apply where an authority is given to two or more persons severally. ³¹²

^{300.} See also the discussion of particular types of agent, above, paras 31-009 et seq.

^{301.} Pole v Leask (1860) 28 Beav. 562, 575, per Romilly M.R.; affirmed (1863) 33 L.J.Ch. 155. For a more recent example in connection with apparent authority, see Cleveland Mfg Co Ltd v Muslim Commercial Bank Ltd [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 646.

^{302.} Butwick v Grant [1924] 2 K.B. 483 (authorities reviewed); International Sponge Importers Ltd v

Andrew Watt & Sons [1911] A.C. 279. This being a matter of implied authorisation, it is not necessary to prove an actual custom or usage: proof of what is usually done will normally suffice to confer usual authority (above, para.31-047). See Vol.I, para.21-044.

- 303. Sweeting v Pearce (1859) 7 C.B.(N.S.) 449, 480, 484; affirmed (1861) 9 C.B.(N.S.) 534; Papé v Westacott [1894] 1 Q.B. 272; Blumberg v Life Interests Corp [1898] 1 Ch. 27; cf. Australia & New Zealand Bank Ltd v Ateliers de Constructions Electriques de Charleroi [1967] 1 A.C. 86. And see Lloyds & Scottish Finance Ltd v Williamson [1965] 1 W.L.R. 404, 408–409; Vol.I, para.21–045.
- 304. Bridges v Garrett (1870) L.R. 5 C.P. 451; Bradford & Sons v Price Bros (1923) 92 L.J.K.B. 871; Clay Hill Brick & Tile Co Ltd v Rawlings [1938] 4 All E.R. 100.
- 305. Campbell v Hassel (1816) 1 Stark. 233.
- 306. Sweeting v Pearce (1859) 7 C.B.(N.S.) 449 (set-off); Underwood v Nicholls (1855) 17 C.B. 239.
- 307. Sweeting v Pearce, above; and see Catterall v Hindle (1867) L.R. 2 C.P. 368; Heisch v Carrington (1833) 5 C. & P. 471.
- 308. Gokal Chand-Jagan Nath v Nand Ram Das-Atma Ram [1939] A.C. 106.
- 309. See authorities discussed in Surrey Shipping Co v Cie Continentale (France) SA (The Shackleford) [1978] 1 W.L.R. 1080; see also Toepfer v Warinco AG [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 569. It has been held that an agent who has not such authority may have authority to make representations as to the manner in which a general contractual provision will be enforced: State Rail Authority of NSW v Heath Outdoor Pty Ltd (1986) 7 N.S.W.L.R. 170.
- 310. Peter Dumenil & Co v James Ruddin Ltd [1953] 1 W.L.R. 815. Misperformance by an agent would of course simply rank as the principal's misperformance.
- 311. Re Liverpool Household Stores (1890) 59 L.J.Ch. 616; Brown v Andrew (1849) 18 L.J.Q.B. 153; Bell v Nixon (1832) 9 Bing. 393. The Mental Capacity Act 2005 (below, para.31–172) contains special provisions for joint and several holders of Lasting Powers of Attorney: see s.10.
- 312. Guthrie v Armstrong (1822) 5 B. & Ald. 628.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 6. - Principal's Relations with Third Parties
(a) - General Rule

General rule: identified and unidentified principal

31-054

⚠ The general rule is that a principal is bound by, and entitled to the benefit of, the contract of his agent made on his behalf within the scope of such agent's actual authority. This is so whether the agent at the time of acting named or identified his principal ("identified principal" ³¹³) or merely indicated that he was acting for a principal but did not identify him ("unidentified principal")—e.g. "bought for our principals". The latter situation can, if disputes arise, raise serious problems of ascertaining the subjective intention of the agent, which may determine for whom he was acting, ³¹⁴ and it may be found difficult to avoid permitting an agent in practice to allocate contracts between several principals which the agent has for the same or a similar transaction—a situation which at least in theory requires a different analysis. ³¹⁵ It is also true where the agent at that time gave no indication that he was acting for a principal at all, and was not thought to do so. In such a case the principal is said to be undisclosed. Both of these are manifestations of a principle enunciated by Diplock L.J. in 1968:

"Where an agent has such actual authority and enters into a contract with another party intending to do so on behalf of his principal, it matters not whether he discloses to the other party the identity of his principal, or even that he is contracting on behalf of a principal at all, if the other party is willing or leads the agent to believe that he is willing to treat as a party to the contract anyone on whose behalf the agent may have been authorised to contract. In the case of an ordinary commercial contract such willingness of the other party may be assumed by the agent unless either the other party manifests his unwillingness or there are other circumstances which should lead the agent to realise that the other party was not so willing." ³¹⁶

But, even though the two are sometimes confused or run together, ³¹⁷ the rules as to completely undisclosed principals are different from those relating to disclosed principals and require separate treatment. ³¹⁸

Cases where contract required to be in writing

31-055

⚠ The Statute of Frauds 1677, as re-enacted in respect of land contracts by s.40 of the Law of Property Act 1925, required in respect of certain contracts a note or memorandum "signed by the party to be charged or by some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorised". Under this it was held that so long as the writing identified two parties liable to each other, an undisclosed principal could intervene to sue, ³¹⁹ in effect because there was no requirement of signature by the party suing, and could be sued, because signature by the authorised agent was all that was required: there was no requirement mentioned that the agent should also state for whom he acted. ³²⁰ The Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s.2, now requires that such a contract actually be in writing, “signed by or on behalf of each party to the contract”. The reasoning by virtue of which an unexplained signature by an agent who undertook personal liability sufficed does not seem available in respect of this wording, and it is not clear to what extent the previous law survives, and to what extent unidentified and undisclosed principals can sue or be sued on contracts signed by their agents. Juridically, it appears that both types of principal are normally in such cases a party to the same, not a different, contract and hence should sign. ³²¹  If the purpose of the Act was to prevent disputes over the existence and terms of an agreement ³²² it seems therefore that the principal, as a party to the contract, ought to be mentioned in it; and that the words “on behalf of” require that the principal be identified. This, if correct, would not permit intervention by an undisclosed principal.

^{313.} This would include a principal described but not named, e.g. the heirs of property, whoever they may be: Lyell v Kennedy (1899) 14 App. Cas. 437.

^{314.}  See e.g. (but in the context of insurance) National Oilwell (UK) Ltd v Davy Offshore Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 582, 596–597. These dicta are doubted by Leggatt J. in Magellan Spirit ApS v Vitol SA [2016] EWHC 454 (Comm) at [19], but no reasons are given.

^{315.} See e.g. Scott and Horton v Godfrey [1901] 2 K.B. 726 (practice on the London Stock Exchange as it operated at the time: see in particular the arguments of counsel). See in general Reynolds, in Busch and McGregor, Agency Law and Commercial Practice (2015), Ch.3.

^{316.} Teheran-Europe Co Ltd v S.T. Belton (Tractors) Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 545, 555 (described as “the beneficial assumption” by Lord Lloyd of Berwick in Siu Yin Kwan v Eastern Assurance Co Ltd [1994] 2 A.C. 199, 221).

^{317.} For an example see Teheran-Europe Co Ltd v S.T. Belton (Tractors) Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 545, 552, 561.

^{318.} See below, paras 31-063 et seq.

^{319.} Basma v Weekes [1950] A.C. 441.

^{320.} Davies v Sweet [1962] 2 Q.B. 300. See a recent discussion in the context of guarantees in Golden Ocean Group Ltd v Salgaocar Mining Industries PVT Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 265, [2012] 1 W.L.R. 674.

^{321.}  Below, paras 31-084, 31-099. In Rabiu v Marlbray Ltd [2016] EWCA Civ 476 a husband signed a land contract on behalf of himself and his wife but without her authority. He was held severally liable on the contract.

^{322.} See Spiro v Glencrown Properties Ltd [1991] Ch. 537, 541. The Law Commission papers give no guidance: W.P. No.92 (1985), para.5.16 simply indicates a wish to “let the ordinary principles of agency operate”. See further Vol.I, para.5–038 (doubting this proposition and citing further authority); Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.8–004.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 6. - Principal's Relations with Third Parties
(b) - Apparent Authority

Apparent authority

31-056

⚠ Where a person by words or conduct represents to a third party that another has authority to act on his behalf, he may be bound by the acts of that other as if he had in fact authorised them. ³²³ This doctrine, called the doctrine of apparent or ostensible authority, ³²⁴ applies to cases where a person allows another who is not his agent at all to appear as his agent, ³²⁵ to cases where a principal allows his agent to appear to have more authority than he actually has, ³²⁶ to cases where a principal makes reservations in his agent's authority that limit the authority which such agent would normally have, but fails to inform the third party of this, ³²⁷ and to cases where a principal allows it to appear that an agent still has authority when such authority has in fact been terminated. ³²⁸ The doctrine is said to be an application of the estoppel principle, ³²⁹ but it is a somewhat weak one, the normal rules being leniently applied, particularly in the contractual context as regards reliance on the representation. ³³⁰

⚠ What is clear is that, as in most legal systems, the liability ultimately springs from the conduct of the principal rather than the position of the agent. ³³¹ The word "represent", though regularly used in this context, probably carries too specific connotations. ³³² The rules as traditionally stated may however be divided as follows:

(i)

A representation must be made by words or conduct. But though such representation may be express, it may also be implied from acts of a quite general nature, e.g. putting the agent in a position carrying with it a usual authority. ³³³ Such a representation may arise from a course of dealing (especially one involving regular ratification), though it has been said that authority will not readily be inferred from this. ³³⁴

(ii)

The representation must be made by the principal, or someone authorised in accordance with the law of agency to act for him. ³³⁵ A representation by the agent as to his authority cannot of itself create apparent authority. ³³⁶ But the conduct of the principal may make it more reasonable for the agent's representation as to facts upon which his authority depends to be relied on ³³⁷, and in a well-known decision the principal was held bound on the basis that the agent, known to have limited authority to contract, nevertheless had authority to communicate the principal's approval to the transaction in question. ³³⁸ The facts of the case were somewhat marginal, in that the communication of assent was said to be implicit in an actual contractual offer. But it has recently been affirmed that there are common situations, particularly in organisations, where a subordinate has no authority, actual or apparent, to perform an act, but may have actual or apparent authority to report the decisions of a superior or group of superiors in respect of which action has been or will be taken. ³³⁹ ⚠

(iii)

On general principles the representation must be of fact and not of law. ³⁴⁰ But propositions as to mistake of law may now need reconsideration in view of the decision of the House of Lords in Kleinwort Benson Ltd v Lincoln CC. ³⁴¹

(iv)

The third party must act on the representation. ³⁴² If he does not know of any representation, express or implied, but deals with the agent as a principal, it is obvious that he cannot rely on the doctrine. ³⁴³ But the requirement that there must be a representation which is relied on is not interpreted strictly. Thus though a person cannot be held out as agent to the world, ³⁴⁴ the representation need not be to a specific person: it has been said that "the holding out must be to the particular individual who says he relied on it, or under such circumstances of publicity as to justify the inference that he knew of it and acted upon it". ³⁴⁵ Sometimes negligent conduct is relied on as constituting a holding out: this is principally so in the case of property transactions, to which indeed the passage quoted above refers. In that context it has sometimes been said that there must be a duty of care towards the third party, but here again it appears that such a duty can be owed to quite a wide class of persons. ³⁴⁶ It does not seem that the third party's reliance need have been to his detriment: although it is clear that if he did not rely on the representation at all, ³⁴⁷ or ignored a clear opportunity of ascertaining the agent's authority, ³⁴⁸ or was put on inquiry by the facts of the transaction, ³⁴⁹ he cannot hold the principal liable, it is probably sufficient reliance merely to enter into a transaction on the faith of the representation. ³⁵⁰

(v)

The doctrine applies though the agent effects a forgery, ³⁵¹ if the act in the course of which the forgery occurred was within his apparent authority and the third party was unaware of the forgery. ³⁵² The same is true where the agent is fraudulent, or acts illegally in some other way. ³⁵³

(vi)

The doctrine, being based on estoppel, does not of itself entitle a principal to sue on the contract ³⁵⁴; but he will normally be able to ratify right up to the moment of trial.

(vii)

The authority will be that which the agent reasonably appeared to have to the third party, taking into account the manifestations of the principal, the implied authority normally applicable in the circumstances or to a person in the agent's position, or both. ³⁵⁵ It has often been said that there is no constructive notice in commercial transactions and there is quite extensively argued recent authority ³⁵⁶ that the third party can rely on an appearance of authority unless its belief that there was authority was "dishonest or irrational", which would include turning a blind eye. But though there is also authority that "nothing short of bad faith will do" ³⁵⁷ such an approach may perhaps go too far in protecting third parties, and may not accord with all the existing authority cited here, always bearing in mind that the nature of reasonable inquiries may need to vary with the situation involved. ³⁵⁸

"True" estoppel

31-057

⚠ Although it seems that apparent authority should be attributed to a weak form of estoppel, there are some situations where a more orthodox form of estoppel, where there is more recognisable reliance, is employed in an agency context. This can be so where the agent cannot be said to have had actual or apparent authority, and nor has there been ratification, but nevertheless the “principal” caused the belief that the transaction in question was within the supposed agent’s authority, or had been authorised, or, knowing that such a belief was held, took no steps to correct it. ³⁵⁹ ⚠ In some cases of the first type the appearance of authority can perhaps sometimes be attributed to the principal’s negligence in operating a system under which an unauthorised person can appear to be authorised. ³⁶⁰

Agents of companies ³⁶¹

31-058

⚠ Special considerations arise in the case of agents of companies, because companies can only act through agents, yet are limited in their permissible activities by their memoranda of association and have public documents indicating the distribution of powers within their constitution, which can be inspected. These features modify the application of the law of agency to agents of companies; but they have themselves been modified by statute. The law should be sought in specialised works ³⁶² ⚠ : what follows is only intended to draw attention to the impact of these special features on agency law.

Ultra vires

31-059

First, if a contract made by the agent of a company was ultra vires the company’s memorandum of association, the company could not be bound. This doctrine was held not to apply to the exercise of powers of a type which the company undoubtedly possesses but those powers have been used for purposes outside the memorandum or articles of association, or for improper motives. ³⁶³ But it is largely abolished in relation to external relations by s.39 of the Companies Act 2006, ³⁶⁴ which provides that “The validity of an act done by a company shall not be called in question on the ground of lack of capacity by reason of anything in the company’s constitution”. The doctrine continues to have some effect as regards a company’s internal regulation, and in dealings with a director, or a person associated with a director. ³⁶⁵

Notice of public documents

31-060

Secondly, the operation of the doctrine of apparent authority was affected by another doctrine, that a person dealing with a company was deemed to have constructive notice of its public documents, and hence of restrictions on the authority of the particular agent. This was to some extent balanced by the “indoor management” rule under which, where the person acting for the company could have been authorised, and either was specifically held out as authorised, or acted within the usual authority of company agents of that type, ³⁶⁶ the third party might be entitled to assume that procedures for authorisation had been complied with. ³⁶⁷ This constructive notice doctrine is also abolished by the Companies Act 2006, ³⁶⁸ under which the power of the directors to bind the company, or to authorise others to do so, is in favour of a person “dealing” ³⁶⁹ with the company “in good faith”, ³⁷⁰ “deemed to be free of any limitation under the company’s constitution”. ³⁷¹ In the overall result, a person dealing with the board of directors or a person authorised by it is well protected. But in the case of other agents, including particular directors, although the third party may now be entitled to assume that the company has full power to delegate, he can only assume that that power has been exercised if there has been a holding-out by the company, ³⁷² whether specific or general, as under the indoor management rule. There are various cases on the authority of company officials, but practices change and in case of doubt it will be best to rely on contemporary evidence of practice. ³⁷³ The reasoning would not apply to a forgery in the sense of a counterfeit (as opposed to unauthorised) signature.³⁷⁴

Agent acting in fraud of principal

31-061

The fact that the agent acted in his own interests and in fraud of his principal will not relieve the principal of liability if in fact the agent's act was in other respects within the scope of his apparent authority.³⁷⁵ This rule is not confined to the case of a contract made by an agent. A principal is bound by acts done by an agent in the scope of his apparent authority, whether in contract or tort or otherwise.³⁷⁶ "A third party, dealing in good faith with an agent acting within his ostensible authority, is not prejudiced by the fact that as between the principal and his agent the agent is using his authority in such a way that the principal can rightly complain that the agent is using his authority for his own benefit and not for that of his principal".³⁷⁷ But where the third party has notice from the nature of the transaction that he is or may be dealing with an agent who is exceeding his authority, the principal is not bound³⁷⁸ and the fact that the agent's acts are manifestly for his own benefit may amount to such notice.³⁷⁹ And it is a standard proposition that a principal is not liable merely because by appointing the agent he gives him the opportunity to behave fraudulently.³⁸⁰

Apparent authority of Crown agents

31-062

Special considerations apply to the Crown and public authorities, since it is plain that no official can be given the power to validate ultra vires acts, and the freedom of action of the Crown or a public authority to do its public duty should not easily be fettered.³⁸¹ It has been said that "no public officer, unless he possesses some special power, can hold out on behalf of the Crown that he or some other public officer has the right to enter into a contract in respect of the property of the Crown when in fact no such right exists",³⁸² and though this may be overstated, apparent authority in such an agent is not easy to establish.³⁸³ In general estoppel reasoning has to some extent been superseded in the area by the notions of legitimate expectations and abuse of power,³⁸⁴ but where agents of a foreign government are in question there is room for the application of similar reasoning.³⁸⁵

^{323.} Pickering v Busk (1812) 15 East 38; Pickard v Sears (1837) 6 A. & E. 469; Freeman v Cooke (1848) 2 Exch. 654; Smith v M'Guire (1858) 3 H. & N. 554; Pole v Leask (1863) 33 L.J.Ch. 155, 162; Freeman & Lockyer v Buckhurst Park Properties (Mangal) Ltd [1964] 2 Q.B. 480, 503 (the leading definition); Hely-Hutchinson v Brayhead Ltd [1968] 1 Q.B. 549.

^{324.} But often referred to in nineteenth-century cases as implied authority.

^{325.} e.g. Barrett v Deere (1828) Moo. & M. 200; F. Mildner & Sons v Noble [1956] C.L.Y. 32; Povey v Taylor (1966) 116 New L.J. 1656. Such cases are rare. Much useful American material is referred to in Hoddesdon v Koos Bros 135 A. 2d 702 (1957).

^{326.} e.g. Todd v Robinson (1825) 1 Ry. & M. 217. A possible modern example is Pacific Carriers Ltd v BNP Paribas (2004) 215 C.L.R. 451.

^{327.} e.g. Montaignac v Shitta (1890) 15 App. Cas. 357; Manchester Trust v Furness [1895] 2 Q.B. 539; Waugh v HB Clifford & Sons Ltd [1982] Ch. 374.

^{328.} e.g. Summers v Solomon (1857) 7 E. & B. 879; Drew v Nunn (1879) 4 Q.B.D. 661; Rockland Industries Inc v Amerada Minerals Corp [1980] 2 S.C.R. 2; (1980) 108 D.L.R. (3d) 513; AMB Generali Holding AG v SEB Trygg Liv Holding Aktiebolaget [2005] EWCA Civ 1237, [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 318 at [37]; below, para.31–169.

329. Freeman & Lockyer v Buckhurst Park Properties (Mangal) Ltd [1964] 2 Q.B. 480, 503; Rama Corp v Proved Tin & General Investments [1952] 1 Q.B. 147, 149–150; Pole v Leask (1863) 33 L.J.Ch. 155, 162. The initial burden of proof is on the person alleging authority: PEC Asia Ltd v Golden Rice Co Ltd [2014] EWHC 1583 (Comm).
330.  “Each form of estoppel has its own elements, although some are common. The similarities warrant their recognition as a form of estoppel but the differences make each a distinct form with its own history and requirements”: Handley, Estoppel by Conduct and Election 2nd edn (2016), p.30.
331. See Watts [2015] L.M.C.L.Q. 36, 39. For a recent example see Fielden v Christie-Miller [2015] EWHC 87 (Ch), [2015] 2 P. & C.R. DG5.
332. Restatement, Third, Agency uses the better word “manifestation”: paras 1.03, 2.03.
333. Freeman & Lockyer v Buckhurst Park Properties (Mangal) Ltd, above, at 503 (managing director); Panorama Developments (Guildford) Ltd v Fidelis Furnishing Fabrics Ltd [1971] 2 Q.B. 711 (company secretary); Waugh v HB Clifford & Sons Ltd [1982] Ch. 374 (solicitor); Egyptian Intl Foreign Trade Co v Soplex Wholesale Supplies Ltd (The Raffaella) [1985] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 36 (documentary credits manager); Shearson Lehman Bros Inc v MacLaine, Watson & Co Ltd (No.2) [1988] 1 W.L.R. 16, 28; Pharmed Medicare Private Ltd v Univar Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 1569, [2003] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 321. As to usual authority see, above, para.31-047. For the view that deeds constitute an exception to the need for a representation by the principal see Watts (2002) 2 O.U.C.L.J. 93.
334. See PEC Asia Ltd v Golden Rice Co Ltd [2014] EWHC 1583 (Comm), citing Slingsby v District Bank Ltd [1932] 1 K.B. 544, 566; but cf. Watts [2015] L.M.C.L.Q. 36, 57–60.
335. Freeman & Lockyer v Buckhurst Park Properties (Mangal) Ltd, above, at 506; British Bank of the Middle East v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada (UK) Ltd [1983] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 9 HL (no authority to answer queries as to authority of another agent); cf. Canadian Laboratory Supplies Ltd v Engelhard Industries of Canada Ltd [1979] 2 S.C.R. 787; (1979) 97 D.L.R. (3d) 1; ING Re (UK) Ltd v R & V Versicherungs AG [2006] EWHC (Comm) 1544, [2006] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 870; PEC Asia Ltd v Golden Rice Co Ltd [2014] EWHC 1583 (Comm) at [623]. In Crabtree-Vickers Pty Ltd v Australian Direct Mail Advertising and Addressing Co Pty Ltd (1975) 133 C.L.R. 72 it was held that an agent with apparent authority cannot by his conduct give rise to apparent authority in a sub-agent. See quaere. See below, para.31-060 n.371.
336. Freeman & Lockyer v Buckhurst Park Properties (Mangal) Ltd [1964] 2 Q.B. 480 at 505; Att-Gen for Ceylon v Silva [1953] A.C. 461, 479; Armagas Ltd v Mundogas SA (The Ocean Frost) [1986] A.C. 717; Savill v Chase Holdings (Wellington) Ltd [1989] 1 N.Z.L.R. 257.
337. Colonial Bank v Cady and Williams (1890) 15 App. Cas. 267, 273; and see Canadian Laboratory Supplies Ltd v Engelhard Industries of Canada Ltd, above. An example is where an agent has usual authority to conduct a particular item of business: see Egyptian Intl Foreign Trade Co v Soplex Wholesale Supplies Ltd (The Raffaella), above (documentary credits manager); United Bank of Kuwait Ltd v Hammoud [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1051 (solicitor); Gurtner v Beaton [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 369 (aviation manager); but cf. Hirst v Etherington [1999] Lloyd’s Rep. P.N. 938 (solicitor).
338. First Energy (UK) Ltd v Hungarian Intl Bank Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 194, an important case. But cf. Armagas Ltd v Mundogas SA (The Ocean Frost) [1986] A.C. 717; and Hirst v Etherington, above, in each of which there was little beyond an avowal by the agent that he had or had obtained authority.
339.  Kelly v Fraser [2012] UKPC 25, [2013] 1 A.C. 450 (Vice-President of company responsible for Employee Benefits Division reporting decision of and action taken for Trustees of Pension Fund). The First Energy case is perceptively considered at some length by the Court of Appeal of Singapore in Skandinaviska Enskilda Banken SA v Asia Pacific Breweries (Singapore) Pte

Ltd [2011] 3 S.L.R. 540. See also Watts [2015] L.M.C.L.Q. 36, 40 et seq. In Galaxy Aviation v Sayegh Group Aviation [2015] EWHC 3478 (Comm) it is said that “in practice this is I think relatively unusual”. But that may not be so: see McMeel, Agency Law in Commercial Practice (2016), paras 10.28 et seq.

- 340. See Chapleo v Brunswick PBBS (1881) 6 Q.B.D. 696.
- 341. [1999] 2 A.C. 49. See above, Vol.I, paras 29-044 et seq.
- 342. Freeman & Lockyer v Buckhurst Park Properties (Mangal) Ltd, above, at 503; Nationwide BS v Lewis [1998] Ch. 482 (partnership).
- 343. Freeman & Lockyer v Buckhurst Park Properties (Mangal) Ltd, above, at 503; Underwood v Bank of Liverpool [1924] 1 K.B. 775; Farquharson Bros & Co v King & Co [1902] A.C. 325.
- 344. Dickinson v Valpy (1829) 10 B. & C. 128, 140.
- 345. Farquharson Bros & Co v King & Co, above, at 341, per Lord Lindley (quoting Parke B.).
- 346. Swan v North British Australasian Co (1863) 2 H. & C. 175, 182; Mercantile Bank of India v Central Bank of India Ltd [1938] A.C. 287; Mercantile Credit Co Ltd v Hamblin [1965] 2 Q.B. 242, 271; Moorgate Mercantile Co Ltd v Twitchings [1977] A.C. 890 and see below, para.31-076.
- 347. Swan v North British Australasian Co, above; Mac Fisheries Ltd v Harrison (1924) 53 L.J.K.B. 811.
- 348. Jacobs v Morris [1902] 1 Ch. 816 (power of attorney); Australian Bank of Commerce v Perel [1926] A.C. 737. A fortiori if he knew or must be taken to have known of the lack of authority: Morris v Kanssen [1946] A.C. 459.
- 349. See (vii) below.
- 350. cf. Silver v Ocean SS Co [1930] 1 K.B. 416; PEC Asia Ltd v Golden Rice Co Ltd [2014] EWHC 1583 (Comm) at [73]. Where there is no obligation to be enforced the requirement may be even looser: see Shearson Lehman Bros Inc v MacLaine, Watson & Co Ltd (No.2) [1988] 1 W.L.R. 16, 29 HL. But cf. Nationwide BS v Lewis [1998] Ch. 482, where in the context of s.14 of the Partnership Act 1890 it was held that reliance on a holding-out as partner must be affirmatively proved.
- 351. Uxbridge Permanent Benefit Building Society v Pickard [1939] 2 K.B. 248; assuming always that he is purporting to act as agent. But a counterfeit signature or seal is simply a nullity and involves of itself no representation that the forger purports to act as agent: see Northside Development Pty Ltd v Registrar-General (1990) 170 C.L.R. 146 especially at 199–200.
- 352. See Ruben v Great Fingall Consolidated [1906] A.C. 439 where this was not so.
- 353. Navarro v Moregrand [1951] 2 T.L.R. 674; cf. Barker v Levinson [1951] 1 K.B. 342.
- 354. Restatement, Third, Agency allows the principal to sue: see para.2.03 and Reporter's Notes, p.136. But the reasoning is unconvincing.
- 355. See above, paras 31-046 et seq. as to implied authority; and for examples Waugh v HB Clifford & Sons Ltd [1982] Ch. 374; United Bank of Kuwait Ltd v Hammoud [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1051; Hirst v Etherington [1999] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 938 (solicitors); Egyptian Intl Foreign Trade Co v Soplex Wholesale Supplies Ltd (The Raffaella) [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 36 (documentary credits manager); Gurtner v Beaton [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 369 (aviation manager). Where evidence as to what is usual in the particular occupation is relied on, this may be prejudicial to a third party who did not know of the usage, as in the harsh case of British Bank of the Middle East v Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada (UK) Ltd [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 9 HL; cf. however Cleveland Mfg

Co Ltd v Muslim Commercial Bank Ltd [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 646.

- 356. In the judgment of Lord Neuberger in the Hong Kong Court of Final Appeal in Thanakhorn Kasikorn Thai Chamchat v Akai Holdings Ltd (2010) 13 H.K.C.F.A.R. 479 at [51].
- 357. Lexi Holdings v Pannone & Partners [2009] EWHC 2590 (Ch) at [61] et seq., per Briggs J. The Hong Kong case was followed by the Court of Appeal in Quinn v CC Automotive Group Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 1412, [2011] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 584, where it is said that the reasonableness of the third party's belief was "neither here nor there"; see also Newcastle International Airport Ltd v Eversheds LLP [2012] EWHC 2648 (Ch), [2013] P.N.L.R. 5; Acute Property Developments Ltd v Apostolou [2013] EWHC 200 (Ch), [2013] Bus. L.R. D22; LNOC Ltd v Watford Association Football Club Ltd [2013] EWHC 3615 (Comm).
- 358. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), paras 8–048–8–050: Watts [2015] L.M.C.L.Q. 36. In particular it does not accord well with recent discussion in the context, admittedly different, of the inquiries to be made by bona fide purchaser in an equitable but commercial (banking) context: see Papadimitriou v Crédit Agricole Corp [2015] UKPC 13; see also Gray v Smith [2013] EWHC 4136 (Comm), [2014] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 359.
- 359.  e.g. Spiro v Lintern [1973] 1 W.L.R.1002; Worboys v Carter [1987] 2 E.G.L.R. 1. For another example see Geniki Investments International Ltd v Ellis Stockbrokers Ltd [2008] EWHC 549 (QB), [2008] 1 B.C.L.C. 662. See also the further discussion in The Bunga Melati 5 [2016] SGCA 20.
- 360. Pacific Carriers Ltd v BNP Paribas (2004) 218 C.L.R. 451 (documentary credits manager armed with rubber stamp). See also Martin v Britannia Life Ltd [2000] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 412, 5.3.4 (supply of business cards).
- 361. The leading recent common law cases are Freeman & Lockyer v Buckhurst Park Properties (Mangal) Ltd [1964] 2 Q.B. 480; and Hely-Hutchinson v Brayhead Ltd [1968] 1 Q.B. 549. They should however be read subject to what follows.
- 362.  See also Vol.I, paras 10-020 et seq.; Gower and Davies' Modern Company Law, 9th edn (2012), Ch.7. See also Watts, Agency Law in Commercial Practice (2016).
- 363. Rolled Steel Products (Holdings) Ltd v British Steel Corp [1986] Ch. 246.
- 364. Deriving from s.108 of the Companies Act 1989, giving effect to the EC First Directive on Company Law, and replacing earlier legislation which had been found inadequate for this purpose.
- 365. Companies Act 2006 ss.40, 41.
- 366. Above, para.31-047.
- 367. The so-called rule in Royal British Bank v Turquand (1856) 6 E. & B. 327.
- 368. Companies Act 2006 s.40(1).
- 369. Defined in Companies Act 2006 s.40(2)(b).
- 370. Defined in s.40(2)(b). See Barclays Bank Ltd v TOSG Trust Fund Ltd [1984] B.C.L.C. 1, 18.
- 371. See Smith v Henniker-Major & Co [2002] EWCA Civ 762, [2003] Ch. 182, considering (a) whether a quorum requirement is a "limitation"; (b) whether a director can be a third party for the purposes of this provision. See also EIC Services Ltd v Phipps [2003] EWHC 1507, [2003] 1 W.L.R. 2360.
- 372. In Crabtree-Vickers Pty Ltd v Australian Direct Mail Advertising and Addressing Co Pty Ltd

- (1975) 133 C.L.R. 72 the High Court of Australia, following dicta of Diplock L.J. in the Freeman & Lockyer case, above, n.360, held that the holding-out must be by a person with actual authority within the company. This seems doubtful: provided the authority finally traces back to a person with actual authority, it is submitted that the person whose representation of authority is relied on may have apparent authority only to make it: ING Re (UK) Ltd v R & V Versicherung AG [2006] EWHC 1544 (Comm), [2006] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 870.
373. See Panorama Developments (Guildford) Ltd v Fidelis Furnishing Fabrics Ltd [1971] 2 Q.B. 711 (changed role of company secretary); United Bank of Kuwait Ltd v Hammoud [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1051, 1063, per Staughton L.J.; First Energy (UK) Ltd v Hungarian International Bank Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 194.
374. Northside Developments Pty Ltd v Registrar-General (1990) 170 C.L.R. 146: see Prentice (1991) 107 L.Q.R. 14; Watts (2002) 2 O.U.C.L.J. 93 (arguing for special rules for deeds in general). But a party may be estopped by subsequent conduct from setting up the forgery: Greenwood v Martins Bank Ltd [1933] A.C. 51. See also the possible operation of s.44 of the Companies Act 2006 in the context of forgeries, discussed in Lovett v Carson Country Homes Ltd [2009] EWHC 1143 (Ch), [2009] 2 B.C.L.C. 196 at [99]. See further Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.8–042.
375. Hambro v Burnand [1904] 2 K.B. 10 (sometimes however said to be a case on actual authority); Navarro v Moregrand Ltd [1951] 2 T.L.R. 674; Briess v Woolley [1954] A.C. 233 and many other cases.
376. Lloyd v Grace, Smith & Co [1912] A.C. 716; Polkinghorne v Holland (1934) 51 C.L.R. 143; Uxbridge Permanent Benefit Building Society v Pickard [1939] 2 K.B. 248; Navarro v Moregrand [1951] 2 T.L.R. 674; Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716; United Bank of Kuwait v Hammoud [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1051; and see below, para.31-075.
377. Lloyds Bank Ltd v Chartered Bank of India [1929] 1 K.B. 40, 56, per Scrutton L.J.; see also Corporation Agencies Ltd v Home Bank of Canada [1927] A.C. 318.
378. John v Dodwell [1918] A.C. 563; and see above, para.31-056.
379. e.g. Reckitt v Barnett, Pembroke & Slater Ltd [1929] A.C. 176 (attorney drew cheques for private debts); Midland Bank Ltd v Reckitt [1933] A.C. 1; cf. Reckitt v Nunburnholme (1929) 45 T.L.R. 629. See also Lysaght Bros & Co Ltd v Falk (1905) 2 C.L.R. 421.
380. Farquharson Bros & Co v King & Co [1902] A.C. 325; Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716; Leesh River Tea Co v British India SN Co [1967] 2 Q.B. 250; Canadian Laboratory Supplies Ltd v Engelhard Industries of Canada Ltd [1979] 2 S.C.R. 787, (1979) 97 D.L.R. (3d) 1; Kooragang Investments Pty Ltd v Richardson & Wrench Ltd [1982] A.C. 462; Crédit Lyonnais Bank Nederland NV v ECGD [2000] 1 A.C. 486 (agent assisted in tort of deceit but did not commit it). As to exclusion of liability for fraud of an agent see HIH Casualty & General Insurance Ltd v Chase Manhattan Bank [2003] UKHL 6, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 61.
381. See Southend-on-Sea Corp v Hodgson (Wickford) Ltd [1962] 1 Q.B. 416.
382. Att-Gen for Ceylon v Silva [1953] A.C. 461, 479. But cf. 480. See Vol.I, para.11-013. See also JE Verreault et Fils v Att-Gen for Quebec [1977] 1 S.C.R. 41; (1975) 57 D.L.R. (3rd) 403.
383. As to constitutional limitations on the agent of a foreign state see Donegal International Ltd v Republic of Zambia [2007] EWHC 197 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 397.
384. See Vol.I, paras 11-033 et seq.
385. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.12–022; PEC Asia Ltd v Golden Rice Co Ltd [2014] EWHC 1583 (Comm), [2014] B.C.C. 628, where evidence from distinguished Indian lawyers was considered.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 6. - Principal's Relations with Third Parties
(c) - Undisclosed Principal

Doctrine of the undisclosed principal

31-063

⚠ It has long been established that a principal who was at the time of contracting undisclosed can sue or be sued on the contract of his agent, ³⁸⁶ though the juristic basis of this rule, and therefore the full scope of its application, is still uncertain. Indeed, many points as to its application have never been thought through. ³⁸⁷ It has been said that the contract is that of the principal ³⁸⁸; but in fact the law in many respects treats the contract as that of the agent, for the third party cannot be deprived of the agent's liability should he desire it, ³⁸⁹ and can usually plead against the principal all defences that were available against the agent before notice of the principal's existence. ³⁹⁰ The agent can also sue, subject to the superior right of the principal. ³⁹¹ It has sometimes been explained as intervention on the analogy of assignment ³⁹²; but it involves transfer of liability as well as rights, there is in fact no event that can be regarded as an assignment and it has in any case been held that an undisclosed principal can intervene on an unassignable contract (of insurance). ³⁹³ It does however seem accepted that the situation is to be regarded as one of intervention on the contract of another. ³⁹⁴ The origin of the principal's right to sue is said to be explained on the basis of his property in goods sold by his factor, and hence his right to their proceeds, rather than on the extension of a contract. ³⁹⁵ The liability to be sued and indeed the acceptance of what appears as a general agency doctrine may have been no more than a casually accepted consequence. In 1872 Blackburn J. said that it had "often been doubted whether it was originally right so to hold; but doubts of this kind come now too late". ³⁹⁶ Though long established, the principal's liability may be less desirable than his right to intervene, for it can be argued to give rise to unfair results. ³⁹⁷ ⚠ The doctrine is in fact, doubtless for such reasons, effectively cut down by other rules. ³⁹⁸

Acts in respect of which the doctrine of undisclosed principal applies

31-064

The doctrine applies where a person not disclosed as a party to the contract has in fact authorised it. Apparent authority is obviously not relevant, since the third party cannot rely on representations made by a person of whose existence he is ignorant; and it has been decided that a principal may not ratify when the act did not purport to be done on his behalf. ³⁹⁹ There are, however, a few cases simply holding an undisclosed principal liable on contracts made by his agent "within the authority usually confided to an agent of that character, notwithstanding limitations, as between the principal and the agent, put upon that authority". ⁴⁰⁰ In that they depart from the requirement of actual authority, these cases are open to serious criticism; and although they have been distinguished ⁴⁰¹ they must be regarded as extremely doubtful. ⁴⁰² If they are correct, they require to be explained as based on a notion similar to that of vicarious liability in tort; but although developments of this sort have been suggested they are contrary to the trend of contemporary case law. ⁴⁰³

Meaning of "undisclosed principal"

31-065

⚠ The cases do not define the term, but it seems to mean in general a principal who is not known by the third party to be connected with the particular transaction. It seems clear that in entering into the contract, the agent must intend to do so on the principal's behalf. ⁴⁰⁴ ⚠ It is also clear that the principal must in some way consent. Thus the mere fact that a company is operated by an individual for his own benefit does not make him the undisclosed principal of that company in a particular transaction. ⁴⁰⁵ ⚠ But there are difficulties in going beyond this. ⁴⁰⁶ Two possibilities present themselves. One is that the undisclosed principal must be a person who has authorised the agent to bring him into contractual privity with the third party, but whose connection with the transaction is not disclosed, whether by his own wish or by the wish of the agent. The second is that an undisclosed principal is anyone who uses the services of another on an agency basis, viz the agent is remunerated by commission and undertakes only to use best endeavours, but nevertheless expects the agent to deal on his own account (sometimes called by some civil lawyers "indirect representation"). ⁴⁰⁷ There is authority for both meanings. ⁴⁰⁸ The first seems clearly correct; but it gives the doctrine a somewhat limited scope. Those legal systems which identify a category of indirect representation usually permit or require the involvement of the principal, at any rate as claimant in some circumstances, and writers familiar with such systems sometimes, but not entirely correctly, treat the common law undisclosed principal doctrine as a different approach to the same problem.

Exclusion of undisclosed principals

31-066

Where an agent makes a contract in writing in his own name, parol evidence is generally admissible to show that another person was the real principal, so that that principal can sue, for, as stated above, its effect is to add a party rather than to vary the contract. ⁴⁰⁹ But an undisclosed principal cannot intervene where such intervention would be inconsistent with the terms of the contract itself. ⁴¹⁰ Sometimes such exclusion is an express term of the contract ⁴¹¹, thus when an agent contracts for a named principal, no other principal can intervene. ⁴¹² But sometimes the exclusion is derived from words in the contract descriptive of the agent: thus it has been held that no intervention is permissible where the agent is described as "owner" ⁴¹³ or "proprietor", ⁴¹⁴ though a different solution has been reached in similar, more recent cases. ⁴¹⁵ It seems that not too much should be derived from the use of particular words: the question is whether on the full interpretation of the situation, personality is a term of the contract. ⁴¹⁶ This reasoning would cover also some cases where the agent knows that the third party would not have dealt with the principal: the principal may be impliedly excluded. But the normal assumption is that in the case of ordinary commercial contracts the third party is willing to deal with anyone by whom the counterparty was authorised. ⁴¹⁷

31-067

There may be other situations where the personality of the agent is so important that no one else can intervene; but the true applicable rule for such situations is still uncertain. Thus in Said v Butt ⁴¹⁸ it was held that an undisclosed principal could not intervene and take the benefit of a contract for admission to a theatre on a first night; but the judgment is reasoned on the assumption that the contract is between the principal and the third party, which is probably not so. There are dicta that an undisclosed principal cannot intervene where the personality of the agent is relevant, ⁴¹⁹ but one of the cases can be explained on the grounds that an undisclosed principal intervenes subject to defences available against the agent, and the other on the grounds that only the agent to whom it was made could rescind for misrepresentation. It was suggested ⁴²⁰ that there was a further rule that the undisclosed principal cannot intervene where the benefit of the contract is unassignable or its burden cannot be vicariously performed. ⁴²¹ It is clear that if the burden of the contract cannot be performed vicariously the undisclosed principal cannot intervene on the performer's side to enforce it, since his intervention would itself be a breach of the contract. ⁴²² But the assignment analogy has been rejected by the Privy Council in a case concerning a policy of liability insurance, which was unassignable, but where in the circumstances the identity of the employer insured was held to be a matter of indifference to the insurer.⁴²³ It seems therefore that the basic exclusionary rule is that stated above, that the undisclosed principal cannot intervene where the terms of the contract, express or implied, exclude his right to sue and his liability to be sued.⁴²⁴ It is however a rule that does not give much guidance. If the agent represents that he does not act for a, or for a particular, principal, and this is incorrect, this is a misrepresentation: the third party has a defence to an action on the contract and may take proceedings to rescind it.⁴²⁵ But mere non-disclosure that the agent acts for a principal does not of itself amount to misrepresentation.⁴²⁶

- ^{386.} Duke of Norfolk v Worthy (1808) 1 Camp. 337; Browning v Provincial Insurance Co of Canada (1873) L.R. 5 P.C. 263, 272; Siu Yin Kwan v Eastern Insurance Co Ltd [1994] 2 A.C. 199, giving (at 376) a useful statement of the rules. The doctrine was applied to a breach under s.14(5) of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 in Boyter v Thomson [1995] 2 A.C. 628; see Brown (1996) 112 L.Q.R. 49.
- ^{387.} See, e.g. Maynegrain v Compafina Bank [1982] 2 N.S.W.L.R. 141 (attornment), discussed in Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), paras 8–172, 8–173.
- ^{388.} Keighley, Maxsted & Co v Durant [1901] A.C. 240, 261; above, para.31-029.
- ^{389.} O'Herlihy v Hedges (1803) 1 Sch. & Lef. 123; and see Higgins v Senior (1841) 8 M. & W. 834. See also Public Trustee v Taylor [1978] V.R. 289 (signature “for himself or as agent for an undisclosed principal”: signatory liable).
- ^{390.} Browning v Provincial Insurance Co of Canada (1873) L.R. 5 P.C. 263, 272; Montgomerie v UK Mutual Steamship Association [1891] 1 Q.B. 370, 372; Sims v Bond (1833) 5 B. & Ad. 389, 393.
- ^{391.} See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.9–012.
- ^{392.} Goodhart and Hamson (1932) 4 C.L.J. 320. In Pople v Evans [1969] 2 Ch. 255 it was held in the context of res judicata that the principal's right was independent of that of the agent and did not arise out of any trust relationship.
- ^{393.} Siu Yin Kwan v Eastern Insurance Co Ltd [1994] 2 A.C. 199; citing Browning v Provincial Insurance Co of Canada (1873) L.R. 5 P.C. 263, 273, and rejecting the assignment analogy. See below, para.31-067.
- ^{394.} Welsh Development Agency v Export Finance Co [1992] B.C.L.C. 148, 173, 182. It was held in connection with s.40 of the Law of Property Act 1925 (now repealed: see Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989) that the effect of the intervention of the principal was to add rather than substitute a liability. See Higgins v Senior (1841) 8 M. & W. 834; Calder v Dobell (1871) L.R. 6 C.P. 486; Basma v Weekes [1950] A.C. 441; Davies v Sweet [1962] 2 Q.B. 300.
- ^{395.} See Goodhart and Hamson (1932) 4 C.L.J. 320. As to factors, see above, para.31-009.
- ^{396.} Armstrong v Stokes (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 598, 604.
- ^{397.}  See Zweigert and Kötz, Introduction to Comparative Law, 3rd edn (1998), p.440, arguing that the third party should bear the cost of the middleman's insolvency. cf. Kortmann and Kortmann, above, para.31-004, n.15; Fridman, Agency Law in Commercial Practice (2016).
- ^{398.} Above, para.31-029; below, paras 31-067, 31-072 et seq.
- ^{399.} Keighley, Maxsted & Co v Durant [1901] A.C. 240; above, para.31-029.
- ^{400.} Watteau v Fenwick [1893] 1 Q.B. 346, 348–349; the other cases are Edmunds v Bushell (1865) L.R. 1 Q.B. 97; and Kinahan v Parry [1910] 2 K.B. 389 (reversed [1911] 1 K.B. 459). But cf.

Daun v Simmins (1879) 41 L.T. 783; Mac Fisheries Ltd v Harrison (1924) 93 L.J.K.B. 811.

401. Johnston v Reading (1893) 9 T.L.R. 200; Lloyds Bank v Swiss Bankverein (1912) 107 L.T. 309 (affirmed (1913) 108 L.T. 143); Jerome v Bentley [1952] 2 All E.R. 114.

402. See Rhodian River Shipping Co SA v Holla Maritime Corp (The Rhodian River) [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 373, 379, per Bingham J.; Montrose (1939) 17 Can. Bar Rev. 693; Hornby [1961] C.L.J. 239; Higgins (1965) 28 M.L.R. 167; Bester (1972) 89 S.A.L.J. 49; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.8–077; Tettenborn [1998] C.L.J. 274. Watteau v Fenwick has also been doubted in Commonwealth jurisdictions: e.g. International Paper Co v Spicer (1906) 4 C.L.R. 739, 763; McLaughlin v Gentles, 51 D.L.R. 383 (1919); Sign-o-Lite Plastics Ltd v Metropolitan Life Insurance Co, 73 D.L.R. (4th) 541 (1990). Such reasoning is however accepted in Restatement, Third, Agency, para.2.06; and, surprisingly, in the UNIDROIT Principles of International Commercial Contracts (2004), para.2.2.4(2).

403. See above, para.31-006.

404.  Siu Yin Kwan v Eastern Insurance Co Ltd [1994] 2 A.C. 199, 207. As to proof of intention see National Oilwell (UK) Ltd v Davy Offshore Ltd [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 582, 597, a case on an unidentified principal; an obvious factor would be any contract between agent and principal. As to undisclosed principal see also on this point Talbot Underwriting Ltd v Nausch Hogan & Murray Inc (The Jascon 5) [2006] EWCA Civ 889, [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 222 (Court of Appeal judgments) at [31]–[33]. In Magellan Spirit ApS v Vitol SA [2016] EWHC 454 (Comm) such a proposition appears to be doubted by Leggatt J., but he may be referring to the initial creation of the agency (which obviously cannot be created by mere subjective intention) rather than the intention to act for the principal in a particular instance, which when the principal is not named is certainly required over and above the basic authority. The matter is considered at more length in the Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 1st Supplement of the 20th edition, para.8-072 (modifying the text and adding to a footnote).

405.  Yukong Lines Ltd v Rendsberg Investments Corp (The Rialto) [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 322; and see Atlas Maritime Co SA v Avalon Maritime Ltd (The Coral Rose) [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 563. For other attempts to fix the liability on the individual behind the company by means of agency reasoning see The Swan [1968] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 5 (liable concurrently in contract), below, para.31-084; Williams v Natural Life Health Foods Ltd [1998] 1 W.L.R. 830 (on the facts, not liable in tort); Salim v Ingham Enterprises Pty Ltd (1998) 55 N.S.W.L.R. 7 (director of company held the real principal); Peterson Farms Inc v C & M Farming Ltd [2004] EWHC 121 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 603 (company not agent for others in group); below, para.31-075. The Yukong case is considered by Leggatt J. in Magellan Spirit ApS v Vitol SA [2016] EWHC 454 (Comm) at [27], [28].

406. See dicta in Teheran-Europe Co Ltd v ST Belton (Tractors) Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 545, 552, 561; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.8–073.

407. See above, para.31-004.

408. For the first: Hutton v Bulloch (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 572; Anglo-African Shipping Co of New York Inc v J Mortner Ltd [1962] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 610; and see Armstrong v Stokes (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 598. For the second: Maspons y Hermano v Mildred, Goyeneche & Co (1882) 9 Q.B.D. 530; affirmed on other grounds (1883) 8 App. Cas. 874.

409. Fred Drughorn Ltd v Rederiaktiebolaget Transatlantic [1919] A.C. 203.

410. See Teheran-Europe Co Ltd v ST Belton (Tractors) Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 545, 552.

411. UK Mutual Steamship Association v Nevill (1887) 19 Q.B.D. 110.

412. Phillips v Duke of Bucks (1683) 1 Vern. 227.

413. Humble v Hunter (1848) 12 Q.B. 310. See also Davis v Capel [1959] N.Z.L.R. 825.

- 414. Formby v Formby (1910) 102 L.T. 116 (though the point was not actually decided); Fawcett v Star Car Sales Ltd [1960] N.Z.L.R. 406; JH Rayner (Mincing Lane) Ltd v Department of Trade and Industry [1989] Ch. 72, 190–191 (“as principals”).
- 415. Fred Drughorn Ltd v Rederiaktiebolaget Transatlantic [1919] A.C. 203 (“charterer”); Killick & Co v Price & Co (1896) 12 T.L.R. 263; Danziger v Thompson [1944] K.B. 654; Hanstown Properties Ltd v Green (1977) 246 E.G. 917 CA (“tenant”); Epps v Rothnie [1945] K.B. 562 (“landlord”); O/Y Wasa SS Co v Newspaper Pulp & Wood Exports (1949) 82 Ll.L. Rep. 936 (“disponent owner”: authorities reviewed); Finzel Berry & Co v Eastcheap Dried Fruit Co [1962] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 370, 375; affirmed [1962] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 11; Murphy v Rae [1967] N.Z.L.R. 103; Asty Maritime Co Ltd v Rocco Giuseppe & Figli (The Astyanax) [1985] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 109.
- 416. McLauchlan, The Parol Evidence Rule (Wellington, NZ, 1976), Ch.13.
- 417. Teheran-Europe Co Ltd v ST Belton (Tractors) Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 545, 555, quoted above, para.31-054; applied in Novasen SA v Alimenta SA [2011] EWHC 49 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 390. But the exclusion of a principal need not be express: for a case where the presumption did not apply see Rolls Royce Power Engineering Plc v Ricardo Consulting Engineers Ltd [2003] EWHC 2871, [2004] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 129. An undisclosed principal was held to be excluded by the wording of an insurance contract in Talbot Underwriting Ltd v Nausch, Hogan & Murray Inc (The Jascon 5) [2006] EWCA 889, [2006] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 195. Contrast Ferryways NV v Associated British Ports [2008] EWHC 225 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 639, where intervention on a employment contract was permitted; White v Baycorp Advantage Business Information Services Ltd (2006) 200 F.L.R. 125 (rental agreement and assignment); Diamond Stud Ltd v New Zealand Bloodstock Finance Ltd [2010] NZCA 423 (terms of auction did not exclude undisclosed principal).
- 418. [1920] 3 K.B. 497 (the action brought was actually for inducement of breach of contract). See also Smith v Wheatcroft (1878) 9 Ch. D. 223, discussed by Goodhart and Hamson, below, n.419 at 344.
- 419. Greer v Downs Supply Co [1927] 2 K.B. 28; Collins v Associated Greyhound Racecourses Ltd [1930] 1 Ch. 1.
- 420. Goodhart and Hamson (1932) 4 C.L.J. 320. There was some support in Dyster v Randall & Sons [1926] Ch. 932, where an undisclosed principal was held entitled to enforce a contract where he knew that the third party would not have sold to him, and one of the reasons given was that the benefit of the contract could have been assigned. See also Nash v Dix (1898) 78 L.T. 445, where the “agent” was held to have bought for resale to his principal.
- 421. See Vol.I, paras 19-055 et seq., 19-082 et seq.
- 422. Goodhart and Hamson (1932) 4 C.L.J. 320 at 341.
- 423. Siu Yin Kwan v Eastern Insurance Co Ltd [1994] 2 A.C. 199; citing Browning v Provincial Insurance Co of Canada (1876) L.R. 5 P.C. 263, especially at 273. See Reynolds [1994] J.B.L. 260.
- 424. Siu Yin Kwan v Eastern Insurance Co Ltd, above, at 207. But the case is in fact very close to being one of unidentified principal: see Reynolds, Consensus ad Idem (ed. Rose, 1996), pp.92–95.
- 425. Archer v Stone (1898) 79 L.T. 34.
- 426. Dyster v Randall [1926] Ch. 932.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 6. - Principal's Relations with Third Parties
(d) - Principals and Third Parties: Further Rules

Deeds, bills, notes and cheques

31-068

There are exceptions to the general rules in the case of deeds, bills, notes and cheques. No one can sue or be sued on any deed inter partes unless he is described as a party thereto and the deed is executed in his name. ⁴²⁷ But when the agent is a trustee of his rights for his principal, the principal may enforce his rights under the deed in the name of the agent, joining the agent as co-plaintiff or as co-defendant. ⁴²⁸ And by virtue of the Powers of Attorney Act 1971 s.7(1), ⁴²⁹ if the donee of a power of attorney is an individual, he may, if he thinks fit, execute any instrument with his own signature, and, where sealing is required, with his own seal, by the authority of the donor of the power. ⁴³⁰ It would seem, however, that the principal should be mentioned in the deed, and that the section does not permit intervention by an undisclosed principal. ⁴³¹ As regards bills, notes and cheques, no one can be liable on any such instrument unless his signature is upon it, ⁴³² and no one can be liable as acceptor of a bill except the person on whom it was drawn, ⁴³³ except where it is accepted for honour. But signature of a principal's name by an authorised agent suffices in these cases. ⁴³⁴

Settlement with and set-off against agent ⁴³⁵

31-069

The general rule here is that settlement with the agent does not discharge the third party unless the agent has actual or apparent authority to receive such settlement ⁴³⁶; and that the third party has no right to set off against the principal claims that he may have against the agent. ⁴³⁷ But where the principal is undisclosed, the position may be different in both cases. Where the third party reasonably believes that the person with whom he is dealing acts as principal, the principal will be bound by settlement with ⁴³⁸ and set-offs against ⁴³⁹ the agent accruing before notice of the principal's existence. It might be expected that the rationale of the rule would be simply that the undisclosed principal intervenes, like an assignee, subject to equities already accrued. ⁴⁴⁰ The leading case ⁴⁴¹ suggests however that the rule rests on estoppel, i.e. on the principal having induced the third party to believe that the agent acted for himself. ⁴⁴² It is difficult to see how a principal who is undisclosed can (except by conduct unknown to the third party) be regarded as doing this. In the case itself the third party admitted that he had no views as to whether the agent (a broker) dealt on his own account or as agent; so he should not have been surprised by the presence of a principal. The agent was in fact a broker, who might be assumed to have a principal. ⁴⁴³ However, if this is the correct approach in general, such a principal is only bound by settlement with or set-off against the agent, occurring before notice ⁴⁴⁴ of his involvement, where the belief that the agent was principal can be said to have been induced by him. In this part of the law it seems however that the mere entrusting of goods to the agent is treated as giving reasonable grounds for such belief. ⁴⁴⁵

Effect of judgment against agent

31-070

❗ Where the agent, having made a contract in such terms that he is personally liable, ⁴⁴⁶ has been sued on it to judgment, it appears that no action is maintainable against the principal on the same contract. This rule is said to be based on the notion that there cannot be two judgments on the same debt, ⁴⁴⁷ ❗ though it is open to criticism as being an unnecessary extension of the rules for joint debts, ⁴⁴⁸ which have in any case in this respect been altered by statute. ⁴⁴⁹ It certainly applies where the principal is undisclosed ⁴⁵⁰; but it seems that it may apply also where he is disclosed, though the authority and rationale here are distinctly less compelling. ⁴⁵¹ The rule has been applied, though the first judgment was a summary one under Ord.14 of the then Rules of the Supreme Court, ⁴⁵² or a default judgment, ⁴⁵³ or in an action in which principal and agent were sued jointly, ⁴⁵⁴ or was obtained for part only of the amount claimed, ⁴⁵⁵ or was wholly unsatisfied. ⁴⁵⁶ It has been applied notwithstanding that judgment was set aside by consent, ⁴⁵⁷ but not where it was set aside on the merits. ⁴⁵⁸ But it cannot, of course, apply where there are completely separate causes of action. ⁴⁵⁹ And even if it is in general correct, it is difficult to justify in the case of summary or default judgments, where the interpretation of the facts may in effect be settled by accidents of how litigation arises, and an undefended judgment against a party who is in fact not liable at all (and perhaps cannot pay either) could bar an action against the party who is liable. Two fairly recent Commonwealth cases refuse to accept the doctrine in such a situation. ⁴⁶⁰

Election

31-071

Where principal and agent are both liable, it is further said that the third party may lose his right to sue one by an unequivocal election to sue the other ⁴⁶¹; this is again because the two rights are said to be inconsistent. ⁴⁶² This doctrine is even more open to question than that regarding judgment ⁴⁶³: it is difficult to see any reason for it (though an estoppel would be a different matter). The vast majority of cases invoke it only to hold that there has been no election. Those suggesting that there has been election in cases of undisclosed principals ⁴⁶⁴ can be explained on the basis of estoppel, whereby the third party induced the principal to settle with the agent ⁴⁶⁵: those cited for the proposition in connection with disclosed principals can be explained as cases on formation of contract, dealing with the question "With whom was the contract made"? ⁴⁶⁶ If election does apply here, however, on general grounds before a party can be held to have elected he must have had knowledge of the facts ⁴⁶⁷: but once the facts are discovered he must make his election within a reasonable time, at least if principal or agent would be prejudiced by the delay. ⁴⁶⁸ The question whether an election has been made is one of fact to be decided in all the circumstances of the case. ⁴⁶⁹ Debiting one party may ⁴⁷⁰ or may not ⁴⁷¹ constitute such election. The institution of legal proceedings against one party provides a prima facie case of election, ⁴⁷² but is not conclusive evidence: nor is filing a winding-up ⁴⁷³ petition and obtaining an order, nor proving in one party's bankruptcy, ⁴⁷⁴ nor obtaining leave to sign judgment against one party, ⁴⁷⁵ nor appointing an arbitrator. ⁴⁷⁶

Where principal is discharged by settling with agent

31-072

Normally speaking a disclosed principal is not discharged from liability to the third party by settling with his agent. ⁴⁷⁷ But he may be so discharged where the third party by his conduct leads the principal to believe that the agent has paid, ⁴⁷⁸ or gives the agent more time to pay, or otherwise indicates that he intends to rely on the agent alone for payment. ⁴⁷⁹ Where a seller gave credit to an agent supposing him to be the principal (i.e. to an agent acting for an undisclosed principal), however, and, before the seller discovered the truth, the principal settled the account with his agent, it was held by Blackburn J. in Armstrong v Stokes ⁴⁸⁰ that the settlement with the agent released the principal from liability to the seller on the ground that any other conclusion would give rise to "intolerable hardship". This case was subsequently doubted by the Court of Appeal in Irvine & Co v Watson & Sons. ⁴⁸¹ It seems to be based on the fact that it concerned commission agents, who dealt in their own name and were intended to do so, a situation rather like that of the indirect representation known to some civil law jurisdictions. ⁴⁸²

-
- 427. Schack v Anthony (1813) 1 M. & S. 573; Berkeley v Hardy (1826) 3 B. & C. 355. But the principal may be able to sue by virtue of s.56 of the Law of Property Act 1925 if the deed purports to grant something to him: see Beswick v Beswick [1968] A.C. 58. And if the deed is not inter partes, he can sue if he is a covenantee: see Cooker v Child (1673) 2 Lev. 74; Sunderland Marine Insurance Co v Kearney (1851) 16 Q.B. 925. For the view that properly executed deeds bind the principal even if they are not authorised see Watts (2002) 2 O.U.C.L.J. 93.
- 428. Harmer v Armstrong [1934] Ch. 65.
- 429. Superseding Law of Property Act 1925 s.123(1); and as modified by s.1(8) of and Sch.1 to the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 in respect of “sealing”.
- 430. See the meaning of this provision considered in Clauss v Pir [1988] Ch. 267.
- 431. See Harmer v Armstrong, above, where it was assumed that such intervention was not in general possible.
- 432. Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s.23, 89.
- 433. s.17(1); Polhill v Walter (1832) 3 B. & Ad. 114; Steele v M’Kinlay (1880) 5 App. Cas. 754.
- 434. s.91(1).
- 435. See Derham, Law of Set-Off, 4th edn (2010); Wood, English and International Set-Off (1989).
- 436. As to authority to receive payment, see above, para.31-051. Settlement with and set-off against the agent may sometimes however be operative to the extent of the agent’s lien: see Drinkwater v Goodwin (1775) Cowp. 251; Hudson v Granger (1821) 5 B. & Ald. 27; cf. above, para.31-009; below, para.31-099.
- 437. Fish v Kempton (1849) 7 C.B. 687; Mildren v Maspons (1883) 8 App. Cas. 874. But the principal may authorise settlement in this way: Barker v Greenwood (1837) 2 Y. & C.Ex. 414; Stewart v Aberdeen (1838) 4 M. & W. 211, 228. A custom that a third party may so settle is unreasonable and does not bind a principal who had no knowledge of it: Sweeting v Pearce (1859) 7 C.B.(N.S.) 449; Pearson v Scott (1879) 9 Ch. D. 198.
- 438. Coates v Lewes (1808) 1 Camp. 444; Curlewis v Birkbeck (1863) 3 F. & F. 894. The agent may vary the contract: Blackburn v Scholes (1810) 2 Camp. 341.
- 439. George v Clagett (1797) 7 T.R. 359; Montagu v Forwood [1893] 2 Q.B. 350.
- 440. Rabone v Williams (1797) 7 T.R. 360n.; Turner v Thomas (1871) L.R. 6 C.P. 610, 613; Powell, Law of Agency, 2nd edn (1961), pp.174–178. But as to this analogy, see above, paras 31-063, 31-067.
- 441. Cooke & Sons v Eshelby (1887) 12 App. Cas. 271. But cf. Montagu v Forwood, above.
- 442. Cooke & Sons v Eshelby, above, at 278.
- 443. See Baring v Corrie (1818) 2 B. & Ald. 137, 143; Armstrong v Stokes (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 598, 610.
- 444. It is often said that constructive notice is not sufficient in commercial transactions. But the validity of this proposition has been considerably modified of late: see material cited above; para.31-056 n.355; and for the present context, e.g. Dresser v Norwood (1864) 17 C.B.(N.S.) 466.

- 445. Borries v Imperial Ottoman Bank (1873) L.R. 9 C.P. 38. Yet this is not so where the passing of property is in issue: Weiner v Gill [1905] 2 K.B. 172, 182; below, paras 31-076—31-077.
- 446. i.e. when his principal is undisclosed and in certain other circumstances, as to which see below, paras 31-084 et seq.
- 447.  See Kendall v Hamilton (1879) 4 App. Cas. 504, 515; Moore v Flanagan [1920] 1 K.B. 919, 926. The matter is briefly referred to in Adams v Atlas International Property Services Ltd [2016] EWHC 2680 (QB), [2017] Bus. L.R. 287.
- 448. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), art.82.
- 449. Civil Liability Contribution Act 1978 s.3. But the obtaining of such a judgment might still rank as an election: below, para.31-071.
- 450. Priestly v Fernie (1865) 3 H. & C. 977; Kendall v Hamilton (1879) 4 App. Cas. 504 at 514–515; Marginson v Ian Potter & Co (1976) 136 C.L.R. 161, 169.
- 451. See Morel Bros & Co Ltd v Earl of Westmorland [1904] A.C. 11; Sullivan v Sullivan [1912] 2 I.R. 116, 127-128; Moore v Flanagan, above; RMKRM (A Firm) v MRMVL (A Firm) [1926] A.C. 761; Debenham's Ltd v Perkins (1925) 133 L.T. 252, 254; Barrington v Lee [1972] 1 Q.B. 326 (all cases of disclosed but unidentified principals).
- 452. Morel Bros & Co Ltd v Earl of Westmorland, above.
- 453. Cross & Co v Matthews and Wallace (1904) 91 L.T. 500.
- 454. Moore v Flanagan [1920] 1 K.B. 919.
- 455. French v Howie [1906] 2 K.B. 674.
- 456. Kendall v Hamilton (1879) 4 App. Cas. 504, 514; London General Omnibus Co Ltd v Pope (1922) 38 T.L.R. 270.
- 457. Hammond v Schofield [1891] 1 Q.B. 453; and see Cross & Co v Matthews and Wallace (1904) 91 L.T. 500; Cyril Lord (Carpet Sales) v Browne (1966) 111 S.J. 51; cf. Longman v Hill (1891) 7 T.L.R. 639.
- 458. Hammond v Schofield, above; Partington v Hawthorne (1888) 55 J.P. 807; Goodey v Garriock [1972] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 369; Petersen v Moloney (1951) 84 C.L.R. 91.
- 459. See Debenham's Ltd v Perkins (1933) 125 L.T. 252 (two sales); BO Morris Ltd v Perrott and Bolton [1945] 1 All E.R. 567 (cheque). See also Isaacs v Salbstein [1916] 2 K.B. 139 (first party sued not liable).
- 460. LC Fowler & Sons v St Stephen's College Board of Governors [1991] 3 N.Z.L.R. 304; Lang Transport Ltd v Plus Factor International Trucking Ltd (1997) 143 D.L.R.(4th) 672.
- 461. Clarkson Booker v Andjel [1964] 2 Q.B. 775; Calder v Dobell (1871) L.R. 6 C.P. 486, 499; Curtis v Williamson (1874) L.R. 10 Q.B. 57.
- 462. Citing Scarf v Jardine (1882) 7 App. Cas. 345, 360; Clarkson Booker v Andjel, above, at 794.
- 463. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), art.82; but cf. Chestertons v Barone [1987] 1 E.G.L.R. 115, where the doctrine is accepted (but not applied). As to the nature of the cause of action against the agent, see below, para.31-084. In the United States “election” is used to cover both aspects of the doctrine, and leading cases (rightly) reject the notion: e.g. Grinder v Bryans Road Building and Supply Co, 423 1 2d 453 Ct App Md 1981 (“the foregoing reasoning is unassailable on any other ground than its lack of strict adherence to the precedents").

- 464. MacClure v Schemeil (1871) 20 W.R. 168; Smethurst v Mitchell (1859) 1 E. & E. 622.
- 465. See below, para.31-072.
- 466. See Addison v Gandassequi (1812) 4 Taunt. 547; Paterson v Gandasequi (1812) 15 East 62; Thomson v Davenport (1829) 9 B. & C. 78. There is a further confusion with cases on taking bills in satisfaction: see, e.g. Robinson v Read (1829) 9 B. & C. 449; The Huntsman [1949] P. 214.
- 467. Dunn v Newton (1884) Cab. & El. 278; Clarkson Booker v Andjel [1964] 2 Q.B. 775, 792.
- 468. Smethurst v Mitchell (1859) 1 E. & E. 622; but see explanation of this case in Davison v Donaldson (1882) 9 Q.B. 623, 628.
- 469. Calder v Dobell (1871) L.R. 6 C.P. 486; Clarkson Booker v Andjel, above, at 792.
- 470. Addison v Gandassequi (1812) 4 Taunt. 547 (but see explanation of this case above).
- 471. Thomson v Davenport (1829) 9 B. & C. 78; Eastman v Harry (1875) 33 L.T. 800.
- 472. Clarkson Booker v Andjel [1964] 2 Q.B. 775; Cyril Lord (Carpet Sales) v Browne (1966) 111 S.J. 51; Chestertons Ltd v Barone [1987] 1 E.G.L.R. 15; cf. Blake v Melrose [1950] N.Z.L.R. 781 (third-party notice).
- 473. Con-Stan Industries of Australia Pty Ltd v Norwich Winterthur Insurance (Australia) Ltd (1986) 160 C.L.R. 226.
- 474. Curtis v Williamson (1874) L.R. 10 Q.B. 57. But cf. Fell v Parkin (1882) 52 L.J.Q.B. 99; MacClure v Schemeil (1871) 20 W.R. 168.
- 475. C Christopher (Hove) Ltd v Williams [1936] 3 All E.R. 68.
- 476. Pyxis Special Shipping Co Ltd v Dritsas & Kaglis Bros Ltd (The Scaplake) [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 380.
- 477. Kymer v Suwercropp (1807) 1 Camp. 109; Heald v Kenworthy (1855) 10 Exch. 739; Irvine & Co v Watson & Sons (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 414.
- 478. MacClure v Schemeil (1871) 20 W.R. 168; Wyatt v Hertford (1802) 3 East 147; Horsfall v Fautleroy (1830) 10 B. & C. 755.
- 479. Smith v Ferrand (1827) 7 B. & C. 19; Kymer v Suwercropp, above; see also Macfarlane v Giannacopulo (1858) 3 H. & N. 86; Smethurst v Mitchell (1855) 1 E. & E. 622 as explained in Davison v Donaldson (1882) 9 Q.B.D. 623; Sopwith Aviation and Engineering Co Ltd v Magnus Motors Ltd [1928] N.Z.L.R. 433.
- 480. (1872) L.R. 7 Q.B. 598.
- 481. (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 414 (but a case on unidentified principal). See also Davison v Donaldson (1882) 9 Q.B.D. 623 (but a pre-1890 case on partnership).
- 482. See above, para.31-004 n.15. It was in Armstrong v Stokes that Blackburn J. made the famous remark about the undisclosed principal doctrine reported above, para.31-063, text to n.395.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 6. - Principal's Relations with Third Parties
(e) - Agent Bribed

Effect of bribery of agent

31-073

"For the purposes of the civil law a bribe means the payment of a secret commission, which only means (i) that the person making the payment makes it to the agent of the other person with whom he is dealing; (ii) that he makes it to that person knowing that that person is acting as the agent of the other person with whom he is dealing; (iii) that he fails to disclose to the other person with whom he is dealing that he has made that payment to the person whom he knows to be the other person's agent." ⁴⁸³

⚠ Once the bribe is established it is conclusively presumed against the donor of the bribe that his motive was corrupt and against the agent that he was affected and influenced by the payment. ⁴⁸⁴ It is not necessary that the bribe induce a contract. ⁴⁸⁵ A principal whose agent has accepted a secret commission is therefore not obliged to prove that the agent's mind was actually influenced by the receipt of the commission. ⁴⁸⁶ The third party is regarded as a party to the breach of duty where he knows that he is depriving the principal of the disinterested advice of the agent, or is wilfully blind to that ⁴⁸⁷; and the principal may rescind a transaction entered into with him ⁴⁸⁸ ⚠; and when the principal has repudiated a contract on an insufficient ground he may subsequently justify the repudiation on the ground of the bribe, even though ignorant of it at the time of repudiation. ⁴⁸⁹ If he rescinds, he is not required to account for the bribe, which he may recover from the agent or retain and treat as a gift to himself. ⁴⁹⁰ Besides his right to rescind, a principal whose agent has been bribed may recover from the third party the amount of the bribe in an action said to lie in money had and received ⁴⁹¹, or he may sue the third party in tort ⁴⁹² for loss suffered. ⁴⁹³ Only the entry of judgment on one or the other cause of action will constitute a final election between the two. ⁴⁹⁴ He may likewise sue the agent on the same two causes of action, subject again to election. ⁴⁹⁵ But he may not obtain double recovery in such proceedings, and if he sues both, satisfaction of judgment against one will bar an action against the other except for any excess. ⁴⁹⁶ Where the loss suffered is less than the amount of the bribe, the (restitutionary) action in money had and received will obviously be preferable.

31-074

The above is a statement of the traditional rules concerning bribery, on which there is a cluster of cases mostly around the turn of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. They now require to be assessed taking into account other considerations which have more recently come into focus. First, it seems that at common law a contract obtained by bribery is likely to be unauthorised because contrary to the principal's interests; hence it may actually be void as opposed to voidable in equity. ⁴⁹⁷ Secondly, the first main nineteenth-century case on the right to rescind ⁴⁹⁸ did not concern bribery in the strict sense, though it can be said that such cases "concern a form of fraudulent activity amounting to a bribe". ⁴⁹⁹ It can also be said that the decision applied the typical rules, and also a variety of remedies, to what may in wider terms be described as being dishonest assistance to a breach of fiduciary duty by the agent.⁵⁰⁰ Hence with more modern developments it may be appropriate to think of flexible equitable remedies being available against the briber in that more general context. It has been held that an account of profits may be available in such a case⁵⁰¹ as and it seems likely that equitable compensation will be available in appropriate cases.⁵⁰²

- ^{483.} Industries & General Mortgage Co v Lewis [1949] 2 All E.R. 573, 575, per Slade J.; followed in Taylor v Walker [1958] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 490. See also Panama, etc. Telegraph Co v India Rubber, etc. Telegraph Works (1875) L.R. 10 Ch. App. 515, 526; Anangel Atlas Cia Naviera SA v Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries Ltd [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 167. For bribery by an agent of the third party, see Armagas Ltd v Mundogas SA (The Ocean Frost) [1986] A.C. 717, 743-745, 755 CA. The first instance decision also contains discussion of the effect of a bribe paid, agreed or adopted after the conclusion of the contract: see [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1, 18-22. Where the bribed agent acted in some respects for both parties the question will be whether in paying the bribe the agent was acting within the scope of its agency for the party seeking to enforce the contract: UBS v Kommunale Wasserwerke Leipzig GmbH [2014] EWHC 3615 (Comm) at [615] et seq. In the case of a company, disclosure to one director is insufficient: Ross River Ltd v Cambridge City Football Club [2007] EWHC 2115 (Ch), [2008] 1 All E.R. 1004. See also Vol.I, para.29-164; Berg [2001] L.M.C.L.Q. 27 (a valuable article). Bribery can be a criminal offence under the Bribery Act 2010.
- ^{484.} Industries and General Mortgage Co v Lewis [1949] 2 All E.R. 573, above; Hovenden v Milhoff (1900) 83 L.T. 41; Harrington v Victoria Graving Dock Co (1878) 3 Q.B.D. 549.
- ^{485.} Petrotrade Inc v Smith [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 486.
- ^{486.} Shipway v Broadwood [1899] 1 Q.B. 369; Smith v Sorby (1875) 3 Q.B.D. 552n.
- ^{487.} Tigris International NV v Southern China Airlines Co Ltd [2014] EWCA Civ 1649 at [79].
- ^{488.}  Panama & South Pacific Telegraph Co v India Rubber, etc. Co (1875) L.R. 10 Ch. App. 515, 526; Re a Debtor [1927] 2 Ch. 367, 376-377; Taylor v Walker [1958] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 490, 509-513; North & South Trust Co v Berkeley [1971] 1 W.L.R. 470, 485. But not a transaction entered into before the bribery: Ross River Ltd v Cambridge City Football Club [2007] EWHC 2115 (Ch), [2008] 1 All E.R. 1004. In Chancery Client Partners Ltd v MRC 957 Ltd [2016] EWHC 2142 (Ch) it was held that purchasers of tax savings schemes purchased from a third party who had bribed their agent could not rescind the schemes, as opposed to the contract between them and the third party scheme provider.
- ^{489.} Alexander v Webber [1922] 1 K.B. 642; Boston Deep Sea Fishing & Ice Co v Ansell (1888) 39 Ch. D. 339.
- ^{490.} Logicrose Ltd v Southend United Football Club [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1256.
- ^{491.} The action is in personam but is difficult to justify in terms of restitution. For discussion see Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.8-222; and see below. Compare the action against the agent: below, para.31-132.
- ^{492.} Said to be not deceit but a "special form of fraud": see ING Re (UK) Ltd v R & V Versicherungs AG [2006] EWHC (Comm) 1344, [2006] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 870 at [19].
- ^{493.} Mahesan v Malaysia Government Officers' Co-operative Housing Society Ltd [1979] A.C. 374, explaining Hovenden & Sons v Millhoff (1900) 83 L.T. 41; Arab Monetary Fund v Hashim [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 589. Both causes of action are difficult to classify, and it is therefore possible that the leading case of Mahesan, a Privy Council decision, may at some time need reconsideration.
- ^{494.} Mahesan v Malaysia Government Officers' Co-operative Housing Society Ltd, above, applying United Australia Ltd v Barclays Bank Ltd [1941] A.C. 1.

- 495. Mahesan v Malaysia Government Officers' Co-operative Housing Society Ltd, above, para.31-043.
- 496. Mahesan v Malaysia Government Officers' Co-operative Housing Society Ltd, above, at 382-383, applying United Australia Ltd v Barclays Bank Ltd, above. But see Tettenborn (1979) 95 L.Q.R. 68; Needham (1979) 95 L.Q.R. 536.
- 497. See Heinl v Jyske Bank (Gibraltar) Ltd [1999] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 511, 521; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), art.23; above, paras 31-039, 31-043. But it appears that an arbitration clause remains effective even in such a case: see Premium Nafta Products Ltd v Fiji Shipping Co Ltd [2007] UKHL 40, [2007] Bus. L.R. 1719; Rushworth (2008) 124 L.Q.R. 195; Briggs [2008] L.M.C.L.Q. 1.
- 498. Panama & South Pacific Telegraph Co v India Rubber, etc. Telegraph Works Co (1875) L.R. 10 Ch. App. 515. The remedies awarded vary: see Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, above, paras 6-087, 8-221, 8-222. Some cases, including this, can be explained on the basis of discharge of contract by breach: see Ross River Ltd v Cambridge City Football Club [2007] EWHC 2815 (Ch), [2008] 1 All E.R. 1004.
- 499. Tigris International NV v Southern China Airlines Co Ltd [2014] EWCA Civ 1649 at [176].
- 500. Logicrose v Southend United FC [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1256, 1261 D-G; as to which see Royal Brunei Airlines Sdn Bhd v Tan [1995] 2 A.C. 378; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), art.116.
- 501. Novoship (UK) Ltd v Mikhaylyuk [2014] EWCA Civ 908, [2015] 2 W.L.R. 526: see also Logicrose v Southend United FC [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1256, 1261, per Millett J.; Fyffes Group Ltd v Templeman [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 643; Ultraframe (UK) Ltd v Fielding [2005] EWHC 1638 (Ch), [2006] F.S.R. 17 at [1594]; but cf. Petrotrade Inc v Smith [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 486. A proprietary claim is made somewhat easier by the decision in FHR European Ventures Ltd v Cedar Capital Partners LLC [2014] UKSC 45, [2015] A.C. 250, which however only concerns a claim against the agent: see below, para.31-132. But the reasoning would not be operative in the context of limitation: Williams v Central Bank of Nigeria [2014] UKSC 10, [2014] A.C. 1189.
- 502. Such an award was made in Hurstanger Ltd v Wilson [2007] EWCA Civ 299, [2007] 1 W.L.R. 2351, on the basis that the commission was not secret so as to attract the "full armoury of remedies" (principally rescission) but that non-disclosure of the sum involved gave rise to equitable relief for the amount of the commission.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 6. - Principal's Relations with Third Parties
(f) - Agent's Torts

Agent's torts

31-075

⚠ A principal is liable for the torts of his agent in accordance with the normal principles of vicarious liability in tort. Thus he is liable for the acts of an employee agent acting in the course of his employment, and also where the agent is an independent contractor in the (uncertain) circumstances in which the duty is held non-delegable.⁵⁰³ The criteria for connection with the employer have over recent years been the subject of considerable relaxation.⁵⁰⁴ ⚠ From the point of view of agency law, the significant question is whether in view of this relaxation the agency-based notion of authority has any longer a role to play in determining tort liability for representations, which constitute an area in which it might still be expected to do so. It has recently been said in the context of an employee agent of a bank that it does not have such a role, at any rate outside the context of deceit; and the more general criteria referred to above were applied to a representation by an employee.⁵⁰⁵ However, it seems fairly clear that in general, liability for misrepresentations is based on the idea of assumption of responsibility: it had considerably earlier been held that a director did not assume responsibility for certain negligent statements contained in a report to a third party, but it was assumed his company was liable for them, and this idea of the assumption of responsibility features in both conclusions.⁵⁰⁶ This can be argued to detach liability for representations, where there is an analogy with contract, from general vicarious liability for employees, and it is submitted that authority, actual or apparent, has a role to play in determining not only liability for representations by non-employee agents, but also representations by employee agents.⁵⁰⁷ There are also a few cases holding a principal liable for the acts of an independent contractor not involving representations, and hence not using any notion of authority, on reasoning which nevertheless appears to connect to their status as an agent but not to any idea of non-delegable duty.⁵⁰⁸ They are presumably to be explained as examples, possibly unusual, justified by some more general notion of vicarious liability, going beyond employment and outside the sphere of representation, in respect of matters undertaken in order to achieve the principal's objectives.⁵⁰⁹

^{503.} This category has been rationalised and to some extent expanded of late: see Woodland v Essex CC [2013] UKSC 66, [2014] A.C. 357. See Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), Ch.6.

^{504.} ⚠ Lister v Hesley Hall Ltd [2001] UKHL 22, [2002] 1 A.C. 215; and see Dubai Aluminium Co Ltd v Salaam [2002] UKHL 48, [2002] 2 A.C. 366 (partner: dishonest assistance in breach of trust); Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), paras 6-28 et seq. For a recent example see Mohamud v Wm Morrison Supermarkets Plc [2016] UKSC 11, [2016] A.C. 677 (assault by employee).

^{505.} So v HSBC Bank Plc [2009] EWCA Civ 296, [2009] 1 C.L.C. 503 at [53] et seq., citing the Dubai Aluminium case, above, though it has a different context; where however it is not made clear whether or not the reasoning is intended to apply outside the sphere of employment. See also Quinn v CC Automotive Group Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 1412, [2011] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 584, where matters of vicarious liability and authority are run together. See discussion by Watts (2012) 128 L.Q.R. 260. As to vicarious liability for deceit see Armagas Ltd v Mundogas SA (The Ocean Frost) [1986] A.C. 717.

- 506. Williams v Natural Life Health Foods Ltd [1998] 1 W.L.R. 830.
- 507. See, e.g. Kooragang Investments Pty v Richardson & Wrench Ltd [1982] A.C. 462; Watts (2012) 128 L.Q.R. 260.
- 508. See Colonial Mutual Life Assurance Society Ltd v Producers' and Citizens' Cooperative Assurance Co Ltd (1931) 46 C.L.R. 41, where a company was held liable for defamation of another company by its independent agent while seeking business for it—though surely a fringe case: contrast Colonial Mutual Life Assurance Society v Macdonald [1931] A.D. 412 (same company not liable for negligent driving of representative while on business). For a simpler example see Gordon v Selico Co Ltd [1986] 1 E.G.L.R. 71 (estate agent).
- 509. See Sweeney v Boylan Nominees Ltd (2006) 226 C.L.R. 161 at [14] et seq. (equipment leasing company not liable for negligence of independent contractor used by it for repair services).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 6. - Principal's Relations with Third Parties
(g) - Disposition of Property through Agent

Disposition of property by agent

31-076

A disposition of property made by an agent acting within his actual authority obviously transfers the property, in accordance with general principles. ⁵¹⁰ And a disposition made by an agent acting within his apparent authority will likewise be effective: though if the doctrine of apparent authority is based on estoppel, the estoppel has here an unusually wide effect, for it operates as against all the world. ⁵¹¹ The principal must have made a representation as to the agent's authority to the third party or to a group of third parties, or have been negligent in circumstances in which he owed a duty of care. ⁵¹² It is, however, clear that the mere entrusting of the possession of goods does not confer apparent authority upon the receiver to dispose of them, for otherwise there would be no need for the Factors Acts. ⁵¹³ There must be something more, e.g. the fact that the agent is a person having a usual authority ⁵¹⁴ to dispose of goods, ⁵¹⁵ or the transfer of additional indicia of title or power to sell. ⁵¹⁶ But the rules are easier to state than to apply, and judgments sometimes fall back on the imprecise dictum that "wherever one of two innocent persons must suffer by the acts of a third, he who has enabled such third person to occasion the loss must sustain it". ⁵¹⁷

Apparent ownership

31-077

A similar principle, which is not strictly a principle of agency at all, ⁵¹⁸ but rather a manifestation of more general rules as to estoppel by conduct, operates where the principal enables another person to appear as the owner of goods. Here again, the mere entrusting of goods to such person does not give him apparent ownership: there must be something more, e.g. putting the other person in possession of documents whereby the person who is in fact the owner offers to buy the goods, ⁵¹⁹ or allowing the goods to stand in the name of another. ⁵²⁰

Cases where the agent has some authority

31-078

As a principle of general agency law this is difficult to accept, and would indeed be difficult to limit. The context however is that of property law, and the cases concern persons given the indicia of property and a limited authority, who perform an act or acts over the property which go beyond what was authorised. ⁵²¹ It has recently been said that the principle is not based on actual authority given to the agent, but rather on a combination of factors: "... where the owner has furnished the agent with the means of holding himself out to a purchaser or lender as the owner of the asset or as having the full authority of the owner to deal with it; together with an omission by the owner to bring to the attention of the person dealing with the agent any limitation that exists as to the extent of the actual authority of the agent". ⁵²² There seem to be two separate justifications behind this. The first is based on reasoning concerning priority of equities: "the man possessed of a prior equity cannot be deprived of his title unless he has been guilty of some negligence".⁵²³ The second is the doctrine of apparent ownership, or something akin to it, which like apparent authority can be related to estoppel.⁵²⁴ Whatever doctrine there is needs careful limitation to avoid conflicting with the general proposition stated above, that mere parting with property does not imperil ownership of it.

Mercantile agents

31-079

The Factors Act 1889 extends the common law rules by making special provision for dispositions of goods by mercantile agents who are permitted by the owner to be in possession thereof.⁵²⁵ For the purposes of this statute a mercantile agent is defined (in almost circular fashion) as a mercantile agent having, in the customary course of his business as such agent, authority either to sell goods, or to consign goods for the purpose of sale, or to buy goods, or to raise money on the security of goods.⁵²⁶ The Act was the last of several directed at problems concerning the operations of the nineteenth-century factor, who received the goods of others on consignment and might resell them without making clear whether he acted as agent or principal⁵²⁷; but trading patterns have changed and its modern relevance is to much more casual forms of agency. Thus these words have been held to include a retail jeweller to whom stock was sent for sale by a manufacturing jeweller,⁵²⁸ and a dealer in pictures and furniture on commission,⁵²⁹ but not a mere clerk,⁵³⁰ a person who has been on a single occasion entrusted with a motor car for sale,⁵³¹ nor a person who normally buys and sells on his own account.⁵³² It is however possible for a person to be a mercantile agent although he has only one customer,⁵³³ and it does not appear that the person concerned must carry on business as a mercantile agent of a recognised type.⁵³⁴

Dispositions by mercantile agents

31-080

Section 2(1) of the Act provides:

"Where a mercantile agent is, with the consent of the owner, in possession⁵³⁵ of goods or of the documents of title⁵³⁶ to goods,⁵³⁷ any sale, pledge,⁵³⁸ or other disposition⁵³⁹ of the goods made by him⁵⁴⁰ when acting in the ordinary course of business of a mercantile agent shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, be as valid as if he were expressly authorised by the owner of the goods to make the same; provided that the person taking under the disposition acts in good faith, and has not at the time of the disposition notice that the person making the disposition has not authority to make the same."⁵⁴¹

Although it is necessary that the disposition should be made by the agent when acting in the ordinary course of business of a mercantile agent,⁵⁴² the power to make a binding disposition which the statute confers upon the agent cannot be overridden by the custom of a particular trade that no such dispositions should be made by an agent.⁵⁴³ It is probably not within the ordinary course of business in the United Kingdom to sell a car without its registration document.⁵⁴⁴

Consent of the owner

31-081

It is not clear what restriction these words impose on the agent's possession. It seems that the goods must not merely be in his possession as a mercantile agent; they must have been entrusted to him as such and not, e.g. solely as a bailee,⁵⁴⁵ and they must have been entrusted to him for a purpose which is in some way connected with his business as a mercantile agent; it may not actually be for sale—it may be for display or to get offers; but it must be something of that kind before the owner can be deprived of his goods.⁵⁴⁶ Thus, if a person takes his car to a garage to be repaired, the proprietors of the garage cannot sell it with a good title, under s.2 of the Act, merely because they happen also to be dealers in second-hand cars. For the purposes of the statute the consent of the owner is to be presumed in the absence of evidence to the contrary.⁵⁴⁷ Where the owner consents to possession, the operation of the Act is not defeated by the fact that the consent was obtained by deception or fraud⁵⁴⁸—unless the owner did not intend the agent to have possession at all.⁵⁴⁹ It should be noted that this requirement makes relevant matters which the third party may have no means of knowing, and shows that the Act is not by modern standards merely a specific example of apparent authority reasoning.

Dispositions to agent

31-082

The question of acquisition of property through agents is of great conceptual difficulty.⁵⁵⁰ It seems clear that a disposition of property to an agent known to be acting for a principal may, if the third party making the disposition and the agent so intend, and the agent has authority,⁵⁵¹ vest property in the principal. It is also arguable that where the agent intends to acquire for an undisclosed principal and is authorised to do so the property vests in the principal without the necessity for further transfer,⁵⁵² subject perhaps to the limits on the doctrine of undisclosed principal.⁵⁵³ In both these cases it would seem that possession rests with the agent (until he makes a fresh transfer or attorns to the principal). It has however been held that an attornment to the agent of an undisclosed principal can create a pledge interest in the principal.⁵⁵⁴ It is of course possible for the agent to acquire legal title but hold on trust for the principal.⁵⁵⁵

^{510.} But if the agent holds property on trust the principal's equitable interest will prevail except against a bona fide purchaser for value: Gray v Smith [2013] EWHC 4136 (Comm), [2014] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 359; see also Feuer Leather Corp v Frank Johnstone & Sons [1981] Com. L.R. 251.

^{511.} Eastern Distributors v Goldring [1957] 2 Q.B. 600, 611. See also Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.21; Moorgate Mercantile Co Ltd v Twitchings [1977] A.C. 890; Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc v Maclaine Watson & Co Ltd (No.2) [1988] 1 W.L.R. 16, 28 (strong inference when acting in course of employment).

^{512.} See above, para.31-056.

^{513.} Weiner v Gill [1905] 2 K.B. 172, 182; Central Newbury Car Auctions Ltd v Unity Finance Ltd [1957] 1 Q.B. 371 at 388; Jerome v Bentley & Co [1952] 2 All E.R. 114. As to the Factors Acts, see below, para.31-079.

^{514.} Above, para.31-047.

^{515.} Pickering v Busk (1812) 15 East 38 (broker); Rainbow v Hawkins [1904] 2 K.B. 322 (auctioneer); cf. Tobin v Broadbent (1947) 75 C.L.R. 378 (stockbroker).

^{516.} See Mercantile Credit Co Ltd v Hamblin [1965] 2 Q.B. 242; Eastern Distributors v Goldring [1957] 2 Q.B. 600.

^{517.} Lickbarrow v Mason (1787) 2 T.R. 63, 70; and see Commonwealth Trust v Akotey [1926] A.C. 72. But whether a person has “enabled” seems to turn on the existence of a duty: Central Newbury Car Auctions Ltd v Unity Finance Ltd [1957] 1 Q.B. 371, 389; Jerome v Bentley & Co [1952] 2 All E.R. 114, 118. See below, paras 44-194 et seq.

^{518.} Though it has affinities with the supposed principle of Watteau v Fenwick [1893] 1 Q.B. 346, above, para.31-064.

- 519. Eastern Distributors v Goldring [1957] 2 Q.B. 600; Stoneleigh Finance v Phillips [1965] 2 Q.B. 537; Snook v London & West Riding Investments Ltd [1967] 2 Q.B. 786; cf. Mercantile Credit Co Ltd v Hamblin [1905] 2 Q.B. 242. A car registration document is not such indicium of title as to give rise to apparent ownership: Central Newbury Car Auctions Ltd v Unity Finance Ltd [1957] 1 Q.B. 371; J Sargent (Garages) Ltd v Motor Auctions (West Bromwich) Ltd [1977] R.T.R. 121; Beverley Acceptances Ltd v Oakley [1982] R.T.R. 417. See also below, paras 39-414, 39-415, 44-194 et seq.
- 520. Henderson v Williams [1895] 1 Q.B. 521. But cf. Farquharson Bros & Co v King & Co [1902] A.C. 325; Motor Credits (Hire Finance) Ltd v Pacific Motor Auctions Pty Ltd (1963) 109 C.L.R. 87; reversed on other grounds [1965] A.C. 867; Moorgate Mercantile Co Ltd v Twitchings [1977] A.C. 890.
- 521. The principal cases normally cited are Brocklesby v Temperance Building Society [1895] A.C. 173 (title deeds plus authority to pledge for limited sum); Rimmer v Webster [1902] 2 Ch. 163 (bond plus authority to sell); Fry v Smellie [1912] 3 K.B. 282 (share certificates accompanied by signed blank transfers). See Watts (2002) 2 O.U.C.L.J. 93, 99-100.
- 522. Wishart v Credit & Mercantile Plc [2015] EWCA Civ 655 at [52] per Sales L.J. In this case the person concerned abstained entirely from involvement in the mechanics of purchase of land, thus leaving documents in the hands of a person acting on his behalf.
- 523. Rimmer v Webster [1902] 2 Ch. 163, 172 per Farwell J. These cases thus link to cases on priority of mortgages. The principle is referred to by Millett J. as “the arming principle” in Macmillan Inc v Bishopsgate Investment Trust Plc [1995] 1 W.L.R. 978, 1012 (point not referred to on appeal [1996] 1 W.L.R. 387).
- 524. Rimmer v Webster, above, at 173; Thompson v Foy [2009] EWHC 1076 (Ch), [2010] 1 P. & C.R. 16 at [42]; Bank of Scotland v Hussain [2010] EWHC 2812 (Ch) at [100] et seq.
- 525. See below, para.31-080.
- 526. Factors Act 1889 s.1(1).
- 527. Above, para.31-009.
- 528. Weiner v Harris [1910] 1 K.B. 285.
- 529. Lowther v Harris [1927] 1 K.B. 393.
- 530. Lamb v Attenborough (1862) 1 B. & S. 831.
- 531. Heap v Motorists’ Advisory Agency Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 577; Budberg v Jerwood (1934) 51 T.L.R. 99; Fairfax General Holdings Ltd v Capital Bank Plc [2006] EWHC 3439, [2007] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 171; reversed on other grounds [2007] EWCA Civ 1226, [2008] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 297.
- 532. Belvoir Finance Co Ltd v Harold G Cole & Co Ltd [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1877.
- 533. Lowther v Harris [1927] 1 K.B. 393.
- 534. See Weiner v Harris [1910] 1 K.B. 285, 289 (argument); Mortgage Loan & Finance Co of Australia Ltd v Richards (1931) 32 S.R.(N.S.W.) 50. As to trust receipts see Lloyds Bank Ltd v Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association [1938] 2 K.B. 147.
- 535. Possession is defined by s.1(2) as existing where the “goods or documents are in his actual custody or held by any other person, subject to his control, or for him or on his behalf”. See Beverley Acceptances Ltd v Oakley [1982] R.T.R. 417; Fairfax General Holdings Ltd v Capital Bank Plc [2006] EWHC 3439, [2007] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 171, above.
- 536. As to the meaning of this phrase in this context see Benjamin’s Sale of Goods 9th edn (2014),

- para.7-036.
- 537. See note above.
- 538. See Waddington & Sons v Neale & Sons (1907) 96 L.T. 786.
- 539. As to this word see Worcester Works Finance Ltd v Cooden Engineering Co Ltd [1972] 1 Q.B. 210.
- 540. The possession and disposition must be simultaneous: Beverley Acceptances Ltd v Oakley [1982] R.T.R. 417.
- 541. As to good faith, see Barclays Bank Ltd v TOSG Trust Fund Ltd [1984] B.C.L.C. 1. See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014) paras 7-045 et seq. The onus of proving good faith and absence of notice is on the disponent: Heap v Motorists' Advisory Agency Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 577; Fairfax General Holdings Ltd v Capital Bank Plc [2006] EWHC 3439, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 171; following The Saetta [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 268. Various saving provisions are contained in ss.12 and 13.
- 542. See Turner v Sampson (1911) 27 T.L.R. 200; Jamesich v Attenborough & Son (1910) 102 L.T. 605; De Gorter v Attenborough & Son (1905) 21 T.L.R. 19; Biggs v Evans [1894] 1 Q.B. 88; Newtons of Wembley Ltd v Williams [1965] 1 Q.B. 560; Lloyds & Scottish Finance Ltd v Williamson [1965] 1 W.L.R. 404, 408. But it is not necessary that the third party should know that the person concerned is acting as a mercantile agent: Oppenheimer v Attenborough & Son [1908] 1 K.B. 221.
- 543. Oppenheimer v Attenborough & Son, above.
- 544. Pearson v Rose and Young Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 275; Lambert v G & C Finance Corp (1963) 107 S.J. 666; Stadium Finance Ltd v Robbins [1962] 2 Q.B. 664. But cf. Astley Industrial Trust Ltd v Miller [1968] 2 All E.R. 36. The procedure nowadays is slightly different.
- 545. Staffs Motor Guarantee v British Wagon Co [1934] 2 K.B. 305; Pearson v Rose & Young Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 275, 288; Astley Industrial Trust Ltd v Miller, above.
- 546. Pearson v Rose & Young Ltd, above; Stadium Finance Ltd v Robbins, above; and see Turner v Sampson (1911) 27 T.L.R. 200; Moody v Pall Mall Deposit and Forwarding Co Ltd (1917) 33 T.L.R. 306; Henderson v Prosser [1982] C.L.Y. 21 (car entrusted for valeting).
- 547. Factors Act 1889 s.2(4).
- 548. Whitehorn Bros v Davison [1911] 1 K.B. 463; Folkes v King [1923] 1 K.B. 282; Du Jardin v Beadman Bros [1952] 2 Q.B. 712; Ingram v Little [1961] 1 Q.B. 31, 70.
- 549. Pearson v Rose & Young Ltd [1951] 1 K.B. 275; Stadium Finance Ltd v Robbins [1962] 2 Q.B. 604; Du Jardin v Beadman Bros, above, at 718. And see Debs v Sibec Developments Ltd [1990] R.T.R. 91 (car taken at gun point).
- 550. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), art.89; Goode, Proprietary Rights and Insolvency in Sales Transactions (1985), pp.8-10.
- 551. In appropriate cases it seems that the doctrine of apparent authority could apply.
- 552. But see Ireland v Livingston (1872) L.R. 5 H.L. 395; Cassaboglou v Gibb (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 797, 804; below, para.31-165.
- 553. Which are themselves controversial: above, para.31-067.
- 554. Maynegrain Pty Ltd v Compafina Bank [1982] 2 N.S.W.L.R. 141 (decision reversed by the Privy Council on other grounds (1984) 58 A.L.J.R. 389). See also the cases cited below, para.31-165.

555. Gray v Smith [2013] EWHC 4136 (Comm), [2014] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 359.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 7. - Agent's Relations with Third Parties
(a) - On the Main Contract

General rule

31-083

Upon the general principle that the contract of an agent is the contract of the principal, ⁵⁵⁶ it is often said that an agent is prima facie neither liable upon any agreement into which he enters in a representative capacity nor able to sue on it. ⁵⁵⁷ For example, a commodity broker, who in that capacity sells goods, cannot sue ⁵⁵⁸ or be sued ⁵⁵⁹ on the contract of sale, and a solicitor who retains or subpoenas witnesses is prima facie not personally liable for their expenses. ⁵⁶⁰ But this formulation can be relied on too much. It has been pointed out that:

“It is not the law that, if a principal is liable, his agent cannot be. The true principal of law is that a person is liable for his engagements (as for his torts) even though he is acting for another, unless he can show that by the law of agency he is to be held to have expressly or impliedly negated his personal liability”. ⁵⁶¹

When agent liable and entitled

31-084

⚠ The fact that a person is an agent and is known to be so does not therefore of itself necessarily prevent his incurring personal liability. ⁵⁶² ⚠ Similarly he may be entitled to sue. ⁵⁶³ Whether this is so is to be determined by the construction of the contract, if written, and by its nature and the surrounding circumstances. ⁵⁶⁴ The fact that agents may often be of more substance than their principals suggests that such involvement in the contract may be more appropriate nowadays than in former times. When the agent does contract personally, the scope of the contract which he makes requires careful analysis. He may undertake sole liability to the exclusion of his principal ⁵⁶⁵; he may undertake joint or joint and several liability on the main contract together with his principal. ⁵⁶⁶ He may act as surety for his principal, ⁵⁶⁷ or enter into a collateral contract with its own terms. ⁵⁶⁸ The possibilities shade into one another, and there is no general rule. An agent may undertake liability without being entitled to sue, but he cannot easily be entitled to sue if he is not liable, for there would usually be no consideration to support the liability of the other party. ⁵⁶⁹

Written documents

31-085

Written documents must be construed as a whole; but by their wording they may make an agent a party to the contract. ⁵⁷⁰ For example, where the defendant by a written agreement expressed to be made by himself “on behalf of A B of the one part”, and the plaintiff of the other part, promised that “he, the defendant, would execute to the plaintiff a lease of certain premises”, which, as it was proved, belonged to A B, it was held that the defendant was personally liable. ⁵⁷¹ So also a solicitor who “personally” undertook in writing that a record should be withdrawn and costs paid in a cause which he was conducting, was held personally liable, ⁵⁷² as were solicitors undertaking as such to pay a distraining landlord his rent. ⁵⁷³ The signatory of a charterparty was held personally liable despite a statement in the body of the document. “This vessel was chartered on behalf and for account of General Organisation for Supply Goods, Cairo”. ⁵⁷⁴ But persons who signed a charterparty “as agents” were held not to have made themselves personally liable, notwithstanding that they were described in the body of the instrument as “charterers”. ⁵⁷⁵ Similarly, where a broker on behalf of his principal, T, made a contract with the defendant, L, in the following terms “Mr. L—I have this day bought in my own name, for your account, of T, 259 puncheons of Cuba rum”, signed “A F, broker”, it was held that the broker could not sue the buyer in his own name for the price of the rum. ⁵⁷⁶ And where a shipmaster signed bills of lading covenanting to deliver cargo to the shippers or their assigns at the port of discharge upon their “paying freight as per charterparty”, it was held, in an action by the master against the charterers for freight, that in signing the bills of lading he had done so merely as agent for the shipowner, and consequently was not entitled to maintain the action. ⁵⁷⁷ In all these cases the nature of the liability must be carefully analysed, as stated in the previous paragraph. A signature merely to authenticate the signature of a corporate entity does not usually bind the signer personally. ⁵⁷⁸

Custom and usage of trade

31-086

In certain cases, usually where the principal is disclosed but not named, even an agent who contracts expressly “as agent” is, by usage of trade, held nevertheless to be personally liable on the contract. Marine insurance brokers are generally liable to underwriters for all premiums payable on policies which they have effected with them ⁵⁷⁹ and can sometimes sue on such policies. ⁵⁸⁰ And there are many cases in which it has been held that brokers and the like are, by custom of the trade or market in which they act, personally liable on contracts made for a (usually unidentified) principal, ⁵⁸¹ though it is not always clear whether they are liable instead of or in addition to the principal. Evidence of a custom making an agent personally liable on a contract is inadmissible under the parol evidence rule if the custom is actually inconsistent with the express terms of a written contract ⁵⁸², but even signature “as agents to merchants” may not necessarily be inconsistent with liability, ⁵⁸³ depending again on how the agent’s liability is analysed. ⁵⁸⁴ And there is no doubt that in principle custom can add to the agent’s liability to that of the principal.

Agent for foreign principal

31-087

It was long the case that where an agent contracted on behalf of a foreign principal, he was presumed to contract personally, unless a contrary intention appeared from the terms of the contract or the surrounding circumstances. ⁵⁸⁵ In 1968, however, the Court of Appeal held that the presumption no longer exists, for “the usages of the law merchant are not immutable”. ⁵⁸⁶ It was however said that the fact that the principal is foreign is a matter to be taken into account in determining:

“... whether or not the other party to the contract was willing, or led the agent to believe that he was willing, to treat as a party to the contract the agent’s principal, and, if he was so willing, whether the mutual intention of the other party and the agent was that the agent should be personally entitled to sue and liable to be sued on the contract as well as his principal”. ⁵⁸⁷

Undisclosed principal

31-088

A very important exception to the rule that an agent is neither entitled to sue nor liable to be sued on a contract made by him in a representative capacity is to be found where an authorised agent makes the contract in his own name without disclosing the fact that he is acting on behalf of another. On such contracts he can sue and be sued in his own name because he is then to all appearances the real contracting party.⁵⁸⁸ But the intervention of the undisclosed principal ordinarily puts an end to the agent's right of action.⁵⁸⁹

Unidentified principal

31-089

An agent, while disclosing the fact that he is acting as an agent, may do so without disclosing the name of his principal. Such a principal is not undisclosed,⁵⁹⁰ but may be called "unidentified".⁵⁹¹ Thus as Jessel M.R. said in *Southwell v Bowditch*⁵⁹²:

"No doubt it does not absolutely follow from the defendant's appearing on the contract to be broker that he is not liable as principal. There are two ways in which he might so be made liable: first, intention on the face of the contract making the agent liable as well as the principal: secondly, usage".

In written contracts it seems that non-disclosure of the principal's name makes it more probable the agent will be treated as a party to it, whether alone or together with his principal.⁵⁹³ There may also be trade usages imposing liability on the agent often relate to situations where his principal is unidentified. But it is a question of fact or, in the case of a written contract, of construction, in each particular case whether it was intended that the agent should or should not be personally liable and/or entitled to sue. Thus where solicitors sold certain shares on behalf of a client, not disclosing her name at the time when they instructed their stockbrokers, they were, held liable as principals on the transaction.⁵⁹⁴ In Restatement, Third, Agency, it is provided that in the absence of other indications the agent for an unidentified principal is a party to the contract together with the principal.⁵⁹⁵ No such view can be taken in England: the matter is simply one of interpretation of the dealings. This it has been held that where brokers ordered fuel for a ship from other brokers without saying for whom the fuel was intended, the broker placing the order, who was known not to own ships, was not personally liable (and the owner would be).⁵⁹⁶

Deeds

31-090

It has been held that where an agent, by deed under his own hand and seal, covenants "for himself, his heirs", etc. for the act of another, he is personally liable on his covenant, although he also describes himself in the deed as covenanting "for and on behalf of" another person.⁵⁹⁷

Bills of exchange

31-091

A bill of exchange, promissory note or cheque⁵⁹⁸ may be signed by an agent.⁵⁹⁹ The agent will not be personally liable on such an instrument unless his name appears on it,⁶⁰⁰ and where a person signs such an instrument in his own name but adds words to his signature indicating that he signs for or on behalf of a principal, or in a representative character, he is not personally liable on it; but the mere addition to his signature of words describing him as an agent, or as filling a representative character, does not exempt him from personal liability. ⁶⁰¹ An agent signing his name will therefore be personally liable “unless he states upon the face of the bill that he subscribes it for another, or by procuration of another”. ⁶⁰² In determining whether a signature on a bill is that of the principal or that of the agent by whose hand it is written, the construction most favourable to the validity of the instrument is to be adopted. ⁶⁰³

Agreement excluding or limiting agent's liability

31-092

If the terms of a written contract show that it was intended that the agent should be liable personally, parol evidence to the contrary is not admissible. ⁶⁰⁴ But there is some authority to the effect that the agent may show, by way of defence, that there was an agreement between himself and the plaintiff that he should not be made personally liable. ⁶⁰⁵ And it is obvious that an agent may expressly stipulate on the face of the agreement that, after a certain time, his liability under it is to cease. ⁶⁰⁶

Crown agents

31-093

An agent of the Crown (other than a public body incorporated by statute or the like) ⁶⁰⁷ will rarely be held to have contracted personally. ⁶⁰⁸

Judgment and election

31-094

Where principal and agent are both liable, the doctrines of merger and election may apply, and the third party may be debarred from suing one by obtaining judgment against, ⁶⁰⁹ or even perhaps electing to look to, ⁶¹⁰ the other. But this is only so where the two remedies available are inconsistent, and this may not be so in all cases. The nature of the liability assumed by the agent may thus be crucial. ⁶¹¹

Where “agent” is in fact principal: his liabilities

31-095

In some cases a party who purports to act as agent has no principal but himself. There is authority that if the other party can establish that fact, the apparent agent can be sued on the contract ⁶¹² unless, perhaps, he has expressly contracted in such terms as to exclude his liability as a principal. ⁶¹³ Likewise where an agent refuses to disclose the name of his true principal, ⁶¹⁴ or where his evidence on this question is disbelieved by the court ⁶¹⁵ he may be held personally liable on the contract. But in many and perhaps all such cases it seems that liability on a collateral warranty would nowadays be analytically more appropriate. ⁶¹⁶

Where “agent” is in fact principal: his rights

31-096

It may also be that such a person may in certain cases be allowed to sue as principal on the contract which he has thus made. In the case of charterparties there is authority for the proposition that he can do so if he has not named anyone else as his true principal, on the ground that in such a case the other party cannot, in entering into the contract, have been influenced by the personal qualifications of the supposed principal. ⁶¹⁷ Secondly, where such a contract has been in part performed and that performance has been accepted by the other contracting party with full knowledge that the party who was described as agent in the contract was the real principal, it has been held that the latter may after that sue for the completion of the contract. ⁶¹⁸ But though they have recent judicial support, ⁶¹⁹ these propositions are not beyond criticism ⁶²⁰; and it is clear that an agent cannot sue as principal if the identity of the contracting party is material. ⁶²¹

Where principal is company not yet in existence

31-097

⚠ At common law, if a contract is made by an agent on behalf of a company not yet in existence, it has sometimes been held that he intended to assume personal responsibility on the contract. ⁶²² But there is no general rule that where there is no principal, the agent contracts personally or is his own principal. ⁶²³ Thus where a contract is, on the face of it, made solely with such a company, a person who has added his signature to that of the company in order merely to confirm it does not thereby entitle himself to sue or make himself liable to be sued on the contract, which is therefore wholly unenforceable. ⁶²⁴ And a person who clearly contracts as agent only cannot sue or be liable on that contract. ⁶²⁵ ⚠ A person may perhaps estop himself by subsequent conduct from alleging that he is not party to such a contract. ⁶²⁶

31-098

But statutory correction of these inconvenient results is common. In England, s.51(1) of the Companies Act 2006 provides:

“A contract that purports to be made by or on behalf of a company at a time when the company has not been formed has effect, subject to any agreement to the contrary, as one made with the person purporting to act for the company or as agent for it, and he is personally liable on the contract accordingly.”

It was held under the previous (effectively identical) legislation that this displaces the above rules whatever the form of signature, whether it indicates signature as the company or as agent for the company. ⁶²⁷ It does not however apply where the company exists but is wrongly named in the contract ⁶²⁸ nor to contracts with foreign companies. ⁶²⁹ It has been held in proceedings under the previous version of this enactment that the final words should not be read as limiting the consequences of the effectiveness of the contract and that the person concerned can sue as well as be sued. ⁶³⁰

^{556.} Above, para.31-054.

^{557.} Ex p. Hartop (1806) 12 Ves. 349; Spittle v Lavender (1821) 2 B. & B. 452; Thomas v Edwards (1836) 2 M. & W. 215, 217; Lewis v Nicholson (1852) 18 Q.B. 503; Montgomerie v UK Mutual SS Assn Ltd [1891] 1 Q.B. 370, 371.

^{558.} Fawkes v Lamb (1862) 31 L.J.Q.B. 98; and see Sharman v Brandt (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 720; Fairlie v Fenton (1870) L.R. 5 Ex. 169.

^{559.} Southwell v Bowditch (1876) 1 C.P.D. 374; Gadd v Houghton (1876) 1 Ex. D. 357; cf. Universal Steam Navigation Co Ltd v James McKelvie & Co [1923] A.C. 492.

^{560.} Robins v Bridge (1837) 7 L.J. Ex. 49; and see Wakefield v Duckworth [1915] 1 K.B. 218; cf. Cocks v Bruce, Searl and Good (1904) 21 T.L.R. 62.

- 561. Yeung Kai Yung v Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corp [1981] A.C. 787, 795, per Lord Scarman. Sometimes an agent's conduct may estop him from disputing his liability even though he acted as agent only: see Pacol v Trade Lines Ltd (The Henrik Sif) [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 456; Arctic Shipping Co Ltd v Mobilia AB (The Tatra) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 51.
- 562. ! Yeung Kai Yeung v Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corp [1981] A.C. 787, 795; Carminco Gold & Resources Ltd v Findlay & Co Stockbrokers (Underwriters) Pty Ltd [2007] FCAFC 194 at [1] ("the law of agency clearly admits of this possibility") and [23]. See, e.g. Hichens, Harrison, Woolston & Co v Jackson & Sons [1943] A.C. 266; Sobell Industries v Cory Bros & Co Ltd [1955] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 82; The Swan [1968] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 5 (this case contains the clearest application of such a possibility, though its context is the field of companies); Format International Security Printers Ltd v Mosden [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 37; Salsi v Jetspeed Air Services Ltd [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 57; Sika Contracts Ltd v Gill (1978) 9 Build. L.R. 11; Fraser v Equitorial Shipping Co Ltd (The Ijaola) [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 103; Ets Biret Cie SA v Yukiteru Kaiun KK (The Sun Happiness) [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 381; cf. N & J Vlassopoulos Ltd v Ney Shipping Ltd (The Santa Carina) [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 478; Foalquest Ltd v Roberts [1990] 1 E.G.L.R. 50; Petroleum Shipping Ltd v Vatis (The Riza and The Sun) [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 314; Foxtons Ltd v Thesleff [2005] EWCA Civ 514, [2005] 2 E.G.L.R. 29; Savills (UK) Ltd v Blacker [2017] EWCA Civ 68 (a case having similarities with The Swan, above).
- 563. Short v Spackman (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 962; Clay v Southern (1852) 7 Exch. 717; Fairlie v Fenton (1870) L.R. 5 Ex. 169, 171; HO Brandt & Co v HN Morris & Co Ltd [1917] 2 K.B. 784; Lavan v Walsh [1964] I.R. 87.
- 564. Rusholme, etc. Ltd v SG Read & Co [1955] 1 W.L.R. 146, 150; Maritime Stores v HP Marshall & Co [1963] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 602; The Swan, above; Domsalla v Dyason [2007] EWHC 1174 (TCC), [2007] B.L.R. 348 (insurer, building owner and builder); Goei Tsusho Co Ltd v Leader Engineering and Construction Ltd [2010] 2 H.K.L.R.D. 1084 (joint liability).
- 565. See the Carminco Gold & Resources Ltd case above, n.560.
- 566. International Ry Co v Niagara Parks Commission [1941] A.C. 328, 342; Montgomerie v UK Mutual SS Assn [1891] 1 Q.B. 370, 372; The Swan [1968] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 5; Teheran-Europe Co Ltd v ST Belton (Tractors) Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 53, 59–60, 558.
- 567. Imperial Bank v London & St Katharine Docks Co (1877) 5 Ch. D. 195, 200; Fleet v Murton (1871) L.R. 7 Q.B. 126, 132; Young v Schuler (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 651.
- 568. As in the case of auctioneers. See below, para.31-099.
- 569. Evans v Hooper (1875) 1 Q.B.D. 45. But such a situation is possible: e.g. a third party in return for introduction to the principal might undertake liability to the agent.
- 570. Gadd v Houghton (1876) 1 Ex. D. 357; Universal Steam Navigation Co Ltd v James McKelvie & Co [1923] A.C. 492, 499; Lavan v Walsh [1964] I.R. 87. For a more recent example see Electrosteel Castings Ltd v Scan Trans Shipping & Chartering Sdn Bhd [2002] EWHC 1993 (QB), [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 1064.
- 571. Norton v Herron (1825) 1 R. & M. 229; and see Tanner v Christian (1885) 4 E. & B. 591.
- 572. Iveson v Conington (1823) 1 B. & C. 160; cf. Allaway v Duncan (1867) 16 L.T. 264. See also Lavan v Walsh [1964] I.R. 87.
- 573. Burrell v Jones (1819) 3 B. & Ald. 47; see also Harper v Williams (1843) 4 Q.B. 219.
- 574. Tudor Marine Ltd v Tradax Export SA (The Virgo) [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 135; see also HO Brandt & Co v HN Morris & Co Ltd [1917] 2 K.B. 784; The Swan [1968] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 5; Pyxis Special Shipping Co Ltd v Dritsas & Kaglis Bros Ltd (The Scaplake) [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 380; Jugoslavenska Linijaska Plovidba v Hulsman (The Primorje) [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 74; Punjab National Bank v de Boinville [1952] 1 W.L.R. 1138 ("P Bank, a/c E": bank liable); Internaut

- Shipping GmbH v Fercometal SARL Elikon* [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 430.
575. Universal Steam Navigation Co Ltd v James McKelvie & Co [1923] A.C. 492. See also Deslandes v Gregory (1860) 30 L.J.Q.B. 36; Parker v Winlow (1857) 7 E. & B. 942.
576. Fawkes v Lamb (1862) 31 L.J.Q.B. 98; and see Sharman v Brandt (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 720; Fairlie v Fenton (1870) L.R. 5 Ex. 169; Gadd v Houghton (1876) 1 Ex. D. 357; Southwell v Bowditch (1876) 1 C.P.D. 374; Lester v Balfour Williamson [1953] 2 Q.B. 168.
577. Repetto v Millar's Karri, etc. Forests Ltd [1901] 2 K.B. 306.
578. Newborne v Sensolid (Great Britain) Ltd [1954] 1 Q.B. 45; Black v Smallwood (1966) 117 C.L.R. 52; Badgerhill Properties Ltd v Cottrell [1991] B.C.L.C. 805.
579. Marine Insurance Act 1906 s.53(1).
580. Provincial Insurance Co of Canada v Leduc (1874) L.R. 6 P.C. 224.
581. Dale v Humfrey (1858) E.B. & E. 1004 (oil); Cropper v Cook (1868) L.R. 3 C.P. 194 (wool); Fleet v Murton (1871) L.R. 7 Q.B. 126 (fruit); Hutchinson v Tatham (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 482 (charterparty); Imperial Bank v London & St Katharine Docks Co (1877) 5 Ch. D. 195 (fruit); Bacmeister v Fenton, Levy & Co (1883) C. & E. 121 (rice); Pike v Ongley (1887) 18 Q.B.D. 708 (hops); Thornton v Fehr & Co (1935) 51 Ll.L. Rep. 330 (tallow); Anglo Overseas Transport Ltd v Titan Industrial Corp (United Kingdom) Ltd [1959] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 152; Perishables Transport Co v N Spyropoulos (London) Ltd [1964] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 379 (forwarding agents); cf. Wilson v Avec Audio-Visual Equipment Ltd [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 81 (no such custom as to insurance brokers)
582. See Barrow & Bros v Dyster, Nalder & Co (1884) 13 Q.B.D. 635; Miller, Gibb & Co v Smith & Tyrer Ltd [1917] 2 K.B. 141. But per contra if the agent signs as principal he may not thereafter prove that he acted as agent only: below, para.31-092. As to the parole evidence rule see Vol.I, paras 13-099 et seq.
583. See Hutchinson v Tatham (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 482.
584. Above, para.31-084.
585. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.9–020. This was originally based on the authority supposedly granted (or not granted) by the foreign principal himself, and not on the agent's dealings with the third party. It is at least in part connected with the likelihood that such an agent was operating by way of indirect representation (above, para.31-004 n.15) under which the agent deals in his own name: see Elbinger Actiengesellschaft v Claye (1873) L.R. 8 Q.B. 313. Both the disclosed and (more especially) the undisclosed principal rules would have given results unexpected to the foreign principal.
586. Teheran-Europe Co Ltd v ST Belton (Tractors) Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 545, 562.
587. At 558, per Diplock L.J.
588. See Allen v FW O'Hearn & Co [1937] A.C. 213, 218; above, paras 31-063 et seq. It seems likely that if the agent sues, he can recover his principal's performance interest (but probably not idiosyncratic loss), on the basis not of any special principle of agency law, but of the reasoning of Lord Goff and Lord Millett in Alfred McAlpine Construction Ltd v Panatown Ltd [2001] 1 A.C. 518 (see Vol.I, paras 18-060 et seq.) and L/M International Construction Inc v The Circle Ltd Partnership (1995) 49 Con. L.R. 12. This is an early example of the necessity for such reasoning: see Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.9–013. In Garnac Grain Co Ltd v HMF Faure & Fairclough Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 650 it was held at first instance that in an action by the agent it was a defence to prove that the contract was induced by the fraud of the principal. The decision was reversed on other grounds, but this view was accepted in the Court of Appeal: see [1966] 1 Q.B. at 685–686. See also [1968] A.C. 1130n. HL

- 589. Atkinson v Cotesworth (1825) 3 B. & C. 647; Sadler v Leigh (1815) 2 Camp. 195; Sargent v Morris (1820) 3 B. & Ald. 277; Gardiner v Davis (1825) 2 C. & P. 49; Pople v Evans [1969] 2 Ch. 255, 261–262. This rule also applies to disclosed principals: Rogers v Hadley (1863) 2 H. & C. 227. But the position may be different where there are circumstances justifying a separate contract between agent and third party: see Drinkwater v Goodwin (1775) Cowp. 251; above, para.31-009, below, para.31-099.
- 590. Above, paras 31-063, 31-065. But see Teheran-Europe Co Ltd v ST Belton (Tractors) Ltd [1968] 2 Q.B. 545, 552, 556, 561.
- 591. See above, para.31-054.
- 592. (1876) 1 C.P.D. 374, 377.
- 593. e.g. Transcontinental Underwriting Agency SRL v Grand Union Ins Co Ltd [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 409; Seatrade Groningen BV v Geest Industries Ltd (The Frost Express) [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 375.
- 594. Hichens, Harrison, Woolston & Co v Jackson & Sons [1943] A.C. 266.
- 595. para.6-02.
- 596. N & J Vlassopoulos Ltd v Ney Shipping Ltd (The Santa Carina) [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 478: see especially at 481–482 (Baltic Exchange).
- 597. Appleton v Binks (1804) 5 East 148; Hancock v Hodgson (1827) 12 Moore 504; Chapman v Smith [1907] 2 Ch. 97; Plant Engineers (Sales) Ltd v Davis (1969) 113 S.J. 484. It is not clear whether these cases are affected by s.7(1) of the Powers of Attorney Act 1971 (replacing Law of Property Act 1925 s.123) under which an agent having a power of attorney may execute a deed with his own signature and seal.
- 598. As to promissory notes and cheques, see Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s.89(1).
- 599. s.91(1). See below, para.34-041.
- 600. s.23. The officer of a company signing a bill on which the company's name is not mentioned may be personally liable: below, para.34-045.
- 601. s.26(1) (a useful statement of the general law). See Chapman v Smethurst [1909] 1 K.B. 927; Bondina v Rollaway Shower Blinds Ltd [1986] 1 W.L.R. 517. Parol evidence may be admissible in the case of ambiguity: Rolfe Lubbell & Co v Keith [1979] 1 All E.R. 860 (apparent indorsement by acceptor). See below, para.34-056.
- 602. Leadbitter v Farrow (1816) 5 M. & S. 345, 349.
- 603. s.26(2).
- 604. Higgins v Senior (1841) 8 M. & W. 834; Jones v Littledale (1837) 6 Ad. & El. 486; Magee v Atkinson (1837) 2 M. & W. 440; Sobell Industries v Cory Bros & Co Ltd [1955] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 82; see also Basma v Weekes [1950] A.C. 441; and Vol.I, paras 13-099 et seq.
- 605. Wake v Harrop (1862) 1 H. & C. 202; Cowie v Witt (1874) 23 W.R. 76; Alliance Acceptance Co Ltd v Oakley (1987) 47 S.A.S.R. 148; reversed on other grounds (1988) 48 S.A.S.R. 337. And see Breslauer v Barwick (1876) 36 L.T. 52; Mostyn v West Mostyn Coal & Iron Co (1876) 1 C.P.D. 145; Senior Courts Act 1981 s.49(2).
- 606. Oglesby v Yglesias (1858) E.B. & E. 930; Milvain v Perez (1861) 3 E. & E. 495 (cases on the cesser clause in charterparties). But cf. Schmaltz v Avery (1851) 16 Q.B. 655.
- 607. As to which see Graham v Public Works Commissioners [1901] 2 K.B. 781; International Ry Co

- v Niagara Parks Commission* [1941] A.C. 328.
- 608. Macbeath v Haldimand (1786) 1 T.R. 172. See Vol.I, paras 11-014, 11-015.
- 609. London General Omnibus Co v Pope (1922) 38 T.L.R. 270. But not where the liability is joint: Civil Liability Contribution Act 1978 s.3.
- 610. Clarkson Booker v Andjel [1964] 2 Q.B. 775; Beigtheil & Young v Stewart (1900) 16 T.L.R. 177. But these propositions are not unassailable: see above, paras 31-070, 31-071.
- 611. See discussion above, para.31-084.
- 612. Jenkins v Hutchinson (1849) 13 Q.B. 744, 752; Railton v Hodgson (1804) 4 Taunt. 576n. But the cases are by no means clear. The authority that the agent can sue is stronger, though still criticisable: see below, para.31-096; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), art.110.
- 613. Gardiner v Heading [1928] 2 K.B. 284, 290; Salim v Ingham Enterprises Pty Ltd (1998) 55 N.S.W.L.R. 7; cf. Newborne v Sensolid (Great Britain) Ltd [1954] 1 Q.B. 45.
- 614. Owen v Gooch (1797) 2 Esp. 567; and see Hersom v Bennett [1955] 1 Q.B. 98. As to interrogatories, see also Thöl v Leask (1855) 10 Exch. 704; Hancocks v Lablache (1878) 3 C.P.D. 197; Sebright v Hanbury [1916] 2 Ch. 245.
- 615. Hersom v Bennett, above.
- 616. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.9-066; below, para.31-099; Reynolds [2012] L.M.C.L.Q. 189.
- 617. Schmaltz v Avery (1851) 16 Q.B. 655 (a case on the cesser clause, a very specialised provision: see above, para.31-092); Harper & Co v Vigers Brothers [1909] 2 K.B. 549. Some support can be derived from the “beneficial assumption”, above, para.31-066 n.416.
- 618. Rayner v Grote (1846) 15 M. & W. 359; Fellowes v Lord Gwydyr (1829) 1 Russ. & M. 83; Bickerton v Burrell (1816) 5 M. & S. 383. Perhaps this could be treated as a novation; or on the basis of estoppel.
- 619. See Braymist Ltd v Wise Finance Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 127, [2002] Ch. 273, per Arden L.J.
- 620. See Hill SS Co v Stinnes, 1941 S.C. 324; Sharman v Brandt (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 720. And consider Hardman v Booth (1863) 1 H. & C. 803. See in general Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), art.108.
- 621. Gewa Chartering BV v Remco Shipping Lines Ltd (The Remco) [1984] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 205. But cf. Leigh & Sullivan Ltd v Aliakmon Shipping Co Ltd [1983] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 203, 207; Fraser v Thames Television Ltd [1984] Q.B. 44, 54–55.
- 622. Kelner v Baxter (1866) L.R. 2 C.P. 174; Wilson & Co v Baker, Lees & Co (1901) 17 T.L.R. 473; Rita Joan Dairies Ltd v Thompson [1974] 1 N.Z.L.R. 285; Marblestone Industries Ltd v Fairchild [1975] 1 N.Z.L.R. 529. But cf. Wickberg v Shatsky (1969) 4 D.L.R. (3d) 540; Hawke’s Bay Milk Corp Ltd v Watson [1974] 1 N.Z.L.R. 236.
- 623. Black v Smallwood (1966) 117 C.L.R. 52; see also Coral (UK) Ltd v Rechtman [1996] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 235. Contrast Restatement, Third, Agency, para.6.02.
- 624. Newborne v Sensolid (Great Britain) Ltd [1954] 1 Q.B. 45; Black & Smallwood, above; Miller Associates (Australia) Pty Ltd v Bennington Pty Ltd [1975] 2 N.S.W.L.R. 506. As to the possibility of an action for breach of warranty of authority, see Newborne v Sensolid at 47; Black v Smallwood at 64–65; Hawke’s Bay Milk Corp Ltd v Watson, above; General Motors Acceptance Corp of Canada Ltd v Weisman (1976) 96 D.L.R. (3d) 159. Such an action was allowed in Delta Construction Co Ltd v Lidstone (1979) 96 D.L.R. (3d) 457.

625.

! Hollman v Pullin (1884) Cab. & El. 254. As regards unincorporated associations, see Overton v Hewett (1886) 3 T.L.R. 246; Steele v Gourley (1887) 3 T.L.R. 772; Bradley Egg Farm Ltd v Clifford [1943] 2 All E.R. 378; Peckham v Moore [1975] 1 N.S.W.L.R. 353; Keeler (1971) 34 M.L.R. 615; Fletcher (1979) 11 U. Queensland L.J. 53. For a more recent example in respect of an unincorporated association see Davies v Barnes Webster & Sons [2011] EWHC 2560 (Ch), [2012] B.P.I.R. 97 (service on President of Rugby Club valid). The problem is similar, but the third party is less likely to be protected, and the companies legislation is not applicable.

626.

On the basis of the reasoning in Pacol Ltd v Trade Lines Ltd (The Henrik Sif) [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 456; see also Arctic Shipping Co Ltd v Mobilia AB (The Tatra) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 51. An argument to this effect was however rejected in Rover International Ltd v Cannon Film Sales Ltd [1987] B.C.L.C. 540. The question was not pursued on appeal: [1989] 1 W.L.R. 912.

627.

See Phonogram Ltd v Lane [1982] Q.B. 938. The exception for contrary agreement is considered in Royal Mail Estates Ltd v Maple Teesdale [2015] EWHC 1890 (Ch).

628.

Oshkosh B'Gosh Inc v Dan Marbel Inc Ltd [1989] B.C.L.C. 507; Badgerhill Properties Ltd v Cottrell [1991] B.C.L.C. 805; Cotronic (UK) Ltd v Dezonie [1991] B.C.L.C. at 721 (company struck off); and see Coral (UK) Ltd v Rechtman [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 235.

629.

Rover International Ltd v Cannon Film Sales Ltd [1987] B.C.L.C. 540; decision varied on other grounds [1989] 1 W.L.R. 912. See in general Gower & Davies' Principles of Modern Company Law, 9th edn (2012), para.5–21.

630.

Braymist Ltd v Wise Finance Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 127, [2002] Ch. 273.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 7. - Agent's Relations with Third Parties
(b) - Collateral Contract with Agent

Collateral contracts

31-099

An agent may also be liable and entitled on a contract collateral to the main contract with his principal containing special terms. The position of an auctioneer provides the best example of this. ⁶³¹ When an auctioneer sells goods by auction the extent of his liability depends upon the conditions of the sale, the nature of the subject matter and other surrounding circumstances. ⁶³² Thus where his principal is undisclosed, an auctioneer may be regarded as having contracted personally and be liable for non-delivery, ⁶³³ and in some cases he may so be liable even where his principal is disclosed, ⁶³⁴ though not where the contract is for sale of a specific chattel known not to be his property. ⁶³⁵ He warrants that he knows of no defect in his principal's title, but does not normally warrant the title itself in the case of specific goods sold for a disclosed principal, identified or unidentified. ⁶³⁶ His right to commission gives him a lien over goods and an interest in their proceeds which entitles him to sue for their price ⁶³⁷ even when he has been paid a sum sufficient to cover his commission and charges ⁶³⁸; but he has no such interest over land entitling him to sue for the price ⁶³⁹ and any implied contract on the sale of land would necessarily be of a more limited nature. ⁶⁴⁰

^{631.} Another example is the 19th-century factor: see Drinkwater v Goodwin (1775) Cowp. 251; above, paras 31-009, 31-011.

^{632.} Wood v Baxter (1883) 49 L.T. 45.

^{633.} Franklyn v Lamond (1847) 4 C.B. 637 (principal possibly unidentified rather than undisclosed).

^{634.} Woolfe v Horne (1877) 2 Q.B.D. 355.

^{635.} Benton v Campbell, Parker & Co [1925] 2 K.B. 410.

^{636.} Benton v Campbell, Parker & Co [1925] 2 K.B. 410.

^{637.} Williams v Millington (1788) 1 H.Bl. 81. Even where he has in his capacity of agent for the vendor misdescribed the goods: Elder Smith Goldsbrough Mort Ltd v McBride [1976] 2 N.S.W.L.R. 631.

^{638.} Chelmsford Auctions Ltd v Poole [1973] Q.B. 542. See also Pollway Ltd v Abdullah [1974] 1 W.L.R. 493 (right to sue on cheque).

^{639.} Cherry v Anderson (1876) I.R. 10 C.L. 204.

^{640.} cf. Pollway Ltd v Abdullah, above (warranty of authority to accept deposit). See in general Murdoch, Law of Estate Agency, 5th edn (2009); Lomnicka and Morse, Contemporary Issues in Commercial Law (1997), p.161; Reynolds [2012] L.M.C.L.Q. 189.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 7. - Agent's Relations with Third Parties
(c) - Breach of Warranty of Authority

Liability of agent acting without authority

31-100

One who expressly or impliedly indicates that he has the authority of another is liable in contract for breach of warranty of authority to any person to whom the indication is given and who suffers damage by acting in the faith of it, if in fact he had no such authority. ⁶⁴¹ This is a specific type, in fact probably the original type, of collateral contract: the agent offers to warrant his authority in return for the third party's dealing with his principal, or with another person, ⁶⁴² or otherwise acting on the faith of the warranty. The liability is absolute and not based on negligence. The historical reason for this is that no action in tort could be contemplated at the time (1857); but it is still true that if strict liability is required, contract is the only way to secure it. The rule is not confined to contracts; it covers other transactions into which a third party enters on the faith of a representation that the person with whom he is doing business has the authority of some other person. ⁶⁴³ Though wide, its limits are however uncertain: it is not, for example, clear whether or not it lies in respect of a signature purporting to authenticate that of an unformed company. This would require a different sort of warranty, that a company exists which the signer is authorised to bind. ⁶⁴⁴ But, provided that the authority does not in fact exist at the material time, it is immaterial that the agent originally had such authority and did not know and had no means of ascertaining that the authority had been terminated. ⁶⁴⁵

Implied representation of authority

31-101

⚠ It is not necessary that the representation of authority should be made expressly: merely purporting to act as agent will normally constitute a representation. Thus a solicitor who institutes an action thereby sufficiently warrants that he has a principal and is properly authorised to do so, even though he makes no express statement to that effect. ⁶⁴⁶ ⚠ In this context it has been held, however, that he does not warrant the name of his client. ⁶⁴⁷ If, however, only a limited warranty of authority is given, no wider warranty can be implied. Thus where shipbrokers signed a charterparty "by telegraphic authority" "as agents", a form of words which was understood in the trade to warrant merely that the agents had such authority as a telegram, possibly erroneous, might confer on them, it was held that the shipbrokers were not liable for exceeding their authority owing to a mistake in the telegram, ⁶⁴⁸ and such reasoning could well be used in a wider sphere.

Representation must be of fact and relied on 31-102

⚠ It must be shown that the plaintiff accepted and relied upon the defendant's representation as a warranty. Therefore where the plaintiff knew that the defendant had no authority he could not

❗ So where the facts were equally known to both parties and the representation complained of was as to a matter of law only it has been held that the defendant was not liable.⁶⁵⁰ But propositions as to mistake of law may need reconsideration in view of the decision of the House of Lords in Kleinwort Benson Ltd v Lincoln City Council.⁶⁵¹

Description of principal

31-103

❗ In the simple case, the agent promises that he has authority from a named person. But the matter may be more complex: according to the circumstances the agent may also promise that he has authority from a person fitting a particular description even if the name is not correct, e.g. the owner of property.⁶⁵² If, however, a person is named, at least when the third party knows him, the doctrine does not require that the warranty extends to promising also that he has the relevant interest in the property.⁶⁵³ It has recently been held in a case of fraudulent impersonation that a solicitor only promised that he had authority from a person claiming to be the principal named and about whom all reasonable inquiries had been made.⁶⁵⁴ ❗ The decision is influenced by the proposition that professionals are not normally liable for more than negligence. But it arguably has the effect of turning the strict warranty into one that all reasonable care has been taken,⁶⁵⁵ which is inconsistent with the normal nature of the warranty of authority.

Crown agents

31-104

It was held in the late nineteenth century⁶⁵⁶ that a Crown agent was not liable for breach of warranty of authority. The usual view is that a Crown agent cannot be so liable, on grounds of public policy, though possibly the matter cannot be regarded as conclusively settled.⁶⁵⁷

Powers of attorney

31-105

By s.5(1) of the Powers of Attorney Act 1971 a donee of a power of attorney who acts in pursuance of the power at a time when it has been revoked shall not, by reason of the revocation, incur any liability (either to the donor or to any other person) if at that time he did not know that the power had been revoked.⁶⁵⁸

Damages

31-106

❗ The damages recoverable in these cases from the agent will be those which directly flow from the breach of warranty. Thus where an agent bought a ship without authority for £6,000, and, on the principal repudiating the contract, the seller had to resell for £5,500, the agent became liable for the £500⁶⁵⁹; brokers selling wool for repudiating principals became liable to the purchasers for the costs of an unsuccessful action by the purchasers against the principals⁶⁶⁰; and the same principle applies to a contract for a grant,⁶⁶¹ or for a renewal of a lease.⁶⁶² The rule applied is in general the normal rule for contractual damages, which seek to put the injured party in the position in which he would have been if the contract had been performed or (as in this case) the statement true: damages in tort might be assessed differently.⁶⁶³ There may be cases where no loss arising from lack of authority can be established. This will occur when the main contract with the principal is void⁶⁶⁴; or unenforceable for lack of writing,⁶⁶⁵ or where the principal is insolvent.⁶⁶⁶ ❗ And where the principal is liable under the doctrine of apparent authority, the better view seems to be that there is liability but no loss can be proved; though it has been said that there is no breach of warranty of authority at all, for the agent had power, even if no actual authority, to bind. ⁶⁶⁷ Similar considerations apply where the principal ratifies.

Liability in tort ⁶⁶⁸

31-107

The agent in this context will be liable in tort where he fraudulently represents that he has authority, ⁶⁶⁹ and perhaps sometimes where he is negligent in so doing. ⁶⁷⁰ But in the latter case a duty of care must be established; and it has been held in New Zealand that there was no such duty of care. ⁶⁷¹

Procedure

31-108

Where the authority of the agent is disputed by the person on whose behalf the contract is made, the person who made the contract may be joined with him as co-defendant and relief claimed against them alternatively. ⁶⁷²

^{641.} Collen v Wright (1857) 8 E. & B. 647.

^{642.} Penn v Bristol & West BS [1997] 1 W.L.R. 1356 (warranty to mortgage lender). A solicitor acting for both parties to a land transaction may owe a strict duty to one as regards his authority but merely a duty of care to the other: see Bristol & West BS v Fancy & Jackson [1997] 4 All E.R. 582 at 613, per Chadwick L.J.

^{643.} Firbank's Executors v Humphreys (1886) 18 Q.B.D. 54; Starkey v Bank of England [1903] A.C. 114; British Russian Gazette Ltd v Associated Newspapers Ltd [1933] 2 K.B. 616. Examples are Penn's case, above, and V/O Rasnoimport v Guthrie & Co Ltd [1966] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1 (warranty to bill of lading holder); Bank of Scotland v Qutb [2012] EWCA Civ 1661 (deliberate bringing of proceedings on behalf of person known to be deceased); Adams v Ford [2012] EWCA Civ 544, [2012] 1 W.L.R. 3211.

^{644.} See Brownnett v Newton (1941) 64 C.L.R. 439; Black v Smallwood (1966) 117 C.L.R. 52, 64–65; Delta Construction Co Ltd v Lidstone, 96 D.L.R. (3d) 457 (1979). Such an argument was successful in Lomax v Dankel (1981) 29 S.A.S.R. 68. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.9–066; above, para.31-097.

^{645.} Yonge v Toynbee [1910] 1 K.B. 215 (mental incapacity of principal: solicitor liable for costs).

^{646.}  Fernée v Gorlitz [1915] 1 Ch. 177; Yonge v Toynbee, above; Simmons v Liberal Opinion Ltd [1911] 1 K.B. 966; Nelson v Nelson [1997] 1 W.L.R. 233 (bankrupt could authorise action). These are actually cases on the court's jurisdiction over solicitors. For a recent discussion of the interaction between this jurisdiction and the action for breach of warranty of authority see Aidiniantz v Sherlock Holmes International Society Ltd [2016] EWHC 1392 (Ch), [2016] 4 W.L.R. 173 at [20] onwards. A complicated situation in which the matter arose in connection with other proceedings concerning whether the agent had been validly appointed as a director is considered in Zoya Ltd v Ahmed [2016] EWHC 2249 (Ch), [2016] 4 W.L.R. 174.

^{647.} Nelson v Nelson [1997] 1 W.L.R. 233; AMB Generali Holding AG v SEB Trygg Liv Holding AB [2005] EWCA Civ 1237, [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 318.

^{648.} Lilly v Smales [1892] 1 Q.B. 456; cf. Stuart v Haigh (1893) 9 T.L.R. 488. See also Enterprise

Plus Ltd v Wagenmann [2003] EWHC 1827 (Comm) (facts did not support any such commitment).

649.

❗ Halbot v Lens [1901] 1 Ch. 344. In Aidiniantz v Sherlock Holmes International Society Ltd [2016] EWHC 1392 (Ch), [2016] 4 W.L.R. 173 it was held that the claimant was as well placed as the agent to inquire whether the agent's authority had come to an end: see esp. at [29].

650.

Beattie v Lord Ebury (1872) L.R. 7 H.L. 102; cf. Cherry and M'Dougall v Colonial Bank of Australasia (1869) 38 L.J.P.C. 49; Weeks v Propert (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 427. See also Eaglesfield v Londonderry (1876) 4 Ch. D. 693; affirmed 38 L.T. 303; Rashdall v Ford (1866) L.R. 2 Eq. 750; Saffron Walden SBBS v Rayner (1880) 14 Ch. D. 406. The distinction is not an easy one: see Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.9–069.

651.

[1999] 2 A.C. 249. See above, Vol.I, paras 29-044 et seq.

652.

Knight Frank LLP v Du Haney [2011] EWCA Civ 404 (valuation: person with whom negotiations had been conducted; mistake in name also slight).

653.

Frank Houlgate Investment Co Ltd v Biggart Baillie LLP [2011] CSOH 160, [2012] P.N.L.R. 2.

654.

❗ Excel Securities Plc v Masood [2010] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 165 ("authority to act on behalf of a person going by the name of James Charles Whittaker Goulding and claiming to be the same individual as the person of that name who appeared to be the registered proprietor of the property at 17 Richards Place"). Some reliance was placed on Nelson v Nelson, n.645, above. The reasoning is also adopted in Scotland in Cheshire Mortgage Corp Ltd v Grandison [2012] CSIH 66, 2013 S.C. 160 ("an agent ... warranted merely that he had been instructed by the person for whom he affected to act; he did not warrant that that person was the principal he purported to be"); see also Stevenson v Singh [2012] EWHC 2880 (QB). The same view is adopted and justified in a long and careful judgment by Mr Robin Dicker Q.C. in P&P Property Ltd v Owen White & Catlin LLP [2016] EWHC 2276 (Ch), [2016] Bus. L.R. 1337; though a different view was taken in Singapore in Chu Said Thong v Vision Law LLC [2014] SGHC 160.

655.

As was the case with the collateral contract in Esso Petroleum Co Ltd v Mardon [1976] Q.B. 801: this was not however a case on authority, but on the likely throughput of a petrol station.

656.

Dunn v Macdonald [1897] 1 Q.B. 401; see Vol.I, para.11-015.

657.

See Street, Governmental Liability (1953), p.93.

658.

This covers revocation by death, etc.: s.5(5); and applies to powers whenever created, but only to transactions after the commencement of the Act: s.5(7). It stems from 19th century legislation probably arising from concern about the decision in Collen v Wright.

659.

Simons v Patchett (1857) 7 E. & B. 568; see also Re National Coffee Palace Co (1883) 24 Ch. D. 367; Richardson v Williamson (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 276; Weeks v Propert (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 427; Meek v Wendt (1888) 21 Q.B.D. 126; Suleman v Shahsavari [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1181; Habton Farms v Nimmo [2002] EWCA Civ 68, [2004] Q.B. 1 (seller of horse did not accept repudiation by buyer; horse died; unauthorised agent for buyer liable for whole price).

660.

Hughes v Graeme (1864) 33 L.J.Q.B. 335; Greenglade Estates Ltd v Chana [2012] EWHC 1913 (Ch), [2012] 3 E.G.L.R. 99 (where reasonable to sue both parties, damages to be assessed at time of breach of warranty proceedings). As to the cost of defending proceedings brought by an unauthorised agent, see Yonge v Toynbee [1910] 1 K.B. 215.

661.

Collen v Wright (1857) 8 E. & B. 647.

662.

Spedding v Nevell (1869) L.R. 4 C.P. 212. See also Godwin v Francis (1870) L.R. 5 C.P. 295.

663.

But see Doyle v Olby (Ironmongers) Ltd [1969] 2 Q.B. 158, 168; cf. Salvesen & Co v Rederi A/B

Nordstjernan [1905] A.C. 302; Vol.I, paras 1-145 et seq., 1-161 et seq., 7-055 et seq.

- 664. Heskell v Continental Express Ltd [1950] 1 All E.R. 1033; cf. V/O Rasnoimport v Guthrie & Co [1966] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1.
- 665. See Fay v Miller [1941] Ch. 360; the contract itself would now require to be in writing by virtue of the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s.2.
- 666.  Simons v Patchett (1857) 7 E. & B. 568, 574; Re National Coffee Palace Co (1883) 24 Ch. D. 367, 372; and see Charan Singh v Sardar Investments Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 1706; Aidiniantz v Sherlock Holmes International Society Ltd [2016] EWHC 1392 (Ch), [2016] 4 W.L.R. 173. But see Firbank's Executors v Humphreys (1886) 18 Q.B.D. 54, where the principal was insolvent but loss could be proved. And there may be loss in attempting to deliver goods to and/or suing the supposed principal: see Farley Health Products v Babylon Trading Co, The Times, July 29, 1987.
- 667. Rainbow v Hawkins [1904] 2 K.B. 322, 326; Delta Construction Co Ltd v Lidstone, 96 D.L.R. (3d) 457 (1979); and see Mitsui & Co Ltd v Marpro Industrial Ltd [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 386. In Aidiniantz v Sherlock Holmes International Society Ltd [2016] EWHC 1392 (Ch), [2016] 4 W.L.R. 173 this result was attributed to the principle that an award of damages for breach of warranty of authority should not put the claimant in a better position than that in which he would have been had the agent had authority, as in the case of the insolvent principal, see at [17] onwards.
- 668. See also below, para.31-111.
- 669. Polhill v Walter (1832) 3 B. & Ad. 114; Randell v Trimen (1856) 18 C.B. 786; West London Commercial Bank Ltd v Kitson (1884) 13 Q.B.D. 360. Even probably, if the misrepresentation was one of law: but there is no clear authority.
- 670. But an action under s.2(1) of the Misrepresentation Act 1967 is excluded by the wording of the section: see The Skopas, below, para.31-111 n.691.
- 671. On the ground that this would create a vicarious liability in tort in a principal not liable in contract: Kavanagh v Continental Shelf Co (No.46) Ltd [1993] 2 N.Z.L.R. 648.
- 672. See Honduras Inter-Oceanic Ry Co v Lefevre & Tucker (1877) 2 Ex. D. 301; Massey v Heynes (1888) 21 Q.B.D. 330; Bennetts v McIlwraith [1896] 2 Q.B. 464; Sanderson v Blyth Theatre Co [1903] 2 K.B. 533; CPR r.44.3.8.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 7. - Agent's Relations with Third Parties
(d) - Restitution ⁶⁷³

Repayment of money

31-109

If a person pays money to the agent of another and that other has in fact no right to it, or wrongfully induced the payment, the person who paid the money may recover it directly from the agent if the agent still has it in his possession. ⁶⁷⁴ But the agent cannot be sued in such a case if the person claiming the repayment could not successfully sue the principal, e.g. because the principal is a foreign sovereign. ⁶⁷⁵ Nor will the agent be liable if he has actually paid the money over to his principal without notice of the third person's claim, ⁶⁷⁶ unless the money was obtained by means of some wrongful act to which the agent was himself a party. ⁶⁷⁷ But an agent who is relying on the payment over defence must show that he has actually paid his principal or done something equivalent to payment, not merely that he has given him credit ⁶⁷⁸; and this will be so even though he has altered his position for the worse by giving the principal further time for the payment of a debt in reliance upon the amount so credited. ⁶⁷⁹ The cases on this topic antedate the recognition of the defence of change of position in restitution cases ⁶⁸⁰ and their proper assessment for the present day remains uncertain. ⁶⁸¹ Where, however, the agent deals as principal, he is personally liable, and it is no defence for him to prove that he has accounted for or transmitted the money to another. ⁶⁸²

31-110

⚠ The above propositions are well established where the liability to repay arises immediately. But, in general, where money is received by an agent acting within his authority, it is received by the principal and it is the principal who is liable for it. ⁶⁸³ ⚠ The interaction of these principles is unresolved. At least where the liability arises subsequently, as on a breach of contract, it would seem that the principal is the only defendant (e.g. in an action for the return of a deposit paid under a contract for the sale of land ⁶⁸⁴) and the agent is not liable even though he still has the money. Where however the agent acts as pre- or post-contract stakeholder he will be personally liable for failure to comply with his obligations. ⁶⁸⁵ In a postcontract situation the principal will be liable also ⁶⁸⁶; in a pre-contract situation only the agent is liable, unless the principal authorised the receipt of the deposit. ⁶⁸⁷

^{673.} The analysis of this area is controversial. See in general Burrows, Law of Restitution, 3rd edn (2011), pp.558 et seq.; Stevens [2005] L.M.C.L.Q. 101.

^{674.} Kleinwort, Sons & Co v Dunlop Rubber Co (1907) 97 L.T. 263; Nizam of Hyderabad v Jung [1957] Ch. 185 (but see n.673, below).

^{675.} Rahimtoola v Nizam of Hyderabad [1958] A.C. 379, 401; reversing Nizam of Hyderabad v Jung, above. See now State Immunity Act 1978.

^{676.} Buller v Harrison (1777) Cowp. 565; Gowers v Lloyds & National Provincial Foreign Bank Ltd

- [1938] 1 All E.R. 766; Australia and New Zealand Banking Group Ltd v Westpac Banking Corp (1988) 164 C.L.R. 662. But if he recovers the money from his principal he is again liable: British American Continental Bank v British Bank for Foreign Trade [1926] 1 K.B. 328.
677. Snowdon v Davis (1808) 1 Taunt. 359; Sharland v Mildon (1846) 5 Hare 469; Keegan v Palmer [1961] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 449. But not where he cannot be regarded as a party to the wrong: Owen v Cronk [1895] 1 Q.B. 265.
678. Buller v Harrison, above; Holland v Russell (1863) 4 B. & S. 14; Kleinwort, Sons & Co v Dunlop Rubber Co (1907) 97 L.T. 263.
679. Scottish Metropolitan Assurance Co Ltd v P Samuel & Co Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 348.
680. Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548. See Vol.I, paras 29-186 et seq.
681. See Australia and New Zealand Banking Group Ltd v Westpac Banking Corp (1988) 165 C.L.R. 662; Agip (Africa) Ltd v Jackson [1990] Ch. 265, 288–289; Portman Building Society v Hamlyn Taylor Neck [1998] 4 All E.R. 202, 207.
682. Gurney v Womersley (1854) 4 E. & B. 133; Royal Exchange Assurance v Moore (1863) 8 L.T. 242; Continental Caoutchouc & Gutta Percha Co v Kleinwort (1904) 90 L.T. 474; Baylis v Bishop of London [1913] 1 Ch. 127.
683.  Ellis v Goulton [1893] 1 Q.B. 350; Portman Building Society v Hamlyn Taylor Neck, above, at 207; Jones v Churcher [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 94; Marsfield Automotive Inc v Siddiqi [2017] EWHC 187 (Comm) (useful discussion).
684. Ellis v Goulton, above (solicitor); but cf. Elizabeth Wolf v Hosier & Dickinson Ltd [1981] Com. L.R. 89 (held stakeholder); Goodey v Garriock [1972] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 369 (ship broker); Ojelay v Neosale Ltd [1987] 2 E.G.L.R. 167. See Burrows, Law of Restitution, 3rd edn (2011), 558 et seq.
685. Burrough v Skinner (1770) 5 Burr. 2639; Edwards v Hodding (1814) 5 Taunt. 815; Furtado v Lumley (1890) 6 T.L.R. 168 (auctioneers); Eltham v Kingsman (1818) 1 B. & Ald. 683; Hampden v Walsh (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 189 (wagers); Burt v Claude Cousins & Co Ltd [1971] 2 Q.B. 426, 435–436; Potters (A Firm) v Loppert [1973] Ch. 399, 406 (estate agents); below, para.31-134 n.826. As to the duties of a post-contract stakeholder, see Rockeagle Ltd v Alsop Wilkinson [1992] Ch. 47; Hastingwood Property Ltd v Sanders Bearman Anselm [1991] Ch. 114; as to a pre-contract stakeholder see Gribbon v Lutton [2001] EWCA Civ 1956, [2002] Q.B. 902.
686. See Annesley v Muggridge (1816) 1 Madd. 593; Rowe v May (1854) 18 Beav. 613 (auctioneers).
687. Sorrell v Finch [1977] A.C. 728. In such a case, the agent must repay the deposit to the prospective purchaser on demand, which suggests that he is better regarded as agent of that party only.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 7. - Agent's Relations with Third Parties
(e) - Tort

Agent's liability in tort

31-111

In general an agent may be liable for his torts, whether or not the principal is liable also. Thus it has been held that an estate agent ⁶⁸⁸ and a solicitor ⁶⁸⁹ may owe independent duties of care to the party with whom their principal is, through them, dealing; and a duty may sometimes (but not always) be owed to a person not party to that transaction. ⁶⁹⁰ A company director is liable in deceit, ⁶⁹¹ and may sometimes owe a duty of care independent of the obligation of his company. ⁶⁹² A mere agent is not however liable under s.2(1) of the Misrepresentation Act 1967, because he is not a party to the relevant contract ⁶⁹³; and some acts of an agent, at least in the context of property, may rank as ministerial only. ⁶⁹⁴ An agent may sometimes be able to take the benefit of exemption clauses in his principal's contract. ⁶⁹⁵

^{688.} McCullagh v Lane Fox & Partners Ltd [1996] 1 E.G.L.R. 35, per Hobhouse L.J. (an important judgment); Barrett v JR West Ltd [1970] N.Z.L.R. 789; Richardson v Norris Smith Real Estate Ltd [1977] 1 N.Z.L.R. 152; Merrett v Babb [2001] EWCA Civ 214, [2001] Q.B. 1174.

^{689.} Al-Kandari v JR Brown & Co [1988] Q.B. 665; Allied Finance and Investments Ltd v Haddow & Co [1983] N.Z.L.R. 22; Connell v Odum [1993] 2 N.Z.L.R. 257; Woodward v Wulferstans [1997] T.L.R. 189; Dean v Allin & Watts [2001] EWCA Civ 758, [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 249; but cf. Gran Gelato Ltd v Richcliff (Group) Ltd [1992] Ch. 560 (no liability): see Cane (1992) 108 L.Q.R. 539 and explanation of the case by Hobhouse L.J. in McCullagh v Lane Fox & Partners Ltd, above, at 43; Brownie Wills v Shrimpton [1998] 2 N.Z.L.R. 32.

^{690.} See Smith v Eric S Bush [1990] 1 A.C. 831 (surveyor); Ross v Caunters [1980] Ch. 297; White v Jones [1995] 2 A.C. 207 (solicitor's duty to beneficiary of will); Punjab National Bank v de Boinville [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 7 (insurance broker); Henderson v Merrett Syndicates Ltd [1995] 2 A.C. 145 (Lloyd's); Merrett v Babb [2001] EWCA Civ 214, [2001] Q.B. 1174 (surveyor).

^{691.} Standard Chartered Bank v Pakistan National Shipping Corp [2002] UKHL 43, [2003] 1 A.C. 959. But his liability may sometimes be affected by s.6 of the Statute of Frauds Amendment Act 1828 (Lord Tenterden's Act), which requires that representations as to the credit of a third party must be in writing. See Vol.I, para.7-042; Contex Drouzhba Ltd v Wiseman [2007] EWCA Civ 1201, [2008] 1 B.C.L.C. 631 (signature by director ranked as his own signature as well as that of the company).

^{692.} Fairline Shipping Corp v Adamson [1975] Q.B. 180; C Evans & Sons Ltd v Spritebrand Ltd [1985] B.C.L.C. 105; but cf. Trevor Ivory Ltd v Anderson [1992] 2 N.Z.L.R. 517 (incorporation is an indication that no personal liability); Williams v Natural Life Health Foods Ltd [1998] 1 W.L.R. 830 HL; Bush v Summit Advances Ltd Unreported February 2, 2015, QBD Judge Seymour Q.C., (employee surveyor) (both holding that no duty of care was undertaken). See Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), paras 5.76–5.78. This is a facet of the problem of seeking to fix liability on the owner of a one-man company, as to which see also above, para.31-065 n.404. But it seems that an agent is not liable for inducement of breach of contract by his principal: Said v Butt [1920] 3 K.B. 497; Welsh Development Agency v Export Finance Ltd [1992] B.C.L.C. 148; Holding Oil Finance v Marc Rich & Co [1996] C.L. 125; cf. The Leon [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 611, 623–625 and Thames Valley Housing Association Ltd v Elegant Homes (Guernsey) Ltd [2011] EWHC 1288 (Ch), where the point does not appear to have been taken.

693. Resolute Maritime Inc v Nippon Kaiji Kyokai (The Skopas) [1983] 1 W.L.R. 857; MCI WorldCom International Inc v Primus Telecommunications Inc [2003] EWHC 1812 (Comm), [2004] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 138.

694. See discussion in Standard Chartered Bank v Pakistan National Shipping Corp [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 365 (signing of false bill of lading not ministerial); Marcq v Christie, Manson & Woods Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 731 (QB), [2004] Q.B. 286.

695. See Vol.I, paras 15-042 et seq.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 8. - Obligations of Principal and Agent Inter se
(a) - Duties of Agents
(i) - Common Law: Carrying Out Instructions

Carrying out instructions and not exceeding authority

31-112

If the agent acts under a bilateral contract (which may be of service or for services) he must do what he has undertaken to do ⁶⁹⁶; he must, in performance of his duties, carry out any express instructions, whether positive or negative, given to him by his principal, even though he may reasonably believe that in departing from them he would be promoting his principal's interests. ⁶⁹⁷ If, however, his instructions are susceptible of two meanings, he often may incur no liability if he reasonably interprets them in the sense not intended by the principal. ⁶⁹⁸ An agent who fails to carry out his instructions also has no right to remuneration, because in such a case he has not earned it. ⁶⁹⁹ Where the act which the agent is employed to perform is one which by law is void the principal cannot recover damages for the failure to perform it. ⁷⁰⁰ But an agent acting under a unilateral contract may have no duty to act at all. ⁷⁰¹ And a gratuitous agent's liability is in tort only: he can only be liable for failure to act in those situations in which he can be regarded as having assumed responsibility. ⁷⁰²

Authority

31-113

⚠ Equally, an agent must not exceed his authority as described above: if he does so he is liable to his principal for loss caused. ⁷⁰³ This liability is strict as contrasted with the agent's liability in respect of services provided, which is usually for negligence only. Such loss may arise because the principal is unwillingly bound under the doctrine of apparent authority, or because the principal ratifies unwillingly, for example to preserve his commercial reputation. This can usually be explained on the basis of contractual relations between principal and agent, and this may even be so where the agent acts after his authority is terminated. ⁷⁰⁴ Where, however, one person purports to act for another in circumstances where no conferring of authority or even ratification can be detected, and causes loss to that other, there must presumably be liability to the purported principal in negligence, though such a situation would be rare. ⁷⁰⁵ ⚠

^{696.} Smith v Lascelles (1788) 2 T.R. 187; Barber v Taylor (1839) 5 M. & W. 527; Bertram Armstrong & Co v Godfrey (1830) 1 Knapp 381; Turpin v Bilton (1843) 5 M. & G. 455; LS Harris Trustees Ltd v Power Packing Services (Hermit Road) Ltd [1970] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 65. But he has no duty to carry out instructions to do anything unlawful: ABTA v British Airways Plc [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 169.

^{697.} Overend & Gurney Co v Gibb (1872) L.R. 5 H.L. 480; Fray v Voules (1859) 1 E. & E. 839; The

Hermione [1922] P. 162; Volkers v Midland Doherty Ltd (1985) 17 D.L.R. (4th) 343; RH Deacon & Co Ltd v Varga (1972) 30 D.L.R. (3d) 653; affirmed (1973) 41 D.L.R. (3d) 767. Where the Commercial Agents (Council Directive) Regulations (above, para.31-017) apply, he must comply with reasonable instructions: reg.3(2)(c). The duty is unexcludable: reg.5.

- 698. Ireland v Livingston (1872) L.R. 5 H.L. 395; Weigall v Runciman (1916) 85 L.J.K.B. 1187; Larsen v Anglo American Oil Co Ltd (1924) 20 Ll.L. Rep. 39, 67. See also above, para.31-045.
- 699. See, e.g. Toppin v Healey (1863) 11 W.R. 466; below, paras 31-148 et seq. For an example of dismissal for abusive conduct towards the principal see Gledhill v Bentley Designs (UK) Ltd [2010] EWHC 1965 (QB), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 270; cf. Crocs Europe BV v Anderson [2012] EWCA Civ 1400, [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1.
- 700. Thomas Cheshire & Co v Vaughan Bros & Co [1920] 3 K.B. 240 (PPI policy). See further below, paras 31-160, 31-161, 31-163.
- 701. Below, para.31-146.
- 702. See Henderson v Merrett Syndicates Ltd [1995] 2 A.C. 145; London Borough of Bromley v Ellis [1971] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 97; General Accident Fire and Life Insurance Corp v Tanter (The Zephyr) [1984] 1 W.L.R. 100; [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 529; Youell v Bland Welch & Co Ltd (the Superhulls Cover Case) (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 431; Norwest Refrigeration Services Pty Ltd v Bain Dawes (WA) Pty Ltd (1984) 157 C.L.R. 149. This could apply to the holder of a power of attorney.
- 703. e.g. Fray v Voules (1859) 1 E. & E. 839.
- 704. See OBG Ltd v Allan [2007] UKHL 21, [2008] 1 A.C.1 at [93], per Lord Hoffmann, rejecting a view put forward by Mance L.J. in the Court of Appeal that there should be liability in tort. Ratification may here provide the basis for the application of contractual reasoning. See also above, para.31-033.
- 705.  e.g. Montrod GmbH v Grundkotter Fleischvertriebs GmbH [2001] EWCA Civ 1954, [2002] 1 W.L.R. 1975, where an action in negligence was considered. If the person concerned makes a profit by unjustifiably purporting to act as agent he must account for it: English v Dedham Vale Properties Ltd [1978] 1 W.L.R. 93. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.6-003; Watts (2009) 17 Torts L.J. 100. The "agent" could be liable to third party for breach of warranty of authority. See further for wider discussion DeMott, Agency Law in Commercial Practice (2016).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 8. - Obligations of Principal and Agent Inter se
(a) - Duties of Agents
(ii) - Common Law: Exercise of Care and Skill

Exercise of care and skill

31-114

⚠ An agent acting under a bilateral contract must exhibit such a degree of skill and diligence as is appropriate to the performance of the duties that he has accepted. ⁷⁰⁶ ⚠ In particular, a professional agent must show the degree of care to be expected of those in his profession. ⁷⁰⁷ But he does not normally guarantee results, ⁷⁰⁸ is not responsible to his principal for a mere mistake or error of judgment, not amounting to a failure to exercise proper care or skill, ⁷⁰⁹ and the mere fact that by a different course of action he might have averted a loss sustained by his principal is not of itself evidence of such a failure. ⁷¹⁰

Due care for principal's interests

31-115

⚠ Where the agent has a discretion to exercise, he must exercise it with due care and in his principal's interests. ⁷¹¹ An agent must, in general, keep his principal fully informed ⁷¹² ⚠ and must act with the necessary amount of speed and diligence. ⁷¹³ If the agent cannot carry out his instructions he must normally inform the principal without delay. ⁷¹⁴ Where an agent is employed to sell property, his duty does not cease when he has procured an offer of purchase which is accepted subject to contract; until final contracts have been signed he remains under a duty to inform the vendor of any better offer which he may receive. ⁷¹⁵ He must also inform his principal of anything coming to his knowledge which is likely to influence the principal in the making of the contract. ⁷¹⁶

Disclosure of misdoing

31-116

It is usually said that a failure by the agent to disclose his own misdoings is not in itself a breach of contract, ⁷¹⁷ so that an employee negotiating for severance is not bound, in the absence of fraud, to disclose such breaches of duty as would have given the employer the opportunity of dismissing him. ⁷¹⁸ But it has been held that an employee may sometimes be under a duty to disclose breaches of duty by other employees ⁷¹⁹ and also that outside the above context a director, as a fiduciary owing a duty of loyalty, may come under a duty to disclose his own breaches that have ongoing relevance ⁷²⁰. it may be that a senior employee would also. ⁷²¹

Gratuitous agents

31-117

It used to be said that a gratuitous agent (whose liability, as stated above, lies only in tort) owes duties of a different type: he is only liable for the care which he exercises in his own affairs.⁷²² But such categorisation, even if the test is interpreted objectively,⁷²³ has long seemed obsolete: and it has more recently been said that the appropriate standard is that which might reasonably be expected in the circumstances.⁷²⁴ On this basis the difference between such an agent and one who is paid becomes one of degree only.

706.

! Harmer v Cornelius (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 236; Lee v Walker (1872) L.R. 7 C.P. 121; Commonwealth Portland Cement Co v Weber [1905] A.C. 66; Weld-Blundell v Stephens [1920] A.C. 956; Lage v Siemens Bros Co Ltd (1932) 42 Ll.L. Rep. 252; Cyril Andrade Ltd v Sotheby & Co (1931) 47 T.L.R. 244. He may also be liable in tort: Henderson v Merrett Syndicates Ltd, above; BP Plc v Aon Ltd (No.2) [2006] EWHC 424 (Comm), [2006] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 789. But the duty is a general one and though it may diminish, does not expand to meet the particular contract duty: Aiken v Stewart Wrightson Members Agency Ltd [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 618. See above, Vol.I, paras 1-177 et seq. And it has recently been held that where the action is in substance one for breach of contract the contractual rules for the calculation of damages apply: Wellesley Partners LLP v Withers LLP [2015] EWCA Civ 1146, [2016] 2 W.L.R. 1351.

707.

Lanphier v Phipos (1838) 8 C. & P. 475; Lee v Walker (1872) L.R. 7 C.P. 121; Simmons v Pennington & Son [1955] 1 W.L.R. 183; Lister v Romford Ice and Cold Storage Co Ltd [1957] A.C. 555, 572–573; cf. Luxmoore May v Messenger May Baverstock [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1009, especially at 1020 (provincial auctioneer: suggestion that standard of London specialist auctioneer should be higher). Where the Commercial Agents (Council Directive) Regulations (above, para.31-017) apply, he must make proper efforts to negotiate and conclude transactions: reg.3(2)(a).

708.

See e.g. Bieber v Teathers Ltd [2012] EWHC 190 (Ch), [2012] B.C.L.C. 585 at [86] (“An investor cannot say that a stockbroker is authorised only to make successful investments”), affirmed [2012] EWCA Civ 1466, [2013] 1 B.C.L.C. 248; but strict liability is sometimes undertaken—cf. Platform Funding Ltd v Bank of Scotland [2008] EWCA Civ 930, [2009] Q.B. 426 (surveyor); Martin v JRC Commercial Mortgages Plc [2012] EWCA Civ 63, [2012] P.N.L.R. 8 (fixed fee mortgage broker); Salkeld Investments v West 1 Loans Ltd [2012] EWHC 2701 (QB) (arranger of packages and bridging finance).

709.

See Comber v Anderson (1808) 1 Camp. 523; Nitrate Producers' Co v Wills (1905) 21 T.L.R. 699; Stafford v Conti Commodity Services Ltd [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 466; Whitehouse v Jordan [1981] 1 W.L.R. 246.

710.

Commonwealth Portland Cement Co v Weber [1905] A.C. 66.

711.

Gokal Chand-Jagan Nath v Nand Ram Das-Atma Ram [1939] A.C. 106; Morten v Hilton [1937] 2 K.B. 176n. This comes within the fringe of the agent's fiduciary liability or duty of loyalty: see below, para.31-118. See also above, para.31-036.

712.

! Sill v Thomas (1839) 8 C. & P. 762; Johnson v Kearley [1908] 2 K.B. 514; Dunton Properties Ltd v Coles, Knapp v Kennedy [1959] E.G.D. 221. Where the Commercial Agents (Council Directive) Regulations (above, para.31-017) apply, he must communicate “all the necessary information” to his principal: reg.3(2)(b). The duty is unexcludable: reg.5. See also Fairstar Heavy Transport NV v Adkins [2013] EWCA Civ 886, [2013] 2 C.L.C. 272 (order on termination of appointment of Chief Executive to give access to emails); Khoulj v Acropolis Capital Partners Ltd [2016] EWHC 2120 (Comm) (right to inspect agent's documents).

713.

Callander v Oelrichs (1838) 5 Bing. N.C. 58; Barber v Taylor (1839) 5 M. & W. 527; Potter v Equitable Bank (1921) 8 Ll.L. Rep. 291, 332; World Transport Agency Ltd v Royte (England)

- Ltd* [1957] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 381.
- 714. Salvesen & Co v Rederi A/B Nordstjernan [1905] A.C. 302; Hood v West End Motor Car Packing Co [1917] 2 K.B. 38, 47; Youell v Bland Welch & Co (the Superhulls Cover Case) (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 431, 446–447. This principle may sometimes apply to gratuitous agents.
- 715. Keppel v Wheeler [1927] 1 K.B 577.
- 716. Heath v Parkinson (1926) 42 T.L.R. 693.
- 717. Healey v Société Anonyme Française Rubastic [1917] 1 K.B. 949; University of Nottingham v Fishel [2000] I.C.R. 1462.
- 718. Bell v Lever Bros Ltd [1932] A.C. 161, 228.
- 719. Sybron Corp v Rochem Ltd [1984] Ch. 112.
- 720. Item Software (UK) Ltd v Fassihi [2004] EWCA Civ 1244, [2005] 2 B.C.L.C. 91 (not followed in Australia in P & V Industries Pty Ltd v Porto [2006] VSC 131 and said in Stupples v Stupples & Co (High Wycombe) Ltd [2012] EWHC 1226 (Ch), [2013] 1 B.C.L.C. 729 at [59] to concern directors).
- 721. This depends to some extent on whether the duty is fiduciary or specific to directors and perhaps certain employees. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.6–054; Berg (2005) 121 L.Q.R. 213; Flannigan [2006] Bus. L.Rev. 258 (Canada); Ho and Lee [2007] C.L.J. 348; Watts (2007) 123 L.Q.R. 21.
- 722. Wilson v Brett (1843) 11 M. & W. 113; Beal v S Devon Ry (1864) 3 H. & C. 337; Grill v General Iron Screw Collier Co (1866) L.R. 1 C.P. 600, 612; Giblin v McMullen (1868) L.R. 2 P.C. 317, 336; Moffat v Bateman (1869) L.R. 3 P.C. 115.
- 723. As in Gomer v Pitt & Scott (1922) 12 Ll.L. Rep. 115.
- 724. Chaudhry v Prabhakar [1989] 1 W.L.R. 29, following dicta in Houghland v RR Low (Luxury Coaches) Ltd [1962] 1 Q.B. 694, 698 (which were also followed in Avery v Salie (1972) 25 D.L.R. (3d) 495). Quaere, however, if there should have been a duty of care in Chaudry's case at all: this was conceded. See pp.38-39.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 8. - Obligations of Principal and Agent Inter se
(a) - Duties of Agents
(iii) - Equity: Fiduciary Duties and Duties of Loyalty ⁷²⁵

Fiduciary duties and duties of loyalty

31-118

⚠ An agent, where he undertakes to act for another in circumstances giving rise to a relationship of trust and confidence, owes fiduciary duties derived from Equity to prefer his principal's interests to his own. ⁷²⁶ ⚠ Although there are dicta which might appear to indicate that the fiduciary duties are based entirely on the contract between principal and agent ⁷²⁷ it is fairly well established that they are separate ⁷²⁸ (though not without overlap) and to some extent counterbalance the stricter rules on implication of terms at common law. In any case, not all agents act under a contract. ⁷²⁹ These duties are sometimes subsumed into the phrase "duties of loyalty", some of which are positive duties, though taking in the two basic fiduciary duties imposed by equity and discussed below, that of avoiding conflicts of interest and that of not profiting from position, which are themselves negative only and thus can be said to be prophylactic in operation. ⁷³⁰ Breach of the duty of loyalty generally entails deliberate, not negligent acts. ⁷³¹ ⚠ But the two basic duties referred to above and explained below operate strictly, without proof of intentional wrongdoing, or even fault.

31-119

The equitable duties originated as extension to agents of some (but not all) the restrictions imposed on express trustees; but they were (and are) also applied to others in analogous positions such as partners, directors and company promoters. They therefore vary with the function involved: it has been said that "The precise scope of the obligation must be moulded according to the nature of the relationship". ⁷³²

Summary of fiduciary duties

31-120

It is relevant at this point to quote a useful summary concerning the duty of loyalty:

"The distinguishing obligation of a fiduciary is the obligation of loyalty. The principal is entitled to the single-minded loyalty of his fiduciary. This core liability has several facets. A fiduciary must act in good faith; he must not make a profit out of his trust; he must not place himself in a position where his duty and his interest may conflict; he may not act for his own benefit or the benefit of a third person without the informed consent of his principal. This is not intended to be an exhaustive list, but it is sufficient to indicate the nature of fiduciary obligations." ⁷³³

Conflict of interest

31-121

A general principle, ⁷³⁴ is that as a fiduciary, an agent must not, without first obtaining the informed consent of his principal, put himself in a position where his duty to his principal conflicts ⁷³⁵ or may conflict ⁷³⁶ with his own interests or the interests of another principal. ⁷³⁷ An injunction may often be obtained against an agent who is in such a position. ⁷³⁸ Any benefit or gain made in circumstances where a conflict or significant possibility of conflict existed must be accounted for to the principal. ⁷³⁹ A principal who has full knowledge of the facts may however assent to the agent's acts ⁷⁴⁰; and sometimes his instructions may be so specific as to leave the agent with no discretion, and hence to exclude this rule. ⁷⁴¹

Secret profit ⁷⁴²

31-122

A further consequence of the agent's fiduciary position is that unless he fully informs his principal and obtains his consent, ⁷⁴³ he may not use his position as agent, ⁷⁴⁴ including his principal's property ⁷⁴⁵ or confidential information, ⁷⁴⁶ to make a profit for himself. He must account to the principal for any profit so made. ⁷⁴⁷ Thus an auctioneer appointed to sell goods at a lump sum commission plus out-of-pocket expenses charged his principal with the gross cost of expenses without revealing that he had trade discounts. He was held liable to his principal for the amount of the discounts. ⁷⁴⁸ A more extreme case is Reading v Att-Gen, ⁷⁴⁹ where an army sergeant was held accountable to the Crown for sums which he had illegally made in the Egyptian black market by using his rank and uniform to ensure that the trucks on which he was travelling were not searched by military police. A secret commission can be in kind. ⁷⁵⁰

31-123

It is not relevant that the principal has suffered no loss, ⁷⁵¹ nor that the agent has himself been at risk. ⁷⁵² Thus in the perhaps extreme case of Phipps v Boardman ⁷⁵³ self-appointed "agents" ⁷⁵⁴ to a trust used the trust's position as a shareholder in the company gradually to gain control of the company and ultimately to make a profit for themselves as well as the trust. They were held liable to account to the trust for their personal profit (though with an allowance for work done), notwithstanding that the trust had not been at risk, and that the persons concerned might have made a loss and had been acting bona fide throughout. It is no defence to the principal's claim that the profit was made by means of a fraud on a third party, nor that the agent may have rendered himself liable to a third party. ⁷⁵⁵ Although in general the fiduciary duties end when the relationship of agency ends, ⁷⁵⁶ the agent's duty not to misuse his position or the property or information of his principal may extend beyond the period of the agency. ⁷⁵⁷

Self-dealing ⁷⁵⁸

31-124

⚠ There is also much authority that an agent employed to buy may not be the seller himself, even though he sells at the market price, ⁷⁵⁹ nor may an agent appointed to sell buy the property himself. ⁷⁶⁰ However fair the transaction, it may be set aside by the principal, ⁷⁶¹ unless the agent had made full disclosure of all the material facts and the nature and extent of his interest and obtained his principal's consent or unless the principal subsequently waives the breach of duty. ⁷⁶² It is not sufficient that the agent has put his principal on inquiry; moreover the burden of proving full disclosure lies on the agent. ⁷⁶³ The agent's good faith is not material. ⁷⁶⁴ So, where a large trading company which carried on separately an estate agency and a building business was employed, through its estate agency, to sell property and subsequently, through its building department, inspected the drains on behalf of the purchaser, it was held that it had committed a breach of duty. ⁷⁶⁵ An orthodox view of the cases is to the effect that the basic remedy here is rescission, and that other remedies are not often available except incidentally. Thus it is said that an agent selling to his principal is only liable for a secret profit if he acquired the property in question while owing fiduciary duties, and so would be liable for it under general principles ⁷⁶⁶; and there are comparatively few cases holding agents who buy from their principals liable to account for profits made, usually where rescission is impossible or inappropriate. ⁷⁶⁷ It can, however, be argued that the application of a more general right to equitable compensation is often as appropriate to breaches of these duties as it is to those of other fiduciary duties. ⁷⁶⁸

Conflict of duty and duty ⁷⁶⁹

31-125

Sometimes the agent finds himself in a position where his duty to one principal actually conflicts with his duty to another. He may then be in breach of duty to one by acting with the intention of furthering the interest of the other at the expense of the first; or by failure to disclose to one information relevant to him—information which he would be in breach of duty to the other in disclosing without consent. Here he is unlikely to make a profit at the expense of either, but may well cause loss for which he may be liable at common law in tort or in breach of contract ⁷⁷⁰; but sometimes an action may lie in equity. ⁷⁷¹ He may also in appropriate cases be restrained by injunction. He must serve each as faithfully and loyally as if he were his only principal. ⁷⁷² However, where the agent is of a type known to act for many parties (e.g. an estate agent) it may be held that the situation is impliedly assented to by his principals and that there is no breach of duty. ⁷⁷³ There has as yet been little judicial consideration of the conflicts that might arise from the prospect of an agent obtaining future business from the counterparty of his principal. ⁷⁷⁴

Exclusion of liability ⁷⁷⁵

31-126

⚠ Especially in the financial world, clauses may be inserted in contracts with persons who would in normal speech be called agents, e.g. stockbrokers, whereby the “agent” indicates that he may act in ways which would normally be inconsistent with the fiduciary duties, e.g. that he may without disclosure sell to his principal shares which he owns. Such clauses may be valid as making disclosure to the principal and hence satisfying the fiduciary obligation, or as indicating a contractual variation of the contract terms which would normally be implied. ⁷⁷⁶ It is however submitted that where the clause is potentially inconsistent with the nature of the relationship apparently undertaken, it must very clearly show that the relationship is other than what would be expected, in such a way as to enable the principal to make an informed choice whether to use the services of the person concerned. ⁷⁷⁷ ⚠ Such clauses may also be subject to the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 ⁷⁷⁸ and subject to the requirement of reasonableness. It would seem that compliance with the requirements of a regulatory body should be evidence, but not (in the absence of a statutory provisions deciding the question) conclusive evidence, of reasonableness ⁷⁷⁹ ⚠: such bodies cannot be, unless expressly, empowered to dispense with the general law relating to fiduciaries.

^{725.} See in general Goff and Jones, Law of Restitution, 7th edn (2007), Ch.33 (not in 8th edn); Finn, Fiduciary Obligations (1977), Pt II; Snell's Equity, 33rd edn (2015), Ch.7; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), arts 43–59. The fiduciary duties of directors are now prescribed by statute: see Companies Act 2006 Pt 10 Ch.2.

^{726.} ⚠ For an example where this was not so see Halton International Inc (Holdings) SARL v Guernroy Ltd [2005] EWHC 1968 (Ch), [2006] 1 B.C.L.C. 78 (power of attorney); affirmed [2006] EWCA Civ 801, [2006] W.T.L.R. 1241; and John Youngs Insurance Services Ltd v Aviva Insurance Service UK Ltd [2011] EWHC 1515 (TCC) (claims handling and building repair services: agency services fiduciary but not other services in same contract). Where the - Commercial Agents Regulations (above, para.31-017) apply the agent must act “dutifully and in good faith”: reg.3(1). The duty is unexcludable: reg.5. An argument on the basis of good faith was rejected in Smith v Reliance Water Controls Ltd [2003] Eu. L.R. 874. See in general Tosato, “Commercial Agency and the Duty to Act in Good Faith” [2016] O.J.L.S. 661. There may be criminal liability under the Fraud Act 2006, especially s.4: see discussion in Cavell USA Inc v Seaton Insurance Co [2009] EWCA Civ 1363, [2009] 2 C.L.C. 991 at [25].

- 727. Kelly v Cooper [1993] A.C. 205, 213–214; and see Clark Boyce v Mouat [1994] 1 A.C. 428, 437.
- 728. Re Goldcorp Exchange Ltd [1995] 1 A.C. 74, 98.
- 729. Above, para.31-117; and see Conway v Ratiu [2005] EWCA Civ 1302, [2006] 1 All E.R. 571.
- 730. This is the basis of a distinctive approach by Conaglen, Fiduciary Loyalty (2010); see also Flannigan (2006) 122 L.Q.R. 449. But for a different view see Heydon (2014) 20 Trusts and Trustees 1006. Analysis on the basis of positive duties is supported by the law concerning trustees; and it has the advantage of taking in certain duties, which can be described as relating to a “fraud on a power”, which require fiduciaries undoubtedly acting within their authority nevertheless to take into account the interests of their principals in certain ways: see Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.8–219.
- 731.  Bristol & West BS v Mothew [1998] Ch. 1, 19. For a recent example see Vernon v Public Trust [2016] NZCA 388 (improper use of power of attorney).
- 732. New Zealand Netherlands Society “Oranje” Inc v Kuys [1973] 1 W.L.R. 1126, 1130 per Lord Wilberforce.
- 733. Bristol & West BS v Mothew [1998] Ch. 1, 18, per Millett L.J. This is (part of) a famous exposition, but not everyone agrees with the result of the case itself: see Heydon, above, n.728.
- 734. See Lewin on Trusts, 19th edn (2014), para.20–001; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), art.44; Chan v Zacharia (1984) 154 C.L.R. 178, 198–199.
- 735. See below; and generally Re Cape Breton Co (1885) 29 Ch. D. 795, 811; affirmed on other grounds sub nom. Cavendish-Bentinck v Fenn (1887) 12 App. Cas. 652; Aberdeen Ry v Blaikie Bros (1854) 1 Macq. 461; Bray v Ford [1896] A.C. 44; Phipps v Boardman [1967] 2 A.C. 46; Industrial Development Consultants Ltd v Cooley [1972] 1 W.L.R. 443; Canadian Aero Services Ltd v O'Malley [1974] S.C.R. 592, (1973) 40 D.L.R. (3d) 371; cf. Peso Silver Mines Ltd v Cropper [1966] S.C.R. 673, (1966) 58 D.L.R. (2d) 1. And see Estate Agents Act 1979 s.21.
- 736. See Anglo-African Merchants Ltd v Bayley [1970] 1 Q.B. 311; North & South Trust Co v Berkeley [1971] 1 W.L.R. 470; Farrington v Rowe McBride & Partners [1985] 1 N.Z.L.R. 83; Clark Boyce v Mouat [1994] 1 A.C. 428. Requirements of disclosure are imposed on estate agents by the Estate Agents (Provision of Information) Regulations 1991 (SI 1991/859) reg.2. See also Estate Agents (Undesirable Practices) (No.2) Order 1991 (SI 1991/1032); and Consumer Rights Act 2015 ss.83 et seq. (letting agents).
- 737. cf. above, para.31-040 (no actual incapacity); see also below, para.31-125.
- 738. The majority of the cases concern confidential information possessed by accountants and solicitors: see Prince Jefri Bolkiah v KPMG [1999] 2 A.C. 222; below, para.31-122 n.744.
- 739. See Chan v Zacharia (1984) 154 C.L.R. 178, 198-199; Imageview Management Ltd v Jack [2009] EWCA Civ 63, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 436 (a strong application of the rule; see criticism by Watts (2009) 125 L.Q.R. 369). The case is followed in Rahme v Smith & Williamson Trust Corp Ltd [2009] EWHC 911 (Ch).
- 740. Cavendish-Bentinck v Fenn (1887) 12 App. Cas. 652; Queensland Mines Ltd v Hudson (1978) 52 A.L.J.R. 399 PC. But the knowledge must be full: see Hurstanger Ltd v Wilson [2007] EWCA Civ 299, [2007] 1 W.L.R. 235.

- 741. See Dalgety & Co Ltd v Gray (1919) 26 C.L.R. 249, 256 PC (loan to principal); RH Deacon & Co Ltd v Varga (1972) 30 D.L.R. (3d) 653; affirmed (1973) 41 D.L.R. (3d) 767 (stockbroker); Volkers v Midland Doherty Ltd (1985) 17 D.L.R. (4th) 343.
- 742. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), arts 46 and 47; Conaglen, Fiduciary Loyalty, Ch.5.
- 743. Re Haslam [1902] 1 Ch. 765; Queensland Mines Ltd v Hudson (1978) 52 A.L.J.R. 399 PC.
- 744. Cook v Deeks [1916] 1 A.C. 554; Tarkwa Main Reef v Merton (1903) 19 T.L.R. 367; Regal (Hastings) Ltd v Gulliver [1942] 1 All E.R. 378, [1967] 2 A.C. 134n.; Reading v Att-Gen [1951] A.C. 507; Phipps v Boardman [1967] 2 A.C. 46; cf. NZ Netherlands Society "Oranje" Inc v Kuys [1973] 1 W.L.R. 1126.
- 745. Shallcross v Oldham (1862) 2 Johns. & H. 609; Parker v McKenna (1874) L.R. 10 Ch. App. 96; Morison v Thompson (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 480.
- 746. Regal (Hastings) Ltd v Gulliver, above; Seager v Copydex Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 923; Phipps v Boardman, above; Schering Chemicals Ltd v Falkman Ltd [1982] Q.B. 1; Prince Jefri Bolkiah v KPMG [1999] 2 A.C. 222. But this is really an application of a wider principle. See Millett (1998) 114 L.Q.R. 214, 220–221; Goff and Jones, Law of Restitution, 7th edn (2007), Ch.34 (not in 8th edition); Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), paras 6–077 et seq.; Gurry, Breach of Confidence 2nd edn (2012).
- 747. As to remedies, see below, paras 31-127 et seq.
- 748. Hippisley v Knee Brothers [1905] 1 K.B. 1.
- 749. [1951] A.C. 507.
- 750. Fiona Trust & Holding Corp v Privalov [2010] EWHC 3199 (Comm) (free holiday); and Towers v Premier Waste Management Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 923, [2012] 1 B.C.L.C. 67 (use of equipment).
- 751. Parker v McKenna (1874) L.R. 10 Ch. App. 96; De Bussche v Alt (1878) 8 Ch. D. 286; Reid-Newfoundland Co v Anglo-American Telegraph Co [1912] A.C. 555; Phipps v Boardman [1967] 2 A.C. 46.
- 752. Burrell v Mossop (1888) 4 T.L.R. 270; Williams v Stevens (1866) L.R. 1 P.C. 352.
- 753. [1967] 2 A.C. 46; see also O'Sullivan v Management Agency and Music Ltd [1985] Q.B. 428. An extension of this principle is to be found in cases where agents whose functions include locating assets or business opportunities, or who have assumed management functions in the principal's business affairs, proceed to acquire them for themselves. An example is Re Bhullar Bros [2003] EWCA Civ 424, [2003] 3 B.C.L.C. 241. Much of the authority occurs in connection with corporations. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), paras 6-080, 6-081.
- 754. For a clearer example of a person acting as an agent without any relevant preceding relationship see English v Dedham Vale Properties Ltd [1978] 1 W.L.R. 93 (though the case is on the fringes of ratification doctrine).
- 755. Jubilee Cotton Mills v Lewis [1924] A.C. 958.
- 756. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.6–038.
- 757. Carter v Palmer (1841) 8 Cl. & Fin. 657; Regier v Campbell-Stuart [1939] Ch. 766. See also CMS Dolphin Ltd v Simonet [2001] 2 B.C.L.C. 704. Compare the unusual case of Nordisk Insulinlaboratorium v Gorgate Products Ltd [1953] Ch. 430, where no information was acquired and the agents used their position only by virtue of the special provisions relating to alien enemies. It will usually be in relation to confidential information that the agent's duty will continue after termination of the agency contract: see, e.g. Lamb v Evans [1893] 1 Ch. 218; Robb v Green [1895] 2 Q.B. 315; Prince Jefri Bolkiah v KPMG [1999] 2 A.C. 222.

- 758. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), art.45; Conaglen, Fiduciary Loyalty (2010), pp.126–128; Goff and Jones, Law of Unjust Enrichment: 9th edn (2016), paras 8-175 et seq. This is referred to separately in Bristol & West B.S. v Mothew [1998] Ch. 1, 19.
- 759. e.g. Massey v Davies (1794) 2 Ves. 317; Bentley v Craven (1853) 18 Beav. 75; Armstrong v Jackson [1917] 2 K.B. 822; Headway Construction Co Ltd v Downham (1974) 233 E.G. 675. The remedies available differ in accordance with how the agent acquired the property: see Walden Properties Ltd v Beaver Properties Pty Ltd [1973] 2 N.S.W.L.R. 815, 835–837.
- 760. e.g. McPherson v Watt (1877) 3 App. Cas. 254; Dunne v English (1874) L.R. 18 Eq. 524.
- 761. Aberdeen Ry v Blaikie Bros (1854) 1 Macq. 461; Transvaal Lands Co v New Belgium (Transvaal) Land & Development Co [1914] 2 Ch. 488. cf. Connolly v Brown (2006) 207 S.L.T. 778.
- 762. The rule for express trustees is stricter.
- 763. Dunne v English (1874) L.R. 18 Eq. 524; JD Wetherspoon Plc v Van de Berg & Co Ltd [2009] EWHC 639 (Ch).
- 764. Phipps v Boardman [1967] 2 A.C. 46.
- 765. Harrods Ltd v Lemon [1931] 2 K.B. 157. See also Standard Investments Ltd v Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce (1988) 22 D.L.R. (4th) 410. cf. John Youngs Insurance Services Ltd v Aviva Insurance Service UK Ltd [2011] EWHC 1515 (TCC), [2012] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 1045 (principal aware of collateral services provided).
- 766. The case usually cited is Re Cape Breton Co (1885) 29 Ch. D. 795; affirmed sub nom. Cavendish-Bentinck v Fenn (1887) 12 App. Cas. 652.
- 767. e.g. McKenzie v MacDonald [1927] V.L.R. 134; and see JJ Harrison (Properties) Ltd v Harrison [2001] 1 B.C.L.C. 158.
- 768. See Conaglen (2003) 119 L.Q.R. 246; below, para.31-129.
- 769. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), paras 6–048 et seq.; Conaglen (2009) 125 L.Q.R. 111.
- 770. See Hilton v Barker-Booth and Eastwood [2005] UKHL 8, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 567 (breach of contract); Marks & Spencer Plc v Freshfields Bruckhaus Deringer [2004] EWCA Civ 741, [2005] P.N.L.R. 4; affirming [2004] EWHC 1337, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 2331 (different transactions); HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v JLT Risk Solutions Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 710, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 278 (insurance broker not liable in negligence).
- 771. e.g. an action for an account, or rescission. See North & West Trust Co v Berkeley [1971] 1 W.L.R. 470, 484–485.
- 772. Bristol & West BS v Mothew [1998] Ch. 1, 19, per Millett L.J.
- 773. Kelly v Cooper [1993] A.C. 205 as explained in Prince Jefri Bolkiah v KPMG [1999] 2 A.C. 222, 235; and see Bristol & West BS v Mothew [1998] Ch. 1. But it is submitted that some of the dicta in Kelly v Cooper are too wide. See above, para.31-118, text to n.725. As to solicitors, see above, para.31-013. The leading cases mostly concern single practitioners and small firms. For further developments of the problems arising in larger organisations see Finn, Commercial Aspects of Trusts and Fiduciary Obligations, edited by McKendrick (1992), Ch.1, pp.15–36. It is certainly doubtful whether such reasoning could apply where the Commercial Agents Regulations (above, para.31–017) are operative: see regs 3(1), 5(1).

774. See Dennard v PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP [2010] EWHC 812 (Ch) at [213]–[221]; Premium Real Estate Ltd v Stevens [2009] 2 N.Z.L.R. 384.

775. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.6–056.

776. Some extremely strong exclusions have been assumed to be valid unless statute intervenes. See Spread Trustee Co Ltd v Hutcheson [2011] UKPC 13, [2012] 2 A.C. 194 PC.

777.  See Farrington v Rowe McBride & Partners [1985] 1 N.Z.L.R. 83, 92–93. But cf. Hayim v Citibank NA [1987] A.C. 730 (clause reducing executor's liability to beneficiaries); Armitage v Nurse [1998] Ch. 241 (trustee); Bogg v Raper [1998] T.L.R. 249 CA (solicitor drafting will entitled to benefit of clause limiting liability); Citibank NA v MBIA Assurance SA [2006] EWHC 3215 (Ch), [2007] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 1219; noted by Trukhtanov (2007) 123 L.Q.R. 342; Australian Securities and Investments Commission v Citigroup Global Markets Australia Pty Ltd (2007) 62 A.C.S.R 427; Barnsley v Noble [2016] EWCA Civ 799 (trustee under will).

778. s.3, especially s.3(2)(b)(i); and in consumer cases Consumer Rights Act 2015 Pt 2. See Vol.I, paras 15-084 et seq.

779.  In this connection, the extent of the wide powers conferred by Pt 9A of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 as amended by the Financial Services Act 2012 is open to question. The regulatory authority is at present the Financial Conduct Authority. See discussion of the general topic by McMeel, Agency Law in Commercial Practice (2016), paras 10.25 et seq., paras 10.19 et seq.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 8. - Obligations of Principal and Agent Inter se
(a) - Duties of Agents
(iv) - Remedies

Common law

31-127

⚠ Breaches of the common law and also of the equitable duties may justify dismissal of the agent, and also disentitle him to remuneration and/or indemnity. ⁷⁸⁰ Damages may be recoverable either for breach of contract or in tort. A gratuitous agent cannot, of course, be liable in contract, but he may sometimes be liable in tort. ⁷⁸¹ The same may be true of an agent who simply introduces business, for he may have no contractual liability towards his principal. ⁷⁸² Where there is a contractual relationship between principal and agent the agent's breach of duty will generally sound in contract; but where there is a duty of care there is also liability in tort. ⁷⁸³ If the equitable duties have been complied with, the action is in effect a common law one, and no different results are obtained by designating it as one for breach of fiduciary duty. ⁷⁸⁴ The contractual measure of damages for breach of duty on the part of the agent is the loss sustained by the principal which is within the contemplation of the parties at the time when the contract was made. ⁷⁸⁵ An action in negligence would render the defendant liable for foreseeable loss caused by the negligence. ⁷⁸⁶ The effects of limitation might be different, and the Law Reform (Contributory Negligence) Act 1945 would more easily apply. But even in a contract action the liability may sometimes be simply for loss caused. Thus where agents incorrectly represented to their principals that they had made a contract on their behalf, it was held that the principals could only recover the loss actually sustained by them in consequence of the misrepresentation, and not the profits that they would have made if the representation had been true. ⁷⁸⁷ A principal who is induced, by the negligence of his agent, to enter into an adventure from which loss ensues is entitled to recover from the agent the amount he has actually lost plus compensation for loss of time. ⁷⁸⁸ If estate agents, after procuring an offer for their principal which he accepts subject to contract, fail to inform him of a later higher offer, they may be liable for the difference between the price agreed with the first offeror and the second offer. ⁷⁸⁹ An agent may be required to permit inspection of documents related to his principal. ⁷⁹⁰ ⚠

Equity: rescission

31-128

Rescission is in principle available as between principal and fiduciary where the agent's fiduciary duties (for example as to self-dealing, accepting bribes or secret commissions, or acting also for the third party to a relevant transaction) have been broken; and between principal and third party where such duties have been broken and the third party is aware of the position. The normal limits on the right to rescind apply. ⁷⁹¹

Equity: duty to account and restitution of the trust estate

31-129

⚠ Equity provides much of the reasoning in this area, substantive as well as remedial, and must be invoked when a claim is in respect of one of the equitable duties and is not simply a common law claim for breach of contract or negligence. ⁷⁹² The remedy to which general reference is usually made is that of a duty to account, though some of the technical terminology within this is more relevant to the procedure accompanying the taking of an account against a trustee, and the modern approach is to look more to substantive general principles. ⁷⁹³ To the extent that an agent is in possession or control of the principal's money or funds as trustee and misapplies them, equity will both require the agent personally to restore the trust fund and will also give proprietary remedies to the extent that the moneys or their traceable substitutes are identifiable in the agent's or a third party's hands, subject to applicable defences that the third party may have. ⁷⁹⁴ Where such remedies are applicable, there would be consequences as regards limitation, for by virtue of s.21(1)(b) of the Limitation Act 1980 its provisions do not apply to actions by a beneficiary to recover trust property. Such reasoning when deployed in a commercial context may be used to facilitate attempts to avoid the consequences of, for example, a fall in property values. Although it seems that the normal rules for accounting by trustees do not in all circumstances call for the restitution of the entire trust fund, ⁷⁹⁵ recent English decisions concerning fact situations of this sort have invoked rules of equitable compensation to facilitate making an award for no more than the amount perceived as having been lost by reason of the trustee's actions, using some general notion of "but for" causation to assist in the process. ⁷⁹⁶ ⚠ It is not entirely clear that the somewhat ill-defined category of equitable compensation needed to be enlarged in this way to provide a way of dealing with inadmissible claims. There must also certainly be situations where an agent who holds as trustee, for example a solicitor in conveyancing matters whose power to pay out a fund is specifically limited, could be rightly made liable for wrongful disposal of the trust estate. ⁷⁹⁷ ⚠

Account of profits and proprietary remedies

31-130

It is well established that equity will give an account of profits against an agent who makes an unauthorised profit from use of his position, ⁷⁹⁸ or by breaching his equitable duties to the principal ⁷⁹⁹; the account being a somewhat pragmatic remedy in this context. ⁸⁰⁰ However, the position whether a proprietary remedy, in the form of a constructive trust, should be awarded over identifiable profits solely on the basis that they could not have been obtained but for breach of fiduciary duty has been controversial. The main objection to such an approach is the priority in insolvency which it may carry. The position has now been settled for England and Wales by the acceptance, in the context of bribery, of a proprietary remedy by way of the imposition of a constructive trust, on the basis that this applies to all benefits received by a fiduciary in breach of his duties. ⁸⁰¹ It is unlikely that this should be confined to bribery situations, which indeed have a weaker case for being brought within the rule than other benefits. It seems fairly clear that the trust is intended to be regarded as institutional rather than remedial, though this makes it difficult to avoid the insolvency consequences of such reasoning; but there are other matters to be settled, for example the operation of the Limitation Act 1980. ⁸⁰² Other jurisdictions may take a more flexible view of such a constructive trust. ⁸⁰³

Equitable compensation ⁸⁰⁴

31-131

The acceptance of a general notion of equitable compensation is a fairly recent development, at any rate in England and Wales. ⁸⁰⁵ The phrase refers to a monetary award made in the implementation of equitable principles, and is to be distinguished from "equitable damages", a phrase that can be used of an award of damages in lieu of specific performance under Lord Cairns' Act, which used to be regarded by some as the only occasion in which a court of Equity could give monetary judgments. Equitable compensation is plainly an appropriate remedy where an agent acts disloyally ⁸⁰⁶ or acts in breach of trust. ⁸⁰⁷ It is less clear whether a mere conflict of interest will support equitable compensation, unless the claimant can establish that had the conflict been disclosed the principal would not have made the decision that caused the loss.⁸⁰⁸ The conflict of interest may, however, help to support an allegation that the agent has acted in breach of his (contractual or tortious) duties of care.⁸⁰⁹ Where equitable compensation is awarded, the common law principles for the assessment of damages and contributory negligence are not necessarily relevant⁸¹⁰ especially where the matter can be categorised as one of restitution of the trust estate.⁸¹¹ In general, questions of causation are more likely to be relevant in some form than matters of contemplation, foreseeability and scope of duty.⁸¹² But where the duty broken is simply one of exercising care, the duty, even if historically remediable in equity as well as common law, is not a fiduciary one and common law principles apply.⁸¹³ This whole problem often arises in connection with the dual functions of professionals such as solicitors and accountants, who are primarily persons offering services on a commercial basis (for example, they have no duty to tell their clients that another person offering the same services would charge less), but may perform many functions in respect of which they are fiduciaries, and if solicitors may also hold property on trust, though frequently only for a short time and in support or implementation of a commercial transaction for which their services are utilised. They may sometimes have agency powers, for example to make contracts or settle cases on behalf of their principals,⁸¹⁴ and their knowledge may sometimes be attributed to their principals. This conjunction of roles may require very careful analysis within legal categories, bearing in mind that a reasonable external observer might regard many of the disputes litigated as simply concerning inadequate performance by a solicitor of his contractual duties.

-
- ^{780.} See above, para.31-073; below, paras 31-161, 31-163.
- ^{781.} Above, paras 31-112, 31-117.
- ^{782.} e.g. Cherry Ltd v Allied Insurance Brokers Ltd [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 274 (insurance broker); but cf. Kenney v Hall, Pain & Foster [1976] E.G.D. 629 (estate agent).
- ^{783.} Henderson v Merrett Syndicates Ltd [1995] 2 A.C. 145. See Vol.I, paras 1-165 et seq. This may be relevant in the assessment of damages; as to limitation; as to jurisdiction, and other matters.
- ^{784.} Bristol & West BS v Mothew [1998] Ch. 1, 17. Contra, Heydon (2014) 20 Trusts and Trustees 1006.
- ^{785.} C Czarnikow Ltd v Koufos (The Heron II) [1969] 1 A.C. 350. See Vol.I, Ch.26.
- ^{786.} The Wagon Mound [1961] A.C. 388. See Vol.I, para.1-186.
- ^{787.} Salvesen & Co v Rederi A/B Nordstjernen [1905] A.C. 302 (ship brokers).
- ^{788.} Johnston v Braham [1917] 1 K.B. 586 (theatrical agent). It has been held that insurance brokers who act negligently may be liable to a client in respect of damages not covered by insurance, and fines for driving while uninsured: Osman v J Ralph Moss Ltd [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 313.
- ^{789.} Keppel v Wheeler [1927] 1 K.B. 577.
- ^{790.}  Khouj v Acropolis Capital Partners Ltd [2016] EWHC 2120 (Comm), [2017] W.T.L.R. 83 (order in favour of principal's administrators).
- ^{791.} See Snell's Equity, 33rd edn (2015), paras 7–053 et seq.
- ^{792.} See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), at paras 6–040 to 6–044; and Millett (1998) 114 L.Q.R. 214.
- ^{793.} See Libertarian Investments v Hall [2013] 16 HKCFAR 681 at [97]–[99], [166]–[172].
- ^{794.} See Re Dawson [1966] 2 N.S.W.L.R. 211; Youyang Pty Ltd v Minter Ellison Morris Fletcher

- (2003) 212 C.L.R. 484 (see Elliott and Edelman (2003) 119 L.Q.R. 545); Bairstow v Queen's Moat House Plc [2001] EWCA Civ 712, [2001] B.C.L.C. 531; Lloyd's TSB Bank Plc v Markandan & Uddin [2012] EWCA Civ 65, [2012] 2 All E.R. 884.
- 795. See Lord Millett in Libertarian Investments v Hall, n.790 above, at [166]–[172]; (1998) 114 L.Q.R. 214, 227; Lewin on Trusts, 19th edn (2014), paras 39–001 et seq.
- 796.  Target Holdings Ltd v Redferns [1996] A.C. 421; AIB Group (UK) Plc v Mark Redler & Co Solicitors [2014] UKSC 58, [2014] 3 W.L.R. 1367; Lee (2015) J. Eq. 94; but cf. Ho (2015) 131 L.Q.R. 213; Gummow (2015) 41 Aust. Bar Rev. 5; Millett (2015) UK Supreme Court Yearbook 193; Turner [2015] C.L.J. 188; Davies (2015) 78 M.L.R. 681.
- 797.  A recent example is Main v Giambrone & Law [2017] EWCA Civ 1193 (wrongful payment out of deposits held by solicitors), though the judgment also considers common law damages.
- 798. See, e.g. Regal (Hastings) Ltd v Gulliver [1942] 1 All E.R. 378, [1967] 2 A.C. 134n.; Phipps v Boardman [1967] 2 A.C. 46.
- 799. See JJ Harrison (Properties) Ltd v Harrison [2001] EWCA Civ 1295, [2002] 1 B.C.L.C. 162; and Gwembe Valley Development Co Ltd v Koshy (No.3) [2003] EWCA Civ 1048, [2004] 1 B.C.L.C. 131.
- 800. See the discussion in Warman International Ltd v Dwyer (1995) 182 C.L.R. 544. It may be necessary to elect between an account of profits and the common law claim to damages: Tang Man Sit v Capacious Investments Ltd [1996] 1 A.C. 514.
- 801. FHR European Ventures LLP v Cedar Capital Partners LLC [2014] UKSC 45, [2014] 3 W.L.R. 535, following Att-Gen of Hong Kong v Reid [1994] 1 A.C. 324, PC; see Gummow (2015) 131 L.Q.R. 21. See also below, para.31-131.
- 802. As to which see discussion in Gwembe Valley Development Co Ltd v Koshy [2003] EWCA Civ 1048, [2004] 1 B.C.L.C. 131; see also Williams v Central Bank of Nigeria [2014] UKSC 10, [2014] 2 W.L.R. 355.
- 803. See by way of illustration only LAC Minerals Ltd v International Corona Resources Ltd [1989] 2 S.C.R. 574 (Canada); Muschinski v Dodds (1985) 160 C.L.R. 653; Warman International Pty Ltd v Dwyer (1995) 182 C.L.R. 544; Grimaldi v Chameleon Mining NL [2012] FCAFC 6, (2012) 287 A.L.J. 22 (Australia). A flexible (in effect remedial) approach may grant the proprietary remedy for appropriate situations, while avoiding its insolvency consequences. See, e.g. Barnett (2015) 35 L.S. 302.
- 804. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.6–043.
- 805. Trustees have always been liable for causing loss to the beneficiaries. The wider right now accepted is often traced back to Nocton v Ashburton [1914] A.C. 932, a case in which the reasoning is not completely clear.
- 806. See, e.g. Také Ltd v BSM Marketing Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 45 (agent for furniture); Premium Real Estate Ltd v Stevens [2009] 2 N.Z.L.R. 384 (estate agent).
- 807. See Bairstow v Queen's Moat House Plc [2001] EWCA Civ 712, [2001] 2 B.C.L.C. 531.
- 808. See Gwembe Valley Development Co Ltd v Koshy (No.3) [2003] EWCA Civ 1048, [2004] 1 B.C.L.C. 131 at [159].
- 809. See Hilton v Barker Booth & Eastwood [2005] UKHL 8, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 567 (conflict of interest between two principals, where damages on a common law basis appear to be envisaged).
- 810. See Canson Enterprises Ltd v Boughton & Co [1991] 4 S.C.R. 534, (1997) 85 D.L.R. (4th) 129.

811. See above, para.31-129.

812. See Swindle v Harrison [1997] 4 All E.R. 705; Gwembe Valley Development Co Ltd v Koshy [2003] EWCA Civ 1048, [2004] 1 B.C.L.C. 131.

813. Bristol & West BS v Mothew [1998] Ch. 1. Contra, Heydon (2014) 20 Trusts and Trustees 1006.

814. See above, paras 31-013, 31-083.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 8. - Obligations of Principal and Agent Inter se
(a) - Duties of Agents
(v) - An Illustration: Bribery

Bribes and secret commissions

31-132

An important illustration of the operation of the duty of loyalty, and of the conflict and no-profit rules within it, is provided by the law relating to the taking of bribes and the receipt of secret commissions, ⁸¹⁵ including the entering into of agreements on the understanding that such payments will be forthcoming from the party negotiated with. ⁸¹⁶ Here we encounter an overlap between common law and equity. The breach will justify dismissal of an agent acting under a bilateral contract, ⁸¹⁷ and negative any right to remuneration or indemnity on the transaction in question, ⁸¹⁸ whether or not the principal has suffered loss as a consequence. ⁸¹⁹ The agent will be accountable in equity for the bribe and incidental profits. There has been considerable controversy whether equity will require the agent to hold such gains on constructive trust for the principal, but it has recently been decided that the bribe is so held. ⁸²⁰ A bribe-taker can also be liable in damages for fraud, subject to election between these remedies which becomes final on judgment. ⁸²¹ The briber is similarly liable. ⁸²² The principal is not, however, entitled to double recovery, but can only recover the amount of the bribe and any additional loss he can prove; satisfaction of judgment against one will bar an action against the other except for any excess. ⁸²³ Practices permitting undisclosed commissions will not be upheld. ⁸²⁴ If the principal knows, however, that the agent is receiving a payment from the other party, or leaves it to the agent to look to the other party for remuneration, and makes no objection, or authorises the agent to act in a market where he knows this is usual, he cannot afterwards claim a breach of duty. ⁸²⁵

^{815.} Anangel Atlas Cia Naviera SA v Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries Ltd [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 167, 171; Fiona Trust & Holding Corp v Privalov [2010] EWHC 3199 (Comm) at [1385] et seq. See in general Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), art.49 and as to the position of third parties, above paras 31-073 et seq.

^{816.} See above, para.31-073, for the definition of a bribe and in general. See also Vol.I, paras 29-164 et seq. As to the criminal law, see the Bribery Act 2010.

^{817.} Boston Deep Sea Fishing and Ice Co v Ansell (1888) 39 Ch. D. 339; Swale v Ipswich Tannery Ltd (1906) 11 Com. Cas. 88.

^{818.} Below, paras 31-161, 31-163.

^{819.} Rhodes v Macalister (1923) 29 Com. Cas. 19; and see Shipway v Broadwood [1899] 1 Q.B. 369. The agent cannot recover an unpaid bribe from a third party: Harrington v Victoria Graving Docks (1878) 3 Q.B.D. 549; but cf. Meadow Schama & Co v C Mitchell & Co Ltd [1973] E.G.D. 252 (sum promised after commission earned: not a bribe).

^{820.} FHR European Ventures LLP v Cedar Capital Partners LLC [2014] UKSC 45, [2014] 3 W.L.R.

535: see above, para.31-130.

821. Mahesan v Malaysian Government Officers' Co-operative Housing Society Ltd [1979] A.C. 374.

822. Above, para.31-073.

823. Mahesan's case, above, at 383; above, para.31–073. But cf. Logicrose Ltd v Southend United Football Club Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1256 (rescission of contract with briber and recovery of bribe from agent).

824. Fullwood v Hurley [1928] 1 K.B. 498.

825. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.6–089 n.680.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 31 - Agency

Section 8. - Obligations of Principal and Agent Inter se

(a) - Duties of Agents

(vi) - Agent Holding Money for Principal

Trustee or debtor?

31-133

⚠ Where the agent holds money on account of his principal, whether emanating from his principal or emanating from a third party and received on his principal's account, a question may arise as to whether it is the principal's money which he holds on trust or whether he is simply a debtor to his principal. Although it is possible to suggest indications as to when the property is held on trust (for example, where it is received in pursuance of a single transaction ⁸²⁶ as opposed to a group of transactions in respect of which a general account is to be rendered ⁸²⁷) the present trend is to approach the matter functionally and ask whether the trust relationship is appropriate to the commercial relationship in which the parties find themselves, or whether the money was intended to be held separately or used as part of the agent's normal cash flow, and subject to a relationship of debtor and creditor only. ⁸²⁸ ⚠

Interest

31-134

Under the Senior Courts Act 1981 ⁸²⁹ the court has power in any proceedings before it to award interest on all or any part of a debt or damages for which judgment is given or payment made before judgment. This has rendered many of the old cases on this topic obsolete. But where the agent is a trustee, it is fundamental that he is not allowed to make any profit from his trust without his principal's informed consent. Unless, therefore, he has been specifically permitted to retain interest, any interest earned on the trust property is itself trust property. ⁸³⁰ If the trust property does not earn interest the trustee does not have to pay interest. He may, however, be in breach of trust for failing to generate interest, and in this event he will be liable for his breach of trust. ⁸³¹ It has been held that a stakeholder is not a trustee of the stake he holds and thus is not liable to account to either party for interest earned on the stake. ⁸³² trust: see Lewin on Trusts, 19th edn (2014), paras 8-040 et seq.

^{826.} e.g. Westpac Banking Corp v Savin [1985] 2 N.Z.L.R. 41.

^{827.} See Burdick v Garrick (1870) L.R. 5 Ch. App. 233; Kirkham v Peel (1880) 43 L.T. 171; 44 L.T. 195; Henry v Hammond [1913] 2 K.B. 515; Neste Oy v Lloyds Bank Plc [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 658 (ship's agents); Kingscroft Insurance Co Ltd v HS Weavers (Underwriting) Agencies Ltd [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 187; Canadian Pacific Air Lines Ltd v Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce (1987) 42 D.L.R. (4th) 375; Stephens Travel Service Intl Pty Ltd v Qantas Airways Ltd (1988) 13 N.S.W.L.R. 331 (travel agent). An agent may of course hold under a Quistclose

828.

⚠ See Walker v Corboy (1990) 19 N.S.W.L.R. 382 (a valuable survey); Lord Napier and Ettrick v Hunter [1993] A.C. 713, 744; Re Fleet Disposal Services [1995] 1 B.C.L.C. 345; Style Financial Services Ltd v Bank of Scotland 1997 S.C.L.R. 633; Paragon Finance Plc v DB Thakerar & Co [1999] 1 All E.R. 400, 415–416; Re Japan Leasing (Europe) Plc [1999] B.P.I.R. 911; Triffit Nurseries v Salads Etcetera Ltd [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 737; Pearson v Lehman Brothers Finance SA [2011] EWCA Civ 1544 at [68] (trust sustained even though identification of varying beneficial ownership of assets would be complex); Bieber v Teathers Ltd [2012] EWHC 190 (Ch), [2012] B.C.L.C. 58 at [25] (on appeal [2012] EWCA Civ 1466, [2013] 1 B.C.L.C. 248). It was said that Neste Oy v Lloyds Bank Plc [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 658 (see Main Work, Vol.II, para.31–133 n.821) “cannot be justified”, in Angove's Pty Ltd v Bailey [2016] UKSC 47, [2016] 1 W.L.R. 3179 at [31].

829.

s.35A, inserted by Administration of Justice Act 1982 s.15.

830.

Brown v IRC [1965] A.C. 244. Solicitors are subject to special rules relating to interest earned on clients' money (see Solicitors' Accounts Rules 2011, made under Solicitors' Act 1974 ss.32, 34).

831.

See Lewin on Trusts, 19th edn (2014), para.39–052.

832.

Potters (A Firm) v Loppert [1973] Ch. 399; following Harrington v Hoggart (1830) 1 B. & Ad. 577. The Estate Agents Act 1979 ss.12, 13 provides for money received in the course of estate agency work to be held on trust: but the Rules made as to interest (SI 1981/1520, as amended) do not apply to money held as stakeholder.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 8. - Obligations of Principal and Agent Inter se
(a) - Duties of Agents
(vii) - Estoppel as to Principal's Title

When agent estopped as to title

31-135

An agent cannot in general dispute the title of his principal ⁸³³ or set up the right of a third party to the property in the goods, or the documents of title to the goods, with which he is entrusted by his principal. ⁸³⁴ It was formerly the law that if he was a bailee he could not (subject to exceptions) set up a better title to the goods bailed than that of his bailor (jus tertii). But this rule was abolished by s.8(1) of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977. ⁸³⁵

^{833.} Lyell v Kennedy (1889) 14 App. Cas. 437; and see Williams v Pott (1871) L.R. 12 Eq. 149.

^{834.} Blaustein v Maltz, Mitchell & Co [1937] 2 K.B. 142; Tassell v Cooper (1850) 9 C.B. 509, 533; White v Bartlett (1832) 9 Bing. 378.

^{835.} See Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), para.17–83. He may apply for the joinder of the third party: De Franco v Commr of Police for the Metropolis, The Times, May 8, 1987.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 8. - Obligations of Principal and Agent Inter se
(b) - Rights of Agents

General

31-136

⚠ In general the common law itself confers few rights on agents: it has been assumed that it is the principal who requires protection against the agent rather than the reverse. Attempts to impose fiduciary liabilities on principals have been unsuccessful⁸³⁶ though there seems no reason in principle why they should not succeed in appropriate cases. Where the Commercial Agents (Council Directive) Regulations⁸³⁷ apply, however, reg.4, which in general requires the principal, no less than the agent, to act “dutifully and in good faith”, imposes duties on the principal to provide necessary documentation, inform the agent of acceptance, refusal and non-execution of contracts procured by the agent, and, most important, notify the agent within a reasonable period once he anticipates that the volume of transactions will be significantly lower than the agent could normally have expected (e.g. by withdrawal of a manufactured line). These duties are unexcludable,⁸³⁸ and at the very least provide an opportunity for arguments that might not be possible at common law.⁸³⁹ ⚠

^{836.} See Jirna Ltd v Mister Donut of Canada Ltd (1973) 40 D.L.R. (3d) 303; Jani-King (GB) Ltd v Pula Enterprises Ltd [2007] EWHC 2433 (QB), [2008] 1 All E.R.(Comm) 451.

^{837.} Above, para.31-017.

^{838.} Commercial Agents Regulations reg.5(1).

^{839.} ⚠ See discussion in Simpson v Grant & Bowman Ltd [2006] Eu. L.R. 933. See also McGee [2013] J.B.L. 534, 541–543; Tosato, “Commercial Agency and the Duty to Act in Good Faith” [2016] O.J.L.S. 661. In Monk v Largo Foods Ltd [2016] EWHC 1837 (Comm) it was held that reg.4 did not affect the power of a principal to terminate at will when the contract was “subject to successful review”.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 8. - Obligations of Principal and Agent Inter se
(b) - Rights of Agents
(i) - Remuneration

Right to remuneration

31-137

It is the duty of the principal to pay his agent any commission or other remuneration contractually agreed upon. ⁸⁴⁰ When there is an express term as to remuneration, the right to payment and the amount will depend on that term. Thus if the contract provides that the amount of commission is left to the discretion of the principal, the court cannot determine the basis and rate of commission, since to do so would be making a new agreement between the parties and transferring to the court the discretion vested in the principal. ⁸⁴¹ There is an implied agreement to pay remuneration whenever a person is employed to act as an agent under circumstances which raise the presumption that he would, to the knowledge of the principal, have expected to be paid. ⁸⁴² The amount of the payment and the conditions on which it is payable will depend on the circumstances. If there is a custom or usage of the particular trade regulating the payment of remuneration, it may be presumed, in the absence of any express agreement to the contrary, that the parties contracted for the payment of the remuneration in accordance with this custom or usage. ⁸⁴³ But if there is no proof of such custom and no express agreement, then a reasonable remuneration is payable. ⁸⁴⁴ In estimating what is a reasonable remuneration, evidence of the bargainings between the parties is admissible as showing the value put upon the agent's services by the parties. ⁸⁴⁵ The Commercial Agents (Council Directive) Regulations ⁸⁴⁶ provide similar rules for cases when there are no express contract provisions. ⁸⁴⁷

Claims on a restitutionary quantum meruit

31-138

Where services are not rendered under a contract but are freely accepted, the courts have sometimes awarded a reasonable sum on a restitutionary basis. For example, the original contract may have been made without authority, ratification being impossible ⁸⁴⁸; or unenforceable because the terms were too vague; or subsequently rescinded. ⁸⁴⁹ The cases do not for the most part concern agency, but a recent leading case bases recovery on unjust enrichment. ⁸⁵⁰

Commission

31-139

The remuneration of the agent typically, but not always, ⁸⁵¹ takes the form of a commission, being a percentage of the value of the transaction the agent is to bring about for the principal. In such cases the agent does not become entitled to his commission until the event has occurred upon which his entitlement arises. What this event is must be ascertained from the terms of the agency contract. In most cases where the agent is engaged to find a third party to enter into a contract with his principal there will be little difficulty because the event will occur when the principal and the third party enter into the contract which the agent was engaged to bring about. The agent's task is then successfully completed.

Estate agents ⁸⁵²

31-140

The majority of cases on commission concern that payable to estate agents. ⁸⁵³ Although the context is specialised, the principles are undoubtedly of general application, subject to differences of commercial background. The present somewhat detailed discussion is retained because of the large number of cases give good illustrations of the reasoning employed for commission disputes in general. ⁸⁵⁴ The decisions turn on the words used in the particular agreement. The difficulties have arisen in this context because estate agents have frequently considered that their task is completed and that they should therefore be entitled to commission when they introduce to their principal (the potential vendor) a person who shows a real interest in buying. This stage is normally reached when the potential purchaser makes an offer "subject to contract" or "subject to survey" or subject to some other condition. But in law such an offer, even if accepted, does not create a contract between the potential vendor and the potential purchaser. ⁸⁵⁵ The contract is not made until ⁸⁵⁶ There is a third stage to the transaction, completion, at which the vendor hands the title deeds to the purchaser in exchange for the purchase price. The agent is engaged to bring about a sale, but he generally wants his commission before sale, i.e. at the "subject to contract" stage. He is free to stipulate whatever event he wishes in his agency contract, but it has been said that it is "the common understanding of men that the agent's commission is payable out of the purchase price", ⁸⁵⁷ and it requires fairly clear words to entitle the agent to commission if no sale is made. ⁸⁵⁸ In all cases however the question is whether the event upon which it is stipulated that commission is due has taken place.

Commission on the introduction of a purchaser

31-141

It is not unusual for estate agents to stipulate for their commission on some such event as "the introduction of a purchaser", ⁸⁵⁹ or on "finding a purchaser" ⁸⁶⁰ or "finding someone to buy" ⁸⁶¹; in one case commission was payable "in the event of business resulting". ⁸⁶² Two questions arise here: as to the meaning of "introduce" where that word is used, and as to the meaning of "purchaser". As to the first, it has recently been held by the Court of Appeal in Foxtons Ltd v Bicknell ⁸⁶³ that the introduction must be "to the purchase and not merely to the property" ⁸⁶⁴ and that the words used referred to "a person who becomes a purchaser as a result of the introduction" ⁸⁶⁵; thus where the property was eventually sold to a person reintroduced by another agent, commission was not due to the first agent. This decision, which is becoming a leading case, certainly reduces the availability of commission, and the possibility of two commissions being due, and can be said to take a different course from that normally followed, which is to solve such questions by inquiring whether an introduction was the (or an) "effective cause" of the purchase. ⁸⁶⁶ The new reasoning may direct attention back to the idea that commission is normally to be paid out of the price, but it cannot avoid the consequences of clear wording designed to achieve a different object. ⁸⁶⁷ As to the second question, whenever the event is referable to a contract ultimately taking place, commission is not earned until that contract has been made. ⁸⁶⁸ Thus, if the agent introduces ⁸⁶⁹ a person who makes an offer "subject to contract" which is accepted, he does not become entitled to commission, because such a transaction is not in law a contract at all. ⁸⁷⁰ The agent's entitlement cannot, in such a case, arise until the parties have entered into a contract of sale. For example, if the event is the introduction or finding of a "purchaser", the person introduced or found is not a "purchaser" until he actually purchases by entering into a contract. Moreover, if the person introduced withdraws after contract but before completion, whether rightfully or wrongfully vis-à-vis the vendor, the agent is no longer entitled to commission, because the person he introduced was not a "purchaser" since he never purchased. ⁸⁷¹ But it seems that if the vendor wrongfully (vis-à-vis the purchaser) withdraws, the agent's entitlement to commission may not be lost ⁸⁷²; though this must depend on the precise words used, ⁸⁷³ and his right may sometimes be one for damages for breach of an implied term. ⁸⁷⁴

Commission upon the introduction of a person "ready, willing and able to purchase" ⁸⁷⁵

31-142

Because it is not possible for the agent to obtain commission before sale in the above cases, some estate agents drafted their contracts to provide that commission was due upon the introduction of a person “ready, willing and able to purchase” or something similar. ⁸⁷⁶ By this means it was hoped to define the event (viz the introduction) without reference to the ultimate contract of sale. The courts, however, applied a strict test and held that the agent will only be entitled to commission if the person introduced exactly fits the description of the person upon whose introduction the entitlement arises. For this purpose it does not matter what adjectives are used to describe the potential purchaser; the introduction must be of a person who fulfils the qualifications specified, for until this time the agent will not have brought about the event which entitles him to commission.

31-143

If the person introduced is to be “able” to purchase, he must be able to do so in every way, and this includes having the financial ability. ⁸⁷⁷ It seems that he is not able to do so if at the relevant time the vendor has sold or contracted to sell the house to another. ⁸⁷⁸ If he is to be “willing”, he shows that he is not willing if he withdraws before completion. ⁸⁷⁹ He does not show his willingness merely by entering into an agreement “subject to contract” or “subject to survey” or some other such condition, for he has in such a case reserved for himself a locus poenitentiae and is not, therefore, shown to be willing. ⁸⁸⁰ However, if the agent does introduce a person who is shown to fulfil the required description, he becomes entitled to commission although no contract of sale has been made. Thus, it has been said, an unqualified offer to purchase by the person introduced will normally entitle the agent to his commission under a “ready, willing and able” contract because the potential purchaser has thereby been shown to be “ready, willing and able”. ⁸⁸¹ The terms upon which he was willing and able to purchase must however have been terms upon which at the material time the vendor had expressed a willingness to sell. ⁸⁸² The question whether the person introduced fulfils the contractual description is a question of fact. ⁸⁸³ Thus, in one case the contract provided for commission to be earned upon the introduction of a person who made an offer to purchase on terms to which the vendor might “assent”. The majority of the Court of Appeal said that this assent did not need to be such assent as to make a legally binding contract of sale, and that it could be proved that the vendor did “assent”, within the meaning of that word in the contract, without having communicated her assent to the potential purchaser so as to make a contract of sale. If she had assented, the event would have occurred and commission would have been earned. ⁸⁸⁴

Other types of estate agent's agreement

31-144

⚠ The same principles apply to other forms of wording. Thus, in Midgley Estates Ltd v Hand ⁸⁸⁵ and Scheggia v Gradwell ⁸⁸⁶ ⚠ the agents stipulated for commission if a person introduced by them entered into a legally binding contract. Contracts were exchanged, and in each case the agents were held to be entitled to their commission although in the first case the purchaser withdrew before completion, and in the second the contract would not have been enforced by specific performance. On the other hand, in Peter Long & Partners v Burns ⁸⁸⁷ the contract was voidable, and the agent was not entitled to his commission because the person introduced had not signed a legally binding contract. In Drewery & Drewery v Ware-Lane ⁸⁸⁸ the agents stipulated for commission when the potential purchaser introduced by them signed their “purchaser's agreement” and the vendor signed their “vendor's agreement”. Both these documents were “subject to contract”, but the court held that, because both documents were signed, the stipulated for event had occurred, and commission was due, although no sale resulted. A contract may entitle an agent to commission for negotiating a sale to a person whom he did not introduce. ⁸⁸⁹

Summary of principles relating to estate agents

31-145

"First, when an agent claims that he has earned the right to commission, the test is whether upon the proper interpretation of the contract between the principal and the agent the event has happened upon which commission is to be paid. Secondly, there are no special principles of construction applicable to commission contracts with estate agents.⁸⁹⁰ Thirdly, contracts under which a principal is bound to pay commission for an introduction which does not result in a sale must be expressed in clear language".⁸⁹¹ Similar principles will be applied in cases where other types of agent claim commission.⁸⁹²

"Sole" and "exclusive" agencies

31-146

It seems that the estate agent's contract is prima facie a unilateral one, viz the agent earns his commission by doing an act but himself makes no promise.⁸⁹³ The principal may before commission is earned sell the property himself⁸⁹⁴ or through another agent; depending on the terms of his offer⁸⁹⁵ he can reject persons introduced, and take his property "off the market" without liability.⁸⁹⁶ But a sole agency contract is usually said to be bilateral, the agent promising to use his best endeavours to sell the property.⁸⁹⁷ Such an arrangement does not normally mean that the principal is not entitled to sell himself⁸⁹⁸ or perhaps (at any rate if he gives notice) to decide not to sell at all⁸⁹⁹; but a sale through another agent would be a breach of contract or sometimes entitle the agent to commission.⁹⁰⁰ Similar analysis may be applied to other contracts with "canvassing agents".⁹⁰¹

Agent must be effective cause of transaction

31-147

It is traditional to say that, subject to clear indications to the contrary,⁹⁰² where the agency contract provides that the agent earns his remuneration upon bringing about a certain transaction, he is not entitled to such remuneration unless he is the⁹⁰³ effective cause of the transaction being brought about. This is often said to result from the implication of a term⁹⁰⁴; but the rules for such implication are not generous and an appropriate result must frequently be obtained by interpretation of the contract: any principle is certainly subject to contrary indications.⁹⁰⁵ On this point there is a substantial body of case law, resulting from the use of words such as "find" or "introduce" a purchaser.⁹⁰⁶ Thus in *Millar v Radford*⁹⁰⁷ the plaintiff was retained by the defendant to find a purchaser of the defendant's property or, if that was not possible, a tenant. A tenant was found and the plaintiff was paid his commission. Over a year later the tenant bought the property from the defendants. The plaintiff claimed commission although he had not been in any way concerned with the sale. The Court of Appeal held that he was not entitled to commission, since he had not brought about a sale and was not the effective cause of it taking place. The agent need not, however, be the immediate cause of the transaction, provided that there is sufficient connection between his act and the ultimate transaction.⁹⁰⁸ Thus, an auctioneer was instructed to sell the island of Herm by auction or otherwise, but the island failed to reach the reserve price at the auction. A potential buyer then asked the auctioneer for the name of the owner and, upon receiving it, purchased the island directly from him. It was held that the auctioneer was entitled to his commission.⁹⁰⁹ If the transaction which results in a sale is different from that which the agent was engaged to bring about, it will be a matter of construction whether the parties intended remuneration to be payable in the changed circumstances.⁹¹⁰ If the agent was the effective cause of the ultimate transaction the court may make the necessary implication or may imply a new contract from the fact that the agent continued to act at the principal's request towards completion of the new transaction. But if the ultimate transaction was of a wholly different nature from that contemplated or worked towards, the agent may not be entitled to remuneration. Thus, where an agent employed to find a buyer introduced a government department which then compulsorily acquired the property, he was not entitled to commission.⁹¹¹

No contractual quantum meruit where commission not earned

31-148

Remuneration under a quantum meruit may be awarded where there is a contract but it does not provide for remuneration, or does not do so for the circumstances which have arisen.⁹¹² But where the contract makes express provision for the agent to be remunerated only upon the happening of a certain event, he will not normally be entitled to claim reasonable remuneration if it does not happen.⁹¹³ Such a claim would depend upon an implied promise to pay a reasonable sum if the event does not occur, and such an implication cannot normally be made because it would be inconsistent with the express terms of the contract.⁹¹⁴ Thus, an estate agent was held not to be entitled to payment on a quantum meruit when the principal sold the property elsewhere.⁹¹⁵ The implication of a term that a reasonable sum should be paid when the event upon which remuneration is due does not occur will therefore be rare.⁹¹⁶

Commercial agents

31-149

⚠ For commercial agents, the Commercial Agents (Council Directive) Regulations⁹¹⁷ contain provisions as to when commission is payable. As some of these are specifically made non-excludable to the detriment of the agent, it seems likely that the rest may be excluded by contrary agreement.⁹¹⁸ Thus the agent is entitled to commission where a transaction has been concluded as a result of⁹¹⁹ his action, where a transaction is concluded with a third party whom he has previously acquired as a customer for transactions of the same kind, or where a transaction is concluded during the period covered by the agency contract where he has a right to a specific geographical area and the transaction is entered into with a customer belonging to that area or group.⁹²⁰ There are provisions, some unexcludable, concerning the time at which commission is payable.⁹²¹ There is also an unexcludable provision that the right to commission can only be extinguished when it is established that the contract between the third party and the principal will not be executed, and that fact is due to a reason for which the principal is not to blame.⁹²² ⚠ The agent has a right to receive information as to commission, and extracts from the principal's books.⁹²³

Opportunity to earn commission⁹²⁴

31-150

The employment of an agent on the terms that his commission is to be payable on results does not deprive the principal of his freedom to take any step which results in the agent being deprived of his opportunity to earn commission, unless there is an express promise or trade custom to the contrary, or unless a promise to the contrary must be implied to give business efficacy to the contract or otherwise to effect the intention of the parties. Thus where a person was employed as sole agent to sell his principal's coal for seven years, it was held that there was no implied term that the principal would not sell the colliery within that period and so deprive the agent of the chance of earning commission.⁹²⁵ Where a steamer was chartered for 18 months under a charterparty which provided for payment to a broker of commission on the hire paid and earned under the charterparty, it was held that on the sale by the owners of the ship during the currency of the charterparty, the broker was not entitled to any commission for the unexpired period of the charterparty.⁹²⁶ Both these cases can perhaps be explained on the basis that "a person is entitled to deal with his property as he chooses, and a person is entitled either to carry on his business or give up carrying on his business as he wishes".⁹²⁷ But in some cases there may be more room for the implication of a term. Thus an express promise is sometimes treated as giving a right to a "continuing benefit"⁹²⁸ so that it is operative unless it can be shown that there is something to "qualify what on the face of it appears to be an absolute obligation".⁹²⁹ Thus where a shirt manufacturer agreed to employ a traveller for five years on the terms that the traveller would do his utmost, for remuneration by commission, to obtain orders for goods manufactured or sold by the manufacturer or forwarded by sample to the traveller, it was held that the traveller could recover substantial damages from the manufacturer for not forwarding samples at the end of two years: and further that the manufacturer was not excused from fulfilling his contract by the destruction of his factory by fire.⁹³⁰ And where an agent's commission depended on matters occurring during the performance of a contract, and the principal decided for his own purposes to break the contract, a term was implied in the agent's favour.⁹³¹

Termination of contract

31-151

⚠ Where any contract between principal and agent is unilateral the principal may be able to terminate it, i.e. revoke his offer, before the agent has earned commission, ⁹³² except in those cases where a collateral contract not to revoke is appropriate. ⁹³³ Where the contract is bilateral, however, the termination may be a breach of contract, rendering the principal liable for accrued commission, or in damages for loss of the prospect of earning commission. ⁹³⁴ Whether notice is required to terminate a continuing agency contract of indefinite duration depends also on its express or implied terms. No term will necessarily be implied to prevent either party terminating summarily, but such an implication may be made if it is appropriate, which it usually will be. This may be so where the contract is analogous to a contract of employment, or where the agent undertakes to use his best endeavours to carry out his principal's business, or has expended capital sums to carry out his duties. In such cases, for example, a term may be implied that either party must give the other reasonable notice of termination. ⁹³⁵ ⚠ Such a contract can, of course, also be determined by the principal in consequence of the agent's repudiatory breach. ⁹³⁶ But if it is the principal whose breach is repudiatory, the agent likewise can determine the contract. ⁹³⁷ The question of termination of contract is not the same as that of termination of authority, which is dealt with below. ⁹³⁸

Termination: where Commercial Agents Regulations applicable

31-152

Where the Commercial Agents (Council Directive) Regulations ⁹³⁹ apply, special restrictions operate as between principal and agent on the "termination" of an agency contract; though these again cannot affect the principal's power to terminate summarily the authority of the agent to bind him. First, where the agency contract is concluded for an indefinite period, either party may terminate it by notice, ⁹⁴⁰ and minimum periods, which can be extended but not reduced by agreement, are specified for this. ⁹⁴¹ Secondly, an agency contract for a fixed period which continues to be performed after the period has expired is converted into a contract for an indefinite period and so subject to the limits already referred to. ⁹⁴² Thirdly, it is provided by reg.16 that the regulations do not affect:

"... the operation of any enactment or rule of law which provides for the immediate termination of the agency contract (a) because of the failure of one party to carry out all or part of his obligations under that contract; or (b) where exceptional circumstances arise".

⚠ For common law, the reference must be to the rule of (what a common lawyer would call) repudiatory breach of contract, and (something similar to, but not necessarily the same as) frustration. It is not entirely clear however exactly what para.(a) is to be taken to refer to. It plainly includes situations where the guilty party's behaviour is simply repudiatory; but it is uncertain whether it also includes (what common lawyers would call) breach of condition. On one side it may be said the reference to "all or part of its obligations" indicates that the latter must be so; on the other, that the parties must not be permitted themselves to decide what a repudiatory breach is. ⁹⁴³ The second view has been accepted in the United Kingdom in a case ⁹⁴⁴ in which it was also held that reg.16 applied ⁹⁴⁵ even though the innocent party actually terminated by notice, if he was at the time aware of a repudiatory breach and could be regarded as acting "because of" it: this was said to ensue from the wording of the regulation. ⁹⁴⁶ Finally, except where the contract is justifiably terminated by the principal for the agent's breach, ⁹⁴⁷ ⚠ or is terminated by the agent without justification, ⁹⁴⁸ the agent is entitled to be indemnified or compensated for damage. ⁹⁴⁹ This entitlement to a payment on termination is absolute. It therefore applies not only when the agent is unjustifiably dismissed ⁹⁵⁰ or when he himself justifiably terminates the contract by reason of circumstances attributable to the principal,⁹⁵¹ but also when the contract is for a fixed term which expires,⁹⁵²  or where the agent dies,⁹⁵³ retires,⁹⁵⁴ becomes too old, infirm or ill to continue his activities,⁹⁵⁵ or bankrupt.⁹⁵⁶ It has been held that it does not apply to a partial termination.⁹⁵⁷ Although proceedings for wrongful termination and unpaid commission are contractual as regards jurisdiction⁹⁵⁸ it has been held that proceedings for indemnity or compensation are not contractual but statutory.⁹⁵⁹ Claims in respect of either must be notified within one year of the termination of the agency.⁹⁶⁰

Indemnity and compensation: indemnity

31-153

 An indemnity is a sum calculated on an equitable basis with regard to the extent to which the agent has brought the principal new customers or has significantly increased the volume of business with existing customers and the principal continues to derive substantial benefits from such customers after the cessation of the contract.⁹⁶¹  It must take into account the commission lost by the agent on business transacted with such customers.⁹⁶² But it relates principally therefore to benefits rather than losses, and should not be affected by notions of mitigation of damages.⁹⁶³ It is limited to a “figure equivalent to an indemnity for one year calculated from the commercial agent’s annual remuneration over the preceding five years and if the contract goes back less than five years the indemnity shall be calculated on the average for the period in question”.⁹⁶⁴ The indemnity is the principal remedy in German law, where there is a substantial body of authority as to how it is to be calculated.⁹⁶⁵ Under the United Kingdom regulations it applies only where specifically provided for,⁹⁶⁶ though its one-year limit makes it often less onerous to the principal than compensation. The right to damages (for wrongful termination under the general law) is not excluded.⁹⁶⁷

Compensation

31-154

 The other remedy is compensation, and under the United Kingdom Regulations this remedy applies unless the agency contract otherwise provides.⁹⁶⁸ The right cannot be derogated from to the detriment of the agent before the expiry of the contract (but may by a settlement afterwards).⁹⁶⁹  It covers “damage he suffers as a result of termination of his relations with his principal”, and particularly when the termination takes place either in circumstances which deprive the agent of commission “which proper performance of the agency contract would have secured him” and provide benefits to the principal; or have not enabled the agent to amortise costs and expenses incurred in performance of his function.⁹⁷⁰ It seems therefore on the wording used to be based on loss rather than profit: but it again seems that principles of mitigation should not apply.⁹⁷¹ It is usually regarded as representing the approach of French law to this problem,⁹⁷² and for that reason some courts have had recourse to evidence of, or information concerning, French law, though such a method is not to be justified from EU law itself.⁹⁷³ Since it applies where the termination involves no breach of contract, it might seem to be a narrow form of indemnity; but as stated above it may in fact work out at a sum exceeding the indemnity by reason of the indemnity’s one-year rule: French courts have awarded sums calculated by reference to two years’ commission.⁹⁷⁴ It has been held that the right to damages at common law persists,⁹⁷⁵  though such a right is not preserved in the wording as it is for the indemnity⁹⁷⁶ and the proposition seems doubtful in view of the wide phraseology relating to compensation in it and the emphasis in that phraseology on loss. However, if the notion of compensation is in this context to be developed independently, there may be value in retaining the common law rules as to damages even though there is no specific reservation of the right to such damages.⁹⁷⁷

Calculation of compensation

31-155

! The method of assessment of compensation for the United Kingdom ⁹⁷⁸ was laid down by the recent House of Lords' decision in Lonsdale v Howard & Hallam Ltd, ⁹⁷⁹ which superseded earlier authority, of which a considerable amount (of varied quality) had been accumulating. ⁹⁸⁰ Such an idea of compensation has so far been unique to French law. The opinion of Lord Hoffmann accepts the French notion that the agent is regarded "as having had a share in the goodwill of the principal's business which he has helped to create". ⁹⁸¹ "This means, primarily, the right to future commissions 'which proper performance of the agency contract would have procured him.'" ⁹⁸² It appears that in its implementation French courts have regularly awarded, though not by way of applying a rule, a sum equivalent to twice the average annual gross commission over the previous three years. It is clear however that other countries are not under any obligation to follow any one state's method of calculation. ⁹⁸³ The French practice appears to be based on the assumption that agencies in France change hands at the sort of valuation mentioned above, whereas there is no such market in the United Kingdom. ⁹⁸⁴ The courts of the United Kingdom are entitled, therefore, to use their own methods of calculating the loss for which the compensation is payable. "What has to be valued is the income stream which the agency would have generated". ⁹⁸⁵ This should be done "by reference to the value of the agency on the assumption that it continued: the amount which the agent could reasonably expect to receive for the right to stand in his shoes, continue to perform the duties of the agency and receive the commission which he would have received". ⁹⁸⁶ If the agency was unassignable, it must be assumed that a purchaser would have been entitled to take it over, but not that he would thereby acquire an assignable asset. ⁹⁸⁷ The court would require information about "the standard methodology for the valuation of such businesses", though there might be cases where courts could eventually take judicial notice of the "standard case". ⁹⁸⁸ In the case in question the business concerned was declining, and the agency would not be likely to change hands at any considerable value. The court would therefore have been justified in awarding nothing, and this is a significant part of the decision. ⁹⁸⁹ However, a small award made by the judge (much less than the amount claimed) was approved. By the same reasoning, the converse might have been the case had the business been increasing. It was also said in the Court of Appeal that:

"... if the agency is terminated in circumstances where the agent has not been able to amortise expenses which he has incurred on the advice of the principal in setting up the agency, the value attaching to the business may or may not provide sufficient compensation ... the agent is entitled to recover whatever loss he can show he has suffered which in a case of this kind might consist in whole or in part of the amount of the unamortized expenses." ⁹⁹⁰ !

Commission after cessation of agency

31-156

The duration of an agent's common law right to remuneration depends on the construction of the terms of the agency agreement. These will frequently provide, expressly or by implication, that the right to remuneration is coterminous with his employment and ceases upon the termination of the agency. ⁹⁹¹ If this is so, a principal is not normally liable to pay commission upon orders sent by a customer originally introduced to the principal by an agent after the latter has ceased to represent the principal. ⁹⁹² But the agency contract may provide that the right to commission accrues before the time when the commission becomes payable. In such cases, the commission must be paid after termination of the agency contract, because the agent's right to receive it arose when the contract subsisted. The agent has a vested right to the money, and termination of his contract does not deprive him of it. So, if the agreement is to pay commission on "repeat orders", commission will usually be payable on such orders even if the agency has meanwhile terminated ⁹⁹³; however, the term "repeats" may, on the proper construction of the contract, refer only to repeat orders received during the continuance of the agency. ⁹⁹⁴ An undertaking "to cover you with an agreed commission on any other business transacted with your friends", in return for an introduction, was held to entitle the agent to commission on a subsequent transaction resulting from an advertisement in a newspaper; the condition was not too vague to be enforceable. ⁹⁹⁵ And where commission was payable when advertisements secured by the agent were published and not when orders for them were obtained by him, it was held that the agent was entitled to commission on advertisements published after the termination of his contract, because the entitlement accrued as soon as the orders were obtained, regardless of the publication date. ⁹⁹⁶ Again, if the agreement is to pay commission as long as the customer does business with the principal, commission will be payable even after the death of the agent. ⁹⁹⁷ The appropriate remedy in such cases will normally be not an order for an account but an award of damages. ⁹⁹⁸

Commercial agents

31-157

⚠ For commercial agents, the Commercial Agents Regulations ⁹⁹⁹ have specific provisions on this point. The agent is entitled to commission on a transaction concluded after the agency contract has been terminated if the transaction is mainly attributable to the agent's efforts and entered into within a reasonable time after termination, or the order reached the principal before the contract terminated.

¹⁰⁰⁰ ⚠ A subsequent commercial agent would not then be so entitled unless "it is equitable because of the circumstances for the commission to be shared between the commercial agents". ¹⁰⁰¹ There is also a provision on "repeat orders". ¹⁰⁰² These provisions operate only in the absence of other agreement.

Overpayment of commission

31-158

If the agency contract provides for the payment of advances against commission and the agent's contract is properly terminated before he has earned sufficient commission to offset the payment, it is a question of interpretation whether or not the overpayment can be recovered. ¹⁰⁰³ An action in restitution would seem to be the form of action most likely to succeed. ¹⁰⁰⁴

Restrictions on activity after cessation of agency

31-159

Agency contracts may contain restrictions on the agent's commercial activity after he has ceased to act for the principal concerned; this is especially so where the agent is an employee. The general validity of such restrictions is governed by the law relating to stipulations in restraint of trade ¹⁰⁰⁵, but when the Commercial Agents Regulations (Council Directive) ¹⁰⁰⁶ are applicable (which would require the agent to be selfemployed), they contain specific provisions of a similar nature, with a requirement of writing. ¹⁰⁰⁷ In principle the restrictions should not apply where the principal wrongfully terminated the contract ¹⁰⁰⁸, but they would apply (insofar as valid and enforceable) if the agent wrongfully terminates it or is justifiably dismissed. ¹⁰⁰⁹

Illegality of service

31-160

An agent cannot recover commission where his acting as agent is illegal, ¹⁰¹⁰ or upon a transaction which is obviously or to his knowledge, illegal, e.g. where he effects a sale of shares in an illegal association, ¹⁰¹¹ or an illegal policy of insurance. ¹⁰¹² This is an application of the general rules as to illegal contracts. ¹⁰¹³

Loss of commission by default or misconduct

31-161

⚠ Where the agent commits a breach of his fiduciary obligations, ¹⁰¹⁴ or is otherwise in serious breach of his duties as agent, ¹⁰¹⁵ or where by his negligence the services which he renders are valueless to the principal, ¹⁰¹⁶ he cannot recover commission and can, if the relationship is a continuing one, be dismissed or his contract may be terminated. ¹⁰¹⁷ This is an application of the general rules as to breach of contract entitling discharge, ¹⁰¹⁸ although it should be noted that the agent's fiduciary obligations are enforced with such stringency that even a slight breach will normally bar him from remuneration, ¹⁰¹⁹ ⚠ and the same will be true where his obligation under the contract is treated as entire. ¹⁰²⁰ The principal can waive the breach, ¹⁰²¹ but waiver will not be implied from the principal's accepting the benefit of the transaction negotiated, ¹⁰²² or suing the agent for a bribe received. ¹⁰²³ Where, however, the breach does not go to the whole of the agent's obligation, he may be able to recover commission ¹⁰²⁴ ⚠; and where the breach is in respect of a severable transaction he may be able to recover commission for services not affected by the breach. ¹⁰²⁵ ⚠

-
- ^{840.} The Estate Agents Act 1979 s.18, requires the agent to give the client certain information as to "prospective liabilities", largely defined in terms of "remuneration", before entering into a contract under which he will "engage in estate agency work": otherwise the contract is not enforceable without the leave of the court (which may be granted subject to conditions). If however the contract is unilateral, viz formed on the introduction of a purchaser, it would seem that such a situation will not strictly arise. Further prescription as to information which must be supplied is made in the Estate Agents (Provision of Information) Regulations 1991 (SI 1991/859). It is considered in Great Eastern Group Ltd v Digby [2011] EWCA Civ 1120, where a majority of the Court of Appeal takes the view "remuneration" includes damages for breach of a sole agency contract.
- ^{841.} Obu v A Strauss & Co Ltd [1951] A.C. 243. See also Taylor v Brewer (1813) 1 M. & S. 290; Roberts v Smith (1859) 4 H. & N. 315; Re Richmond Gate Property Co Ltd [1965] 1 W.L.R. 335.
- ^{842.} Way v Latilla [1937] 3 All E.R. 759; LJ Hooker Ltd v WJ Adams Estates Ltd (1977) 138 C.L.R. 52, 74–75. See below, para.31-138.
- ^{843.} Wilkie v Scottish Aviation, 1956 S.C. 198. The existence of such a custom is not easily proved. A standard scale of charges will not apply unless it is expressly or impliedly incorporated. The mere fact that it is commonly used will not suffice: Debenham v King's College, Cambridge (1884) 1 T.L.R. 170; Drew v Josolyne (1888) 4 T.L.R. 717; Faraday v Tamworth Union (1916) 86 L.J.Ch. 436; but see Re Wolfe, Heller v Wolfe [1952] 2 All E.R. 545; Hugh v Allen & Co Ltd v Holmes [1968] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 348.
- ^{844.} Brown v Nairne (1839) 9 C. & P. 204, 205; Berezovsky v Edmiston & Co Ltd (The Darius) [2011] EWCA Civ 431, [2011] 1 C.L.C. 922 (2.5 per cent, £6m, on sale of yacht reasonable). See Murdoch [1981] Conv. 424, differentiating between cases where the agent is and is not remunerated by results, and suggesting that in the first a scale fee may be appropriate, but for the second a "time and trouble" calculation.
- ^{845.} Way v Latilla [1937] 3 All E.R. 759.
- ^{846.} Above, para.31-017.
- ^{847.} regs 6–9. The regulations do not apply to gratuitous agents: reg.2(2)(a).
- ^{848.} e.g. Craven-Ellis v Canons Ltd [1936] 2 K.B. 403.
- ^{849.} e.g. Faraday v Tamworth Union (1916) 86 L.J. Ch. 436. For a recent example see Cooke v Hopper [2012] EWCA Civ 175.

- 850. Benedetti v Sawiris [2013] UKSC 50, [2014] A.C. 938. See Vol.I, paras 29-080 et seq.; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.7–009; Goff and Jones, Law of Unjust Enrichment, 8th edn (2011), Ch.17. See also MSM Consulting Ltd v United Republic of Tanzania [2009] EWHC 121 (QB), 123 Con. L.R. 154; below, para.31-148.
- 851. For a case (in the context of the Commercial Agents Regulations) where an agent was remunerated by markup see Mercantile International Group Plc v Chuan Soon Huat Industrial Group Plc [2002] EWCA Civ 288, [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 788.
- 852. See also above, para.31-012.
- 853. Murdoch, Law of Estate Agency, 5th edn (2009); Murdoch (1975) 91 L.Q.R. 357; Ash, Willing to Purchase (1963).
- 854. But as to commercial agents (above, para.31-017) see below, para.31-149.
- 855. Chillingworth v Esche [1924] 1 Ch. 97. The position is further affected by s.2 of the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989: see Vol.I, paras 5-032 et seq.
- 856. See Chillingworth v Esche, above, and Eccles v Bryant [1948] Ch. 93.
- 857. Dennis Reed Ltd v Goody [1950] 2 K.B. 277, 284, per Denning L.J.
- 858. Luxor (Eastbourne) Ltd v Cooper [1941] A.C. 108, 129; Midgley Estates Ltd v Hand [1952] 2 Q.B. 432, 435–436. See also HW Liebig & Co Ltd v Leading Investments Ltd (1986) 25 D.L.R. (4th) 161.
- 859. Jones v Lowe [1945] K.B. 73.
- 860. Fowler v Bratt [1950] 2 K.B. 96.
- 861. McCallum v Hicks [1950] 2 K.B. 271.
- 862. Murdoch Lownie v Newman [1949] 2 All E.R. 783.
- 863. [2008] EWCA Civ 419, [2008] 2 E.G.L.R. 23 (sole agent); see Watts [2009] J.B.L. 268; followed in Charania v Harbour Estates Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 1123. The wording used in the contract in question was not specifically drafted by or for the claimant firm but was actually taken, with a small addition, from the information required to be supplied to clients by the Estate Agents (Provision of Information) Regulations 1991 (SI 1991/859), with the result that the case is authority on the interpretation of that wording. Dashwood v Fleurets Ltd [2007] EWHC 1610 (QB), [2007] 2 E.G.L.R. 7 may be doubtful in view of this decision.
- 864. Foxtons Ltd v Bicknell [2008] EWCA Civ 419 at [36].
- 865. Foxtons Ltd v Bicknell [2008] EWCA Civ 419 at [22], per Lord Neuberger.
- 866. See below, para.31-147, especially text to n.900.
- 867. See below, para.31-144.
- 868. A variant whereby commission was due to a mortgage broker in the event of an “offer of a mortgage”, was considered in Mustafa v KG Palos (1972) 116 S.J. 354. The court held that this meant an offer which actually led to a mortgage. Commission due on the introduction of “an intending buyer” was held not payable when the proposed buyer acquired the shares in the vendor company in Estafnous v London & Leeds Business Centres Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 1157, [2012] 1 P. & C.R. DG4.
- 869. See above, n.857 and DC Wylde & Co v Sparg 1977 (2) S.A.L.R. 75; John D Wood & Co v Dantata [1987] 2 E.G.L.R. 23, 25; Christie, Owen & Davis Plc v King [1998] S.C.L.R. 786.

- 870. James v Smith (1921) [1931] 2 K.B. 317n.; Martin v Perry & Daw [1931] 2 K.B. 310.
- 871. James v Smith, above; Martin v Perry & Daw, above; John D. Wood (Residential & Agricultural) Ltd v Craze [2007] EWHC 2658 (QB), [2008] 1 E.G.L.R. 17; Foxtons Ltd v O'Reardon [2011] EWHC 2946 (QB) (wrongful withdrawal: no term that purchaser had to be a cash purchaser).
- 872. Luxor (Eastbourne) Ltd v Cooper [1941] A.C. 108, 126, 142; Dennis Reed Ltd v Goody [1950] 2 K.B. 277, 285.
- 873. If the contract expressly or impliedly provides that commission shall be paid out of the purchase price when received, nothing is due if the price is not received: Boots v E Christopher & Co [1952] 1 K.B. 89. See also Beningfield v Kynaston (1887) 3 T.L.R. 279; Knight, Frank & Rutley v Gordon (1923) 39 T.L.R. 399; Blake & Co v Sohn [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1412.
- 874. Alpha Trading Ltd v DunnShaw-Patten Ltd [1981] Q.B. 290; John D Wood & Co v Craze [2005] EWHC 2658 (QB) (implied term that seller will not imperil contract by making fraudulent representations); below, para.31–150.
- 875. The phrase “ready, willing and able purchaser” is defined in the Estate Agents’ (Provision of Information) Regulations 1991 (SI 1991/859) and an estate agent using it must provide a written explanation in accordance with that definition: reg.5(1). Terms “having a similar purport or effect” must also be explained in writing: reg.5(2).
- 876. e.g. Dennis Reed v Nicholls [1948] 2 All E.R. 914; Bennett & Partners v Millett [1949] 1 K.B. 362; E P Nelson v Rolfe [1950] 1 K.B. 139; Dennis Reed Ltd v Goody [1950] 2 K.B. 277. Sometimes one or more of the adjectives are dropped (e.g. Graham & Scott (Southgate) Ltd v Oxlade [1950] 2 K.B. 257—“willing and able”).
- 877. Dellafiora v Lester [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1208, where the potential purchaser of a lease was held not to be “able” to purchase because the potential vendor’s landlord would not consent to the assignment of the lease to the potential purchaser.
- 878. AA Dickson & Co v O’Leary [1980] E.G.D. 265. But there may be cases where two agents are entitled to commission in respect of different prospective purchasers: see at 268; Christie, Owen & Davies Ltd v Rapacioli [1974] Q.B. 781, 790; Lordsgate Properties Ltd v Balcombe [1985] 1 E.G.L.R. 20.
- 879. Dennis Reed Ltd v Goody [1950] 2 K.B. 277. But he need not be willing at the point of introduction: Knight, Frank & Rutley v Fraser, 1964 S.L.T. 50, Ct of Sess.
- 880. Graham & Scott (Southgate) Ltd v Oxlade [1950] 2 K.B. 257; Dennis Reed Ltd v Goody, above; Christie, Owen & Davies Ltd v Stockton [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1353. So also the Court of Appeal held in Bennett Walden & Co v Wood [1950] 2 All E.R. 134 that an offer “subject to contract” did not entitle the agent to commission when the contract provided that commission was earned when the agents “secured an offer”. These cases overruled a number of earlier authorities, such as Giddy & Giddy v Horsfall [1947] 1 All E.R. 460; Bennett & Partners v Millett [1949] 1 K.B. 362.
- 881. AL Wilkinson Ltd v Brown [1966] 1 W.L.R. 194, 203. Presumably it would still be open to the potential vendor to prove that, notwithstanding the offer, there was still some other flaw which would have prevented a sale taking place.
- 882. Christie, Owen & Davies Ltd v Rapacioli [1974] Q.B. 781; following AL Wilkinson Ltd v O’Neil [1962] E.G. D. 405; see also Trinder & Partners v Haggis [1951] W.N. 416. See, for further discussion of the first case, Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.7–019.
- 883. Ackroyd & Sons v Hasan [1960] 2 Q.B. 144, 156.
- 884. Ackroyd & Sons v Hasan, above. See also Martin, Gale & Wright v Buswell (1961) 105 S.J. 466.

885. [1952] 2 Q.B. 432.
886.  [1963] 1 W.L.R. 1049. This type of contract was described by Salmon L.J. in AL Wilkinson Ltd v Brown [1966] 1 W.L.R. 194, 202 as a “ridiculous bargain”. See, however, Brian Cooper & Co v Fairview Estates (Investments) Ltd [1987] 1 E.G.L.R. 18 (introduction of a person “with whom we have not been in prior communication and who subsequently completes a contract”). In Foxtons Ltd v Bicknell [2008] 2 E.G.L.R.23, discussed above, the provision as to multiple agency made commission payable in the case of “a purchaser to whose attention we brought the availability of property”: see discussion of this at [27]. In Savill’s (UK) Ltd v Blacker [2017] EWCA Civ 68 estate agents were on the basis of interpretation held entitled to commission although the property had been sold without planning permission, whereas the agents had initially recommended obtaining such permission before sale.
887. [1956] 1 W.L.R. 1083: John D. Wood (Residential & Agricultural) Ltd v Craze [2007] EWHC 2658 (QB), [2008] 1 E.G.L.R. 17.
888. [1960] 1 W.L.R. 1204. For another unusual form, see Jaques v Lloyd D George & Partners Ltd [1968] 1 W.L.R. 625 (but as to dicta in this case, see (1968) 31 M.L.R. 700).
889. FP Rolfe & Co v George [1969] E.G.D. 330; cf. Hoddell v Smith [1976] E.G.D. 217.
890. See also Luxor (Eastbourne) Ltd v Cooper [1941] A.C. 108, 124.
891. Ackroyd & Sons v Hasan [1960] 2 Q.B. 144, 154, per Upjohn L.J.
892. See above, para.31-140.
893. Luxor (Eastbourne) Ltd v Cooper [1941] A.C. 108; LJ Hooker Ltd v WJ Adams Estates Pty Ltd (1977) 138 C.L.R. 52, 73. For the effect of letters sent following engagement see Murdoch (1977) 242 E.G. 609; cf. McConnell (1983) 265 E.G. 547.
894. Brinson v Davies (1911) 27 T.L.R. 442.
895. Above, paras 31-140 et seq.
896. See below, para.31-151.
897. E Christopher & Co v Essig [1948] W.N. 461; Mendoza & Co v Bell [1952] E.G.D. 364. But see Murdoch (1975) 91 L.Q.R. 357.
898. Bentall, Horsley & Baldry v Vicary [1931] 1 K.B. 253; approved by the House of Lords in Luxor (Eastbourne) Ltd v Cooper [1941] A.C. 108; Simpson v Lamb (1856) 17 C.B. 603; Sadler v Whittaker (1953) 162 E.G. 404. In WT Lamb & Sons v Goring Brick Co [1932] 1 K.B. 710 a manufacturer appointed a merchant his “sole selling agent”, and it was held that this prevented the manufacturer from himself selling. In this case, the relations between the parties were not those of principal and agent but those of buyer and seller. But this may also be correct for agents described in this way: see Great Eastern Group Ltd v Digby [2011] EWCA Civ 1120.
899. See below, para.31-150.
900. Milsom v Bechstein (1898) 14 T.L.R. 159. This matter is discussed in Great Eastern Group Ltd v Digby, above; see also Harwood v Smith [1998] 1 E.G.L.R. 5. The measure of damages is to be calculated with reference to the probability that the agent would earn his commission: Hampton & Sons Ltd v George [1939] 3 All E.R. 627.
901. Above, para.31-002. For a discussion of types of “sole agency” and “sole selling agreements” see Brodie Marshall & Co (Hotel Division) Ltd v Sharer [1988] 1 E.G.L.R. 21; GF Galvin (Estates) Ltd v Hedigan [1985] I.L.R.M. 295. Where an estate agent uses the phrases “sole selling rights” or “sole agency”, these are defined by statutory instrument and he must supply the prescribed definition in writing: Estate Agents (Provision of Information) Regulations 1991

(SI 1991/859) reg.5(1); The Great Eastern Group Ltd v Digby, above. Terms having “a similar purport or effect” must also be explained in writing: reg.5(2).

902. As in Brian Cooper & Co v Fairview Estates (Investments) Ltd [1987] 1 E.G.L.R. 18 (where such a requirement was not upheld); Glentree Estates Ltd v Favermead Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 1473, [2011] 1 E.G.L.R. 23 (unusual facts); County Homeseach (Thames & Chilterns) Ltd v Cowham [2008] EWCA Civ 26, [2008] 1 W.L.R. 909 (“deemed introduction”); Edmond de Rothschild Securities (UK) Ltd v Exilla Energy Plc [2014] EWHC 2165 (Comm), [2014] 5 Costs L.Q. 749 (“success fee”).
903. As to whether he should be “the” or “an” effective cause see Brian Cooper Ltd v Fairview Estates Ltd, above, at 20; Nahum v Royal Holloway and Bedford New College [1999] E.M.L.R. 252; Harding Maughan Hambly Ltd v Cie Européenne de Courtage d'Assurances, etc. [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 316, 334–337 (preferring “an” in the context of a chain of Lloyd's brokers); and see Egan Lawson Ltd v Standard Life Assurance Co [2001] E.G.L.R. 27. The search is usually for “the” cause: “that which had the greatest efficacy”: Tufton Associates Ltd v Dilmun Shipping [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 71, 78; see Robert Drummond v Mangles [1981] E.G.D. 264; John D Wood & Co v Dantata [1987] 2 E.G.L.R. 23; Chesterfield & Co Ltd v Zahid [1989] 2 E.G.L.R. 24. The rationale of the implication has been said to be to avoid the principal being liable for two commissions: see County Homeseach Co (Thames & Chilterns) Ltd v Cowham [2008] EWCA Civ 26, [2008] 1 W.L.R. 909 at [14] (suggesting that the situation with a purchasing agent might be different). For a different explanation see Doyle v Mount Kidston Mining & Exploration Pty Ltd [1984] 2 Qd R 386, 392. Cases may nevertheless arise where two agents are entitled to commission, particularly where they have contracted on different terms: see Lordsgate Properties Ltd v Balcombe [1985] 1 E.G.L.R. 20; Bernard Marais & Co v Ashraf [1988] 1 E.G.L.R. 7; Peter Yates & Co v Bullock [1990] 2 E.G.L.R. 24. For extended but finally inconclusive discussion in the High Court of Australia see Moneywood Pty Ltd v Salamon Nominees Pty Ltd (2001) 202 C.L.R. 351.
904. Homeseach (Thames & Chilterns) Ltd v Cowham [2008] EWCA Civ 26, [2008] 1 W.L.R. 909.
905. See discussion by Lord Neuberger in Foxtons Ltd v Bicknell [2008] EWCA Civ 419, [2008] 2 E.G.L.R. 23 at [18]–[20].
906. See discussion of the “effective cause” principle by Lord Neuberger in Foxtons Ltd v Bicknell [2008] EWCA Civ 419, [2008] 2 E.G.L.R. 23 at [18]–[20]; Wilkinson v Martin (1837) 8 C. & P. 1; Green v Bartlett (1863) 14 C.B.(N.S.) 681; Rimmer v Knowles (1874) 30 L.T. 496; Toulmin v Millar (1887) 58 L.T. 96; affirmed on another point (1887) 12 App. Cas. 746; Mansell v Clements (1874) L.R. 9 C.P. 139; Tribe v Taylor (1876) 1 C.P.D. 505; Burchell v Gowrie [1910] A.C. 614; Jack Windle Ltd v Brierley [1952] 1 All E.R. 398; Allan v Leo Lines Ltd [1957] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 127; Bartlett v Cole [1963] E.G.D. 452; The 4You [2014] EWHC 1098 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 88.
907. (1903) 19 T.L.R. 575. See also Toulmin v Millar (1887) 58 L.T. 96; Nightingale v Parsons [1914] 2 K.B. 621.
908. e.g. Re Beale (1885) 5 Morr. 37; Lumley v Nicholson (1886) 34 W.R. 716; Mansell v Clements (1874) L.R. 9 C.P. 139; Burton v Hughes (1885) 1 T.L.R. 207; Steere v Smith (1886) 2 T.L.R. 131; Barnett v Brown (1890) 6 T.L.R. 463; Thompson v Thomas (1896) 11 T.L.R. 304; Nahum v Royal Holloway and Bedford New College [1999] E.M.L.R. 252.
909. Green v Bartlett (1863) 14 C.B.(N.S.) 681.
910. Gunn v Showell's Brewery Co Ltd (1902) 18 T.L.R. 659; Burchell v Gowrie [1910] A.C. 614; Price Davies & Co v Smith (1929) 141 L.T. 490; Lord v Trippe (1977) 51 A.L.J.R. 574; LJ Hooker Ltd v WJ Adams Estates Pty Ltd (1977) 138 C.L.R. 52.
911. Hodges v Hackbridge Park Residential Hotel Ltd [1940] 1 K.B. 404.
912. Above, para.31-138; e.g. Reiff Diner & Co v Catalytic International Inc (1978) 246 E.G. 743; Sinclair Goldsmith v Minero Peru Commercial [1978] E.G.D. 194. But see as to these cases

- Murdoch [1981] Conv. 424, differentiating between cases where the agent is and is not paid by results.
- 913. Howard Houlder & Partners Ltd v Manx Isles SS Co Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 110; Bentall, Horsley & Baldry v Vicary [1931] 1 K.B. 253; Fairvale Ltd v Sabharwal [1992] 2 E.G.L.R. 27. See MSM Consulting Ltd v United Republic of Tanzania [2009] EWHC 121 (QB), 123 Con. L.R. 154; above, para.31-138.
- 914. Martin v Tucker (1885) 1 T.L.R. 655; Barnett v Isaacson (1888) 4 T.L.R. 645; Lott v Outhwaite (1893) 10 T.L.R. 76.
- 915. Bentall, Horsley & Baldry v Vicary, above.
- 916. See, e.g. Re Allison [1904] 2 K.B. 327; Firth v Hylane [1959] E.G.D. 212.
- 917. Above, para.31-017; McGee [2013] J.B.L. 543–545.
- 918. See discussion in Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.11–033.
- 919. This obviously has similarities with the notion of effective cause, above, para.31-147.
- 920. SI 1993/3053 reg.7. It is not necessary, in the last case, that there has been an action by the agent to secure the transaction: Kontogeorgas v Kartonpak AE [1997] 1 C.M.L.R. 1093. But it is necessary that there should have been action by the principal: Chevassus-Marché v Groupe Danone (C-19/07) [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 475.
- 921. reg.10.
- 922.  reg.11. The notion of a contract party being “to blame” is unfamiliar to the common law. In ERGO Poist'ov#a a.s. (C-48/16) the CJEU held that the words “to blame” did not merely refer to the legal reasons which led directly to the termination of the contract, but to the reasons which led up to that termination, taking into account all the facts of the case. In the case itself, dealing with marketing of insurance (which would not be within the English regulations) the principal had treated clients improperly, asking for responses to questions and sending demands for payment which had already been made. The court also decided that reg.11(1) covers not only cases of complete non-execution of the contract but also partial non-execution, for example by reason of non-compliance with the volume of transactions or the duration envisaged by the contract. A clause in effect providing for pro rata refund on such a basis was held not to be a derogation from the agent's right.
- 923. reg.12. For a way in which this might be enforced at common law see Yahuda Fire Insurance Co v Orion Marine Insurance Underwriting Agency [1995] Q.B. 174 (not a case on the Regulations); Fairstar Heavy Transport NV v Adkins [2013] EWCA Civ 886, [2013] 2 C.L.C. 272 (order against CEO). See also Equitas Ltd v Horace Holman & Co Ltd [2007] EWHC 903 (Comm), [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 567.
- 924. See further Burrows (1968) 31 M.L.R. 390; Powell, Law of Agency, 2nd edn (1961), pp.380-385; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.10-042.
- 925. Rhodes v Forwood (1876) 1 App. Cas. 256.
- 926. L French & Co Ltd v Leeston Shipping Co [1922] 1 A.C. 451. See also Ex p. Maclure (1870) L.R. 5 Ch. App. 737; Hamlyn & Co v Wood & Co [1891] 2 Q.B. 488; Northey v Trevillion (1902) 7 Com. Cas. 201; Re RS Newman Ltd [1916] 2 Ch. 309; cf. Orient Overseas Management and Finance Ltd v File Shipping Co Ltd (The Energy Progress) [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 355 (owner of ship liable to managers for loss of bonus).
- 927. Alpha Trading Ltd v Dunnshaw-Patten [1981] Q.B. 290, 304. See also Lazarus v Cairn Line Ltd (1912) 106 L.T. 378, 380; George Moundreas & Co SA v Navimpex Centrala Navala [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 515; Sun Alliance Pensions Life and Investments Services Ltd v RJL [1991] 2

- Lloyd's Rep.* 410.
- 928. Lazarus v Cairn Line Ltd, above.
- 929. General Publicity Services v Best's Brewery Co Ltd [1951] 2 T.L.R. 875, 879.
- 930. Turner v Goldsmith [1891] 1 Q.B. 544; see also Mutzenbecher v La Aseguradora Española SA [1906] 1 K.B. 254; Reigate v Union Manufacturing Co (Ramsbottom) Ltd [1918] 1 K.B. 592; Warren & Co v Agdeshman (1922) 38 T.L.R. 588; Re Premier Products Ltd [1965] N.Z.L.R. 50.
- 931. Alpha Trading Ltd v Dunnshaw-Patten [1981] Q.B. 290; George Moundreas & Co SA v Navimpex Centrala Navala [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 515; C. Christo & Co Ltd v Marathon Advisory Service Ltd [2015] EWHC 1971 (QB). cf. Marcan Shipping (London) Ltd v Polish SS Co (The Manifest Lipkowsky) [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 171. Sometimes the matter is expressly provided for: see Christie & Vesey Ltd v Maatschappij &c. (The Helvetia-S) [1960] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 540; Micklefield v SAC Technology Ltd [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1002.
- 932. Motion v Michaud (1892) 8 T.L.R. 447; Joynton v Hunt & Son (1905) 93 L.T. 470; Levy v Goldhill [1917] 2 Ch. 297.
- 933. The dictum of Goff L.J. in Daulia Ltd v Four Millbank Nominees Ltd [1978] Ch. 231, 239 is surely too wide.
- 934. reg.8 of the Commercial Agents Regulations, above, deals with this topic: see McGee [2011] J.B.L. 782, 783-784.
- 935. !Bauman v Hulton Press Ltd* [1952] 2 All E.R. 1121; Martin-Baker Aircraft Co Ltd v Murison [1955] 2 Q.B. 556; Decro-Wall International SA v Practitioners in Marketing Ltd [1971] 1 W.L.R. 361, 376-377; Crawford Fitting Co v Sydney Valve and Fittings Pty Ltd (1988) 14 N.S.W.L.R. 438; cited in Alpha Lettings Ltd v Neptune Research and Development Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 704; Paper Reclaim Ltd v Aoteasoa International Ltd [2007] 3 N.Z.L.R. 169; W Nagel v Pluczenik Diamond Co NV [2017] EWHC 1750 (Comm). Reasonableness is judged at the time of termination: Turner v Ogilvy & Mather (NZ) Ltd [1996] 1 N.Z.L.R. 641, 646. See Carnegie (1969) 85 L.Q.R. 392; Vol.I, para.14-032.
- 936. See below, para.31-161; Vol.I, Ch.24. But the principal may refuse to accept the breach, while being dispensed from the obligation to provide work: Standard Life Health Care Ltd v Gorman [2009] EWCA Civ 1292, [2010] I.R.L.R. 233.
- 937. e.g. Decro-Wall International SA v Practitioners in Marketing Ltd, above (where the agent (actually a distributor) was also granted an injunction: see also Evans Marshall & Co Ltd v Bertola SA [1973] 1 W.L.R. 349).
- 938. Below, para.31-166.
- 939. Above, para.31-017. See in general Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), Ch.11; McGee [2013] J.B.L. 534, 545-551.
- 940. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.15(1). See discussion in McGee [2011] J.B.L. 782, 785.
- 941. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.15(2)-(5).
- 942. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.14.
- 943. cf. Wickman Machine Tools Sales Ltd v L Schuler AG [1974] A.C. 235. The idea that it is in this context for the law to determine how serious a breach must be is affirmed by the Cour de cassation in Ste Laboratoires Arkopharma v Gravier, Cass Com May 28, 2002.
- 944. Crane v Sky In-Home Service Ltd [2007] EWHC 66 (Ch), [2007] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 599 at [84] ("justifies immediate termination regardless of the terms of any contract"). See Whittaker, Contract Terms (2007) 254, 267 et seq.

945. In the context of reg.18, below.

946. Crane v Sky In-Home Service Ltd, above, at [91]; see also Nigel Fryer Joinery Services Ltd v Ian Firth Hardware Ltd [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 108. But in Volvo Car Germany GmbH v Autohof Weidensdorf GmbH (C-203/09) [2011] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 906 it was held that it did not apply where the relevant conduct occurred after the giving of notice but before the contract expired and was not known to the principal at the time the contract ended. As to the applicability under the regulations of the common law rule that a termination on inadequate grounds can be justified on valid grounds existing at the time of termination see Rossetti Marketing Ltd v Diamond Sofa Co Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 1021, [2013] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 308 at [55], [56], [59]. Contrast Cooper v Pure Fishing (UK) Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 375, [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 518, where the principal simply did not renew a contract, though he believed he had grounds for terminating it.

947. ! Commercial Agents Regulations reg.18(a), invoking reg.16, discussed above; as to which see also Bell Electric Ltd v Aweco Appliance Systems GmbH & Co [2002] EWHC 872 (QB), [2002] Eu. L.R. 443, 460-461. For a recent case where the agent's conduct was held not sufficiently serious see Crocs Europe BV v Anderson [2012] EWCA Civ 1400, [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep 1 (dismissing some rather strange arguments). For a case where the principal did not accept the agent's breach see Alan Ramsay Sales and Marketing Ltd v Typhoo Tea Ltd [2016] EWHC 486 (Comm), [2016] 4 W.L.R. 59.

948. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.18(b)(i). The rights also do not apply where the agent, with the principal's agreement, assigns his rights and duties under the contract: reg.18(c).

949. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.17. See McGee [2011] J.B.L. 782, 786 et seq.

950. Commercial Agents Regulations regs 16, 18(a).

951. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.18(b)(i). It seems that the rules as to breach determine the operation of reg.18(b)(i): Bell Electric Ltd v Aweco Appliance Systems GmbH & Co [2002] EWHC 872 (QB), [2002] Eu. L.R. 443, 460-461.

952. ! Frape v Emreco International Ltd, 2002 S.L.T. 371 OH; following Whitehead and Jenks v Cattell [1995] Eu. L.R. 827; Tigana Ltd v Decoro Ltd [2003] EWHC 23 (QB), [2003] Eu. L.R. 189; Light v Ty Europe Ltd [2003] EWHC 174 (QB), [2003] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 568, reversed on other grounds [2003] EWCA Civ 1238, [2003] Eu. L.R. 858. This is so also where the agent's agreement is terminated during a trial period agreed at first appointment: Fadin Habitat (Société) v Constructions Traditionnelles du Val de Loire [2015] E.C.C. 27 (Cour de Cassation, France); Monk v Largo Foods Ltd [2016] EWHC 1837 (Comm) (similar facts: duty of good faith does not impact on absolute right to terminate irrespective of breach).

953. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.17(8).

954. Even if healthy enough to continue: Abbott v Condici Ltd [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 450.

955. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.18(b)(ii).

956. See EC Report, below, n.958, at 2.

957. Scottish Power Energy Retail Ltd v Taskforce Contracts Ltd [2008] CSOH 110, [2009] Eu. L.R. 62.

958. Arcado v Haviland (C-9/87) [1988] E.C.R. 1539 (jurisdiction).

959. Fern Computer Consultancy Ltd v Intergraph Cadworx & Analysis Solutions Inc [2014] EWHC 2908 (Ch), [2014] Bus. L.R. 1397 at [34] et seq., especially [46].

- 960. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.17(9). As to the form of the notice required see Hackett v Advanced Medical Computer Systems [1999] C.L.C. 160. As to the timing of the notice in this connection see Claramoda Ltd v Zoomphase Ltd [2009] EWHC 2857 (Comm), [2010] E.C.C. 1.
- 961.  "New customers" includes persons brought in by the agent, notwithstanding that the customers had already had relations with the principal in relation to other goods: Marchon Germany GmbH v Karaszkiwicz (C-315/14) [2016] Bus. L.R. 694.
- 962. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.17(3). If the benefits exceed the lost commission the requirement that the award be equitable does not prevent the benefits being taken into account (contrary to a practice in the German courts): Semen v Deutsche Tamoil GmbH (C-348/07) [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 653.
- 963. See Moore v Piretta, below, n.958.
- 964. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.17(4). This is a "cap": it is not the basis of calculation.
- 965. See the European Commission Report of July 23, 1998, The Application of the Commercial Agents Directive (COM 96/354 FINAL), which contains a careful exposition, with an example, of how an indemnity can be calculated. See also a valuable comment by O'Neill, 1997 S.L.T. 141. There is one useful decision on calculating indemnity under English law: Moore v Piretta PTA Ltd [1999] 1 All E.R. 174, discussed by Segal in (1998) 142 S.J. 376.
- 966. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.17(2). It seems likely that when it is chosen it must be taken in the form prescribed: reg.19. For a case where it was held that the contract provided for indemnity despite using the word "compensation" see Hardie Polymers Ltd v Polymerland Ltd, 2000 S.C.L.R. 64 OH.
- 967.  Commercial Agents Regulations reg.17(5). In Quenon K SPRL v Beobank SA (C-338/14) [2016] Bus. L.R. 264 the CJEU held that the Directive permitted Member States who had chosen the indemnity option to provide for recovery of additional loss, provided that "the award of damages may not result in double recovery by combining the indemnity for customers with the compensation for loss resulting, in particular, for the loss of commission following termination of the contract": at [32].
- 968. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.17(2). See the specialist books cited above, para.31-017 n.93; McGee [2011] J.B.L. 782, 791 et seq.
- 969.  Commercial Agents Regulations reg.19. For an example of a clause held invalid see Shearman v Hunter Boot Ltd [2013] EWHC 47 (QB), [2014] E.C.C. 12 (clause providing for indemnity, but compensation if the amount would be lower). In the result, the normal compensation regime applied by default: contrast Brand Studio Ltd v St John Knits Inc [2015] EWHC 3143 (QB), [2015] Bus. L.R. 1421, where a similar clause was held severable from a choice of indemnity, which therefore remained valid.
- 970. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.17(7).
- 971. See the European Commission Report cited above, n.958, at 6.
- 972. See European Commission Report at 5.
- 973. See Nicolas Corman & Fils SA v Hauptzollamt Gronau (C-64/81) [1982] E.C.R. 13; followed in R. v Customs and Excise Commissioners Ex p. EMU Tabac SARL Case 296/95 [1998] Q.B. 791; both cited in Bell Electric Ltd v Aweco Appliance Systems GmbH & Co [2002] EWHC 872 (QB), [2002] Eu. L.R. 443.
- 974. See the European Commission Report cited above, n.958, at 5; below, para.31-155.

- 975. ! Duffen v Frabo SpA [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 180; Alan Ramsay Sales and Marketing Ltd v Typhoo Tea Ltd [2016] EWHC 486 (Comm), [2016] 4 W.L.R. 59; Software Incubator Ltd v Computer Associates Ltd [2016] EWHC 1587 (QB).
- 976. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.17(5).
- 977. ! For an example of the two methods operating together see Software Incubator Ltd v Computer Associates Ltd [2016] EWHC 1587 (QB).
- 978. The Regulations apply in Scotland as well as England and Wales, and there are parallel Regulations in Northern Ireland. The House of Lords is the final appellate tribunal for all three jurisdictions.
- 979. [2007] UKHL 32, [2007] 1 W.L.R. 2055, in substantial accord with the judgment of Moore-Bick L.J. in the Court of Appeal: [2006] EWCA 63, [2006] 1 W.L.R. 1281. Noted by Saintier (2008) 124 L.Q.R. 31. See discussion in Nigel Fryer Joinery Services Ltd v Ian Firth Hardware Ltd [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 108.
- 980. Principally the decision of the Inner House of the Court of Session in King v T Tunnock Ltd, 2000 S.C. 424, which was not approved in the House of Lords, though it may be valid in Scotland. Other cases are also considered in the opinion of Lord Hoffmann.
- 981. at [9].
- 982. at [10].
- 983. Honeyvern Informazioni Commerciali Srl v Mariella de Zotti (C-465/04) [2006] E.C.R. I-02789; and for this reason the House declined to make a reference to the European Court of Justice.
- 984. at [18]. See also at [26]: "the French practice is of no evidential value whatever."
- 985. at [12].
- 986. at [21].
- 987. at [13].
- 988. at [35], [36].
- 989. An argument that an agency had no value was rejected in Warren v Drukkerij Flach BV [2014] EWCA Civ 993, [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 111; but the court did not accept the view that Lord Hoffmann's opinion implied that it was to be assumed that the agency had a value—"the argument that the agency is in fact valueless does have to be addressed" (at [14]).
- 990. ! [2006] EWCA 63, [2006] 1 W.L.R. 1281 at [29], per Moore-Bick L.J. Cases considering calculation of compensation since Lonsdale include McQuillan v McCormick [2010] EWHC 1112 (QB), [2011] E.C.C. 18 (jewellery); Invicta UK Ltd v International Brands Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 1564 (QB), [2013] E.C.C. 30 (wine for supermarkets); Alan Ramsay Sales and Marketing Ltd v Typhoo Tea Ltd [2016] EWHC 486 (Comm), [2016] 4 W.L.R. 59 (food sector, especially cash and carry and wholesale); Software Incubator Ltd v Computer Associates Ltd [2016] EWHC 1587 (QB); Monk v Largo Foods Ltd [2016] EWHC 1837 (Comm) (consultant to food manufacturer; contract likely to have been terminated: not decisive on compensation but uncertainties taken into account); W Nagel v Pluczenik Diamond Co NV [2017] EWHC 1750 (Comm).
- 991. See Bickley v Browning (1913) 30 T.L.R. 388; Weare v Brimsdown Lead Co (1910) 103 L.T. 429.

- 992. Marshall v Glanvill [1917] 2 K.B. 87; Bettany v Eastern Morning, etc. News Co (1900) 16 T.L.R. 401; Gerahty v Baines & Co (1903) 19 T.L.R. 554; Cramb v Goodwin (1919) 35 T.L.R. 477.
- 993. Levy v Goldhill [1917] 2 Ch. 297.
- 994. Crocker Horlock Ltd v B Lang & Co Ltd [1949] 1 All E.R. 526.
- 995. British Bank for Foreign Trade Ltd v Novinex Ltd [1949] 1 K.B. 623.
- 996. Sellers v London Counties Newspapers [1951] 1 K.B. 784. See also Gold v Life Assurance Co of Pennsylvania [1971] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 164. The whole question is considered by Rix L.J. in Explora Group Plc v Hesco Bastion Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 646 at [49] et seq.
- 997. Wilson v Harper [1908] 2 Ch. 370.
- 998. Roberts v Elwells Engineers Ltd [1972] 2 Q.B. 586.
- 999. Above, paras 31-017 et seq.
- 1000.  Commercial Agents Regulations reg.8. For an application see Tigana Ltd v Decoro Ltd [2003] EWHC 23 (QB), [2003] Eu. L.R. 189; Monk v Largo Foods Ltd [2016] EWHC 1837 (Comm). See McGee [2013] J.B.L. 534, 543-545. For an example of a claim for compensation combined with a claim under reg.8 and at common law see McQuillan v McCormick [2010] EWHC 1112 (QB), [2011] E.C.C. 18.
- 1001. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.9(1). It is provided that the principal is liable for the sum due and can recover an undue payment from the agent who has received it: reg.9(2).
- 1002. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.7(1)(b); see above, para.31-156.
- 1003. See Clayton Newbury Ltd v Findlay [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1194n.; Rivoli Hats Ltd v Gooch [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1190; Bronester Ltd v Priddle [1961] 1 W.L.R. 1294; Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v Rodrigues [1982] 2 N.Z.L.R. 54.
- 1004. See Vol.I, paras 29-065 et seq.; DO Ferguson & Associates v Sohl [1992] Build. L.R. 95, discussed by Birks in Rose (ed.) Consensus ad Idem (1996), 179, 199.
- 1005. See Vol.I, paras 16-085 et seq.
- 1006. Above, para.31-017.
- 1007. Commercial Agents Regulations reg.20: the restriction cannot continue for more than two years after termination. See BCM Group Plc v Visualmark Ltd [2006] EWHC 1831 (QB) (length acceptable but coverage too wide).
- 1008. See Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827, 848-850.
- 1009. See Thomas Marshall (Exports) Ltd v Guinlé [1979] Ch. 227.
- 1010. e.g. where he is an unqualified solicitor: Solicitors Act 1974 s.25(1); cf. SCF Finance Co Ltd v Masri (No.2) [1987] Q.B. 1002.
- 1011. Josephs v Pebrer (1825) 3 B. & C. 639.
- 1012. See Alkins v Jupe (1877) 2 C.P.D. 375.
- 1013. On authority to act illegally see Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.2-026; and see in general Vol.I, Ch.16.

- 1014. e.g. by selling to himself: Salomons v Pender (1865) 3 H. & C. 639; or by taking a bribe: Andrews v Ramsay [1903] 2 K.B. 635. See also Boston Deep Sea Fishing & Ice Co v Ansell (1888) 39 Ch. D. 339; Rhodes v Macalister (1923) 29 Com. Cas. 19; LS Harris Trustees Ltd v Power Packing Services (Hermit Road) Ltd [1970] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 65; Henry Smith & Son v Muskett (1977) 246 E.G. 655; above, paras 31-118 et seq.; Premium Real Estate Ltd v Stevens [2009] N.Z.L.R. 384.
- 1015. e.g. Beable v Dickerson (1885) 1 T.L.R. 654 (unauthorised subdelegation); White v Lincoln (1803) 8 Ves. 363 (solicitor's failure to keep accounts: cf. Re Lee Ex p. Neville (1869) L.R. 4 Ch. App. 43); Money Penny v Hartland (1824) 1 C. & P. 352. See also above, para.31-112 n.697.
- 1016. Huntley v Bulwer (1839) 6 Bing. N.C. 111; Denew v Daverell (1813) 3 Camp. 451; Hamond v Holiday (1824) 1 C. & P. 384; Hill v Featherstonhaugh (1831) 7 Bing. 569.
- 1017. Imageview Management Ltd v Jack [2009] EWCA Civ 63, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 436, giving a modern survey of the case-law in connection with double commission (as to which see Watts (2009) 125 L.Q.R. 369, Oram [2010] L.M.C.L.Q. 95); Boston Deep Sea Fishing and Ice Co Ltd v Ansell (1888) 39 Ch. D. 339. If the agent is an employee he is of course entitled to the benefits of employment legislation. But the principal may be entitled to determine the agency in any case: above, para.31-151.
- 1018. See Vol.I, Ch.24.
- 1019.  See cases cited at n.1006, above; Keppel v Wheeler [1927] 1 K.B. 577, 592; Robinson Scammell & Co v Ansell [1985] 2 E.G.L.R. 41; Imageview Management Ltd v Jack, above; Hosking v Marathon Asset Management LLP [2016] EWHC 2418 (Ch), [2017] Ch. 157 (applied in the context of partnership).
- 1020. As in the case of solicitors employed to conduct actions: Underwood v Lewis [1894] 2 Q.B. 306; Heywood v Wellers [1976] Q.B. 446.
- 1021. Harrods Ltd v Lemon [1931] 2 K.B. 157; Thornton Hall & Partners v Wembley Electrical Appliances Ltd [1947] 2 All E.R. 630.
- 1022. Salomons v Pender (1865) 3 H. & C. 639; Rhodes v Macalister (1923) 29 Com. Cas. 19.
- 1023. Andrews v Ramsay [1903] 2 K.B. 635.
- 1024.  Keppel v Wheeler [1927] 1 K.B. 577; and see Robinson Scammell & Co v Ansell [1985] 2 E.G.L.R. 41 (bona fide mistake); Eric V Stansfield (A Firm) v South East Nursing Home Services Ltd [1986] 1 E.G.L.R. 29; The Peppy [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 722, 728-729; Bank of Ireland v Jaffery [2012] EWHC 1377 (Ch); Gamatronic (UK) Ltd v Hamilton [2016] EWHC 2225 (QB).
- 1025.  Hippisley v Knee Brothers [1905] 1 K.B. 1; Nitedals Taendstikfabrik v Bruster [1906] 2 Ch. 671; Stupples v Stupples & Co (High Wycombe) Ltd [2012] EWHC 1226 (Ch), [2013] 1 B.C.L.C. 729 (commission still earned on work for another client). But cf. Headway Construction Co Ltd v Downham (1974) 233 E.G. 675. The cases are critically discussed in Imageview Management Ltd v Jack, above, the view being taken that there can be cases of "harmless collaterality".

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 8. - Obligations of Principal and Agent Inter se
(b) - Rights of Agents
(ii) - Common Law Indemnity

Indemnity of agent 1026

31-162

 Unless otherwise agreed, the principal is under a duty to reimburse and indemnify the agent against all expenses and liabilities incurred in the execution of his authority. 1027  This may be enforced by action against the principal, by the exercise of any lien which the agent may have, 1028  or by way of set-off. 1029  Where the agency is contractual this duty can be regarded as contractual: but in some cases the agency may not be contractual, and the duty must be enforced by an action in restitution. 1030  At any rate where the agency is contractual, the liability is not confined to payments made in discharge of debts legally binding on the principal: the agent may recover indemnity for payments which he is bound to make though the principal is not, 1031  liabilities which he has not yet himself discharged, 1032  payments which may not have been necessary but which when they were made reasonably appeared to be necessary, 1033  and payments of debts which could not be legally enforced but nonpayment of which would involve serious consequences. 1034  But the act of the agent must have been within the scope of his express or implied authority, as extended by custom operative in the market in which the agent deals, provided that such custom is reasonable or known to the principal 1035 ; or else it must have been ratified. 1036

Where no indemnity available

31-163

 There is, however, no duty of indemnity in respect of liability incurred solely by the agent's negligence or breach of duty, 1037  or through his insolvency 1038 ; in respect of transactions which are obviously or to the agent's knowledge unlawful. 1039

1026.

 This is not the same as the indemnity sometimes available to commercial agents on termination of their agency: above, para.31-154.

1027.

! Thacker v Hardy (1878) 4 Q.B.D. 685, 687. For a modern example, see Islamic Republic of Iran Shipping Lines v Zannis Cia Naviera SA (The Tzelepi) [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 265. In many cases, however, the right to indemnity is superseded by the remuneration payable, e.g. as to advertising expenses. Whether or not this is so depends on the interpretation of the contract and any relevant custom. See also below, para.40-113.

1028.

! Below, para.31-164. The agent who is liable together with his principal may sometimes have a right to contribution under s.1 of the Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978.

1029.

! Cropper v Cook (1868) L.R. 3 C.P. 194; Curtis v Barclay (1826) 5 B. & C. 141. But not where the money which the principal claims was deposited with the agent for a specific purpose which has failed: Stumore v Campbell [1892] 1 Q.B. 314; Re Mid-Kent Fruit Factory [1896] 1 Ch. 567.

1030.

! This may be more limited: see Brook's Wharf v Goodman [1937] 1 K.B. 534. But the duty to indemnify is sometimes stated in very general terms: see Dugdale v Lovering (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 196; Sheffield Corp v Barclay [1905] A.C. 392; Secretary of State v Bank of India [1938] 2 All E.R. 797; Owen v Tate [1976] Q.B. 402; Yeung Kai Yung v Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corp [1981] A.C. 787; cf. Naviera Mogor SA v Soc Metallurgique de Normandie (The Nogar Marin) [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 412; Vol.I, paras 29-119 et seq.; Goff and Jones, Law of Unjust Enrichment, 9th edn (2016), paras 19-16 et seq.

1031.

! Adams v Morgan [1924] 1 K.B. 751 (supertax); Brittain v Lloyd (1845) 14 M. & W. 762.

1032.

! Lacey v Hill, Crowley's Claim (1874) L.R. 18 Eq. 182.

1033.

! Frixione v Tagliaferro (1856) 10 Moo. P.C.C. 175; Williams v Lister (1913) 109 L.T. 699; Pettman v Keble (1850) 9 C.B. 701. And see John Koch Ltd v C & H Products Ltd [1956] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 59.

1034.

! e.g. payment by solicitor of barrister's fees; Rhodes v Fielder (1919) 89 L.J.K.B. 15; payments made by stockbrokers in accordance with the rules and usages of the Stock Exchange: Reynolds v Smith (1893) 9 T.L.R. 494; Taylor v Stray (1857) 2 C.B.(N.S.) 175, 197; Chapman v Shepherd (1867) L.R. 2 C.P. 228; Biederman v Stone (1867) L.R. 2 C.P. 504. But cf. Liberian Insurance Inc v Mosse [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 560.

1035.

! Above, para.31-048. See also Anglo Overseas Transport Co Ltd v Titan Industrial Corp [1959] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 152; Perishables Transport Co Ltd v N Spyropoulos (London) Ltd [1964] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 379; cf. Wilson v Avec Audio-Visual Equipment Ltd [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 81.

1036.

! Above, paras 31-027 et seq.

1037.

! Thacker v Hardy (1878) 4 Q.B.D. 685, 687; Lewis v Samuel (1846) 8 Q.B. 685; Ellis v Pond [1898] 1 Q.B.D. 426; Lage v Siemens Bros & Co Ltd (1932) 42 Ll.L. Rep. 252. An implied promise to indemnify can obviously not extend thus far: further, the agent cannot take advantage of his own wrong. But see Linklaters v HSBC Bank Plc [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 545, 552-553 (limits on principle).

1038.

! Duncan v Hill (1873) L.R. 8 Ex. 242. The insolvency was "entirely the result of [the agent's] own default".

1039.

! Ex p. Mather (1797) 3 Ves. 373. This is an application of the general rules as to illegal contracts, where the agency is contractual: see Vol.I, Ch.16. Aliter where the illegality is not known or obvious: Adamson v Jarvis (1827) 4 Bing. 66; WH Smith & Son v Clinton (1908) 99

L.T. 840. And where principal and agent are joint tortfeasors, there may be a right of contribution under the Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978. See also Solicitors Act 1974 s.25 (no costs recoverable by unqualified person).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 8. - Obligations of Principal and Agent Inter se
(b) - Rights of Agents
(iii) - Lien

Lien31-164

It is usually said that an agent has a general or particular possessory lien on his principal's goods ¹⁰⁴⁰ in respect of lawful claims arising in the course of the agency, though whether such a right really attaches to the notion of an "agent" is perhaps doubtful, and the support for such a right arises in specific contexts. Thus an auctioneer has a lien on goods he is employed to sell in respect of his charges and commission. ¹⁰⁴¹ The agent must be in lawful possession of the goods in the course of his agency ¹⁰⁴² and hold them in the same capacity as that in which he claims the lien. ¹⁰⁴³ There must be no agreement inconsistent with a lien ¹⁰⁴⁴ nor must the goods be delivered with directions or for a purpose inconsistent with a lien. ¹⁰⁴⁵ An agent's lien is usually a particular lien unless by agreement or custom or usage he is given a general lien, e.g. factors, insurance brokers, stockbrokers, solicitors, bankers and wharfingers have general liens. ¹⁰⁴⁶ A lien is lost by tender to the agent of the sum due, ¹⁰⁴⁷ by the agent entering into an agreement or acting in a capacity inconsistent with it, ¹⁰⁴⁸ or by loss of possession, ¹⁰⁴⁹ or by waiver. ¹⁰⁵⁰ Sub-agents may have a lien when delegation to them is authorised or contemplated. ¹⁰⁵¹ The lien is not determined by the principal's bankruptcy. ¹⁰⁵²

^{1040.} But he has no general right to retain money received for his principal: Dyson v Peat [1917] 1 Ch. 99. As to the availability of set-off to solicitors see Heslop v Cousins [2007] 3 N.Z.L.R. 679 at [190].

^{1041.} Williams v Millington (1788) 1 H.Bl. 81; above, para.21-050. As to whether the principal's conduct must be repudiatory before the lien is exercisable see Cia. Financiera "Soleada" v Hamoor Tanker Corp Inc (The Borag) [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 111 (decision reversed [1981] 1 W.L.R. 274).

^{1042.} Taylor v Robinson (1818) 2 Moo. 730.

^{1043.} Dixon v Stansfeld (1850) 10 C.B. 398; Houghton v Matthews (1803) 3 B. & P. 485.

^{1044.} Wolstenholm v Sheffield Union Banking Co (1886) 54 L.T. 746; Withers LLP v Langbar International Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 1419 (solicitor).

^{1045.} Brandao v Barnett (1846) 12 Cl. & F. 787; Rolls Razor Ltd v Cox [1967] 1 Q.B. 552.

^{1046.} See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), art.65. See further Woodworth v Conroy [1976] Q.B. 884 (accountant). But the existence of liens turns on custom, which is difficult to establish: see, e.g. Tellrite Ltd v London Confirmers Ltd [1962] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 236 (confirming house); Langley, Beldon & Gaunt Ltd v Morley [1965] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 297 (forwarding agent).

- 1047. See Albemarle Supply Co Ltd v Hind [1928] 1 K.B. 307.
- 1048. Fisher v Smith (1878) 4 App. Cas. 1; Re Lawrance [1894] 1 Ch. 556.
- 1049. Sweet v Pym (1800) 1 East 4. But not where the goods are unlawfully obtained from the agent: Wallace v Woodgate (1824) R. & M. 193; Dicas v Stockley (1836) 7 C. & P. 587. Nor where the agent gives the goods to another to hold on his behalf: Wilson v Kymer (1813) 1 M. & S. 157; or to his principal to deal with on his behalf under a trust receipt: North Western Bank Ltd v Poynter, Son & Macdonalds [1895] A.C. 56; nor where the agent delivers the goods with an express reservation of his lien to which objection is not taken: Watson v Lyon (1855) 7 De G.M. & G. 288; Caldwell v Sumpters [1972] Ch. 478; Bentley v Gaisford [1997] Q.B. 627.
- 1050. Jacobs v Latour (1828) 5 Bing. 130; Hewison v Guthrie (1836) 2 Bing. N.C. 755; Weeks v Goode (1859) 6 C.B.(N.S.) 367; Re Morris [1908] 1 K.B. 473.
- 1051. See Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 19th edn (2010), art.69; Chellaram & Sons (London) Ltd v Butlers Warehousing and Distribution Ltd [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 412.
- 1052. Robson v Kemp (1802) 4 Esp. 233; Re Rapid Road Transit Co [1909] 1 Ch. 96.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 31 - Agency
Section 8. - Obligations of Principal and Agent Inter se
(b) - Rights of Agents
(iv) - Agent in Position of Unpaid Vendor

Stoppage in transit and vendors' lien

31-165

Where an agent is personally liable to a third party for the purchase price of goods which he has bought for his principal ¹⁰⁵³ he may stand towards the principal in the position of an unpaid vendor, and enjoy the vendor's rights of stoppage in transit ¹⁰⁵⁴ and lien. ¹⁰⁵⁵

¹⁰⁵³. See above, paras 31-084 et seq.

¹⁰⁵⁴. Feise v Wray (1802) 3 East 93; Jenkyns v Usborne (1844) 7 M. & G. 678.

¹⁰⁵⁵. Imperial Bank v London & St Katharine Docks (1876) 5 Ch. D. 195; Sale of Goods Act 1979 s.39. He may also be able to rely on having the property in the goods in some cases. But he is not in all respects a seller to his principal, for the position of seller is inconsistent with that of agent: Cassaboglou v Gibb (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 797; Tetley v Shand (1872) 25 L.T. 658. There is a connection with the position of the commissionnaire, above, para.31-004, n.15. See below, paras 44-032, 44-309; Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.1-020 and art.69; cf. Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 15-010, 15-011. See also Hill (1972) 3 J. Maritime Law and Commerce 307.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 31 - Agency

Section 9. - Termination of Authority

How authority terminated

31-166

! An agent's authority may be terminated in the following ways:

(i)

By the express revocation of it by the principal; or by renunciation of the agency on the part of the agent himself. ¹⁰⁵⁶ Such revocation or renunciation is effective notwithstanding that the agency was created by deed or for consideration, ¹⁰⁵⁷ and may be oral even though the appointment was by deed. ¹⁰⁵⁸ But though it terminates the authority it does so without prejudice to any right that either party may have against the other to damages under a contract ¹⁰⁵⁹; and as between the parties a repudiatory breach of contract, at any rate by the principal, is, in accordance with general rules, inoperative until accepted. ¹⁰⁶⁰

(ii)

By the principal's death, ¹⁰⁶¹ ! or by his becoming bankrupt or insolvent ¹⁰⁶² or mentally disordered so as to be incapable of consenting to the agency, ¹⁰⁶³ whether or not these facts are known to the agent; by the death of the agent, or his becoming similarly mentally incapable, ¹⁰⁶⁴ or by his bankruptcy or insolvency, if this makes him unable to perform his duties. ¹⁰⁶⁵

(iii)

By effluxion of time, where a specific period is fixed, either by express agreement or by the usage of trade, for the execution of the act to be done by the agent. ¹⁰⁶⁶

(iv)

By the execution of his commission, whereby the agent becomes functus officio ¹⁰⁶⁷; by the destruction of the subject matter of the agency ¹⁰⁶⁸; or by the happening of an event which renders the continuance of the agency impossible ¹⁰⁶⁹ or unlawful. ¹⁰⁷⁰ Thus the retainer of a solicitor normally ceases when his client becomes an alien enemy, ¹⁰⁷¹ though not merely because he becomes an enemy alien. ¹⁰⁷²

Irrevocable authority

31-167

⚠ Though an agent's authority is, as stated above, normally revocable at will (without prejudice to his right, if any, to damages for breach of contract), there are some cases where this is not so. These are cases where

“the agent has a relevant interest of his own in the exercise of his authority. This requires first, an agreement that the agent's authority shall be irrevocable, and secondly that the authority is given to secure an interest of the agent, being a proprietary interest (for example a power of attorney given to enable the holder of an equitable interest to perfect it ¹⁰⁷³ ⚠) or a liability (generally in debt) owed him personally. In these cases, the agent's authority is irrevocable while the interest subsists.” ¹⁰⁷⁴ ⚠

This involves use of the format of agency at least in part to enable the agent to act in his own interest. But it has been said that it is not necessary that the sole purpose of the arrangement is to secure the agent's financial interest: an agent can remain an agent owing the fiduciary and other duties to act in the principal's interest, while having a personal interest in the exercise of his authority sufficient to make it irrevocable. ¹⁰⁷⁵ ⚠ The authority to sell goods is not irrevocable merely because the agent has made advances to his principal; but it would be if the arrangement was specifically made to secure such advances. ¹⁰⁷⁶ ⚠ The mere right to commission is not sufficient to create irrevocable authority, ¹⁰⁷⁷ ⚠ but an interest in recovering a debt in respect of commission already earned may be. By an extension of this reasoning it has been held that in a sub-underwriting contract, the authority given by a sub-underwriter to apply for shares such as he is bound by his contract to take up is an authority coupled with an interest and as such irrevocable. ¹⁰⁷⁸ ⚠ The scope of this extension, which may depend also on the fact that other sub-underwriters are involved who may be prejudiced by revocation by one, is still not clear. ¹⁰⁷⁹ ⚠

Powers of attorney

31-168

A power of attorney is a formal authority to one person to act in the place of another, and the donor of such a power is liable to third parties for any acts of the donee within the scope of the power. A power of attorney must be created by deed. ¹⁰⁸⁰ It is a statutory implementation of both the principles in the preceding paragraph that by s.4(1) of the Powers of Attorney Act 1971, where such a power is expressed to be irrevocable and is given to secure (a) a proprietary interest of the donee of the power ¹⁰⁸¹, or (b) the performance of an obligation owed to the donee, then, so long as the donee has that interest or the obligation remains undischarged, the power shall not be revoked (i) by the donor without the consent of the donee; or (ii) by the death, incapacity or bankruptcy of the donor, or if the donor is a body corporate, by its winding up or dissolution. ¹⁰⁸²

Apparent authority

31-169

⚠ The mere happening of events terminating the agency will not necessarily prevent the principal from being bound by the agent's acts, for he may be liable under the doctrine of apparent authority ¹⁰⁸³.

“Where a person has given authority to another, the authority being such as would apparently continue, he is bound to those who act upon the faith of that authority, though he has revoked it, unless he has given the proper notice of the revocation ... The failure to give that notice precludes him from denying that he gave the authority against those who acted upon the faith that that authority continued.” ¹⁰⁸⁴

This doctrine should, arguably at least, not in principle apply where the revocation of authority is caused by the principal's incapacity, on the basis that the principal is (legally) removed from the scene. But though it is probably true that the doctrine does not apply in the case of the principal's death ¹⁰⁸⁵ or bankruptcy, ¹⁰⁸⁶ there is authority that he can be liable under the doctrine of apparent authority though he becomes mentally disordered, ¹⁰⁸⁷ and this despite the fact that the agent is, it seems, also liable in such a case for breach of warranty of authority. ¹⁰⁸⁸

Statutory protection where power of attorney revoked

31-170

There is again special statutory provision in the case of powers of attorney. By s.5(2) of the Powers of Attorney Act 1971, where a power of attorney has been revoked and a person, without knowledge of the revocation, deals with the donee of the power, the transaction between them shall, in favour of that person, be as valid as if the power had then been in existence. Similar protection is by s.5(3) given to a third party dealing with the donee of a power expressed to be given by way of security which was not in fact given by way of security; and where the interest of a purchaser depends on whether a transaction was valid by virtue of s.5(2) certain presumptions operate in favour of the purchaser by virtue of s.5(4).

Enduring powers of attorney

31-171

The Enduring Powers of Attorney Act 1985 ¹⁰⁸⁹ sought to deal with the situation where a person who has granted a power of attorney becomes mentally incapable. In such a case the power is at common law automatically revoked subject to the statutory protections referred to above. This is in many cases extremely inconvenient, since the power may have been granted, for example by an elderly person, with this very contingency in mind. It appears that attorneys often continued to act in such circumstances, at risk to themselves and third parties; and use of the Court of Protection for all such situations would have placed an excessive strain on its resources. The Act therefore permitted a person to create, subject to restrictions, a power of attorney which survives such incapacity. ¹⁰⁹⁰

Lasting powers of attorney

31-172

The above type of Power of Attorney has now been superseded by a new type of instrument, the Lasting Power of Attorney, provided by the Mental Capacity Act 2005, ¹⁰⁹¹ the relevant parts of which became effective on October 1, 2007. ¹⁰⁹² This is a wider type of power, under which the donee, or different donees, can be given authority to act in respect of the donor's personal welfare as well as his or her property and affairs, ¹⁰⁹³ though limited powers can of course be conferred in either respect. Such powers require two separate documents, one for each power, in prescribed form. ¹⁰⁹⁴ The Act begins with elaborate "principles" regarding what constitutes mental incapacity, ¹⁰⁹⁵ and what constitutes the "best interests" of the incapacitated person. ¹⁰⁹⁶ Even without such a document, a person may sometimes be justified in acting reasonably in the interests of another in respect of care or treatment, ¹⁰⁹⁷ and may in other circumstances be entitled to pledge that other's credit, use that other's money and obtain reimbursement. ¹⁰⁹⁸ These powers are not dissimilar from the more limited authority applicable in cases of agency of necessity and are referred to also under that head. ¹⁰⁹⁹ Lasting Powers of Attorney require a "certificate of capacity" that the donor acts voluntarily and understands the purpose of the document. ¹¹⁰⁰ The power is invalid until registered, ¹¹⁰¹ but registration can be effected before the onset of incapacity. It is revocable both before and after registration provided the donor has capacity to do so. ¹¹⁰² The court may control the exercise of the power, ¹¹⁰³ or appoint a “deputy” to take decisions for the incapacitated person. ¹¹⁰⁴ The Court of Protection is reconstituted by the Act as part of the reforms. There are provisions protecting the donee and bona fide third parties where no power was created or the power has been revoked. ¹¹⁰⁵ Regulations supplement the provisions of Schs 1 and 4 to the Act regarding registration and revocation of powers of the new, and also of the former, types. ¹¹⁰⁶ The Act is supported by a Code of Practice issued by the Lord Chancellor. ¹¹⁰⁷

Enduring Powers of Attorney created before the operative date above are still valid (as regards property and affairs), ¹¹⁰⁸ but the Act of 1985 is repealed and such powers may no longer be created. ¹¹⁰⁹

^{1056.} Frith v Frith [1906] A.C. 254, 259.

^{1057.} Venning v Bray (1862) 2 B. & S. 502; Doward, Dickson & Co v Williams & Co (1889) 6 T.L.R. 316. But in some circumstances equity may restrain the revocation; see Regent International Hotels (UK) Ltd v Pageguide Ltd, The Times, May 10, 1985 CA; Lauritzencool AB v Lady Navigation Inc [2005] EWCA Civ 579, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 3686. And there are a few cases which simply appear to assume that authority can be made irrevocable, e.g. Phillips v Butler [1945] Ch. 358 (above, para.31-011); Daly v Lime Street Underwriting Agencies Ltd [1987] 2 F.T.L.R. 277 (Lloyd's: see below, n.1070).

^{1058.} The Margaret Mitchell (1858) Swa. 382.

^{1059.} Whether for breach of contract, or by way of compensation under the Commercial Agents Directive (above, paras 31-017, 31-154). As to the effect of termination of a partnership, see Hurst v Bryk [2002] 1 A.C. 185.

^{1060.} Atlantic Underwriting Agencies Ltd v Cia di Assicurazione di Milano SpA [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 240. See Vol.I, paras 24-003 et seq.

^{1061.}  Blades v Free (1829) 9 B. & C. 167; Campanari v Woodburn (1854) 15 C.B. 400; Pool v Pool (1889) 58 L.J.P. 67. Restatement, Third, Agency, para.3.07 provides that actual authority should not terminate until the agent knows of the principal's death, which might be a better rule: see Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.10–016. The dissolution of a company has the same effect: Salton v New Beeston Cycle Co [1900] 1 Ch. 43. So does the dissolution of a partnership, as to which see Partnership Act 1890 ss.14, 17, 36(3), 38; Tasker v Shepherd (1861) 6 H. & N. 575; Robson v Drummond (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 303; Brace v Calder [1895] 2 Q.B. 253; Friend v Young [1897] 2 Ch. 421; Bovine Ltd v Dent and Wilkinson (1904) 21 T.L.R. 82; Hurst v Bryk, above. The winding up of a company may determine agency powers, e.g. the power of a receiver appointed by debenture-holders to bind the company by contract: Insolvency Act 1986 s.44(1). But it does not determine his powers to hold and dispose of the company's property, which is not truly based on agency at all: Sowman v David Samuel Trust Ltd [1978] 1 W.L.R. 22; Barrows v Chief Land Registrar (1977) 127 New L.J. 104; Re Leslie Homes (Aust) Pty Ltd (1984) 8 A.C.L.R. 1020. The appointment of a provisional liquidator may revoke the authority of agents appointed by directors to act for the company: Pacific & General Insurance Co Ltd v Hazell [1997] L.R.L.R. 65 (insurance broker); cf. Re Oriental Bank Ex p. Guillemin (1884) 28 Ch. D. 634. But the case law largely concerns termination of contracts of employment, not of authority. See in general Wee and Tan, Agency Law in Commercial Practice (2016), stressing that it must be understood that agency notions, as often, apply in flexible ways in this area.

^{1062.} Drew v Nunn (1879) 4 Q.B.D. 661, 665–666; Kynaston v Crouch (1845) 14 M. & W. 266, 274. But see Nelson v Nelson [1997] 1 W.L.R. 233 (authority not terminated in certain respects: bankrupt's power to bring actions). See Vol.I, Ch.20.

- 1063. Drew v Nunn (1879) 4 Q.B.D. 661, 665–666; Yonge v Toynbee [1910] 1 K.B. 215; Gibbons v Wright (1954) 91 C.L.R. 423, 425 (power of attorney). But see Watts [2015] C.L.J. 140, arguing that in the case of mental disorder this should not be so unless the disorder is known to the third party; also Blankley v Central Manchester, etc, University Hospitals NHS Trust [2015] EWCA Civ 18, [2015] 1 Costs L.R. 119.
- 1064. This would appear to follow from the fact that the agent no longer has capacity, and it would be surprising if the principal was to be regarded as impliedly authorising the acts of an agent who had lost capacity. In any case, apparent authority persists. A Hong Kong case suggests however that actual authority persists: Probus v Treble & Triple Ltd [2010] HKCU 2485, affirmed without reference to this point, CACV270/2010.
- 1065. McCall v Australian Meat Co (1870) 19 W.R. 188; Hudson v Granger (1821) 5 B. & Ald. 27, 33; Phelps v Lyle (1840) 10 A. & E. 113. But see Bailey v Angove's Pty Ltd [2014] EWCA Civ 215, [2014] 2 B.C.L.C. 129 (authority to collect debt continues by virtue of contract provision).
- 1066. Dickinson v Lilwall (1815) 4 Camp. 279; Lawford & Co v Harris (1896) 12 T.L.R. 275. Where the Commercial Agents Directive (above, para.31-017) applies there may be a right to compensation even in such a case: see above, para.31-154.
- 1067. Blackburne v Scholes (1810) 2 Camp. 341; Bell v Balls [1897] 1 Ch. 663 (auctioneer); Gillow & Co v Lord Aberdare (1893) 9 T.L.R. 12 (house agent).
- 1068. Rhodes v Forwood (1876) 1 App. Cas. 256; above, para.31-150.
- 1069. e.g. Morgan v Manser [1948] 1 K.B. 184 (military service).
- 1070. Hugh Stevenson & Sons Ltd v Aktiengesellschaft für Cartonnagen-Industrie [1918] A.C. 239.
- 1071. Sovfracht v Van Udens, etc. [1943] A.C. 203, 253–255, where Tingley v Müller [1917] 2 Ch. 144 was described as depending on its special facts and forming an exception, if indeed it was rightly decided; and see Hangkam Kwintong Woo v Liu Lan Fong [1951] A.C. 707. But so long as the solicitor remains on the record, service upon him is sufficient: Eichengruen v Mond [1940] Ch. 785.
- 1072. i.e. the subject of an enemy state resident in the UK. See Schostall v Johnson (1919) 36 T.L.R. 75.
- 1073.  Walsh v Whitcomb (1797) 2 Esp. 565, 566; Gaussen v Morton (1830) 10 B. & C. 731 (powers of attorney to sell to satisfy existing debt).
- 1074.  Bailey v Angove's Pty Ltd [2016] UKSC 47 at [7] per Lord Sumption. See also Frith v Frith [1906] A.C. 254, 261; Restatement, Third, Agency (2006), para.3.12; Powers of Attorney Act 1971 s.4(1), below, para.31-168.
- 1075.  Bailey v Angove's Pty Ltd [2016] UKSC 47 at [9]. See on this case Watts (2017) 133 L.Q.R.11.
- 1076.  Smart v Sandars (1848) 5 C.B. 895, 917.
- 1077.  Doward, Dickson & Co v Williams & Co (1890) 6 T.L.R. 316.
- 1078.  Re Olympic Fire & General Reinsurance Co Ltd [1920] 2 Ch. 341. See also Re Hartt Group and Land Securities Ltd (1984) 7 D.L.R. (4th) 89 (power of landlord to re-enter as agent of tenant); Slatter v Railway Commissioners for New South Wales (1931) 45 C.L.R. 68 (power to apply for licence for premises); Schindler v Brie [2003] EWHC 1804 (Ch), [2003] W.T.L.R. 1361 (no intention to make authority irrevocable); Temple Legal Protection Ltd v QBE Insurance (Europe) Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 453, [2010] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 903 at [79]; Despot v Registrar-General of New South Wales [2013] NSWCA 313. In Bailey v Angove's Pty Ltd [2016] UKSC 47 no view was expressed about the basis of these and related cases beyond saying that their results were "undoubtedly convenient": see at [10].

1079.

! The general principle of revocability of authority can cause difficulty when applied to arrangements at Lloyd's, which to a considerable extent depend on irrevocable agency and passivity of the principal. See Reynolds in Cranston, Making Commercial Law (1997), Ch.10. In Society of Lloyd's v Leigh [1997] C.L.C. 759 Colman J. was prepared to uphold irrevocability of authority outside the context of security: but the Court of Appeal decided the case on grounds connected with the Lloyd's Act 1982 and Bylaws made thereunder: sub nom. Society of Lloyd's v Lyon [1997] C.L.C. 1398. In Temple Legal Protection Ltd v QBE Insurance (Europe) Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 453, [2010] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 703 it was held that a broker's interest in maintaining and developing his business was not sufficient to render the authority to conduct a run-off irrevocable.

1080.

Powers of Attorney Act 1971 s.1(1), as amended by Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s.1; as to which see also Wright Hassall LLP v Horton [2015] EWHC 3716 (QB).

1081.

This plainly does not protect the power of attorney given to a receiver appointed by debenture holders, for it is their interests and not his that are protected. The common law rule however may do so: above, n.1053. Nor is such a receiver protected by subs.(2), below, n.1073, for he does not derive title.

1082.

A power given to secure a proprietary interest may be given to the person entitled to the interest and persons deriving title under him: s.4(2). The section applies to powers whenever created: s.4(3). It covers the power conferred on a receiver by debenture holders: Sowman v David Samuel Trust Ltd [1978] 1 W.L.R. 22; cf. Millett (1977) 41 Conv. 83. See also above, n.1053.

1083.

See above, para.31-056.

1084.

! Scarf v Jardine (1882) 7 App. Cas. 345, 356–357, per Lord Blackburn; Rockland Industries Inc v Amerada Minerals Corp [1980] 2 S.C.R. 2, (1980) 108 D.L.R. (3d) 513; AMB Generali Holding AG v SEB Trygg Liv Holding Aktiebolaget [2005] EWCA Civ 1237, [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 318 at [28]–[32]. See Benourad v Compass Group Plc [2010] EWHC 1882 (Comm) at [113] (director moves to another company: apparent authority from former company may persist); and DVB Bank SE v Isim Amin Ltd [2014] EWHC 2156 (Comm) (valid service on agent after actual authority had expired).

1085.

Blades v Free (1829) 9 B. & C. 167. But the possibility of apparent authority may not have been clear at the time: see Drew v Nunn (1879) 4 Q.B.D. 661, 668 for a suggestion to the contrary.

1086.

Drew v Nunn, above, at 665-666.

1087.

Drew v Nunn, above.

1088.

Yonge v Toynbee [1910] 1 K.B. 215, a case on the court's jurisdiction over solicitors. It may be that apparent authority was not considered in this case. Otherwise, it would seem that there was no loss that the plaintiff could prove, in view of the fact that the principal might have been held bound: see above, para.31-106. See in general Bowstead and Reynolds on Agency, 20th edn (2014), para.10–032.

1089.

See Cretny and Lush on Lasting and Enduring Powers of Attorney, 7th edn (2013) and as to the purposes of the legislation Law Com. No.122 (1983). A recent case on the wording as applied to successive enduring powers is Re J [2009] EWHC 436 (Ch), [2009] 2 All E.R. 1051.

1090.

The Act is now repealed, but for a recent case on it see Day v Harris [2013] EWCA Civ 191, [2014] Ch. 211.

1091.

ss.9–29; stemming from recommendations contained in Law Com No.231 (1995). Certain modifications largely connected with deprivation of liberty are made by the Mental Health Act 2007.

- 1092. SI 2007/1897, amended by SIs 2007/2051, 2007/2161, 2009/1884, 2010/1063, 2011/2189. Some parts of the Act had already been brought into effect on April 1 by SI 2007/563. See in general Bartlett, Blackstone's Guide to the Mental Capacity Act 2005, 2nd edn (2008); Bryant (2007) No.84, Trusts and Estates Law & Tax Jo 5; Hopkins and Nichols (2006) 150 S.J. 632 (drawing attention to difficulties).
- 1093. ss.9, 11, 12.
- 1094. Lasting Powers of Attorney, Enduring Powers of Attorney and Public Guardian Regulations 2007 (SI 2007/1253) cl.5 (setting out forms for use) (as amended by SI 2013/506).
- 1095. ss.1–3.
- 1096. s.4 (specifying criteria for establishing reasonable belief).
- 1097. ss.5, 6.
- 1098. s.8 (the person lacking capacity is liable for necessities supplied by virtue of s.7).
- 1099. See above, annotation to para.31-037.
- 1100. Sch.1 cl.2(1)(e).
- 1101. s.9(2)(b).
- 1102. s.13(1)(2). Bankruptcy of the donor need not always constitute revocation: see s.13(3)(4).
- 1103. ss.22–23.
- 1104. s.16.
- 1105. s.14, in terms similar to s.9 of the Enduring Powers of Attorney Act 1985 and similarly modifying s.5 of the Powers of Attorney Act 1971.
- 1106. See Lasting Powers of Attorney, Enduring Powers of Attorney and Public Guardian Regulations 2007 (SI 2007/1953).
- 1107. In accordance with ss.42 and 43 of the Act, and published by TSO.
- 1108. s.66(3); they are regulated by Sch.4 to the new Act, which in substance reproduces the 1985 Act. Quaere whether the “Principles” of ss.1 and 2 of the Act should be applied under Sch.4.
- 1109. s.66(1)(2). Nor can they be converted.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 32 - Arbitration ¹

Introductory

32-001

References to arbitration are of two main kinds, conventional and statutory. In the first, the parties agree to refer their present or future disputes to a tribunal of their own choosing, instead of to a court. In the second, such reference is imposed upon them by the terms of a particular statute. ² This chapter is concerned only with the first kind of arbitration, and in particular with the validity and scope of arbitration agreements, the enforcement of such agreements by the court's power to stay an action brought in breach thereof, the appointment and removal of arbitrators, the conduct of the arbitral proceedings, the extent to which the court can assist the arbitral process, the arbitral award, the powers of the court in relation to the award and the enforcement of the award. These matters are for the most part regulated by statute.

-
- ¹ For a more detailed account of arbitration, and practice and procedure, the reader should consult: Merkin, Arbitration Law (2007); Merkin and Flannery, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Russell on Arbitration, 24th edn (2015); Tweeddale and Tweeddale, Arbitration of Commercial Disputes, 2nd edn (2012); Harris, Planterose and Tecks, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, 2nd edn (1989) and Supplement (2001); Redfern and Hunter, Law and Practice of International Arbitration, 5th edn (2009); Park, Arbitration of International Business Disputes, 2nd edn (2012).
- ² See Arbitration Act 1996 ss.94–98. The County Courts Act 1984 s.64, enabled a county court in such cases as might be prescribed, to order any proceedings to be referred to arbitration. By s.92 of the 1996 Act, nothing in Pt I of that Act applies to such county court arbitration. The “small claims track” has now replaced small claims arbitration: CPR Pt 27.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 32 - Arbitration ¹
Section 1. - Statutory Regulation

Arbitration Act 1996

32-002

The current principal statute is the Arbitration Act 1996. This Act reproduced, with very few changes, the provisions of a draft Bill formulated by a Departmental Advisory Committee on International Commercial Arbitration Law appointed by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and chaired by Saville L.J. The Committee produced a detailed Report on the Bill (“the DAC Report”) ³ and this report has often been referred to in construing the provisions of the Act. To a limited extent the Act restated, in different language, the previous legislation on arbitration as set out in the Arbitration Acts 1950, 1975 and 1979, whilst at the same time codifying principles established by case law. But, more importantly, it introduced a number of substantial changes designed to clarify and improve the arbitral process. Its provisions reflect as far as possible those of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (“UNCITRAL”) Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration. ⁴

32-003

The Act is written in clear “user-friendly” language and this should lessen the need to have regard to the pre-1996 law where the provisions of the Act set out the law. ⁵ It is also unusual in that it sets out, in s.1, certain general principles on which Pt I of the Act—which contains its main substantive provisions—is stated to be founded and in accordance with which it is to be construed. These are that:

“(a)

the object of arbitration is to obtain the fair resolution of disputes by an impartial tribunal without unnecessary delay or expense;

(b)

the parties should be free to agree how their disputes are resolved, subject only to such safeguards as are necessary in the public interest; in matters governed by [Pt I] the court should not intervene except as provided in this Part”.

(c)

Following these general principles, the Act allows considerable flexibility in the way arbitrations are conducted, recognises party autonomy and limits the role of the courts to supporting the arbitral process and intervening only in cases where there is, or is likely to be, a denial of justice. Certain provisions of Pt I are mandatory⁶ and have effect notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary. But, for the most part, the provisions of Pt I are not mandatory: they permit the parties to make their own arrangements by written agreement⁷ but provide rules which apply in the absence of such agreement. The parties may make such arrangements by agreeing to the application of institutional rules,⁸ such as those of the International Chamber of Commerce, the London Court of International Arbitration or any other international or national institution.

Commencement

32-004

The Act was brought into force (except for ss.85 to 87) on January 31, 1997,⁹ and the provisions of Pt I apply to arbitral proceedings commenced on or after that date under an arbitration agreement whenever made. They do not apply to arbitral proceedings commenced before that date,¹⁰ but they do apply to arbitration applications made on or after that date (except those relating to arbitration proceedings commenced before that date).¹¹

32-005

Sections 85 to 87 of the Act,¹² which make special provision in relation to domestic arbitration agreements, are unlikely to be brought into force, since there appears to be little support for the maintenance of a distinction between international and domestic agreements and it is arguable that to draw such a distinction is contrary to the provisions of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union.¹³ Indeed, these sections are likely to be repealed by an order made under s.88(1).

32-006

As a result of the Civil Procedure (Amendment No.5) Rules 2001,¹⁴ the rules relating to the arbitration claims and arbitration enforcement proceedings are CPR Pt 62 rr.62.1 to 62.21, and there is also a practice direction CPR PD62 (in this chapter referred to as "PD62").

Scope of application of the Act: seat of arbitration in England¹⁵

32-007

Section 2(1) sets out the basic rule which governs the application of Pt I of the Act: it applies where the seat of the arbitration is in England.¹⁶ The "seat of the arbitration" means "the juridical seat of the arbitration which is designated:

- (a)
by the parties to the arbitration agreement,¹⁷ or
- (b)
by any arbitral or other institution or person vested by the parties with powers in that regard, or
- (c)
by the arbitral tribunal if so authorised by the parties,¹⁸ or which, in the absence of any such designation, has been determined having regard to the parties' agreement and all the relevant circumstances".¹⁹ The "seat" is not necessarily the place where the arbitration is conducted, but usually the seat of the arbitration and that place will coincide. Once identified, the seat cannot move.²⁰

Applicants' arbitrations not seated in England

32-008

This basic rule is, however, subject to a number of exceptions. The effect of these is to enable the English courts to recognise and enforce foreign arbitration agreements and awards and to support, in appropriate cases, foreign arbitral proceedings.²¹ First, the provisions relating to a stay of legal proceedings (ss.9 to 11) and to the enforcement of arbitral awards (s.66) apply even if the seat of the arbitration is outside England or no seat has been designated or determined.²² Secondly, the powers conferred by s.43 (securing the attendance of witnesses) and s.44 (court powers exercisable in support of arbitral proceedings) likewise apply even if the seat of the arbitration is outside England or no seat has been designated or determined, but the court may refuse to exercise the power if in its opinion the fact that the seat of the arbitration is or is likely to be elsewhere makes it inappropriate to do so.²³ Thirdly, the court may exercise any other power conferred on it by Pt I of the Act for the purpose of supporting the arbitral process where no seat of arbitration has been designated or determined and by reason of a connection with England it is satisfied that it is appropriate to do so.²⁴ Fourthly, the provisions of s.7 (separability of the arbitration agreement) and s.8 (death of a party) apply where the law applicable to the arbitration agreement is the law of England even if the seat of the arbitration is elsewhere or has not been designated or determined.²⁵ It is generally irrelevant that the law applicable to the substance of the dispute is a foreign law.

Choice of foreign law

32-009

The Act does not purport to set out any comprehensive regime concerning the conflict of laws issues that may arise in relation to arbitration.²⁶ It has been pointed out²⁷ that three potentially relevant systems of law may be involved:

- (i) the law governing the substance of the dispute²⁸;
- (ii) the law governing the agreement to arbitrate²⁹; and
- (iii) the law governing the arbitral proceedings (the lex arbitri), which will normally be the law of the seat of the arbitration.³⁰

These three laws may well be the same. But the law that governs the substance of the dispute may often differ from the *lex arbitri*³¹ and the law governing the agreement to arbitrate may be different from that of the substantive contract out of which the dispute has arisen and of which it forms part.³² Moreover, even if the seat of the arbitration is in England, the parties may choose a foreign law to govern any matter provided for in a non-mandatory provision of Pt I of the Act, such as, for example, the arbitration procedure, and effect must then be given to their choice.³³

Prior legislation

32-010

The previous principal statute was the Arbitration Act 1950 (as amended). Part I of that Act was repealed by the 1996 Act,³⁴ but Pt II, which deals with the enforcement of certain foreign awards and in particular with those to which the Geneva Protocol (1923) applies, remains unrepealed.³⁵

32-011

The Arbitration Act 1975, which gave effect in the United Kingdom to the New York Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards (1958), and the Arbitration Act 1979, which abolished the much-criticised “case stated” procedure, established a new procedure for judicial review of an award and made other amendments to the 1950 Act, were entirely repealed by the 1996 Act.³⁶ Their provisions were incorporated, though not without changes, into the 1996 Act.

32-012

The 1996 Act also repealed³⁷ and reproduced³⁸ the provisions of the 1950 Act³⁹ and of the Administration of Justice Act 1970⁴⁰ which allowed for the appointment of a judge of the Commercial Court or an official referee as sole arbitrator or umpire by or by virtue of an arbitration agreement.

Consumer arbitration agreements32-013

It may be detrimental to the interests of consumers to require them, by contract, to submit disputes to arbitration rather than to have resort to legal proceedings, in particular because of the increased expense involved. The Consumer Arbitration Agreements Act 1988 extended to consumers the right, in certain circumstances, not to be compelled to take a dispute to arbitration. This Act was repealed by the 1996 Act.⁴¹ But the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999⁴² and the Consumer Rights Act 2015 Pt 2 (the scope and effect of which are discussed in Ch.38) includes in the “grey list” of the terms that may be regarded as unfair a term which has the object or effect of “excluding or hindering the consumer’s right to take legal action or exercise any other legal remedy, in particular by requiring the consumer to take disputes exclusively to arbitration not covered by legal provisions”.⁴³ Moreover, by s.89 of the 1996 Act,⁴⁴ ss.90 and 91 extend the application of the Regulations and Pt 2 of the 2015 Act in relation to a term which constitutes an arbitration agreement. Section 90⁴⁵ provides that the Regulations and Pt 2 of the 2015 Act apply where the consumer is a legal person (for example, a company) as they apply where the consumer is a natural person or (under the 2015 Act) an individual. And s.91⁴⁶ provides that a term which constitutes an arbitration agreement is unfair for the purposes of the Regulations and Pt 2 of the 2015 Act so far as it relates to a claim for a pecuniary remedy which does not exceed the amount specified by order for the purposes of this section. An amount of £5,000 has been so specified.⁴⁷ The result is that an arbitration agreement which is not individually negotiated is not binding on the consumer if it requires him to submit to arbitration a claim which does not exceed £5,000.⁴⁸ But even where a claim exceeds this limit, an arbitration clause may be held to be unfair and so not binding on the consumer.⁴⁹

ACAS arbitration32-014

The Act has been amended with respect to ACAS arbitration by the ACAS Arbitration Scheme (England and Wales) Order 2001.⁵⁰

Human Rights Act 199832-015

The implications of the Human Rights Act 1998 for arbitration are by no means certain. ⁵¹ It is necessary to bear in mind that the European Convention on Human Rights, to which the Act gives effect, creates rights against states and not against private individuals. Article 6(1) of the Convention provides:

“In the determination of his civil rights and obligations ... everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law”.

An arbitral tribunal established by voluntary agreement of the parties is not a “tribunal established by law” within the meaning of the article as it is not an emanation of the state. ⁵² It might therefore appear that to compel a person to resort to arbitration would be incompatible with his entitlement under the article to have his civil rights and obligations determined by a tribunal established by law, e.g. by a court. And, in any event, there would be a clear infringement of the “public hearing” requirement of the article, since an arbitral hearing will not be public unless all parties so agree. The way out of these difficulties has been to hold that a person who freely and unequivocally enters into a valid arbitration agreement thereby waives his right to have his dispute determined at a public hearing by a tribunal for which the state is responsible under the Convention. ⁵³ But this may be the full extent of the waiver, ⁵⁴ and it is probable that a party to an arbitration agreement does not thereby waive his right under the article to a fair hearing by an independent and impartial tribunal and within a reasonable time. The question then arises as to the remedies available to a person who claims that proceedings before an arbitral tribunal to which he was a party have not complied with art.6 of the Convention (except to the extent that his rights under the article have been validly waived). Section 6 of the 1998 Act provides that “it is unlawful for a public authority to act in a way that is incompatible with a Convention right” and s.7 gives a direct right of action to a person who claims that a public authority has acted (or proposes to act) in such a way. Despite the fact that a “public authority” is defined in s.6(3) to include “a court or tribunal”, and “tribunal” is further defined in s.21(1) as “any tribunal in which legal proceedings may be brought”, it is submitted that an arbitral tribunal to which the parties have agreed to submit their dispute for adjudication is not a “public authority” within the meaning of the Act, since its functions are not of a public nature. Any direct action against the arbitrators, based on the 1998 Act, is therefore ruled out.

32-016

The expression “public authority” in the Act does, however, include a court. ⁵⁵ In KR v Switzerland ⁵⁶ the European Commission on Human Rights expressed the opinion that “the State cannot be held responsible for the arbitrators’ actions unless, and only in so far as, the national courts were required to intervene”. This leaves open the question whether, if required to intervene, national courts must ensure that arbitral tribunals comply with the procedural safeguards of art.6(1) except insofar as these have been validly waived. To this question conflicting answers have been given. In Nordstrom-Janzon v Netherlands (1996) ⁵⁷ the Commission stated that the Convention does not require national courts to ensure that arbitration proceedings have been conducted in conformity with art.6(1). But in the earlier case of Jakob Boss Sohne KG v Germany (1991) ⁵⁸ the Commission decided that the courts did have the role of guaranteeing the fairness of arbitral proceedings and of ensuring that they were conducted in accordance with fundamental rights. It is submitted that the latter view is to be preferred and that courts, when exercising regulatory or enforcement functions in relation to arbitration, are under a duty to ensure that the arbitral proceedings have been conducted in conformity with art.6(1), except where validly waived. The provisions of the Arbitration Act 1996 confer sufficient powers on the English courts to enable them, if called upon to intervene, to ensure that proceedings before an arbitral tribunal seated in England have complied with the requirements of the Article. ⁵⁹

32-017

! National courts must also, when exercising their regulatory or enforcement functions, themselves comply with art.6(1). ⁶⁰ Thus in North Range Shipping Ltd v Seatrans Shipping Corp ⁶¹ the Court of Appeal held that art.6 requires that a judge of the High Court must, when dismissing an application for permission to appeal on a point of law from an arbitrator's award under s.69 of the 1996 Act, give adequate reasons for his decision, although the adequacy of those reasons is dependant on the circumstances of the particular case. However, it has been held that none of the following involved an infringement of art.6 rights: the absence of any right to an oral hearing on an application under s.69 of the 1996 Act,⁶² an order that a judgment rendered on an application under s.68 should remain private and not be disclosed to the public,⁶³ the exclusion by mutual agreement of any right of appeal on a point of law under s.69,⁶⁴ and the absence of any right of appeal from a refusal of permission to appeal on a s.68 application,⁶⁵ from a refusal of permission to appeal under s.69(8),⁶⁶ and from a refusal of permission to appeal on a s.67 application.⁶⁷

32-018

The broader question also arises whether an arbitral tribunal seated in England, when applying English law to the substance of the dispute, is bound to decide the issues presented to it in a manner compatible with the parties' substantive rights under the Convention, for example, the right to protection of property conferred by art.1 of the first Protocol, and what remedies would be available if the tribunal decided in a way incompatible with those rights. Section 6 of the 1998 Act provides that it is illegal for a public authority to act in a way that is incompatible with a Convention right. If either of the parties to the arbitral proceedings is a public authority, it is arguable that the arbitral tribunal must take account of and, as appropriate,⁶⁸ give effect to this provision as part of English law in making its award. In the event that the tribunal fails to do so, then the award will be subject to appeal on a point of law under s.69 of the Arbitration Act 1996.⁶⁹ More tentatively perhaps, whether or not English law is the law applicable to the dispute, it might be argued that the award is open to challenge under s.68 of the 1996 Act (serious irregularity)⁷⁰ on the ground that the award or the way in which it was procured is contrary to public policy.⁷¹ There is, however, considerably more doubt as to whether the same principle will apply if neither of the parties to the arbitral proceedings is a public authority.⁷² In the first chapter of Vol.I of this book the view has been expressed that in certain circumstances a court in a similar situation will be under a duty to interpret and apply English substantive law in a way that is compatible with the convention.⁷³ If that is so, then to that extent, when applying English law, an arbitral tribunal ought to interpret it and apply it in the same manner. Failure to do so would constitute an error of law which, again, would render the award open to appeal under s.69.

Composition of arbitral tribunal

32-019

It has also been held that there was no infringement of art.6 rights where an arbitration clause incorporated the rules of a trade association and the application of those rules might lead to the result that a majority of the tribunal would consist of arbitrators approved by the association, of which one party was a member but the other was not.⁷⁴ In *Jivraj v Hashwani*⁷⁵ the Supreme Court unanimously reversed a decision of the Court of Appeal⁷⁶ which had held an arbitration clause, which required that the tribunal should be composed of members of a particular religious community (the Ismaili community), was rendered void as a result of the Employment Equality (Religion or Belief) Regulations 2003.⁷⁷

^{1.} For a more detailed account of arbitration, and practice and procedure, the reader should consult: Merkin, Arbitration Law (2007); Merkin and Flannery, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Russell on Arbitration, 24th edn (2015); Tweeddale and Tweeddale, Arbitration of Commercial Disputes, 2nd edn (2012); Harris, Planterose and Tecks, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, 2nd edn (1989) and Supplement (2001); Redfern and Hunter, Law and Practice of International Arbitration, 5th edn (2009); Park, Arbitration of International Business Disputes, 2nd edn (2012).

^{3.} February 1996. See also the 1997 Supplementary Report (January 1997).

^{4.} <http://www.uncitral.org>. See Hacking (1997) 63 Arbitration 291. The Model Law was revised in 2006 (the “Revised Model Law”).

5. Seabridge Shipping AB v AC Orsleff's Eftf's A/S [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 685, 690; Lesotho Highlands Development Authority v Impregilo SpA [2005] UKHL 43, [2006] 1 A.C. 221 at [19]; Bilta (UK) Ltd v Nazir [2010] EWHC 1086 (Ch), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 29 at [22].
6. Arbitration Act 1996 s.4(1) and Sch.1. The sections are: ss.9–13, 24, 26(1), 28, 29, 31–33, 37(2), 40, 43, 56, 60, 66–68, 70–75.
7. s.4(2).
8. s.4(3).
9. Arbitration Act 1996 (Commencement No.1) Order 1996 (SI 1996/3146).
10. SI 1996/3146 s.84(1) and art.4 and Sch.2(2)(a); Great Ormond Street Hospital NHS Trust v Secretary of State for Health [1998] C.L.Y. 250.
11. SI 1996/3146 art.4 and Sch.2.
12. DAC Report paras 317–331; Supplementary Report paras 47–49.
13. Philip Alexander Securities & Futures Ltd v Bamberger, The Times, July 22, 1996 CA.
14. SI 2001/4015.
15. The Act extends to England and Wales but not, in general, to Scotland: s.108.
16. References in this chapter to England include Wales and Northern Ireland.
17. XL Insurance Ltd v Owens Corning [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 500, 508; Shashoua v Sharma [2009] EWHC 957 (Comm), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 376; Enercon GmbH v Enercon (India) Ltd [2012] EWHC 689 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 519. Contrast Braes of Doune Wind Farm (Scotland) Ltd v Alfred McAlpine Business Services Ltd [2008] EWHC 426 (TCC), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 608 (contract provides that seat of arbitration to be Scotland but that English courts should have exclusive jurisdiction and Arbitration Act 1996 should apply: Akenhead J. held seat of arbitration was England).
18. Arab National Bank v El Abdali [2004] EWHC 2381 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 541.
19. Arbitration Act 1996 s.3. See DAC Report paras 26, 27; ABB Lummus Global Ltd v Keppel Fels Ltd [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 24 (LCIA rules); Dubai Islamic Bank PJSC v Paymentech Merchant Services Inc [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 65, 74; Arab National Bank v El Abdali, above; and Braes of Doune Wind Farm (Scotland) Ltd v Alfred McAlpine Business Services Ltd, above (relevant circumstances); Petrodulos [2002] L.M.C.L.Q. 66. See also Tonkstar Ltd v American Home Assurance Co [2006] EWHC 1234 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 32 (which court is to determine seat).
20. Dubai Islamic Bank PJSC v Paymentech Merchant Services Inc, above.
21. See Blackaby (1997) 3 Arbitration International 431.
22. s.2(2). See A v B [2006] EWHC 2006 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 237 and below, paras 32–074, 32–185.
23. s.2(3); Mobil Cerro Negro Ltd v Petroleos de Venezuela SA [2008] EWHC 532 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 684.
24. s.2(4); Chalbury McCouat International Ltd v PG Foils Ltd [2010] EWHC 2050 (TCC), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 23 (English law likely to be applied to substance of dispute).

- 25. s.2(5).
- 26. See Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn, Ch.16.
- 27. Black Clawson International Ltd v Papierwerke Wildhof Aschaffenburg AG [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 446, 453; Naviera Amazonica Peruana SA v Compania Internacional de Seguros de Peru [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 116, 119; C v D [2007] EWCA Civ 1282, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239 at [24].
- 28. See s.46; below, para.32-133; Dicey, Morris and Collins at paras 16–047–16–061. The rules of Regulation 593/2008 (Rome I) (see Vol.I, para.30-017) may apply. See also Chalbury McCouat International Ltd v PG Foils Ltd [2010] EWHC 2050 (TCC), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 23 at [26].
- 29. See Dicey, Morris and Collins at paras 16–011–16–028. The rules of Regulation 593/2008 (Rome I) do not apply: see Vol.I, para.30-039 and Parish (2010) 76 Arbitration 661.
- 30. See Dicey, Morris and Collins at paras 16-029-16-046.
- 31. e.g. because the parties have expressly chosen a different law to be applicable to the substance of the dispute: Shagang South-Asia (Hong Kong) Trading Co Ltd v Daewoo Logistics [2015] EWHC 194 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 504.
- 32. Deutsche Shachtbau v Shell International Petroleum Ltd [1990] 1 A.C. 295, 310 CA (reversed on other grounds at 329); XL Insurance Ltd v Owens Corning [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 500; C v D [2007] EWCA Civ 1282, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239; Tamil Nadu Electricity Board v ST-CMS Electric Co Private Ltd [2007] EWHC 1713 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 93; Musawi v RE International (UK) Ltd [2007] EWHC 2981 (Ch), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 326; Sulamerica CIA Nacional de Seguros SA v Enesa Engenharia SA [2012] EWCA Civ 638, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 671; Abuja International Hotels Ltd v Meridien SAS [2012] EWHC 87 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 461; Habas Sinai Ve Tibbi Gazlar Istihsal Endustrisi As v VSC Steel Co Ltd [2013] EWHC 4071 (Comm), [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep 479. cf. Arsanovia Ltd v Cruz City 1 Mauritius Holdings [2012] EWHC 3702 (Comm), [2013] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 1. See Vol.I, paras.30-039 and 32-029, below.
- 33. s.4(5). But see Naviera Amazonica Peruana SA v Compania Internacional de Seguros de Peru [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 116; Halpern v Halpern [2006] EWHC 603 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 83 at [62] (reversed in part [2007] EWCA Civ 291, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 56).
- 34. s.107(2) and Sch.4.
- 35. s.99. Its effect has been largely superseded by the New York Convention. See below, para.32-189.
- 36. s.107(2) and Sch.4.
- 37. s.107(2) and Sch.4.
- 38. s.93 and Sch.2.
- 39. s.11, as substituted by s.99 of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990.
- 40. s.4 and Sch.3.
- 41. s.107(2) and Sch.4.
- 42. SI 1999/2083; replaced by the Consumer Rights Act 2015 Pt 2 for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015. See below, para.38-359.
- 43. 1999 Regulations, Sch.3 para.1(q); Consumer Rights Act 2015 Sch.2 Pt 1 para.20.

- 44. As amended by the 2015 Act Sch.4 para.31.
- 45. As amended by the 2015 Act Sch.4 para.32.
- 46. As amended by SI 1999/678 art.6 and the 2015 Act Sch.4 para.33.
- 47. Unfair Arbitration Agreements (Specified Amount) Order 1999 (SI 1999/2167).
- 48. This should not prevent the consumer from relying on the clause if the consumer wishes to do so.
- 49. Zealandair v Laing Homes Ltd (2000) 2 T.C.L.R. 724; Mylcrist Builders v Buck [2008] EWHC 2172 (TCC), [2008] B.L.R. 611. cf. Heifer International Inc v Christiansen [2007] EWHC 3015 (TCC), [2008] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 831 (Danish arbitration clause inserted by consumer's own lawyers); below, para.38-276. See also Mostaza Claro v Centro Movil Milenium SL (C-168/05) [2007] Bus. L.R. 60 ECJ (consumer's failure to raise unfairness in arbitral proceedings does not determine issue); but see Asturcom Telecommunications SL v Rodriguez Nogueira (C-40/08) on this point.
- 50. SI 2001/1185. But ACAS deals only with employment relations and not with commercial disputes: Flight Training International Inc v International Fire Training Equipment Ltd [2004] EWHC 721, [2004] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 568.
- 51. See Ambrose [2000] L.M.C.L.Q. 468; Nappert [2001] B.J.I.B. & F.L. 16(3), 108–113; Haydn-Williams (2001) 67 Arbitration 289; Robinson and Kasolowsky (2002) 18 Arbitration International 453; Sandy (2004) 20 Arbitration International 305; Berkovits (2005) 71 Arbitration 189; Qureshi (2007) 157 N.L.J. 46; Stothard (2008) 29 Bus. L.R. 2.
- 52. Le Compte, Van Leuven and De Meyere v Belgium, EHR Court, May 27, 1981 (not an arbitration case).
- 53. Deweere v Belgium [1980] 2 E.H.R.R. 439 EHR Court, February 27, 1980; KR v Switzerland, E Com. H.R., Application No.10881/84, March 4, 1987; Axelsson v Sweden, E Com. H.R., Application No.11960/86, July 13, 1990; Jakob Boss Sohne KG v Germany, E Com. H.R., Application No.18479/91, December 2, 1991; Molin v Turkey, E Com. H.R., Application No.23173/94, October 22, 1996; Nordstrom-Janzon v Netherlands, E Com. H.R., Application No.2810/95, November 22, 1996; Suovaniemi v Finland, E Com. H.R., Application No.31737/96, February 23, 1999; North Range Shipping Ltd v Seatrans Shipping Corp [2002] EWCA Civ 405, [2002] 1 W.L.R. 2397 at [17]; Welex AG v Rosa Maritima Ltd (The Epsilon Rosa) [2002] EWHC 762 (Comm), [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 81 at [31] (affirmed [2003] EWCA Civ 938, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 509); BLCT (13096) Ltd v J Sainsbury Plc [2003] EWCA Civ 884, [2004] 2 P. & C.R. 3; Department of Economics, Policy and Development of the City of Moscow v Bankers Trust Co [2004] EWCA Civ 314, [2005] Q.B. 207 at [27]; Stretford v Football Association Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 238, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 31 at [45]; Premium Nafta Products Ltd v Fili Shipping Co Ltd [2007] UKHL 40, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 254 at [20]; El Nasharty v J Sainsbury Plc [2007] EWHC 2618 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 360 at [25]; Broda Agro Trade (Cyprus) Ltd v Alfred C Toepfer International GmbH [2009] EWHC 3318 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 533 at [37]–[43] (affirmed on other grounds [2010] EWCA Civ 1100, [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 243). See also Nishin Shipping Co Ltd v Cleaves & Co Ltd [2003] EWHC 2602, [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 38 at [52] (third parties). cf. Shuttari v Solicitors' Indemnity Fund [2007] EWCA Civ 244, [2007] 1 C.L.C. 303.
- 54. cf. Nordstrom-Janzon v Netherlands, above; Suovaniemi v Finland, above; Stretford v Football Association Ltd, above, at [56].
- 55. 1998 Act s.6(3).
- 56. E Com. H.R., Application No.10881/84, March 4, 1987.
- 57. E Com. H.R., Application No.2810/95, November 22, 1996.

- 58. E Com. H.R., Application No.18479/91, December 2, 1991.
- 59. See Stretford v Football Association Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 238, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 31 at [36]; Broda Agro Trade (Cyprus) Ltd v Alfred C Toepfer International GmbH [2009] EWHC 3318 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 533 at [46] (affirmed on other grounds [2010] EWCA Civ 1100, [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 243); Haydn-Williams (2001) 67 Arbitration 289. However, s.24 of the 1996 Act (see below, para.32-096) only empowers the court to remove an arbitrator if circumstances exist which give rise to justifiable doubts as to his impartiality, and not his independence. But s.3(1) of the 1998 Act requires (so far as it is possible to do so) that statutes be read and given effect in a way compatible with convention rights so that the concept of independence may be imported from art.6(1): See R. v A (No.2) [2001] UKHL 25, [2002] A.C. 45 at [44]; Ghaidan v Godin-Mendoza [2004] UKHL 30, [2004] 2 A.C. 557 at [37]–[52]. See also Stretford v Football Association Ltd, above, at [39–40]; Sandy (2004) 20 Arbitration International 305.
- 60. Axelsson v Sweden, E Com. H.R., Application No.11960/86, July 13, 1990; Stran Greek Refineries v Greece, EHR Court, Application No.13427/87, December 9, 1994; Molin v Turkey, E Com. H.R., Application No.23173/94, October 22, 1996.
- 61. [2002] EWCA Civ 405, [2002] 1 W.L.R. 2397: see below, para.32-168.
- 62. BLCT (13096) Ltd v J Sainsbury Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 884, [2004] 2 P. & C.R. 3; para.32-171, below.
- 63. Department of Economics, Policy and Development of the City of Moscow v BanTERS Trust Co [2004] EWCA Civ 314, [2005] Q.B. 207.
- 64. Sumukan Ltd v Commonwealth Secretariat [2007] EWCA Civ 243, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 87.
- 65. ASM Shipping Ltd of India v TTMI Ltd of England [2006] EWCA Civ 1341, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 136; but see below, para.32-184.
- 66. CGU International Insurance Plc v AstraZenka Insurance Co Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 1340, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 142; but see below, para.32-184.
- 67.  Republic of Kazakhstan v Istil Group Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 471, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 548; but see below, para.32-184. See also Yegiazaryan v Smagin [2016] EWCA Civ 1290, [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 102 at [26].
- 68. Depending on the issue involved, see Vol.I, para.1-073.
- 69. See below, para.32-167.
- 70. See below, para.32-162.
- 71. s.68(2)(g), para.32-162, below.
- 72. See Vol.I, para.1-082.
- 73. See Vol.I, paras 1-087 et seq.
- 74. Capes Hatherden Ltd v Western Arable Services [2009] EWHC 3065 (QB), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 477.
- 75. [2011] UKSC 40, [2011] 1 W.L.R. 1872. See Style and Cleobury (2011) 27 Arbitration International 563.
- 76. [2010] EWCA Civ 712, [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 534.

- 17. SI 2003/1660; see now the Equality Act 2010, para.40-039 below. But see the Arbitration and Mediation Services (Equality) Bill (HL) which prohibits any preference being given to the evidence, interests or property of a man over that of a woman.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 32 - Arbitration ¹

Section 2. - The Arbitration Agreement

Definition of “arbitration agreement” and arbitrability

32-020

! The Arbitration Act 1996 defines an arbitration agreement to mean “an agreement to submit to arbitration present or future disputes (whether they are contractual or not)” ⁷⁸ ! and “dispute” is defined to include any difference. ⁷⁹ It is clear, therefore, that a claim in tort or a dispute which involves a charge of fraud may be the subject matter of an arbitration agreement, although the Act expressly preserves any rule of law as to matters which are “not capable of settlement by arbitration”. ⁸⁰ Certain disputes will obviously not be arbitrable, for example, in family matters, disputes as to the marital status of the parties or the custody of children, ⁸¹ or disputes as to the existence or validity of an intellectual property right granted by the state, such as a patent or trade mark. But most commercial disputes will be arbitrable. ⁸² However, the question has arisen as to the arbitrability of commercial disputes which involve consideration of anti-trust or competition laws, having regard to the complexity of the issues raised and the public interest in ensuring compliance with and observance of those laws. ⁸³ There is little doubt that, in English law, such disputes are arbitrable, although there may be doubts in a particular case whether the claim made falls within the scope of the arbitration agreement on its true construction. ⁸⁴ Further, the European Court of Justice has ruled ⁸⁵ that the arbitral tribunal must address the issue and that a national court to which an application is made for the annulment of the award must grant the application if it considers that the award is in fact contrary to art.81 of the EU Treaty (now art.101 of the TFEU).

Form of agreement

32-021

The arbitration agreement need be in no particular form, and an arbitration clause even in a most summary form, e.g. “arbitration to be settled in London”, ⁸⁶ “& arbitration ... in London”, ⁸⁷ “arbitration, if any, by ICC rules in London” ⁸⁸ or “suitable arbitration clause” ⁸⁹ may be sufficient to amount to an arbitration agreement. But a clause providing, first for arbitration and then, where no resolution is forthcoming for litigation, is not a valid arbitration agreement. ⁹⁰ An agreement to submit a matter to the decision of a third party as valuer or expert will ordinarily not be an arbitration agreement, ⁹¹ but it will be an arbitration agreement if the intention of the parties was that he should hold an inquiry in the nature of a judicial inquiry and hear the respective cases of the parties and decide upon evidence laid before him. ⁹² There can be a valid arbitration agreement even though the agreement confers on one party alone the right to refer a matter to arbitration, and does not give mutual rights of reference. ⁹³ A clause which provides that “either party may elect to have the dispute referred to arbitration” becomes a binding arbitration agreement once a valid election is made. ⁹⁴

32-022

The arbitration agreement may be an ad hoc agreement to refer a particular matter to arbitration or it may consist of an arbitration clause in a larger agreement between the parties. ⁹⁵ It may also consist of, or be limited or extended by, the terms of reference agreed to by the parties, as in the case of ICC arbitrations. ⁹⁶

Agreements to be in writing

32-023

⚠ The provisions of Pt I of the 1996 Act apply only where the arbitration agreement is in writing.⁹⁷ But the concept of an agreement in writing is widely defined.⁹⁸ There is an agreement in writing:

- (a)
if the agreement is made in writing (whether or not it is signed by the parties);
- (b)
if the agreement is made by the exchange of communications in writing; or
- (c)
if the agreement is evidenced in writing.⁹⁹ ⚠

An oral agreement made by reference to terms which are in writing, for example, to a standard form of salvage agreement such as Lloyd's Open Form which contains an arbitration clause, is an agreement "made in writing"¹⁰⁰; and an oral agreement is "evidenced in writing" if it is recorded by one of the parties to the agreement, or by a third party, with the authority of the parties to the agreement.¹⁰¹ Further, if in an exchange of written submissions in arbitral or legal proceedings the existence of an oral agreement is alleged by one party against another party and not denied by the latter in his response, this constitutes as between those parties an agreement in writing to the effect alleged.¹⁰² In view of rapidly evolving means of recording, "writing" includes recording by any means.¹⁰³

32-024

Any other agreement between the parties as to any matter provided for in Pt I of the 1996 Act is likewise effective only if in writing.¹⁰⁴ Thus any derogation by agreement from the non-mandatory provisions of Pt I must be in writing, subject to the broad definition mentioned above.

Oral agreements

32-025

An oral agreement to arbitrate is not invalid, since the common law recognises such an agreement and it is expressly saved by s.81(1)(b). But the provisions of Pt I do not then apply, including, for example, the right to require a stay of legal proceedings¹⁰⁵ and the right to summary enforcement of the award.¹⁰⁶

Incorporation by reference

32-026

An arbitration clause may be incorporated in a contract by reference, e.g. to the standard terms of a trade association or other organisation,¹⁰⁷ or by course of dealing between the parties.¹⁰⁸ If this is disputed, the final decision rests with the court, since it goes to the substantive jurisdiction of the arbitral tribunal. By s.6(2) of the 1996 Act, the reference in an agreement to a written form of arbitration clause or to a document containing an arbitration clause constitutes an arbitration agreement if the reference is such as to make that clause part of the agreement. This sub-section does not, however, purport to decide what is required for the effective incorporation of an arbitration clause by reference, i.e. whether there must be a specific reference to the arbitration clause or whether a reference to a document containing an arbitration clause will suffice. ¹⁰⁹ That is left to be decided by the common law. It has been pointed out ¹¹⁰ that the authorities recognise a distinction between cases in which the parties incorporate the terms of a contract between two other parties or between one of them and a third party (such as bills of lading, reinsurance contracts, excess insurance contracts and building or engineering sub-contracts) and those in which they incorporate standard terms. A restrictive approach is adopted to the incorporation of arbitration clauses in two-contract situations, whereas in a one-contract situation general words suffice. It is therefore a question of construction in each case whether words in a bill of lading which incorporate some or all of the terms of a charterparty into the bill will have the effect of incorporating into the bill an arbitration clause contained in the charterparty. ¹¹¹ Where the parties enter into an agreement subsequent to an agreement which contains an arbitration clause, the clause may be incorporated into the subsequent agreement only if that agreement is not a separate and independent contract. ¹¹²

Onerous or unusual clauses

32-027

An arbitration clause incorporated by reference may be challenged on the ground that it was an onerous or unusual term that ought to have been drawn specifically to the attention of the party alleged to be bound by it. ¹¹³

Separability of arbitration agreement ¹¹⁴

32-028

⚠ Where parties enter into an ad hoc agreement to refer to arbitration an existing or future dispute between them relating to an alleged contract, it is clear that the arbitration agreement is an agreement distinct and separate from the contract in question. But an arbitration clause is often embedded in the substantive contract (the “matrix contract”) to which it relates. Section 7 of the 1996 Act maintains the principle established by the common law ¹¹⁵ that, unless otherwise agreed, ¹¹⁶ ⚠ the arbitration agreement is an agreement distinct from the contract of which it forms part and that its validity or existence or effectiveness is not affected by the fact that that contract is invalid, or did not come into existence or has become ineffective. Two consequences follow. First, since the arbitration clause must be treated as a “distinct agreement” it can be void or voidable only on grounds which relate directly to that agreement. ¹¹⁷ ⚠ Thus the clause may be valid and binding even if, for example, the matrix contract is void, voidable for fraud or misrepresentation, or if it has been discharged by breach, frustration or supervening illegality. Of course, there may be cases in which a claim that no contract came into existence between the parties necessarily entails a denial that there was any agreement to arbitrate. Cases of non est factum, forgery and mistake as to the person may provide instances. But the initial invalidity or illegality of the matrix contract will not necessarily involve these consequences unless it is such as directly to impeach the arbitration agreement itself. ¹¹⁸ Also an arbitration agreement may be binding even though the matrix contract has not come into existence. ¹¹⁹ Secondly, if the arbitration agreement is valid and binding and is sufficiently wide in its terms, ¹²⁰ issues relating to the validity, existence or effectiveness of the matrix contract are within the substantive jurisdiction of the arbitral tribunal and it can decide on those issues. So, for example, it can decide whether an initially valid but voidable contract has been or ought to be rescinded, ¹²¹ whether an allegedly illegal contract is unenforceable by one or both of the parties, ¹²² whether a breach of the contract by one party has brought the contract to an end, ¹²³ whether the contract has been frustrated and the consequences of frustration, ¹²⁴ and whether one party is entitled to terminate or invalidate the contract by virtue of a term contained in it. ¹²⁵ Even if the arbitration agreement is directly impeached, the tribunal may rule on this issue, though not conclusively. ¹²⁶ An appropriately worded arbitration clause may also be held to confer upon the tribunal jurisdiction to rectify the contract in which the clause is contained. ¹²⁷

32-029

Section 7 applies where the law applicable to the arbitration agreement is the law of England even if the seat of the arbitration is elsewhere or has not been designated or determined. ¹²⁸ The law applicable to the arbitration agreement may be different from that which is applicable to the matrix contract. ¹²⁹ Where there is in the same contract an arbitration clause and a clause submitting disputes to the exclusive jurisdiction of a national court, the arbitration clause may be held to have priority over the jurisdiction clause on the ground that the parties must be taken to have agreed on a single tribunal for the resolution of their disputes. ¹³⁰ Alternatively the arbitration clause might be construed as applying to all disputes relating to substantive issues and the jurisdiction clause as a submission to the supervisory or ancillary jurisdiction of the court in respect of the arbitration. ¹³¹

Scope of the arbitration agreement

32-030

⚠ The scope of an arbitration agreement is to be determined by reference to the precise wording of the agreement, construed according to its language and in the light of the circumstances in which it was made. ¹³² But the court will endeavour to give a sensible and effective interpretation to the words used, ¹³³ and will start with the assumption that the parties, as rational businessmen, are likely to have intended any dispute arising out of the relationship into which they have entered or purported to enter to be decided by the same tribunal. ¹³⁴ The words “all disputes or differences” or “all claims” are words of wide import, but must necessarily be controlled by the subject-matter to which they relate. ¹³⁵ The word “difference” is wide enough to embrace a difference between the parties, e.g. as to the price, where the contract provides for this to be determined by mutual agreement, and the parties fail to agree. ¹³⁶ There can be a “dispute” between the parties if a claim is made by one party on the other, which is neither admitted nor disputed, but merely ignored. ¹³⁷ There is also a “dispute” even if the claim made by one party on the other is indisputable, that is, one to which there is no arguable defence. ¹³⁸ The words “in connection with” “in relation to” “in respect of” “concerning” or “with regard to” (a contract) are clearly wide in scope. A wide meaning will also be attributed to the words “arising out of”. ¹³⁹ Thus even a claim for damages in tort ¹⁴⁰ or for contribution under the Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978 ¹⁴¹ or for general average ¹⁴² may be within an arbitration clause if closely connected with the contract, but not a claim on a bill of exchange. ¹⁴³ The words “arising under” a contract were at one time thought to have a narrower meaning ¹⁴⁴; but this distinction has now been rejected by the House of Lords. ¹⁴⁵ ⚠

32-031

Under a clause submitting to arbitration any dispute arising out of a contract, an arbitrator has jurisdiction finally to determine the application of a trade custom affecting the rights and obligations of the parties, ¹⁴⁶ provided that it is not inconsistent with the contract or unreasonable. ¹⁴⁷

Set-off and counterclaim

32-032

Subject to the terms of the arbitration clause, a counterclaim by way of set-off arising out of the same or a closely related contract will be within the scope of the clause but not a counterclaim by way of set-off arising out of a separate and unconnected contract. ¹⁴⁸

Substantive jurisdiction for court

32-033

Though the arbitral tribunal may (unless otherwise agreed) rule whether or not the dispute is within the scope of the arbitration agreement, ¹⁴⁹ it cannot finally decide this issue: it goes to the substantive jurisdiction of the arbitral tribunal which, if challenged, is a matter for the court to determine. ¹⁵⁰

32-034

A dispute as to whether notices of appeal from an arbitrator's award to an appellate tribunal have been properly served does not arise out of the contract but out of the award and is therefore not within the scope of an arbitration clause. ¹⁵¹

Pre-conditions

32-035

⚠ There will normally be no valid reference to arbitration if the arbitration agreement stipulates that certain facts or events shall be a pre-condition of a reference to arbitration and the pre-condition is not fulfilled. ¹⁵² ⚠ Here, too, the arbitral tribunal may rule whether or not facts or events exist which found its jurisdiction, ¹⁵³ but the final determination of this question rests with the court. ¹⁵⁴ A stipulation that the parties should first strive to settle the dispute amicably, or that the dispute should, in the first place, be submitted for conciliation, is not normally such a pre-condition and may not create an enforceable legal obligation. ¹⁵⁵ Where parties agreed that arbitration would be held in London before two arbitrators and an umpire in accordance with ICC rules, the fact that the ICC declined jurisdiction did not frustrate the reference. ¹⁵⁶

Parties bound by arbitration agreement: minors

32-036

A minor is bound by an arbitration agreement in a contract of apprenticeship if the contract as a whole is for his benefit. ¹⁵⁷

Trustees in bankruptcy

32-037

Where a bankrupt has become party to a contract containing an arbitration agreement before the commencement of his bankruptcy, then, if the trustee in bankruptcy adopts the contract, the arbitration agreement is enforceable by or against the trustee in relation to matters arising from or connected with the contract. ¹⁵⁸ Even if the trustee does not adopt the contract, the court has power, on the application either of the trustee with the consent of the creditors' committee established under s.301 of the Insolvency Act 1986, or of any other party to the arbitration agreement, to make an order that the matter be referred to arbitration. ¹⁵⁹ A trustee in bankruptcy may, with the permission of the creditors' committee, refer any dispute to arbitration. ¹⁶⁰ The making of a bankruptcy order does not terminate or operate as a stay of current arbitration proceedings unless the court so orders. ¹⁶¹

Companies

32-038

⚠ A party must make an application to the court for permission to bring an arbitration against a company in compulsory liquidation ¹⁶² and the same applies to a party that wishes to commence or continue arbitration proceedings against a company in administration. ¹⁶³ Where a company is being wound up, the liquidator may, with the sanction of the court or of the liquidation committee, bring or defend proceedings in the name of and on behalf of the company. ¹⁶⁴ But once a company in liquidation is struck off the register of companies it will be dissolved ¹⁶⁵  and ceases to exist. Any arbitration to which the company was a party then comes to an end ¹⁶⁶: it cannot be revived unless the company is restored to the register. ¹⁶⁷ If the rights and obligations of a party to the arbitration agreement are transferred to another company before or at the time of the original party's dissolution, by a doctrine of universal succession or a similar mechanism, the successor may rely on and enforce the arbitration agreement. ¹⁶⁸

Group of companies

32-039

The “group of companies” doctrine which in some legal systems allows a claim to be made in arbitral proceedings by or against a company in the same group of companies as the company that entered into the arbitration agreement forms no part of English law. ¹⁶⁹

Personal representatives

32-040

Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, an arbitration agreement is not discharged by the death of a party and may be enforced by or against the personal representatives of that party. ¹⁷⁰ Personal representatives may submit to arbitration any debt or claim relating to the deceased's estate. ¹⁷¹

The Crown

32-041

Part I of the Arbitration Act 1996 binds the Crown. ¹⁷²

Assignees

32-042

 An assignee of a contract is bound by and may take the benefit of an arbitration clause contained therein, ¹⁷³ but he cannot continue an arbitration already commenced by the assignor unless and until he gives notice of the assignment to the other party to the dispute and submits to the jurisdiction of the arbitrator. ¹⁷⁴  However, if the right to assign the contract in which the arbitration clause is contained is taken away or restricted, then the right to claim arbitration will be similarly circumscribed. ¹⁷⁵

Novation

32-043

Where, as a result of a consensual novation ¹⁷⁶ the claimant has replaced the person originally named as a party, who therefore has ceased to have any rights or duties under the contract, the new party can and must enforce the arbitration clause, for his position is the same as if he had been a party from the outset. ¹⁷⁷

Third parties

32-044

The Contracts (Rights Against Third Parties) Act 1999 enables third parties, that is to say, persons who are not parties to a contract, to enforce a substantive term contained in it in their own right in certain circumstances. Section 8(1) of the Act provides that, where a right to enforce such a term is subject to a term which provides in writing for the submission of disputes to arbitration, then the third party is to be treated for the purposes of the Arbitration Act 1996 as a party to the arbitration agreement as regards disputes between himself and the promisor relating to the enforcement of the substantive term by the third party. ¹⁷⁸ Thus, a third party who is granted the right to enforce a term of the contract, takes it subject to any obligation imposed by the contract to resort to arbitration in order to exercise that right. ¹⁷⁹ Section 8(2) of the 1999 Act further provides for the rare situation which may arise where a right is expressly conferred upon a third party (who does not fall within subs.(1)) to enforce a written arbitration agreement. In such a case, he is to be treated as a party to the agreement for the purposes of the 1996 Act. ¹⁸⁰

Subrogation

32-045

A person subrogated to the rights of an assured under a policy of insurance by virtue of the Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Act 1930 or otherwise is bound by an arbitration clause contained in the policy. ¹⁸¹

Guarantor

32-046

A guarantor may be held to have agreed to arbitration where it has specifically endorsed as surety the contract between the creditor and the principal debtor which contains an arbitration clause. ¹⁸²

Award a condition precedent to action

32-047

The parties to a contract can agree that the award of an arbitrator shall be a condition precedent to the right to bring any legal action in relation to the contract. ¹⁸³ Such a provision is known as a "Scott v Avery clause". Its effect is that no action or other legal proceedings ¹⁸⁴ may be brought until the matters in dispute have been submitted to arbitration, ¹⁸⁵ unless the condition has been waived by the party relying on the clause, ¹⁸⁶ or if his neglect or default has prevented the other party from obtaining an award. ¹⁸⁷ However, if an application is made for a stay of legal proceedings under s.9 of the 1996 Act, and the court refuses a stay, the condition is of no effect in relation to those proceedings. ¹⁸⁸

32-048

Since the cause of action under such a clause does not arise until an arbitrator has made his award, it was formerly held that time under the Statutes of Limitation ran from the date of the award and not from the date of the breach. ¹⁸⁹ But s.13(3) of the 1996 Act provides that, in determining for the purposes of the Limitation Acts when a cause of action accrued, any provision that an award is a condition precedent to the bringing of legal proceedings in respect of a matter to which an arbitration agreement relates is to be disregarded. ¹⁹⁰

32-049

If an accident insurance policy contains a Scott v Avery clause, and by reason of the insolvency of the insured his rights pass to the injured third party under the Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Act 1930, the third party is bound by the clause, for he is merely subrogated by the statute to the rights of the insured.¹⁹¹

Confidentiality

32-050

Parties who arbitrate in England expect that the hearing will be in private. But an essential corollary of the privacy of arbitral proceedings is that they should be and remain confidential. The parties to an arbitration are therefore under a duty to keep confidential information acquired by them in the course of the arbitration.¹⁹² The obligation of confidentiality has often been said to depend upon an implied term in the arbitration agreement but the better view is that it is a rule of law,¹⁹³ the existence and extent of which in a particular case is to be determined by the court and not by the arbitral tribunal.¹⁹⁴ The duty extends not only to the award¹⁹⁵ but also to pleadings, written submissions, proofs of witnesses as well as transcripts and notes of the evidence given in the arbitration.¹⁹⁶ It is, however, not absolute. It is subject to a number of exceptions, in particular if the other party consents to disclosure, or if disclosure is by order or leave of the court or if it is reasonably necessary for the establishment or protection of the legitimate interests of the arbitrating party or if it is required in the interests of justice.¹⁹⁷ But there may be further exceptions or qualifications: for example, the existence and details of an arbitration claim may need to be disclosed to insurers, or to shareholders, or to regulatory authorities.¹⁹⁸ The law in this area has still to be worked out¹⁹⁹ and there is in any event a certain measure of discretion vested in the court to decide whether an exception to confidentiality exists or applies.²⁰⁰ In particular there is some doubt whether the duty of confidence is subject to any broad “public interest” exception.²⁰¹ Breach of the obligation of confidentiality will be restrained by injunction unless the objecting party can be shown to be fraudulent or the claim to relief is in the nature of an abuse of process.²⁰² An implied, or even express, confidentiality provision will not, however, prevent a party from enforcing or challenging the award by proceedings in open court, or from relying on the award to found a plea of issue estoppel²⁰³ in subsequent arbitration proceedings between the same parties.²⁰⁴

1. For a more detailed account of arbitration, and practice and procedure, the reader should consult: Merkin, Arbitration Law (2007); Merkin and Flannery, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Russell on Arbitration, 24th edn (2015); Tweeddale and Tweeddale, Arbitration of Commercial Disputes, 2nd edn (2012); Harris, Planterose and Tecks, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, 2nd edn (1989) and Supplement (2001); Redfern and Hunter, Law and Practice of International Arbitration, 5th edn (2009); Park, Arbitration of International Business Disputes, 2nd edn (2012).

78. ¹s.6(1). In Yegiazaryan v Smagin [2016] EWCA Civ 1290, [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 102 at [43], the Court of Appeal held that the contractual provision under review was an arbitration agreement because it was a mechanism by which a contracting party could be compelled through arbitration to ensure that it complies with its obligations.

79. s.82(1).

80. s.81(1)(a).

81. But see AI v MT [2013] EWHC 100 (Fam), [2013] 2 F.L.R. 371 (“non-binding arbitration”).

82. But see O'Callaghan v Coral Racing Ltd [1998] C.L.Y. 854 (gaming contract); Accentuate Ltd v Asigra Inc [2009] EWHC 2655 (QB), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 599 at [62]-[89] (mandatory provisions of EU law); Clyde & Co LPP v Bates van Winkelhof [2011] I.R.L.R. 467 (sex discrimination in employment). See also Interprods Ltd v De la Rue International Ltd [2014] EWHC 68 (Comm), [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 540; London Steam Ship Owners Mutual Insurance Association Ltd v Spain (No.2) [2013] EWHC 3188 (Comm), [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 309 (allegations of criminality) and Re Vocam Europe Ltd [1998] B.C.C. 396; Exeter City Association Football Club v Football Conference Ltd [2004] EWHC 31 (Ch), [2004] 1 W.L.R.

2910; Fulham Football Club (1987) Ltd v Richards [2011] EWCA Civ 855, [2012] 1 All E.R. 414 (statutory rights of a member of a company). The arbitral tribunal may decide the issue: Azov Shipping Co v Baltic Shipping Co [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 159, 178; Republic of Serbia v Image Sat International [2009] EWHC 2583 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 324 at [114], [123]. Arbitrability and who should determine it is discussed by various authors in (1996) 12 Arbitration International, Issues 2 and 3.

83. See Mitsubishi Motors Corp v Soler Chrysler-Plymouth, 473 U.S. 614 (1985); Att-Gen of New Zealand v Mobil Oil New Zealand Ltd [1989] 2 N.Z.L.R. 649; IBM Australia Ltd v National Distribution Services Pty Ltd (1991) 100 A.L.R. 361 Australia; Carbonneau (1986) 2 Arbitration International 116; Lowenfeld (1986) 2 Arbitration International 178; Kühn (1987) 3 Arbitration International 226; Park (1989) 63 Tulane L.R. 648; Dalhuisen (1995) 11 Arbitration International 151; von Mehren (2003) 19 Arbitration International 465; Billiet (2010) 76 Arbitration (1) 86; Radicati Di Brozolo (2011) 27 Arbitration International 1.
84. ET Plus SA v Welter [2005] EWHC 2115 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 251 at [51].
85. Eco Swiss China Time Ltd v Benetton International NV (C-126/97) [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 44.
86. Tritonia Shipping Inc v South Nelson Products Corp [1966] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 114. See also Naviera Amazonica Peruana v Compañía Internacional de Seguros de Peru [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 116 ("arbitration under the conditions and laws of London"—seat of arbitration London).
87. Transamerican Ocean Contractors Inc v Transchemical Rotterdam BV [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 238.
88. Mangistaumunaigaz Oil Production Association v United World Trade Inc [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 617.
89. Hobbs Padgett & Co (Reinsurance) Ltd v Kirkland Ltd [1969] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 547.
90. Kruppa v Benedetti [2014] EWHC 1887 (Comm), [2014] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 617.
91. See below, para.32-196.
92. Re Carus-Wilson v Greene (1886) 18 Q.B.D. 7, 9. See David Wilson Homes Ltd v Survey Services Ltd [2000] EWCA Civ 34, [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 449 (reference to Q.C. of English bar an arbitration agreement); Wilkinshaw v Diniz [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 237 (reference to Contract Recognition Board, motor racing federation in part an arbitration agreement). cf. O'Callaghan v Coral Racing Ltd, The Times, November 26, 1998 CA (reference of disputes to the editor of Sporting Life, not an arbitration agreement); Wilky Property Holdings Plc v London & Surrey Investments Ltd [2011] EWHC 2226 (Ch) (reference to valuer not arbitration agreement).
93. Pittalis v Sherefettin [1986] Q.B. 868; RGE (Group Services) Ltd v Cleveland Offshore Ltd (1986) 11 Const. L.R. 77; NB Three Shipping Ltd v Harebell Shipping Ltd [2004] EWHC 2001, [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 509. See Mulcahy (2004) 70 Arbitration 172; Nesbitt and Quinlan (2006) 22 Arbitration International 133. Such a provision may be valid in some countries but not in others, e.g. Russia, Sweden.
94. Westfal-Larsen & Co A/S v Ikerigi Compañía Naviera SA [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 424; Whiting v Halverson [2003] EWCA Civ 403.
95. But see below, para.32-028 (separability).
96. Republic of Serbia v Image Sat International NV [2009] EWHC 2853 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 324 at [66], [95], [97]-[99].
97. s.5(1).

- 98. DAC Report, paras 31-40.
- 99. !s.5(2); TTMI SARL v Statoil ASA [2011] EWHC 1150 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 220; Barrier Ltd v Redhall Marine Ltd [2016] EWHC 381 (QB).
- 100. s.5(3). See also Oceanografia SA De CV v DSND Subsea AS [2006] EWHC (Comm), [2007] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 28 (waiver of condition precedent and estoppel by convention): above, Vol.I, paras 4-082, 4-086, 4-108.
- 101. 1996 Act s.5(4).
- 102. s.5(5).
- 103. s.5(6). Quaere whether a voicemail message is included.
- 104. s.5(1). But see s.23(4) (termination of the arbitration agreement).
- 105. 1996 Act s.9.
- 106. s.66.
- 107. Stretford v Football Association Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 238, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 31; Sumukan v Commonwealth Secretariat [2007] EWCA Civ 243, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 87.
- 108. See Vol.I, para.13-011.
- 109. DAC Report para.42; Trygg Hansa Insurance Co Ltd v Equitas Ltd [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 439, 446; Trade Maritime Corp v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Assn (Bermuda) Ltd [2006] EWHC 2530 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 280 at [77].
- 110. By Christopher Clarke J. in Habas Sinai v Tibbi Gazlar Isthisal Endustri AS v Sometal SAL [2010] EWHC 29 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 661 at [12], [13], [34]. See also Sea Trade Maritime Corp v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Association (Bermuda) Ltd [2006] EWHC 2530 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 280 at [65], [81] (Langley J.); Tweeddale and Tweeddale (2010) 76 Arbitration 656; Ahmed (2010) 26 Arbitration International 409; Allison and Dharmananda (2014) 30 Arbitration International (2) 265.
- 111. The principles to be derived from previous cases were summarised by Brandon J. at first instance in The Annefield [1971] P. 168. See Hamilton & Co v Mackie & Sons (1889) 5 T.L.R. 677; T W Thomas & Co Ltd v Portsea SS Co Ltd [1912] A.C. 1; The Njegos [1936] P. 90; The Merak [1965] P. 223 (but see Caresse Navigation Ltd v Zurich Assurances Maroc (The Channel Ranger) [2014] EWCA Civ 1366, [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 256 at [37]-[39]); The Phonizien [1966] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 150; The Annefield, above; The Rena K [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 545, 550, [1979] Q.B. 377; Astro Valiente Compania Naviera SA v Govt of Pakistan (No.2) [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1096; The Sevonia Team [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 640; Miramar Maritime Corp v Holborn Oil Trading Ltd [1984] A.C. 676; Skips A/S Nordheim v Syrian Petroleum Co Ltd [1984] Q.B. 599; Navigazione Alta Italia SpA v Svenska Petroleum AB [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 452; Federal Bulk Carriers Inc v C Itoh & Co Ltd [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 103; Partenreederei m/s Heidberge and Vega Reederei Friedrich Dauber v Grosvenor Grain and Feed Co [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 287; Daval Aciers d'Usinor et de Sacilor v Armare SRL [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1; The Delos [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 702; Welex AG v Rosa Maritime Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 938, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 509; Sotrade Denizcilik Sanayi ve Ticaret AS v Amadon Lo [2008] EWHC 2762 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 145; Kallang Shipping SA Panama v AXA Assurances Senegal [2008] EWHC 2761 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 124; Caresse Navigation Ltd v Zurich Assurances Maroc (The Channel Ranger) [2014] EWCA Civ 1366, [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 256; Golden Endurance Shipping SA v RMA Watanya SA [2014] EWHC 3917 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 266. See also (in other contexts) Modern Building Wales Ltd v Limmer & Trinidad Co Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 1281; The St Raphael [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 403; Pine Top Insurance Co Ltd v Unione Italiana Anglo Saxon Reinsurance Co Ltd [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 476; Aughton v MF Kent Services (1991) 57 B.L.R. 1; Barrett v Henry Boot Management Ltd [1995] C.I.L.L. 1026; Co-operative Wholesale Soc v Saunders and Taylor [1995] 11 Const. L.J. 118; OK Petroleum AB v Vitol Energy SA [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 160; Ceval Alimentos v Agrimpex Trading Co Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 319; Extrudakerb (Maltby Engineering) Ltd v Whitemountain Quarries Ltd, The Times, July 10, 1996; Excess Insurance Co Ltd v Mander [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 119; Roche Products Ltd v Freeman Process Systems Ltd (1997) 80 Build. L.R. 802; Trygg Hansa Insurance Co Ltd v Equitas Ltd [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 439; Secretary of the State for Foreign and Commonwealth Office v Percy Thomas Partnership (1998) 65 Const. L.R. 11; Cigna Life Insurance Co of Europe SA NV v Intercaser SA de Seguros y Reaseguros [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 235; Sea Trade Maritime Corp v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Assn (Bermuda) Ltd [2006] EWHC 2530 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 280; Habas Sinai v Tibbi Gazlar Isthisal Endustri AS v Sometal SAL [2101] EWHC 29 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 661; British American Insurance (Kenya) Ltd v Matelec SAL [2013] EWHC 3278 (Comm), [2014] Lloyd's Rep. L.R. 287. See also the cases cited in n.112, below.

112. Taylor v Warden Insurance Co Ltd (1933) 45 Ll.L. Rep. 218; Kianta Osakeyhtio v Britain & Overseas Trading Co Ltd [1954] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 247; Union of India v EB Aaby's Rederi A/S [1975] A.C. 797; Faghirzadeh v Rudolf Wolff (SA) Pty Ltd [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 630; Fletamentos Maritimos SA v Effjohn International BV [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 304. See also Viscous Global Investment Ltd v Palladium Navigation Corp [2014] EWHC 2654 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 600 (arbitration clause in letter of undertaking replacing charterparty arbitration clauses).

113. Kaye v Nu Skin UK Ltd [2009] EWHC 3509 (Ch), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 40 and para.13-015 above. But see Sumukan v Commonwealth Secretariat [2007] EWCA Civ 243, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 87; Stretford v Football Association Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 238, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 31; William McIlroy Swindon Ltd v Quinn Insurance Ltd [2010] EWHC 2448 (TCC), [2011] B.L.R. 136.

114. See Schwebel, International Arbitration: Three Salient Problems (1987), pp.1-60; Rogers and Launders (1994) 10 Arbitration International 77; Samuel (2008) 24 Arbitration International 489. Under Regulation 593/2008 (Rome I) (Vol.I, para.30-017) arbitration agreements are excluded from the scope of the Regulation, although the contract in which the agreement is contained is subject to the Regulation: see below, para.32-055 n.229.

115. Harbour Assurance Co (UK) Ltd v Kansa General International Insurance Co Ltd [1993] Q.B. 701; Lesotho Highlands Development Authority v Impregilo SA [2005] UKHL 43, [2006] 1 A.C. 221 at [21]. See DAC Report paras 43-47.

116.  In National Iranian Oil Co v Crescent Petroleum Co International Ltd [2016] EWHC 510 (Comm), [2016] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 146, at [7]–[14], the Court held that a contractual choice of law clause, on its own, will not operate as an agreement to the contrary for the purposes of s.7.

117.  Premium Nafta Products Ltd v Fili Shipping Co Ltd [2007] UKHL 40, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 254 at [17] [19] [35]. See also Harbour Assurance Co (UK) Ltd v Kansa General International Insurance Co Ltd, above, at 724; Vee Networks Ltd v Econet Wireless International Ltd [2004] EWHC 2909 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 192 at [20]; DDT Trucks or North America Ltd v DDT Holdings Ltd [2007] EWHC 1542 (Comm), [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 213; Comondate Marine Corp v Pan Australia Shipping Pty Ltd [2006] FCAFC 192, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 119 at [218]–[230]; El Nasharty v J Sainsbury Plc [2007] EWHC 2618 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 360. See also Associated British Ports v Tata Steel UK Ltd [2017] EWHC 694 (Ch), [2017] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 11.

118. Harbour Assurance Co (UK) Ltd v Kansa General International Insurance Co Ltd, above, at 712, 715, 724; Westacre Investments Inc v Jugo-import-SPDR Holding Co Ltd [2000] Q.B. 288; FAI General Insurance Ltd v Ocean Marine Mutual Protection and Indemnity Assn (No.2) [1998] Lloyd's Rep. IR 24. Vee Networks Ltd v Econet Wireless International Ltd, above, at [21]; Premium Nafta Products Ltd v Fili Shipping Co Ltd, above, at [17]–[19]; Beijing Jianlong Heavy Industry Group v Golden Ocean Group Ltd [2013] EWHC 1063 (Comm), [2013] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 436. cf. Smith, Coney & Barrett v Becker, Gray & Co [1916] 2 Ch. 86, 92 (war); Soleimany v Soleimany [1999] Q.B. 785 (public policy); Credit Suisse First Boston (Europe) Ltd

- v Seagate Trading Co Ltd* [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 784 (fraud and mistake); Capital Structure Plc v Time & Tide Construction Ltd [2006] Build. L.R. 226 at [28], [29] (duress); Albon v Naza Motor Trading Sdn Bhd (No.3) [2007] EWHC 665 (Ch), [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1 (forgery).
- 119. Premium Nafta Products Ltd v Fili Shipping Co Ltd [2007] UKHL 40, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. at [18]; UR Power GmbH v Kuok Oils and Grains Pte Ltd [2009] EWHC 1940 (Comm), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 495 at [40]; Novasen SA v Alimenta [2011] EWHC 49 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 390 at [52]. The wording of s.7 provides for this. cf. Hyundai Merchant Marine Co Ltd v Americas Bulk Transport Ltd [2013] EWHC 470 (Comm), [2013] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 649 at [35].
- 120. See below, para.32-030.
- 121. Mackender v Feldia AG [1967] 2 Q.B. 590; Ashville Investments Ltd v Elmer Contractors Ltd [1989] 1 Q.B. 488; Premium Nafta Products Ltd v Fili Shipping Co Ltd, above; El Nasharty v J Sainsbury Plc, above.
- 122. Harbour Assurance Co (UK) Ltd v Kansa General International Insurance Co Ltd, above; Westacre Investments Inc v Jugo-import-SDPR Holding Co Ltd, above, at 129. See also Prodexport State Company for Foreign Trade v ED & F Man Ltd [1973] Q.B. 389 (supervening illegality); Azov Shipping Co v Baltic Shipping Co [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 159, 178 (non-justiciability).
- 123. Heyman v Darwins Ltd [1942] A.C. 356.
- 124. Heyman v Darwins Ltd, above, at 366, 383, 400-401; Kruse v Questier & Co Ltd [1953] 1 Q.B. 669; Government of Gibraltar v Kenney [1956] 2 Q.B. 410.
- 125. Stebbing v Liverpool and London Globe Insurance Co Ltd [1917] 2 K.B. 433; Woodall v Pearl Assurance [1919] 1 K.B. 593; Freshwater v Western Australian Assurance Co [1933] 1 K.B. 515; Paul Smith Ltd v H & S International Holding Inc [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 127. See also De la Garde v Workshop & Co [1928] Ch. 17 (condition precedent).
- 126. See below, para.32-101.
- 127. Ashville Investments Ltd v Elmer Contractors Ltd [1989] Q.B. 488; Overseas Union Insurance Co Ltd v AA Mutual Insurance Co Ltd [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 63; Ethiopian Oil Seeds & Pulses Export Corp v Rio del Mar Foods Inc [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 86. Contrast Printing Machinery Co Ltd v Linotype and Machinery Ltd [1912] 1 Ch. 566; Crane v Hegeman-Harris Co Inc [1939] 3 All E.R. 68.
- 128. 1996 Act s.2(5).
- 129. C v D [2007] EWCA Civ 1282, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239 at [22]-[29]; Sulamerica CIA Nacional de Seguros SA v Enesa Engenharia SA [2012] EWCA Civ 638, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 671; Abuja International Hotels Ltd v Meridien SAS [2012] EWHC 87 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 461; Habors Sinai Ve Tibbi Gazlar Istihsal Endustrisi As v VSC Steel Co Ltd [2013] EWHC 4071 (Comm), [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 479 at [99]-[119]. cf. Arsanovia Ltd v Cruz City 1 Mauritius Holdings [2012] EWHC 3702 (Comm), [2013] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 1. See Haydn-Williams (2012) 78 Arbitration (4) 387; Pearson (2013) 29 Arbitration International (1) 115; Dundas (2013) 79 Arbitration (3) 325; Charles (2014) 80 Arbitration (1) 55; and see Vol.I, para.30-039; above, para.32-009.
- 130. Sulamerica CIA Nacional de Seguros SA v Enesa Engenharia SA [2012] EWHC 42 at [48], [2012] EWCA Civ 638, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 671; British American Insurance (Kenya) Ltd v Matelec SAL [2013] EWHC 3278 (Comm), [2014] Lloyd's Rep.I.R. 287 at [51].
- 131. Paul Smith Ltd v H & S International Holdings Inc [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 127; Tri MG Intra Asia Airlines v Norse Air Charter Ltd [2009] SGHC 13, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 258.
- 132. Heyman v Darwins Ltd [1942] A.C. 356, 366; Lobb Partnership Ltd v Aintree Racecourse Ltd [2000] Build. L.R. 65.

- 133. Star Shipping AS v China National Foreign Trade Transportation Corp [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 445, 452; Benford Ltd v Lopecan SL [2004] EWHC 1897 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 618 at [26].
- 134. Premium Nafta Products Ltd v Fili Shipping Co Ltd [2007] UKHL 40, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 254 at [13]; Comandate Marine Corp v Pan Australia Shopping Pty Ltd [2006] FCAFC 192, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 119 at [165]; Emmott v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd (No.2) [2009] EWHC 1 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 233; Bilta (UK) Ltd v Nazir [2010] EWHC 1086 (Ch), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 29 at [18]. See also CMA CGM SA v Hyundai Mipo Dockyard Co Ltd [2008] EWHC 2791, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 213 ("if any dispute should arise in connection with the interpretation and fulfilment of this contract"). cf. Secretary of State for Transport v Stagecoach South Western Trains Ltd [2009] EWHC 2431 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 175 at [29], [36].
- 135. Re Hohenzollern Act für Locomotivbahn and the City of London Contract Corp (1886) 54 L.T. 596.
- 136. F & G Sykes (Wessex) Ltd v Fine Fare Ltd [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 53; Vosper Thorneycroft Ltd v Ministry of Defence [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 58; Queensland Electricity Generating Board v New Hope Collieries Pty Ltd [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 205. The word "difference" is less hard-edged than "dispute": Amec Civil Engineering Ltd v Secretary of State for Transport [2005] EWCA Civ 291, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 2339 at [31].
- 137. Tradax Internacional SA v Cerrahogullari TAS [1981] 3 All E.R. 344, 350; Ellerine Bros (Pty) Ltd v Klinger [1982] 1 W.L.R. 1375; Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Office v Percy Thomas Partnership (1998) 65 Const. L.R. 11; Marc Rich Agriculture Trading SA v Agrimex Ltd [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 951; Amec Civil Engineering Ltd v Secretary of State for Transport, above, at [30-31]; Collins (Contractors) Ltd v Baltic Quay Management (1994) Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 1757 at [63]. See also Exfin Shipping Ltd v Tolani Shipping Co Ltd [2006] EWHC 1090 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 388 (liability admitted but refusal of immediate payment).
- 138. Halki Shipping Corp v Sopex Oils Ltd [1998] 1 W.L.R. 726; Wealands v CLC Contractors Ltd [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 739.
- 139. Ethiopian Oil Seeds & Pulses Export Corp v Rio del Mar Foods Inc [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 86; Harbour Assurance Co (UK) Ltd v Kansa General International Insurance Co Ltd [1993] Q.B. 701; Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, 2nd edn, p.120. Collateral or even prior or subsequent contracts may, in certain circumstances, be covered: Faghirzadeh v Rudolf Wolff (SA) Pty Ltd [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 630; Overseas Union Insurance Ltd v AA Mutual International Insurance Ltd [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 63; Norscot Rig Management Pvt Ltd v Essar Oilfields Services Ltd [2010] EWHC 195 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 209 at [16]; Deutsche Bank AG v Tongkah Harbour Public Co Ltd [2011] EWHC 2251 (QB), (2011) 108 (34) L.S.G. 20 . cf. X Ltd v Y Ltd [2005] EWHC 769 (TCC), [2005] Build. L.R. 341.
- 140. Astro Vencedor Compañía Naviera SA of Panama v Mabanaft GmbH [1971] 2 Q.B. 588; Lonrho Ltd v Shell Petroleum Ltd, The Times, February 1, 1978; The Playa Larga [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 171; Société Commerciale de Réassurance v Eras International Ltd [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 570; Chimimport Plc v G D'Alesio SAS [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 366; Abdullah M Fahem & Co v Mareb Yemen Insurance Co [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 738; Wealands v CLC Contractors Ltd [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 739; The Delos [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 703; Capital Thrush Investments Ltd v Radio Design TJAB [2002] EWCA Civ 135, [2002] 2 All E.R. 450; Asghar v Legal Services Commission [2004] EWHC 1803 (Ch); ET Plus SA v Welter [2005] EWHC 2115 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 251; CMA CGM SA v Hyundai Mipo Dockyard Co Ltd [2008] EWHC 2791 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 213 at [31]; Bilta (UK) Ltd v Nazir [2010] EWHC 1086 (Ch), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 29 at [17].
- 141. Wealands v CLC Contractors Ltd [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 739.
- 142. Union of India v EB Aaby's Rederi A/S [1975] A.C. 797.
- 143. Nova (Jersey) Knit Ltd v Kammgarn Spinnerei GmbH [1977] 1 W.L.R. 713. Contrast Parharpur

Cooling Towers Ltd v Paramount (WA) Ltd [2007] WASC 234 (Australia).

- 144. Heyman v Darwins Ltd [1942] A.C. 356, 399 (cf. at 393, 394); Government of Gibraltar v Kenney [1956] 2 Q.B. 410, 421; Fillite (Runcorn) Ltd v Aqua-Lift (1989) 45 Build. L.R. 27.
- 145.  Premier Nafta Products Ltd v Fili Shipping Co Ltd [2007] UKHL 40, approving the view of Longmore L.J. in the Court of Appeal sub nom. Fiona Trust and Holding Corp v Privalov [2007] EWCA Civ 20, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 267 at [17]-[18]. See also Comandate Marine Corp v Pan Australia Shipping Pty Ltd [2006] FCAFC 192, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 119 at [162]-[187]. See also Yegiazaryan v Smagin [2016] EWCA Civ 1290, [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 102 at [44]. cf. Microsoft Mobile Oy (Ltd) v Sony Europe Ltd [2017] EWHC 374 (Ch), [2017] 5 C.M.L.R. 5 at [43]-[54].
- 146. Produce Brokers Co Ltd v Olympia Oil and Cake Co Ltd [1916] 1 A.C. 314.
- 147. Produce Brokers Co Ltd v Olympia Oil and Cake Co Ltd [1916] 2 K.B. 296, [1917] 1 K.B. 320, described by Scrutton L.J. at 324 as “a terrible example of the disadvantages of combining a commercial arbitration with proceedings in the courts”. See Vol.I, paras 13-130, 13-136, 14-021, 14-026.
- 148. Metal Distributors (UK) Ltd v ZCCM Investment Holdings Plc [2005] EWHC 156 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 37 at [18]. See also ED&F Man v Société Anonyme Tripolitaine des Usines [1970] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 416; Aectra Refining and Manufacturing Inc v Exmar NV [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1634, 1650; Ronly Holdings v JSC Zestafoni Nikoladze Ferroalloy Plant [2004] EWHC 1354 (Comm), [2004] 1 C.L.C. 1168; Benford Ltd v Lopecan SL [2004] EWHC 1897 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 618; Prekons Insaat Sanayi AS v Rowlands Castle Contracting Group Ltd [2006] EWHC 1367 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 98; Norscot Rig Management Pvt Ltd v Essar Oilfields Services Ltd [2010] EWHC 195 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 209 at [16]. Contrast Econet Satellite Services Ltd v Vee Networks Ltd [2006] EWHC 1664 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 423 (UNCITRAL rules); Emmott v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd (No.2) [2009] EWHC 1 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 233.
- 149. Arbitration Act 1996 ss.30, 31. See below, para.32-101.
- 150. ss.32, 67, 72.
- 151. Getreide-import GmbH v Contimar SA Compañía Industrial Comercial y Marítima [1953] 1 W.L.R. 793. Contrast Gunter Henck v André et Cie SA [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 235.
- 152.  Smith v Martin [1925] 1 K.B. 745; Mid-Glamorgan CC v The Land Authority for Wales (1990) 49 Build. L.R. 61. See, e.g. Ruby Roz Agricol LLP v Republic of Kazakhstan [2017] EWHC 439 (Comm).
- 153. Arbitration Act 1996 ss.30, 31.
- 154. ss.32, 67, 72.
- 155. Courtney & Fairbairn Ltd v Tolaini Bros (Hotels) Ltd [1975] 1 W.L.R. 297; Itex Shipping Pte Ltd v China Ocean Shipping Co [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 522, 525; Paul Smith Ltd v H & S International Holding Inc [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 127, 131; Sulamerica CIA Nacional de Seguros SA v Enesa Engenharia SA [2012] EWCA Civ 638, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 671 at [35], [36]; Wah v Grant Thornton International Ltd [2012] EWHC 3198 (Ch), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 11. But see Channel Tunnel Group Ltd v Balfour Beatty Construction Ltd [1993] A.C. 334; Halifax Financial Services Ltd v Intuitive Systems Ltd [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 303; Cable & Wireless Plc v IBM United Kingdom Ltd [2002] EWHC 2059 (Comm), [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 1041; Holloway v Chancery Mead Ltd [2007] EWHC 2495 (TCC), [2008] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 653; International Research Corp v Lufthansa Systems Asia Pacific Pte Ltd [2012] SGHC 226, [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 24 (Singapore); Emirates Trading Agency LLC v Prime Mineral Exports Private Ltd [2014] EWHC 2104 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 457 (alternative dispute resolution procedure) and ss.9(2), 12(1)(b) of the 1996 Act. See also Amec Civil Engineering

Ltd v Secretary of State for Transport [2005] EWCA Civ 291, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 2339 (reference to engineer under ICE Conditions of Contract); Dundas (2013) 79 Arbitration (2) 221.

- 156. Sumitomo Heavy Industries v Oil and Natural Gas Commission [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 45.
- 157. Slade v Metrodent [1953] 2 Q.B. 112.
- 158. Insolvency Act 1986 s.349A(2) (inserted by s.107(1) of and Sch.3 para.46 to the Arbitration Act 1996).
- 159. Insolvency Act 1986 s.349A(3).
- 160. Insolvency Act 1986 s.314 and Sch.5 para.6.
- 161. Under Insolvency Act 1986 s.285(1). See also Syska v Vivendi Universal SA [2009] EWCA Civ 677, [2009] Bus. L.R. 1494 (foreign bankruptcy).
- 162. Insolvency Act 1986 s.130(2).
- 163. Insolvency Act 1986 Sch.B1 paras 43, 44 inserted by the Enterprise Act 2002 s.248 and Sch.16; S. Straume (UK) Ltd v Bradlov Developments Ltd [2000] B.C.C. 33.
- 164. Insolvency Act 1986 ss.165, 166, 167 and Sch.3 para.4.
- 165.  Companies Act 2006 s.1001. See also ss.1000, 1003. As to a case where there is an issue whether a foreign company has been dissolved, see Silver Dry Bulk Co Ltd v Homer Hulbert Maritime Co Ltd [2017] EWHC 44 (Comm), [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 154 at [25]–[31].
- 166. Morris v Harris [1927] A.C. 252; Baytur SA v Finagro Holdings SA [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 134. cf. Eurosteel Ltd v Stinnes AG [2000] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 964 (assignment before dissolution).
- 167. Companies Act 2006 ss.1024–1034; Union Trans-Pacific Co Ltd v Orient Shipping Rotterdam VB [2002] EWHC 1451 (Comm).
- 168.  A v B [2016] EWHC 3003 (Comm), [2017] 1 W.L.R. 2030.
- 169. Peterson Farms Inc v C & M Farming Ltd [2004] EWHC 121 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 602 at [59].
- 170. Arbitration Act 1996 s.8. See also s.2(5) (conflict of laws).
- 171. Trustee Act 1925 s.15.
- 172. s.106.
- 173. Aspell v Seymour [1929] W.N. 152; Shayler v Woolf [1946] 1 Ch. 320; Rumput (Panama) SA v Islamic Republic of Iran Shipping Lines [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 259; Court Line Ltd v Aktiebolaget Gotaverken [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 283, 289; The Padre Island [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 408; Kaukomarkkinat O/Y v "Elbe" Transport Union GmbH [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 85; Montedipe SpA v JTP-Ro Jugotanker [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 11, 15; Schiffahrtsgesellschaft Detlev von Appen GmbH v Voest Alpine Intertrading GmbH [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 279; STX Pan Ocean Co Ltd v Woori Bank [2012] EWHC 981 (Comm). Contrast Cottage Club Estates Ltd v Woodside Estates Co Ltd [1928] 2 K.B. 463; London Steamship Owners Mutual Insurance Association Ltd v Bombay Trading Co Ltd [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 21, 25; Mustill and Boyd at pp.137–139. See [1992] 8 Arbitration International 121. An assignor under an equitable assignment, of which no notice has been given to the respondent, may still commence an arbitration: Herkules Piling Ltd v Tilbury Construction Ltd (1992) 61 Build. L.R. 107.
- 174.  Montedipe SpA v JTP-Ro Jugotanker, above; Baytur SA v Finagro Holding SA [1992] Q.B.

- 610; Charles M Willie & Co (Shipping) Ltd v Ocean Laser Shipping Ltd [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 225, 241. See also A v B [2016] EWHC 3003 (Comm), [2017] 1 W.L.R. 2030.
- 175. Yeandle v Wynn Realisations Ltd (1999) 47 Const. L.R. 1; Tackaberry [2001] Const. L.J. 17(4), 287.
- 176. See Vol.I, para.19-087.
- 177. Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, 2nd edn (1989), p.137. See Freshwater v Western Australian Assurance Co Ltd [1933] 1 K.B. 315; Dennehy v Bellamy (1938) 60 Ll. L. Rep. 269; Smith v Pearl Assurance Co Ltd (1939) 63 Ll. L. Rep. 1; Oakland Metal Co Ltd v Banairn & Co Ltd [1953] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 192; CMA CGM SA v Hyundai Mipo Dockyard Co Ltd [2008] EWHC 2791 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 213 at [23].
- 178. AES Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant LLP v Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant JSC [2010] EWHC 772 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 493 at [27], [28], [32] (affirmed [2011] EWCA Civ 647, [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 233, [2013] UKSC 35); Fortress Value Recovery Fund 1 LLC v Blue Skye Special Opportunities Fund LP [2013] EWCA Civ 367, [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 606; Tweeddale (2011) 27 Arbitration International 653.
- 179. Nisshin Shipping Co Ltd v Cleaves & Co Ltd [2003] EWHC 2602 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 38; Vol.I, para.18-101. In Fortress Value Recovery Fund 1 LLC v Blue Skye Special Opportunities Fund LP [2013] EWCA Civ 367, [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 606 the Court of Appeal stated that a third party, which seeks to rely on the defence of an exclusion clause in the contract, may in some circumstances be entitled to invoke an arbitration clause in the contract.
- 180. Wright (1999) 2 Int. Arb. L.R. 137; Diamond (2001) 17 Arbitration International 211; Ambrose [2001] J.B.L. 415. cf. Fortress Value Recovery Fund 1 LLC v Blue Skye Special Opportunities Fund LP [2013] EWCA Civ 367, [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 606 at [31], [47].
- 181. Freshwater v Western Australia Insurance Co Ltd [1933] 1 K.B. 515; Dennehy v Bellamy [1938] 2 All E.R. 262; Smits v Pearl Assurance Co Ltd [1939] 1 All E.R. 95; Digby v General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corp Ltd [1940] 2 K.B. 226, 236; The Padre Island [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 408, 414; The Padre Island (No.2) [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 529, 533; London Steamship Owners Mutual Insurance Association Ltd v Bombay Trading Co Ltd [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 21, 26; Schiffahrtsgesellschaft Detler von Appen GmbH v Wiener Allianz Versicherungs AG [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 279; West Tankers Inc v Ras Riunione Adriatica di Sicurta [2005] EWHC 454 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 257 (appealed to the House of Lords on another point: [2007] UKHL 4, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 391); Through Transport Mutual Insurance Assn (Eurasia) Ltd v New India Assurance Co Ltd (No.2) [2005] EWHC 455 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 378; Starlight Shipping Co v Tai Ping Insurance Co [2007] EWHC 1893 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 230 at [13]; William McIlroy Swindon Ltd v Quinn Insurance Ltd [2010] EWHC 2448 (TCC), [2011] B.L.R. 136. cf. Markel International Co Ltd v Craft [2006] EWHC 3150 (Comm), [2007] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 403. See also The Fanti and the Padre Island (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 191. For the position where arbitration proceedings have already commenced, see London Steamship Owners Mutual Insurance Association v Bombay Trading Co Ltd, above. The 1930 Act will be repealed and replaced by the Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Act 2010 when brought into force.
- 182. Stellar Shipping Co LLC v Hudson Shipping Lines [2010] EWHC 2985 (Comm), [2012] I.C.L.C. 476.
- 183. Scott v Avery (1856) 5 H.L.C. 811.
- 184. B v S [2011] EWHC 691 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 18. cf. Mantovani v Carapelli [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 63. See Tweeddale and Tweeddale (2011) 77 Arbitration 423.
- 185. A claim for damages may, in certain circumstances, lie for breach of the clause, which claim will be a dispute arising out of the contract and subject to the arbitration clause: Mantovani v Carapelli SpA [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 375. See also Glencore Grain Ltd v Argos Trading Ltd [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 410.

- 186. Toronto Ry v National British, etc. Insurance Co (1914) 20 Com. Cas. 1.
- 187. As to this, see Hickman & Co v Roberts [1913] A.C. 229; Neale v Richardson [1938] 1 All E.R. 753; cf. Panamena Europea Navigacion Cia Lda v Frederick Leyland & Co Ltd [1947] A.C. 428.
- 188. s.9(5). See also s.10(2) (interpleader).
- 189. Board of Trade v Cayzer, Irvine & Co [1927] A.C. 610.
- 190. See also s.71(4), para.32-180, below.
- 191. Dennehy v Bellamy [1938] 2 All E.R. 262; Socony Mobil Oil Co Inc v West of England Shipowners Mutual Assurance (London) Ltd [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 408 (the 1930 Act will be repealed and replaced when the Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Act 2010 is brought into force).
- 192. Emmott v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 184, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 616 at [79], [105], [115] and [134]. See also Dolling-Baker v Merrett [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1205; Hassneh Insurance Co v Stewart J Mew [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 243; London & Leeds Estates Ltd v Paribas (No.2) [1995] 1 E.G.L.R. 102; Ali Shipping Corp v Shipyard Trogir [1999] 1 W.L.R. 314. Contrast Esso Australia Resources Ltd v Plowman (1995) 183 C.L.R. 10 (High Court of Australia) (not followed in Secretary of State for Transport v Stagecoach South Western Trains Ltd [2009] EWHC 2431 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 175). See Neill (1996) 12 Arbitration International 287; Rogers and Miller (1996) 12 Arbitration International 319; Fortier (1999) 15 Arbitration International 131; Trakman (2002) 18 Arbitration International 1; Rawding and Seeger (2003) 19 Arbitration International 483; Tweeddale (2005) 21 Arbitration International 59; Kovris (2005) 22 J. Int. Arb. (2) 127; Seriki [2006] J.B.L. 300; Misra and Jordans (2006) 23 J. Int. Arb. (1) 39; Crookenden (2009) 25 Arbitration International 603. See also Glidepath BV v Thomson [2005] EWHC 818 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 548 (application by non-party for copies of documents on court record refused on grounds of confidentiality).
- 193. Associated Electric and Gas Insurance Services Ltd v European Reinsurance Co of Zurich [2003] UKPC 11, [2003] 1 W.L.R. 1041 at [20]; Emmott v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 184, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 616 at [84].
- 194. Emmott v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd above, at [84]. But see Thomas L.J. at [119].
- 195. See also Department of Economics, Policy and Development of the City of Moscow v Bankers Trust Co [2004] EWCA Civ 314, [2005] Q.B. 307 (judgment on application to challenge award); CPR r.62.10. Contrast C v D [2007] EWCA Civ 1282, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239 at [34] (practice of Court of Appeal).
- 196. Ali Shipping Corp v Shipyard Trogir, above, at 327.
- 197. Ali Shipping Corp v Shipyard Trogir, above, at 326; Emmott v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd above, at [93], [107]; Westwood Shipping Lines Inc v Universal Schiffahrtsgesellschaft mbh [2012] EWHC 3837 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 670.
- 198. Emmott v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd, above, at [85].
- 199. Emmott v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd, above, at [107], [131].
- 200. cf. Emmott v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd, above, at [87].
- 201. Esso Australia Resources Ltd v Plowman (1995) 183 C.L.R. 10; Commonwealth of Australia v Cockatoo Dockyard Pty Ltd (1995) 36 N.S.W.L.R. 662; London and Leeds Estates Ltd v Paribas Ltd (No.2) [1995] 1 E.G.L.R. 102, 109; Ali Shipping Corp v Shipyard Trogir [1999] 1 W.L.R. 314, 327–328; Emmott v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd, above, at [96]–[100].
- 202. Ali Shipping Corp v Shipyard Trogir, above, at 329.

203. See below, para.32-147.

204. Associated Electric and Gas Insurance Services Ltd v European Reinsurance Co of Zurich [2003] UKPC 11, [2003] 1 W.L.R. 1041.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 32 - Arbitration ¹

Section 3. - Stay of Legal Proceedings

Resort to legal proceedings

32-051

If, contrary to an agreement to refer a matter to arbitration, one party resorts to legal proceedings in an English court in respect of that matter, the court has jurisdiction to hear the dispute. ²⁰⁵ The existence of the arbitration agreement, or even the fact that an arbitration is already in progress, affords no defence to the action. The appropriate course is for the other party to apply for a stay of the legal proceedings. ²⁰⁶ Conversely, there is no principle that requires arbitral proceedings to terminate if a party to the arbitration resorts to legal proceedings. ²⁰⁷ Nor does resort to legal proceedings of itself constitute a repudiation of the arbitration agreement, ²⁰⁸ However, where one party denies that he is bound by the arbitration agreement and thereby repudiates it, the issue of legal proceedings by the other party may amount to an acceptance of the repudiation and so bring the agreement to an end. ²⁰⁹ If there are concurrent or overlapping proceedings in respect of the same matter, both in arbitral and legal proceedings, the court may grant an injunction to restrain the continuance of the arbitral proceedings. But it will not necessarily do so and may allow them to continue. ²¹⁰ Yet in such a case, it would seem that an award in concurrent proceedings without the consent of both parties would then have no effect. ²¹¹

32-052

Damages may be awarded against a party who resorts to legal proceedings in breach of an arbitration agreement, ²¹² or an indemnity, ²¹³ although damages may well be an inadequate remedy. ²¹⁴ A third party who knowingly and intentionally induces or procures such a breach of contract may also be liable in damages in tort. ²¹⁵

Foreign proceedings outside the EU

32-053

⚠ The court has power ²¹⁶ ⚠ to restrain by injunction the institution or continuance of proceedings in a foreign court (not being a court of a Member State of the European Union or of a Lugano Convention state) which are brought in breach of an agreement to arbitrate in England. ²¹⁷ Such an injunction will lie even when neither of the parties to the agreement has commenced or intends to commence arbitration proceedings. ²¹⁸ It will also, where the parties have expressly chosen England as the seat of arbitration, restrain by injunction foreign legal proceedings seeking to challenge, vacate or review an English arbitral award ²¹⁹ or if it is in the interests of justice to do so. ²²⁰ The courts now appear to be more willing to grant anti-suit injunctions than heretofore, ²²¹ ⚠ but it is arguable that the appropriate course for the aggrieved party to take should be to apply to the foreign court for a stay or similar relief. ²²² A judgment given by a court of an overseas country in any proceedings will not be recognised or enforced in the United Kingdom if the bringing of proceedings in that court was contrary to a valid and effective agreement ²²³ under which the dispute in question was to be settled otherwise than by proceedings in the courts of that country, and those proceedings were not brought in that court by, or with the agreement of, the person against whom the judgment was given, and that person did not counterclaim or otherwise submit to the jurisdiction ²²⁴ of that court. ²²⁵

Proceedings within the EU

32-054

In West Tankers Inc v RAS Riunione Adriatica di Sicurta ²²⁶ the House of Lords referred to the European Court of Justice the following question:

“Is it consistent with EC Regulation 44/2001 for a court of a Member State to make an order to restrain a person from commencing or continuing proceedings in another Member State on the ground that such proceedings are in breach of an arbitration agreement?”

The Court, sub nom. Allianz SpA v West Tankers Inc, ²²⁷ answered that question in the negative. As a result of this ruling, it is clear that it was no longer open to an English court to issue an anti-suit injunction to restrain a party from commencing or continuing proceedings in another Member State (including a Lugano Convention State) in breach of an arbitration agreement, although it was equally clear that the ruling did not prevent the issue of an anti-suit injunction where the proceedings were in a non-Member State. ²²⁸

The Revised Brussels Regulation

32-055

The Allianz decision attracted considerable criticism because it appeared to create the opportunity to deploy what has been termed the “foreign torpedo”, ²²⁹ that is to say, that a recalcitrant party could effectively torpedo the arbitral process by initiating proceedings in another Member State where it considered that a favourable decision on the merits and/or on the invalidity or inapplicability of the arbitration agreement was more probable. The further implications of the decision were subsequently considered by the Court of Appeal in National Navigation Co v Endesa Generacion SA (The Wadi Sudr). ²³⁰ In that case a number of important questions were addressed with respect to the effect on an arbitration in England, and on English proceedings relating to arbitration, of legal proceedings in another Member State. These questions involved, in particular, the scope of the “arbitration exception” in art.1(2)(d) of Regulation 44/2001, which provided that the Regulation as a whole should “not apply to arbitration”. ²³¹ In the Allianz case, the European Court gave a narrow interpretation to that exception. Since that time, however, Regulation 44/2001 has been repealed and replaced (from January 10, 2015) by Regulation (EU) 1215/2012 of the European Parliament and the Council. This new regulation (the “revised Regulation” or “Brussels bis”) explains and expands the meaning of the identical arbitration exception in its provisions. Certain aspects of the National Navigation case in consequence now require reconsideration in the light of this change.

32-056

Recital (12) of the revised Regulation provides:

“This Regulation should not apply to arbitration. Nothing in this Regulation should prevent the courts of a Member State, when seised of an action in a matter in respect of which the parties have entered into an arbitration agreement, from referring the parties to arbitration, from staying or dismissing the proceedings, or from examining whether the arbitration agreement is null and void, inoperative or incapable of being performed, in accordance with their national law.

A ruling given by a court of a Member State as to whether or not an arbitration agreement is null and void, inoperative or incapable of being performed should not be subject to the rules of recognition and enforcement laid down in this Regulation, regardless of whether the court decided on this as a principal issue or as an incidental question.

On the other hand, where a court of a Member State, exercising jurisdiction under this Regulation or under national law, has determined that an arbitration agreement is null and void, inoperative or incapable of being performed, this should not preclude that court's judgment on the substance of the matter from being recognised or, as the case may be, enforced in accordance with this Regulation. This should be without prejudice to the competence of the courts of the Member States to decide on the recognition and enforcement of arbitral awards in accordance with the Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards, done at New York on 10 June 1958 ('the 1958 New York Convention'), which takes precedence over this Regulation.

This Regulation should not apply to any action or ancillary proceedings relating to, in particular, the establishment of an arbitral tribunal, the powers of arbitrators, the conduct of an arbitration procedure or any other aspects of such a procedure, nor to any action or judgment concerning the annulment, review, appeal, recognition or enforcement of an arbitral award."

The effect of Recital (12) is not entirely clear, but the following propositions can, it is submitted, be formulated as a result of the revised Regulation.

32-057

First, the revised Regulation does not revive the power of the English courts to issue an anti-suit injunction to restrain a party from commencing or continuing legal proceedings in another Member State in breach of an arbitration agreement since, as the European Court stated in the Allianz case, "an anti-suit injunction ... runs counter to the trust which the Member States accord to one another's legal systems and judicial Institutions". ²³²

32-058

Secondly, where an arbitration is seated in England and one of the parties commences or continues proceedings in another Member State with respect to an identical or related matter either on the substantive claim, e.g. for damages for breach of contract or a declaration of non-liability, or as to the validity or applicability of the arbitration agreement, neither the arbitral tribunal nor an English court in proceedings ancillary to the arbitration is precluded from considering those matters by reason of the mere existence of the foreign proceedings. ²³³ There is nothing to prevent parallel proceedings in both jurisdictions.

32-059

Thirdly, neither the arbitral tribunal nor the court is bound to recognise or enforce the decision of a court of another Member State as to the validity or applicability of an arbitration agreement. The tribunal and the court are free to reach their own conclusion on this matter. This appears clearly from the first and second paragraphs of Recital (12). So, for example, in arbitral proceedings or on an application to the court under ss.32 or 67 of the Arbitration Act 1996 to determine the jurisdiction of the arbitral tribunal or under ss.66 or 101 to enforce the award, the tribunal and the court would not be bound to recognise the judgment of a court of another Member State which has held the arbitration agreement to be invalid or inapplicable. This effectively reverses the decision of the Court of Appeal in the National Navigation case where the court had held ²³⁴ that the judgment of a Spanish court that a London arbitration clause had never been effectively incorporated into the parties' contract had to be recognised under Regulation 44/2001.

32-060

Fourthly, it seems that an English court is (subject to certain exceptions) bound by arts 36 and 39 of the revised Regulation to recognise or, as the case may be, to enforce a judgment given in proceedings in another Member State on the substance of the matter where the foreign court has determined that the arbitration agreement is invalid or inapplicable. The third paragraph of Recital (12) indicates that the “arbitration exception” cannot then be invoked. An English court cannot refuse to recognise the judgment of a court of another Member State on the substance of the matter on the ground that the foreign court came to an erroneous decision on the applicability or enforceability of the arbitration agreement and wrongly assumed jurisdiction. Article 45(3) of the revised Regulation provides that the jurisdiction of a court of Member State cannot be reviewed by a court of another Member State. In any event, it has been held ²³⁵ that the mere fact that a claim is the subject of an arbitration agreement does not deprive a Member State’s court, which could otherwise determine the substance of the claim, of its jurisdiction under Regulation 44/2001 and the same would apply in the case of the revised Regulation. Nevertheless, it might be argued that, at least in certain circumstances, recognition of a judgment on the substance of the matter obtained in a court of a Member State in breach of an arbitration agreement might properly be refused by an English court on the ground that such recognition would be “manifestly contrary to public policy” (art.45(1)(a) of the revised Regulation): see Waller L.J. in Phillip Alexander Securities Ltd v Bamberger. ²³⁶ However, it has been held that a refusal to recognise a judgment under the identical provision (art.34) in Regulation 44/2001 could only be justified if recognition would be “at variance to an unacceptable degree with the legal order of the state in which enforcement is sought inasmuch as it infringes a fundamental principle”. ²³⁷ In the National Navigation case the Court of Appeal ²³⁸ rejected the public policy argument: it could not be said that the judgment of the Spanish court in that case “would involve a manifest breach of a rule of law regarded as essential in the legal order of the United Kingdom or a right recognised as being fundamental within that legal order”. It is therefore unlikely whether circumstances would ever exist (e.g. even a “blatant disregard” of the arbitration agreement) for the application of art.45(1)(a) to be successfully invoked.

32-061

The obligation of the court to recognise a judgment given on the substance of the matter is, however, subject to two exceptions. The first is indicated in the third paragraph of Recital (12) itself. In the event of a conflict between the judgment of the Member State’s court on the substance of the matter and an arbitral award, an English court would be at liberty to decide not to recognise the judgment but instead to enforce the award in accordance with the New York Convention, ²³⁹ which takes precedence over the Regulation. The second exception is that art.45(1)(c) of the revised Regulation requires recognition to be refused “if the judgment sought to be enforced is irreconcilable with a judgment given between the same parties in the Member State addressed”. So, unless and until the foreign court gives judgment, it is open to the claimant to continue the arbitration, obtain an award ²⁴⁰ and then to enforce that award as a judgment under s.66 of the 1996 Act. ²⁴¹ Any subsequent judgment of the foreign court to the contrary on the substance of the matter would not then be required to be recognised in England. ²⁴²

32-062

The final question relates to the effect (if any) on the arbitration itself where the arbitration is seated in England and one of the parties brings proceedings on the substantive claim in another Member State in breach of the arbitration agreement and obtains a judgment on that claim. It is clear that the revised Regulation does not oblige the arbitral tribunal to recognise a judgment given in parallel proceedings in another Member State (even if an English court would be so obliged) because the revised Regulation does not apply to an arbitral tribunal. ²⁴³ Where, however, English law applies to the substance of the matter, then, if English law requires the court to recognise the foreign court’s judgment, it would seem that the arbitral tribunal in applying English law would have to recognise that judgment. An arbitral tribunal, in applying English law, would therefore have to consider whether, under ordinary common law principles, the foreign judgment gives rise to an issue estoppel. In the National Navigation case Moore-Bick L.J. said ²⁴⁴:

“A judgment of a foreign court which is regarded under English conflict of laws rules as having jurisdiction and which is final and conclusive on the merits is entitled to recognition at common law: see Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 14th Edition, paragraphs 14-027—14-029. ²⁴⁵ It follows, therefore, that arbitrators applying English law are bound to give effect to that rule.”

Nevertheless, despite this statement, it must be pointed out that, at common law, as a general rule (subject to certain exceptions) estoppel by res judicata cannot be raised against the party alleged to be estopped where that party has not submitted to the jurisdiction of the foreign court by voluntarily appearing in the foreign proceedings. ²⁴⁶

32-063

The overall result of the changes made by the revised Regulation is to reduce the effectiveness of the “foreign torpedo” but to open up the possibility of conflicting Member State court decisions on the validity of the arbitration agreement and to accord a certain primacy to the judgment of that court which is the first to arrive at a decision on the substance of the matter. It would, perhaps, have been preferable if the revision had, instead, given to the courts of the seat, or putative seat, of arbitration the exclusive—or at least the primary—right to pronounce on the validity and applicability of the arbitration agreement and for that decision then to be recognised and enforceable in other Member States. Unfortunately, however, the concept of the seat is not favoured in certain Member States, nor is there unanimity as to how the seat is to be determined. Moreover, at present, even the English courts have not shown themselves averse to deciding questions on jurisdiction in respect of an alleged arbitration agreement providing for arbitration in another Member State. ²⁴⁷ A more far-reaching revision is therefore unlikely to be achieved.

Stay of legal proceedings

32-064

Section 9 of the Arbitration Act 1996 provides for a stay of legal proceedings brought in an English court contrary to an arbitration agreement. It is a mandatory provision. By s.9(1):

“A party to an arbitration agreement against whom legal proceedings are brought ... in respect of a matter which under the agreement is to be referred to arbitration may (upon notice to the other parties to the proceedings) apply to the court in which the proceedings have been brought to stay the proceedings so far as they concern that matter”. ²⁴⁸

An application can only be made by a party against whom legal proceedings are brought (as opposed to any other party). ²⁴⁹ But “party” is defined to include any person claiming under or through a party to the arbitration agreement, ²⁵⁰ e.g. an assignee. ²⁵¹ The claimant in the legal proceedings must also be a party ²⁵² and the claim in those proceedings must be in respect of a matter which under the agreement is to be referred to arbitration. ²⁵³ A stay can be sought of a counterclaim as well as of a claim, ²⁵⁴ or of part of the legal proceedings only, and an application may be made notwithstanding that the matter is to be referred to arbitration only after the exhaustion of other dispute resolution procedures. ²⁵⁵ Section 9 applies even if the seat of the arbitration is outside England or no seat has been designated or determined. ²⁵⁶ An appeal lies to the Court of Appeal against the grant or refusal of a stay. ²⁵⁷

32-065

Costs of a successful application for a stay may be awarded on an indemnity basis. ²⁵⁸

Time for application to stay

32-066

By s.9(3), an application for a stay:

“... may not be made by a person before taking the appropriate procedural step (if any) to acknowledge the legal proceedings against him or after he has taken any step in those proceedings to answer the substantive claim.”

These conditions reflect to some extent the language of s.4(1) of the Arbitration Act 1950 which stated that an application for a stay might be made “at any time after appearance, and before delivering any pleadings or taking any other steps in the proceedings”. With respect to the 1950 Act it was said:

“The authorities show that a step in the proceedings means something in the nature of an application to the court, and not mere talk between solicitors and solicitors’ clerks nor the writing of letters, but the taking of some step, such as taking out a summons or something of that kind, which is, in the technical sense, a step in the proceedings”.²⁵⁹

But s.9(2) of the 1996 Act adds to the words “after he has taken any step in those proceedings” the words “to answer the substantive claim”, which limits still further the types of procedural steps that may be held to bar an application for a stay.²⁶⁰ Thus the following have been held not to constitute such a bar: an application for leave to defend and counterclaim²⁶¹ and an application for summary judgment in the event that an application for a stay should prove unsuccessful.²⁶² Commencing an action in a foreign court not having jurisdiction to try the claim is not a step in the proceedings.²⁶³ An application for a stay should nevertheless be made as soon as possible lest costs are unnecessarily incurred and thrown away by the delay in taking the arbitration point.²⁶⁴ CPR Pt 11 is not applicable to applications under s.9.²⁶⁵

Mandatory stay

32-067

⚠ On an application under s.9, s.9(4) provides that the court shall grant a stay unless satisfied that the arbitration agreement is null and void,²⁶⁶ ⚠ inoperative,²⁶⁷ ⚠ or incapable of being performed.²⁶⁸ This provision for a mandatory stay reflects the provisions of the UNCITRAL Model Law and the New York Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards. It is in the same terms as that of s.1 of the Arbitration Act 1975 but with the significant omission of the further ground for refusing a stay contained in the 1975 Act that “there is not in fact any dispute between the parties with regard to the matter agreed to be referred”. The onus of satisfying the court that one or more of the three statutory grounds exist for refusing a stay rests upon the party resisting the stay.²⁶⁹

⚠ A cross-claim by way of legal set-off which is subject to a mandatory stay, cannot be set-off against a claim in legal proceedings for summary judgment.²⁷⁰

32-068

⚠ The court has power to decide, on an application for a stay, whether there was an arbitration agreement and whether the dispute was within the agreement, even though the same question could be decided by the arbitral tribunal under s.30.²⁷¹ The court can:

- (1) determine on affidavit evidence that there was an arbitration agreement in which case a stay must be granted;
- (2) stay the proceedings on the basis that the arbitral tribunal is to determine the jurisdictional question under s.30 ²⁷² ;
- (3) refuse to decide the question immediately and order an issue to be tried ²⁷³; or
- (4) decide that there was no arbitration agreement and dismiss the application for a stay. ²⁷⁴

 If the answer to the question is clear, the court should resolve the matter itself rather than grant a stay of the proceedings. Indeed, the Court has said that referring the issue to the arbitral tribunal would be contrary to s.9. ²⁷⁵  The Court has held that in order that the Court determine that there is an applicable arbitration agreement in accordance with s.9(1), the Court must be satisfied that such an agreement exists; it is not sufficient for the applicant to show merely that it has an arguable case that it is a party to an arbitration agreement. ²⁷⁶  If the respondent to the application for a stay wishes to rely on s.9(4) in order to prevent the stay, the Court must come to a clear conclusion that the agreement is null and void, inoperative or incapable of performance; a mere arguable case to the contrary would not be sufficient for the Court to give effect to the arbitration agreement. ²⁷⁷

Discretionary stay

32-069

Section 86 of the 1996 Act nevertheless provides that, in the case of a “domestic agreement” (as defined in s.85(1)), the court may refuse a stay on the further ground that “there are other sufficient grounds for not requiring the parties to abide by the arbitration agreement”. This section, in effect, confers upon the court a wide discretion to refuse a stay similar to that previously conferred in the case of “domestic arbitration agreements” by s.4(1) of the Arbitration Act 1950. But s.86 of the 1996 Act is unlikely to be brought into force ²⁷⁸ and in consequence a stay will be mandatory even in the case of a domestic agreement, subject to the exceptions set out in s.9.

32-070

The court also has power, under its inherent jurisdiction to grant a stay ²⁷⁹ and it has used this power, for example, to stay proceedings properly brought in England in order to await the outcome of an arbitration in a foreign country ²⁸⁰ or on case management grounds. ²⁸¹

Claims indisputably due

32-071

The additional words, referred to in para.32-067 above, which were contained in the 1975 Act but omitted from s.9(4), were a source of some confusion and possible misinterpretation. In particular, they had been held to justify the court, upon an application by a claimant for summary judgment under the former RSC Ord.14, ²⁸² to refuse a stay and give judgment for the amount claimed where the court was satisfied that the claim was indisputably due, on the ground that the court had then decided that in reality there was not in fact any “dispute” between the parties. ²⁸³ The omission of the additional words has taken away from the court the power to refuse a stay and give summary judgment on an indisputable, though nevertheless disputed, claim. ²⁸⁴ Accordingly a claimant will only be entitled to summary judgment without a stay if his claim is admitted. Where part of the claim is admitted, then the court may, on an application for a stay, give summary judgment for that amount, but stay the action in respect of the balance or other matters in dispute. ²⁸⁵ Likewise, if liability is admitted, but there is a dispute as to damages, it would seem that the court could grant a stay on the issue of damages only. ²⁸⁶ The power of the court to give summary judgment on an admitted claim appears to derive from the fact that an admission, in effect, amounts to an agreement to pay the claim, so that the legal proceedings are not brought “in respect of a matter which under the agreement is to be referred to arbitration”. ²⁸⁷

32-072

It is arguable that the court has lost a useful power in no longer being able to give summary judgment on an indisputable, but nevertheless disputed, claim, especially in relation to construction disputes where arbitrations may be long drawn out. But, when seised of such a claim, the arbitration tribunal itself could (under and subject to s.33 of the Act) ²⁸⁸ adopt a procedure equivalent to summary judgment to deal with the claim. If, however, it feels that this is too bold a step to take, it could give directions for an early trial of the issue on the merits. ²⁸⁹

Interpleader issues

32-073

Section 10 of the 1996 Act provides ²⁹⁰ that where in legal proceedings relief by way of interpleader is granted and any issue between the claimants is one in respect of which there is an arbitration agreement between them, the court granting the relief is to direct that the issue be determined by arbitration. The court must so direct unless the circumstances are such that proceedings brought by a claimant in respect of the matter would not be stayed. ²⁹¹

Admiralty proceedings

32-074

Under s.11, ²⁹² where Admiralty proceedings are stayed on the ground that the dispute in question should be submitted to arbitration, the court granting the stay may, if in those proceedings property has been arrested or bail or other security has been given to prevent or obtain release from arrest, either order that the property arrested be retained as security for the satisfaction of an enforceable ²⁹³ award given in the arbitration in respect of that dispute, or order that the stay of those proceedings be conditional on the provision of equivalent security for the satisfaction of any such award.

^{1.} For a more detailed account of arbitration, and practice and procedure, the reader should consult: Merkin, Arbitration Law (2007); Merkin and Flannery, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Russell on Arbitration, 24th edn (2015); Tweeddale and Tweeddale, Arbitration of Commercial Disputes, 2nd edn (2012); Harris, Planterose and Tecks, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, 2nd edn (1989) and Supplement (2001); Redfern and Hunter, Law and Practice of International Arbitration, 5th edn (2009); Park, Arbitration of International Business Disputes, 2nd edn (2012).

^{205.} See also s.43A of the Senior Courts Act 1981, inserted by s.100 of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 (specific powers of arbitrator exercisable by High Court).

206. See below, paras 32-064—32-074.

207. Lloyd v Wright [1983] Q.B. 1065.

208. Rederi Kommanditselskaabet Merc-Scandia IV v Couniniotis SA [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 183; Lloyd v Wright, above; World Pride Shipping Ltd v Daiichi Chuo Kisen Kaisha [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 489; BEA Hotels NV v Bellway LLC [2007] EWHC 1363 (Comm), [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 493; Entico Corp Ltd v UNESCO [2008] EWHC 531 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 673 at [11]; Tri-MG Asia Airlines v Noise Air Charter Ltd [2009] SGHC 13, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 259 at [15]–[21]; National Navigation Co v Endesa Generacion SA [2009] EWHC 196 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 666 at [113]–[117] (reversed on other grounds [2009] EWCA Civ 1397, [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 193).

209. Downing v Al Tameer Establishment [2002] EWCA Civ 721, [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 545. Contrast Hackwood Ltd v Areen Design Services Ltd [2005] EWHC 2322 (TCC), (2006) 22 Const. L.J. 68 (unsuccessful application under s.72).

210. Northern Regional HA v Derek Crouch Construction Co Ltd [1984] Q.B. 644; Industrie Chimiche Italia Centrale v Alexander G Tsaviris & Sons [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 508. See also Lloyd v Wright, above. cf. University of Reading v Miller Construction Ltd (1995) 11 Const. L.J. 388; National Navigation Co v Endesa Generacion SA, above, at [113].

211. Doleman & Sons v Ossett Corp [1912] 3 K.B. 257, as interpreted in Lloyd v Wright, above.

212. Mantovani v Carapelli SpA [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 375; Sotrade Denizcilik Sanayi Ve Ticaret AS v Amadou Lo [2008] EWHC 2762 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 145 at [55]; Kallang Shipping SA Panama v AXA Assurances Senegal [2008] EWHC 2761 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 124 at [79]; West Tankers Inc v Allianz SpA [2012] EWHC 854 (Comm). See also CMA CGH SA v Hyundai Mipo Dockyard Co Ltd [2008] EWHC 2791 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 213; Michaelson and Blanke (2008) 74 Arbitration 23.

213. West Tankers Inc v Allianz SpA [2012] EWHC 854 (Comm), [2012] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 395.

214. Starlight Shipping Co v Tai Ping Insurance Co Ltd [2007] EWHC 1893 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 230 at [12]; Sheffield United Football Club Ltd v West Ham United Football Club Plc [2008] EWHC 2855 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 167 at [22]. See Tan and Yao (2003) 4 L.M.C.L.Q. 435.

215. Sotrade Denizcilik Sanayi Ve Ticaret AS v Amadou Lo, above; Kallang Shipping SA Panama v AXA Assurances Senegal, above.

216.  Under s.37 of the Senior Courts Act 1981 and s.44 of the Arbitration Act 1996; see AES Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant LLP v Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant JSC [2013] UKSC 35, [2013] 1 W.L.R. 1889; BNP Paribas SA v Open Joint Stock Company Russian Machines [2011] EWHC 308 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 61. For the view that the jurisdiction resides only in s.37, see Southport Success SA v Tsingshan Holding Group Co Ltd [2015] EWHC 1974 (Comm), [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 578.

217. Pena Copper Mines Ltd v Rio Tinto Co Ltd (1912) 105 L.T. 846; Gorthon Invest AB v Ford Motor Co Ltd [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 720; Marazura Navegacion SA v Oceanus Mutual Underwriting Association [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 283; Tracom SA v Sudan Oil Seeds Co Ltd (No.2) [1983] 1 W.L.R. 1026; Sokana Industries Co Inc v Freyre & Co Inc [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 57; Aggeliki Charis Compania Maritima SA v Pagnan SpA [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 877; Schiffahrtsgesellschaft Detlev von Appen GmbH v Voest Alpine Intertrading GmbH [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 179; Shell International Petroleum Co v Coral Oil Co Ltd [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 72; Bankers Trust Co Ltd v PT Jakarta International Hotels and Development [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 910; XL Insurance Ltd v Owens Corning [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 500; The Epsilon Rosa (No.2) [2002] EWHC 2035 (Comm), [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 701; affirmed [2003] EWCA Civ 509, [2003]

- 2 Lloyd's Rep. 509; Through Transport Mutual Insurance Association (Eurasia) Ltd v New India Assurance Co Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 1598, [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 67; Atlanska Plovibda v Consignaciones Asturianas SA [2004] EWHC 1273 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 109 at [25]; Starlight Shipping Co v Tai Ping Insurance Co Ltd [2007] EWHC 1893 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 330; Shashoua v Sharma [2009] EWHC 957 (Comm), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 376; Midgulf International Ltd v Groupe Chimiche Tunisien [2010] EWCA Civ 66, [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 543; AES Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant LLP v Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant JSC [2013] UKSC 35, [2013] 1 W.L.R. 1889; REC Wafer Norway AS v Moser Baer Photo Voltaic Ltd [2010] EWHC 2581 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 410; Tryggingarfelagjö Foroyar P/F v CPT Empresas Maritimas SA [2011] EWHC 589 (Admlty); STX Pan Ocean Co Ltd v Woori Bank [2012] EWHC 981 (Comm); Joint Stock Asset Management Co Ingostrakh-Investments v BNP Paribas SA [2012] EWCA Civ 644, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 649; Caresse Navigation Ltd v Zurich Assurances Maroc (The Channel Ranger) [2014] EWCA Civ 1366, [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 256; Golden Endurance Shipping SA v RMA Watanya SA [2014] EWHC 3917 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 266. See also Ecom Agroindustrial Corp Ltd v Mosharaf Composite Textile Mill Ltd [2013] EWHC 1276 (Comm), [2013] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 983 (mandatory injunction). cf. Louis Dreyfus Commodities Kenya Ltd v Bolster Shipping Co Ltd [2010] EWHC 1732 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 455; Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn, para.16–088; Dunning (2008) 74 Arbitration 254, 259. For the test to be applied by an English court when invited to grant an anti-suit injunction, see Donohue v Armco [2002] UKHL 64, [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 425; Turner v Grovit [2001] UKHL 654, [2002] 1 W.L.R. 107 at [22]–[29]; Malhotra v Malhotra [2012] EWHC 3020 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 285; AES Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant LLP v Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant JSC [2013] UKSC 35, [2013] 1 W.L.R. 1889.
218. AES Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant LLP v Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant JSC [2013] UKSC 35, [2013] 1 W.L.R. 1889; Bannai v Erez [2013] EWHC 3689 (Comm), [2014] B.P.I.R. 4.
219. C v D [2007] EWCA Civ 1282, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239; Noble Assurance Co v Gerling-Konzern General Insurance Co [2007] EWHC 253 (Comm), [2007] 1 C.L.C. 85.
220. Midgulf International Ltd v Groupe Chimiche Tunisien [2010] EWCA Civ 66, [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 543 at [142]; Terna Bahrain Holding Co WLL v Al Shamsi [2012] EWHC 3283 (Comm), [2013] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 580 at [129]–[135].
221.  Aggeliki Charis Compañía Marítima SA v Pagnan SpA [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 87; Donohue v Armco, above. But see Airbus Industrie GIE v Patel [1999] 1 A.C. 119; Verity Shipping SA v NV Norexa [2008] EWHC 213 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 652. See also Sheffield United Football Club Ltd v West Ham United Football Club Plc [2008] EWHC 2855 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 167; Masri v Consolidated Contractors International SAL [2008] EWCA Civ 625, [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 301; Malhotra v Malhotra [2012] EWHC 3020 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 285; Crescendo Maritime Co v Bank of Communications Co Ltd [2015] EWHC 3364 (Comm), [2016] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 414. In ADM Asia-Pacific Trading Pte Ltd v PT Budi Semesta Satria [2016] EWHC 1427 (Comm) the Court declined to grant an anti-suit injunction because of the delay in making the application. See also Essar Shipping Ltd v Bank of China Ltd [2015] EWHC 3266 (Comm), [2016] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 427; Ecobank Transnational Inc v Tanoh [2015] EWCA Civ 1309, [2016] 1 W.L.R. 2231 (anti-enforcement injunction). The court will not necessarily restrain an application brought in a foreign court for interim or conservatory measures with respect to an arbitration in England: U&M Mining Zambia Ltd v Kankola Copper Mines Plc [2013] EWHC 260 (Comm), [2013] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 218. Where a third party seeks to exercise rights under a contract containing an arbitration clause, see Shipowners' Mutual Protection and Indemnity Association (Luxembourg) v Containerships Denizcilik Nakliyat ve Ticaret AS [2016] EWCA Civ 386, [2016] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 641.
222. World Pride Shipping Ltd v Daiichi Chuo Kisen Kaisha [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 489, 498 (but see the observations on this case in Aggeliki Charis Compania Maritima SA v Pagnan SpA, above).
223. Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments Act 1982 s.32(2). But see s.32(3) and n.215, above.

- 224. Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments Act 1982 s.33.
- 225. Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments Act 1982 s.32(1). See Tracom SA v Sudan Oil Seeds Co Ltd (No.2) [1983] 1 W.L.R. 1026; AES Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant LLP v Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant JSC [2013] UKSC 35, [2013] 1 W.L.R. 1889.
- 226. [2007] UKHL 4, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 391.
- 227. C-185/07 [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 413 (see also the opinion of Advocate-General Kokott in the reference: [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 661).
- 228. Shashoua v Sharma [2009] EWHC 957 (Comm) at [23] and [35]–[39]; Midgulf International Ltd v Groupe Chimiche Tunisien [2010] EWCA Civ 66, [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 543 at [68].
- 229. See Dutson and Howarth (2009) 75 Arbitration (3) 334; (2010) 76 Arbitration (2) 374. See also generally on the effect of the Revised Regulation: Camilleri (2013) 62 I.C.L.Q. 899–916.
- 230. [2009] EWCA Civ 1397, [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 175 (reversing a decision at first instance of Gloster J. [2009] EWHC 196 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 666).
- 231. See Marc Rich & Co AG v Societa Italiana Impianti SpA (The Atlantic Emperor) [1991] E.C.R. I-3855, [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 342 ECJ.
- 232. But see Gazprom OAO (C-536/13) [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 610 (anti-suit injunction by arbitral tribunal).
- 233. Toyota Tsusho Sugar Trading Ltd v Prolat SRL [2014] EWHC 3649 (Comm) at [15]–[17].
- 234. [2009] EWCA Civ 1397, [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 175.
- 235. Youell v La Reunion Aerienne [2009] EWCA Civ 175 at [34].
- 236. [1997] 1 L.Pr. 73 at [14] (referred to in CMA CGM SA v Hyundai Mipo Dockyard Co Ltd, above, at [35], and DHL GBS (UK) Ltd v Fallimento Finmatica SpA, above, at [21]).
- 237. Krombach v Bamerski (C-7/98) [2000] E.C.R. I-1935 at [23]; Gambazzi v Daimler-Chrysler Canada Inc (C-394/07) [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 647 at [27].
- 238. [2009] EWCA Civ 1397 at [66], [131] (even by Waller L.J.).
- 239. See below, para.32-189. But the New York Convention (art.1) applies essentially only to the recognition or enforcement in one state of an award made in another state and not to the recognition or enforcement of an award made in the state in which recognition or enforcement is sought.
- 240. Including an award of damages for breach of the obligation to arbitrate or for an indemnity: West Tankers Inc v Allianz SpA [2012] EWHC 854 (Comm).
- 241. West Tankers Inc v Allianz SpA [2012] EWCA Civ 27, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 398; African Fertilizers and Chemicals NIG Ltd v BD Shippersnavo GmbH & Co Reederei KG [2011] EWHC 2452 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 531 (enforcement of declaratory awards).
- 242. art.45(1)(c).
- 243. CMA CGM SA v Hyundai Mipo Dockyard Co Ltd [2008] EWHC 2791 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 213 at [43]–[46]; National Navigation case [2009] EWCA Civ 1397 at [118].
- 244. [2009] EWCA Civ 1397, [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 175 at [115], disapproving the view to the contrary taken by Burton J. in CMA CGM SA v Hyundai Mipo Dockyard Ltd, above, at [46].

- 245. In the 15th edition, paras 14-054—14-096.
- 246. Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn, para.14-068.
- 247. Claxton Engineering Services Ltd v TXM Olaj-es Gazkutato Kft [2010] EWHC 2567 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 252; Claxton Engineering Services Ltd v TXM Olaj-es Gazkutato Kft [2011] EWHC 345 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 510.
- 248. For procedure, see CPR r.62.8, PD 62.2. Contrast Exeter City Association Football Club Ltd v Football Conference Ltd [2004] EWHC 2304 (Ch), [2004] 1 W.L.R. 291 (no stay of petition under s.459 of Companies Act 1985); Best Beat Ltd v Rossall [2006] EWHC 1494, [2006] B.P.I.R. 1357 (no stay of winding-up petition).
- 249. Excalibur Ventures LLC v Texas Keystone Inc [2011] EWHC 1624 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 289 at [74]. But see CPR r.3.1(2)(f).
- 250. 1996 Act s.82(2). See Roussel-Uclaf v GD Searle & Co Ltd [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 225 (overruled by the Court of Appeal in City of London v Sancheti [2008] EWCA Civ 1283, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 117); Rumput (Panama) SA v Islamic Republic of Iran Shipping Lines [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 259. But not by a third party: Eltri Fans Ltd v NMB (UK) Ltd [1987] 1 W.L.R. 110, or by the arbitrator: A v B [2006] EWHC 2006 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 237. A guarantor of a party to a contract containing an arbitration clause is not such a person: Alfred McAlpine Construction v Unex Corp [1994] N.P.C. 16, but the court might stay an action against the guarantor under its inherent jurisdiction: as before and see Roche Products Ltd v Freeman Process Systems Ltd (1997) 80 Build. L.R. 802.
- 251. See above, para.32-042.
- 252. City of London v Sancheti [2008] EWCA Civ 1283, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 117; J&W Sanderson Ltd v Fenox (UK) Ltd [2014] EWHC 4322 (Ch).
- 253. Lombard North Central Plc v GATX Corp [2012] EWHC 1067 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 662. cf. Sheffield United Football Club v West Ham United Football Club Plc [2008] EWHC 2855 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 167 (application for anti-suit injunction not such a matter).
- 254. 1996 Act s.9(1).
- 255. s.9(2).
- 256. s.2(2); ET Peus SA v Welter [2005] EWHC 2115 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 251 (ICC arbitration in Paris). Contrast Abu Dhabi Investment Co v H Clarkson & Co Ltd [2006] EWHC 1252 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 381 (arbitration in UAR where not compulsory).
- 257. Inco Europe Ltd v First Choice Distribution [2000] 1 W.L.R. 586 HL.
- 258. A v B (No.2) [2007] EWHC 54 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 358. See also Kyrgyz Mobil Tel Ltd v Fellows International Holdings Ltd [2005] EWHC 1329 (HC); and (damages) Michaelson and Blanke (2008) 74 Arbitration (1) 12. Contrast C v D [2007] EWCA Civ 1282, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239 at [33].
- 259. Ives and Barker v Willans [1894] 2 Ch. 478, 484. See also Eagle Star Insurance Co Ltd v Yuval Insurance Co Ltd [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 357, 361; and the cases cited in Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, pp.472-473.
- 260. Patel v Patel [2002] Q.B. 551.
- 261. Patel v Patel [2002] Q.B. 551. cf. Baker Hughes Ltd v Steadfast Engineering Ltd [2009] EWHC 3123 (QB); Bilta (UK) Ltd v Nazir [2010] EWHC 1086 (Ch), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 29 (application to extend time for defence).

- 262. Capital Trust Investments Ltd v Radio Design TJAB [2002] EWCA Civ 1356, [2002] All E.R. 450.
- 263. Thyssen Inc v Calypso Shipping Corp SA [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 243.
- 264. Bovis Homes Ltd v Kendrick Construction Ltd [2009] EWHC 1359 (TCC), [2009] T.C.L.R. 8.
- 265. Bilta (UK) Ltd v Nazir [2010] EWHC 1086 (Ch), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 29.
- 266. ! Willcock v Pickfords Removals Ltd [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 244; AB Bofors-UVA v AB Skandia [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 410; Accentuate Ltd v Asigra Inc [2009] EWHC 2655 (QB), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 599 at [89]; cf. Cia Maritima Zorroza SA v Sesostris [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 652; JSC BTA Bank v Ablyazov [2011] EWHC 587 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 129; Assaubayer v Michael Wilson and Partners Ltd [2014] EWHC 821 (QB). See also Associated British Ports v Tata Steel UK Ltd [2017] EWHC 694 (Ch), [2017] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 11 at [20] (the issue in this case was whether the arbitration agreement was void for uncertainty).
- 267. ! Downing v Al Tameer Establishment [2002] EWCA Civ 121, [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 545; Accentuate Ltd v Asigra Inc [2009] EWHC 2655, [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 599 at [89]; Aeroflot-Russian Airlines v Berezovsky [2012] EWHC 1610 (Ch) at [104]-[112]; cf. Lonhro v Shell Petroleum Co, The Times, February 1, 1978; The Merak [1965] P. 223, 229; Ethiopian Oilseeds & Pulses Export Corp v Rio del Mar Foods Inc [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 86, 98; JSC BTA Bank v Ablyazov [2011] EWHC 587 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 129; Lombard North Central Plc v GATX Corp [2012] EWHC 1067 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 662; Joint Stock Co Aeroflot Russian Airlines v Berezovsky [2013] EWCA Civ 784, [2013] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 242; BDM Ltd v Rafael Advance Defence Systems [2014] EWHC 451 (Comm). An arbitration agreement may be inoperative, if it has been abandoned or repudiated or if a party to the agreement is estopped from relying on it: Costain Ltd v Tarmac Holdings Ltd [2017] EWHC 319 (TCC), [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 331 at [81]-[127].
- 268. cf. The Rena K. [1979] Q.B. 377 (ability to satisfy award irrelevant); Paczy v Haendler & Natermann GmbH [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 302 (impecuniosity of claimant irrelevant).
- 269. ! Nova (Jersey) Knit Ltd v Kammgarn Spinnerei GmbH [1977] 1 W.L.R. 713, 718. But cf. at 732. See also Associated British Ports v Tata Steel UK Ltd [2017] EWHC 694 (Ch), [2017] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 11 at [20].
- 270. Aectra Refining and Manufacturing Inc v Exmar NV [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1634.
- 271. See below, para.32-101. In Fiona Trust & Holding Corp v Privalov [2007] EWCA Civ 20, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 267 (affirmed sub nom. Premier Nafta Products Ltd v Fili Shipping Co Ltd [2007] UKHL 40) the Court of Appeal appears to have suggested (at [34]) that the arbitrators should be the first tribunal to consider jurisdiction. Contrast Law Debenture Trust Corp v Elektrim Finance Debenture Trust Corp v Elektrim Finance BV [2005] EWHC 1412 (Ch), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 755; Albon Naza Motor Trading Sdn Bhd (No.3) [2007] EWHC 327 (Ch), [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1; JSC BTA Bank v Ablyazov [2011] EWHC 587 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 129; AES Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant LLP v Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant JSC [2011] EWCA Civ 647, [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 233 at [81]-[85], [98]-[100], [2013] UKSC 35, [2013] 1 W.L.R. 1889; Excalibur Ventures LLC v Texas Keystone Inc [2011] EWHC 1624 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 289 at [57]-[67].
- 272. ! In Albon v Naza Motor Trading Sdn Bhd (No.3), above, at [16] it was suggested that this could only be done under the inherent jurisdiction (below, para.32-070) as s.9 requires the court to be satisfied that there is an arbitration agreement and that the dispute is within that agreement before granting a stay. See also Capes (Hatherden) Ltd v Western Arable Services Ltd [2009] EWHC 3065 (QB), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 477 at [22]; Hashwani v OMV Maurice Energy Ltd [2015] EWHC 1811 (Comm) at [26]; [2015] EWCA Civ 1171, (2015) 163 Con. L.R. 259 at [31]-[34] (reversing the judge's decision in exercising his discretion to order a stay).

- 273. Bilta (UK) Ltd v Nazir [2010] EWHC 1086 (Ch), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 29; Kaye v Nu Skin UK Ltd [2009] EWHC 3509 (Ch), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 40. But see JSC BTA Bank v Ablyazov [2011] EWHC 587 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 129 at [29], [50].
- 274. Ahmad Al-Naimi (t/a Buildmaster Construction Services) v Islamic Press Agency Inc [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 522; approving the analysis in Buisse Construction Ltd v St David Ltd [1999] Build. L.R. 194, [2000] Build. L.R. 57; Capes (Hatherden) Ltd v Western Arable Services Ltd [2009] EWHC 3065 (QB), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 477; Dallah Real Estate & Tourism Co v Ministry of Religious Affairs of the Government of Pakistan [2010] UKSC 46, [2011] 1 A.C. 763 at [97]; JSC BTA Bank v Ablyozov [2011] EWHC 587 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 129 at [28]. But see the observations of the Court of Appeal in Claxton Engineering Services Ltd v TXM Olaj-es Gazkutato Kft [2011] EWCA Civ 410, [2011] Arb. L.R. 16.
- 275.  Joint Stock Company "Aeroflot Russian Airlines" v Berezovsky [2013] EWCA Civ 784, [2013] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 242 at [76]–[79]; Costain Ltd v Tarmac Holdings Ltd [2017] EWHC 319 (TCC), [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 331 at [80]; Microsoft Mobile Oy (Ltd) v Sony Europe Ltd [2017] EWHC 374 (Ch), [2017] 5 C.M.L.R. 5 at [41] and [82]–[84].
- 276.  Associated British Ports v Tata Steel UK Ltd [2017] EWHC 694 (Ch), [2017] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 11 at [20].
- 277.  Golden Ocean Group Ltd v Humpuss Intermoda Transportasi TBK Ltd (The Barito) [2013] EWHC 1240 (Comm); [2013] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 421 at [73].
- 278. See above, para.32-005.
- 279. Ahmad Al-Naimi (t/a Buildmaster Construction Services) v Islamic Press Agency [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 522, 525; T&N Ltd v Royal & Sun Alliance Plc [2002] EWHC 2420, [2002] C.L.C. 1342; Albon v Naza Motor Trading Sdn Bhd (No.3) [2007] EWHC 327 (Ch), [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1 at [16]–[24]; Turville Heath Inc v Chartis Insurance UK Ltd [2012] EWHC 3019 (TCC), 145 Con. L.R. 163; Assaubayer v Michael Wilson and Partners Ltd [2014] EWHC 821 (QB); cf. El Nasharty v J Sainsbury Plc [2003] EWHC 2195 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 309 at [29]; City of London v Sancheti [2008] EWCA Civ 1283, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 117; Clyde & Co LLP v Bates van Winkelhof [2011] EWHC 668 (QB), [2011] I.R.L.R. 467; PT Thiess Contractors Indonesia v PT Kaltim Prima Coal [2011] EWHC 1842 (Comm); Deutsche Bank AG v Tongkah Harbour Public Co Ltd [2011] EWHC 2251 (QB), [2012] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 194; J&W Sanderson Ltd v Fenox (UK) Ltd [2014] EWHC 4322 (Ch).
- 280. Reichhold Norway ASA v Goldman Sachs International [2002] 1 W.L.R. 173; ET Plus SA v Welter [2005] EWHC 2115 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 251 at [91]; Citigroup Global Markets Ltd v Amatra Leveraged Feeder Holdings Ltd [2012] EWHC 1331 (Comm) at [73]–[82]. See also A v B [2006] EWHC 2006 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 237 (application by arbitrator). cf. Classic Maritime Inc v Lion Diversified Holdings Berhad [2009] EWHC 1142 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 59.
- 281. JSC BTA Bank v Ablyazov [2011] EWHC 587 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 129; Lombard North Central Plc v GATX Corp [2012] EWHC 1067 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 662.
- 282. Now CPR Pt 24.
- 283. See the discussion in Hayter v Nelson and Home Insurance Co [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 265 CA; DAC Report para.55.
- 284. Halki Shipping Corp v Sopex Oils Ltd [1998] 1 W.L.R. 726; Wealands v CLC Contractors Ltd [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 739; Collins (Contractors) Ltd v Baltic Quay Management (1994) Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 1757, [2005] Build. L.R. 63.
- 285. Ellis Mechanical Services Ltd v Wates Construction Ltd [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 33. Contrast Associated Bulk Carriers Ltd v Koch Shipping Inc [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 24.

- 286. Texaco Ltd v Eurogulf Shipping Ltd [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 541.
- 287. But in Glencore Trading Ltd v Agros Trading Ltd [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 410, Clarke L.J. said, 422, "I do not accept that a dispute cannot continue to be a dispute once the claim has been admitted". See also Getwick Engineers Ltd v Pilecon Engineering Ltd [2002] 1020 HKCV 1 at [23]; Tri-MG Intra Asia Airlines v Norse Air Charters Ltd [2009] SGHC 13, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 258 at [58] and above, para.32-030.
- 288. See below, para.32-106.
- 289. See (1997) 13 Arbitration International 403, 424; cf. (1998) 64 Arbitration (No.1, Supplement) 48.
- 290. This section is based on s.5 of the 1950 Act. It is mandatory.
- 291. subs.(2) deals with the effect of dismissal of the application on a "Scott v Avery" clause: see above, para.32-047.
- 292. This section re-enacted s.26 of the Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments Act 1982, but with the omission of subs.(2) of that section. It is mandatory.
- 293. i.e. enforceable in England.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 32 - Arbitration ¹

Section 4. - Commencement of Arbitral Proceedings

Conditions as to time

32-075

The parties to a contract may lawfully agree that arbitral proceedings must be commenced, and the claimant's arbitrator appointed, within a shorter time than that allowed by the Limitation Act 1980, and that if this provision is not complied with the claim shall be deemed to be waived and absolutely barred. ²⁹⁴ Such a clause is not contrary to public policy as tending to oust the jurisdiction of the court, however short the time may be. ²⁹⁵ Yet a clause of this nature will be narrowly construed ²⁹⁶ and it may even be that a party who commits a fundamental breach of contract will be unable to take advantage of the clause when sued in the ordinary courts. ²⁹⁷ But if the other party claims arbitration in such a case, he cannot do so after the time has expired ²⁹⁸ unless the court exercises its statutory power to extend the time. A claim will be barred by an arbitrator's award deciding that the claim is out of time, ²⁹⁹ but not by an arbitrator declining jurisdiction. ³⁰⁰

Power of court to extend time for beginning arbitral proceedings

32-076

Section 12 of the 1996 Act confers on the court power to extend a contractual time limit which would otherwise bar the claim. Where an arbitration agreement to refer future disputes to arbitration provides that a claim shall be barred, or the claimant's right extinguished, unless the claimant takes within a time fixed by the agreement some step to begin arbitral proceedings (or to begin other dispute resolution procedures which must be exhausted before arbitral proceedings can be begun), the court may by order extend the time for taking that step. ³⁰¹ An application for such an order can be made only after a claim has arisen and after exhausting any available arbitral process for obtaining an extension of time. ³⁰² Previously, under s.27 of the 1950 Act, the court had a wide discretion to extend time "if of opinion that in the circumstances of the case undue hardship would otherwise be caused". But, under s.12(3), a much narrower test is to be applied. ³⁰³ The court can make an order only if satisfied: that the circumstances are such as were outside the reasonable contemplation of the parties when they agreed the provision in question, and that it would be just to extend the time, or that the conduct of one party makes it unjust to hold the other party to the strict terms of the provision in question.

(a)

(b)

 It is to be noted that subs.3(a) places no limit on the circumstances referred to and that all the circumstances in which the application for an extension arises are potentially relevant, ³⁰⁴ provided that they caused or at least significantly contributed to the failure to observe the time bar. ³⁰⁵ But the court can have regard only to such circumstances as were “outside the reasonable contemplation of the parties when they agreed the provision in question” and this may involve consideration of the relevant transaction, of ordinary practices within that type of transaction and with the reasonable expectation of parties involved in such a transaction. ³⁰⁶ It has also been said that the circumstances must be such that, if they had been drawn to the attention of the parties when they agreed the provision, they would at the very least have contemplated that the time-bar might not apply. ³⁰⁷ The fact that a party failed to read or comprehend the time limitation clause in the contract, or the fact that a party made a mistake as to the operation of the clause both in regard to making a claim and appointing an arbitrator, has been held not to be something which was outside the reasonable contemplation of the parties. ³⁰⁸ The ground set out in subs.3(b) would appear to require at least that the failure to comply with the time bar is attributable to the conduct of the party relying on the clause.

³⁰⁹

32-077

An order extending time is therefore likely to be the exception rather than the rule. It is arguable that time limitation clauses are a beneficial feature in commercial contracts, since they enable the parties to draw a line beneath transactions at a much earlier stage than limitation statutes allow, and the underlying philosophy of the 1996 Act is to respect party autonomy. Nevertheless, a clause barring a claim unless arbitral proceedings or other dispute resolution procedures are begun within a short period of time can operate very harshly in some situations, for example, in “string” contracts where the buyer resells the goods and defects therein do not become apparent until time has expired. In consumer contracts, clauses imposing a time limit for the commencement of arbitral proceedings may well be regarded as unfair and so not binding on the consumer under the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 ³¹⁰ or (for contracts made after October 1, 2014) the Consumer Rights Act 2015 Pt 2. ³¹¹

32-078

If the conditions are satisfied for the making of an order, the court may extend the period and on such terms as it thinks fit, and may do so whether or not the time previously fixed (by agreement or by a previous order) has expired. ³¹² The permission of the court is required for any appeal from a decision of the court under s.12. ³¹³ The applicant will normally have to pay the costs of any s.12 application.

32-079

The court’s power to extend time for beginning arbitral proceedings applies, not only where the effect of a failure to comply with the stipulated time limit is merely to deprive a claimant of the right to go to arbitration, but also where noncompliance bars or extinguishes the claim itself. ³¹⁴ But no such power exists if the clause provides that a claim is to be barred or extinguished unless notified to the other party within a limited period of time, except where such notification is a step to begin arbitral proceedings. ³¹⁵ Nor can such a power be exercised where a statutory time bar applies, e.g. that provided for in the Hague-Visby Rules. ³¹⁶

32-080

Section 12 is a mandatory provision. ³¹⁷ Under the corresponding provision in the 1950 Act it was held that the power to extend time could be exercised where the law applicable to the contract containing the arbitration clause (including the time bar) was English law, even though some other law might govern the subsequent arbitration procedure. ³¹⁸ The effect of the 1996 Act, however, is that the power to extend time can be exercised only where either (a) the seat of the arbitration is in England or (b) no seat has been designated or determined and the court is satisfied that it is appropriate to do so by reason of a connection with England (though such a connection could be that the arbitration agreement was governed by English law or that it is very likely that, once a seat is designated, the seat will be in England). ³¹⁹

Commencement of arbitral proceedings

32-081

⚠ The parties are free to agree when arbitral proceedings are to be regarded as commenced for the purposes of Pt I of the 1996 Act and for the purpose of the Limitation Acts. ³²⁰ If there is no such agreement, then s.14 ³²¹ provides that arbitral proceedings are commenced in respect of a matter ³²² as follows:

(i)

where the arbitrator is named or designated in the arbitration agreement, when one party serves on the other party or parties a notice in writing requiring him or them to submit that matter to the person so named or designated ³²³;

(ii)

where the arbitrator or arbitrators are to be appointed by the parties, when one party serves on the other party or parties a notice in writing requiring him or them to appoint an arbitrator or to agree to the appointment of an arbitrator in respect of that matter ³²⁴ ⚠;

(iii)

where the arbitrator or arbitrators are to be appointed by a person other than a party to the proceedings, when one party gives notice in writing to that person requesting him to make the appointment in respect of that matter. ³²⁵

Service of notices and other documents

32-082

The parties are free to agree on the manner of service of any notice or other document. ³²⁶ If and to the extent that there is no such agreement, s.76 deals with service. ³²⁷ In particular, subs.(3) of that section provides that a notice or other document may be served on a person “by any effective means”. A notice may be sent by email, but it must be despatched to what is, in fact, the email address of the intended recipient and must not be rejected by the system. ³²⁸

1. For a more detailed account of arbitration, and practice and procedure, the reader should consult: Merkin, Arbitration Law (2007); Merkin and Flannery, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Russell on Arbitration, 24th edn (2015); Tweeddale and Tweeddale, Arbitration of Commercial Disputes, 2nd edn (2012); Harris, Planterose and Tecks, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, 2nd edn (1989) and Supplement (2001); Redfern and Hunter, Law and Practice of International Arbitration, 5th edn (2009); Park, Arbitration of International Business Disputes, 2nd edn (2012).

^{294.} Atlantic Shipping Co Ltd v Louis Dreyfus & Co [1922] 2 A.C. 250. See Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, at p.201. A claim may be barred even though the cause of action has not yet arisen when the time limit expired: The Himmerland [1965] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 353, 360; Union of India v EB Aaby's Rederi A/S [1975] A.C. 797, 810, 813, 817-818; Comdel Commodities Ltd v Siporex Trade SA (No.2) [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 13 affirmed [1991] 1 A.C.

148; cf. The M Eregli [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 169, 173. See (2009) 75 Arbitration (4) 481. Failure to observe a time limit for arbitration will bar litigation after the time limit has expired: Wholecrop Marketing Ltd v Wolds Produce Ltd [2013] EWHC 2079 (Ch).

295. See n.289, above.

296. Board of Trade v Steel Bros & Co Ltd [1952] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 87; Alan v El Nasr Export and Import Co [1972] 2 Q.B. 189, [1971] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 401; Bunge SA v Deutsche Conti-Handelsgesellschaft mbH (No.2) [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 352; Ch Daudruy van Cauwenberghe & Fils SA v Tropical Products Sales SA [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 535. cf. Wholecrop Marketing Ltd v Wolds Produce Ltd [2013] EWHC 2079 (Ch).

297. Ford & Co Ltd v Cie Furness [1922] 2 K.B. 797, 802; Smeaton Hanscomb & Co Ltd v Sassoon I. Setty, Son & Co (No.1) [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1468, 1471. But contrast Woollf v Collis Removal Service [1948] 1 K.B. 11 and see above, Vol.I, para.15-011.

298. Ford & Co Ltd v Cie Furness, above.

299. Ayscough v Sheed, Thomson & Co Ltd (1924) 40 T.L.R. 707 HL.

300. Pinnock Brothers v Lewis and Peat Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 690.

301. s.12(1).

302. s.12(2). See PD 62.

303. DAC Report paras 62-75.

304. Vosnoc Ltd v Trans Global Projects Ltd [1998] 1 W.L.R. 101, 112.

305. Monella v Pizza Express (Restaurants) Ltd [2003] EWHC 2966 (Ch), [2004] 12 E.G. 172.

306. Cathiship SA v Allanasons Ltd [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 511.

307. Harbour & General Works Ltd v Environmental Agency [2000] 1 W.L.R. 950, 960; Korbetis v Transgrain Shipping BV [2005] EWHC 1345 (QB); SOS Corporacion Alimentaria SA v Inerco Trade SA [2010] EWHC 162 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 345 at [54].

308. Harbour & General Works Ltd v Environmental Agency, above. Grimaldi Compagnia di Navigazione Spa v Sekihyo Lines Ltd [1999] 1 W.L.R. 708; Fox & Widley v Guram [1998] 3 E.G. 142; Harbour & General Works Ltd v Environmental Agency; Thyssen Inc v Calypso Shipping Corp SA [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 243, 248; Monella v Pizza Express (Restaurants) Ltd [2003] EWHC 299 (Ch), [2004] E.G. 172; SOS Corporacion Alimentaire SA V Inerco Trade SA [2010] EWHC 162 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 345 (extension refused). cf. Vosnoc Ltd v Trans Global Projects Ltd [1998] 1 W.L.R. 101; Union Trans-Pacific Co Ltd v Orient Shipping Rotterdam BV [2002] EWHC 1451 (Comm) (extension granted). See (2009) 75 Arbitration (4) 481, 483.

309.  Fox & Widley v Guram, above; Grimaldi Compagnia di Navigazione Spa v Sekihyo Lines Ltd, above, at 725; Cathiship SA v Allanasons Ltd [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 511 at 522; Harbour & General Works Ltd v Environmental Agency [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 65, 72, [2000] 1 W.L.R. 950; Thyssen Inc v Calypso Shipping Corp SA, above, at 248; Lantic Sugar Ltd v Baffin Investments Ltd [2009] EWHC 3325 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 141; William McIlroy Swindon Ltd v Quinn Insurance Ltd [2010] EWHC 2448 (TCC), [2011] B.L.R. 136 at [104], [108]; Anglian Water Services Ltd v Laing O'Rourke Utilities Ltd [2010] EWHC 1529 (TCC), [2011] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 1143; Expofrut SA v Melville Services Inc [2015] EWHC 1950 (Comm) at [12]–[14].

310. SI 1999/2083.

311. As to replacement of the Regulations by the 2015 Act, see below, para.38-005.

- 312. s.12(4).
- 313. s.12(6). But see below, para.32-184.
- 314. Consolidated Investment and Contracting Co v Saponaria Shipping Co Ltd [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 167; Tradax Export SA v Italcabo Societa di Navigazione SpA [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 514; Jadranska Slobodna Plovidba v Oleagine SA [1984] 1 W.L.R. 300; The Medusa [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 328; The Stephanos [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 506.
- 315. Smeaton Hanscomb & Co Ltd v Sassoon I Setty, Son & Co (No.1) [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1468; Metalimex Foreign Trade Corp v Eugenie Maritime Co Ltd [1962] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 378; Babanaft International Co SA v Avant Petroleum Inc [1982] 1 W.L.R. 871; Crown Estate Commissioners v John Mowlem & Co [1994] 10 Const. L.J. 311; Metalfer Corp v Pan Ocean Shipping Co Ltd [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 632.
- 316. Kenya Railways v Antares Co Pte Ltd [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 424. Contrast Nea Agrex SA v Baltic Shipping Co Ltd [1976] Q.B. 933; Consolidated Investment & Contracting Co v Saponaria Shipping Co Ltd [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 167 (Hague Rules incorporated by contract). cf. Freedom General Shipping SA v Tokai Shipping Co Ltd [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 73; Government of Sierra Leone v Marmaro Shipping Co Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 130; Mann (1987) 103 L.Q.R. 523; Vol.I, para.28-116. See also s.12(5) of the 1996 Act.
- 317. s.4(1) and Sch.1.
- 318. International Tank and Pipe SAK v Kuwait Aviation Fuelling Co KSC [1975] Q.B. 224. Contrast CM Van Stillevoeldt BV v El Carriers Inc [1983] 1 W.L.R. 207; Mitsubishi Corp v Castletown Navigation Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 383 (foreign applicable law).
- 319. s.2(4).
- 320. s.14(1). See Transpetrol Ltd v Ekali Shipping Co Ltd [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 62; Taylor Woodrow Construction v RMD Kwikform Ltd [2008] EWHC 825 (TCC), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 345; Vol.I, para.28-126.
- 321. This section replaces s.34(3) of the Limitation Act 1980 and reflects to some extent art.21 of the Model law. Since the wording of subss.(3) and (4) is similar to that of s.34(3) of the 1980 Act, decisions on the latter may be relevant: see the 27th edn of this book, Vol.I, para.16-052, n.75. But in Seabridge Shipping AB v AC Orsleffs Eftf's A/S [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 685, 690, Thomas J. expressed the view that s.14 should be interpreted "broadly and flexibly" and without reference to any pre-1996 Act decision. See also Moore-Bick J. in Atlanska Plovidba v Consignaciones Asturianas SA [2004] EWHC 1273 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 109 at [17]; Easybiz Investments v Sinograin [2010] EWHC 2565 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 688 at [11] (single notice in respect of disputes arising under 10 separate contracts); Finmoon Ltd v Baltic Reefers Management Ltd [2012] EWHC 920 (Comm); Tweeddale (2002) 68 Arbitration 238. But see Lantic Sugar Ltd v Baffin Investments Ltd [2009] EWHC 3325 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 141.
- 322. "Matter" include both disputes and claims: DAC Report para.76. cf. Cruden Construction Ltd v Commission for New Towns [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 387.
- 323. s.14(3).
- 324.  s.14(4). See Seabridge Shipping AB v AC Orsleffs Eftf's A/S, above (fax sent to proposed arbitrator and copied to respondents sufficed); Bulk and Metal Transport UK LLP v Voc Bulk Ultra Handymax Pool LLC [2009] EWHC 288 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 418 (message stating that arbitration would be commenced failing payment sufficed). Contrast Taylor Woodrow Construction v RMD Quikform Ltd [2008] EWHC 825 (TCC), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 345 (notice threatening arbitration if demands not met did not suffice); Glencore International AG v PT Tera Logistic Indonesia [2016] EWHC 82 (Comm), [2016] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 527 (arbitral proceedings were held to have been commenced in respect of counterclaims by reason of the reference to “claims” and “all disputes arising under the contract” in the arbitration notices).

325. s.14(5).

326. s.76(1). See also s.77 (powers of court).

327. ss.76(3)–(6). Contrast CPR Pt 6. See Lantic Sugar Ltd v Baffin Investments Ltd [2009] EWHC 3325 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 141.

328. Bernuth Lines Ltd v High Seas Shipping Ltd [2005] EWHC 3020 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 537 at [28]–[29].

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 32 - Arbitration ¹
Section 5. - The Arbitral Tribunal

The arbitral tribunal

32-083

The constitution of the arbitral tribunal is primarily a matter for the parties to decide. They are free to agree on the number of arbitrators to form the tribunal and whether there is to be a chairman or an umpire. ³²⁹ Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, an agreement that the number of arbitrators shall be two or any other even number is to be understood as requiring the appointment of an additional arbitrator as chairman of the tribunal. ³³⁰ If there is no agreement as to the number of arbitrators, the tribunal is to consist of a sole arbitrator. ³³¹

Appointment of arbitrators

32-084

No particular form is required for the appointment of an arbitrator, unless the arbitration agreement so requires. As a general rule, however, an arbitrator is fully “appointed” only when (a) the designated person is told of his nomination and is asked whether he is willing to act; (b) he consents so to act; and (c) his name and appointment are communicated to the other side. ³³²

Procedures for appointment when parties do not agree

32-085

⚠ The 1996 Act contains provisions which, in the absence of agreement between the parties, establish procedures for the appointment of arbitrators and which are designed to ensure that the arbitration agreement will not be inoperative merely because one party refuses to make an appointment or if the procedure for the appointment of the arbitral tribunal fails. The parties are free to agree on the procedure for appointing the arbitrator or arbitrators, including the procedure for the appointment of any chairman or umpire. ³³³ ⚠ If or to the extent that there is no such agreement, the following provisions apply ³³⁴:

(i)

if the tribunal is to consist of a sole arbitrator, the parties are jointly to appoint the arbitrator not later than 28 days after service of a request in writing by either party to do so ³³⁵;

(ii)

if the tribunal is to consist of two arbitrators, each party is to appoint one arbitrator not later than 14 days after service of a request in writing by either party to do so ³³⁶;

(iii)

if the tribunal is to consist of three arbitrators, each party is to appoint one arbitrator not later than 14 days after service of a request in writing by either party to do so, and the two so appointed are forthwith to appoint a third arbitrator as the chairman of the tribunal ³³⁷;

(iv)

if the tribunal is to consist of two arbitrators and an umpire, each party is to appoint one arbitrator not later than 14 days after service of a request in writing by either party to do so, and the two so appointed may appoint an umpire at any time after they themselves are appointed and must do so before any substantive hearing or forthwith if they cannot agree on a matter relating to the arbitration. ³³⁸

In any other case, resort is to be made to s.18 of the Act which provides for the case of a failure of the agreed appointment procedure. ³³⁹

Power in case of default to appoint sole arbitrator

32-086

The parties may, for example, have agreed that the reference is to be to two arbitrators, one to be appointed by each party, or that it shall be to three arbitrators, one to be appointed by each party and the third to be appointed by the two appointed by the parties or in some other manner specified in the agreement. Section 17 of the 1996 Act ³⁴⁰ provides a summary procedure which is available in case one party defaults in the appointment of his arbitrator. Unless the parties otherwise agree, where each of two parties to an arbitration agreement is to appoint an arbitrator and one party ("the party in default") refuses to do so, or fails to do so within the time specified, ³⁴¹ the other party, having duly appointed his arbitrator, may give notice in writing to the party in default that he proposes to appoint his arbitrator to act as sole arbitrator. ³⁴² If the party in default does not within seven clear days ³⁴³ of that notice being given (a) make the required appointment; and (b) notify the other party that he has done so, the other party may appoint his arbitrator as sole arbitrator, in which case his award is binding on both parties as if he had been appointed by agreement. ³⁴⁴ Where a sole arbitrator has been thus appointed, the party in default may (upon notice to the appointing party) apply to the court which may set aside the appointment. ³⁴⁵ The Act does not specify the grounds on which the court may so act, but no doubt the court would only set aside the appointment if satisfied that there was real likelihood that the person appointed could not, or would not, fairly determine the issues in the arbitration.

Failure of appointment procedure

32-087

⚠ The parties are free to agree what is to happen in the event of a failure of the procedure for the appointment of the arbitral tribunal. ³⁴⁶ If and to the extent that there is no such agreement, the court may exercise the powers conferred upon it by s.18 of the Act upon the application of any party to the arbitration agreement (and notice to the other parties). ³⁴⁷ ⚠ The section does not, however, define what constitutes "a failure of the procedure for the appointment of the arbitral tribunal". But presumably this will embrace (inter alia) cases where a person designated as arbitrator or umpire refuses to act, or is incapable of acting, or dies ³⁴⁸; where the parties or two arbitrators are required or at liberty to appoint an arbitrator or umpire and either cannot agree on the appointment or otherwise fail to appoint; and where an arbitrator or umpire is to be appointed by a third party (e.g. an arbitral institution) and the third party refuses or fails to make an appointment. The powers of the court under the section are ³⁴⁹.

- (a) to give directions as to the making of any necessary appointments ³⁵⁰;
- (b) to direct that the tribunal shall be constituted by such appointments (or any one or more of them) as have been made;
- (c) to revoke any appointments already made ³⁵¹; and
- (d) to make any necessary appointments itself.

An appointment made by the court under this section has effect as if made with the agreement of the parties. ³⁵²

32-088

The powers conferred upon the court by s.18 are discretionary. ³⁵³ If, for example, an application is made for the court to appoint an arbitrator, then it would seem that the court could refuse to appoint on the ground of undue delay by the applicant if in the circumstances justice would not require the making of an appointment. ³⁵⁴ But the desirability of holding the parties to their agreement weighs strongly in favour of exercising the discretion. ³⁵⁵ The s.18 powers may be exercised not only where the seat of the arbitration is in England but also where no seat of the arbitration has been designated or determined and by reason of a connection with England the court is satisfied that it is appropriate to do so. ³⁵⁶

Qualifications of arbitrators

32-089

An arbitrator does not have to possess any or any particular qualifications to act as arbitrator, unless the arbitration agreement so requires. Where the appointed arbitrator does not possess the required qualifications, an objection that the arbitral tribunal is improperly constituted may be made under ss.31 and 32 of the 1996 Act. ³⁵⁷ The unqualified arbitrator may also be removed by the court under s.24, ³⁵⁸ or his award challenged under s.67. ³⁵⁹ In deciding whether to exercise, and in considering how to exercise, any of its powers under s.16 or s.18, the court is to have due regard to any agreement of the parties as to the qualifications required of the arbitrators. ³⁶⁰

Chairman

32-090

The Arbitration Act 1950 made no provision for the office of chairman. But s.20 of the 1996 Act provides for the role of chairman. The parties are free to agree what his functions shall be. ³⁶¹ In the absence of agreement, ³⁶² decisions, orders and awards are to be made by all or a majority of the arbitrators (including the chairman), ³⁶³ but the view of the chairman is to prevail in relation to a decision, order or award in respect of which there is neither unanimity nor a majority, ³⁶⁴ for example, if there are three arbitrators and each (including the chairman) has a different view on the amount of the award.

Umpire

32-091

Traditionally, an umpire differs from a chairman in that he is not strictly one of the arbitrators but replaces the two party-appointed arbitrators in the event that they are unable to agree. Section 21 of the 1996 Act provides that, where the parties have agreed that there is to be an umpire, they are free to agree what his functions shall be, and in particular whether he is to attend the proceedings and when he is to replace the other arbitrators as the tribunal with power to make decisions, orders and awards. ³⁶⁵ If and to the extent that there is no agreement, ³⁶⁶ he is to attend the proceedings (though not take an active part in them) and be supplied with the same documents and materials as are supplied to the other arbitrators. ³⁶⁷ If and when the arbitrators cannot agree on a matter relating to the arbitration, they must forthwith give notice in writing to the parties and to the umpire, and he then replaces them as the tribunal and with power to make decisions, orders and awards as if he were sole arbitrator. ³⁶⁸ Should one or both of the arbitrators fail to give the necessary notice, any party to the arbitral proceedings can apply to the court for an order that the umpire shall replace the other arbitrators. ³⁶⁹

No chairman or umpire

32-092

In the event that the parties agree not to have a chairman or umpire, they are free to agree how the tribunal is to make decisions, orders and awards. If there is no such agreement, they are to be made by all or a majority of the arbitrators. ³⁷⁰

Revocation of arbitrator's authority

32-093

The parties are free to agree in what circumstances the authority of an arbitrator may be revoked. ³⁷¹ If and to the extent that there is no such agreement, ³⁷² s.23 of the 1996 Act confirms the long-established rule that it is impossible for one party unilaterally to revoke the authority of an arbitrator. ³⁷³ The parties acting jointly may nevertheless do so, ³⁷⁴ but this must be agreed in writing unless the parties also agree (whether or not in writing) to terminate the arbitration agreement. ³⁷⁵ An arbitrator's authority may also be revoked by an arbitral or other institution or person vested by the parties with powers in that regard. ³⁷⁶

Death of arbitrator

32-094

The authority of an arbitrator is personal and ceases on death. ³⁷⁷ But, unless otherwise agreed by the parties, the death of a person by whom an arbitrator was appointed does not revoke the arbitrator's authority. ³⁷⁸

Court's power to revoke appointment

32-095

The power conferred on the court under the 1950 Act ³⁷⁹ to revoke the authority of an arbitrator or umpire where the dispute involved a charge of fraud was not preserved by the 1996 Act. But the court may revoke an appointment under s.18 (powers exercisable in case of failure of appointment procedure) ³⁸⁰ and may remove an arbitrator on the grounds specified in s.24. ³⁸¹

Removal of arbitrator

32-096

! The court has in certain circumstances the power to remove an arbitrator. This may be done, under s.24 of the 1996 Act, upon the application of a party to the arbitral proceedings. ³⁸² The grounds on which such an application may be made are any of the following:

(a)

that circumstances exist which give rise to justifiable doubts as to his impartiality ³⁸³ !; that he does not possess the qualifications required by the arbitration agreement ³⁸⁴; that he is physically or mentally incapable of conducting the proceedings or there are justifiable doubts as to his capacity to do so; that he has refused or failed:

(b)

(c)

(d)

(i) properly to conduct the proceedings ³⁸⁵; or

(ii)

to use all reasonable despatch in conducting the proceedings or making an award ³⁸⁶; and that substantial injustice has been or will be caused to the applicant.

With respect to ground (a), s.24 omits the reference in the Model Law to “independence” as well as “impartiality”: the Departmental Committee concluded that lack of independence, unless it gave rise to justifiable doubts about the impartiality of the arbitrator, was of no significance. ³⁸⁷ With respect to ground (d), the use by a party of this provision to delay or disrupt the arbitral proceedings is discouraged by the requirement that the conduct of the arbitrator must be such that “substantial injustice” has been or will be caused to the applicant, ³⁸⁸ and also by fact that the arbitral tribunal is further empowered to continue the arbitral proceedings while an application to the court is pending. ³⁸⁹ Moreover, s.73(1) provides that a party must object promptly to any impropriety or irregularity in the proceedings, ³⁹⁰ and subs.(2) of s.24 provides that if there is an arbitral or other institution or person vested with the authority to remove an arbitrator, the court is not to exercise its power of removal unless it is satisfied that the applicant has first exhausted his right of recourse to that institution or person. The arbitrator concerned is entitled to appear and be heard by the court before any order is made. ³⁹¹ If he is removed, this does not affect his immunity, but the court can adjust his entitlement to recover or retain fees or expenses. ³⁹² The filling of the vacancy created is dealt with by s.27. ³⁹³ Section 24 is a mandatory provision. ³⁹⁴

Resignation of arbitrator

32-097

An arbitrator will be liable ³⁹⁵ if he resigns in breach of the express or implied terms of his engagement unless the parties agree to release him from his engagement or from liability. Section 25 of the 1996 Act enables him to apply to the court for relief from liability and for an order as to the recovery or retention of his fees and expenses.

Filling of vacancy

32-098

Where an arbitrator ceases to hold office, the parties are free to agree whether and if so how the vacancy is to be filled, whether and if so to what extent the previous proceedings should stand, and what effect (if any) his ceasing to hold office has on any appointment made by him (alone or jointly). ³⁹⁶ If or to the extent that there is no such agreement, ³⁹⁷ then:

- (a) the provisions of ss.16 and 18 apply in relation to the filling of the vacancy as in relation to an original appointment ³⁹⁸;
- (b) the tribunal (when reconstituted) is to determine whether and if so to what extent the previous proceedings are to stand ³⁹⁹; and
- (c) his ceasing to hold office does not affect any appointment by him (alone or jointly) of another arbitrator, in particular any appointment of a chairman or umpire. ⁴⁰⁰

In contrast with the Arbitration Act 1950, ⁴⁰¹ the 1996 Act does not give to the court any initial power to fill a vacancy caused by its removal of an arbitrator: the original appointment procedure is to be used. ⁴⁰²

Liability for arbitrators' fees and expenses

32-099

As a matter of general contract law, an arbitrator is entitled to be paid whatever has been agreed between him and any of the parties. ⁴⁰³ This is a several liability which is incurred by the party with whom the agreement was made. However, under s.28 of the Act, all parties are jointly and severally liable to an arbitrator for his fees and expenses, but this joint and several liability is limited to "such reasonable fees and expenses (if any) as are appropriate in the circumstances". ⁴⁰⁴ The section further enables a party to apply to the court to adjust fees and expenses before they are paid, ⁴⁰⁵ and, if it is reasonable in the circumstances to do so, to order repayment of fees and expenses after the arbitrator has been paid. ⁴⁰⁶ The section nevertheless makes it clear that this power to make adjustments and to order repayment does not affect any contractual right of the arbitrator to his fees and expenses. ⁴⁰⁷ Nor does the section deal with the question which of the parties (as between themselves) are to pay the costs and expenses of the arbitration. ⁴⁰⁸ It is to be noted that arbitrators' expenses in this section include the fees and expenses of an expert, legal adviser or assessor appointed by the tribunal for which the arbitrators are liable.⁴⁰⁹ Section 28 is mandatory.⁴¹⁰

32-100

Difficult problems may arise concerning the liability for fees and expenses of a person who successfully objects to or challenges the substantive jurisdiction of the tribunal.⁴¹¹ Section 28 refers to a liability of “the parties” to pay the arbitrators’ fees and expenses. If a person has taken no part in the arbitral proceedings, and it is determined that the tribunal has no substantive jurisdiction, it is scarcely arguable that he should be liable for any part of those fees and expenses. But under s.30 the tribunal is empowered to rule on its own jurisdiction and a person may have participated in the proceedings, even though ultimately he establishes that the tribunal lacks jurisdiction. The Act does not answer the question whether such a person is to be considered a “party” for the purposes of liability under this section. If the tribunal rules that it has no jurisdiction, it is arguable that, in the absence of agreement,⁴¹² the successful objector—even if he has participated—should not be liable to pay any part of the arbitrator’s fees and expenses as the tribunal has itself declared that the objector was never a party to any valid arbitral proceedings brought against him. However, it could be said that, by participating, the objector has impliedly agreed to pay the reasonable fees and expenses of the arbitrator in ruling on jurisdiction and that an arbitrator can “give value”⁴¹³ by providing a ruling on jurisdiction. If the tribunal rules that it has jurisdiction, but its award on this issue is set aside by the court under s.67, it might be argued that the case is stronger still for the recovery by an arbitrator under s.28 of his reasonable fees and expenses from a participating “party” because the award is binding until set aside by the court.⁴¹⁴

^{1.} For a more detailed account of arbitration, and practice and procedure, the reader should consult: Merkin, Arbitration Law (2007); Merkin and Flannery, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Russell on Arbitration, 24th edn (2015); Tweeddale and Tweeddale, Arbitration of Commercial Disputes, 2nd edn (2012); Harris, Planterose and Tecks, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, 2nd edn (1989) and Supplement (2001); Redfern and Hunter, Law and Practice of International Arbitration, 5th edn (2009); Park, Arbitration of International Business Disputes, 2nd edn (2012).

^{329.} s.15(1).

^{330.} s.15(2). For the chairman, see s.20; below, para.32-090.

^{331.} s.15(3). See Villa Denizcilik Sanayi Ve Ticaret AS v Longen SA [1998] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 195.

^{332.} Tradax SA v Volkswagenwerk AG [1970] 1 Q.B. 537. See also Toepfer v Cremer [1975] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 118; Carras Shipping Co Ltd v Food Corp of India [1979] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 179; Hannaford v Smallcombe, The Times, December 30, 1993. cf. Legumbres SACIFIA v Central de Cooperativas, etc. Ltda [1986] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 401; Petredec Ltd v Tokumaru Kaiun Co Ltd [1994] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 162; Robinson v Moody, The Times, February 23, 1994; Atlanska Plovidba v Consignaciones Asturianas SA [2004] EWHC 1273 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 109 at [17].

^{333.} [!]s.16(1). Where there is a failure by one party to appoint an arbitrator and the arbitration agreement provides for the constitution of the arbitral tribunal in default of that appointment, the Court has no power to act under s.18: Silver Dry Bulk Co Ltd v Homer Hulbert Maritime Co Ltd [2017] EWHC 44 (Comm), [2017] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 154 at [32]–[33].

^{334.} s.16(2). For reckoning of periods of time, see s.78. The time limits may be extended by agreement, or by order of the court (s.79).

^{335.} s.16(3). See Villa Denizcilik Sanayi Ve Ticaret AS v Longen SA [1998] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 195. If one party refuses to appoint, an application must be made to the court under s.18, para.32-087, below: Mylcrist Builders Ltd v Buck [2008] EWHC 2172 (TCC), [2008] B.L.R. 611.

- 336. s.16(4).
- 337. s.16(5).
- 338. s.16(6).
- 339. s.16(7). See below, para.32-087.
- 340. This replaces, with changes, s.7(b) of the 1950 Act: see the DAC Report paras 83–86. Section 17 does not apply where the tribunal is to consist of a sole arbitrator but one party refuses to make a joint appointment under s.16(3). Resort must then be had to s.18: Mylcryst Builders Ltd v Buck [2008] EWHC 2172 (TCC), [2008] Build. L.R. 611.
- 341. There is no reference in s.17(1), as there was in s.10(3)(b) of the Arbitration Act 1950, to “or, if no time is specified, within a reasonable time”. See s.16(4)(5).
- 342. s.17(1). cf. Minermet SpA Milan v Luckyfield Shipping Corp SA [2004] EWHC 729 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 348 (no need for notice where parties otherwise agree).
- 343. s.78(4)(5) and see s.79 (extension of time).
- 344. s.17(2). Each stage of the procedure under subss.(1) and (2) must be meticulously complied with.
- 345. s.17(3). But all that is set aside is the appointment as sole arbitrator. Permission of the court is required for any appeal from a decision of the court under s.17(3): s.17(4); but see below, para.32-184.
- 346. s.18(1). See Medov Lines SpA v Traelandsfos A/S [1969] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 225. There is no failure if an appointment is duly made under s.17 unless that appointment is set aside.
- 347.  s.18(2); PD 62. In Vale do Rio Doce Navegacao SA v Shanghai Bao Steel Ocean Shipping Co Ltd [2000] 2 Lloyd’s 1 at [43]–[60], Thomas J. suggested that, on an application under s.18, the court could not intervene to determine whether or not there is an arbitration agreement. Contrast Sinochem International Oil (London) Co Ltd v Fortune Oil Co Ltd [2000] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 682; Midgulf International Ltd v Groupe Chimice Tunisien [2009] EWHC 1684 (Comm), [2009] 1 C.L.C. 1000, [2010] EWCA Civ 66. In Noble Denton Middle East v Noble Denton International Ltd [2010] EWHC 2574 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 387, Burton J. held that s.18 was “simply a gateway” and that it was for the arbitrators, and not the court, to decide on the validity of the arbitration clause if an arguable case was shown; Man Enterprise SAL v Al-Waddam Hotel Ltd [2013] EWHC 2356 (TCC), [2014] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 217; Silver Dry Bulk Co Ltd v Homer Hulbert Maritime Co Ltd [2017] EWHC 44 (Comm), [2017] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 154 at [25]–[29]. But cf. s.72. See also Aeberli (2005) 21 Arbitration International 253, 258 (on the use of s.72).
- 348. i.e. cases previously falling under ss.7, 10 of the Arbitration Act 1950.
- 349. s.18(3); City & General (Holborn) Ltd v AYH Plc [2005] EWHC 2494 (TCC), [2005] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 378.
- 350. Charlburg McCouat International Ltd v PG Foils Ltd [2010] EWHC 2050 (TCC), [2011] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 23 (LCIA to appoint).
- 351. See para.88 of the DAC Report.
- 352. s.18(4). Permission of the court is required for any appeal from a decision of the court under this section: s.18(5); but see below, para.32-184; Johann MK Blumenthal GmbH & Co KG v Itochu Corp [2012] EWCA Civ 996, [2013] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 504.
- 353. Villa Denizcilik Sanayi Ve Ticaret AS v Longen SA [1998] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 195; Through Transport Mutual Insurance Assn (Euroasia) Ltd v New India Assurance Co Ltd (No.2) [2005]

- EWHC 455 (Comm)*, [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 378. See also Enercon GmbH v Enercon (India) Ltd [2012] EWHC 689 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 519 (application stayed pending hearing by foreign court).
- 354. Petreded Ltd v Tokumaru Kaiun Co Ltd [1994] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 162; Frota Oceanica Brasileira SA v Steamship Mutual Underwriting Association (Bermuda) Ltd [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 461; Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Office v Percy Thomas Partnership (1998) 65 Const. L.R. 11; West of England Ship Owners Mutual Protection and Indemnity Assn v Hellenic Industrial Development Bank SA [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 93 (on s.10 of the 1950 Act). cf. Durnell (R) & Sons Ltd v Secretary of State For Trade and Industry [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 275.
- 355. Atlanska Plovidba v Consignaciones Asturianas SA [2004] EWHC 1273 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 109 at [24].
- 356. s.2(4). Charlbury McCouat International Ltd v PG Foils Ltd [2010] EWHC 2050 (TCC), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 23 (English law likely to apply to substance of dispute).
- 357. cf. Pan Atlantic Group Inc v Hassneh Insurance Co of Israel Ltd [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 120.
- 358. 1996 Act s.24(1)(b).
- 359. Sumukan Ltd v Commonwealth Secretariat (No.2) [2007] EWCA Civ 1148, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 40.
- 360. s.10. See Villa Denizcilik Sanayi Ve Ticaret AS v Longen SA [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 195.
- 361. s.20(1).
- 362. s.20(2).
- 363. s.20(3).
- 364. s.20(4).
- 365. s.21(1). Parties will have "agreed that there is to be an umpire" within the meaning of s.21(1) even though the umpire is to be appointed by the arbitrators, and even though his authority to act is contingent on disagreement: Van der Giessen de-Noord Shipbuilding Division BV v Imtech Marine & Offshore BV [2008] EWHC 2904 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 273 at [106].
- 366. s.21(2).
- 367. s.21(3). cf. Fletamentos Maritimos SA v Effjohn International BV [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 311; Fletamentos Maritimos SA v Effjohn International BV (No.2) [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 295, [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 644 (on 1950 Act).
- 368. s.21(4).
- 369. s.21(5). Permission of the court is required for any appeal from a decision of the court under this section: s.21(6). See PD 62; but see below, para.32-184.
- 370. s.22(1)(2).
- 371. s.23(1). Institutional rules may provide for challenges to and revocation of the appointment of an arbitrator, as, for example, art.10 of the LCIA rules: see Walsh and Teitelbaum (2011) 27 Arbitration International 283 (decisions of the LCIA Court).
- 372. s.23(2).
- 373. Arbitration Act 1950 s.1.

- 374. s.23(3)(a).
- 375. s.23(4).
- 376. s.23(3)(b).
- 377. s.26(1). This sub-section is mandatory.
- 378. s.26(2).
- 379. Arbitration Act 1950 s.24(2).
- 380. s.18(3)(c); see above, para.32-087.
- 381. below, para.32-096.
- 382. Upon notice to the other parties, to the arbitrator concerned and to any other arbitrator: s.24(1). See PD 62. Permission of the court is required for any appeal from a decision of the court under this section: s.24(6); but see below, para.32-184.
- 383.  Save and Prosper Pensions Ltd v Homebase Ltd [2002] L. & T.R. 11 (arbitrator's firm instructed in substantial property matter by associated company of one of the parties). Sphere Drake Insurance v American Reliable Insurance Company [2004] EWHC 795 (Comm) (arbitrator involved as consultant to certain key players in the market at centre of dispute); ASM Shipping Ltd of India v TTMI Ltd of England [2005] EWHC 2238 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 375, [2006] EWCA Civ 1341, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 136 (arbitrator instructed as counsel in previous case against one of the parties); Sierra Fishing Co Ltd v Mohamed [2015] EWHC 140 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 514 (arbitrator's business connections, involvement in negotiations and drafting of agreement, conduct of reference). cf. (where application to remove failed) Andrews (t/a BA Constructors) v Bradshaw [2002] Build. L.R. 6 (irritation on part of arbitrator and receiving payment of fee from one party where the other refused to pay); Laker Airways Inc v FLS Aerospace Ltd [2000] 1 W.L.R. 113 (arbitrator in same chambers as barrister representing one of parties, but see Smith v Kvaerner Cementation Foundations Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 242, [2007] 1 W.L.R. 370 at [171]); Rustal Trading Ltd v Gill & Duffus SA [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 14 (arbitrator involved in earlier dispute with party's consultant); AT & T Corp v Saudi Arabian Cable Co [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 22, [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 127 CA (arbitrator was non executive director of rival bidder for project); ASM Shipping Ltd v Harris [2007] EWHC 1513 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 61 (two arbitrators remain after recusal of third for alleged bias); Goel v Amega Ltd [2010] EWHC 2454 (Comm) (case management issues); A v B [2011] EWHC 2345 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 591 (barrister arbitrator involved in case for solicitors for party); Interprods Ltd v De La Rue International Ltd [2014] EWHC 68 (Comm) (arbitrator after appointment was appointed arbitrator in two other cases where one party represented by solicitors for claimant: s.68(2)(a) application failed); Cofely Ltd v Bingham [2016] EWHC 240 (Comm); [2016] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 129 at [98]–[116] (arbitrator removed on the ground of apparent bias where 18 per cent of his appointments and 25 per cent of his arbitrator/adjudicator income over the previous three years had come from cases involving the defendant as a party or as a claims consultant and where the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators acceptance of nomination form calls for disclosure of “any involvement, however remote, with either party over the last five years”); W Ltd v M Sdn Bhd [2016] EWHC 422 (Comm), [2016] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 552 at [27]–[44] (the IBA Guidelines 2014 are of assistance to the Court, but they are not a statement of English law; the Court noted some “weaknesses” in the IBA Guidelines 2014). For the test to be applied in cases of alleged bias, see Dimes v Proprietors of Grand Junction Canal (1852) 5 H.L. Cas. 759; R. v Spencer [1987] A.C. 128; R. v Gough [1993] A.C. 646; R. v Bow Street Magistrate Ex. P Pinochet Ugarte (No.2) [2002] 1 A.C. 119; Laker Airways Inc v FLS Aerospace Ltd, above; Locobail (UK) Ltd v Bayfield Property Ltd [2000] Q.B. 451; AT & T Corp v Saudi Arabian Cable Co above; Re Medicaments and Related Classes of Goods (No.2) [2001] 1 W.L.R. 700; Porter v Magill [2001] UKHL 67, [2002] 2 A.C. 357 at [103]; ASM Shipping Ltd of India v TTMI Ltd of England, above, at [39]; Cofely Ltd v Bingham [2016] EWHC 240 (Comm), [2016] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 129 at [72]; H v L [2017] EWHC 137 (Comm), [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 553 at [16]. See IBA Guidelines on conflicts of interest in International Arbitration

2014; Chartered Institute of Arbitrators: Code of Professional and Ethical Conduct (2009); AAA/ABA Code of Ethics for Arbitrators in Commercial Disputes (2004 revision); Chung (2011) 77 Arbitration 167; Park (2011) 27 Arbitration International 473. As to the validity of a rule in the Arbitrators' Code of Conduct of the International Cotton Association, see Aldcroft v International Cotton Association Ltd [2017] EWHC 642 (Comm), [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 635.

384. See above, para.32-089.

385. See Wicketts v Brine Builders [2001] CILL 1805 (autonomous conduct by arbitrator); Norbrook Laboratories Ltd v Tank [2006] EWHC 1055 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 485 (unilateral telephone contact with parties and direct contact with witnesses) and (on removal under s.23(1) of the 1950 Act): Hagop Ardahalian v Unifert International SA [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 84, 89; and Modern Engineering (Bristol) Ltd v C Miskin & Son Ltd [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 135 (issue of interim award without hearing submissions on raised point of law); Town and City Properties (Development) Ltd v Wiltshier Southern Ltd (1989) 44 Build. L.R. 109 (procedure akin to valuation adopted rather than arbitration); Lovell Partnerships (Northern) Ltd v AW Construction Plc (1996) 81 Build. L.R. 83, 99 (test to be applied), cf. Home of Homes Ltd v Hammersmith Fulham LBC [2003] EWHC 807, [2003] 92 Const. L.R. 48 (arbitrator takes leading counsel's opinion on issues of costs and jurisdiction); Norbrook Laboratories Ltd v Tank, above (hearings curtailed). On the question of reliance of the arbitrator on his own knowledge and experience, see Fox v Wellfair Ltd [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 514; Warborough Investments Ltd v S Robinson & Sons (Holdings) Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 751, [2003] 2 E.G.L.R. 149; Checkpoint Ltd v Strathclyde Pension Fund [2003] EWCA 751, [2003] 2 E.G.L.R. 149; St George's Investment Co Ltd v Gemini Consulting Ltd [2004] EWHC 2353 (Ch); Claire & Co Ltd v Thames Water Utilities Ltd [2005] EWHC 1022, [2005] Build. L.R. 366; JD Wetherspoon Plc v Jay Mar Estates [2007] EWHC 856 (TCC), [2007] Build. L.R. 285.

386. See (on removal under s.13(3) of the 1950 Act): Pratt v Swanmore Builders Ltd [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 504.

387. DAC Report paras 101–104. But see above para.32-016 n.59.

388. DAC Report para.105. See also below, para.32-163; Norbrook Laboratories v Tank, above.

389. s.24(3). See (1998) 64 Arbitration 188.

390. See below, paras 32-164, 32-176; Rustal Trading Ltd v Gill & Duffus SA [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 14; Sinclair v Woods of Winchester Ltd [2005] EWHC 1631 (QB), [2005] 102 Const. L.R. 127; ASM Shipping Ltd of India v TTMI Ltd, above; ASM Shipping Ltd v Harris [2007] EWHC 1513 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 61. cf. Sierra Fishing Co Ltd v Mohamed [2015] EWHC 140 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 514.

391. s.24(5).

392. s.24(4).

393. See below, para.32-098.

394. s.4(1) and Sch.1.

395. He is not immune from such liability: s.29(3).

396. s.27(1).

397. s.27(2). See Federal Insurance Co and Chubb Insurance Co of Europe SA v Transamerica Occidental Life Insurance Co [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 286.

398. s.27(3).

399. This does not affect any right of a party to challenge those proceedings on any ground which had arisen before the arbitrator ceased to hold office: s.27(4).

400. s.27(5).

401. Arbitration Act 1950 s.25(1).

402. DAC Report para.117. See above, para.32-085 (s.16).

403. See DAC Report para.120; Mustill and Boyd, Chartered Institute of Arbitrators: Guidelines for arbitrators as to how to formulate their terms of remuneration (2011). For the difficulties that may arise, see K/S Norjarl A/S v Hyundai Heavy Industries Ltd [1992] Q.B. 863 (commitment fee demanded); Turner v Stevenage BC [1998] Ch. 208 (request for interim fee).

404. s.28(1). See also s.28(6) (arbitrator who has ceased to act, and umpire).

405. s.28(2). See CPR r.62.6, PD 62.4. For an example of reduction of fees, see Hussman (Europe) Ltd v Al Ameen Developments & Trade Co [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 83; Agrimex Ltd v Tradigrain [2003] EWHC 1656 (Comm), [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 537.

406. s.28(3). See CPR r.62.6 PD 62.4.

407. s.28(5).

408. s.28(5). See ss.59-65; below, paras 32-148—32-155.

409. s.37(2).

410. s.4(1) and Sch.1.

411. DAC Report para.126.

412. Commonwealth Development Corp (UK) v Montague [2000] QCA 252 Queensland Court of Appeal; Greenberg and Secomb (2002) 18 Arbitration International 125.

413. Systech International Ltd v PC Harrington Contractors Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 1371, [2013] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 1074 at [36].

414. Systech International Ltd v PC Harrington Contractors Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 1371, [2013] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 1074 at [36].

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 32 - Arbitration ¹
Section 6. - Jurisdiction of the Arbitral Tribunal

Tribunal can rule on its own jurisdiction

32-101

⚠ English law has always taken the view that the arbitral tribunal cannot be the final adjudicator of its own jurisdiction. The final decision as to the substantive jurisdiction of the tribunal rests with the court. ⁴¹⁵ However, there is no reason why the tribunal should not have the power, subject to review by the court, to rule on its own jurisdiction. Indeed, such a power (often referred to as the principle of “kompetenz-kompetenz”) has been generally recognised in other legal systems. It had also been recognised by English law before the 1996 Act, ⁴¹⁶ but s.30 of the Act puts this on a statutory basis. Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, the arbitral tribunal may rule on its own substantive jurisdiction, that is, as to (a) whether there is a valid arbitration agreement; (b) whether the tribunal is properly constituted; and (c) what matters have been submitted to arbitration in accordance with the arbitration agreement. ⁴¹⁷ ⚠ Any such ruling may be challenged by any arbitral process of appeal or review or in accordance with the provisions of Pt I of the Act, ⁴¹⁸ notably by an application under s.32 ⁴¹⁹ or by a challenge to the award under s.67 ⁴²⁰ or at the enforcement stage under ss.66 and 103(2)(b). ⁴²¹

Objection to substantive jurisdiction of tribunal ⁴²²

32-102

⚠ Section 31 of the 1996 Act (which is a mandatory provision ⁴²³) limits the period within which an objection to the substantive jurisdiction of the arbitral tribunal can be raised and sets out the courses open to the tribunal if such an objection is made. An objection that the tribunal lacks jurisdiction at the outset of the proceedings must be raised by a party not later than the time he takes the first step in the proceedings to contest the merits of any matter ⁴²⁴ in relation to which he challenges the tribunal's jurisdiction. ⁴²⁵ And any objection during the course of the arbitral proceedings that the tribunal is exceeding its jurisdiction must be made as soon as possible after the matter alleged to be beyond its jurisdiction is raised. ⁴²⁶ The tribunal may, however, admit an objection made later if it considers the delay justified. ⁴²⁷ If a party to arbitral proceedings takes part or continues to take part in the proceedings without duly objecting that the tribunal lacks substantive jurisdiction, he cannot raise that objection later, before the tribunal or the court, unless he shows that he did not then know and could not with reasonable diligence have discovered the grounds for the objection. ⁴²⁸ ⚠ The prudent course for a party contemplating a jurisdictional challenge in a two-tier arbitration scheme is to advance such objections before the first tier arbitrators; if not, it may well be at risk of losing that right. ⁴²⁹

32-103

⚠ Where an objection is duly taken to the tribunal's substantive jurisdiction and the tribunal has power to rule on its own jurisdiction, s.31(4) states that the tribunal may adopt one of two courses: first, it may rule on the matter in an award on jurisdiction; secondly, it may deal with the objection in its award on the merits. It may be presumed that at least the first of these alternatives is open to the tribunal if it rules that it lacks jurisdiction as well as if it rules that it has jurisdiction, although it is somewhat peculiar to categorise the declining of jurisdiction as an “award”. If the parties agree which of these two courses the tribunal should take, the tribunal is to proceed accordingly. In either case the award may be challenged in court under s.67 of the Act.⁴³⁰ But a third way of proceeding is also contemplated, albeit in limited circumstances. This is for an application (under s.32) to be made to the court by a party before any award.⁴³¹ In this situation, the tribunal may (and, if the parties agree, must) stay the arbitral proceedings whilst such an application is made.⁴³² It must, however, be borne in mind that a person who is alleged to be a party to arbitral proceedings but who takes no part in those proceedings because he considers that the tribunal lacks substantive jurisdiction cannot be required to take any positive steps to object to the jurisdiction of the tribunal. He may choose instead to challenge the jurisdiction of the tribunal by proceedings in court for a declaration or injunction or other appropriate relief under s.72⁴³³ or to challenge any award made under s.67.⁴³⁴ By contrast, a party asserting the existence of an arbitration agreement will not be able to seek a declaration from the Court that the arbitration exists other than pursuant to the procedures laid down in the Arbitration Act 1996 (unless the declaration is sought in support of other relief, such as an anti-suit injunction).⁴³⁵

Determination of preliminary point of jurisdiction

32-104

Section 32 of the 1996 Act confers upon a party, in limited circumstances, the right to apply to the court to determine any question as to the substantive jurisdiction of the arbitral tribunal.⁴³⁶ Such an application, if made at the outset of arbitral proceedings, may result in considerable savings of time and costs.⁴³⁷ However, in view of the power given to the tribunal by s.30 to rule on its own jurisdiction, the Departmental Advisory Committee expressed the opinion that such an application was intended to be made in exceptional cases only.⁴³⁸ The application cannot be considered unless either it is made with the agreement in writing of all the other parties to the proceedings, or it is made with the permission of the tribunal and the court is satisfied (a) that the determination of the question is likely to produce substantial savings in costs; (b) that the application was made without delay; and (c) that there is good reason why the matter should be decided by the court.⁴³⁹ Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, the tribunal may continue the arbitral proceedings and make an award while an application to the court is pending.⁴⁴⁰

32-105

Restrictions are placed by subss.(5) and (6) of s.32 on the right of appeal. Unless the court gives permission, no appeal lies from a decision of the court whether the conditions referred to above have been met.⁴⁴¹ So far as the decision of the court on the question of jurisdiction is concerned, this is treated as a judgment of the court for the purposes of an appeal. But no appeal lies without the permission of the court which will not be given unless the court considers that the question involves a point of law which is one of general importance or is one which for some other special reason should be considered by the Court of Appeal.⁴⁴² It would appear that no appeal lies against a refusal to give permission. Section 32 is mandatory.⁴⁴³

^{1.} For a more detailed account of arbitration, and practice and procedure, the reader should consult: Merkin, Arbitration Law (2007); Merkin and Flannery, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Russell on Arbitration, 24th edn (2015); Tweeddale and Tweeddale, Arbitration of Commercial Disputes, 2nd edn (2012); Harris, Planterose and Tecks, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, 2nd edn (1989) and Supplement (2001); Redfern and Hunter, Law and Practice of International Arbitration, 5th edn (2009); Park, Arbitration of International Business Disputes, 2nd edn (2012).

^{415.} May v Mills (1914) 30 T.L.R. 287; Produce Brokers Co Ltd v Olympia Oil and Cake Co Ltd [1916] 1 A.C. 314, 327; Heyman v Darwins Ltd [1942] A.C. 356, 393; Brown v Genossenschaft

Oesterreichischer Waldbesitzer R GmbH [1954] 1 Q.B. 8; Dalmia Dairy Industries Ltd v National Bank of Pakistan [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 223, 285-293; Willcock v Pickfords Removals Ltd [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 244, 245; Peoples Insurance Co of China v Vysanthi Shipping Co Ltd [2003] EWHC 1655 (Comm), [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 617 at [25]; Dallah Real Estate & Tourism Co v Ministry of Religious Affairs of the Government of Pakistan [2010] UKSC 46, [2011] 1 A.C. 763 at [26], [86], [96], [104], [148].

416. Golodetz v Schrier (1947) 80 Ll.L. Rep. 647, 650; Brown v Genossenschaft Oesterreichischer Waldbesitzer R GmbH, above; Lucanda Exportadora SARL v Wahbe Tamari & Sons [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 353, 364; Dallah Real Estate & Tourism Co v Ministry of Religious Affairs of the Government of Pakistan [2010] UKSC 46, [2011] 1 A.C. 763 at [25], [93].

417. ¶s.30(1). See the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators: Guidelines for Arbitrators dealing with Jurisdictional Problems (2011) 77 Arbitration 220; Vee Networks Ltd v Econet Wireless International Ltd [2004] EWHC 2909 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 192 at [22]; UR Power GmbH v Kuok Oils and Grains Pte Ltd [2009] EWHC 1940 (Comm), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 495; Dallah Real Estate & Tourism Co v Ministry of Religious Affairs of the Government of Pakistan [2010] UKSC 46, [2011] 1 A.C. 763 at [25], [79], [93]-[95]; Assaubayer v Michael Wilson and Partners Ltd [2014] EWHC 821 (QB). But see the cases cited above, para.32-068 n.269 (court may nevertheless be the first to decide). In C v D1 [2015] EWHC 2126 (Comm) at [135] the Court said that s.30 is likely to contain an exhaustive definition of jurisdictional matters.

418. s.30(2).

419. See below, para.32-104.

420. See below, para.32-156.

421. Dallah Real Estate & Tourism Co v Ministry of Religious Affairs of the Government of Pakistan [2010] UKSC 46, [2011] 1 A.C. 763.

422. Aeberli (2005) 21 Arbitration International 253, 264.

423. s.4(1) and Sch.1.

424. Vee Networks Ltd v Econet Wireless International Ltd [2004] EWHC 2909 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 192 at [65]; cf. Athletic Union of Constantinople v National Basketball Association [2002] EWCA Civ 830, [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 305, at [39]. Gulf Import & Export Co v Bunge SA [2007] EWHC 2667 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 316 at [47]; Republic of Serbia v Image Sat International NV [2009] EWHC 2853 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 324 at [107]-[110]. See Yang (2004) 70 Arbitration 279.

425. s.31(1). A party is not precluded from raising such an objection by the fact that he has appointed or participated in the appointment of an arbitrator.

426. s.31(2).

427. s.31(3). cf. Republic of Serbia v Image Sat International NV [2009] EWHC 2583 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 324 at [110].

428. ¶s.73(1); see below, para.32-176; Hussman (Europe) Ltd v Al Amen Development & Trade Co [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 83, 91; Athletic Union of Constantinople v National Basketball Association [2002] EWCA Civ 830, [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 305 at [20]-[27]; JSC Zestafoni G Nikoladz Ferroalloy Plant v Ronly Holdings Ltd [2004] EWHC 245 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 335 at [64]; Westland Helicopters Ltd v Sheikh Salah-al-Hejailan (No.1) [2004] EWHC 1625 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 523; Vee Networks Ltd v Econet Wireless International Ltd [2004] EWHC 2909 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 192 at [66]; Frontier Agriculture Ltd v Bratt Bros [2015] EWCA Civ 611, [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 500; A v B [2016] EWHC 3003 (Comm), [2017] 1 W.L.R. 2030 at [50]-[63]. But if the arbitrator determines that he lacks jurisdiction and a party challenges that determination, s.73 is inapplicable since that party is not making any of the objections to which s.73 applies; LG Caltex Gas Co Ltd v China National Petroleum Corp [2002] EWCA Civ 788, [2002] 1 W.L.R. 1892.

- 429. UK Power GmbH v Kuok Oils and Grains Pte Ltd [2009] EWHC 1940 (Comm), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 495 at [32].
- 430. See below, para.32-156. But cf. Aoot Kalmneft v Glencore International AG [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 128, 138-139 (decision of tribunal on what course to take under s.31(4) cannot be challenged under s.67).
- 431. See below, para.32-104.
- 432. s.31(5). See (1998) 64 Arbitration 188.
- 433. See below, para.32-157; Caparo Group Ltd v Fagor Arrasato Sociead Cooperativa [2000] A.D.R.L.J. 24; Law Debenture Trust Corp v Elekrim Finance BV [2005] EWHC 1412 (Ch), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 755; Broda Agro Trade (Cyprus) Ltd v Alfred C Toepfer International GmbH [2010] EWCA Civ 110, [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 243.
- 434. See below, para.32-156.
- 435.  HC Trading Malta Ltd v Tradeland Commodities SL [2016] EWHC 1279 (Comm), [2016] 1 W.L.R. 3120 at [16]–[20], [40].
- 436. s.32(1).
- 437. Azov Shipping Co v Baltic Shipping Co [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 159, 161. cf. Aeberli (2005) 21 Arbitration International 253, 273. An application cannot be made after the arbitrator has made his award: Five Oceans Salvage Ltd v Wenzhou Timber Group Co [2011] EWHC 3282 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 289.
- 438. DAC Report para.147. Yet the court has power to determine, without restriction, the same issue upon an application for a stay: see above, para.32-068.
- 439. s.32(2); Belgravia Property Co Ltd v S & R (London) Ltd [2001] Build. L.R. 424; Esso Exploration & Production UK Ltd v Electricity Supply Board [2004] EWHC 723 (Comm), [2004] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 926; Film Finance Inc v Royal Bank of Scotland [2007] EWHC 195 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 382; Viscous Global Investment Ltd v Palladium Navigation Corp [2014] EWHC 2654 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 600; Toyota Tsusho Sugar Trading Ltd v Prolat SRL [2014] EWHC 3649 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 344. Unless made with the agreement of the parties, the application must also state the grounds on which it is said that the matter should be decided by the court: s.32(3). See ABB Lummus Global Ltd v Keppel Fels Ltd [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 74; Azov Shipping Co v Baltic Shipping Co, above, at [161]; PD 62.9.
- 440. s.32(4). See (1998) 64 Arbitration 188.
- 441. s.32(5).
- 442. s.32(6); but see para.32-184, below.
- 443. s.4(1) and Sch.1.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 32 - Arbitration ¹

Section 7. - The Arbitral Proceedings

Conduct of the reference

32-106

Section 33 of the 1996 Act sets out the general duty of the arbitral tribunal in the conduct of the reference. The tribunal is to act fairly and impartially as between the parties, giving each party a reasonable opportunity of putting his case and dealing with that of his opponent, ⁴⁴⁴ and is to adopt procedures suitable to the circumstances of the particular case, avoiding unnecessary delay or expense, so as to provide a fair means for the resolution of the matters falling to be determined. ⁴⁴⁵ The tribunal must comply with this general duty in conducting the arbitral proceedings, in its decisions on matters of procedure and evidence and in the exercise of all other powers conferred upon it. ⁴⁴⁶ This is a mandatory provision. ⁴⁴⁷ Subject to the overriding requirements of fairness, impartiality and even-handedness, it is intended to encourage the tribunal to adapt its procedures to suit the particular case and not slavishly to follow court or other set procedures if these are inappropriate. ⁴⁴⁸

32-107

The generality of the wording of s.33 might, nevertheless, be thought likely to tempt unsuccessful parties to challenge procedural decisions taken by the tribunal, or the award, on the ground that the tribunal has failed to observe one or more of the duties stipulated by the section, especially since the Departmental Advisory Committee suggested that a proceeding which departed from those duties could not "properly be described as an arbitration". ⁴⁴⁹ However, the sanctions for breach of duty are narrowly circumscribed. They are, first, that the court should remove the arbitrator under s.24 (but this is subject to the limitations imposed by that section) ⁴⁵⁰; secondly, that the court should remit, set aside or invalidate the award under s.68 on the ground of "serious irregularity". But an irregularity is only "serious" if the court considers that it has caused or will cause substantial injustice to the applicant. ⁴⁵¹ Experience has shown that the courts will not uphold challenges based on breaches of s.33 which are insubstantial. ⁴⁵²

Procedural and evidential matters

32-108

The arbitral tribunal has a general power to control the manner in which proceedings are conducted. Section 34(1) of the 1996 Act makes this clear by providing that it is for the tribunal to decide all procedural and evidential matters, subject to the right of the parties to agree any matter. There could be a potential conflict between the mandatory duty of the tribunal under s.33 and the principle of party autonomy contained in s.34, ⁴⁵³ for example, if the parties agreed to adopt a procedure, e.g. extended disclosure, which involved unnecessary delay or expense contrary to s.33(1)(b). But such a conflict is likely to be more theoretical than real. In practice, the parties will be free to agree on any procedural or evidential matter, for example, by agreeing to apply the procedural rules of a particular arbitral institution. In the absence of any effective agreement between the parties in respect of such a matter, the tribunal decides how best to proceed in the circumstances of the case. ⁴⁵⁴

32-109

Section 34(2) gives an illustrative and non-exhaustive list of the procedural and evidential matters referred to. These include:

(a)

“when and where any part of the proceedings is to be held”—so empowering the tribunal to decide, for example, when meetings are to be held, or that meetings are to be held elsewhere than at the seat of arbitration 455;

(b)

“the language or languages to be used in the proceedings and whether translations of any relevant documents are to be supplied” 456;

(c)

“whether any and if so what form of written statements of claim and defences are to be used, when these should be supplied and the extent to which such statements can be later amended”—so empowering the tribunal to determine the form of pleadings (if any), whether to order particulars, and to allow and disallow amendments 457;

(d)

“whether any and if so which documents or classes of documents should be disclosed between and produced by the parties and at what stage”—so empowering the tribunal to apply or depart from the rules relating to disclosure and inspection applied in court proceedings 458;

(e)

“whether any and if so what questions should be put to and answered by the respective parties and when and in what form this should be done”—so empowering the tribunal to control the oral and written questioning of the parties 459;

(f)

“whether to apply strict rules of evidence (or any other rules) as to the admissibility, relevance or weight of any material (oral, written or other) sought to be tendered on any matters of fact or opinion, and the time, manner and form in which such material should be exchanged and presented”—so empowering the tribunal to dispense with technical rules of evidence and, as an incidental result, to put an end to any arguments that it is a question of law whether there is material to support a finding of fact 460;

(g)

“whether and to what extent the tribunal should itself take the initiative in ascertaining the facts and the law”—so empowering the tribunal to discard the rules applicable to an adversarial procedure and adopt an inquisitorial approach, by, for example, itself procuring evidence 461;

(h)

“whether and to what extent there should be oral or written evidence or submissions”—so, for example, allowing the tribunal to decide the case on the basis of documents only or to render an award after a very short oral hearing. 462

Subsection (3) of s.34 further allows the tribunal to fix time limits for any directions it gives and to extend time limits fixed. ⁴⁶³ It can fix the dates of hearings and does not necessarily act unfairly if it refuses an adjournment requested by one of the parties. ⁴⁶⁴ The tribunal has the power to change its mind about any order made (though it is not desirable for it to do so) and to revise or reverse an earlier decision. ⁴⁶⁵

Consolidation of proceedings and concurrent hearings

32-110

The parties are free to agree that their arbitral proceedings are to be consolidated with others or that concurrent hearings shall be held. ⁴⁶⁶ But all parties to all such proceedings must so agree. Unless the parties agree to confer such power on the tribunal, for example, by adopting forms of contract ⁴⁶⁷ or institutional rules which provide for consolidation or concurrent hearings, ⁴⁶⁸ neither the arbitral tribunal nor the court has that power. ⁴⁶⁹ This can constitute a considerable drawback to arbitration as a method of dispute resolution where a number of parties are involved, particularly in relation to construction and engineering projects. ⁴⁷⁰ But it seems to follow inevitably from the fact that, unless the parties otherwise agree, only their own disputes arising out of their own agreement can be referred to the agreed tribunal. ⁴⁷¹ A fortiori there is no power in the tribunal or in the court to order that a person who has never agreed to arbitration should be joined as a party to the proceedings. However, a party who has never agreed to arbitration, but who seeks to enforce a substantive right conferred on him by the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999 will be treated as a party to an arbitration agreement to which the term conferring the right is subject. ⁴⁷²

Legal or other representation

32-111

A party to arbitral proceedings may be represented in the proceedings by a lawyer or other person chosen by him. ⁴⁷³ This right is conferred by s.36 of the 1996 Act, but the parties are free to agree otherwise and the rules of some arbitral institutions preclude legal representation at first-tier hearings. The section does not entitle a party to insist that he be represented by a particular person and to delay the proceedings on the ground of the non-availability of that person. ⁴⁷⁴

Power to appoint experts, etc ⁴⁷⁵

32-112

The arbitral tribunal is empowered to appoint experts or legal advisers to report to it and the parties, or to appoint assessors to assist it on technical matters, and it may allow such persons to attend the proceedings. ⁴⁷⁶ The parties must be given a reasonable opportunity to comment on any information, opinion or advice offered by them. ⁴⁷⁷ This power does not require the positive agreement of the parties, but the parties may otherwise agree and it is in any event subject to the general duty of the tribunal set out in s.33. The fees and expenses of an expert, etc. appointed by the tribunal for which the arbitrators are liable are expenses of the arbitrators for which (assuming they are reasonable) the parties are jointly and severally liable. ⁴⁷⁸

General powers exercisable by tribunal

32-113

One of the major objectives of the 1996 Act was to enlarge the powers of the arbitral tribunal in the conduct of the reference and to reduce the occasions on which a party would have to apply to the court to intervene in the proceedings. Section 38 of the Act provides that the parties are free to agree on the powers exercisable by the tribunal for the purposes of and in relation to the proceedings. ⁴⁷⁹ But it then sets out a number of powers which the tribunal has unless otherwise agreed. ⁴⁸⁰

Security for costs

32-114

Subsection (3) empowers the tribunal to order a claimant to provide security for the costs of the arbitration. ⁴⁸¹ This was a major change from the previous law where only the court could order security for costs. The power is no longer vested in the court ⁴⁸² but only in the tribunal. It is discretionary, as is the power conferred upon the court by the provisions of the CPR dealing with security for costs. But it does not seem that the tribunal is bound to exercise its discretion in the same manner as the court under the CPR ⁴⁸³ and, indeed, in contrast to the CPR, it is expressly provided that the residence or incorporation of the claimant outside the United Kingdom is not to be a ground for the exercise of the power. ⁴⁸⁴ When the power was vested in the court it was held that, where an arbitration takes place in England under the rules of the International Chamber of Commerce, an order should not ordinarily be made that the claimant give security for costs. ⁴⁸⁵ The mere fact, however, that an arbitration was international did not render inappropriate an order for security, especially if the arbitration was of a type regularly conducted in London and the contract was governed by English law. ⁴⁸⁶

Other directions

32-115

The section ⁴⁸⁷ also empowers the tribunal to give directions in relation to property which is the subject of the proceedings owned by or in the possession of a party, ⁴⁸⁸ to direct that a party or witness shall be examined on oath or affirmation ⁴⁸⁹ and to give directions to a party for the preservation of any evidence in his custody or control. ⁴⁹⁰

Provisional relief with agreement of parties

32-116

An arbitral tribunal is entitled under s.47 of the 1996 Act to make interim awards or awards on different issues in the course of the proceedings. Such awards, however, are to be distinguished from orders for provisional relief, for example, a provisional order for the payment of money ⁴⁹¹ which is subject to reversal or adjustment when a decision has been reached on the underlying merits of the dispute. Section 39 provides that the parties are free to agree that the tribunal shall have power to order on a provisional basis any relief which it would have power to grant in a final award. ⁴⁹² But, unless the parties agree to confer such a power on the tribunal, it has no such power. ⁴⁹³ Conferment of the power to order conservatory measures, for example, or to grant interim injunctive relief, will sometimes be found in institutional rules adopted by the parties in the arbitration agreement and so be available to the tribunal. ⁴⁹⁴

Duties of parties

32-117

Section 40 of the 1996 Act imposes a general duty on the parties to do all things necessary for the expeditious conduct of the arbitral proceedings. This includes prompt compliance with decisions, orders and directions of the arbitral tribunal and taking promptly any steps to obtain a decision of the court on a preliminary question of jurisdiction or law. ⁴⁹⁵ Section 40 is a mandatory provision. ⁴⁹⁶ It does not, however, create duties which are owed by the parties as implied terms of the arbitration agreement the breach of which has contractual consequences (e.g. repudiation of the agreement), nor does the 1996 Act give the court any express power to intervene with breaches of the duties imposed by the section, the remedies for such breaches being set out in ss.41, 42. ⁴⁹⁷

Default

32-118

It is open to the parties to agree what shall be the powers of the tribunal in the event of a party's failure to do something necessary for the proper and expeditious conduct of the arbitration. ⁴⁹⁸ The rules of arbitral institutions often contain provisions which empower the tribunal to take action in cases of default. But, unless otherwise agreed, s.41 of the 1996 Act confers upon the tribunal certain specific powers which may be exercised in case of a party's default. ⁴⁹⁹

Want of prosecution

32-119

An arbitrator has, at common law, no inherent power to dismiss a claim for want of prosecution, ⁵⁰⁰ nor had the court power to do so under the 1950 Act or otherwise. ⁵⁰¹ However, subs.(3) of s.41 re-enacts ⁵⁰² s.13A of the 1950 Act and enables the arbitral tribunal to make an award dismissing a claim on the ground of want of prosecution. ⁵⁰³ Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, ⁵⁰⁴ the conditions which must be satisfied for the making of such an award reflect the case law at the date of the Act ⁵⁰⁵ relating to the powers of a court to dismiss an action for want of prosecution. These conditions are that there has been inordinate and inexcusable delay on the part of the claimant in pursuing his claim and that the delay (a) gives rise, or is likely to give rise, to a substantial risk that it is not possible to have a fair resolution of the issues in that claim; or (b) has caused, or is likely to cause, serious prejudice to the respondent. ⁵⁰⁶ It is, however, an error of law for an arbitrator to dismiss a claim for want of prosecution before the expiration of the limitation period, save in exceptional circumstances. ⁵⁰⁷

Absence of party or failure to submit evidence ⁵⁰⁸

32-120

Subsection (4) of s.41 empowers the tribunal to proceed in the absence of a party at an oral hearing or if a party fails after due notice to submit written evidence or make written submissions.

Peremptory orders ⁵⁰⁹

32-121

⚠ If without showing sufficient cause a party fails to comply with any order or directions of the arbitral tribunal, the tribunal may make a peremptory order to the same effect as the preceding order which was not complied with, prescribing a time limit for compliance. ⁵¹⁰ It is advisable that any such order should expressly state that it is peremptory, the time limit for compliance and the intended sanction to be imposed. Subsections (6) and (7) of s.41 set out the various powers of the tribunal in the event of non-compliance by a party with that peremptory order. ⁵¹¹ ⚠ These are that the tribunal may: exclude allegations or material which was the subject matter of the order ⁵¹²; draw adverse inferences from the non-compliance ⁵¹³; proceed to an award on the basis of the materials provided to the tribunal ⁵¹⁴; and make an order as to the costs of the arbitration incurred as a result of the non-compliance. ⁵¹⁵ But the powers conferred do not include a power simply to make an award against the defaulting party. They do, however, include, in the case of non-compliance with a peremptory order to provide security for costs, the power to make an award dismissing the claim. ⁵¹⁶

32-122

⚠ But this is envisaged to be a last resort. ⁵¹⁸ An application to the court can only be made where the parties have so agreed or the tribunal permits a party to apply or makes the application itself. ⁵¹⁹ The court must also be satisfied that there has been a default in complying with the peremptory order within the time prescribed in the order (or, if no time was prescribed, within a reasonable time) ⁵²⁰ and that the applicant has exhausted any available arbitral process in respect of failure to comply with the order. ⁵²¹ The power of the court is discretionary but the court is not required in every case to satisfy itself that the case is a proper one for the order which is sought by reviewing the decision made by the tribunal and considering whether the tribunal ought to have made the order in question. ⁵²² There may, however, be circumstances where the court might decide not to make the order. ⁵²³

1. For a more detailed account of arbitration, and practice and procedure, the reader should consult: Merkin, Arbitration Law (2007); Merkin and Flannery, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Russell on Arbitration, 24th edn (2015); Tweeddale and Tweeddale, Arbitration of Commercial Disputes, 2nd edn (2012); Harris, Planterose and Tecks, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, 2nd edn (1989) and Supplement (2001); Redfern and Hunter, Law and Practice of International Arbitration, 5th edn (2009); Park, Arbitration of International Business Disputes, 2nd edn (2012).

⁴⁴⁴. s.33(1)(a).

⁴⁴⁵. s.33(1)(b).

⁴⁴⁶. s.33(2).

⁴⁴⁷. s.4(1) and Sch.1.

⁴⁴⁸. DAC Report para.151; Margulead v Exide Technologies [2004] EWHC 1019 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 324 (claimant not allowed last word).

⁴⁴⁹. DAC Report para.150.

⁴⁵⁰. See above, para.32-096.

⁴⁵¹. See below, para.32-163.

⁴⁵². See below, paras 32-161—32-164, and DAC Report para.151.

⁴⁵³. cf. DAC Report paras 154-163. See also DAC Report para.175 (s.40).

⁴⁵⁴. For international arbitrations, see the IBA Evidence Rules 2010.

⁴⁵⁵. See Hunter (1997) 13 Arbitration International 345 at 347.

⁴⁵⁶. (1997) 13 Arbitration International 345 at 347.

⁴⁵⁷. (1997) 13 Arbitration International 345 at 349.

⁴⁵⁸. (1997) 13 Arbitration International 345.

⁴⁵⁹. (1997) 13 Arbitration International 345 at 350.

⁴⁶⁰. (1997) 13 Arbitration International 345 at 351.

⁴⁶¹. (1997) 13 Arbitration International 345 at 354 (subject to allowing the parties to comment on the evidence).

⁴⁶². (1997) 13 Arbitration International 345 at 357; O'Donoghue v Enterprise Inns Plc [2008] EWHC

815.

463. (1997) 13 Arbitration International 345.

464. Konkola Copper Mines Plc v U&M Mining Zambia Ltd [2014] EWHC 2374 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 649 ("show cause" order).

465. Charles McWillie & Co (Shipping) Ltd v Ocean Laser Shipping Ltd [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 225, 248.

466. s.35(1). See Chartered Institute of Arbitrators: Guidelines for Arbitrators on how to approach issues relating to multi-party arbitrations.

467. See Redland Aggregates Ltd v Shepherd Hill Civil Engineering Ltd [2002] 1 W.L.R. 1621 HL (FCEC Standard Form of Subcontract); Dredging and Construction Ltd v Delta Civil Engineering Ltd [2002] C.L.C. 213 (FCEC form of contract); Belgravia Property Co Ltd v S & R (London) Ltd [2001] Build. L.R. 424 (JCT form of contract); City and General (Holborn) Ltd v AYH Plc [2005] Build. L.R. 55 (JCT form of contract).

468. e.g. CI Arb Rules art.73. See Knowles (1996) 62 Arbitration 191; Hanotiau (1998) 14 Arbitration International 369; Hardy (2000) 66 Arbitration 15; Platte (2002) 18 Arbitration International 67; Dillon and Limbert (2006) 9 Int. A.L. Rev. 53; Cremades and Madalena (2008) 24 Arbitration International 507.

469. s.35(2).

470. There may also be difficulties in the case of "string" or "back-to-back" contracts in other spheres. See also Sacor Maritima SA v Repsol Petroleo SA [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 518; and Aquator Shipping Ltd v Kleimar NV [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 379 (head charter and sub-charter).

471. DAC Report para.179. See also above, para.32-050 (confidentiality).

472. See above, para.32-044.

473. s.36. See IBA Guidelines on Party Representation in International Arbitration 2013; Piper Double Glazing Ltd v DC Contracts [1994] 1 All E.R. 117 (costs incurred by unqualified person).

474. DAC Report para.184.

475. See the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators: Guidelines on the use of tribunal appointed experts, legal advisers and assessors: 70 Arbitration 45-50.

476. s.37(1)(a).

477. s.37(1)(b); Hussman (Europe) Ltd v Al Ameen Development and Trade Co [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 83, 94.

478. s.37(2). See also s.28; above, para.32-099. This is a mandatory provision.

479. s.38(1).

480. s.38(2).

481. See Chartered Institute of Arbitrators: Guideline on Security for Costs.

482. But see s.70(6); below, para.32-177.

483. CPR 25.13. See (1997) 63 Arbitration 166 (guidelines); Reid (2002) 152 N.L.J. 1426; Altaras (2002) 69 Arbitration 81; (2007) 73 Arbitration 191; De Battista (2010) 76 Arbitration 421.

- 484. s.38(3).
- 485. Bank Mellat v Helliniki Techniki SA [1984] Q.B. 291. But contrast SA Coppée Lavalin NV v Ken-Ren Chemicals and Fertilisers Ltd [1995] 1 A.C. 38.
- 486. K/S A/S Bani v Korea Shipbuilding and Engineering Corp [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 445; Flender Werft AG v Aegean Maritime Ltd [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 27, 29; Regia Autonoma de Electricitate Revel v Gulf Petroleum International Ltd [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 67.
- 487. s.38(4). See (1998) 64 Arbitration 84 (guidelines), 180; Oyre (1999) 65 Arbitration 113 (interim relief); CPR r.25.1; Emmot v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd (No.2) [2009] EWHC 1 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 233 at [63].
- 488. Under s.12(6)(g) of the Arbitration Act 1950, this power was previously reserved to the court.
- 489. This confirms s.12(1)-(3) of the 1950 Act.
- 490. Under s.12(6)(e), (g) of the 1950 Act, this power was previously reserved to the court.
- 491. s.39(2)(a).
- 492. s.39(1); cf. Kastner v Jason [2004] EWCA Civ 1599, [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 397 at [14]-[19] (freezing order). See also s.39(3) (to be taken into account in the final award); and CPR Pt 25.
- 493. s.39(4).
- 494. Thomas (1997) 13 Arbitration International 405; (1998) 64 Arbitration 17 (guidelines).
- 495. ss.32, 45; above, para.32-104; below, para.32-126.
- 496. s.4(1) and Sch.1. For a possible conflict with s.34(1), see DAC Report para.175.
- 497. Elektrim SA v Vivendi Universal SA [2007] EWHC 11 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 693 at [123]-[131].
- 498. s.41(1).
- 499. s.41(2).
- 500. Bremer Vulkan Schiffbau und Maschinenfabrik v South India Shipping Corp Ltd [1981] A.C. 909.
- 501. Bremer Vulkan Schiffbau und Maschinenfabrik v South India Shipping Corp Ltd [1981] A.C. 909.
- 502. But with slight changes of language in s.41(3)(a).
- 503. Birkett v James [1978] A.C. 297; Department of Transport v Chris Smaller (Transport) Ltd [1989] A.C. 1197; L'Office Cherifien des Phosphates v Yamashita—Shinnihon Steamship Co [1994] 1 A.C. 486. See also Trill v Sacher [1993] 1 W.L.R. 1379; Roebuck v Mungovin [1994] 2 A.C. 224; Davies (1997) 63 Arbitration 286; Chartered Institute of Arbitrators: Guidelines for Arbitrators on Proceeding and Making Awards in Default of Party Participation (2011).
- 504. Al Hadha Trading Co v Tradigrain SA [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 512, 522 (GAFTA arbitration).
- 505. See the changes to case management subsequently brought about by the Civil Procedure Rules: Securum Finance Ltd v Ashton [2001] Ch. 291.
- 506. TAG Wealth Management v West [2008] EWHC 1466 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 699.

- 507. James Lazenby & Co v McNicholas Construction Co Ltd [1995] 1 W.L.R. 615. But see Securum Finance Ltd v Ashton, above.
- 508. See Chartered Institute of Arbitrators: Guidelines for Arbitrators on Proceeding and Making Awards in Default of Party Participation (2011).
- 509. See Chartered Institute of Arbitrators: Guidelines for Arbitrators on how to approach an application for a Peremptory and “Unless” Orders and related matters.
- 510. s.41(5); Emmott v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd (No.2) [2009] EWHC 1 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 233.
- 511. ! There is no obligation on the arbitral tribunal to exercise these powers: Enterprise Insurance Co Plc v U-Drive Solutions (Gibraltar) Ltd [2016] EWHC 1301 (QB) at [47]–[59].
- 512. s.41(7)(a).
- 513. s.41(7)(b).
- 514. s.41(7)(c).
- 515. s.41(7)(d).
- 516. s.41(6).
- 517. ! Unless otherwise agreed by the parties: s.42(1); Pearl Petroleum Co Ltd v Kurdistan Regional Government of Iraq [2015] EWHC 3361 (Comm), [2016] 4 W.L.R. 2 at [17]–[27]. See also Sch.2 para.4 (exercise of powers by judge-arbitrator) and the Scheme for Construction Contracts (England and Wales) Regulations 1998 (SI 1998/649); Macob Civil Engineering Ltd v Morrison Construction Ltd [1999] Build. L.R. 93; para.32-199, below.
- 518. DAC Report para.212.
- 519. s.42(2).
- 520. s.42(4).
- 521. s.42(3). See also CPR Pt 62 PD 62. The permission of the court is required for any appeal from a decision of the court under this section: s.42(5); but see below, para.32-184.
- 522. Emmott v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd (No.2) [2009] EWHC 1 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 233 at [59].
- 523. See Emmott v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd (No.2), above, where Teare J. identified a number of such circumstances at [59]–[64]. cf. Patley Wood Farm LLP v Brake & Brake [2013] EWHC 4035 (Ch) at [52]. See Dundas (2013) 80 Arbitration (2) 196.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 32 - Arbitration ¹

Section 8. - Powers of the Court

Court powers in support of arbitral proceedings

32-123

⚠ There is no inherent jurisdiction in the court to supervise arbitrations. ⁵²⁴ But the aid of the court may be invoked to assist the arbitral process. Section 43 of the 1996 Act ⁵²⁵ provides that a party to arbitral proceedings may use the same court procedures as are available in relation to legal proceedings ⁵²⁶ to secure the attendance before the tribunal of a witness in order to give oral testimony or to produce documents or other material evidence, i.e. to obtain a witness summons. ⁵²⁷

⚠ But this may only be done with the permission of the tribunal or the agreement of the other parties. ⁵²⁸ Moreover, these particular court procedures may only be used if the witness is in the United Kingdom and the arbitral proceedings are being conducted in England. ⁵²⁹

32-124

⚠ Section 44 of the Act also confers upon the court, unless otherwise agreed between the parties, ⁵³⁰ the same powers on certain matters in relation to arbitral proceedings as it has in relation to legal proceedings. ⁵³¹ These are: the taking and preservation of evidence, making orders in relation to property, the sale of any goods, and the granting of an interim injunction or the appointment of a receiver. ⁵³²

⚠ However, these powers may only be used when the tribunal or arbitral institution is unable to act or to act effectively. ⁵³³ This limitation is entirely consistent with one of the aims of the Act, which is to restrict the power of the court to intervene in the arbitral process. Exercise of the power should not usurp the function of the arbitrators. ⁵³⁴ If the case is one of urgency, the court may, on the application of a party or proposed party to the arbitral proceedings, make such orders as it considers necessary for the purpose of preserving evidence or assets, ⁵³⁵ for instance, it may make a search order or grant a freezing injunction. ⁵³⁶ It may also grant an anti-suit injunction ⁵³⁷ as the right to have disputes referred to arbitration is an “asset”. ⁵³⁸ But if the case is not one of urgency or if the order sought is not necessary for the purpose of preserving evidence or assets, ⁵³⁹ then the court can act only upon an application of a party to the arbitral proceedings made with the permission of the tribunal or the agreement in writing of the other parties. ⁵⁴⁰ It has been held that orders under s.44 cannot be made against non-parties to the arbitration agreement. ⁵⁴¹ ⚠

32-125

The powers of the court under ss.43 and 44 may be exercised even if the seat of the arbitration is outside England or no seat has been designated or determined, but the court may refuse to exercise any such power if, in its opinion, the fact that the seat is outside England, or that when designated or determined the seat is likely to be outside England, makes it inappropriate to do so. ⁵⁴²

Determination of preliminary point of law by the court

32-126

Section 2 of the Arbitration Act 1979 enabled a party to an arbitration to apply to the court to determine a question of law arising in the course of the reference. This “Consultative Case” procedure was useful in certain instances since it enabled a definitive answer to be obtained from the court at an early stage of the arbitral proceedings. Section 45 of the 1996 Act confers a similar power on the court to determine any question of law ⁵⁴³ arising in the course of the proceedings, but the court must be satisfied that the question of law substantially affects the rights of one or more of the parties. ⁵⁴⁴ Further, in order not to interfere unduly in the arbitral process, the conditions subject to which the court is empowered to consider such an application are also limited: the application must be made with the agreement of all the other parties to the proceedings or with the permission of the tribunal, and, in the latter case, the court must be satisfied that the determination of the question is likely to produce substantial savings in costs ⁵⁴⁵ and that the application is made without delay. ⁵⁴⁶ Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, the arbitral tribunal may continue the arbitral proceedings and make an award while an application to the court is pending. ⁵⁴⁷

32-127

It is open to the parties, by agreement, to exclude the court's jurisdiction under this section ⁵⁴⁸ and an agreement to dispense with reasons for the tribunal's award is to be considered as such an exclusion agreement. ⁵⁴⁹

32-128

No appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from a decision as to whether or not the conditions have been met to enable the court to consider the application unless the court gives permission to appeal. ⁵⁵⁰ The decision of the court on the question of law itself is to be treated as a judgment of the court for the purposes of an appeal. But no appeal to the Court of Appeal lies without the permission of the court, which is not to be given unless the court considers that the question is one of general public importance or is one which for some other special reason ought to be considered by the Court of Appeal. ⁵⁵¹ It would appear that no appeal lies against a refusal of the court to give permission to appeal.

Power of court to extend time limits

32-129

⚠ Section 79 of the 1996 Act confers upon the court a general power to extend any time limit agreed by the parties or specified in any provision of Pt I of the Act having effect in default of such agreement ⁵⁵² (with the exception of the time limit for beginning arbitral proceedings dealt with in s.12) ⁵⁵³ but only after any available arbitral process has been exhausted and only if a substantial injustice would otherwise be done. ⁵⁵⁴ ⚠ An application for an extension should be made as soon as reasonably possible after the party seeking relief ought to appreciate that it is required. ⁵⁵⁵

Anti-arbitration injunction

32-130

⚠ The court has power under s.72(1) of the Act ⁵⁵⁶ and under s.37 of the Senior Courts Act 1981 ⁵⁵⁷ to restrain by injunction a party, or an arbitrator, from pursuing an arbitration. ⁵⁵⁸ But it has been said that “Part I of the Act contemplates that once matters are referred to arbitration it is the arbitral tribunal that will generally deal with issues of their jurisdiction and the procedure in the arbitration up to the date of the award” ⁵⁵⁹ and it is therefore seldom—save in exceptional cases—that any injunction will be granted. ⁵⁶⁰ ⚠ An unsuccessful application under s.72 does not preclude a party from subsequently participating in the arbitration. ⁵⁶¹

1. For a more detailed account of arbitration, and practice and procedure, the reader should consult: Merkin, Arbitration Law (2007); Merkin and Flannery, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Russell on Arbitration, 24th edn (2015); Tweeddale and Tweeddale, Arbitration of Commercial Disputes, 2nd edn (2012); Harris, Planterose and Tecks, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, 2nd edn (1989) and Supplement (2001); Redfern and Hunter, Law and Practice of International Arbitration, 5th edn (2009); Park, Arbitration of International Business Disputes, 2nd edn (2012).
524. Exormisis Shipping SA v Oonsoo [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 432, 434; Bremer Vulkan Schiffbau und Maschinenfabrik v South India Shipping Corp Ltd [1981] A.C. 909, 979; K/S A/S Bill Biakh v Hyundai Corp [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 187, 189; Kirkawa Corp v Gatoil Overseas Inc [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 154, 157; Charles McWillie & Co (Shipping) Ltd v Ocean Laser Shipping Ltd [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 225, 248. cf. Japan Line Ltd v Aggeliki Charis Compañía Marítima SA [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 288, 292.
 525. s.43(1). Section 43 derives from s.12(4) and (5) of the Arbitration Act 1950. It is mandatory. See also Sch.2 para.4 (exercise of power by judge-arbitrator).
 526. CPR Pt 62 PD 62.
 527.  For the need to identify the documents, see Assimina Maritime Ltd v Pakistan Shipping Corp [2004] EWHC 3005 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 525; Tajik Aluminium Plant v Hydro Aluminium AS [2005] EWCA Civ 1218, [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 155 (witness summons requiring production of documents); Silver Dry Bulk Co Ltd v Homer Hulbert Maritime Co Ltd [2017] EWHC 44 (Comm), [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 154 at [39]–[46] (witness summons for production of documents). But see previous case and BNP Paribas v Deloitte and Touche LLP [2003] EWHC 2874 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 233 (no power to order disclosure by non-party); EDO Corp v Ultra Electronics Ltd [2009] EWHC 682 (Ch), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 349 (no power to order pre-action disclosure).
 528. s.43(2).
 529. s.43(3), i.e. England and Wales, or (as the case may be) Northern Ireland.
 530. The arbitration clause may, on its true construction, exclude the power of the court to grant ancillary relief (Mantovani v Carapelli [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 375), though such a construction will be rare: see The Lisboa [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 546; Petronin SA v Sechav Marine Ltd [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 603, 613; Ultisol Transport Contractors Ltd v Bouygues Offshore SA (No.1) [1996] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 140, 144, reversed on other grounds [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 461; Re Qs Estate [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 931; SAB Miller Africa BV v East African Breweries Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 1564, [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 422 at [8]. But see B v S [2011] EWHC 691, [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 18 (FOSFA conditions).
 531. s.44(1). Hiscox Underwriting Ltd v Dickson Manchester & Co Ltd [2004] EWHC 479, [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 438 (interim order for disclosure); Assimina Maritime Ltd v Pakistan Shipping Corp [2004] EWHC 3005 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 525 (no power to order disclosure by non-party but power to order preservation of documents by non-party); Lauritzencool AB v Lady Navigation Inc [2005] EWCA Civ 579, [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 63 (interim injunction restraining activity outside the contract pending arbitration); Cetelem SA v Roust Holdings Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 618, [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 494 (injunction to deliver contractual documentation before arbitration commenced); SAB Miller Africa BV v East African Breweries Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 1564, [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 442 (injunction to restrain breach of contract pending establishment of tribunal). See also s.44(6) Sch.2 para.4 (exercise of power by judge-arbitrator) and CPR Pt 62 PD 62. The permission of the court is required for any appeal under s.44: s.44(7) (but see below, para.32-184); SAB Miller Africa BV v East African Breweries Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 1564, [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 422.
 532.  s.44(2). See Thomas (1997) 13 Arbitration International 105. cf. Tsakos Shipping & Trading SA v Orizon Tanker Co Ltd [1998] C.L.C. 1003 (order for inspection and tests set aside);

Commerce and Industry Co of Canada v Certain Underwriters of Lloyd's of London [2002] 1 W.L.R. 1323 (application for examination of witnesses to provide depositions in New York arbitration refused); Econet Wireless Ltd v Vee Networks Ltd [2006] EWHC 1568 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 428 (application for injunction to restrain sale of shares refused); Permasteelisa Japan KK v Bouyguesstroi [2007] EWHC 3508 (TCC) (application for injunction to restrain calls on performance bonds refused); Travelers Insurance Co Ltd v Countrywide Surveyors Ltd [2010] EWHC 2455 (TCC), [2011] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 631 (order for pre-action disclosure refused); Silver Dry Bulk Co Ltd v Homer Hulbert Maritime Co Ltd [2017] EWHC 44 (Comm), [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 154 at [47]–[53] (order for letters of request to a foreign court refused). For the power of the court under s.37 of the Senior Courts Act 1981 to intervene outside the 1996 Act, see Hiscox Underwriting Ltd v Dickson Manchester & Co, above; Cetelem SA v Roust Holdings Ltd, above, at [74]; Weissfisch v Julius [2006] EWCA Civ 218, [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 716 at [33]; Elektrim SA v Vivendi Universal SA (No.2) [2007] EWHC 571 (Comm), [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 8; Starlight Shipping Co v Tai Ping Insurance Co Ltd [2007] EWHC 1893 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 230; Republic of Kazakhstan v Istil Group Inc (No.2) [2007] EWHC 2729 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 382; Sheffield United Football Club Ltd v West Ham United Football Club Plc [2008] EWHC 2855 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 167 at [31]–[32]; British Telecommunications Plc v SAE Group Inc [2009] EWHC 252 (TCC), [2009] B.L.R. 231 (CPR Pt 8); SAB Miller Africa BV v East African Breweries Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 1564, [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 422; REC Wafer Norway AS v Moser Baer Photo Voltaic Ltd [2010] EWHC 2581 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 410; Enercon GmbH v Enercon (India) Ltd [2012] EWHC 689 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 519 at [68]; AES Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant LLP v Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant JSC [2013] UKSC 35, [2013] 1 W.L.R. 1889 at [48]; Barnwell Enterprises Ltd v ECP Africa FII Investments LLC [2013] EWHC 2517 (Comm), [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 171. See also in relation to s.33(2) of the 1981 Act: Travelers Insurance Co Ltd v Countrywide Surveyors Ltd [2010] EWHC 2455 (TCC), [2011] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 631; Mi-Space (UK) Ltd v Lend Lease Construction (EMEA) Ltd [2013] EWHC 2001 (TCC), [2013] B.L.R. 600. For the power of the court under s.25(3) of the Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments Act 1982 and the restraints imposed by the ICSID Convention and sovereign immunity, see ETI Euro Telecom International NV v Republic of Bolivia [2008] EWCA Civ 800, [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 421.

533. s.44(5); Pacific Maritime Asia Ltd v Holystone Overseas Ltd [2007] EWHC 2319 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 371 (arbitrator's order would not be sufficiently effective); Hiscox Underwriting Ltd v Dickson Manchester & Co Ltd, above (arbitrator newly appointed and unfamiliar with case and so, in effect, unable to act). Contrast Econet Wireless Ltd v Vee Networks Ltd, above (England not appropriate forum); Patley Wood Farm LLP v Brake and Brake [2014] EWHC 4192 (Ch) (arbitrator's directions not workable). See also Sheffield United Football Club Ltd v West Ham United Football Club Ltd, above (actions likely to be taken by parties would lead to an identical impasse).

534. ZIM Integrated Shipping Services Ltd v European Containers ICS [2013] EWHC 3581 (Comm).

535. s.44(3); Cetelem SA v Roust Holdings Ltd, above; National Insurance and Guarantee Group Ltd v M Young Legal Services Ltd [2004] EWHC 2972 (QB), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 46; Starlight Shipping Co v Tai Ping Insurance Co Ltd, above; Pacific Maritime Asia Ltd v Holystone Overseas Ltd, above; Sheffield United Football Club Ltd v West Ham United Football Club Ltd, above; BNP Paribas SA v Open Joint Stock Company Russian Machines [2011] EWHC 308 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 61 (even against non-party); Euroil Ltd v Cameroon Offshore Petroleum SARL [2014] EWHC 52 (Comm). See also Telenor East Holdings II AS v Altumo Holdings and Investments Ltd [2011] EWHC 735 (Comm) (on meaning of "necessary" in s.44(3)). Unless there is an existing or intended arbitration there is no "party or proposed party": AES Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant LLP v Ust-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant JSC [2010] EWHC 772 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 493 at [20] (affirmed [2011] EWCA Civ 647).

536. Re Q's Estate [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 931; Cogentra AG v Sixteen Thirteen Marine SA [2008] EWHC 1615 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 602; Emmott v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd (No.2) [2009] EWHC 1 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 233 at [83].

537. See para.32-053, above.

- 538. Cetelem SA v Roust Holdings Ltd, above, at [57]; Starlight Shipping Co v Tai Ping Insurance Co Ltd, above at [21]; Sheffield United Football Club Ltd v West Ham United Football Club Ltd, above at [32]; BNP Paribas SA v Open Joint Stock Company Russian Machines, above.
- 539. Cetelem SA v Roust Holdings Ltd, above, at [47]; Mobil Cerro Negro Ltd v Petroleos Venezuela SA [2008] EWHC 532, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 684; Travelers Insurance Co Ltd v Countrywide Surveyors Ltd [2010] EWHC 2455 (TCC), [2011] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 631. In Cetelem SA v Roust Holdings Ltd, above, it was stated that a contractual right or chose in action was an "asset" (at [57], [62]); Euroil Ltd v Cameroon Offshore Petroleum SARL [2014] EWHC 52 (Comm). But discretion to make an order is more likely to be exercised where the asset is a conventional asset: ZIM Integrated Shipping Services Ltd v European Containers ICS [2013] EWHC 3581 (Com); Euroil Ltd v Cameroon Offshore Petroleum SARL, above, at [18]–[20].
- 540. s.44(4); Petroleum Investigation Co Ltd v Kantupan Holdings Co Ltd [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 124; Assimina Maritime Ltd v Pakistan Shipping Corp, above.
- 541.  DTEK Trading SA v Morozov [2017] EWHC 94 (Comm), [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 126.
- 542. s.2(3); Mobil Cerro Negro Ltd v Petroleos Venezuela SA [2008] EWHC 532, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 684 (but see s.43(3)). cf. Channel Tunnel Group Ltd v Balfour Beatty Construction Ltd [1993] A.C. 334; Econet Wireless Ltd v Vee Networks Ltd, above. The court has power to order "provisional, including protective measures" under art.35 of Regulation (EU) 1215/2012 (Brussels bis) even though the courts of another contracting state have jurisdiction as to the substance of the matter. cf. Van Uden Maritime BV v Kommanditgesellschaft in Firma Decolone (C-391/95) [1999] Q.B. 1225 ECJ.
- 543. See (on s.2 of the 1950 Act) Chapman v Charlwood Alliance Properties (1981) 260 E.G. 1041.
- 544. s.45(1). See (on ss.1, 2 of the 1950 Act) Manders (Property) Estates v Magnet House Properties (1989) 42 E.G. 111; Urban Small Space v Burford Investments Co (1990) 28 E.G. 116. For the form of the application, see s.45(3) and PD 62.9.
- 545. Secretary of State for Defence v Turner Estate Solutions Ltd [2015] EWHC 1150 (TCC), [2015] Build. L.R. 448.
- 546. 1996 Act s.45(2). See Taylor Woodrow Holdings Ltd v Barnes & Elliott Ltd [2006] EWHC 1693 (TCC), [2006] Build. L.R. 376 (court retains discretion even though parties agree).
- 547. s.45(4).
- 548. s.45(1). See also s.69(1) and below, para.32-167. In the case of a domestic arbitration agreement, s.87 provides that any such exclusion agreement must be made after the commencement of arbitral proceedings. But s.87 is unlikely to be brought into force: see above, para.32-005. The specific exceptions listed in s.4 of the Arbitration Act 1950 were not retained.
- 549. s.45(1).
- 550. s.45(5). But see below, para.32-184.
- 551. s.45(6).
- 552. s.79 does not apply to a time limit specified in Pt 1 of the Act but not in default of agreement between the parties: Aoot Kalmneft v Glencore International AG [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 128, 135.
- 553. See above, para.32-076.
- 554.  s.79(3); Minermet SpA Milan v Luckyfield Shipping Corp SA [2004] EWHC 729 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 348; Pirtek (UK) Ltd v Deanswood Ltd [2005] EWHC 2301 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 728 at [44], [46]; Gold Coast Ltd v Naval Gijon SA [2006] EWHC 1044

(Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 400; Rotenberg v Sucafina SA [2011] EWHC 901 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 159; Xstrata Coal Queensland Pty Ltd v Benxi Iron & Steel (Group) International Economic & Trading Co Ltd [2016] EWHC 2022 (Comm). The application may be made a party or by the arbitral tribunal: s.79(2), PD62. On the extent of this power, see s.79(4), (5). The permission of the court is required for any appeal from a decision of the court under this section: s.79(6); but see below, para.32-184.

555. Equatorial Traders Ltd v Louis Dreyfus Trading Ltd [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 638, 642.

556. See below, para.32-157.

557. See above, para.32-124 n.525.

558. Zaporozhye Production Society v Ashly Ltd [2002] EWHC 1410 (Comm); Arab National Bank v El-Abdali [2004] EWHC 238 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 541; Weissfisch v Julius [2006] EWCA Civ 218, [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 716; Intermet FZCO v Ansol Ltd [2007] EWHC 226 (Comm); Elektrim SA v Vivendi Universal SA (No.2) [2007] EWHC 571 (Comm), [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 8; Albon v Naza Motor Trading Sdn Berhad (No.4) [2007] EWCA Civ 1124, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 1; Republic of Kazakhstan v Istil Group Inc (No.2) [2007] EWHC 2729 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 382; Excalibur Ventures LLC v Texas Keystone Inc [2011] EWHC 1624 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 289; Golden Ocean Group Ltd v Humpuss Intermodal Transportasi TBK Ltd [2013] EWHC 1240 (Comm), [2013] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 1025; Dunning (2008) 74 Arbitration 254. See also British Telecommunications Plc v SAE Group Inc [2009] EWHC 252 (TCC), [2009] B.L.R. 231 (declaration). The court has power to injunct arbitral proceedings taking place in another Member State of the European Union: Claxton Engineering Services Ltd v TXM Olaj-es Gazkutato KFT [2010] EWHC 345 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 510 (but see [2011] EWCA Civ 410); Seriki (2013) 16 Int. A.L.R. 2, 43.

559. Elektrim SA v Vivendi Universal SA (No.2), above, at [70]. See also Fiona Trust and Holding Corp v Privalov [2007] EWCA Civ 20, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 267 at [40] (affirmed sub nom. Premium Nafta Products Ltd v Fili Shipping Co Ltd [2007] UKHL 40, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 254). Contrast British Telecommunications Plc v SAE Group Inc [2009] EWHC 252 (TCC), [2009] B.L.R. 231; Excalibur Ventures LLC v Texas Keystone Inc [2011] EWHC 1624 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 289.

560.  See also the limitations imposed by CPR 6.20 (5) and Albon v Naza Motor Trading Sdn Berhad (No.4), above (at first instance) [2007] EWHC 1879 (Ch), [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 420; J Jarvis v Blue Circle Dartford Estates [2007] EWHC 1262 (TCC), [2007] Build. L.R. 439 ("very sparingly"); Claxton Engineering Services Ltd v TXM Olaj-es Gazkutato KFT [2010] EWHC 345 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 510 ("only ... in exceptional circumstances"); Excalibur Ventures LLC v Texas Keystone Inc [2011] EWHC 1624 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 289 at [54], [56] ("in exceptional circumstances and with caution"); Nomihold Securities Inc v Mobile Telesystems Finance SA [2012] EWHC 130 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 442 at [55]. Contrast British Telecommunications Plc v SAE Group Inc [2009] EWHC 252 (TCC), [2009] B.L.R. 231 (declaration). See also Golden Ocean Group Ltd v Humpuss Intermodal Transportasi TBK Ltd [2013] EWHC 1240 (Comm), [2013] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 1025 (Singapore arbitration put on hold pending determination of jurisdiction issue by English court); AmTrust Europe Ltd v Trust Risk Group SpA [2015] EWHC 1927 (Comm), [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 231.

561. Hackwood Ltd v Areen Design Services Ltd [2005] EWHC 2322 (TCC), (2006) 22 Const. L.J. 68.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 32 - Arbitration ¹
Section 9. - The Award ⁵⁶²

Arbitrator's award: legal or other criteria

32-131

Before the enactment of the 1996 Act, it was very doubtful whether an arbitration agreement which expressly authorised an arbitrator to decide ex aequo et bono or as amiable compositeur or otherwise free from the constraints of law ⁵⁶³ was a valid arbitration agreement in English law, or whether an award so made would be enforceable in England as a valid award. ⁵⁶⁴ But, if the parties so agree, s.46(1)(b) of the Act now authorises—and indeed requires—the arbitral tribunal to decide the dispute in accordance with such considerations as are agreed by the parties or determined by the tribunal. “Equity clauses” or arbitration ex aequo et bono, amiable composition or, indeed, any other type of clause which permits the tribunal to decide in accordance with general considerations of fairness and justice will, if so agreed by the parties, therefore be upheld, although it should be noted that the parties are then in effect excluding any right of appeal to the courts as there will be no “question of law” to appeal. The same provision in the Act will also give validity to clauses which stipulate, for example, that the tribunal is to apply a non-national system of law, ⁵⁶⁵ the lex mercatoria or “general principles of law”.

32-132

In the absence of any such agreement, however, “the duty of an arbitrator is to decide the questions submitted to him according to the legal rights of the parties, and not according to what he may consider fair and reasonable under the circumstances”. ⁵⁶⁶ The arbitral tribunal must therefore apply some fixed and recognisable system of law, whether English or foreign. ⁵⁶⁷ It cannot make a new contract for the parties, ⁵⁶⁸ but it must give effect to the usages of the trade applicable to the transaction if so required by the law which governs the contract. ⁵⁶⁹ It has jurisdiction to decide and is bound to give effect to all legal and equitable defences, including the Statute of Limitations ⁵⁷⁰ and the fact that the contract was illegal. ⁵⁷¹

Conflict of laws

32-133

The tribunal must decide the dispute in accordance with the law chosen by the parties as applicable to the substance of the dispute. ⁵⁷² An express choice of law clause must therefore, unless the parties otherwise agree, be upheld. In the absence of any such choice or agreement, the tribunal is required to apply “the law determined by the conflict of laws rules which it considers applicable”. ⁵⁷³ The arbitral tribunal therefore has a discretion as to which conflict of laws rules it will apply and, though the seat of the arbitration is in England, is not bound to apply English conflict rules. ⁵⁷⁴ It cannot, however, unless otherwise agreed, ⁵⁷⁵ proceed directly to apply whatever substantive law it considers appropriate, but must arrive at the appropriate law by the application of conflict of law rules.

Interim awards

32-134

As in the case of the 1950 Act, ⁵⁷⁶ s.47 of the 1996 Act enables the arbitral tribunal to make an interim award unless otherwise agreed by the parties. ⁵⁷⁷ The expression “interim award” is, however, something of a misnomer, ⁵⁷⁸ since such an award is in fact final on the matters dealt with in the award. More accurately, therefore, s.47 states that the tribunal “may make more than one award at different times on different aspects of the matters to be determined” ⁵⁷⁹ and that it may, in particular, make an award relating to an issue affecting the whole claim or to a part only of the claims or cross-claims submitted to it for decision. ⁵⁸⁰ Under the 1950 Act it was held that an arbitrator had a complete discretion whether or not to make an interim award as opposed to dealing with the matter in a final award and that he might impose any proper condition which he thought fit on the making of the interim award. ⁵⁸¹ There is little doubt that the 1996 Act will be construed no less widely and that, in practice, arbitrators should feel encouraged to use the power to make interim awards in order to separate out issues for early determination. However, if the tribunal makes an interim award, it must specify in its award the issue, or the claim or part of a claim, which is the subject matter of the award. ⁵⁸² An interim award will (subject to any appeal or other proper challenge) constitute a permanent final decision as to the matters dealt with and determined by it. ⁵⁸³

Remedies

32-135

The parties are free to agree on the powers exercisable by the arbitral tribunal as regards remedies ⁵⁸⁴ and could therefore, by agreement, empower the tribunal to grant forms of relief that are not available to the courts. ⁵⁸⁵ They are also free to agree that the tribunal is not to have the power to grant certain forms of relief. ⁵⁸⁶ Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, the tribunal may order the payment of a sum of money in any currency, ⁵⁸⁷ whether the claim is for a debt or damages, and it should award damages in the currency which best expresses the claimant's loss. ⁵⁸⁸ It may also grant declaratory relief, ⁵⁸⁹ including a declaration that one party is entitled to be indemnified by the other. There is further conferred upon the tribunal the same powers as the court to grant injunctive relief, ⁵⁹⁰ to order specific performance of a contract (other than a contract relating to land), ⁵⁹¹ and to order the rectification, setting aside or cancellation of a deed or other document. ⁵⁹²

Interest

32-136

The parties are free to agree on the powers of the tribunal as regards the award of interest. ⁵⁹³ Section 49 of the 1996 Act provides that, subject to the contrary agreement of the parties, ⁵⁹⁴ the tribunal may award simple or compound interest at such rates and with such rests as it considers meets the justice of the case in respect of periods both before and after the award. ⁵⁹⁵ But a party seeking award of “post-award” interest must ask for it. ⁵⁹⁶ Although the power to award interest is (unless excluded or modified by agreement) discretionary, interest should ordinarily be awarded in a commercial arbitration. ⁵⁹⁷ The tribunal's powers to award interest include compound interest. ⁵⁹⁸ However, compound interest should only be ordered on a compensatory, and not on a punitive, basis. ⁵⁹⁹ If an arbitrator misdirects himself in his award as to the principles on which his discretion ought to be exercised, this would, it seems, be a question of law which could be made the subject of an appeal to the court. ⁶⁰⁰ But otherwise the exercise of his discretion will not be open to appeal or challenge. ⁶⁰¹ These powers are in addition to any other power of the tribunal to award interest, e.g. under institutional rules or contract or statute. ⁶⁰²

Extension of time for making award

32-137

There is no statutory time limit placed on the arbitral tribunal within which it must make an award. But the arbitration agreement or institutional rules may impose such a time limit. Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, the court then has power to extend that time limit subject to two qualifications: first, arbitral procedures for obtaining an extension must be exhausted before recourse to the court, and, secondly, the court must be satisfied that substantial injustice would be done if the time were not extended. ⁶⁰³

Settlement in form of agreed award

32-138

Section 51 of the 1996 Act enables an agreed settlement of the dispute to be given the status of an arbitral award which can then be enforced as such. Unless the parties otherwise agree, such an award need not contain any reasons, ⁶⁰⁴ nor need it be stated in the award that it is an agreed award. However, the tribunal can refuse to make the award ⁶⁰⁵ and might well decline to do so if, for example, it was in terms which were designed to mislead third parties, such as HM Revenue and Customs, or if it dealt with matters not arbitrable under the applicable law. An arbitrator may still retain jurisdiction notwithstanding a settlement if there is a dispute as to how far the settlement extended. ⁶⁰⁶

Form of award

32-139

The parties are free to agree on the form of an award. ⁶⁰⁷ If or to the extent that there is no agreement, ⁶⁰⁸ the award must be in writing signed by all the arbitrators or all those assenting to the award ⁶⁰⁹; it must contain the reasons for the award ⁶¹⁰; and it must state the seat of the arbitration and the date when the award is made. ⁶¹¹ Failure to comply with these requirements of form is a ground for challenge to the award, ⁶¹² but only if it has caused or will cause substantial injustice to the applicant. ⁶¹³ Where there is a reference to the decision of three arbitrators, all the arbitrators, acting together, must fairly consider all the issues in the case prior to the award. ⁶¹⁴ But they may sign the award separately ⁶¹⁵ and, if it is a majority award, there is no need for the majority to meet with the dissenting arbitrator to discuss with him the re-drafting of their award. ⁶¹⁶ The majority may allow a dissenting opinion to be attached to the reasons of the majority ⁶¹⁷ but, unless the parties agree or institutional rules otherwise provide, a dissenting arbitrator has no right to insist on his opinion being incorporated in the award. ⁶¹⁸

Place of award

32-140

In Hiscox v Outhwaite ⁶¹⁹ the House of Lords held that the place of signature determined where an award was made. But s.53 of the 1996 Act reverses that decision in part ⁶²⁰ by providing that the award shall be treated as made at the seat of the arbitration (if in England) regardless of where it was signed despatched or delivered to the parties.

Date of award

32-141

The arbitral tribunal is to decide what is the date of the award. ⁶²¹ But, if it does not do so, the date of the award is to be taken to be the date on which it is signed by the arbitrator or, where more than one arbitrator signs, by the last of them. The date of the award is important, in particular because the time limit for challenge or appeal runs from the date of the award. ⁶²² Where the award is corrected ⁶²³ time runs from the date on which the correction is published. ⁶²⁴

Notification of and power to withhold award

32-142

Subject to contrary agreement, the award must be notified to the parties without delay after the award is made by service on them of copies of the award. ⁶²⁵ However, the tribunal may refuse to deliver an award to the parties except upon full payment of the fees and expenses of the arbitrators. ⁶²⁶ If it refuses on that ground to deliver an award, then, in the absence of any available arbitral process for appeal or review of the amount demanded, a party may apply to the court for an order that the tribunal shall deliver the award pending determination by the court of the amount properly payable. ⁶²⁷ This is a mandatory provision. ⁶²⁸

Correction of award or additional award: the “slip rule”

32-143

⚠ Section 57 of the 1996 Act allows the arbitral tribunal to correct an award so as to remove any clerical mistake or error arising from an accidental slip or omission or clarify or remove any ambiguity in the award ⁶²⁹ or to make an additional award in respect of any claim (including a claim for interest or costs) which was presented to the tribunal but was not dealt with in the award. ⁶³⁰ ⚠ This may be done by the tribunal on its own initiative or on the application of a party, ⁶³¹ but only within certain time limits. ⁶³² ⚠ The parties are nevertheless free to agree that the tribunal shall have further or different powers to correct an award or make an additional award outside the terms of s.57. ⁶³³

Effect of award

32-144

The rules of a trade association may, for example, provide for a process of appeal or review from the award of an arbitrator to an appellate arbitral tribunal. But subject to this and to any other contrary agreement of the parties, and subject to the powers of the court in relation to the award which are set out in Pt I of the 1996 Act, an award made by the tribunal pursuant to an arbitration agreement is final and binding both on the parties and on any persons claiming through or under them. ⁶³⁴

Award as a defence

32-145

Except where it is expressly provided to the contrary in the arbitration agreement, or the award is an interim award only, a valid award of damages duly made in pursuance of a submission to arbitration operates between the parties as a bar to any further action in personam ⁶³⁵ by the claimant in respect of the matters referred. ⁶³⁶ This is so even though the damages payable under the award have not been paid, ⁶³⁷ the claimant's remedy being to enforce the award. In contrast an award for payment of a debt does not operate as a bar to further action for the original debt, ⁶³⁸ although the parties are bound by the award as to the amount due. ⁶³⁹

32-146

An award will preclude a claimant from commencing a second arbitration against the same party to recover further damages arising from the same cause of action which was the subject of the award. ⁶⁴⁰ The rule that damages resulting from one and the same cause of action must be assessed and recovered once for all in the same proceedings applies in principle to arbitration ⁶⁴¹ as it does to actions. ⁶⁴² But this rule may be displaced if there is an arbitral practice to the contrary in a particular trade ⁶⁴³ or if certain matters only have been included in the terms of reference in the first arbitration ⁶⁴⁴ or if the first award is merely declaratory of the claimant's rights. ⁶⁴⁵ Successive arbitrations may, however, be commenced in respect of different causes of action, even though these arise out of the same contract. ⁶⁴⁶

32-147

⚠ A party may be estopped from raising a second time a cause of action which has been conclusively determined by a valid award in previous arbitration proceedings between the same parties or their privies,⁶⁴⁷ ⚠ or an issue raised and determined in such proceedings which it was necessary to determine for the purpose of those proceedings.⁶⁴⁸ Moreover the court has an inherent jurisdiction to strike out as an abuse of its process a claim based on factual issues which had been raised, or should with reasonable diligence have been raised, in previous arbitration proceedings that have been adjudicated upon by the arbitral tribunal in those proceedings,⁶⁴⁹ and it is possible that a court could restrain a party from asserting such a claim in subsequent arbitration proceedings.⁶⁵⁰

-
1. For a more detailed account of arbitration, and practice and procedure, the reader should consult: Merkin, Arbitration Law (2007); Merkin and Flannery, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Russell on Arbitration, 24th edn (2015); Tweeddale and Tweeddale, Arbitration of Commercial Disputes, 2nd edn (2012); Harris, Planterose and Tecks, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, 2nd edn (1989) and Supplement (2001); Redfern and Hunter, Law and Practice of International Arbitration, 5th edn (2009); Park, Arbitration of International Business Disputes, 2nd edn (2012).
 - ^{562.} See Chartered Institute of Arbitrators: Guidelines for Arbitrators on the Formalities for Drafting an Arbitral Award.
 - ^{563.} cf. Deutsche Shachtbau-und-Tiefbohr Gesellschaft mbH v R'As al-Khaimah National Oil Co [1990] 1 A.C. 295.
 - ^{564.} Home and Overseas Insurance (UK) Ltd v Mentor Insurance Co (UK) Ltd [1990] 1 W.L.R. 153, 161, 166. See also Czarnikow v Roth Schmidt & Co [1922] 2 K.B. 478; Orion Compañía Espanola de Seguros v Belfort Maatschappij voor Algemeine Verzekeringen [1962] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 257, 264; Home Insurance Co v Administratia Asigurarilor de Stat [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 674, 677.
 - ^{565.} Halpern v Halpern [2007] EWCA Civ 291, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 56 at [38]; Musawi v RE International (UK) Ltd [2007] EWHC 2981 (Ch), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 326 at [82].
 - ^{566.} David Taylor & Son Ltd v Barnett Trading Co [1953] 1 W.L.R. 562, 568.
 - ^{567.} Orion Compañía Espanola de Seguros v Belfort Maatschappij voor Algemeine Verzekeringen, above; Musawi v RE International (UK) Ltd, above, at [22], [23]. See the criticisms of Shackleton (1997) 13 Arbitration International 375.
 - ^{568.} Hooper & Co v Balfour, Williamson & Co (1890) 62 L.T. 646; Jager v Tolme and Runge [1916] 1 K.B. 939, 953, 957, 961.
 - ^{569.} DAC Report para.222.
 - ^{570.} Board of Trade v Cayzer, Irvine & Co [1927] A.C. 610, 614; Naamlooze, etc. Vulcaan v A/S Ludwig Mowinckels Rederi (1938) 43 Com. Cas. 252 HL; Leif Hoegh & Co A/S v Petrolsea Inc [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 45.
 - ^{571.} David Taylor & Son Ltd v Barnett Trading Co [1953] 1 W.L.R. 562. cf. Harbour Assurance Co (UK) Ltd v Kansa General International Insurance Co Ltd [1993] Q.B. 701.
 - ^{572.} s.46(1)(a) and (2) (no renvoi); Peterson Farms Inc v C & M Farming Ltd [2004] EWHC 121 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 603 at [46]. Contrast (invalid choice of law) Accentuate Ltd v Asigra Inc [2009] EWHC 2655 (QB), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 599. In Hussman (Europe) Ltd v Al Ameen Development & Trade Co [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 83 at [42], Thomas J. stated that

- s.46(1)(a) does not require an arbitral tribunal sitting in London, where the applicable law is other than the law of England and Wales, to obtain general evidence and guidance in relation to that foreign law. If not raised by the parties, the tribunal is free to decide on the presumption that the applicable law is the same as the law of England and Wales. An error in the application of the chosen law does not involve a lack of substantive jurisdiction for the purposes of s.67; B v A [2010] EWHC 1626 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 681 at [29].
573. s.46(3). See Wortmann (1998) 14 Arbitration International 97.
574. DAC Report para.225.
575. Such an agreement may be made by the adoption of institutional rules, e.g. the ICC rules.
576. s.14.
577. cf. Rotenberg v Sucafina SA [2012] EWCA Civ 637 (rules of the Coffee Trade Federation not such an agreement).
578. Rotenberg v Sucafina SA [2011] EWHC 901 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 159 at [42] where Eder J. suggests instead "Partial Award pursuant to s.47 of the 1996 Act" (affirmed [2012] EWCA Civ 637).
579. s.47(1), (5), (6); Sea Trade Maritime Corp v Hellenic War Risks Assn (Bermuda) Ltd [2006] EWHC 578 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 397 (subsequent award on costs).
580. s.47(2).
581. See Japan Line v Aggeliki Charis Compañía Marítima SA [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 288; SL Sethia Liners v Naviagro Maritime Corp [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 18; Leon Corp v Atlantic Lines and Navigation Co Inc [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 470, 476; Exmar BV v National Iranian Tanker Co [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 169; Modern Trading Co Ltd v Swale Building and Construction Ltd (1990) 24 Con. L.R. 59. cf. Minerals & Metals Trading Corp of India Ltd v Encounter Bay Shipping Co Ltd [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 51.
582. s.47(3).
583. ss.47, 58; Rotenberg v Sucafina SA [2012] EWCA Civ 637.
584. s.48(1), e.g. contribution (Wealands v CLC Contractors Ltd [1998] C.L.C. 808).
585. DAC Report para.234. But these may be difficult to enforce: see below, para.32-185.
586. Vertex Data Science Ltd v Powergen Retail Ltd [2006] EWHC 1340 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 591.
587. s.48(4). But in Lesotho Highlands Development Authority v Impregilo SpA [2005] UKHL 43, [2006] 1 A.C. 221, there was a difference of opinion as to the ambit of this subs. at paras [22]–[23], [42], [49], [55] and [56].
588. Servicio Europe Atlantique Sud (SEAS) v Stockholms Rederiaktiebolag [1979] A.C. 685.
589. s.48(3).
590. s.48(5)(a); Senior Courts Act 1981 s.37; Bath and North East Somerset DC v Mowlem [2004] EWCA Civ 115, [2004] C.I.L.L. 2081; Debattista (2010) 76 Arbitration 421. But see Kastner v Jason [2004] EWCA Civ 1599, [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 397 at [16]–[19] (freezing injunction).
591. s.48(5)(b): CPR Pt 24 24PD-001. See Tilia Sonera Ab v Hilcourt (Docklands) Ltd [2003] EWHC 3540 (Ch); McCaughan v Belwood Homes Ltd [2011] Arb. L.R. 53 (N.I.); Gemmell (2010) 76 Arbitration 467.

- 592. s.48(5)(c).
- 593. s.49(1).
- 594. s.49(2), e.g. in the principal contract: cf. Lesotho Highlands Development Authority v Impregilo SpA [2005] UKHL 43, [2006] 1 A.C. 221 (provisions of foreign law applicable to the contract not such an agreement).
- 595. s.49(3), (4), (5). See Chartered Institute of Arbitrators: Guidelines for Arbitrators on how to approach the making of awards on interest; Altaras (2004) 70 Arbitration 108.
- 596. Walker v Rowe [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 116, 121; Sonatrach v Statoil Natural Gas LLC [2014] EWHC 875 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 252. See also below, para.32-185 n.813.
- 597. Re Badger (1819) 2 B. & Ad. 691; Edwards v GW Ry (1851) 11 C.B. 588; Chandris v Isbrandtsen Moller Co Inc [1951] 1 K.B. 240; Panchaud Frères SA v Pagnan & Fratelli [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 394; P J Van der Zijden Wildhandel NV v Tucker & Cross Ltd [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 341; Nea Tyhi Maritime Co Ltd v Compagnie Grainiere SA [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 16; Thos P Gonzalez Corp v FR Waring (International) (Pty) Ltd [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 494, [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 160; Warinco AG v Andre et Cie SA [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 298; Tehno-Impex v Gebr van Weelde-Scheepvaart Kantoor BV [1981] Q.B. 648.
- 598. See Vol.I, para.26-245.
- 599. National Bank of Greece SA v Pinios Shipping Co (No.1) [1990] 1 A.C. 637.
- 600. Under s.69; below, para.32-167.
- 601. Amec Building Ltd v Cadmus Investment Co Ltd (1997) 51 Con. L.R. 105; Lesotho Highlands Development Authority v Impregilo SpA [2005] UKHL 43, [2006] 1 A.C. 221. Contrast Westland Helicopters Ltd v Sheikh Salah' al-Hejailan (No.1) [2004] EWHC 1625, [2004] 2 Lloyd's 523 (lack of jurisdiction).
- 602. s.49(6); see Vol.I, para.26-227.
- 603. s.50. See CPR Pt 62 PD 62. Permission of the court is required for any appeal under this section; s.50(5); but see below para.32-184.
- 604. s.52(4).
- 605. s.51(2).
- 606. Dawes v Treasure & Son Ltd [2010] EWHC 3218 (TCC), [2011] Bus. L.R. 676; Sun United Maritime Ltd v Kestell Marine Inc [2014] EWHC 1476 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 386; Ahmed (2011) 77 Arbitration 369.
- 607. s.52(1).
- 608. s.52(2).
- 609. s.52(3).
- 610. s.52(4) (Unless it is an agreed award or the parties have agreed to dispense with reasons). See Al Hadha Trading Co v Tradigrain SA [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 512 (GAFTA arbitration rules: absolute discretion conferred by rules to admit or refuse to admit a claim did not dispense with need to give reasons for exercise of discretion). cf. Tame Shipping Ltd v Easy Navigation Ltd [2004] EWHC 1862 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 626 (reasons can be set out in separate "confidential" document: see below, para.32-165). See also Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH v Westzucker GmbH (No.2) [1981] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 130, 132-133 (sufficient for arbitrator to explain how he reached his conclusion). cf. Compton Beauchamp Estates Ltd v Spence [2013] EWHC 1101 (Ch), [2013] 20 E.G. 107 (C.S.) at [41]-[52], [79] (adequacy of reasons).

611. s.52(5).

612. s.68(2)(h).

613. s.68(2); below, para.32-163.

614. European Grain & Shipping Ltd v R Johnston [1983] Q.B. 520; Bank Mellat v GAA Development and Construction Co [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 44.

615. European Grain & Shipping Ltd v R Johnston, above.

616. Bank Mellat v GAA Development and Construction Co, above.

617. But see F Ltd v M Ltd [2009] EWHC 275 (TCC), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 537 (dissenting arbitrator's opinion not relevant to challenge under s.68).

618. Cargill International SA v Sociedad Iberica de Molturacion SA [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 489, 497 CA; cf. Rees and Rohn (2009) 25 Arbitration International 329.

619. [1992] 1 A.C. 562.

620. See also s.100(2)(b).

621. s.54. Unless otherwise agreed by the parties.

622. See below, paras 32-175, 32-187.

623. See below, para.32-143.

624. cf. Al Hadha Trading Co v Tradigrain SA [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 512, 525.

625. s.55.

626. s.56. This is a mandatory provision.

627. s.56(2). See CPR r.62.6 PD 62. Permission of the court is required for any appeal: s.56(7); but see below, para.32-184.

628. s.4(1) and Sch.1.

629. s.57(3)(a). See Gannet Shipping Ltd v Eastrade Commodities Inc [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 712; Torch Offshore LLC v Cable Shipping Inc [2004] EWHC 787 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 446; Sinclair v Woods of Winchester Ltd [2005] EWHC 1631 (QB), (2005) 102 Const. L.R. 127; Gold Coast Ltd v Naval Gijon SA [2006] EWHC 1044 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 400; Bulk Ship Union SA v Clipper Bulk Shipping Ltd [2012] EWHC 2595 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 533 at [30]-[31]; Union Marine Classification Services LLC v Comoros [2015] EWHC 508 (Comm), [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 49. But see World Trade Corp v C Czarnikow Sugar Ltd [2004] EWHC 2332 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 422 at [8]. The ambit of this provision is, perhaps unexpectedly, wide: Groundshire v VHE Construction [2001] Build. L.R. 395; Al Hadha Trading Co v Tradigrain SA [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 512, 526-527; Torch Offshore LLC v Cable Shipping Inc, above, at [28] (request to supply missing reasons); Ases Havacilik Servis ve Destek Hizmetleri AS v Delkor UK Ltd [2012] EWHC 3518 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 254 (power to correct award cannot be used to reconsider an award and does not extend to oversights or errors in production of evidence or argument).

630.  s.57(3)(b). But see Torch Offshore LLC v Cable Shipping Inc, above, at [27] ("claim" only applies to a claim which has been presented to the tribunal but has not been dealt with as opposed to an issue which remains undetermined as part of a claim); World Trade Corp v C

Czarnikow Sugar Ltd, above, at [14] (“claim” does not mean a submission in support of a relevant question of fact as opposed to a claim for relief such as would have to be pleaded); Sea Trade Maritime Corp v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Assn (Bermuda) Ltd [2006] EWHC 578 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 147 (costs claim “dealt with” when costs reserved). See also Pirtek (UK) Ltd v Deanswood Ltd [2005] EWHC 2301 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 728 (burden of proof); Buyuk Camlica Shipping Trading and Industry Co Inc v Progress Bulk Carriers Ltd [2010] EWHC 442 (Comm), [2011] B.L.R. D99; Cadogan Maritime Inc v Turner Shipping Inc [2013] EWHC 138 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 630 at [42]-[50]; Union Marine Classification Services LLC v Government of the Union of Comoros [2016] EWCA Civ 239, [2016] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 193.

631. s.57(3). For the effect of a failure to apply, see s.70(2)(b) and Gbangbola v Smith & Sherriff Ltd [1998] 3 All E.R. 730; Groundshire v VHE Construction; Torch Offshore LLC v Cable Shipping Inc, above at [28], para.32-175, below.

632. ⚠ These time limits are set out in subss.(4), (5), (6). See Pirtek (UK) Ltd v Deanswood Ltd, above, and (extension of time) s.79 and Gold Coast Ltd v Naval Gijon SA, above. But see Surefire Systems Ltd v Guardian ECL Ltd [2005] EWHC 1860 (TCC), [2005] B.L.R. 534; Price v Carter I [2010] EWHC 1451 (TCC), and para.32-175 n.777, below. Xstrata Coal Queensland Pty Ltd v Benxi Iron & Steel (Group) International Economic & Trading Co Ltd [2016] EWHC 2022 (Comm).

633. Pirtek (UK) Ltd v Deanswood Ltd [2005] EWHC 2301 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 728 at [35].

634. s.58 (replacing s.16 of the Arbitration Act 1950).

635. But not an action in rem, see The Rena K [1978] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 545, 560; The Irina Zharkikh [2001] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 319. But see Republic of India v India Steamship Co Ltd [1998] A.C. 878.

636. Unlike a judgment (see Vol.I, para.25-007), the cause of action does not technically merge in the award, but the effect is the same. cf. Doleman & Sons v Ossett Corp [1912] 3 K.B. 257 (award after action brought, where no application is made to stay the action or a stay is refused).

637. Gascoyne v Edwards (1826) 1 Y. & J. 19.

638. Allen v Milner (1831) 2 Cr. & J. 47; Richard Adler v Soutos (Hellas) Maritime Corp [1984] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 296.

639. Cummings v Heard (1869) L.R. 4 Q.B. 669, 673-674.

640. Conquer v Boot [1928] 2 K.B. 336.

641. Dunn v Murray (1829) 9 B. & C. 780; Naamlooze, etc. Vulcaan v A/S Ludwig Mowinckels Rederi (1938) 60 Ll.L. Rep. 217, 223; HE Daniels Ltd v Carmel Exporters and Importers Ltd [1953] 2 Q.B. 242, 255; Compagnie Grainière SA v Fritz Kopp AG [1978] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 511, 521; Telfair Shipping Corp v Inersea Carriers SA [1983] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 351, 353; Ron Jones (Burton-on-Trent) Ltd v Hall (2000) 2 T.C.L.R. 195.

642. See Vol.I, para.25-008.

643. EE & Brian Smith (1928) Ltd v Wheatsheaf Mills Ltd [1939] 2 K.B. 302; cf. HE Daniel Ltd v Carmel Exporters and Importers Ltd, above.

644. Purser & Co (Hillingdon) Ltd v Jackson [1977] Q.B. 166; Compagnie Grainière SA v Fritz Kopp AG [1978] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 351; Excomm Ltd v Guan Guan Shipping (Pte) Ltd [1987] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 330, 344.

645. FJ Bloemen Pty Ltd v City of Gold Coast Council [1973] A.C. 115, 126; Compagnie Grainière

SA v Fritz Kopp AG, above, at 522.

646. Brunsdon v Humphrey (1884) 14 Q.B. 141; Telfair Shipping Corp v Inersea Carriers SA [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 351; Siporex Trade SA v Comdel Commodities Ltd [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 428. But see Dunn v Murray (1829) 9 B. & C. 780 and the cases cited in n.641, below.

647.  Ayscough v Sheed, Thomson & Co Ltd (1924) 40 T.L.R. 707; Aktiebolaget Legis v V Berg & Sons Ltd [1964] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 203. Contrast Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada v Lincoln National Life Insurance Co [2004] EWCA Civ 1660, [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 606 (no estoppel where arbitration between one of the parties and a stranger). cf. Arts & Antiques Ltd v Richards [2013] EWHC 336 (Comm), [2014] P.N.L.R. 10. In Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd v Sinclair [2017] EWCA Civ 3, [2017] 1 W.L.R. 2646 the Court of Appeal held that it would be a rare case where legal proceedings against a person who was not a party to an earlier arbitration would be struck out by reason of the award in that earlier arbitration.

648. Fidelitas Shipping Co Ltd v V/O Exportchleb [1960] 1 Q.B. 630, 640, 643; discussed in Carl Zeiss Stiftung v Rayner & Keeler Ltd (No.2) [1967] 1 A.C. 853; Associated Electric and Gas Insurance Services Ltd v European Reinsurance Co of Zurich [2003] UKPC 11, [2003] 1 W.L.R. 1041. See Vol.I, para.25-011.

649. Henderson v Henderson (1843) 3 Hare 100, 114; Fidelitas Shipping Co Ltd v V/O Exportchleb, above, at 640; Yat Tung Investment Co Ltd v Dao Heng Bank Ltd [1975] A.C. 581, 590; Dallal v Bank Mellat [1986] Q.B. 441. See also Johnson v Gore Wood & Co [2002] 2 A.C. 1 and Vol.I, para.25-013. Contrast Sun Life Assurance Co of Canada v Lincoln National Life Insurance Co [2004] EWCA Civ 1660, [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 606 at [54] (only between parties to the proceedings).

650. cf. Associated Electric and Gas Insurance Services Ltd v European Reinsurance Co of Zurich, above, at [16].

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 32 - Arbitration ¹

Section 10. - Costs of the Arbitration

Costs

32-148

⚠ Sections 59 to 65 of the 1996 Act provide a code dealing with how the costs of the arbitration should be allocated as between the parties. The “costs of the arbitration” are defined as the arbitrators’ fees and expenses, the fees and expenses of any arbitral institution concerned, and the legal or other costs of the parties. ⁶⁵¹ ⚠ Although it is open to the parties to provide how these costs are to be allocated, an agreement which has the effect that a party is to pay the whole or part of the costs of the arbitration in any event is only valid if made after the dispute in question has arisen. ⁶⁵² This is a mandatory provision. ⁶⁵³ An agreement in the parties’ submission letter that they will share equally the arbitrators’ hourly charge does not imply that the costs of the arbitration between the parties are to be similarly allocated. ⁶⁵⁴

32-149

The arbitral tribunal is empowered to make an award as to costs ⁶⁵⁵ and is required (unless the parties otherwise agree) to award costs on the principle that costs are to follow the event except where it appears to the tribunal that in the circumstances this is not appropriate. ⁶⁵⁶ The tribunal does not therefore have a complete and unfettered discretion over costs but must follow the general approach of the English courts. ⁶⁵⁷ The court will not interfere merely because it would have exercised that discretion differently. ⁶⁵⁸ Under the previous law, if the tribunal failed to exercise judicially ⁶⁵⁹ its discretion over costs in making its award, the aggrieved party could apply to the court for an order that the award, or that part of the award that deals with costs, be varied, remitted or set aside. But, following cases on the Arbitration Act 1979, ⁶⁶⁰ it would appear that an award as to costs can now ordinarily be challenged only through the medium of appeal to the court on a point of law under s.69 of the 1996 Act. ⁶⁶¹ As a result, if there is an effective exclusion agreement, ⁶⁶² no such appeal will lie, so that a bona fide error on the part of the arbitral tribunal in the matter of costs will be irremediable. ⁶⁶³ An award will only be susceptible to challenge under s.67 or s.68 of the 1996 Act (which sections cannot be excluded) ⁶⁶⁴ where some other sufficient ground exists, such as a failure to deal at all with the issue of costs, ⁶⁶⁵ an excess of jurisdiction, or a serious irregularity in relation to costs, ⁶⁶⁶ but not simply on the ground of an alleged unjudicial exercise of the tribunal’s discretion. ⁶⁶⁷

32-150

Section 63 of the 1996 Act provides that the parties may agree what costs of the arbitration are recoverable. ⁶⁶⁸ If they do not do so, ⁶⁶⁹ the tribunal may determine by award the recoverable costs of the arbitration (i.e. assess the amount) on such basis as it thinks fit, but in so doing must specify the basis on which it has acted and the items of recoverable costs and the amount referable to each. ⁶⁷⁰ If the tribunal does not determine the recoverable costs, any party may apply to the court. ⁶⁷¹ The tribunal therefore has the power, but not the obligation, to deal with the costs of the arbitration. ⁶⁷² The usual practice is for the tribunal to determine in its award the fees and expenses of the arbitrators. ⁶⁷³ The determination of the recoverable legal or other costs of the parties is better left to the court.

32-151

If the tribunal rules that it lacks substantive jurisdiction with respect to the matter referred to it, or if the court determines, on an application under s.32 ⁶⁷⁴ or s.67 of the Act ⁶⁷⁵, that the tribunal does not have substantive jurisdiction, it would appear to follow that any award made by the tribunal as to costs is a nullity, unless there can be inferred an ad hoc agreement empowering the tribunal to make such an award, ⁶⁷⁶ or unless it can be said that the party who initiates arbitration impliedly consents to an order for costs being made against him if the tribunal rules that it has no jurisdiction. ⁶⁷⁷ The costs incurred by a party in relation to the abortive or invalid arbitration proceedings are irrecoverable. ⁶⁷⁸

Basis of costs

32-152

Unless the tribunal or the court determines otherwise, costs will be awarded on a standard basis. ⁶⁷⁹

Fees and expenses

32-153

Only the reasonable fees and expenses of the arbitrators are recoverable and what fees and expenses are “reasonable” may, on the application of any party, be determined by the court. ⁶⁸⁰

Power to limit recoverable costs

32-154

Section 65 of the 1996 Act gives to the arbitral tribunal a new power not found in previous legislation: the power to limit in advance the amount of recoverable costs. ⁶⁸¹ The tribunal can put a ceiling on costs. A party can incur costs in excess of this ceiling but the excess will then not be recoverable from the other party. The Departmental Advisory Committee considered that this power, properly used, could prove extremely valuable as an aid to reducing expenditure and would discourage those who wished to employ their financial muscle to intimidate their opponents. ⁶⁸² But the power appears to be little used in practice.

Sealed offers

32-155

A sealed offer by the respondent in arbitral proceedings is analogous to, but not identical with, ⁶⁸³ a Pt 36 payment. ⁶⁸⁴ If the claimant in the end has achieved no more than he would have achieved by accepting the offer, the continuance of the arbitration after that date has been a waste of time and money. Prima facie, the claimant should recover his costs up to the date of the offer and should be ordered to pay the respondent's costs after that date. If he has achieved more by going on, the respondent should pay the costs throughout. ⁶⁸⁵

¹ For a more detailed account of arbitration, and practice and procedure, the reader should consult: Merkin, Arbitration Law (2007); Merkin and Flannery, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Russell on Arbitration, 24th edn (2015); Tweeddale and Tweeddale, Arbitration of Commercial Disputes, 2nd edn (2012); Harris, Planterose and Tecks, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, 2nd edn (1989) and Supplement (2001); Redfern and Hunter, Law and Practice of International Arbitration, 5th edn (2009); Park, Arbitration of International Business Disputes, 2nd edn (2012).

- 651. !s.59(1). See also s.59(2) (costs of taxation proceedings). In Essar Oilfield Services Ltd v Norscot Rig Management Pvt Ltd [2016] EWHC 2361 (Comm), [2016] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 481 at [68]–[72], the Court held that “other costs” in s.59 can include the costs of obtaining litigation funding.
- 652. s.60. This is based on s.18(3) of the Arbitration Act 1950.
- 653. s.4(1) and Sch.1.
- 654. Carter v Harold Simpson Associates [2004] UKPC 29, [2005] 1 W.L.R. 919.
- 655. s.61(1) (subject to any agreement of the parties).
- 656. s.61(2).
- 657. CPR Pt 44. See the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators: Guideline for Arbitrators Making Orders Relating to the costs of the Arbitration. For statement of the principles involved, see Malkinson v Trim [2002] EWCA Civ 1273, [2003] 1 W.L.R. 463. See also Henchie (2004) 70 Arbitration 77.
- 658. Rosen & Co Ltd v Dowley and Selby [1943] 2 All E.R. 172, 174; Smeaton Hanscomb & Co Ltd v Sassoon I Setty, Son & Co (No.2) [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1481, 1483; The Erich Schroeder [1974] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 192, 194; Blue Horizon Shipping Co SA v ED & F Man Ltd [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 17; W Wilhemsen v Canadian Transport Co [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 204, 209; Eleftheria Niki Compania Naviera SA v Eastern Mediterranean Marine Ltd [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 252, 260; President of India v Jadranska Slobodna Plovidba [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 274, 280; Everglade Maritime Inc v Schiffahrtsgesellschaft Detlef Von Appen mbH [1993] 1 W.L.R. 33, 39; affirmed [1993] Q.B. 780
- 659. i.e. in the same manner as the High Court.
- 660. Blixen Ltd v G Percy Trentham Ltd (1990) 42 E.G. 133 CA; King v Thomas McKenna Ltd [1991] 2 Q.B. 480, 499; President of India v Jadranska Slobodna Plovidba [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 274, 276-280; Everglade Maritime Inc v Schiffahrtsgesellschaft Detlef Von Appen mbH [1993] Q.B. 780; Cohen v Baram [1994] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 138.
- 661. Sanghi Polyesters (India) v International Investor (KCFC) (Kuwait) [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 480, 485; Transition Feeds LLP v Itochu Europe Plc [2013] EWHC 3855 (Comm); Sun United Maritime Ltd v Kasteli Marine Inc [2014] EWHC 1476 (Comm). See below, para.32-167.
- 662. Below, para.32-171.
- 663. King v Thomas McKenna Ltd [1991] 2 Q.B. 480 at 499.
- 664. Below, paras 32-156, 32-161.
- 665. Re Becker, Shillan & Co and Barry Brothers [1921] 1 K.B. 391. But an application may be made under s.57(3)(b) (para.32-143, above); cf. Sea Trade Maritime Corp v Hellenic Mutual War Risks Assn (Bermuda) Ltd [2006] EWHC 578 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 147 (costs reserved).
- 666. Harrison v Thompson [1989] 1 W.L.R. 1325; King v Thomas McKenna Ltd [1991] 2 Q.B. 480; President of India v Jadranska Slobodna Plovidba [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 274 at 279, 280; Gbangbola v Smith & Sherriff Ltd [1998] 3 All E.R. 730; Newfield Construction Ltd v Tomlinson [2004] EWHC 3051 (TCC), (2004) 97 Const. L.R. 148. See also Danae Air Transport SA v Air Canada [2000] 1 W.L.R. 395 (mathematical error).
- 667. Fence Gate Ltd v NEL Construction Ltd (2002) 82 Const. L.R. 41; Dundas (2003) 69 Arbitration 90.
- 668. s.63(1). But see s.62.

- 669. s.63(2).
- 670. s.63(3). See Rotary Watches Ltd v Rotary Watches (USA) Inc Unreported, noted (2005) 71 Arbitration 172 (interim payment). cf. s.62.
- 671. s.63(4); PD.62. The court is defined in s.105 to mean the High Court or a county court. cf. Sch.2 para.9 (judge-arbitrator).
- 672. As under s.18(1) of the Arbitration Act 1950. cf. M/S Alghanim Industries Inc v Skandia International Insurance Corp [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 30 (ARIAS arbitration rules).
- 673. Including fees and expenses of an expert, etc. under s.37(2). See SN Kurkjian (Commodity Brokers) Ltd v Marketing Exchange for Africa Ltd [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 618 (taxation of fees of legal adviser), but cf. s.63(7).
- 674. See above, para.32-104.
- 675. See below, para.32-156.
- 676. Commonwealth Development Corp (UK) v Montague [2000] QCA 252 Queensland Court of Appeal; Greenberg and Secomb (2002) 18 Arbitration International 125.
- 677. This might also arguably be said to follow from s.30 of the Act: para.32-101, above.
- 678. Crest Nicholson (Eastern) Ltd v Western [2008] EWHC 1325 (TCC), [2008] Build. L.R. 426.
- 679. s.63(5); CPR r.44.4.
- 680. s.64, PD 62.
- 681. s.65. Unless otherwise agreed by the parties.
- 682. DAC Report para.272. See also Bange (2000) 11 Const. Law 23 and the Controlled Cost Arbitration Rules of the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators. cf. Miller (1999) 149 N.L.J. 530.
- 683. Huron Liberian Co v Rheinoel GmbH [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 58n.
- 684. CPR Pt 36. See Wood (2008) 74 Arbitration 139.
- 685. Tramontana Armadora SA v Atlantic Shipping Co SA [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 391, 398; Everglade Maritime Inc v Schiffahrtsgesellschaft Detlef Von Appen MbH [1993] Q.B. 780; Lindner Ceilings Floors Partitions Plc v How Engineering Services Ltd [2001] Build. L.R. 90. cf. Cadmus Investment Ltd v Amec Building Ltd [1997] C.L.Y. 270.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 32 - Arbitration ¹

Section 11. - Powers of the Court in Relation to the Award

Introduction

32-155A

⚠ The Court's powers to review an arbitration award are set out in ss.67–69 of the Arbitration Act 1996. An application under ss.67–69 must conform to the requirements of those provisions and the procedural requirements set out in s.70. The mere fact that the parties agree that the Court should hear a challenge or appeal against an award will not confer jurisdiction on the Court unless the requirements of the Act are satisfied. ⁶⁸⁶ ⚠ In order that ss.67–69 may apply, there must have been an “award” made by the arbitral tribunal. ⁶⁸⁷ ⚠ An “award” is a formal written record of the arbitral tribunal's decision, in an arbitral reference made pursuant to an arbitration agreement, ⁶⁸⁸ ⚠ which disposes of or resolves an issue or dispute between the parties. ⁶⁸⁹ ⚠

Challenging the award: substantive jurisdiction

32-156

⚠ A party to arbitral proceedings may apply ⁶⁹⁰ to the court under s.67 of the 1996 Act ⁶⁹¹ challenging any award of the arbitral tribunal as to its substantive jurisdiction ⁶⁹² or for an order declaring an award made by the tribunal on the merits to be of no effect, in whole or in part, because the tribunal did not have substantive jurisdiction. ⁶⁹³ Such an application must normally be made within the 28 day time limit prescribed by s.70(3) ⁶⁹⁴ ⚠ and is subject to certain restrictions. ⁶⁹⁵ Where the arbitral tribunal rules that it has substantive jurisdiction and a party to arbitral proceedings who could have questioned that ruling by an arbitral process of appeal or review, or by challenging the award, does not do so within the time allowed by the arbitration agreement or any provisions of Pt I of the Act, or at all, he may not object later to the tribunal's substantive jurisdiction on any ground which was the subject of that ruling. ⁶⁹⁶ ⚠ On the hearing of the application the court may by order confirm the award, vary the award or set aside the award in whole or in part. ⁶⁹⁷ The hearing is to be treated as a full rehearing (including oral evidence) and not merely as a review and new evidence may therefore be adduced. ⁶⁹⁸ Pending the hearing of the application the arbitral tribunal may continue the arbitral proceedings and make a further award if it wishes to do so. ⁶⁹⁹ Section 67 is a mandatory provision. ⁷⁰⁰

32-157

⚠ The same right to challenge the award is given to a person alleged to be a party to arbitral proceedings but who takes no part in the proceedings. ⁷⁰¹ Alternatively such a person may question whether there is a valid arbitration agreement, or whether the tribunal is properly constituted, or what matters have been properly submitted to arbitration in accordance with the arbitration agreement, by proceedings in court for a declaration or injunction or other appropriate relief. ⁷⁰² ⚠

32-158

⚠ A party to arbitral proceedings will lose the right to object that the tribunal lacks substantive jurisdiction if he fails to object timeously and thereafter takes part, or continues to take part, in the proceedings, unless he did not know and could not with reasonable diligence have discovered the grounds for the objection. ⁷⁰³ ⚠ But even where this is not the case, then at common law if the parties appoint or accept the appointment of an arbitrator and thereafter take part in the arbitral proceedings without objection on the mistaken assumption that the tribunal has jurisdiction with respect to the whole or a part of the subject matter of the dispute, they may be held to have entered into an ad hoc agreement to submit their dispute to the jurisdiction of the tribunal, ⁷⁰⁴ unless that agreement can be said to be vitiated by a fundamental mistake. ⁷⁰⁵ In this latter situation, however, even if there is no or no valid ad hoc agreement, each may be estopped by convention ⁷⁰⁶ from alleging lack of jurisdiction on the part of the tribunal. ⁷⁰⁷

32-159

The power conferred on the court by s.67 is exercisable only if the seat of arbitration is in England. ⁷⁰⁸ Where that is the case, the fact that the issue to be determined by the tribunal involves an investment dispute between an investor and a sovereign state under the provisions of a treaty will not deprive the court of its supervisory jurisdiction under the Act. ⁷⁰⁹

32-160

If an award is successfully challenged and set aside by the court, this does not mean that the functions of the arbitral tribunal are necessarily at an end. The tribunal may be revived and proceed to make a second, valid award which is within its jurisdiction to make. ⁷¹⁰ Section 67 does not enable a challenge to be made to a procedural order not amounting to an award. ⁷¹¹

Challenging the award: serious irregularity32-161

⚠ Prior to the enactment of the 1996 Act the High Court had an unqualified power to remit an award for the reconsideration of the arbitrator, ⁷¹² and it could set aside an award where the arbitrator had misconducted himself or the proceedings or the arbitration or award had been improperly procured. ⁷¹³ "Misconduct" did not necessarily imply any reflection on the competence or integrity of the arbitrator: it covered irregularities or procedural unfairness which was not proper in relation to quasi-judicial proceedings. ⁷¹⁴ The concept of misconduct was not retained in the 1996 Act. Section 68 establishes a different regime which enables a party to arbitral proceedings to apply to the court challenging the award on the ground of serious irregularity affecting the tribunal, the proceedings or the award. ⁷¹⁵ This is a mandatory provision. ⁷¹⁶ The same right to challenge the award is given to a person alleged to be a party to arbitral proceedings but who takes no part in the proceedings. ⁷¹⁷ It has, however, been pointed out that the law places a "high hurdle" in the way of an applicant under s.68. ⁷¹⁸ ⚠

32-162

⚠ For "serious irregularity" to have occurred there must, first, have been an irregularity of one or more of the following kinds ⁷¹⁹:

(a)

failure by the tribunal to comply with s.33 of the Act (general duty of the tribunal) ⁷²⁰ ⚠;

- (b) the tribunal exceeding its powers (otherwise than by exceeding its substantive jurisdiction: see s.67) ⁷²¹ ;
- (c) failure of the tribunal to conduct the proceedings in accordance with the procedure agreed by the parties ⁷²²;
- (d) failure by the tribunal to deal with all the issues that were put to it ⁷²³ ;
- (e) any arbitral or other institution or person vested by the parties with powers relating to the proceedings or the award exceeding its powers;
- (f) uncertainty or ambiguity as to the effect of the award ⁷²⁴;
- (g) the award being obtained by fraud or the award or the way in which it was procured being contrary to public policy ⁷²⁵ ;
- (h) failure to comply with the requirements as to the form of the award ⁷²⁶; or
- (i) any irregularity in the conduct of the proceedings or in the award which is admitted by the tribunal or by any arbitral or other institution or person vested by the parties with powers in relation to the proceedings or the award. ⁷²⁷

It will be noted that the list of irregularities is a closed one. Some of the listed elements nevertheless have their origins in the previous law relating to misconduct, “procedural mishaps” and mistakes admitted by the arbitrator. ⁷²⁸ However, the award cannot be challenged on the ground that the tribunal has come to an erroneous decision, whether of fact or law, and whether or not its findings of fact are supported by evidence. ⁷²⁹ In a two-tier arbitration, under which there is a right of appeal to an appeal board and the appeal board’s award supersedes that of the first tier arbitrator, it is submitted that the award cannot be challenged on the ground of any irregularity in the conduct of the first tier proceedings if no irregularity is alleged in respect of the appeal. ⁷³⁰

32-163

 Secondly, the irregularity must be of a kind which the court considers has caused or will cause

❗ In this respect, the DAC Report states that the section was:

“... really designed as a long stop, only available in extreme cases where the tribunal has gone so wrong in its conduct of the arbitration that justice calls out for it to be corrected.”
732

❗ It has been said that “the element of substantial injustice does not depend on the arbitrator having come to the wrong conclusion as a matter of law or fact but whether he was caused by adopting inappropriate means to reach one conclusion whereas had he adopted appropriate means he might well have reached another conclusion favourable to the applicant”. 733 On this view, it is necessary (and sufficient) for the applicant to show that, but for the irregularity, the tribunal might realistically have come to a significantly different conclusion 734 ❗ although it is possible that a less stringent test might be adopted where the applicant has effectively been denied a fair opportunity to state his case. 735 At any rate a substantial injustice will normally be inferred where it is shown that there was actual or apparent bias affecting the tribunal, on the ground that “there can be no more serious or substantial injustice than having a tribunal which was not, ex hypothesi, impartial, determine the parties’ rights”.
736

32-164

❗ The application must normally be made within the 28 day time limit prescribed by s.70(3) 737 and is subject to certain restrictions. 738 A party may have lost the right to object to the irregularity if he failed to object timeously and thereafter took part, or continued to take part, in the proceedings, unless he did not know and could not with reasonable diligence have discovered the grounds for the objection.

739 ❗ If a serious irregularity is shown to have occurred, the court may remit the award to the arbitral tribunal for reconsideration, or it may set the award aside, or it may declare the award to be of no effect. It may exercise these powers in relation to the whole of the award or only part of it. The court is not to set the award aside or declare it to be of no effect unless it is satisfied that it would be inappropriate to remit the matters in question to the tribunal for reconsideration. 740 A party may be precluded from having an award remitted, set aside or declared to be of no effect if he has in fact taken the benefit of the award and so affirmed it. 741

32-165

Where, by agreement of the parties, 742 the arbitral tribunal makes an award without stating its reasons for the award but sets out its reasons in a separate “confidential” document, this does not preclude the court from looking at those reasons for the purpose of an application under the section.
743

32-166

The power conferred on the court by s.68 is exercisable only if the seat of arbitration is in England. 744 The section applies only to awards and not to interlocutory directions which are not made in the form of an award. 745

Appeal on point of law 746

32-167

❗ Section 69 of the 1996 Act restates in an amended form s.1 of the Arbitration Act 1979 and provides that, unless otherwise agreed by the parties, a party to arbitral proceedings may appeal to the court on a question of law arising out of an award made in the proceedings. 747 It is to be emphasised that an appeal lies under s.69 only on a question of law. There is no room for any appeal under the section against the findings of fact in the award itself since these have to be accepted for the purpose of the appeal. ⁷⁴⁸ By s.82(1), “question of law” means, for a court in England and Wales a question of the law of England and Wales. ⁷⁴⁹ Such an appeal lies only with the agreement of all other parties to the proceedings ⁷⁵⁰  or with permission of the court. ⁷⁵¹ By subs.(3) of the section, permission to appeal is not to be given unless the court is satisfied:

- (a) that the determination of the question will substantially affect the rights of one or more of the parties ⁷⁵²;
- (b) that the question is one which the tribunal was asked to determine ⁷⁵³;
- (c) that on the basis of the findings of fact in the award:
 - (i) the decision of the tribunal on the question is obviously wrong, ⁷⁵⁴ or
 - (ii) the question is one of general public importance and the decision of the tribunal is at least open to serious doubt ⁷⁵⁵; and
- (d) that, despite the agreement of the parties to resolve the matter by arbitration, it is just and proper in all the circumstances for the court to determine the question. ⁷⁵⁶

The subsection reflects the limitations placed on the right of appeal under the 1979 Act by the House of Lords, notably in Pioneer Shipping Ltd v BTP Tioxide Ltd (The Nema) ⁷⁵⁷ and Antaios Compania Naviera SA v Salen Rederiana AB (The Antaios), ⁷⁵⁸ but further limits court intervention by requiring that it must be “just and proper in all the circumstances for the court to determine the question”. ⁷⁵⁹

32-168

The application for permission to appeal must identify the question of law to be determined and state the grounds on which it is alleged that permission to appeal should be granted. ⁷⁶⁰ The court will normally determine the application for permission without a hearing. ⁷⁶¹ As a general rule, the appeal must be brought within the 28 day time limit prescribed by s.70(3) ⁷⁶² and is subject to certain restrictions. ⁷⁶³ Appeals are only permitted on a question of law “arising out of an award” and not in respect of extrinsic matters arising in the course of the arbitral proceedings. ⁷⁶⁴ The court will no doubt, as under the previous law, continue to set its face against entertaining questions of law framed in the form of a question whether there was sufficient, or any, evidence to support a particular finding of fact. ⁷⁶⁵ The court may make any permission which it gives conditional upon the appellant complying with such conditions as it considers appropriate, and in particular may order security for costs or that money payable under the award is to be brought into court or otherwise secured. ⁷⁶⁶ If the application is unsuccessful, it will normally be sufficient for the applicant to be told which of the tests in subs.(3) he has failed, and the judge need not go further and explain why the relevant test has been failed. But whether the tribunal's decision was obviously wrong or open to serious doubt, it may be necessary, in a particular case, for the judge to give brief reasons to explain why the applicant has lost. ⁷⁶⁷ The court has jurisdiction under CPR r.3.1(7) or its inherent jurisdiction to set aside an order granting leave to appeal. ⁷⁶⁸

32-169

⚠ On an appeal under s.69 the court may confirm, vary or set aside the award or remit the award to the tribunal for reconsideration in the light of the court's determination. It may exercise its powers of setting aside or remission as to the whole of the award or only part of it. The court cannot exercise its power to set aside an award unless it is satisfied that it would be inappropriate to remit the matters in question to the tribunal for reconsideration. ⁷⁶⁹ ⚠

Combined applications

32-170

Applications under s.68 (challenge on the ground of serious irregularity) and s.69 (for leave to appeal on a point of law) may be combined in one hearing ⁷⁷⁰ but they involve two quite distinct processes of judicial analysis. ⁷⁷¹ In many cases determination of the s.69 application before that of the s.68 application may be logically preferable, but in each case it is a matter for the court whether the application for leave to appeal should be tried first. ⁷⁷²

Right of appeal: exclusion agreements

32-171

Section 69, unlike ss.67 and 68, is not a mandatory provision and it is open to the parties by agreement to exclude the right of appeal. ⁷⁷³ In the case of a domestic arbitration agreement s.87 of the 1996 Act provides that any agreement to exclude the jurisdiction of the court under s.69 or under s.45 (determination of preliminary point of law) is not to be effective unless entered into after the commencement of the arbitral proceedings in which the award is made. But s.87 is not yet in force and is unlikely to be brought into force. ⁷⁷⁴ The special categories of disputes mentioned in s.4(1) of the 1979 Act where the efficacy of an exclusion agreement was limited have not been retained in the 1996 Act. The parties are therefore free to exclude the right of appeal either in the original arbitration agreement or by the adoption of institutional rules ⁷⁷⁵ which exclude that right. An agreement to dispense with reasons for the tribunal's award is to be considered an agreement to exclude the court's jurisdiction under s.69, ⁷⁷⁶ but not merely a provision that an award is to be "final and binding". ⁷⁷⁷ An exclusion agreement is not contrary to art.6 of the European Convention on Human Rights. ⁷⁷⁸

Challenge or appeal: reasons for award

32-172

The arbitral tribunal is required to give reasons for the award unless the award is an agreed award or the parties have agreed to dispense with reasons. ⁷⁷⁹ But, in order that the procedures for challenge or appeal may be effective, s.70(4) of the 1996 Act empowers the court to compel the tribunal to give reasons or further reasons for its award. ⁷⁸⁰ If on an application or appeal it appears to the court that the award does not contain the tribunal's reasons or does not set out the tribunal's reasons in sufficient detail to enable the court properly to consider the application or appeal, the court may order the tribunal to state the reasons for the award in sufficient detail for that purpose. In relation to the similar power conferred upon the court under s.1(5) of the 1979 Act, it was held that this power should be exercised sparingly ⁷⁸¹ and the same applies to s.70(4). ⁷⁸² It is not sufficient that it would be helpful to the court to have such reasons ⁷⁸³ and it is probable that the court will have to be satisfied that, if an order were made, the application or appeal would be likely to succeed. ⁷⁸⁴ Otherwise there would be no point in ordering reasons or further reasons to be stated.

Challenge or appeal: additional costs

32-173

Where the court makes the order, it may make such further order as it thinks fit with respect to any additional costs of the arbitration resulting from the order. ⁷⁸⁵

Challenge or appeal: facts on which decision based 32-174

The power to order the tribunal to state reasons for the award extends not only to “reasoning” but also to the relevant facts upon which its decision is based. ⁷⁸⁶ But the power cannot or should not be used to order the tribunal to set out the evidence on which it relied in order to reach its conclusion. ⁷⁸⁷ There is no power in the court, before an award is made, to order the tribunal to state reasons for pre-award rulings. ⁷⁸⁸

Challenge or appeal: restrictions and time limits

32-175

⚠ An application or appeal may not be brought if the applicant or appellant has not first exhausted any available process of appeal or review and any available recourse under s.57 (correction of award or additional award). ⁷⁸⁹ Any application or appeal must be brought within 28 days of the date of the award or, if there has been any arbitral process of appeal or review, of the date when the applicant or appellant was notified of the result of that process. ⁷⁹⁰ ⚠ This period may be extended by the court in accordance with rules of the court ⁷⁹¹ (though the criteria applicable to applications for such an extension may differ from those applicable under the CPR). ⁷⁹² ⚠

32-176

⚠ The right to object to the tribunal's substantive jurisdiction will be lost if the challenge is not made timeously. ⁷⁹³ Also a party to arbitral proceedings will be held to have lost the right to object that the tribunal lacks substantive jurisdiction, or that the proceedings have been improperly conducted, or that there has been a failure to comply with the arbitration agreement or any provision of Pt I of the Act, or that there has been any other irregularity affecting the tribunal or the proceedings, if he failed to object timeously ⁷⁹⁴ ⚠ and thereafter took part or continued to take part in the proceedings, ⁷⁹⁵ ⚠ unless he shows that he did not then know and could not with reasonable diligence have discovered the grounds for the objection. ⁷⁹⁶ It is clear that it is unnecessary for him to have had actual knowledge of the grounds of objection in order for him to lose his right to challenge the award and in Rustal Trading Ltd v Gill & Duffus SA ⁷⁹⁷ Moore-Bick J. stated “If the respondent can show that the applicant took part or continued to take part in the proceedings without objection after the grounds of objection had arisen, the burden passes to the applicant to show that he did not know, and could not with reasonable diligence have discovered those grounds at the time”. He further expressed the view that it was unnecessary for the applicant to have taken a positive step in the proceedings: “... unless a party makes it clear that he is withdrawing from the proceedings, he continues to take part in them until they reach their conclusion, normally in the publication of a final award”.

Challenge or appeal: supplementary orders

32-177

⚠ The court may order the applicant or appellant to provide security for the costs of the application or appeal ⁷⁹⁸ ⚠ and may order that any money payable under the award shall be brought into court or otherwise secured. ⁷⁹⁹

Challenge or appeal: effect of order of the court

32-178

Where the award is varied by the court, the variation has effect as part of the tribunal's award. ⁸⁰⁰

32-179

Where the award is remitted by the court to the tribunal for reconsideration, the tribunal must make a fresh award in respect of the matter remitted within three months of the date of the order or such longer or shorter period as the court directs. ⁸⁰¹ The effect of the order is to revive the jurisdiction of the tribunal, but only insofar as is necessary to deal with the matter remitted. ⁸⁰² Following a remission, the first award is suspended: once a second award is published, the first award becomes null. ⁸⁰³

32-180

Where the award is set aside by the court or declared to be of no effect, the court may also order that any Scott v Avery clause ⁸⁰⁴ is to be of no effect. ⁸⁰⁵

Challenge or appeal: appeals to the Court of Appeal ⁸⁰⁶

32-181

⚠ An appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from a decision of the court on an application under s.67 or s.68, but such an appeal lies only if the court gives permission. ⁸⁰⁷ Only the judge who hears that application can give permission to appeal: the Court of Appeal itself cannot do so. ⁸⁰⁸ ⚠ Refusal by the court to give permission to appeal to the Court of Appeal is unappealable. ⁸⁰⁹

32-182

The permission of the court is required for any appeal to the Court of Appeal from a decision of the court under s.69 to grant or refuse permission to appeal. ⁸¹⁰ It is probable that permission to appeal will only be granted in exceptional circumstances. ⁸¹¹ Refusal by the court to give permission to appeal to the Court of Appeal is unappealable. ⁸¹²

32-183

The decision of the court on an appeal under s.69 is to be treated as a judgment of the court for the purposes of a further appeal. ⁸¹³ But no such appeal lies without the permission of the court, which will not be given unless the court considers that the question is one of general importance or is one which for some other special reason should be considered by the Court of Appeal. ⁸¹⁴ No appeal lies to the Court of Appeal against a refusal by the court to give permission to appeal. ⁸¹⁵

32-184

⚠ In the circumstances referred to above, and in other cases ⁸¹⁶ where the Act provides that no appeal lies to the Court of Appeal without permission of the first instance court, the Court of Appeal has held that it is nevertheless entitled in certain situations to entertain an appeal despite a refusal of permission to appeal. The first situation is where the first instance court has made an order which it was not within its jurisdiction or not empowered to make under the provision of the Act relied on.⁸¹⁷ The second is where the decision of that court is invalidated by misconduct⁸¹⁸ or by unfairness in the process of arriving at its decision.⁸¹⁹ This residuary appellate jurisdiction exists both apart from⁸²⁰  and consistently with the European Convention on Human Rights⁸²¹  It does not, however, enable an appeal to be brought without permission on the ground that the court's decision on the merits was erroneous or unfair.⁸²²

Enforcement of awards

32-185

By s.66 of the 1996 Act,⁸²³ an award made by the tribunal pursuant to an arbitration agreement may, by permission of the court, be enforced in the same manner as a judgment or order of the court to the same effect,⁸²⁴ and where permission is so given, judgment may be entered in terms of the award.⁸²⁵ These two steps are distinct⁸²⁶; the former permitting a party to use the court's enforcement mechanisms for the purpose of enforcing the award and the latter enabling a party to obtain a judgment of the court itself in terms of the award. Permission to enforce an award cannot be given where, or to the extent that, the person against whom it is sought to be enforced shows that the tribunal lacked substantive jurisdiction to make the award,⁸²⁷ but any objection must be made timeously.⁸²⁸ Otherwise, the court has a discretion whether or not to permit enforcement of the award. Permission should be given to enforce the award unless there is a real ground for doubting its validity.⁸²⁹ But permission might be refused, for example, if the award dealt with matters which are not capable of settlement by arbitration,⁸³⁰ or on the grounds of public policy,⁸³¹ or if it was not in a form in which it could be entered as a judgment.⁸³² An award made in a foreign currency may be enforced,⁸³³ but not an award which specifically requires payment in a foreign country.⁸³⁴ An award may be enforced under s.66 even though the seat of the arbitration is outside England or no seat has been designated or determined.⁸³⁵ It would appear that the court will not make an order for security for costs against an award creditor in respect of an application to enforce.⁸³⁶ But the court has power to stay enforcement and order security.⁸³⁷

32-186

An award may also be enforced by bringing an action on the award.⁸³⁸ This will be the only method of enforcement available where the arbitration agreement was not in writing⁸³⁹ or permission to enforce the award under s.66 is refused. In an action on the award the defendant cannot plead as a defence that the findings of the arbitral tribunal were wrong⁸⁴⁰ or that the arbitral proceedings leading to the award were unfair, irregular or unsatisfactory.⁸⁴¹ His remedy is to appeal to the court on a question of law arising out of the award⁸⁴² or to apply to the court to set aside the award on the ground of serious irregularity,⁸⁴³ but in either case within the time limits and subject to the restrictions prescribed.⁸⁴⁴ He can, however, raise the defence that the arbitral tribunal acted without jurisdiction or exceeded its jurisdiction.⁸⁴⁵

32-187

A claim on an award is a claim for damages for the breach of an implied term in the submission to arbitration that any award would be fulfilled.⁸⁴⁶ Therefore, a claimant wishing to enforce an award in English proceedings has to prove, not only the award, but also the submission to arbitration which gave the arbitral tribunal the power to make its award and which contained the implied term that the parties would fulfil any award made pursuant to the submission.⁸⁴⁷ There is, however, no need to plead and prove the underlying dispute arising under the contract between the parties.⁸⁴⁸ A claim to enforce an award made in relation to a dispute arising out of a charterparty is not within the Admiralty Jurisdiction in rem as a claim "arising out of any agreement for the carriage of goods in a ship or to the use or hire of a ship" under s.20(2)(h) of the Senior Courts Act 1981.⁸⁴⁹

32-188

An order may be made under s.37(1) of the Senior Courts Act 1981 for the disclosure of assets in aid of execution to enforce an arbitration award where the arbitration is seated in England.⁸⁵⁰ But the court has no jurisdiction to make a freezing order in aid of enforcement of an English arbitrator's award against subsidiaries of the award debtor against whom no substantial claim is asserted and who have no presence or assets within the jurisdiction.⁸⁵¹

Foreign awards

32-189

⚠ A foreign award may be enforced in England in a number of ways. First, it may likewise be enforced under s.66 of the Act or by action.⁸⁵² Secondly, an award made,⁸⁵³ in pursuance of an arbitration agreement, in the territory of a state⁸⁵⁴ which is a party to the New York Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards (1958) may, by permission of the court, be enforced in the same manner as a judgment or order of the court to the same effect by virtue of s.101 of the 1996 Act.⁸⁵⁵ ⚠ Thirdly, except insofar as an award is a New York Convention award, by virtue of Pt II of the Arbitration Act 1950 a foreign award is enforceable in the same manner as an English award if it is made in pursuance of an arbitration agreement to which the Geneva Protocol (1923) applies,⁸⁵⁶ and which is made between persons of whom one is subject to the jurisdiction of a state party to the Geneva Convention for the Execution of Foreign Arbitral Awards (1927),⁸⁵⁷ and the award is made in such a state.⁸⁵⁸ Fourthly, an arbitration award made in a Commonwealth country to which Pt II of the Administration of Justice Act 1920 or Pt I of the Foreign Judgments (Reciprocal Enforcement) Act 1933 has been extended⁸⁵⁹ can be enforced in the same manner as a judgment of a court in that place, i.e. by registration under those Acts, provided that it has become enforceable in the same manner as a judgment given by a court in that country.⁸⁶⁰ ⚠ Fifthly, various other statutes permit the enforcement of certain awards upon registration.⁸⁶¹ The conditions for enforcement and the grounds on which enforcement of a foreign award may be refused must be ascertained by reference to the particular statute,⁸⁶² ⚠ but neither at common law nor under the statutes concerned can the merits of the arbitrator's decision be impugned.

32-190

Once a foreign award has been converted into an English judgment, the judgment is subject to the same procedural rules and conditions as generally apply to such judgments. So, in principle, the court can grant a stay of execution of the judgment. However, it would rarely be appropriate to order a stay in respect of a foreign award enforceable under the New York Convention when, by definition under the Convention, the time for enforcement had arrived.⁸⁶³

32-191

⚠ Where a State has agreed in writing to submit a dispute which has arisen, or may arise, to arbitration, the State is not immune as respects proceedings in the courts of the United Kingdom, except (a) where contrary provision is made in the arbitration agreement or (b) where the arbitration agreement is between States.⁸⁶⁴ A State cannot, therefore, as a normal rule raise a defence of State immunity in respect of an application to enforce an award as a judgment, whether the award is an English or a foreign award.⁸⁶⁵ ⚠

Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments Act 1982

32-192

The 1982 Act provides a summary procedure for the enforcement by registration of an award which has become enforceable in the part of the United Kingdom in which it was given in the same manner as a judgment given by a court of law in that part.⁸⁶⁶ But it has been held that a judgment in a foreign state party to the Brussels Convention by which a foreign arbitral award was made enforceable could not be registered as a judgment in England under the Act, since such a judgment fell within the exception in art.1(4) of that Convention relating to arbitration.⁸⁶⁷

Proceedings in aid of execution

32-193

A freezing order may be made in aid of execution, whether the award is domestic or foreign,⁸⁶⁸ and third party debt proceedings may be brought in appropriate circumstances.⁸⁶⁹

Limitation

32-194

An action to enforce an award, where the submission is not by deed, must be brought within six years of the date on which the cause of action accrued,⁸⁷⁰ i.e. from the date on which the claimant was entitled to enforce the award.⁸⁷¹ Alternatively, if the claim is regarded as being one for damages for breach of an implied promise to pay the award, then it accrues when a reasonable time to pay the award has elapsed.⁸⁷² However, an action may be brought within six years on a judgment obtained to enforce an award even though by then more than six years have passed since the accrual of the cause of action to enforce the award.⁸⁷³

¹ For a more detailed account of arbitration, and practice and procedure, the reader should consult: Merkin, Arbitration Law (2007); Merkin and Flannery, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Russell on Arbitration, 24th edn (2015); Tweeddale and Tweeddale, Arbitration of Commercial Disputes, 2nd edn (2012); Harris, Planterose and Tecks, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, 2nd edn (1989) and Supplement (2001); Redfern and Hunter, Law and Practice of International Arbitration, 5th edn (2009); Park, Arbitration of International Business Disputes, 2nd edn (2012).

⁶⁸⁶  Enterprise Insurance Co Plc v U-Drive Solutions (Gibraltar) Ltd [2016] EWHC 1301 (QB) at [34].

⁶⁸⁷  In Enterprise Insurance Co Plc v U-Drive Solutions (Gibraltar) Ltd [2016] EWHC 1301 (QB) at [39]–[40], [116] the Court held that an order refusing to strike out a claim and an order for security for costs were not “awards” for the purposes of ss.68 and 69.

⁶⁸⁸  s.5 of the Arbitration Act 1996. A decision by the secretariat of the arbitral institution, as opposed to the tribunal, will not be an award unless the arbitral institution’s rules provide otherwise.

⁶⁸⁹  s.52 of the Arbitration Act 1996 makes provision for the form of the award. See above, para.32-139.

⁶⁹⁰ See CPR Pt 62.

⁶⁹¹ Having regard to s.1(c) of the Act, the question arises whether the court still retains in addition its inherent powers to rule on jurisdiction: see ABB Lummus Global Ltd v Keppel Fils Ltd [1999] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 24; Vale do Rio Doce Navegacao SA v Shanghai Bao Steel Ocean Shipping Co Ltd [2000] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 1; J T Mackley & Co Ltd v Gosport Marina Ltd [2002] EWHC 1315

- (TCC), [2002] Build. L.R. 367. But see British Telecommunications Plc v SAE Group Inc [2009] EWHC 252 (TCC), [2009] B.L.R. 231 (declaration).
692. s.67(1)(a). See ss.30, 31, 82; above, paras 32-101, 32-102. A negative jurisdictional decision of the tribunal can be challenged under the provision: LG Caltex Gas Co Ltd v China National Petroleum Corp [2001] EWCA Civ 788, [2001] 1 W.L.R. 1892; TTMI SARL v Statoil ASA [2011] EWHC 1150 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 220.
693. s.67(1)(b); Republic of Kazakhstan v Istil Group Inc [2006] EWHC 448 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 370; (affirmed [2007] EWCA Civ 471, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 548); Sumukan Ltd v Commonwealth Secretariat (No.2) [2007] EWCA Civ 1148, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 40.
694.  Below, para.32-175. See Yegiazaryan v Smagin [2016] EWCA Civ 1290, [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 102 at [27]–[28].
695. s.70(2); below, para.32-175; CPR Pt 62.
696.  s.73(2); Emirates Trading Agency LLC v Sociedade de Fomento Industrial Private Ltd [2015] EWHC 1452 (Comm), [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 487.
697. s.67(3).
698. Azov Shipping Co v Baltic Shipping Co [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 68; Aoot Kalmneft v Glencore International AG [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 128, 141; Electrosteel Castings Ltd v Scan-Transshipping and Chartering Sdn Bhd [2002] EWHC 1993 (Comm), [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 190 at [22]; Zaporozhye Production Society v Ashly Ltd [2002] EWHC 1410 (Comm); Peoples Insurance Co of China v Vysanthi Shipping Co Ltd [2003] EWHC 1655 (Comm), [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 617; Peterson Farms Inc v C&M Farming Ltd [2004] EWHC 121 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 603 at [18]; Metal Distributors UK Ltd v ZCCM Investments Holdings Plc [2005] EWHC 156 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 37 at [16]; Republic of Ecuador v Occidental Exploration & Production Co (No.2) [2006] EWHC 345 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 773 at [7] (affirmed [2007] EWCA Civ 656, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 352); Czech Republic v European Media Ventures SA [2007] EWHC 2851 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 186 at [13]; Habas Sinai v Tibbi Gazlar Isthisal Endustri AS v Sometal SAL [2010] EWHC 29 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 661 at [1]; Norscot Rig Management PVT Ltd v Essar Oilfields Services Ltd [2010] EWHC 195 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 209 at [1]; Dallah Real Estate & Tourism Co v Ministry of Religious Affairs of the Government of Pakistan [2010] UKSC 46, [2011] 1 A.C. 763 at [104], [160]; A v B [2010] EWHC 3302 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 363 at [25]; TTMI SARL v Statoil ASA [2011] EWHC 1150 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 220 at [16]; Hyundai Merchant Marine Co Ltd v Americas Bulk Transport Ltd [2013] EWHC 470 (Comm), [2013] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 649 at [31]. cf. Primetrade AG v Ythan Ltd [2005] EWHC 2399 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 457; Central Trading Exports Ltd v Fioralba Shipping Co [2014] EWHC 2397 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 449 (in the circumstances new evidence not allowed to be introduced).
699. s.67(2). See Arbitration 1998, 64, 188.
700. s.4(1) and Sch.1.
701. s.72(2)(a). Taking part in an arbitration on the merits or substance of the alleged claim amounts to taking part in the arbitration proceedings for the purposes of this sub-section; see Broda Agro Trade (Cyprus) Ltd v Alfred C Toepfer International Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 1100, [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 243, likewise making submissions to the tribunal as to its jurisdiction: at [42]–[49].
702.  s.72(1); London Steam Ship Owners Mutual Insurance Association Ltd v Spain (The Prestige) [2013] EWHC 2840 (Comm), [2014] All E.R. (Comm) 300 at [79]–[81]. cf. Secretary of State for Transport v Stagecoach South Western Trains Ltd [2009] EWHC 2431 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 175. In Sino Channel Asia Ltd v Dana Shipping and Trading Pte Singapore [2016] EWHC 1118 (Comm), [2016] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 97 at [4]–[5], the Court said that there was no time limit applicable to proceedings under s.72 and such an action may be brought after the making of an arbitration award.

703.

!s.73(1); Hussman (Europe) Ltd v Al Ameen Development & Trade Co [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 83, 91; Athletic Union of Constantinople v National Basketball Association [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 305, 310; JSC Zestafoni G Nikoladz Ferroalloy Plant v Ronly Holdings Ltd [2004] EWHC 245 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 335; Westland Helicopters Ltd v Sheikh Salah al-Hejailan (No.1) [2004] EWHC 1625 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 523; Vee Networks Ltd v Econet Wireless International Ltd [2004] EWHC 2909 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 192; Primetrade AG v Ythan Ltd [2005] EWHC 2399 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 457 at [56]. cf. Sumukan Ltd v Commonwealth Secretarial (No.2) [2007] EWCA Civ 1148, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 40; Habas Sinai Ve Tibbi Gazlar Istihsal Endustrisi As v VSC Steel Co Ltd [2013] EWHC 4071 (Comm), [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 479; Frontier Agriculture Ltd v Bratt Bros [2015] EWCA Civ 611, [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 500; A v B [2016] EWHC 3003 (Comm), [2017] 1 W.L.R. 2030 at [50]–[63] see above, para.32-102 and below, para.32-176, But if the tribunal determines that it lacks jurisdiction and a party challenges that determination, s.73(1) is inapplicable, since that party is not making any of the objections to which s.73(1) applies: LG Caltex Gas Co Ltd v China National Petroleum Corp [2001] EWCA Civ 788, [2001] 1 W.L.R. 1892. Section 73(1) is inapplicable to applications under s.72(1): London Steam Ship Owners Mutual Insurance Association Ltd v Spain (The Prestige) [2013] EWHC 2840 (Comm), [2014] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 300 at [82].

704.

Westminster Chemicals & Produce Ltd v Eicholz & Loeser [1954] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 99; Luanda Exportadora SARL v Wahbe Tamari & Sons Ltd [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 353; Cia Maritima Zorroza SA v Sesostris SAE [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 652; Almare Societa di Navigazione SpA v Derby & Co Ltd [1989] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 376; Furness Withy (Australia) Pty Ltd v Metal Distributors (UK) Ltd [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 236; Athletic Union of Constantinople v National Basketball Association, above, at 311. Contrast LG Caltex Gas Co Ltd v China National Petroleum Corp, above; Republic of Kazakhstan v Istil Group Inc, above, at [59]–[60].

705.

Altco Ltd v Sutherland [1971] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 515; Furness Withy (Australia) Pty Ltd v Metal Distributors (UK) Ltd, above.

706.

See Vol.I, para.4-108.

707.

Furness Withy (Australia) Pty Ltd v Metal Distributors (UK) Ltd, above. But see Vol.I, paras 4-114, 4-115.

708.

s.2(1).

709.

Republic of Ecuador v Occidental Exploration and Production Co [2005] EWCA Civ 1116, [2006] Q.B. 432. On the subsequent hearing of the challenge under ss.67, 68, the court upheld the award: Republic of Ecuador v Occidental Exploration and Production Co (No.2) [2006] EWHC 345 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 773 (affirmed [2007] EWCA Civ 656, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 352).

710.

Hussman (Europe) Ltd v Pharaon [2003] EWCA Civ 266, [2003] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 879.

711.

Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd v Emmott [2008] EWHC 2684 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 162.

712.

Arbitration Act 1950 s.22.

713.

Arbitration Act 1950 s.23(2).

714.

See the 27th edition of this book, Vol.I, para.15-042.

715.

s.68(1). See CPR Pt 62.

716.

s.4(1) and Sch.1.

717. s.72(2)(b).

718.

❗ Lesotho Highlands Development Authority v Impregilo SpA [2005] UKHL 43, [2006] 1 A.C. 221 at [28]; ABB AG v Hochtief Airport GmbH [2006] EWHC 388 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1 at [61]–[67]; Bandwith Shipping Corp v Intaari [2007] EWCA Civ 998, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 7 at [38]; Gulf Import and Export Co v Bunge SA [2007] EWHC 2667 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 316 at [21]; London Underground Ltd v Citylink Telecommunications Ltd [2007] Build. L.R. 391 at [22]; TAG Wealth Management v West [2008] EWHC 1466 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 699 at [29]; Petrochemical Industries Co (KSC) v Dow Chemical Co [2012] EWHC 2739 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 691 at [16]; Secretary of State for the Home Department v Raytheon Systems Ltd [2014] EWHC 4375 (TCC) at [33]; Lorand Shipping Ltd v Davof Trading (Africa) BV [2014] EWHC 3521 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 67; Essar Oilfield Services Ltd v Norscot Rig Management Pvt Ltd [2016] EWHC 2361 (Comm), [2016] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 481 at [8]–[11].

719. s.68(2).

720.

❗ Weldon Plant Hire Ltd v Commission for the New Towns [2000] Build. L.R. 496; Pacol Ltd v Joint Stock Co Rossakhar [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 109; Rustal Trading Ltd v Gill & Duffus SA [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 14; Sanghi Polyesters (India) v International Investor (KCFC) (Kuwait) [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 480; Groundshire v VHE Construction [2001] Build. L.R. 395; RC Pillar & Sons v Edwards [2001] C.I.L.L. 1799; Aoot Kalmneft v Glencore International AG [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 128; Al Hadha Trading Co v Tradigrain SA [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 512, 523–524; Checkpoint Ltd v Strathclyde Pension Fund [2003] EWCA Civ 84, [2003] E.G. 214; Bulfracht (Cyprus) Ltd v Boneset Shipping Co Ltd [2002] EWHC 2292 (Comm), [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 681; Warborough Investments Ltd v S Robinson & Sons (Holdings) Ltd [2003] EWCA 751, [2003] 2 E.G.L.R. 149; Minermet SpA Milan v Luckyfield Shipping Corp SA [2004] EWHC 729 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 348; Westland Helicopters Ltd v Sheikh Salah al-Hejailan (No.1) [2004] EWHC 1625 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 523; Tame Shipping Ltd v Easy Navigation Ltd [2004] EWHC 1862 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 626; Newfield Construction Ltd v Tomlinson [2004] EWHC 3051 (TCC), (2004) 97 Const. L.R. 98; Alphapoint Shipping Ltd v Rotem Amfert Negev [2004] EWHC 2232 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 23; Vee Networks Ltd v Econet Wireless International Ltd [2004] EWHC 2909 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 192; Margulead Ltd v Exide Technologies [2004] EWHC 1019 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 324; Home of Homes Ltd v Hammersmith & Fulham LBC [2003] EWHC 807, (2003) 92 Const. L.R. 48; Ronly Holdings Ltd v JSC Zestafoni G Nicoladze Ferroalloy Plant [2004] EWHC 1354 (Comm), [2004] 1 C.L.C. 1168; Omnibridge Consulting Ltd v Clearsprings Management Ltd [2004] EWHC 2276 (Comm); St George's Investment Co Ltd v Gemini Consulting Ltd [2004] EWHC 2358 (Ch); Bottiglieri di Navigazione SpA v Cosco Qingdao Ocean Shipping Co [2005] EWHC 244 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1; ASM Shipping Ltd of India v TTMI Ltd of England [2005] EWHC 2238 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 375, [2006] EWCA Civ 1341, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 136; Bernuth Lines Ltd v High Seas Shipping Ltd [2005] EWHC 3020 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 536 at [53]; Claire & Co Ltd v Thames Water Utilities Ltd [2005] EWHC 1022 (TCC), [2005] Build. L.R. 366; Cameroon Airlines v Transnet Ltd [2004] EWHC 1829 (Comm), [2006] T.C.L.R. 1; ABB AG v Hochtief Airport GmbH [2006] EWHC 388 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1; Norbrook Laboratories Ltd v Tank [2006] EWHC 1055 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 485; Sumukan Ltd v Commonwealth Secretariat (No.2) [2007] EWHC 188 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 370 (reversed [2007] EWCA Civ); HBC Hamburg Bulk Carriers GmbH & Co KG v Tangshan Haixing Shipping Co Ltd [2006] EWHC 3250 (Comm), [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 222; OAQ Northern Shipping Co v Remolcadores de Marin SL [2007] EWHC 1821 (Comm), [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 302; JD Wetherspoon Plc v Jay Mar Estates [2007] EWHC 856 (TCC), [2007] Build. L.R. 285; Bandwith Shipping Corp v Intaari [2007] EWCA Civ 998, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 7; Stern Settlement Trustees v Levy [2007] EWHC 1187 (TCC), (2007) 113 Const. L.R. 92; TAG Wealth Management v West [2008] EWHC 1466 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 699; Thomas O'Donoghue v Enterprise Inns Plc [2008] EWHC 815 (Comm); F Ltd v M Ltd [2009] EWHC 275 (TCC), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 537 (irrelevance of dissenting arbitrator's opinion); Van der Giessen de-Noord Shipbuilding Division BV v Imtech Marine & Offshore BV [2008] EWHC 2904 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 273; UR Power GmbH v Kuok Oils and Grains Pte Ltd [2009] EWHC 1940 (Comm), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 495; Compania Sud-Americana de Vapores SA v Nippon Yusen Kaisha [2009] EWHC 1880 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 436;

Double K Oil Products 1996 Ltd v Neste Oil OYJ [2009] EWHC 3380 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 141; Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd v Emmott [2011] EWHC 1441 (Comm); Milan Nigeria Ltd v Angeliki B Maritime Co [2011] EWHC 892 (Comm); Ispat Industries Ltd v Western Bulk Pte Ltd [2011] EWHC 93 (Comm); AK Kablo Imalat San Ve Tic AS v Intamex SA [2011] EWHC 2970 (Comm); Microperi Srl v Shipowners Mutual P&I Association [2011] EWHC 2686 (Comm); EDF Man Sugar Ltd v Belmont Shipping Ltd [2011] EWHC 2992 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 206; Abuja International Hotels Inc v Meridien SAS [2012] EWHC 87 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 461; Petrochemical Industries Co (KSC) v Dow Chemical Co [2012] EWHC 2739 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 691; Terna Bahrain Holding Co WLL v Al Shamsi [2012] EWHC 3283 (Comm), [2013] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 580 at [85]; Bulk Ship Union SA v Clipper Bulk Shipping Ltd [2012] EWHC 2595 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 533 at [11]–[18]; Flame SA v Glory Wealth Shipping Pte Ltd [2013] EWHC 3153 (Comm), [2013] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 653 at [101]–[107]; Interprods Ltd v De La Rue International Ltd [2014] EWHC 68 (Comm) at [18] (see above, para.32-096); Secretary of State for Defence v Turner Estate Solutions Ltd [2014] EWHC 244 (TCC); Brockton Capital LLP v Atlantic-Pacific Capital Inc [2014] EWHC 1459 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 475; Lorand Shipping Ltd v Davof Trading (Africa) BV [2014] EWHC 3521 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 67; BV Scheepswerf Damen Gorinchem v Marine Institute [2015] EWHC 1810 (Comm), [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 351; W Ltd v M Sdn Bhd [2016] EWHC 422 (Comm), [2016] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 552. On the use by the arbitrator of his own knowledge and experience, see above, para.32-096 n.380.

721.

❗cf. Equatorial Traders Ltd v Louis Dreyfus Trading Ltd [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 638; Westland Helicopters Ltd v Sheikh Salah al-Hejailan, above; Newfield Construction Ltd v Tomlinson, above; Republic of Ecuador v Occidental Exploration & Production Co (No.2) [2006] EWHC 345 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 773; ABB AG v Hochtief Airport GmbH, above; Gulf Import & Export Co v Bunge SA [2007] EWHC 2667 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 316 at [20]; CNH Global NV v PGN Logistics Ltd [2009] EWHC 977 (Comm), [2009] 1 C.L.C. 807; Abuja International Hotels Inc v Meridien SAS [2012] EWHC 87 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 461; New Age Alzarooni 2 Ltd v Range Energy Natural Resources Inc [2014] EWHC 4358 (Comm). In Lesotho Highlands Development Authority v Impregilo SpA [2005] UKHL 43, [2006] 1 A.C. 221, the House of Lords held that a mere error of law by the arbitrators did not amount to an excess of power under s.68(2)(b), but at [29] Lord Steyn gave some examples of such an excess of power. See also B v A [2010] EWHC 1626 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 681 (error in application of chosen law); C v D1 [2015] EWHC 2126 (Comm) at [136]–[147]; Essar Oilfield Services Ltd v Norscot Rig Management Pvt Ltd [2016] EWHC 2361 (Comm), [2016] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 481 at [41]–[47]; PT Transportasi Gas Indonesia v ConocoPhillips (Grissik) Ltd [2016] EWHC 2834 (Comm), [2016] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 600 at [53]–[56].

722.

Westland Helicopters v Sheikh Salah al-Hejailan, above; Newfield Construction Ltd v Tomlinson, above; Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd v Emmott [2011] EWHC 1441 (Comm).

723.

❗Weldon Plant Hire Ltd v Commission for the New Towns [2000] Build. L.R. 496; Ascot Commodities NV v Olam International Ltd [2001] EWHC 520 (Comm), [2002] C.L.C. 277; Hussman (Europe) Ltd v Al Ameen Development & Trade Co [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 83; Petroships Pte Ltd v Petec Trading and Investment Corp [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 348, 351, 355, 357; Checkpoint Ltd v Strathclyde Pension Fund [2003] EWCA Civ 84; Torch Offshore LLS v Cable Shipping Inc [2004] EWHC 787 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 446; Tame Shipping Ltd v Easy Navigation Ltd, above; Alphapoint Shipping Ltd v Rolem Amfert Negev Ltd, above; Margulead Ltd v Exide Technologies, above; World Trade Corp v C Czarnikow Sugar Ltd [2004] EWHC 2332 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 422; Marklands Ltd v Virgin Retail Ltd [2003] EWHC 3428, [2004] 27 E.G. 130; Fidelity Management SA v Myriad International Holdings BV [2005] EWHC 1193 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 508; Benaim (UK) Ltd v Davies Middleton & Davies Ltd (No.2) [2005] EWHC 1370 (TCC), (2005) 102 Const. L.R. 1; Protech Projects Constructions Pty Ltd v Al-Kharafi & Sons [2005] EWHC 2165 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 779; Sinclair v Woods of Winchester Ltd [2005] EWHC 1631, (2005) 102 Const. L.R. 127; ABB AG v Hochtief Airport GmbH, above; London Underground Ltd v Citylink Telecommunications Ltd [2007] EWHC 1749 (TCC), [2007] Build. L.R. 391 at [41]; TAG Wealth Management v West [2008] EWHC 1466, [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 699; Van der Giessen de-Noord Shipbuilding Division BV v Imtech Marine & Offshore BV [2008] EWHC 2904 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 273 at [8]–[15]; Metropolitan Property Realizations Ltd v Atmore Investments Ltd [2008] EWHC

2925 (Ch) (criticised by Dundas (2009) 75 Arbitration 284); Pace Shipping Co Ltd v Churchgate (Nigeria) Ltd [2009] EWHC 1975 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 183; Double K Oil Products 1996 v Neste Oil OYJ [2009] EWHC 3380 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 141; Shaw v MFP Foundation & Pilings Ltd [2010] EWHC 1839 (TCC); Buyuk Camlica Shipping Trading and Industry Co Inc v Progress Bulk Carriers Ltd [2010] EWHC 442 (Comm), [2011] Bus. L.R. D99; Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd v Emmott [2011] EWHC 1441 (Comm); Ispat Industries Ltd v Western Bulk Pte Ltd [2011] EWHC 93 (Comm); Soeximex SAS v Agrocrop International Pte Ltd [2011] EWHC 2743 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 52; Latvian Shipping Co v Russian People's Insurance Co [2012] EWHC 1412 (Comm); Transition Feeds LLP v Itochu Europe LLP [2013] EWHC 3629 (Comm); Secretary of State for the Home Department v Raytheon Systems Ltd [2014] EWHC 4375 (TCC) at [33]. A mere failure to set out in the award the tribunal's reasoning in relation to all the arguments advanced in the arbitration will not suffice: Margulead Ltd v Exide Technologies, above, at [29]–[35]; Fidelity Management SA v Myriad International Holdings BV [2005] EWHC 1193 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 508 at [7]–[10]. In Petrochemical Industries Co (KSC) v Dow Chemical Co [2012] EWHC 2739 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 691 at [16]–[21] Andrew Smith J. considered the distinction between “issues” on the one hand and “arguments”, “points”, “lines of reasoning” and “steps in an argument” on the other. See also Atkins Ltd v Secretary of State for Transport [2013] EWHC 139 (TCC), [2013] B.L.R. 193; Primera Maritime (Hellas) Ltd v Jiangsu Eastern Heavy Industry Co Ltd [2013] EWHC 3066 (Comm), [2014] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 813 at [8]; Transition Feeds LLP v Itochu Europe Plc [2013] EWHC 3629 (Comm) at [18]; BV Scheepswerf Damen Gorinchem v Marine Institute [2015] EWHC 1810 (Comm); PT Transportasi Gas Indonesia v ConocoPhillips (Grissik) Ltd [2016] EWHC 2834 (Comm), [2016] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 600 at [57]–[64]; A v B [2017] EWHC 596 (Comm), [2017] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1 at [35]–[39].

724. Gbangbola v Smith & Sherriff Ltd [1998] 3 All E.R. 730. Benaïm (UK) Ltd v Davies Middleton & Davies Ltd (No.2), above; Pace Shipping Co Ltd v Churchgate (Nigeria) Ltd [2009] EWHC 1975 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 183.

725.  Cuflet Chartering v Carousel Shipping Co Ltd [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 707; Profilati Italia Srl v Painewebber Inc [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 715; Thyssen Canada Ltd v Mariana Maritime SA [2005] EWHC 219 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 640; Protech Projects Construction Pty Ltd v Al-Kharafi & Sons, above; Elektrim SA v Vivendi Universal SA [2007] EWHC 11 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 693, especially at [75]–[87]; DDT Trucks of North America Ltd v DDT Holdings Ltd [2007] EWHC 1542 (Comm), [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 213 at [22]–[23]; Colliers International Property Consultants v Colliers Jordan Lee Jafaar Sd Bhd [2008] EWHC 1524 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 368; R v V [2008] EWHC 1531 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 97; Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd v Emmott [2011] EWHC 1441 (Comm); Nestor Maritime SA v Sea Anchor Shipping Co Ltd [2012] EWHC 996 (Comm). In Double K Oil Products 1996 Ltd v Neste Oil OYJ [2009] EWHC 3380 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 141, Blair J. stated that the court had to be satisfied that some form of reprehensible or unconscionable conduct had contributed in a substantial way to the obtaining of the award (allegation in the case was fraud in the production of evidence). See also Chantiers de L'Atlantique SA v Gaztransport & Technigaz SAS [2011] EWHC 3383 (Comm) at [53]–[62]; Celtic Bioenergy Ltd v Knowles [2017] EWHC 472 (TCC), [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 495 (fraud in a party's deliberate failure to draw the tribunal's attention to relevant correspondence). As to relevance of the public policy of a foreign State, see PT Transportasi Gas Indonesia v ConocoPhillips (Grissik) Ltd [2016] EWHC 2834 (Comm), [2016] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 600 at [66]–[72].

726. Al Hadha Trading Co v Tradigrain SA [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 512, 521; Benaïm (UK) Ltd v Davies Middleton & Davies Ltd, above.

727.  Gannet Shipping Ltd v Eastrade Commodities Inc [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 713, 717–718. An admission by a member of the tribunal who is in the minority or who dissents would not be sufficient for this purpose: A v B [2017] EWHC 596 (Comm), [2017] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1 at [53]–[56].

728. See the 27th edition of this book, Vol.I, paras 15-040—15-042.

729. Lindner Ceilings Floors Partitions Plc v How Engineering Services Ltd [2001] Build. L.R. 90;

Ardvina Holdings BV v Celtic Resource Holdings Plc [2006] EWHC 3155 (Comm); Schwebel v Schwebel [2010] EWHC 3280 (TCC), [2011] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 1048; Flame SA v Glory Wealth Shipping Pte Ltd [2013] EWHC 3153 (Comm), [2013] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 653; Atkins Ltd v Secretary of State for Transport [2013] EWHC 139 (TCC), [2013] B.L.R. 193; Sonatrach v Statoil Natural Gas LLC [2014] EWHC 875 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 252 at [11]; New Age Alzarooni 2 Ltd v Range Energy Natural Resources Inc [2014] EWHC 4358 (Comm) at [13]; Secretary of State for the Home Department v Raytheon Systems Ltd [2014] EWHC 4375 (TCC) at [33]. See also World Trade Corp v C Czarnikow Sugar Ltd [2004] EWHC 2322 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 422 (weight of evidence); Lesotho Highlands Development Authority v Impregilo SpA [2005] UKHL 43, [2006] 1 A.C. 221 at [28]. But it may be that a failure by the tribunal to take account of or consider evidence (as opposed to an alleged failure to evaluate the evidence correctly) could come within ss.33(2), 68(2)(a). Arduina Holdings BV v Celtic Resources Holdings Plc [2006] EWHC 3155 at [46]; Schwebel v Schwebel [2010] EWHC 3280 (TCC) at [27]; Petrochemical Industries Co (KSC) v Dow Chemical Co [2012] EWHC 2739 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 691 at [36]; Brockton Capital LLP v Atlantic-Pacific Capital Inc [2014] EWHC 1459 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 275. In Elektrim SA v Vivendi Universal SA [2007] EWHC 11 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 693 at [75]–[76] Aikens J. said that the previous law was no longer applicable which gave to the court a power to remit the award where fresh evidence came to light after the award was made; cf. Gee (2006) 22 Arbitration International 337, 366.

730. Costa v British Indian Trading Co Ltd [1963] 1 Q.B. 201.

731. ¶s.68(2); Egmatra v Marco Trading Corp [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 862; Conder Structures v Kvaerner Construction Ltd [1999] A.D.R. L.J. 305; Pacol Ltd v Joint Stock Co Rossakhar [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 109, 115; Sanghi Polyesters Ltd (India) v International Investor (KCFC) (Kuwait) [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 480, 484; Hussman (Europe) Ltd v Al Ameen Development & Trade Co [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 83, 95; Profilati Italia Srl v Painewebber Inc [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 715, 720, 722; Petroships Pte Ltd v Retec Trading and Investment Corp [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 348, 351; Brandeis Brokers Ltd v Black [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 359, 370–371; Groundshire v VHE Construction [2001] Build. L.R. 395; Al Hadha Trading Co v Tradigrain SA [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 512, 521–522; Check Point Ltd v Strathclyde Pension Fund [2003] EWCA Civ 84 [2003] E.G. 214; Warborough Investments Ltd v S Robinson & Sons (Holdings) Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ T51, [2003] 2 E.G.L.R. 145; Torch Offshore LLS v Cable Shipping Inc [2004] EWHC 787 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 446; Alphapoint Shipping Ltd v Rotem Amfert Negev Ltd [2004] EWHC 2232 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 23; Newfield Construction Ltd v Tomlinson [2004] EWHC 3051 (TCC), (2004) 97 Const. L.R. 148; Fidelity Management SA v Myriad International Holdings BV [2005] EWHC 1193 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 508; ASM Shipping Ltd of India v TTMI Ltd of England [2005] EWHC 2238 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 375, [2006] EWCA Civ 1341, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 136; Bernuth Lines Ltd v High Seas Shipping Ltd [2005] EWHC 3020 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 537; Cameroon Airlines v Transnet Ltd [2004] EWHC 1829 (Comm), [2006] T.C.L.R. 1; ABB AG v Hochtief Airport GmbH [2006] EWHC 388 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 1; Norbrook Laboratories Ltd v Tank [2006] EWHC 1055 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 485; CNH Global NV v PGN Logistics Ltd [2009] EWHC 977 (Comm), [2009] 1 C.L.C. 807; Compania Sud-Americana de Vapores SA v Nippon Yusen Kaisha [2009] EWHC 1880 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 436; Double K Oil Products 1996 Ltd v Neste Oil OYJ [2009] EWHC 3380 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 141; Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd v Emmott [2011] EWHC 1441 (Comm); E D & F Man Sugar Ltd v Belmont Shipping Ltd [2011] EWHC 2992 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 206 at [20]; Petrochemical Industries Co (KSC) v Dow Chemical Co [2012] EWHC 2739 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 691; Terna Bahrain Holding Co WLL v Al Shamsi [2012] EWHC 3283 (Comm), [2013] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 580 at [121]; Compton Beauchamp Estates Ltd v Spence [2013] EWHC 1101 (Ch), [2013] 20 E.G. 107 (C.S.) at [36], [79]; Transition Feeds LLP v Itochu Europe Plc [2013] EWHC 3629 (Comm); BV Scheepswerf Damen Gorinchem v Marine Institute [2015] EWHC 1810 (Comm), [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 351.

732. para.280; Petroships Pte Ltd v Retec Trading and Investment Corp, above, at 351; Bandwith Shipping Corp v Intaari, above, at [46]; Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd v Emmott [2011] EWHC 1441 (Comm) at [18]; Ispat Industries Ltd v Western Bulk Pte Ltd [2011] EWHC 93 (Comm) at [17]; Bulk Ship Union SA v Clipper Bulk Shipping Ltd [2012] EWHC 2595 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 533 at [18]; Flame SA v Glory Wealth Shipping Pte Ltd [2013] EWHC 3153

- (Comm), [2013] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 653 at [101]–[107]; Secretary of State for Defence v Turner Estate Solutions Ltd [2014] EWHC 244 (TCC) at [69]; Lorand Shipping Ltd v Davof Trading (Africa) BV [2014] EWHC 3521 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 67 at [18].
- 733. Vee Networks Ltd v Econet Wireless International Ltd [2004] EWHC 2909 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 192 at [88]–[90].
- 734.  St George's Investment Co Ltd v Gemini Consulting Ltd [2004] EWHC 2353 (Ch), Newfield Construction Ltd v Tomlinson [2004] EWHC 305 (TCC), (2004) 97 Const. L.R. 148; BTC Bulk Transport Corp v Glencore International AG [2006] EWHC 1857 (Comm); JD Wetherspoon Plc v Jay Mar Estates [2007] EWHC 856 (TCC), [2007] Build. L.R. 285; OAO Northern Shipping Co v Remolcadores de Marin SL [2007] EWHC 1821 (Comm), [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 302; London Underground Ltd v Citylink Communications Ltd [2007] Build. L.R. 47; Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd v Emmott [2011] EWHC 1441 (Comm) at [17]; Brockton Capital LLP v Atlantic-Pacific Capital Inc [2014] EWHC 1459 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 275 at [27]–[31]; Secretary of State for the Home Department v Raytheon Systems Ltd [2014] EWHC 4375 (TCC) at [33]. cf. Soeximex v Agrocorp International Pte Ltd [2011] EWHC 2743 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 52 at [25]. Maass v Musion Events Ltd [2015] EWHC 1346 (Comm), [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 383 at [40]–[42].
- 735. s.33(1)(a); Checkpoint Ltd v Strathclyde Pension Fund [2003] EWCA 751, [2003] E.G.L.R. 149; Warborough Investment Ltd v S Robinson & Sons (Holdings) Ltd [2003] EWHC 787 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 23. See also the European Convention on Human Rights, above, para.32-015. But see JD Wetherspoon Plc v Jay Mar Estates, above.
- 736. ASM Shipping Ltd of India v TTMI Ltd of England (at first instance) [2005] EWHC 2238 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 375, [2006] EWCA Civ 1341, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 136 at [39]; Norbrook Laboratories v Tank [2006] EWHC 1055 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 485 at [144]–[145].
- 737. Below, para.32-175. For extension of time, see s.79.
- 738. s.70(2); below, para.32-175. See also CPR Pt 62.
- 739.  s.73(1); below, para.32-175. See Rustal Trading Ltd v Gill & Duffus SA [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 14, 19–20, and below, para.32-176. See also Essar Oilfield Services Ltd v Norscot Rig Management Pvt Ltd [2016] EWHC 2361 (Comm), [2016] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 481 at [78]–[85].
- 740. s.68(3). Remitting the award would be the normal remedy under s.68(2)(d), (f) and (h). But see Pacol Ltd v Joint Stock Co Rossakhar [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 109, 115; Secretary of State for the Home Department v Raytheon Systems Ltd (No.2) [2015] EWHC 311 (TCC), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 493. cf. Van der Giessen de-Noord Shipbuilding Division BV v Imtech Marine & Offshore BV [2008] EWHC 2904 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 273 (appointment of umpire). For remission in a case under s.68(2)(a), see Brockton Capital LLP v Atlantic-Pacific Capital Inc [2014] EWHC 1459 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 275.
- 741. Dexters Ltd v Hill Crest Oil Co (Bradford) Ltd [1926] 1 K.B. 348; AA Amram Ltd v Bremar Co Ltd [1966] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 494; European Grain & Shipping Ltd v R Johnston [1983] 2 Q.B. 520; ASM Shipping Ltd of India v TTMI Ltd of England (at first instance) [2005] EWHC 2238 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 375, [2006] EWCA Civ 1341, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 136 at [49]. Contrast Lissenden v CAV Bosch Ltd [1940] A.C. 412; Sokratis Rokopoulos v Esperia SpA [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 456; Banner Industrial and Commercial Properties v Clark Paterson (1990) 47 E.G. 64.
- 742. s.52(4).
- 743. Tame Shipping Ltd v Easy Navigation Ltd [2004] EWHC 1862 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 626.
- 744. s.2(1).

- 745. See (on s.22 of the Arbitration Act 1950) Fletamentos Maritimos SA v Effjohn International BV (No.2) [1997] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 502.
- 746. Needham (1999) 65 Arbitration 205; Holmes and O'Reilly (2003) 69 Arbitration 1; Dundas (2003) 69 Arbitration 172; (2006) 72 Arbitration 111, 281; Esposito (2008) 74 Arbitration 429; Tweedale and Tweedale (2013) 79 Arbitration (3) 265; Tweedale, Tweedale and Nguyen (2013) 80 Arbitration (2) 136.
- 747. s.69(1); CPR Pt 62, PD 62.12.
- 748. s.69(3)(c); Demco Investments & Commercial SA v SE Banken Forsakring Holding Aktiebolag [2005] EWHC 154 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 650 at [35]; Benaïm (UK) Ltd v Davies Middleton & Davies Ltd (2005) EWHC 1370 (TCC), (2005) 102 Const. L.R. 1 (application of law to fact); CTI Group Inc v Transclear SA [2008] EWCA Civ 856, [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 526 at [11]; TAG Wealth Management v West [2008] EWHC 1466, [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 699 at [46]–[52]; ASM Shipping Ltd of India v TTMI Ltd of England [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 293n; Trustees of Edmond Stern Settlement v Levy [2009] EWHC 14 (TCC), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 345; Dolphin Tanker SRL v Westport Petroleum Inc [2010] EWHC 2617 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 550 at [29]; Eitzen Bulk A/S v TTMI SARL [2012] EWHC 202 (Comm), [2012] 2 All E.R. 100 at [20]–[35]; Wuhan Ocean Economic & Technical Co-operation Co Ltd v Schiffahrts-Gesellschaft "Hansa Murcia" mbH & Co KG [2012] EWHC 3104 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 273 at [15]–[18], [22]–[31]; Latvian Shipping Co v Russian People's Insurance Co [2012] EWHC 1412 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 181; Sun United Maritime Ltd v Kastell Marine Inc [2014] EWHC 1476 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 386. See also Guangzhon Dockyards Co Ltd v ENE Aegiali I [2010] EWHC 2826 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 30 at [30]–[34] (doubtful whether court can hear appeal from arbitrators on questions of fact even if parties so agree).
- 749. Egmatra v Marco Trading Corp [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 862; Sanghi Polyesters (India) v International Investor (KCFC) Kuwait [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 480; Reliance Industries Ltd v Enron Oil and Gas Ltd [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 645; Athletic Union of Constantinople v National Basketball Association [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 305, 313; Schwebel v Schwebel [2010] EWHC 3280 (TCC), [2011] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 1048. For a court in Northern Ireland, it means the law of Northern Ireland.
- 750.  Poseidon Schiffahrt GmbH v Nomadic Navigation Co Ltd [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 57; and Royal and Sun Alliance Insurance Plc v BAE Systems (Operations) Ltd [2008] EWHC 743 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 712 (consent in advance). cf. ST Shipping and Transport Pte Ltd v Space Shipping Ltd [2016] EWHC 880 (Comm), [2016] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 17. In this situation, the barriers set by subs.(3) will not apply.
- 751. s.69(2).
- 752. CMA CGMSA v KGMS "Northern Pioneer" [2002] EWCA Civ 1878, [2003] 1 W.L.R. 1015; Stern Settlement Trustees v Levy [2007] EWHC 1187 (TCC), (2007) 113 Const. L.R. 92; Shaw v MFP Foundations Pilings Ltd [2010] EWHC 1839 (TCC); Corooba Holdings Ltd v Ballymore Properties Ltd [2011] EWHC 1636 (Ch); House of Fraser Ltd v Scottish Widows Plc [2011] EWHC 2800 (Ch).
- 753. Marklands Ltd v Virgin Retail Ltd [2003] EWHC 3428, [2004] 2 E.G.L.R. 43; Pace Shipping Co Ltd v Churchgate (Nigeria) Ltd [2009] EWHC 1975 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 183 at [43]; House of Fraser Ltd v Scottish Widows Plc [2011] EWHC 2800 (Ch); cf. HOK Sport Ltd v Aintree Racecourse Co Ltd [2002] EWHC 3094 (TCC), [2003] Build. L.R. 155.
- 754. HMV UK Ltd v Propinvest Friar Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 1708, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 416 at [5], [6] (i.e. transparent and clear upon a mere perusal of the reasoned award itself); Morris Homes (West Midlands) Ltd v Keay [2013] EWHC 932 (TCC), [2013] B.L.R. 370 at [50]; AMEC v Secretary of State for Defence [2013] EWHC 110 (TCC), 146 Con. L.R. 152; Transition Feeds LLP v Itochu Europe Plc [2013] EWHC 3629 (Comm).

- 755. See CMA CGM SA v KGMS “Northern Pioneer”, above; Icon Navigation Corp v Sinochem International Petroleum (Bahamas) Co Ltd [2002] EWHC 2812 (Comm), [2003] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 405; HOK Sport Ltd v Aintree Racecourse Co Ltd, above; Keydon Estates Ltd v Western Power Distribution (South Wales) Ltd [2004] EWHC 996 (Ch); JSC Zestafoni G Nikoladz Ferroalloy Plant v Ronly Holdings Ltd [2004] EWHC 245 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 335; Vrinera Marine Co Ltd v Eastern Rich Operations Inc [2004] EWHC 1752 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 465; Alphapoint Shipping Ltd v Rotem Amfert Negev Ltd [2004] EWHC 2232 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 23; Newfield Construction Ltd v Tomlinson [2004] EWHC 3051 (TCC), (2004) 97 Const. L.R. 148; Bottiglieri di Navigazione SpA v Cosco Quindao Ocean Shipping Co [2005] EWHC 244 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 1; Surefire Systems Ltd v Guardian ECL Ltd [2005] EWHC 1860 (TCC), [2006] Build. L.R. 534; Essex CC v Premier Recycling Ltd [2007] Build. L.R. 233; DDT Trucks of North America Ltd v DDT Holdings Ltd [2007] EWHC 154 (Comm), [2007] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 213; Stern Settlement Trustees v Levy [2007] EWHC 1187 (TCC), [2007] 113 Const. L.R. 92; Braes of Doune Wind Farm (Scotland) Ltd v Alfred McAlpine Business Services Ltd [2008] EWHC 426 (TCC), [2008] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 608 at [26]–[32]; Mayhaven Healthcare Ltd v Bothma [2009] EWHC 2634 (TCC), 127 Con. L.R. 1; UR Power GmbH v Kuok Oils and Grains Pte Ltd [2009] EWHC 1940 (Comm), [2009] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 495; National Trust v Fleming [2009] EWHC 1789 (Ch), [2009] N.P.C. 97; Pace Shipping Co Ltd v Churchgate (Nigeria) Ltd [2009] EWHC 1975 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 183; Gas Natural Approvisionamientos SDG SA v Methane Services Ltd [2009] EWHC 2298 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 610; SOS Corporacion Alimentaria SA v Inerco Trade SA [2010] EWHC 162 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 345; Sylvia Shipping Co Ltd v Progress Bulk Carriers Ltd [2010] EWHC 542 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 81; Dolphin Tanker SRL v Westport Petroleum Inc [2010] EWHC 2617 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 550; Milan Nigeria Ltd v Angeliki B Maritime Co [2011] EWHC 892 (Comm); Ispat Industries Ltd v Western Bulk Pte Ltd [2011] EWHC 93 (Comm); Cordoba Holdings Ltd v Ballymore Properties Ltd [2011] EWHC 1636 (Ch); HMV UK Ltd v Propinvest Friar Ltd Partnership [2011] EWCA Civ 1708; House of Fraser Ltd v Scottish Widows Plc [2011] EWHC 2800 (Ch); MRI Trading AG v Erdenet Mining Corp LLC [2012] EWHC 1988 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 465; Morris Homes (West Midlands) Ltd v Keay [2013] EWHC 932 (TCC), [2013] B.L.R. 370.
- 756. See n.747, below.
- 757. [1982] A.C. 724.
- 758. [1985] A.C. 191; CMA CGM SA v KGMS “Northern Pioneer”, above, at [11], [60].
- 759. Egmatra v Marco Trading Corp [1999] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 862 (foreign law); CMA CGM SA v KGMS “Northern Pioneer”, above (question rendered academic); HOK Sport Ltd v Aintree Racecourse Co Ltd [2002] EWHC 3094 (TCC), [2003] Build. L.R. 155 (delay allegedly prejudicial); Keyden Estates Ltd v Western Power Distribution (South Wales) Ltd, above (expert tribunal); Essex CC v Premier Recycling Ltd [2007] Build. L.R. 534 (“final and binding” decision); Stern Settlement Trustees v Levy [2007] EWHC 1187 (TCC), [2007] 113 Con. L.R. 92, at [29] (waste of time, cost and resource in pursuing weak challenge in context of arbitration claim of modest proportions). See also (on s.1 of the Arbitration Act 1979) Aden Refinery Co Ltd v Ugland Management Co Ltd [1987] Q.B. 650; Petraco (Bermuda) Ltd v Petromed International Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 896; Ipswich BC v Fisons Plc [1990] Ch. 709.
- 760. s.69(4). CPR Pt 62.12; Parbulk II A/S v Heritage Maritime SA [2011] EWHC 2917 (Comm), [2012] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 418.
- 761. s.69(5) (unless it appears to the court that a hearing is required). This is not contrary to art.6 of the European Convention on Human Rights: BLCT (13096) Ltd v J Sainsbury Plc [2003] EWCA Civ 884, [2004] 2 P & C.R. 3; above, para.32-017. See also CMA CGM SA v KGMS “Northern Pioneer”, above (brevity required in written submissions).
- 762. See below, para.32-175.
- 763. s.70(2); below, para.32-175. See also CPR Pt 62, PD 62.12.
- 764. Universal Petroleum Co Ltd v Handels und Transport GmbH [1987] 1 W.L.R. 1178, 1189;

- Foley's Ltd v City and East London Family and Community Services* [1997] A.D.R.L.J. 401; HOK Sport Ltd v Aintree Racecourse Co Ltd [2002] EWHC 3094 (TCC), [2003] B.L.R. 155; Great Western Trains Co Ltd v Network Rail Infrastructure Ltd [2010] EWHC 117 (Comm) at [89]; Sylvia Shipping Co Ltd v Progress Bulk Carriers Ltd [2010] EWHC 542 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 81 at [88]; Dolphin Tanker SRL v Westport Petroleum Inc [2010] EWHC 2617 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 550 at [29]–[30]. cf. Kershaw Mechanical Services Ltd v Kendrick Construction Ltd [2006] EWHC 727 (TCC), [2006] 4 All E.R. 79 at [45]; White Young Green Consulting v Brooke House Sixth Form College [2007] EWHC 2018 (TCC) at [25].
- ^{765.} Demco Investments & Commercial SA v SE Banken Forsakring Holding Aktiebolag [2005] EWHC 1542 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 650 at [35]–[48]; Surefire Systems Ltd v Guardian ECL Ltd [2005] EWHC 1860 (TCC), [2006] Build. L.R. 534; London Underground Ltd v Citylink Telecommunications Ltd [2007] EWHC 1749 (TCC), [2007] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 694; House of Fraser Ltd v Scottish Widows Plc [2011] EWHC 2800 (Ch); Guangzhou Dockyards Co Ltd v ENE Aegiali I [2010] EWHC 2826 (Comm), [2011] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 595. See (before the Act) Mondial Trading Co GmbH v Gill & Duffus Zuckerhandels-gesellschaft mbH [1980] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 376, 379; Hayn Roman & Co SA v Cominter (UK) Ltd [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 458, 462; Bulk Oil (Zug) AG v Sun International Ltd [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 531, 533; Athens Cape Naviera SA v Deutsche Dampfschiffahrtsgesellschaft Hansa AG [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 528, 531–532; Universal Petroleum Co Ltd v Handels und Transport GmbH, above; Geogas SA v Trammo Gas Ltd [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 215, 217. But see (no evidence) Edwards v Bairstow [1956] A.C. 14; Pioneer Shipping Ltd v BTP Tioxide Ltd (The Nema) [1982] A.C. 724, 752; Antaios Compania Naviera SA v Salen Rederiana AB (The Antaios) [1985] A.C. 191, 205; CMA CGM SA v KGMS "Northern Pioneer" [2002] EWCA Civ 1878, [2003] 1 W.L.R. 1015, at [28]. cf. Benaim (UK) Ltd v Davies Middleton & Davies Ltd [2005] EWHC 1370 (TCC); CTI Group Inc v Transclear SA [2007] EWHC 2340 (Comm), [2007] 2 C.L.C. 530.
- ^{766.} s.70(6), (7), (8).
- ^{767.} North Range Shipping Ltd v Seatrans Shipping Corp (The Western Triumph) [2002] EWCA Civ 405, [2002] 1 W.L.R. 2397. cf. Mousaka Inc v Golden Seagull Maritime Inc [2002] 1 W.L.R. 295.
- ^{768.} Latvian Shipping Co v Russian People's Insurance Co [2012] EWHC 1412 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 181.
- ^{769.} ¶s.69(7). cf. Loon Navigation Corp v Sinochem International Petroleum (Bahamas) Co Ltd [2002] EWHC 2812, [2003] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 405; Vrinera Marine Co Ltd v Eastern Rich Operations Inc [2004] EWHC 1752 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 465 at [15]. There is no reason why the judge who granted permission to appeal on a point of law cannot hear the substantive appeal: L v A [2016] EWHC 1789 (Comm) at [4]–[8].
- ^{770.} Bulfracht (Cyprus) Ltd v Boneset Shipping Co Ltd [2002] EWHC 2292 (Comm), [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 681; Newfield Construction Ltd v Tomlinson [2004] EWHC 3051 (TCC), (2004) 97 Const. L.R. 148; Alphapoint Shipping Ltd v Rotem Amfert Negev Ltd [2004] EWHC 2232, [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 23.
- ^{771.} Alphapoint Shipping Ltd v Rotem Amfert Negev Ltd, above, at [5]–[7].
- ^{772.} Alphapoint Shipping Ltd v Rotem Amfert Negev Ltd, above, at [7].
- ^{773.} s.69(1).
- ^{774.} See above, para.32-005.
- ^{775.} Anglo African Energy Corp Ltd v Olieprodukten Nederland NV [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 419; Marine Contractors Inc v Shell Petroleum Development Co of Nigeria [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 77; Sanghi Polyesters (India) v International Investor (KCFC) (Kuwait) [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 480 (ICC rules); Sumukan Ltd v Commonwealth Secretariat [2006] EWHC 304 (Comm), [2007] EWCA Civ 243, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 87 (Com Sec rules). Contrast Shell Egypt West Manzala GmbH v Dana Gas Egypt Ltd [2009] EWHC 2097 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 109

(UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules 1976).

- 776. s.69(1).
- 777. Essex CC v Premier Recycling Ltd [2007] Build. L.R. 233; but see s.69(3)(d), above, para.32-167. See also Shell Egypt West Manzala GmbH v Dana Gas Egypt Ltd [2009] EWHC 2097 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 109, ("final conclusive and binding").
- 778. Sumukan Ltd v Commonwealth Secretariat [2006] EWHC 304 (Comm), [2007] EWCA Civ 243, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 87; see above, para.32-017.
- 779. s.52(4). In maritime and some other arbitrations reasons may, by agreement, be set out in a separate "confidential" document and not in the award: see above, para.32-165.
- 780. This replaced s.1(5) of the Arbitration Act 1979. (Considered by the Court of Appeal in Universal Petroleum Co Ltd v Handels und Transport GmbH [1987] 1 W.L.R. 1178). But s.70(4) extended the courts' ability to order reasons beyond appeal on a point of law to applications under ss.67, 68. See JFS (UK) Ltd v South West Water Services Ltd (1998) 65 Const. L.R. 157; Petroships Pte Ltd v Petec Trading and Investment Corp [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 348, 357; Alphapoint Shipping Ltd v Rotem Amfert Negev Ltd [2004] EWHC 2232 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 23 at [5]; Margulead Ltd v Exide Technologies [2004] EWHC 1019 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 324 at [41]–[42]; Van der Giessen de-Noord Shipbuilding Division BV v Imtech Marine & Offshore BV [2008] EWHC 2904 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 273 at [14]. cf. Navios International Inc v Sangamon Transportation Group [2012] EWHC 166 (Comm), [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 493 (order not necessary).
- 781. Universal Petroleum Co Ltd v Handels und Transport GmbH, above, at 1194; Granges Aluminium AB v The Cleveland Bridge and Engineering Co, The Times, May 15, 1990 CA.
- 782. Navios International Inc v Sangamon Transportation Group, above, at [26].
- 783. Navios International Inc v Sangamon Transportation Group, above, at [24].
- 784. The Gay Fidelity [1982] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 469, 470; Warde v Feedex International Inc [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 310, 314, [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 289; Trave Schiffahrtsgesellschaft mbH v Ninemia Maritime Corp [1986] Q.B. 802; Universal Petroleum Co Ltd v Handels und Transport GmbH, above, at 1194; Gebr Van Weelde Scheepvaart Kantoor BV v Société Industrielle d'Acide, etc. [1986] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 435; Kansa General Insurance Co Ltd v Bishopsgate Insurance Plc [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 503, 511; JFS (UK) Ltd v South West Water Services Ltd, above.
- 785. s.70(5).
- 786. Schiffahrtsagentur Hamburg Middle East Line GmbH v Virtue Shipping Corp [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 533, 539; Bulk Oil (Zug) AG v Sun International Ltd (No.2) [1984] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 531, 533.
- 787. Interbulk Ltd v Aiden Shipping Co Ltd [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 424, 429, [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 66; Mafracht v Patries Shipping Co SA [1986] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 405, 414; Universal Petroleum Co Ltd v Handels und Transport GmbH [1987] 1 W.L.R. 1178; Mustill and Boyd at p.541. See also Hayn Roman & Co SA v Cominter (UK) Ltd [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 458, 462; Bulk Oil (Zug) AG v Sun International Ltd (No.2), above, at 533; Athens Cape Naviera SA v Deutsche Dampschiffahrtsgesellschaft Hansa AG [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 528.
- 788. Three Valleys Water Committee v Binnie and Partners (1990) 52 Build. L.R. 42.
- 789. s.70(2); CPR Pt 62, PD 62.11; Groundshire v VHE Construction [2001] Build. L.R. 395; Al Hadha Trading Co v Tradigrain SA [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 512; Torch Offshore LLC v Cable Shipping Inc [2004] EWHC 787 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 446; Sinclair v Woods of Winchester Ltd [2005] EWHC 1631 (QB), (2005) 102 Const. L.R. 127; Bulk Ship Union SA v Clipper Bulk Shipping Ltd [2012] EWHC 2595 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 533 at [31]–[32]; cf. Gbangbola v Smith & Sherriff Ltd [1998] 3 All E.R. 730; World Trade Corp v C Czarnikow Sugar Ltd [2004] EWHC 2332 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 422; Ases Havacilik Servis ve

Destek Hizmetleri AS v Delkor UK Ltd [2012] EWHC 3518 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 254 at [19]–[24]; A Ltd v B Ltd [2014] EWHC 1870 (Comm). See above, para.32-143 and Buyuk Camlica Shipping Trading and Industry Co Inc v Progress Bulk Carriers Ltd [2010] EWHC 442 (Comm), [2011] Bus. L.R. D99.

790.

¶s.70(3); Westland Helicopters Ltd v Sheikh Salah al-Hejailan (No.1) [2004] EWHC 1625 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 523; Thyssen Canada Ltd v Mariana Maritime SA [2005] EWHC 219 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 640; Sinclair v Woods of Winchester Ltd, above; UR Power GmbH v Kuok Oils and Grains Pte Ltd [2009] EWHC 1940 (Comm), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 495 at [58] and PEC Ltd v Asia Golden Rice Ltd [2012] EWHC 846 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 82 (two-tier arbitration). It is a moot point whether the extended time for appeal under s.70(2)(a) or applies to an application under s.57 as well: see Surefire Systems Ltd v Guardian ECL Ltd [2005] EWHC 1860 (TCC), [2005] B.L.R. 534; Price v Carter [2010] EWHC 1451 (TCC). In Essar Oilfield Services Ltd v Norscot Rig Management Pvt Ltd [2016] EWHC 2361 (Comm), [2016] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 481 at [90]–[93] the Court held that if the award is corrected pursuant to s.57, the 28 day time period runs from the date of the corrected award, provided that the application to correct is material to the issue being raised by the application to the Court. An application is material if it is necessary to enable the party to know whether he or she has grounds to challenge the award or not. It is unclear when time would start running if the application to correct the award is refused. See also K v S [2015] EWHC 1945 (Comm), [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 363. An application or appeal may also be struck out for want of prosecution: Huyton SA v Jakil Spa [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 82.

791.

s.80(5), CPR rr.3.1, 3.9; Dubai Islamic Bank pjsc v Paymentech Merchant Services Inc [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 65, 75; Aoot Kalmneft v Glencore International AG [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 128, 134; Peoples Insurance Co of China v Vysanthi Shipping Co Ltd [2003] EWHC 1655 (Comm), [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 616; Thyssen Canada Ltd v Mariana Maritime SA, above; Sinclair v Woods of Winchester Ltd, above; Elektrim SA v Vivendi Universal SA [2007] EWHC 11 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 693 at [72]; PEC Ltd v Asia Golden Rice Ltd [2012] EWHC 846 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 82; Terna Bahrain Holding Co WLL v Al Shamsi [2012] EWHC 3283 (Comm), [2013] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 580; London Steam Ship Owners Mutual Insurance Association Ltd v Spain (The Prestige) [2013] EWHC 2840 (Comm), [2014] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 300.

792.

¶In Aoot Kalmneft v Glencore International AG, above, Colman J. (at 137) set out six considerations which, in his judgment, were likely to be material to the exercise by the court of its power to extend time (applied in Nagusina Naviera v Allied Maritime Inc [2002] EWCA Civ 1147, [2003] 2 C.L.C. 1; Gold Coast Ltd v Naval Gijon SA [2006] EWHC 1044 (Comm), [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 400 (s.79 application); DDT Trucks of North America Ltd v DDT Holdings Ltd [2007] EWHC 1542 (Comm), [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 213; Colliers International Property Consultants v Colliers Jordan Lee Jafaar Sdn Bhd [2008] EWHC 1524 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 396; L Brown & Sons Ltd v Crosby Homes (North West) Ltd [2008] EWHC 817 (TCC), [2008] Build. L.R. 366; ASM Shipping Ltd of India v TTMI Ltd of England [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 293n; UR Power GmbH v Kuok Oils and Grains Pte Ltd [2009] EWHC 1940 (Comm), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 495 at [62], [63]; Broda Agro Trade (Cyprus) Ltd v Alfred C Toepfer International Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 1100, [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 243; Chantiers de L'Atlantique SA v Gaztransport & Technigaz SAS [2011] EWHC 3383 (Comm) at [63]; Nestor Maritime SA v Sea Anchor Shipping Co Ltd [2012] EWHC 996 (Comm); PEC Ltd v Asia Golden Rice Ltd [2012] EWHC 846 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 82 at [21]; Terna Bahrain Holding Co WLL v Al Shamsi [2012] EWHC 3283 (Comm), [2013] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 580 at [27]–[34]; London Steam Ship Owners Mutual Insurance Association Ltd v Spain (The Prestige) [2013] EWHC 2840 (Comm), [2014] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 300; K v S [2015] EWHC 1945 (Comm); Dundas (2012) 78 Arbitration (3) 293. In S v A [2016] EWHC 846 (Comm), [2016] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 604, at [26], the Court applied the test laid down in Terna Bahrain Holding Company WLL v Al Shamsi, because it was common ground that it should do so, but questioned whether such a test should continue to apply in light of the Court's more recent decision in Denton v TH White Ltd [2014] EWCA Civ 906, [2014] 1 W.L.R. 3926.

793.

s.73(2); see above, para.32-156.

794.

¶Wicketts v Brine Builders [2001] C.I.L.L. 1805; Essar Oilfield Services Ltd v Norscot Rig

Management Pvt Ltd [2016] EWHC 2361 (Comm), [2016] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 481 at [78]–[85].

795.

❗ Gater Assets Ltd v NAK Naftogaz Ukrainiy [2007] EWCA Civ 988, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 588 at [79]; Broda Agro Trade (Cyprus) Ltd v Alfred C Toepfer International GmbH [2010] EWCA Civ 1100, [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 243; Sovarex SA v Romero Alvarez SA [2011] EWHC 1661 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 320 at [12]–[15]; Sierra Fishing Co Ltd v Mohamed [2015] EWHC 140 (Comm) at [72]; Frontier Agriculture Ltd v Bratt Bros (A Firm) [2015] EWCA Civ 611 is reported at [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 500; A v B [2016] EWHC 3003 (Comm), [2017] 1 W.L.R. 2030 at [50]–[63].

796.

s.73(1); Rustal Trading Ltd v Gill & Duffas SA [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 14, 19; Hussman (Europe) Ltd v Al Ameen Development & Trade Co [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 83, 91; Athletic Union of Constantinople v National Basketball Association [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 305, 311; Peterson Farms Inc v C&M Farming Ltd [2004] EWHC 121 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 603; JSC Zestafoni G Nikoladz Ferroalloy Plant v Ronly Holdings Ltd [2004] EWHC 245 (Comm) 2004, [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 335; Westland Helicopters Ltd v Sheikh Salah al-Hejailan (No.1) [2004] EWHC 1625 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 523; Vee Networks Ltd v Econet Wireless International Ltd [2004] EWHC 2909 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 192; Margulead Ltd v Exide Technologies [2004] EWHC 1019 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 324; Thyssen Canada Ltd v Mariana Maritime SA [2005] EWHC 219 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 640; ASM Shipping Ltd of India v TTMI Ltd of England [2005] EWHC 2238 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 375, [2006] EWCA Civ 1341, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 136; Primetrade AG v Ythan Ltd [2005] EWHC 2399 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 457; Sinclair v Woods of Winchester Ltd [2005] EWHC 1631 (QB), [2005] 102 Const. L.R. 127; Sumukan Ltd v Commonwealth Secretariat (No.2) [2007] EWCA Civ 1148, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 40; ASM Shipping Ltd v Harris [2007] EWHC 1513 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 61; Stern Settlement Trustees v Levy [2007] EWHC 1187 (TCC), (2007) 113 Const. L.R. 92; Colliers International Property Consultants v Colliers Jordan Lee Jafaar Sdn Bhd [2008] EWHC 1524 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 396; Nestor Maritime SA v Sea Anchor Shipping Co Ltd [2012] EWHC 996 (Comm); Habas Sinai Ve Tibbi Gazlav Istihsal Endustrisi AS v VSC Steel Co Ltd [2013] EWHC 4071 (Comm), [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 479 at [81]–[87]. See also above, paras 32-102, 32-158, 32-164, 32-168.

797.

[2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 14, 19, 20. See also JSC Zestafoni G Nikoladz Ferroalloy Plant v Ronly Holdings Ltd, above, at [63]–[64]. But see Sumukan Ltd v Commonwealth Secretariat (No.2), above, at [36]; Ases Havacilik Servis ve Destek Hizmetleri AS v Delkor UK Ltd [2012] EWHC 3518 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 254.

798.

❗ s.70(5), (6); CPR r.25. Azov Shipping Co v Baltic Shipping Co [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 39; Republic of Kazakhstan v Istil Group Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 1468, [2006] 1 W.L.R. 596; Peterson Farms Inc v C & M Farming Ltd [2003] EWHC 2298 (QB), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 614; Moondance Maritime Enterprises SA v Carbofer Maritime Trading APS [2012] EWHC 3618 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 269; X v Y [2013] EWHC 1104 (Comm), [2013] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 230; Konkola Copper Mines Plc v U&M Mining Zambia Ltd [2014] EWHC 2374 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 649; Erdenet Mining Corp LLC v ICBC Standard Bank Plc [2017] EWHC 1090 (Comm), [2017] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 25.

799.

s.70(7); Merkin, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn, 346–348. cf. Peterson Farms Inc v C & M Farming Ltd [2003] EWHC 2298 (QB), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 614; Tajik Aluminium Plant v Hydro Aluminium AS [2006] EWHC 1135 (Comm); Moondance Maritime Enterprises SA v Carbofer Maritime Trading APS [2012] EWHC 3618 (Comm), [2013] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 269 at [9]; X v Y [2013] EWHC 1104 (Comm), [2013] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 230; Konkola Copper Mines Plc v U&M Mining Zambia Ltd [2014] EWHC 2374 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 649. But see A v B [2010] EWHC 3302 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 363 (differing requirements for s.70(7) with respect to applications under s.67 on the one hand and ss.68, 69 on the other).

800.

s.71(2).

801.

s.71(3).

802.

Interbulk Ltd v Aiden Shipping Co Ltd [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 410.

- 803. Huyton SA v Jakil SpA [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 83 (on s.22 of the 1950 Act).
- 804. See above, para.32-048.
- 805. s.71(4).
- 806. See Senior Courts Act 1981 s.18(1)(g), as substituted by s.107(1) and Sch.3 para.37, of the Arbitration Act 1996.
- 807. ss.67(4), 68(4).
- 808.  Athletic Union of Constantinople v National Basketball Association (No.2) [2002] EWCA Civ 830, [2002] 1 W.L.R. 2863; ASM Shipping Ltd of India v TTMI Ltd of England [2006] EWCA Civ 1341, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 136; Republic of Kazakhstan v Istil Group Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 471, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 548; Integral Petroleum Ltd v Melars Group Ltd [2016] EWCA Civ 108, [2016] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 141. But the Court of Appeal could set aside permission to appeal under CPR r.52.9.
- 809. This does not infringe art.6 of the European Convention on Human Rights: ASM Shipping Ltd of India v TTMI Ltd of England, above; Republic of Kazakhstan v Istil Group Ltd, above: see above, para.32-017.
- 810. s.69(6). But a decision that the parties had entered into an exclusion agreement (para.32-171, above) is not within s.69(6); Sumukan Ltd v Commonwealth Secretariat [2007] EWCA Civ 243, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 87.
- 811. CMA CGM SA v KGMS "Northern Pioneer" [2002] EWCA Civ 1878, [2003] 1 W.L.R. 1015 at [12]–[13], reflecting s.1(6A) of the Arbitration Act 1979: The Antaios [1985] A.C. 191, 205; Petraco (Bermuda) Ltd v Petromed International Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 896, 899.
- 812. Aden Refinery Co Ltd v Ugland Management Co Ltd [1987] Q.B. 650.
- 813. s.69(8).
- 814. s.69(8). But only the court (and not the Court of Appeal) can give leave. s.69(8) is unaffected by s.55 of the Access to Justice Act 1999: Henry Boot Construction (UK) Ltd v Malmaison Hotel (Manchester) Ltd [2001] Q.B. 388 CA. A decision that the parties had entered into an exclusion agreement (para.32-171, above) is not within s.69(8): Sumukan Ltd v Commonwealth Secretariat, above.
- 815. This does not infringe art.6 of the European Convention on Human Rights: CGU International Insurance Plc v Astrazeneca Insurance Co Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 1340, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 142; see above, para.32-017.
- 816. ss.12(6), 17(4), 18(5), 21(6), 24(6), 25(5), 32(6), 42(5), 44(7), 45(5), 50(5), 56(7), 77(4), 79(6).
- 817. Cetelem SA v Roust Holdings Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 618, [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 494 at [28]. cf. Shuttari v Solicitors' Indemnity Fund [2007] EWCA Civ 244, [2007] 1 C.L.C. 303.
- 818. Aden Refinery Co Ltd v Ugland Management Co Ltd, above, at p.666.
- 819. North Range Shipping Ltd v Seatrans Shipping Corp [2002] EWCA Civ 405, [2002] 1 W.L.R. 2397 at [44]; CGU International Insurance Plc v Astrazeneca Insurance Co Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 1340, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 142 at [45]–[47]; Republic of Kazakhstan v Istil Group Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 417, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 548 at [30]–[31]; Bunge SA v Kyla Shipping Co Ltd [2013] EWCA Civ 734, [2013] 3 All E.R. 1006. See also BLCT (13096) Ltd v J Sainsbury Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 884, [2004] 2 P. & C.R. 3.
- 820.  Senior Courts Act 1981 s.16. In Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd v Emmott [2015] EWCA Civ

1285, [2016] 1 W.L.R. 857 the Court explained the nature of the Court's jurisdiction. See also Integral Petroleum Ltd v Melars Group Ltd [2016] EWCA Civ 108, [2016] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 141 at [25]–[31].

821.

¶arts 3, 6, 8; see above, para.32-017. See also Yegiazaryan v Smagin [2016] EWCA Civ 1290, [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 102 at [26].

822.

CGU International Insurance Plc v Astrazeneca Insurance Co Ltd, above, at [58]–[63]; Republic of Kazakhstan v Istil Group Ltd, above, at [32].

823.

This section replaced s.26 of the Arbitration Act 1950. It is mandatory.

824.

s.66(1). See CPR r.62.18 and Sch.2 para.11 (judge-arbitrator); Norwich Union v Whealing Horton & Toms [2008] EWHC 370 (TCC); African Fertilizers and Chemicals Nig Ltd v BD Shipsnavo GmbH & Co Reederi KG [2011] EWHC 2452, [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 53 (declaration); West Tankers Inc v Allianz SpA [2012] EWCA Civ 27, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 398 (negative declaration); Mobile Telesystems Finance SA v Nomihold Securities Inc [2011] EWCA Civ 140, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 6. Part of an award may be enforced where the remaining balance has been duly satisfied: Continental Grain Co v Bremer Handelsgesellschaft mbH (No.2) [1984] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 121, 124.

825.

s.66(2). Judgment must be entered in the same terms as the award: Norsk Hydro ASA v The State Property Fund of the Ukraine [2002] EWHC 2120 (Comm). The court has no power to add interest under s.35A of the Senior Courts Act 1981 to a sum awarded by the arbitral tribunal which remains unpaid after the award: Walker v Rowe [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 116; Sonatrach v Statoil Natural Gas LLC [2014] EWHC 875 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 252; cf. Yukos Capital SARL v OJSC Oil Co Rosneft [2014] EWHC 2188 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 435. But, where judgment is entered under s.66(2) or s.101(3) in terms of the award, the obligation to pay interest follows from the power of the court under s.17 of the Judgments Act 1838: Gater Assets Ltd v Nak Naftogaz Ukrainiy (No.3) [2008] EWHC 1108 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 294; Sonatrach v Statoil Natural Gas LLC [2014] EWHC 875 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 252 (s.66); Nigerian National Petroleum Corp v IPCO (Nigeria) Ltd (No.2) [2008] EWCA Civ 1157, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 89 (on s.101(3)).

826.

ASM Shipping Ltd of India v TTMI Ltd of England (No.2) [2007] EWHC 927 (Comm), [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 155 at [26]. cf. Mobile Telesystems Finance SA v Nomihold Securities Inc [2011] EWHC Civ 1040, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 6 at [10]. See also National Ability SA v Tinna Oils and Chemicals Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 1330, [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 222 at [10], [14] (limitation).

827.

s.66(3). See Sovarex SA V Romero Alvarez SA [2011] EWHC 1661 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 320 (power to determine disputed issues of fact).

828.

s.73; above, paras 32-102, 32-156, 32-175. But see Dallah Real Estate & Tourism Co v Ministry of Religious Affairs of the Government of Pakistan [2010] UKSC 46, [2010] 1 A.C. 763 at [98]; London Steam Ship Owners Mutual Insurance Association Ltd v Spain (The Prestige) [2013] EWHC 2840, [2014] 1 All E.R. 300 (defendant does not participate in the arbitration).

829.

Middlemiss & Gould v Hartlepool Corp [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1643 (not following Re Boks & Co and Peters Rushton & Co Ltd [1919] 1 K.B. 491, 497); Curacao Trading Co BV v Harkisandas & Co [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 186, 192.

830.

See above, para.32-020.

831.

Soleimany v Soleimany [1999] Q.B. 785 (illegality). cf. R v V [2008] EWHC 1531 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 97. See s.81(1)(c).

832.

Margulies Brothers Ltd v Dafaris Thomsides & Co (UK) Ltd [1958] 1 W.L.R. 398, 404.

833.

Jugoslovenska Oceanska Plovidba v Castle Investment Co Inc [1974] Q.B. 292 (approved in Miliangos v George Frank Textiles Ltd [1976] A.C. 443). The date for conversion into sterling of the award was said in the former case to be the date of the award, but in the latter case (at 469) it was suggested that conversion could be made on the date that leave to enforce was given.

- 834. Dalmia Cement Ltd v National Bank of Pakistan [1975] Q.B. 9. But see Dalmia Dairy Industries Ltd v National Bank of Pakistan [1978] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 223 (action for damages); and Bank Mellat v GAA Development and Construction Co [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 44, 55 (requirement not part of award).
- 835. s.2(2)(b).
- 836. Gater Assets Ltd v NAK Naftogaz Ukrainiy [2007] EWCA Civ 988, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 588. But see Diag Human SE v Czech Republic [2013] EWHC 3190 (Comm), [2014] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 605.
- 837. Apis AS v Fantazia Kereskedelmi KFT [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 348; Socadec SA v Pan Afric Impex Co Ltd [2003] EWHC 2086 (QB); Broda Agro Trade (Cyprus) Ltd v Alfred C Toepfer International GmbH [2009] EWHC 3318 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 533 at [70] (affirmed [2010] EWCA Civ 1100, [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 243). cf. Y v S [2015] EWHC 612 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 703.
- 838. See Mustill and Boyd at p.417.
- 839. See above, para.32-025.
- 840. Walshaw v Brighthouse Corp [1899] 2 Q.B. 286.
- 841. Thorburn v Barnes (1867) L.R. 2 C.P. 384; Oppenheim & Co v Majomed Janeef [1922] 1 A.C. 482; Scrimaglio v Thornett and Fehr (1924) 131 L.T. 174.
- 842. s.69; above, para.32-167.
- 843. s.68; above, para.32-162.
- 844. ss.70, 73; above, paras 32-164, 32-168, 32-175; Birtley and District Co-operative Soc Ltd v Windy Nook and District Co-operative Soc Ltd (No.1) [1959] 1 W.L.R. 142.
- 845. Brown v Genossenschaft Oesterreichischer Waldbesitzer R GmbH [1954] 1 Q.B. 8.
- 846. Bremer Oeltransport GmbH v Drewry [1993] 1 K.B. 753, 764; FL Bloemen Pty Ltd v City of Gold Coast Council [1973] A.C. 115, 126; The Bumbesti [2000] Q.B. 559, 566.
- 847. The Bumbesti, above, at 566. See also CPR r.62.18(6) and Colliers International Property Consultants v Colliers Jordan Lee Jafaar Sdn Bhd [2008] EWHC 1524 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 368 at [19].
- 848. The Bumbesti, above, at 566.
- 849. The Beldis [1936] P. 51; The Bumbesti, above (not following The Santa Anna [1983] 1 W.L.R. 895).
- 850. Cruz City 1 Mauritius Holdings v Unitech Ltd [2013] EWHC 1323 (Comm), [2013] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 1137. See also below, para.32-193.
- 851. Cruz City 1 Mauritius Holdings v Unitech Ltd [2014] EWHC 3704 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 181. But see Cruz City 1 Mauritius Holdings v Unitech Ltd [2014] EWHC 3131 (Comm), [2015] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 336 (receiver).
- 852. See ss.2(2)(b), 104 and Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn, para.16–099.

853. An award is to be treated as made at the seat of the arbitration (see above, para.32-140) regardless of where it was signed, despatched or delivered to any of the parties: s.100(2)(b).
854. For a list of contracting states, see <http://www.newyorkconvention.org> and <http://www.uncitral.org>.
855. ! See ss.66(4), 100–104 and Government of the State of Kuwait v Sir Frederick Snow and Partners [1984] A.C. 426; Agromet Motoimport v Maulden Engineering (Beds) Ltd [1985] 1 W.L.R. 762; Bank Mellat v GAA Development and Construction Co [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 44. cf. Deutsche Schachtbau-und Tiefbohrergesellschaft mbH v R'as al-Khaimah National Oil Co [1990] 1 A.C. 295; Soleh Boneh International Ltd v Government of Uganda [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 208; Minmetals German GmbH v Ferco Steel Ltd [1999] 1 All E.R. Comm. 315; Norsk Hydro ASA v The State Property Fund of Ukraine [2002] EWHC 2120 (Comm); Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn, para.16–128; CPR r.62.18. In Pencil Hill Ltd v US Citta Di Palermo SpA Unreported, January 19, 2016 at [30], the Court said that there is a strong leaning towards the enforcement of foreign arbitral awards and the circumstances in which the English Court may refuse enforcement are narrow. In this case, the Court allowed the enforcement of an award which included a penalty. For procedure, see Lombard Knight v Rainstorm Pictures Inc [2014] EWCA Civ 356, [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 74. The court retains jurisdiction in relation to challenge to or appeal from an award (ss.67–69) if the seat of arbitration is in England (or, as the case may be Northern Ireland): s.2(1) and Hiscox v Outhwaite [1992] 1 A.C. 562. A judgment entered in terms of the award under s.101(3) carries interest under s.17 of the Judgments Act 1838; Gater Assets Ltd v Nak Naftogaz Ukrainiy (No.3) [2008] EWHC 1108 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 295; Sonatrach v Statoil Natural Gas LLC [2014] EWHC 875 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 252.
856. Arbitration Act 1950 Sch.1.
857. Arbitration Act 1950 Sch.2.
858. Arbitration Act 1996 ss.66(4), 99; Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn, para.16–100; CPR Pt 62; DAC Report para.346.
859. For a list of such countries, see <http://www.lexisnexis.com/uk/lexispsl/disputeresolution/home>.
860. ! Administration of Justice Act 1920 s.12(1); Foreign Judgments (Reciprocal Enforcement) Act 1933 s.10A (added by Civil Jurisdiction and Judgments Act 1982 Sch.10 para.4); Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Law, 15th edn, para.16–161; CPR r.62.20. See also LR Avionics Technologies Ltd v Federal Republic of Nigeria [2016] EWHC 1761 (Comm), [2016] 4 W.L.R. 120 at [24]–[27].
861. Arbitration (International Investment Disputes) Act 1966 ss.1, 2; Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency Act 1988 s.4; Carriage of Goods by Road Act 1965 ss.4(1), 7(1) and Sch.; Arbitration Act 1996 s.66(4) and Sch.3 paras 21, 24, 49; Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn, paras 16–161, 16–172; CPR r.62.21.
862. ! For the closed list of cases in which recognition or enforcement of a New York Convention award may be refused, see s.103 of the 1996 Act and Rosseel NV v Oriental Shipping (UK) Ltd [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 625; China Agrebusiness Development Corp v Balli Trading [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 76; Soinco Saci v Novokuznetsk Aluminium Plant [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 337; Westacre Investments Ltd v Jugoimport-SPDR Holding Co Ltd [2000] Q.B. 288; Soleimany v Soleimany [1999] Q.B. 785; Minmetals German GmbH v Ferco Steel Ltd [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 315; Omnium de Traitement SA v Hilmarion Ltd [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 222; Eco Swiss China Time Ltd v Benetton International NV [1999] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 44 ECJ; Irvani v Irvani [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 412; ABCI v Banque Franco-Tunisienne [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 511, 538; Dardana Ltd v Yukos Oil Co [2002] EWCA Civ 543, [2002] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 326; Reeves v One World Challenge LLC [2005] NZCA 314; Svenska Petroleum Exploration AB v Government of the Republic of Lithuania [2005] EWHC 9 (Comm), [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 515; Ipco (Nigeria) Ltd v Nigerian National Petroleum Ltd [2005] EWHC 726 (Comm), [2005] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 326;

Kanoria v Guinness [2006] EWCA Civ 222, [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 701; Tamil Nadu Electricity Board v ST-CMS Electric Co Private Ltd [2007] EWHC 1713 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 93; Gater Assets Ltd v NAK Naftogaz Ukrainiy (No.2) [2008] EWHC 237 (Comm), [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 479; AC Ward & Sons Ltd v Catlin (Five) Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 1098; Dallah Real Estate & Tourism Co v Ministry of Religious Affairs of the Government of Pakistan [2010] UKSC 46, [2011] 1 A.C. 763; Norsk Hydro ASA v State Property Fund of Ukraine [2002] EWHC 2120 (Admin), [2009] Bus. L.R. 558; Nigerian National Petroleum Corp v IPCO (Nigeria) Ltd (No.2) [2008] EWCA Civ 1157, [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 89 (enforcement in part); HJ Heinz Co Ltd v EFL Inc [2010] EWHC 1203 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 727; Yukos Capital SARL v OJSC Rosneft Oil Co [2012] EWCA Civ 855, [2013] 1 All E.R. 223; Honeywell International Middle East Ltd v Meydan Group LLC [2014] EWHC 1344 (TCC), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 133; Diag Human SE v Czech Republic [2014] EWHC 1639 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 283; IPCO (Nigeria) Ltd v Nigerian National Petroleum Corp [2015] EWCA Civ 1144, [2016] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 5; [2015] EWCA Civ 1145, [2016] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 36 (supplementary judgment); Lombard Knight v Rainstorm Pictures Inc [2014] EWCA Civ 356, [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 74; Travis Coal Restructured Holdings LLC v Essar Global Fund Ltd [2014] EWHC 2510 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 414; Malicorp Ltd v Egypt [2015] EWHC 361 (Comm), [2015] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 423; Sinocore International Co Ltd v RBRG Trading (UK) Ltd [2017] EWHC 251 (Comm), [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 375; Stati v Republic of Kazakhstan [2017] EWHC 1348 (Comm). But the court has power under s.103(5) to adjourn the decision on enforcement and to order security: see Soleh Boneh International Ltd v Government of Uganda [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 208; Dardana Ltd v Yukos Oil Co, above; Apis AS v Fantazia Kereskedelmi [2001] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 348; Ipco (Nigeria) Ltd v Nigerian National Petroleum Ltd, above; Gater Assets Ltd v NAK Naftogaz Ukrainiy [2007] EWHC 697 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 522; Nigerian National Petroleum Corp v IPCO (Nigeria) Ltd (No.2), above; Dowans Holding SA v Tanzania Electric Supply Co Ltd [2011] EWHC 1957 (Comm), [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 474; IPCO (Nigeria) Ltd v Nigerian National Petroleum Corp [2015] EWCA Civ 1144, [2016] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 5; [2015] EWCA Civ 1145, [2016] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 36 (supplementary judgment); Travis Coal Restructured Holdings LLC v Essar Global Fund Ltd [2014] EWHC 2510 (Comm), [2014] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 414. In IPCO (Nigeria) Ltd v Nigerian National Petroleum Corp [2017] UKSC 16, [2017] 1 W.L.R. 970 the Supreme Court held that there was nothing in s.103(2) or (3) which provided that an enforcing court could make the decision of an issue raised under that subsection conditional on the provision of security in respect of the award (unlike s.103(5)).

863. Far Eastern Shipping Co v AKP Sovcomflot [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 520.

864. State Immunity Act 1978 s.9.

865.  Svenska Petroleum Exploration AB v Government of the Republic of Lithuania (No.2) [2006] EWCA Civ 1529, [2007] Q.B. 886; Norsk Hydro ASA v State Property Fund of Ukraine [2002] EWHC 2120 (Admin), [2009] Bus. L.R. 558; London Steam Ship Owners Mutual Insurance Association Ltd v Spain (No.2) [2015] EWCA Civ 333, [2015] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 33; Taurus Petroleum Ltd v State Oil Marketing Company of the Ministry of Oil, Republic of Iraq [2013] EWHC 3494 (Comm), [2014] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 942; Gold Reserve Inc v Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela [2016] EWHC 153 (Comm), [2016] 1 W.L.R. 2829; LR Avionics Technologies Ltd v Federal Republic of Nigeria [2016] EWHC 1761 (Comm), [2016] 4 W.L.R. 120. This is a distinct question from that of immunity from execution: see Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn, para.10–014. See above para.12–021.

866. s.18(2)(e) (definition of “judgment”) and Schs 6 or 7. See Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn, para.16–157; Shone (2005) 71 Arbitration 46.

867. Arab Business Consortium International Finance and Investment Co v Banque Franco-Tunisienne [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 485; affirmed [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 531. The same will now apply in the case of art.1(2)(d) of Regulation (EU) 1215/2012 which has replaced the Brussels Convention.

868. Ministry of Trade of the Republic of Iraq v Tsaviris Salvage (International) Ltd [2008] EWHC 612 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 90. But see Rosseel NV v Oriental Commercial Shipping (UK) Ltd [1990] 1 W.L.R. 1387 (world-wide freezing order refused where award foreign). A freezing order ought ordinarily to contain an “ordinary course of business” exception: Mobile

Telesystems Finance SA v Nomihold Securities Inc [2011] EWCA Civ 1040, [2012] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 6. See also above, para.32-188.

- 869. cf. Deutsche Schachtbau-und Tiefbohrgesellschaft mbH v R'as al-Khaimah National Oil Co [1990] 1 A.C. 295.
- 870. Limitation Act 1980 s.7. But see (extension of the period) Vol.I, Ch.28, and see the Foreign Limitation Periods Act 1984, Vol.I, para.30-348.
- 871. International Bulk Shipping and Services Ltd v Minerals and Metals Trading Corp of India [1996] 1 All E.R. 1017.
- 872. International Bulk Shipping and Services Ltd v Minerals and Metals Trading Corp of India [1996] 1 All E.R. 1017. But see Agromet Motoimport v Maulden Engineering Co (Beds) Ltd [1985] 1 W.L.R. 762 (date of defendant's failure to honour award when called upon to do so); Good Challenger Navigante SA v Metalexportimport SA [2003] EWCA Civ 1668, [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 67 at [9] (date of defendant's breach of implied obligation to pay the award); National Ability SA v Tinn Oils and Chemicals Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 1330, [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 222 at [4] (date the award should have been paid).
- 873. ED & F Man Sugar Ltd v Lendoudis [2007] EWHC 2268 (Comm), [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 579 at [53].

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 32 - Arbitration ¹

Section 12. - Miscellaneous

Arbitration and exemption clauses compared 32-195

An arbitration clause differs from an exemption clause in that it is inserted as machinery for settling disputes and is not a term which excludes or restricts the liability of one or both parties. ⁸⁷⁴ Accordingly, it is not to be treated as an exemption clause at common law, ⁸⁷⁵ nor is an agreement in writing to submit present or future disputes to arbitration subject to the control of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977. ⁸⁷⁶ However, arbitration clauses may in some circumstances be detrimental to the interests of consumers in that legal aid is not available for arbitration proceedings, and such proceedings may involve greater expense than, e.g. proceedings in the county court. Moreover, the arbitration agreement may provide for the appointment of an arbitrator designated by the supplier of the goods or services to the consumer. In consequence, the application of the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 and (for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015) Pt 2 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 ⁸⁷⁷ is extended in relation to a term which constitutes an arbitration agreement. ⁸⁷⁸

Valuers, experts, etc

32-196

An agreement to refer a price to a valuer or a question to an expert for decision is, as a general rule, ⁸⁷⁹ not an arbitration agreement ⁸⁸⁰ and the provisions of the Arbitration Act 1996 do not apply. ⁸⁸¹ A valuation or expert's certificate cannot be challenged or appealed as if it were an award ⁸⁸² nor can it be enforced as if it were a judgment of a court. Nevertheless the court has, under its inherent jurisdiction, a discretionary power to stay an action brought contrary to a dispute resolution agreement which is nearly an effective agreement to arbitrate, but not quite, ⁸⁸³ or which submits the dispute to the decision of an expert. ⁸⁸⁴ The court also has jurisdiction to determine an issue of construction before the valuer or expert has made his decision, ⁸⁸⁵ but must be satisfied that the issue is a real one (and not hypothetical) and that it is in the interests of justice and convenience to determine the matter itself rather than allowing the expert to determine it first. ⁸⁸⁶

32-197

The function of an architect in certifying payments due under a building contract from the employer to the contractor is not to be equated with that of an arbitrator. ⁸⁸⁷

32-198

A person appointed in an agreement as "sole judge" of matters of fact is not an arbitrator. His decision is binding and not reviewable, provided that he acts fairly and not perversely in making his determination. ⁸⁸⁸

Adjudication

32-199

⚠ The Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Act 1996 ⁸⁸⁹ provides that a party to a construction contract ⁸⁹⁰ has the right to refer a dispute arising under the contract for adjudication under a procedure provided by the Act. ⁸⁹¹ The purpose of this measure is to establish, in the construction industry, a procedure for the speedy and inexpensive resolution of disputes on a provisional interim basis, and for enabling the adjudicator's decisions to be enforced pending the final determination of such disputes. ⁸⁹² ⚠ But adjudication differs from arbitration in that it does not involve a final disposal of the dispute between the parties. The adjudicator does not perform an arbitral function ⁸⁹³ and does not make any final award definitive of the parties' rights. His decision is, however, binding until the dispute is finally determined by legal proceedings, by arbitration or by agreement. ⁸⁹⁴ But it cannot be enforced as if it were an arbitral award. ⁸⁹⁵ Adjudication is dealt with in Ch.37 of this book. ⁸⁹⁶

Mediation

32-200

Mediation (or conciliation) is distinct from arbitration. The role of the mediator or conciliator is to make proposals for a settlement and not to render an award. He assists the parties in their attempt to reach an amicable settlement of their dispute. It is inadvisable, if the mediation fails, for the mediator to become an arbitrator (a process known as "Med/Arb"). There are too many obstacles, with respect to the need for impartiality and a fair hearing, for a mediator to change roles and re-appear as an arbitrator.

Immunity of arbitrators and arbitral institutions, etc

32-201

At common law, the extent of the immunity of an arbitrator was not free from doubt. ⁸⁹⁷ Section 29 of the 1996 Act resolved that uncertainty. ⁸⁹⁸ An arbitrator is not liable for anything done or omitted in the discharge or purported discharge of his functions as arbitrator unless the act or omission is shown to have been in bad faith, and the same immunity attaches to his employees or agents. ⁸⁹⁹ This immunity does not affect any liability incurred by an arbitrator by reason of his resigning. ⁹⁰⁰

32-202

A similar immunity attaches to an arbitral institution or person responsible for the appointment or nomination of an arbitrator in the discharge or purported discharge of its function in that respect. ⁹⁰¹ Nor is such an institution or person vicariously liable for the acts or omissions of the arbitrator nominated or appointed. ⁹⁰²

32-203

On the other hand, a valuer, expert or adjudicator enjoys no statutory immunity. A valuation or expert certification which is made negligently may give rise to an action in damages at the suit of the party injured thereby. ⁹⁰³ An adjudicator, however, is under the terms of the construction contract to have immunity (subject to an exception in case of bad faith) in the discharge or purported discharge of his functions. ⁹⁰⁴

1. For a more detailed account of arbitration, and practice and procedure, the reader should consult: Merkin, Arbitration Law (2007); Merkin and Flannery, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Russell on Arbitration, 24th edn (2015); Tweeddale and Tweeddale, Arbitration of Commercial Disputes, 2nd edn (2012); Harris, Planterose and Tecks, Arbitration Act 1996, 5th edn (2014); Mustill and Boyd, Commercial Arbitration, 2nd edn (1989) and Supplement (2001); Redfern and Hunter, Law and Practice of International Arbitration, 5th edn (2009); Park, Arbitration of International Business Disputes, 2nd edn (2012).

- 874. Heyman v Darwins Ltd [1942] A.C. 356, 373–375, 400; Woolf v Collis Removal Service [1948] 1 K.B. 11.
- 875. Woolf v Collis Removal Service, above. But see above, para.32-075 n.292.
- 876. s.13(2); Kaye v Nu Skin UK Ltd [2009] EWHC 3509 (Ch), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 40.
- 877. See below, para.38-276.
- 878. See above, para.32-013.
- 879. cf. Re Carus-Wilson and Greene (1886) 18 Q.B.D. 7, 9; Leigh v English Property Corp Ltd [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 298 and above, para.32-021.
- 880. Re Dawdy and Hartcup (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 426; Re Carus-Wilson and Greene, above. See also Leeds v Burrows (1810) 12 East 1; Goodyear v Simpson (1845) 15 M. & W. 16; Re Hammond and Waterton (1890) 62 L.T. 808; Campbell v Edwards [1976] 1 W.L.R. 403; Arenson v Arenson [1977] A.C. 405; Wilky Property Holdings Plc v London & Surrey Investments Ltd [2011] EWHC 2226 (Ch).
- 881. Collins v Collins (1858) 26 Beav. 306; Bos v Helsham (1866) L.R. 2 Ex. 72; Turner v Goulden (1873) L.R. 9 C.P. 57; Re Dawdy and Hartcup, above; Re Hammond and Waterton, above; Cott (UK) Ltd v FE Barber Ltd [1997] 3 All E.R. 540; British Telecommunications Plc v SAE Group Inc [2009] EWHC 252 (TCC), [2009] B.L.R. 231.
- 882. Campbell v Edwards, above; Baber v Kenwood Manufacturing Co [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 175. For the limited grounds, and method of impeaching a valuation or expert's certificate, see, e.g. Collier v Mason (1858) 25 Beav. 200; Finnegan v Allen [1943] K.B. 425; Dean v Prince [1954] Ch. 409; Frank H Wright (Construction) Ltd v Frodoor [1967] 1 W.L.R. 506; Jones (H) v Jones (RR) [1971] 1 W.L.R. 840, 856; Smith v Gale [1974] 1 W.L.R. 9; Campbell v Edwards, above; Baber v Kenwood Manufacturing Co, above; Burgess v Purchase & Sons (Farms) Ltd [1983] Ch. 216; Jones v Sherwood Computer Services Plc [1992] 1 W.L.R. 277; Nikko Hotels (UK) v MEPC (1991) 28 E.G. 86; Pontsarn Investments v Kasallis-Osako-Pankki (1992) 22 E.G. 103; Mercury Communications Ltd v Director General of Communications [1996] 1 W.L.R. 48, 58; British Shipbuilders v VSEL Consortium Plc [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 106, 109; Shell UK Ltd v Enterprise Oil Plc [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 456, 469; Galaxy Energy International Ltd (PVI) v Eurobunter SpA [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 912; Veba Oil Supply and Trading GmbH v Petrotrade Inc [2001] EWCA Civ 1832, [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 295; Invensys Plc v Automotive Sealing Systems Ltd [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 222; Bernhard Schulte GmbH & Co KG v Nile Holdings Ltd [2004] EWHC 977 (Comm), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 352; Barclays Bank Plc v Nylon Capital LLP [2011] EWCA Civ 826, [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 347; see also below, para.44-053. But the court has power to order the expert to give further reasons for his determination: Halifax Life Ltd v Equitable Life Assurance Socy [2007] EWHC 503 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 528. See also Homepage Ltd v SITA South East Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 1 (criticised by Dundas (2008) 74 Arbitration 188); Owen Pell Ltd v Bindi (London) Ltd [2008] EWHC 1420 (TCC), [2008] Build. L.R. 436.
- 883. Channel Tunnel Group Ltd v Balfour Beatty Construction Ltd [1993] A.C. 334. cf. Halifax Financial Services Ltd v Intuitive Systems Ltd Unreported, December 21, 1998.
- 884. Cott (UK) Ltd v FE Barber Ltd [1997] 3 All E.R. 540; Thames Valley Power Ltd v Total Gas & Power Ltd [2005] EWHC 2208 (Comm), [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 441 at [43].
- 885. Barclays Bank Plc v Nylon Capital LLP [2011] EWCA Civ 826, [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 347.

- 886. Mercury Communications Ltd v Director General of Communications [1994] C.L.C. 1125, 1140 CA, [1996] 1 W.L.R. 48 (HL); Barclays Bank Plc v Nylon Capital LLP above, at [42]; Wilky Property Holdings Plc v London & Surrey Investments Ltd [2011] EWHC 2226 (Ch). cf. British Shipbuilders v VSEL Consortium Plc, above, at 109.
- 887. Sutcliffe v Thackrah [1974] A.C. 727. cf. John Barker Construction Ltd v London Portman Hotel Ltd (1996) 12 Const. L.J. 277.
- 888. West of England Ship Owners Mutual Insurance Assn (Luxembourg) v Cristal [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 370.
- 889. As amended by the Local Democracy, Economic Development and Construction Act 2009 Pt 8: see SI 2011/1569 (c.58), SI 2011/1582 (c.59).
- 890. Defined in s.104(1).
- 891. ss.108 (as amended), 114; Scheme for Construction Contracts (England and Wales) Regulations 1998 (SI 1998/649). See below, para.37-264.
- 892.  Macob Civil Engineering Ltd v Morrison Construction Ltd [1999] Build. L.R. 93. See also MBE Electrical Contractors Ltd v Honeywell Control Systems Ltd [2010] EWHC 2244 (TCC), [2010] B.L.R. 561 (party seeking to refer jurisdictional issues concerning adjudicator to arbitration: stay refused). In RMC Building & Civil Engineering Ltd v UK Construction Ltd [2016] EWHC 241 (TCC), [2016] B.L.R. 264 at [56], the Court said that the provisions introduced by the 1996 Act and the Scheme are all about maintaining cash flow.
- 893. A Cameron Ltd v John Mowlem & Co Plc (1990) 52 Build. L.R. 30; Drake and Scull Engineering Ltd v McLaughlin & Harvey Plc (1992) 60 Build. L.R. 107. cf. Cape Durasteel Ltd v Rosser & Russell Building Services Ltd (1996) 46 Const. L.J. 75.
- 894. Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Act 1996 s.108(3). But the parties may agree to accept the decision of the adjudicator as finally determining the dispute.
- 895. A Cameron Ltd v John Mowlem & Co Plc, above. But it can be enforced by an application for summary judgment or possibly under s.42 of the 1996 Act: see para.24 of Pt I of the 1998 Regulations, above, and Macob Civil Engineering Ltd v Morrison Construction Ltd, above; see also below, para.37-267.
- 896. See below, paras 37-263—37-270.
- 897. Arenson v Arenson [1977] A.C. 405, 431, 432, 440, 442.
- 898. It is a mandatory provision: s.4(1) and Sch.1.
- 899. s.29(1)(2). See (1996) 62 Arbitration 202.
- 900. s.29(3). But see s.25; above, para.32-097.
- 901. s.74(1), (3). This will, it is submitted, include a decision by an arbitral institution whether to accept or decline to administer an arbitration: see Global Gold Mining LLC v Peter M Robinson 533 F. Supp. 2d 442 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).
- 902. s.74(2)(3).
- 903. Sutcliffe v Thackrah [1974] A.C. 727; Arenson v Arenson [1977] A.C. 405.
- 904. Housing Grants Construction and Regeneration Act 1996 s.108(4).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 33 - Bailment

Section 1. - In General ¹

Definition of bailment

33-001

In many respects bailment “stands at the point at which contract, property and tort converge”. ² It is a subject which it is difficult both to classify and to define. Indeed, it is easier to give examples of bailment than to define its scope. A simple example of a bailment is a contract of hire of goods. Possession of the goods is handed over to someone who is not their owner and that person (“the bailee”) is subject to certain obligations in relation to the goods which obligations are owed to their owner (“the bailor”). At a high level of abstraction, it can be said that bailment “denotes a separation of the actual possession of goods from some ultimate or reversionary possessory right”. ³ Possession is therefore central to bailment ⁴; its essence involves the transfer of possession of a chattel ⁵ to the bailee ⁶ (or the acquisition ⁷ of possession by him) so that the bailee becomes subject to certain obligations in relation to the goods and in turn is entitled to possessory remedies (such as trespass or conversion) against all strangers, and even, in many cases, against the bailor himself. ⁸

Bailment and contract

33-002

The relationship between bailment and contract is a close one, hence the inclusion of bailment within this volume. Many bailments arise out of, or are founded upon, a contract between the bailor and the bailee, as in the case of a contract of hire. ⁹ For many years it was believed that bailment was founded on contract so that the existence of a valid and enforceable contract was an essential pre-requisite to the creation of a bailment. ¹⁰ This view no longer holds good today. It is now clear that a contract is not essential for bailment. ¹¹ The clearest illustration is a gratuitous bailment, ¹² where it is clear that the bailment is independent of the law of contract. ¹³ Other illustrations can be found. ¹⁴ Thus a bailment created by contract is not necessarily terminated by the contract coming to an end ¹⁵ and, conversely, the withdrawal by the bailor of consent to the bailee continuing in possession of the goods does not necessarily operate to terminate the contractual relationship which exists between bailor and bailee. ¹⁶ There may also be a valid bailment even though the contract from which it arises is invalid or voidable, as where the bailee is a minor, ¹⁷ or where the bailee obtains goods by false pretences. ¹⁸ Bailment cannot be explained entirely in contractual terms for the further reason that a bailment is more than a contract in that possession, a proprietary interest less than ownership, is transferred to, or acquired by, the bailee ¹⁹ and many remedies in tort and crime become available to the bailee because he enjoys possession.

Bailment and consent

33-003

The contractual analysis of bailment was replaced by an analysis of bailment which sought to explain it in what might be called consensual terms. Thus Pollock and Wright famously stated that:

“Any person is to be considered as a bailee who otherwise than as a servant ²⁰ either receives possession of a thing from another or consents to receive or hold possession of a thing for another upon an understanding with the other person either to keep and return or deliver to him the specific thing or to (convey and) apply the specific thing according to the directions antecedent or future of the other person.” ²¹

While this statement continues to be cited in the courts, ²² the attempt to explain bailment entirely in consensual terms has “been overtaken by events” ²³ because it now seems clear that the creation of a bailment does not require the consent of the bailor. ²⁴ While it is true that in many, if not most cases, the bailor does consent to the bailee taking possession of the goods, cases can be found in which the bailor clearly does not consent to the bailee taking possession of the goods but a bailment is nevertheless found to exist (where, for example, the finder of a chattel is held to be a bailee notwithstanding the fact that the bailor was wholly unaware of the intervention of the bailee ²⁵ or where the bailor does not consent to a sub-bailment or the terms of a sub-bailment but is nevertheless held to be bound by it). ²⁶

Bailment and tort

33-004

The demise of the consent theory of bailment may herald a move towards the law of tort and the eventual absorption of bailment into the mainstream of the law of tort. It is suggested that this is an unlikely development. Although liability in tort and in bailment may overlap ²⁷ the two sources of liability are in fact independent and the “common law liabilities of a bailee ... appear both independent of, and significantly different from, those that would apply under the general law of tort”. ²⁸ The clearest example of this is the fact that the burden of proof in a negligence case rests upon the claimant, whereas in a bailment case the burden of proof is upon the bailee to show that he has discharged his duties. ²⁹ Although liability in tort and in bailment are conceptually distinct, the failure of parliamentary draftsmen to recognise a distinct head of liability based on breach of bailment has meant that, in some contexts, the courts have construed a reference to “tort” as including a reference to “breach of bailment”. ³⁰ On the other hand, claims by a bailor against his bailee which are based on breach of bailment (e.g. breach of his common law duty of care) ³¹ may not fall within the overall category of “wrongful interference with goods” defined in s.1 of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977. ³² Each case turns on the construction of the particular statute and, while in some cases the courts have strained for instrumental reasons to encompass a bailment action within the fold of tort, the cases cannot be used to construct a more general argument in support of the assimilation of bailment to tort. They are authority only in relation to the particular statute under consideration.

Bailment and property ³³

33-005

As has been noted, a transfer of possession to the bailee is an essential pre-requisite of a bailment and possession, of course, constitutes a proprietary interest. Thus it can be said that a bailment creates or gives rise to a property interest but it cannot be said that bailment lies in the law of property and not in the law of obligations. While a bailment gives rise to proprietary rights (viz possessory rights which may be vindicated against a third party or, indeed, against the bailor himself), it also creates personal rights and obligations and these rights and obligations cannot be located within the law of property. Although the language of the law of trusts is employed in many of the early definitions of bailment, there are in fact many distinctions between a bailment and a trust, ³⁴ e.g. trusts may cover realty as well as personalty; the beneficiary under a trust has an equitable interest only, whereas a bailee has a legal interest (viz various possessory rights); a trustee has the legal title or ownership, and so has power to convey a good title to a bona fide purchaser for value, whereas the bailee has only possessory rights.

No one unifying theory

33-006

The reality of the matter is that there is no one theory which seems to be capable of providing a comprehensive definition of bailment. It consists of an amalgam of different ideas.³⁵ Thus, “the judicial analysis of bailment seems to have reached the stage at which any person who voluntarily assumed possession of goods belonging to another would be held to owe at least the principal duties of the bailee at common law”.³⁶ Within this broad definition of bailment, certain key ideas can be identified. The first is that the bailee must be in possession of the goods. The second is that there must have been a “voluntary assumption” of possession; in other words, the consent of the bailee is necessary. The third is that the bailee must be aware of the existence of the bailor.³⁷ Finally, it would appear that it is no longer necessary that the bailor consent to the bailee taking possession of the goods; a bailment can exist even when the bailor is unaware of the fact that the bailee has possession of his goods.

Bailment and statute

33-007

Notwithstanding the claim which bailment has to recognition as an independent source of obligations, statute has consistently refused to recognise the independence of bailment. One consequence of this has been that the courts have been compelled to squeeze bailment claims into legislation designed to regulate other categories of liability, principally contract and tort. A classic example of this phenomenon is provided by the law relating to limitation of actions. There is no limitation period prescribed for bailment claims and so the courts have applied the limitation periods for contract or tort. Whether the claim is brought in contract or in tort, the bailor cannot sue to recover the thing bailed more than six years after his cause of action accrued.³⁸ The regulation of the limitation period applicable to contractual claims is dealt with in Vol.I.³⁹ Where the claim is brought by the bailor in conversion, the cause of action accrues at the date of conversion, irrespective of the bailor's knowledge of the conversion.⁴⁰ If there have been successive conversions (or wrongful detentions) of the same chattel, the period of limitation runs from the original conversion.⁴¹ If the bailee has fraudulently concealed the bailor's right of action, the period of limitation runs from the time the fraud was discovered, or could by reasonable diligence have been discovered.⁴² If the bailor fails to commence an action to recover the chattel before the expiration of the period of limitation, both his right of action and his title to the chattel are extinguished.⁴³

Classification of bailments

33-008

Roman law has had considerable influence on the English law of bailment⁴⁴ and in the leading authority of *Coggs v Bernard*⁴⁵ Holt C.J. classified bailments into six classes by analogy with Roman law. Other writers⁴⁶ have reduced the number of classes in their classifications, and in the present chapter a simple classification into two classes will be adopted: (a) gratuitous bailments; and (b) bailments for valuable consideration.⁴⁷ In the first category, some bailments are for the benefit of the bailor (e.g. deposit and mandate), while some are for the benefit of the bailee (e.g. gratuitous loan for use); similarly in the second category the valuable consideration may be received either by the bailee (e.g. custody) or by the bailor (e.g. hire for use). The Court of Appeal has held that there is no difference between these two classes of bailments as far as the standard of care required of the bailee is concerned: whether the bailment is gratuitous or for reward, the bailee must take reasonable care of the chattel according to the circumstances of the particular case.⁴⁸ (The fact that the bailment is gratuitous is, however, a relevant circumstance.⁴⁹) The existence of the duty, and the standard of care required, are to be judged objectively.⁵⁰ The classification into the two classes is retained in this chapter because other aspects of the relationship between bailor and bailee vary from one type of bailment to the other, e.g. exemption clauses may operate contractually if the bailment is for reward; and the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982⁵¹ applies to many contractual bailments, but not to gratuitous bailments. There appears to be no advantage in making a more complicated classification than that based on the twofold division proposed above. Bailment in contracts of carriage will be considered in Chs 35 and 36, below, and hire-purchase agreements in Ch.39, below. Before turning to a consideration of this twofold division, it is necessary to explore in more detail the significance of possession and related matters.

-
1. On bailment in general, see Palmer on Bailment, 3rd edn (2009); N. Palmer, English Private Law, 3rd edn (Oxford, 2013), Ch.16; Bell, Modern Law of Personal Property in England and Ireland (1989); Paton, Bailment in the Common Law (1952); Jones on Bailments, 4th edn (1833); Story on Bailments, 9th edn (1878); Wyatt Paine, Bailments (1901); Laidlaw (1930-1931) 16 Corn. L.Q. 286; Bell, Interests in Goods, 2nd edn (1998), p.461. For a more sceptical view of bailment, see McMeel [2003] L.M.C.L.Q. 169 where he concludes (at 199) that bailment is, at best, a “useful shorthand for all those situations where there is a transfer of possession of tangible personal property short of outright sale”.
 2. Palmer on Bailment (hereafter, Palmer) at para.1-001.
 3. Palmer at para.1-001.
 4. Palmer at para.1-001.
 5. The law of bailment is confined to personal chattels. See Palmer at paras 1-006—1-009.
 6. Winfield, Province of the Law of Tort (1931), pp.101-102; Tay (1966) 5 Sydney L. Rev. 239. See also Fairline Shipping Corp v Adamson [1975] Q.B. 180, 189-190 (defendant did not have exclusive possession of the goods at the relevant time and thus was not bailee of them) and Kamidian v Holt [2008] EWHC 1483 (Comm), [2009] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 242 (physical custody by employee was only fleeting and for the purposes of handling; it did not amount to a transfer of possession so that the employee was not a bailee of the goods). On attornment, see below, para.33-030. cf. Stoljar (1958) 21 M.L.R. 27 and see below, para.44-239. A person may leave a chattel on another's premises without transferring possession to the latter: see below, para.33-061.
 7. In some circumstances the bailee “acquires” possession without any “transfer” of possession, e.g. bailment by finding a lost chattel (below, para.33-037); involuntary bailment (below, para.33-036); or where a seller continues in possession pending delivery to the buyer (below, paras 44-212 et seq.). So the relationship of bailment may arise without the bailor having consented to the bailee having possession of the goods: The Pioneer Container [1994] 2 A.C. 324, 341-342. But the bailee must have had some knowledge of the existence of his bailor: Marcq v Christie, Manson & Woods Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 731, [2004] Q.B. 286 at [49]-[50].
 8. Holmes, The Common Law (1882), p.175. See below, paras 33-019, 33-024.
 9. Sandeman Coprimar SA v Transitos y Transportes Integrales SL [2003] EWCA Civ 113, [2003] Q.B. 1270 at [63] (“the principles of the law of bailment have always overlapped with those of the law of contract, for bailment and contract often go hand in hand”).
 10. See, for example, R. v Ashwell (1885) 16 Q.B.D. 190, 223; Banbury v Bank of Montreal [1918] A.C. 626, 657; Rosenthal v Alderton and Sons Ltd [1946] 1 All E.R. 583, 584.
 11. East West Corp v DKBS 1912 and Akts Svendborg [2003] EWCA Civ 83, [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239 at [24]; Yearworth v North Bristol NHS Trust [2009] EWCA Civ 37, [2010] Q.B. 1 at [48].
 12. See below, paras 33-032 et seq.
 13. See, for example, Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716, 731-732; Hedley Byrne & Co Ltd v Heller & Partners Ltd [1964] A.C. 465, 526.
 14. See further Palmer at paras 1-027—1-035.
 15. Laidlaw (1930-1931) 16 Corn. L.Q. 286, 292. See Steljes v Ingram (1903) 19 T.L.R. 534 and below, paras 39-330—39-341.

- 16. Perdana Properties Bhd v United Orient Leasing Co Sdn Bhd [1981] 1 W.L.R. 1496.
- 17. R. v McDonald (1885) 15 Q.B.D. 323. See further Palmer at para.1-027. cf. Mills v Graham (1804) 1 Bos. & Pul. 140; Fawcett v Smethurst (1914) 31 T.L.R. 68; and Ballett v Mingay [1943] K.B. 281.
- 18. London Jewellers Ltd v Attenborough [1934] 2 K.B. 206.
- 19. Bristol Airport Plc v Powdrill [1990] Ch. 744 (the lessee's interest under a chattel lease was "property" within s.436 of the Insolvency Act 1986).
- 20. An employee obtains mere custody (not possession) of his employer's goods entrusted to his control: Pollock and Wright at pp.58-60; Kamidian v Holt [2008] EWHC 1483 (Comm), [2009] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 242 at [77]. This exception in favour of a servant does not extend to agents, especially in the commercial sphere: The Rigoletto [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 532, 539
- 21. Possession in the Common Law (1888), p.163. The distinction between a consensual bailment and a contractual bailment was noted by Lord Sumption J.S.C. in ENE Kos 1 Ltd v Petroleo Brasileiro SA (No.2) [2012] UKSC 17, [2012] 2 A.C. 164 at [20].
- 22. See, for example, Sutcliffe v Chief Constable of West Yorkshire [1996] R.T.R. 86, 90.
- 23. Palmer at para.1-036.
- 24. The Pioneer Container [1994] 2 A.C. 324. The context of the decision of the Privy Council was whether or not it was necessary for the bailor to have consented to the terms on which the bailee was prepared to assume possession, but the reasoning seems equally applicable to the case where the issue is whether or not the bailor was prepared to allow the bailee to assume possession at all. However, it has been stated that it is the consent of the bailee, rather than the bailor, which is fundamental: East West Corp v DKBS 1912 and Akts Svendborg [2003] EWCA Civ 83, [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239 at [24]; Kamidian v Holt [2008] EWHC 1483 (Comm), [2009] Lloyd's Rep. I.R. 242 at [76].
- 25. Palmer at para.1-037.
- 26. The Pioneer Container [1994] 2 A.C. 324.
- 27. See below, paras 33-010—33-014.
- 28. Palmer at para.1-047. For example, in the case of a gratuitous bailment, it does not follow from the fact that the bailment is not contractual that the liability of the bailee must lie in tort. The liability of the bailee is best seen as being sui generis: Yearworth v North Bristol NHS Trust [2009] EWCA Civ 37, [2010] Q.B. 1 at [48].
- 29. See, e.g. British Road Services Ltd v Arthur V Crutchley & Co Ltd [1968] 1 All E.R. 811, 822. Further examples of the differences between an action in bailment and an action in tort are provided by Palmer at paras 1-048—1-071.
- 30. American Express Co v British Airways Board [1983] 1 W.L.R. 701 (s.29(1) of the Post Office Act 1969 which provided that "no proceedings in tort shall lie against the Post Office ..." in respect of loss or damage to mail): cf. Chesworth v Farrar [1967] 1 Q.B. 407 (see below, para.33-007 n.38).
- 31. See below, paras 33-032, 33-049. See also below, para.33-026 (text at n.127).
- 32. See Palmer (1978) 41 M.L.R. 629. cf. Harold Stephen & Co Ltd v Post Office [1977] 1 W.L.R. 1172, 1177-1178, 1179-1180.

33. See Palmer at paras 1-106—1-130.
34. e.g. Paton at pp.5-6; Palmer at paras 3-089 and 32-001—32-002. Although there are many differences between bailment and trust, the relationship between a bailor and bailee may nonetheless be fiduciary in nature; Matthew v TM Sutton Ltd [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1455 (see below, para.33-144 n.891).
35. It is largely on this basis that bailment is attacked as a “redundant” concept by McMeel [2003] L.M.C.L.Q. 169. A more charitable view is that the law has simply become more complex as new variations on the basic model of bailment are developed. In TRM Copy Centres (UK) Ltd v Lanwall Services Ltd [2009] UKHL 35, [2009] 1 W.L.R. 1375 Lord Hope of Craighead (at [10]-[11]) noted the different ways in which bailments can be classified, and that many examples of bailments do not fit precisely into any particular category, but it was not necessary for him to resolve these classificatory issues in order to decide the case and he did not do so. The label which the parties have attached to their relationship is not decisive, so the fact that the parties have expressly stated that there is no bailment cannot in itself resolve the question of the existence or otherwise of a bailment.
36. Palmer at para.1-041.
37. Marcq v Christie, Manson & Woods Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 731, [2004] Q.B. 286 at [49]-[50].
38. Limitation Act 1980 ss.2, 5. The period may be extended in certain circumstances: ss.1(2), 28-33. See Vol.I, paras 28-072 et seq. The old rule that an “action in tort” lay against the estate of a deceased tortfeasor only if proceedings were brought not later than six months after his personal representatives took out representation was later repealed by s.1 of the Proceedings Against Estates Act 1970; under the former rule, it had been held that a claim against the estate of a deceased bailee in respect of his obligations as bailee at common law was (despite the existence of a contract giving rise to the bailment) in substance “a cause of action in tort”: Chesworth v Farrar [1967] 1 Q.B. 407.
39. See Ch.28, above.
40. RB Policies at Lloyds v Butler [1950] 1 K.B. 76. Before the abolition of detinue (see below, para.33-010) the action was held to accrue upon the refusal to return the chattel: Miller v Dell [1891] 1 Q.B. 468. See now below, paras 33-011, 33-014.
41. Limitation Act 1980 s.3(1) (reversing, on this point, Spackman v Foster (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 99, and Miller v Dell, above). The effect of s.3 is uncertain in regard to Wilkinson v Verity (1871) L.R. 6 C.P. 206; cf. Beaman v ARTS Ltd [1948] 2 All E.R. 89, 93; reversed on another point: [1949] 1 K.B. 550.
42. Limitation Act 1980 s.32; Beaman v ARTS Ltd, above.
43. Limitation Act 1980 s.3(2).
44. Paton, History of Bailment).
45. (1703) 2 Ld. Raym. 909.
46. Palmer at Ch.3; Story at para.3; Jones, 1st edn, at pp.35, 36. The five-fold classification adopted in Jones and the six-fold classification adopted by Holt C.J. in Coggs v Barnard (1703) 2 Ld. Raym. 909 was referred to by Lord Hope of Craighead in TRM Copy Centres (UK) Ltd v Lanwall Services Ltd [2009] UKHL 35, [2009] 1 W.L.R. 1375 at [10]-[11]. However, it was not necessary for him to choose between the different classificatory schemes and he did not do so.
47. There may be bailment “for reward” without a special payment being made in respect of the bailment: see below, para.33-057.
48. Houghland v RR Low (Luxury Coaches) Ltd [1962] 1 Q.B. 694, 698; Sutcliffe v Chief Constable of West Yorkshire [1996] R.T.R. 86, 90. (A similar duty of care “that which may reasonably be expected of him in all the circumstances”, applies in the analogous situation of a gratuitous agent: Chaudhry v Prabhakar [1989] 1 W.L.R. 29). cf. Hunt & Winterbotham (West of England) Ltd v BRS (Parcels) Ltd [1962] 1 Q.B. 617; Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716, 737. cf. also below, para.33-032 nn.158 and 166.

49. Paton at p.110.

50. Chaudhry v Prabhakar, above (an analogous case). If the defendant represents himself as possessing a particular skill or experience, on which the claimant reasonably relies, he will be held to it.

51. See below, para.33-044.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 33 - Bailment
Section 2. - Possession and Related Matters

Possession, not ownership

33-009

A conveyance which transfers both possession and ownership to the transferee cannot be a bailment. The essence of bailment is the transfer of possession, not ownership. The fact that possession is transferred to the bailee is of significance both in terms of the relationship between the bailor and the bailee and in terms of its impact on the relationship between the bailor and third parties and between the bailee and third parties. The impact of the transfer of possession and not ownership on the various parties is considered in the following paragraphs.

The obligation to return the goods

33-010

In the first place, the fact that the bailee is given possession of the goods and not ownership means that he cannot keep the goods. They must be returned to the bailor at the end of the period of the bailment. The bailee is therefore normally ⁵² under an obligation to return the bailed chattel to the bailor at the end of the period of the bailment, ⁵³ unless he can show good cause for not returning it. ⁵⁴ Before the tort of detinue was abolished in 1977, ⁵⁵ the bailee was liable in detinue at the suit of the bailor where the bailee had unequivocally ⁵⁶ and wrongfully refused or failed to comply with the bailor's demand for the return of the chattel. ⁵⁷ Detention by the bailee, after a demand by the bailor and a refusal to return on the part of the bailee, could also be evidence of a denial of the bailor's title, which would entitle the bailor to sue in conversion. ⁵⁸ Since the 1977 Act, it has been held that a refusal to permit the bailor to enter the bailee's premises in order to collect the chattel is conversion. ⁵⁹

Section 2(2) of the 1977 Act

33-011

Section 2(2) of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 now provides that: "An action lies in conversion for loss or destruction of goods which a bailee has allowed to happen in breach of his duty to his bailor (that is to say it lies in a case which is not otherwise conversion, but would have been detinue before detinue was abolished)". Before this subsection, there was considerable overlap between the scope of detinue and that of conversion but that overlap was not complete; in particular, it was not clear that conversion could encompass all cases of wrongful detention of goods by the bailee. Section 2(2) now extends the scope of conversion to cover many of these cases. In order to establish liability for wrongful detention of goods, there must have been deliberate withholding of the goods or interference with them ⁶⁰ and such conduct is commonly, but not invariably, found in a demand for the goods followed by their retention. ⁶¹ Although the demand and the refusal need not be express, they must be unequivocal ⁶²: for example, in an appropriate case, an unequivocal refusal may be inferred from a delay in responding to a demand beyond a reasonable time. ⁶³ But it has been argued ⁶⁴ persuasively that in many situations in which a bailor could previously have claimed in detinue, he could also have claimed in contract, or for breach of his common law rights as bailor, and that these claims fall outside the scope of s.2.

Accidental loss of goods

33-012

If the bailee has wrongfully parted with the chattel ⁶⁵ or lost it by negligence, it is no defence for him to show that he is unable to return it ⁶⁶, but the accidental loss or destruction of the chattel, without default on the part of the bailee, will excuse his failure to return it. ⁶⁷ The loss of, or injury to, the chattel while it is in the bailee's possession places the onus of proof on the bailee to show that it occurred without his fault. ⁶⁸

Power of the court to order specific delivery

33-013

Although the bailor's claim against the bailee who wrongfully detains the chattel cannot now be in detinue, ⁶⁹ he may still be able to recover the chattel itself from the bailee. Section 3 of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 provides that, in proceedings for wrongful interference against a person who is in possession or in control ⁷⁰ of the goods, the court may make an order for delivery of the goods which does not give the defendant the alternative of retaining them on payment of their value as assessed by the court. ⁷¹ But the court has a discretion whether or not to make such an order, ⁷² and may impose conditions. ⁷³ The court:

"... in particular, where damages by reference to the value of the goods would not be the whole of the value of the goods, may require an allowance to be made by the claimant to reflect the difference. For example, a bailor's action against the bailee may be one in which the measure of damages is not the full value of the goods, and then the court may order delivery of the goods, but require the bailor to pay the bailee a sum reflecting the difference". ⁷⁴

Conversion of the chattel by the bailee

33-014

! In addition to his obligation to return the goods, the bailee is under a duty to his bailor not to convert the chattel, i.e. not to do intentionally in relation to the chattel an act inconsistent with the bailor's right of property in it and which excludes him from use and possession of the chattel ⁷⁵ !; thus a sale, ⁷⁶ pledge, ⁷⁷ or offering for sale, ⁷⁸ of the chattel terminates the bailment forthwith, and the immediate right to the possession of the chattel reverts in the bailor. ⁷⁹ The assessment of the bailor's damages is discussed below. ⁸⁰

Jus tertii

33-015

Given that the bailor does not transfer ownership in the chattel to the bailee, he retains a proprietary interest in the chattel. He is said to retain the "general" property in the chattel, while the bailee obtains a "special" property in it. In litigation between the bailor and the bailee, the latter was, at common law, estopped from questioning the bailor's title to the chattel bailed to him, and the bailee could not set up the title of a third person in reply to the bailor's demand for redelivery of the chattel. ⁸¹ But s.8(1) of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 abolished this rule (known as the jus tertii): "The defendant in an action for wrongful interference shall be entitled to show, in accordance with rules of court, ⁸² that a third party has a better right than the plaintiff as respects all or any part of the interest claimed by the plaintiff, or in right of which he sues, and any rule of law (sometimes called jus tertii) to the contrary is abolished".⁸³

33-016

The main effect of s.8(1) will be where the bailor is suing the bailee: an illustration would be where a warehouseman could show that, since the goods were delivered to him by the bailor, a change in their ownership had taken place so that a third party now had acquired either a partial interest in them or had become their full owner.⁸⁴ If the bailee can prove that a third party has, at the time of the suit, a partial interest in the chattel, leaving the bailor with only a partial interest, the bailor's damages recoverable from the bailee for his failure to redeliver the chattel will be, not for its full value, but only in respect of the bailor's remaining interest in it.⁸⁵ It should be noted, however, that s.8 applies only to claims for wrongful interference with goods; if the bailor sues, not in tort, but in contract or for breach of the bailee's common law obligations arising from the bailment, it appears⁸⁶ that the bailee could not avail himself of the protection of the section.⁸⁷

Avoidance of double liability

33-017

As a result of s.7 of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977, the bailee need no longer fear "double liability",⁸⁸ both to his bailor, and to a third party who can prove a better title (either full or partial) to the goods than the bailor. By s.7(2) of the Act, where two or more claimants are parties to proceedings for wrongful interference,⁸⁹ the court is to grant relief so as to avoid double liability of the wrongdoer. By s.7(3), on satisfaction of his claim, a claimant is liable to account over to another claimant to such extent as will avoid double liability; while by s.7(4), any claimant who is unjustly enriched to any extent (viz beyond the value of his own interest in the chattel) is liable to reimburse the wrongdoer to the extent of that unjust enrichment. Thus, if the bailee pays damages, first to his bailor, and then to the true owner, the bailor is unjustly enriched unless he accounts to the true owner under s.7(3); and the true owner then would be unjustly enriched and would be liable to reimburse the bailee under s.7(4).⁹⁰

Bailor's damages against the bailee⁹¹

33-018

The preceding paragraphs have dealt with the bailor's damages when a third party has an interest in the chattel. But it could be the defendant bailee himself who has an outstanding interest in the chattel, which should be deducted from the full value of the chattel when the bailor's damages are assessed,⁹² e.g. if the bailee had paid in advance for the contractual right to retain the chattel for a given period, but the bailor was entitled to terminate the bailment prematurely and to sue for damages, the assessment should allow for the value of the bailee's interest during the unexpired part of that period.⁹³ The bailor may also have remedies in restitution, e.g. to recover the proceeds of a wrongful sale by the bailee.⁹⁴

The bailee's claim against his bailor

33-019

The fact that the bailee has a possessory interest in the chattel has an impact on the bailee's remedies against the bailor and against third parties. A bailee for a term (as distinct from a bailee at will) may maintain a possessory action against the bailor himself, if the bailor interferes with the bailee's possession of the chattel during the term.⁹⁵ If the bailor wrongfully retakes possession of the chattel, the bailee may seek the exercise of the court's discretion to make an order for specific delivery of the chattel to him.⁹⁶ The bailee's damages for any wrongful interference of his possession by the bailor will reflect only the extent of the injury to the bailee's interest in the chattel.⁹⁷

The effect of bailment on third parties ⁹⁸

33-020

The impact of bailment on third parties is a complex issue. The remedies which the law makes available to protect the possessory interest of the bailee and the reversionary interest of the bailor have an obvious impact on third parties. Where the bailee himself bails the chattel to a third party, the sub-bailee, difficult issues have arisen in relation to the entitlement of the bailor to sue the third party and in relation to the entitlement of the sub-bailee to rely on the terms of the bailment between the bailor and the bailee by way of defence to the bailor's claim.

Entitlement to sue

33-021

Where the bailment is for reward and for a period to be determined in accordance with the agreed terms (as in hire or pledge) the bailee enjoys both possession and the immediate right to possession during the period; hence the bailee can, ⁹⁹ and the bailor cannot, ¹⁰⁰ sue a third person for trespass or conversion during that period. ¹⁰¹ However, if a third person destroys or permanently injures the chattel while it is in the possession of the bailee, the bailor may have an action against the third party for the injury to his reversionary interest. ¹⁰² But attempts to extend the protection of the law of torts to other interests in chattels (viz those not based on possession, or the immediate or reversionary right to possess at the relevant time) have failed. So where a third person negligently causes loss or damage to a chattel in which a claimant has only a contractual interest ¹⁰³ at the time of the loss or damage, the claimant cannot sue the third person under the tort of negligence. ¹⁰⁴

Bailment at will

33-022

Where the bailment is at will (as in gratuitous bailments) the bailor retains the immediate right to possession of the chattel, and may therefore bring an action for conversion against any stranger who wrongfully takes the chattel out of the possession of the bailee. ¹⁰⁵ The bailor at will may demand the return of the chattel at any time, and so there is a tendency to attribute "possession" to him as well, so that he may exercise the possessory remedies which are available to the possessor. ¹⁰⁶ If a bailor at will does recover damages from a tortfeasor for the loss of the chattel and for loss of its use, the bailee no longer has any claim against the tortfeasor ¹⁰⁷ but if in this situation the bailee at will has some interest in the chattel enforceable against the bailor, the latter must account appropriately to the bailee. ¹⁰⁸

Effect of act inconsistent with bailment

33-023

The bailment may be determined prematurely by the bailee dealing wrongfully with the chattel in a manner wholly inconsistent with the bailment; in this event, the immediate right to possession reverts in the bailor, who may then bring an action for conversion against any person dealing with the chattel, ¹⁰⁹ as well as against the bailee. ¹¹⁰

The bailee's claim against a third party

33-024

Since a bailment always gives the bailee possession of the chattel, he may maintain any possessory action against a stranger. ¹¹¹ As against a mere stranger, possession always imparts a better right to possession ¹¹²; hence, the bailee may also bring against such a stranger an action which is based on the immediate right to possession, such as conversion. ¹¹³ Under the common law, the bailee could recover from a stranger who destroyed or detained the chattel, damages assessed at its full value, as if he were its absolute owner. ¹¹⁴ But the third party can now avail himself of s.8(1) of the 1977 Act, and prove the outstanding interest of the bailor ¹¹⁵; if the third party fails to do so, he will be liable to the bailee for damages assessed at the full value. But in the latter situation, the operation of s.7 of the Act will ultimately prevent double recovery if the bailor (or the true owner) later also recovers damages from the third party. ¹¹⁶

Insurable interest

33-025

A bailee has an insurable interest in the goods bailed to him, and is entitled to insure them for their full value ¹¹⁷; if the insurers make a payment under such a policy, the bailee may retain so much as would cover his own interest, and is a trustee for the bailor in respect of the balance. ¹¹⁸

Sub-bailment

33-026

If, without the express or implied consent of the bailor, the bailee himself bails the chattel to a third person, the bailor might, in appropriate circumstances, have an action in tort for conversion against the third person, ¹¹⁹ as well as against the bailee ¹²⁰; if, through the negligence of the third person, the chattel is lost or damaged, the bailor may have an action in tort for negligence against the third person. ¹²¹ The bailor may, however, have given the bailee actual ¹²² or ostensible ¹²³ authority to sub-bail the chattel to the third person, in which case the mere fact that the third person has taken possession of the chattel under the sub-bailment will not constitute a tort as against the original bailor, because the latter will be taken to have consented to the sub-bailment. Such authority to sub-bail may be inferred from the parties' knowledge of ordinary commercial practices, e.g. that a carrier who carries goods over a long distance may engage a sub-contractor as his local delivery agent ¹²⁴; or that the Post Office may engage an airline to carry airmail. ¹²⁵ Where there is such actual or apparent consent to the sub-bailing, the relationship of bailment will arise directly between the original bailor and the sub-bailee ¹²⁶; hence, the original bailor may take advantage of rules of bailment against the sub-bailee, ¹²⁷ instead of relying on the ordinary rules of the law of tort. The original bailor need not rely on any contract of sub-bailment: the relationship of bailment will arise between the original bailor and the sub-bailee where the latter voluntarily received the goods from the bailee, knowing that another person "is interested in the goods". ¹²⁸ Thus, by relying on the fact that there is a sub-bailment, the original bailor need ¹²⁹ not prove a duty of care owed by the sub-bailee under the ordinary tort of negligence, since the sub-bailee will owe him all the duties of a bailee, ¹³⁰ including the duty to take reasonable care of the chattel ¹³¹; again, when the chattel is lost or damaged while in the possession of the sub-bailee, the onus of proof may be on him to show that the loss or damage occurred without any failure on his part to take reasonable care ¹³²; similarly, if the original bailor sues the sub-bailee for conversion, he need prove only that the act of the sub-bailee was wholly inconsistent with the sub-bailee's duties qua bailee or with his contractual duties under the contract of sub-bailment, ¹³³ i.e. he will not be obliged to prove conversion according to the ordinary principles of the law of tort. (But since the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 ¹³⁴ applies only where there is a contract for the supply of a service, no terms implied by that Act will affect the position of a sub-bailee vis-à-vis the head bailor, unless a contract between them is proved.)

The sub-bailee and protective clauses

33-027

There may also be advantages from the point of view of the sub-bailee in relying, as against the original bailor, on the fact that the sub-bailment was made with the actual or ostensible authority of the original bailor. Thus, by the terms of the contract of sub-bailment the sub-bailee may be protected from certain liabilities towards the original bailor if the contract of sub-bailment was made by the bailee as agent of the bailor. ¹³⁵ Even if there was no agency, so that the exempting terms do not bind the original bailor in contract (because of the lack of a contract between them), ¹³⁶ he will be bound ¹³⁷ where he has consented to them: where the original bailor consents (whether expressly, impliedly or under the principle of ostensible authority) to the bailee sub-bailing the goods, ¹³⁸ the original bailor's "rights against the sub-bailee will only be subject to terms of the sub-bailment if he has consented to them, i.e., if he has authorised the bailee to entrust the goods to the sub-bailee on those terms ... ¹³⁹ [terms which the original bailor] has actually (expressly or impliedly) or even ostensibly authorised". ¹⁴⁰ Similarly, where the original bailor consents to the bailee sub-bailing the goods on terms which include a term conferring a lien on the sub-bailee, the sub-bailee may be entitled to rely on the lien as against the original bailor. ¹⁴¹

Imposing more onerous obligations on the sub-bailee

33-028

Sub-bailment may operate to the disadvantage of the sub-bailee in the sense that some of the terms agreed between the bailee and the sub-bailee may increase the liability of the subbailee beyond that which would otherwise have arisen under the common law. The bailor may be entitled to enforce such conditions against the sub-bailee where the bailee has the consent, and thus the authority, of the bailor to enter into a sub-bailment on such terms. In such a case, "all the terms agreed between the bailee and the sub-bailee, in so far as these are applicable to the relationship of the bailor and the sub-bailee, apply as between the bailor and the subbailee". ¹⁴²

Duty of care apart from sub-bailment

33-029

Even in the absence of sub-bailment to a third person, the owner of the goods may be owed, under the tort of negligence, a duty of care by the person in actual control of the goods. Thus, where goods were agreed to be stored by a company but were in the actual control of the managing director in a store owned by him, he was held liable in tort for negligently allowing them to be damaged, despite the fact that he did not have exclusive possession of them and accordingly could not be treated as a bailee. ¹⁴³

Attornment ¹⁴⁴

33-030

If the bailor directs the bailee (e.g. a warehouseman) to hold the chattel ¹⁴⁵ in his possession ¹⁴⁶ on behalf of a third person (the claimant) and the bailee thereupon attorns to the claimant by accepting the bailor's direction, ¹⁴⁷ or by acknowledging to the claimant that the claimant now has title to the chattel, ¹⁴⁸ the bailee will become the bailee of the claimant. ¹⁴⁹ At common law, the bailee was also estopped from denying the claimant's title, but by statute the bailee may now set up the title of a third person in reply to the bailor's demand for redelivery of the chattel. ¹⁵⁰ However, a delivery order given by the bailor to a third person directing the bailee to deliver the goods to the third person is a mere authority to receive possession, and does not of itself imply an undertaking by the bailor that the bailee will deliver the goods. ¹⁵¹

Vicarious liability

33-031

The bailee is not normally the agent of the bailor, so as to render the bailor vicariously liable to a third person who is injured by the negligence or wrongful act of the bailee in the management of the thing bailed. ¹⁵² But the bailor may be so liable if the bailee is acting on behalf of the bailor as his agent and for his purposes, or the bailor retains some control over the management of the chattel. ¹⁵³

-
- ^{52.} If it is the obligation of the bailor to collect the chattel from the bailee, the latter may be entitled to the statutory remedy of sale when the bailor neglects to collect it: see below, paras 33-095—33-100. On the effect of delay by the bailor in collecting the goods, see Palmer [1987] L.M.C.L.Q. 43.
- ^{53.} British Crane Hire Corp Ltd v Ipswich Plant Hire Ltd [1975] Q.B. 303, 311, 313. (See also below, para.33-064.) On the termination of a bailment see below, para.33-014. cf. the cases on the termination of the hiring under a hire-purchase agreement, see below, paras 39-330—39-338; see also Vol.I, para.16-196. On the measure of damages in conversion (which now includes former cases of detainee: see below, this paragraph), see Rosenthal v Alderton & Sons Ltd [1946] K.B. 374; Sachs v Miklos [1948] 2 K.B. 23; Munro v Willmott [1949] 1 K.B. 295; Strand Electric and Engineering Co Ltd v Brisford Entertainments Ltd [1952] 2 Q.B. 246; General and Finance Facilities Ltd v Cooks Cars (Romford) Ltd [1963] 1 W.L.R. 644; Hillesden Securities Ltd v Ryjak Ltd [1983] 1 W.L.R. 959. See McGregor on Damages, 19th edn (2014), Ch.36; Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), paras 17-93 et seq.; and see for damages in similar hire-purchase cases, below, paras 39-341, 39-426.
- ^{54.} British Crane Hire Corp Ltd v Ipswich Plant Hire Ltd, above, at 311-312, 313. The possession of a bailee may change to possession as donee under an immediate gift or as donee under a donatio mortis causa: Woodard v Woodard [1995] 3 All E.R. 980.
- ^{55.} By s.2(1) of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977. (For its replacement, see below.)
- ^{56.} cf. a temporary refusal in order to clear up a doubt: Clayton v Le Roy [1911] 2 K.B. 1031; Strand Electric and Engineering Co Ltd v Brisford Entertainments Ltd, above, at 252, 253.
- ^{57.} Miller v Dell [1891] 1 Q.B. 468. In the absence of any specific contractual provision, the bailee is not bound to deliver the chattel to the bailor's address when the latter demands its return; the bailee's only obligation is not to prevent the bailor from taking it: Capital Finance Co Ltd v Bray [1964] 1 W.L.R. 323.
- ^{58.} Pillot v Wilkinson (1863) 2 H. & C. 72; (1864) 3 H. & C. 345; Howard E Perry & Co Ltd v British Railways Board [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1375. (cf. s.11(3) of the 1977 Act.) The bailor can sue in conversion without making a demand if the bailee commits a definite act of conversion: Grainger v Hill (1838) 4 Bing. N.C. 212.
- ^{59.} Howard E Perry & Co Ltd v British Railways Board, above (fear of industrial action by the bailee's employees). See Palmer (1980) 9 An.-Am.L.R. 279.
- ^{60.} Clayton v Le Roy [1911] 2 K.B. 1031; R. (on the application of Atapattu) v Secretary of State for the Home Department [2011] EWHC 1388 (Admin), [2011] All E.R. (D) 20 (Jun) at [89].
- ^{61.} Barclays Mercantile Business Finance Ltd v Sibec Developments Ltd [1992] 1 W.L.R. 1253, 1257-1258. In the case where the goods have been lost by the bailee, there is no need for a refusal by the bailee. It suffices that there has been a demand for the return of the goods which has not been satisfied: Mitchell v Ealing London BC [1979] Q.B. 1.
- ^{62.} R. (on the application of Atapattu) v Secretary of State for the Home Department [2011] EWHC 1388 (Admin), [2011] All E.R. (D) 20 (Jun) at [89].
- ^{63.} However, the courts may be slow to draw such an inference, given that delay in many cases is likely to be equivocal: Schwarzschild v Harrods Ltd [2008] EWHC 521 (QB), [2008] All E.R. (D) 299 (Mar).

- ^{64.} Palmer at para.1-089 (also in (1978) 41 M.L.R. 629, where other arguments on the scope of s.2 are deployed).
- ^{65.} e.g. Alexander v Railway Executive [1951] 2 K.B. 882; and see below, para.33-052.
- ^{66.} Jones v Dowle (1841) 9 M. & W. 19, 20; Reeve v Palmer (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 84; Genn v Winkel (1912) 107 L.T. 434, 437. On exemption clauses, see Vol.I, Ch.15, especially para.15-037.
- ^{67.} Taylor v Caldwell (1863) 3 B. & S. 826, 833; British Crane Hire Corp Ltd v Ipswich Plant Hire Ltd [1975] Q.B. 303, 311-312, 313. Accidental loss or destruction is, however, no defence if it occurred while the bailee was wrongfully detaining the chattel: Shaw & Co v Symmons & Sons [1917] 1 K.B. 799; Mitchell v Ealing London B C [1979] Q.B. 1 (see below, para.33-032, n.156). On frustration, see British Bernal Motor Lorries Ltd v Inter-Transport Co Ltd (1915) 31 T.L.R. 200; Vol.I, Ch.23, especially paras 23-041—23-046 (analogous cases on charterparties).
- ^{68.} See below, para.33-050 and cases cited in nn.267 and 268 thereto; also British Crane Hire Corp Ltd v Ipswich Plant Hire Ltd, above, at 311-312, 313.
- ^{69.} See above, para.33-010.
- ^{70.} A bailee who had sub-bailed the goods may still be in “control” of them.
- ^{71.} This section is based on the common law rules governing detinue: see General and Finance Facilities v Cooks Cars (Romford) [1963] 1 W.L.R. 644. (Section 4 of the 1977 Act provides for interlocutory relief where goods are wrongfully detained.) See CPR Pt 25 r.1(1)(c). See also above, para.33-010.
- ^{72.} 1977 Act ss.3(3)(b) and 3(6). For an illustration, see Howard E Perry & Co Ltd v British Railways Board [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1375. By CPR Pt 40 r.14, a claimant who is only a partial owner of the goods, and who has no immediate right to the possession of them, is confined to a remedy in damages for the injury to his reversionary interest unless the claimant has the written authority of all other part-owners of the goods to make the claim on his behalf as well as for himself.
- ^{73.} s.3(6). By ss.3(7) and 6(4), the court may also make an allowance under s.6(1) or (2) in respect of an improvement to the goods made by the defendant.
- ^{74.} s.3(6).
- ^{75.}  Caxton Publishing Co Ltd v Sutherland Publishing Co Ltd [1939] A.C. 178, 202; Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716, 732; Garnham, Harris & Elton Ltd v Alfred W Ellis (Transport) Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 940; Kuwait Airways Corp v Iraqi Airways Co (Nos 4 and 5) [2002] UKHL 19, [2002] 2 A.C. 833 at [39]-[42] (on which see Cane (2002) 118 L.Q.R. 544); Sang Stone Hamoon Jonoub Co Ltd v Baoyue Shipping Co Ltd (The Bao Yue) [2015] EWHC 2288 (Comm), [2016] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 320 (although goods may be converted by a person who creates a lien without the authority of the owner, an owner who authorises a bailee to deliver goods into storage must be taken to authorise the creation of a lien where that is a reasonable and foreseeable incident of the storage contract which the bailee is authorised to conclude). The requirement that there must be a sufficient encroachment on the rights of the owner as to exclude him from use and possession of the goods assumed importance in Marcq v Christie, Manson & Woods Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 731, [2004] Q.B. 286, especially at [13]-[24]. See also s.2(2) of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 (above, para.33-010); and s.11(3) (below, para.33-135, n.821).
- ^{76.} See the cases cited below, para.33-023 n.109.
- ^{77.} Nyberg v Handelaar [1892] 2 Q.B. 202.
- ^{78.} North General Wagon & Finance Co Ltd v Graham [1950] 2 K.B. 7.

- 79. See below, paras 33-023, 39-333.
- 80. See below, para.33-018.
- 81. Gosling v Birnie (1831) 7 Bing. 337; Biddle v Bond (1865) 6 B. & S. 225. The House of Lords has (obiter) referred to this common law rule, without advertent to the 1977 Act (see below): China Pacific SA v Food Corp of India [1982] A.C. 939, 959. The bailee could set up the ius tertii against his bailor only where he had been actually evicted by title paramount (Biddle v Bond, above, at 234), or where he defended on behalf of, and with the express authority of the third person (Rogers, Sons & Co v Lambert & Co [1891] 1 Q.B. 318, 325). Arguments which would have extended the scope of the bailee's estoppel were rejected by the Privy Council in Re Goldcorp Exchange [1995] 1 A.C. 74.
- 82. The power to create rules of court is contained in s.8(2) of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977. The rules were formerly contained in RSC Ord.15 r.10A, which has not been retained in the current version of the CPR. The position therefore remains uncertain. The defendant's entitlement is stated clearly in s.8(1), but the rules which give effect to it are not readily apparent.
- 83. Even before the 1977 Act, the bailee could interplead between the bailor and a third party claimant to the chattel: RSC Ord.17; CCR Ord.33 rr.6–12.
- 84. The warehouseman would also be able to delay proceedings against him by requiring the third party to be made a party to the proceedings.
- 85. This result is produced by s.7 of the 1977 Act (see below, para.33-017), in combination with s.8.
- 86. One interpretation of the section might be that it covers a situation where the bailor could have sued for wrongful interference, e.g. where there was overlapping liability in tort or in contract. But liability in contract could arise in circumstances in which no tort had been committed: Palmer at para.4-062.
- 87. Palmer at paras 4-057—4-063.
- 88. Defined in s.7(1).
- 89. On the question of joining in the action any third party who claims an interest in the chattel, see s.8 (see above, para.33-015). Section 9 provides machinery for allowing concurrent proceedings for wrongful interference with the same goods to be heard together, even where they originated in different courts.
- 90. This example is adapted from that given in s.7(4) itself.
- 91. Rules on the assessment of damages in conversion must be sought elsewhere, e.g. Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), paras 17–93 et seq.; Tettenborn [1993] C.L.J. 128. For an example, see IBL Ltd v Coussens [1991] 2 All E.R. 133 (especially on the date at which damages are to be assessed).
- 92. cf. the analogous situation in s.3(6) of the 1977 Act (above, para.33-013). Similarly, where a pledgee is liable to the pledgor in damages for conversion, the amount of the debt should be deducted from the damages: below, para.33-136.
- 93. cf. the analogous situation in hire-purchase: below, paras 39-343, 39-426.
- 94. Chesworth v Farrar [1967] 1 Q.B. 407. (On the particular situation in this case, above, n.38.) On restitution in general, see Vol.I, Ch.29.
- 95. Roberts v Wyatt (1810) 2 Taunt. 268; Turner v Hardcastle (1862) 11 C.B.(N.S.) 683; Johnson v Stear (1863) 15 C.B.(N.S.) 330; Halliday v Holgate (1868) L.R. 3 Ex. 299, 301. cf. Rose v Matt [1951] 1 K.B. 810. See also the implied warranty of quiet possession in a contract for the hire of goods, below, para.33-067.

96. See above, para.33-013.

97. cf. s.3(6) of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 (above, para.33-013).

98. See also above, paras 33-015—33-017. On distress, see below, paras 39-427 et seq.

99. Lee v Atkinson (1609) Yelv. 172. See also the cases cited in, para.33-024 n.111 below.

100. Gordon v Harper (1796) 7 Term Rep. 9; Ferguson v Cristall (1829) 5 Bing. 305. cf. the decision in O'Sullivan v Williams [1992] 3 All E.R. 385 which can only be justified on the ground that it was a bailment at will: see below, para.33-022. Apart from a special contractual term, the bailor cannot compel the bailee to sue a third party for loss of, or damage to the goods: The Albazero [1977] A.C. 774, 846. The proposition that the bailor cannot sue rests on the assumption that the bailor does not have the immediate right to possession of the goods. Where, however, the bailor can demonstrate that it does have an immediate right to possession of the goods, it can bring a claim in conversion. When determining whether or not someone has possession of goods, a court must have regard to all the facts and circumstances of the case. Thus it cannot universally be the case that a person who receives goods for storage for reward obtains possession of them: Mainland Private Hire Ltd v Nolan [2011] EWCA Civ 189, [2011] C.T.L.C. 145.

101. The bailee may also sue a third party who has negligently damaged the chattel while it is in the possession of the bailee: The Winkfield [1902] P. 42. See also below, paras 33-026, 33-027.

102. Mears v LSW Ry (1862) 11 C.B.(N.S.) 850; Dee Trading Co Pty Ltd v Baldwin [1938] V.L.R. 173; Moukattaf v BOAC [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 396, 415–416 (below, para.33-026); HSBC Rail (UK) Ltd v Network Rail Infrastructure Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 1437, [2006] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 358. See Fleming (1958) 32 A.L.J. 267; Tettenborn [1994] C.L.J. 326. cf. Meux v GE Ry [1895] 2 Q.B. 387. See also Palmer at paras 4-066—4-076 and s.1(d) of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977.

103. e.g. the goods being transported under a c.i.f. contract are at the risk of the buyer at a time when he has neither the possession of, nor any proprietary interest in the goods: Leigh and Silavan Ltd v Aliakmon Shipping Co Ltd [1986] A.C. 785.

104. The Aliakmon case, above; Candlewood Navigation Corp Ltd v Mitsui OSK Lines Ltd [1986] A.C. 1 PC.

105. Manders v Williams (1849) 4 Exch. 339, 344. Alternatively, the bailee at will may sue, basing his claim to sue upon his possession: cf. Nicholls v Bastard (1835) 2 Cr. M. & R. 659, 660. For the assessment of damages in the bailee's claim against a third party, see below, para.33-024.

106. United States of America and Republic of France v Dollfus Mieg et Cie SA [1952] A.C. 582, 605, 611. See also Lotan v Cross (1810) 2 Camp. 464; Nicholls v Bastard, above; Wilson v Lombank Ltd [1963] 1 W.L.R. 1294; Perpetual Trustees and National Executors of Tasmania Ltd v Perkins (1989) Aust. Tort Rep. 80–295. cf. Towers & Co Ltd v Gray [1961] 2 Q.B. 351. The decision in O'Sullivan v Williams [1992] 3 All E.R. 385, can be justified only on the ground that the bailment was at will: see at 388; and cf. the text at n.100, above.

107. O'Sullivan v Williams, above. It is submitted that this decision cannot apply to a bailment for a term where it is the bailee who is in possession and is therefore entitled to sue the tortfeasor (see text at n.99 above): in such a bailment the bailor may sue the tortfeasor only in respect of any injury to his reversionary interest (see n.102 above; also CPR Pt 40 r.14).

108. O'Sullivan v Williams, above. cf. The Winkfield [1902] P. 42 (below, para.33-024). See also above, paras 33-015—33-018.

109. Cooper v Willomatt (1845) 1 C.B. 672 (sale); Bryant v Wardell (1848) 2 Exch. 479; Fenn v Bittleston (1851) 7 Exch. 152, 159 (sale); Consolidated Co v Curtis & Son [1892] 1 Q.B. 495;

- North General Wagon & Finance Co Ltd v Graham* [1950] 2 K.B. 7 (giving auctioneer possession, with instructions to sell); Moorgate Mercantile Co Ltd v Finch and Read [1962] 1 Q.B. 701; Union Transport Finance Ltd v British Car Auctions Ltd [1978] 2 All E.R. 385. However, an auctioneer who receives goods from their apparent owner and simply redelivers them to him when they are unsold is not liable in conversion provided that he has acted in good faith and without knowledge of any adverse claim to them: Marcq v Christie, Manson & Woods Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 731, [2004] Q.B. 286. See also above, para.33-014; and below, para.33-130 n.792. See also Pollock and Wright, Possession in the Common Law (1888), p.132. cf. Rogers v Arnott [1960] 2 Q.B. 244.
- ^{110.} cf. Shell International Petroleum Co Ltd v Gibbs (The Salem) [1982] 1 All E.R. 225, 240–241. See above, para.33-014.
- ^{111.} The Winkfield [1902] P. 42. See also Rooth v Wilson (1817) 1 B. & Ald. 59 (gratuitous bailee); Swaffer v Mulcahy [1934] 1 K.B. 608 (replevin by bailee).
- ^{112.} Armory v Delamirie (1722) 1 Stra. 505; Jeffries v GW Ry (1856) 5 E. & B. 802, 806; The Winkfield, above, at 60; Pollock and Wright at pp.22, 91 et seq.
- ^{113.} Rooth v Wilson, above; The Winkfield, above. Hence, a pledgee (below, para.33-121) may sue a stranger who tortiously interferes with his rights to the chattel: Chhabra Corp Pte Ltd v Jag Shakti (Owners) [1986] A.C. 337. In such a claim, the bailee may seek an order for specific delivery of the chattel, which does not give the defendant the option of paying damages assessed at the value of the chattel: above, para.33-013. But the defendant is able to rely on ss.7 and 8 of the 1977 Act (above, paras 33-015, 33-017).
- ^{114.} The Winkfield, above; The Jag Shakti, above (below, para.33-133); Obestain Inc v National Mineral Development Corp Ltd [1987] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 465. The fact that the bailee may not be responsible to the bailor for loss of or damage to the chattel does not prevent the bailee recovering full damages from a stranger who causes such loss or damage: The Winkfield, above. The bailee is under an obligation to account to the bailor for the damages recovered beyond the bailee's own interest: The Winkfield, above, at 60–61; Eastern Construction Co Ltd v National Trust Co Ltd [1914] A.C. 197, 210; The Joannis Vatis [1922] P. 92; The Albazero [1977] A.C. 774, 846; The Jag Shakti, see above cf. O'Sullivan v Williams [1992] 3 All E.R. 385 (above, para.33-022 n.107).
- ^{115.} See above, para.33-015. Section 8 applies in cases of damage to the chattel, as well as its total loss.
- ^{116.} See above, para.33-017.
- ^{117.} The extent of the bailee's insurance cover is a question of construction of the particular policy and it is not the case that the bailee will in all cases be entitled to recover the full value of the goods lost or damaged. In particular, the policy may be held to cover only the legal liabilities of the bailee towards the bailor or a third party: see Ramco (UK) Ltd v International Insurance Co of Hanover [2004] EWCA Civ 675, [2004] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 866.
- ^{118.} Hepburn v A Tomlinson (Hauliers) Ltd [1966] A.C. 451 (below, paras 42-008—42-010; Vol.I, paras 18-133, 29-168. cf. the situation where the insurance policy expressly covers the respective interests of both the bailor and the bailee: Amev Finance Ltd v Mercantile Mutual Insurance (Workers' Compensation) Ltd [1988] 1 Qd. R. 487. See also above, n.114).
- ^{119.} See Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), paras 17–16 et seq. Palmer and Murdoch (1983) 46 M.L.R. 73.
- ^{120.} See above, para.33-014, for the bailor's right of action against the bailee in these circumstances.
- ^{121.} Lee Cooper Ltd v CH Jeakins & Sons Ltd [1967] 2 Q.B. 1. But the terms of the contract between the original bailor and bailee are relevant to the extent of any tortious duty owed by the sub-bailee to the original bailor: see Mitsui & Co Ltd v Novorossiysk Shipping Co (The

- Gudermes*) [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 311, 327–328. cf. Bart v British West Indian Airways Ltd [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239 (no liability on sub-bailee for delay). cf. also Fairline Shipping Corp v Adamson [1975] Q.B. 180, 190–191 (see para.33-027 below). cf. also Balsamo v Medici [1984] 1 W.L.R. 951 (no direct claim in tort for negligence against sub-agent).
- 122. The Pioneer Container [1994] 2 A.C. 324, PC; Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716.
- 123. “Ostensible authority” from the original bailor (in addition to actual or implied authority) is recognised by the Privy Council in The Pioneer Container, above, at 341, 342.
- 124. Learoyd Bros & Co v Pope & Sons Ltd [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 142, 148 (the sub-bailees were treated as bailees of the original bailor although the latter did not know that his bailee, a carrier, might sub-bail by engaging another carrier as sub-contractor). See n.126 below. cf. Garnham, Harris & Elton Ltd v Alfred W Ellis (Transport) Ltd [1967] 1 W.L.R. 940.
- 125. Moukataff v BOAC [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 396. See also below, para.33-052; see American Express Co v British Airways Board [1983] 1 W.L.R. 701 (above, para.33-004 n.30).
- 126. The Pioneer Container, above, at 336–338, 341, 342; China Pacific SA v Food Corp of India [1982] A.C. 939, 957–959; Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd, above, at 729, 732; Gilchrist Watt & Sanderson Pty Ltd v York Products Pty Ltd [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1262. See also Pollock and Wright at p.169; below, para.33-031 and cf. Hooper v LNW Ry (1880) 50 L.J.Q.B. 103 (below, para.36-044). It is, however, necessary to distinguish between consent to a sub-bailment and consent to the creation of a direct contractual relationship between the bailor and the sub-bailee. The two are “conceptually different”: see Targe Towing Ltd v Marine Blast Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 346, [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 721 at [28].
- 127. The Pioneer Container, above. On the question of the sub-bailee denying the bailor's title to the goods, above, para.33-015.
- 128. The Pioneer Container, above, at 342 (at 340–341, the Privy Council overruled Johnson Matthey & Co Ltd v Constantine Terminals Ltd [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 215). On the sub-bailee's knowledge, see Palmer and Murdoch (1983) 46 M.L.R. 73; also Carnegie, 3 Adelaide L.R. 7 (1967).
- 129. Although the original bailor seems to have assumed the onus of proving this in Moukataff v BOAC, above, at 416.
- 130. Learoyd Bros & Co v Pope & Sons Ltd [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 142, 149 (“negligence ... attributable to the defendants in their character of bailees”); Moukataff v BOAC, above, at 414; Gilchrist Watt & Sanderson Pty Ltd v York Products Pty Ltd, above; The Pioneer Container, above, at 336–338 (“... if the sub-bailment is for reward, the obligation owed by the sub-bailee to the owner must likewise be that of a bailee for reward, notwithstanding that the reward is payable not by the owner but by the bailee” (at 338)).
- 131. James Buchanan & Co Ltd v Hay's Transport Services Ltd [1972] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 535; Homburg Houtimport BV v Agrosin Private Ltd (The Starsin) [2003] UKHL 12, [2004] 1 A.C. 705 at [136]. See also below, para.33-049.
- 132. Nippon Yusen Kaisha v International Import and Export Co Ltd [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 206. See below, para.33-050. cf. Thomas National Transport Ltd v May & Baker Ltd [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 347, 352, 365.
- 133. Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd, above; Moukataff v BOAC, above, at 414.
- 134. See below, paras 33-044 et seq.
- 135. Hall v NE Ry (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 437; Barratt v GN Ry (1904) 20 T.L.R. 175. (The bailee might also be treated as the agent of the sub-bailee for the purpose of making a contract with the bailor.) cf. New Zealand Shipping Co Ltd v AM Satterthwaite & Co Ltd [1975] A.C. 154; Port

- Jackson Stevedoring Pty Ltd v Salmond and Spraggon (Australia) Pty Ltd* [1981] 1 W.L.R. 138. cf. also Junior Books Ltd v Veitchi Co Ltd [1983] 1 A.C. 520, 546; Leigh and Sullivan Ltd v Aliakmon Shipping Co Ltd [1986] A.C. 785, 817 (in this case there was no bailment between the plaintiff and the defendant). Different principles apply when the sub-bailee seeks to take advantage of the terms of the head bailment. In such a case the ability of the sub-bailee to invoke the terms depends upon the scope of the agreement between the bailor and the sub-bailee, entered into by the bailee as agent for the sub-bailee: see The Mahkutai [1996] A.C. 650. The fact that there is a Himalaya clause in the contract between the goods owner and the bailee does not, however, oust the sub-bailee's right to rely upon the terms of the sub-bailment: Homburg Houtimport BV v Agrosin Private Ltd (The Starsin) [2003] UKHL 12, [2004] 1 A.C. 705 at [136].
- 136. Midland Silicones Ltd v Scruttons Ltd [1962] A.C. 446. (But cf. the New Zealand Shipping case, above; the Port Jackson case, see above). The bailee has often been held to have made the contract of sub-bailment as principal: L Harris (Harella) Ltd v Continental Express Ltd [1961] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 251, 259; Learoyd Bros & Co v Pope & Sons Ltd [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 142; Lee Cooper Ltd v CH Jeakins & Sons Ltd [1967] 2 Q.B. 1; Moukataff v BOAC [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 396, 416–418.
- 137. On the effect of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977, see Palmer (1978) 128 New L.J. 887, 915.
- 138. See above, para.33-026.
- 139. The Pioneer Container [1994] 2 A.C. 324, 341, discussed in more detail by Palmer and Merkin [1994] All E.R. Annual Review 28–35; and Phang (1995) 58 M.L.R. 422. For earlier authority, see Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd, above, at 729–730 (cf. at 731, 741); Singer Co (UK) v Tees and Hartlepool Port Authority [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 164; Hispanica de Petroleos SA v Veucedora Oceanic Navegacion SA [1987] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 321, 336, 340; Compania Portoraffi Commerciale SA v Ultramar Panama Inc (The Captain Gregos) (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 395; Mitsui & Co Ltd v Novorossiysk Shipping Co (The Gudermes) [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 311, 327–328; Spectra International Plc v Hayesoak Ltd [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 153, 155; Palmer and Murdoch (1983) 46 M.L.R. 73. The court may, in its discretion, stay the bailor's action against the sub-bailee, if it is brought in breach of the contract with the bailee: Nippon Yusen Kaisha v International Import and Export Co Ltd [1978] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 206.
- 140. The Pioneer Container, above, at 342 (the original bailor, the owner of the goods, was bound by an “exclusive jurisdiction” clause in the contract between the bailee and the sub-bailee). Homburg Houtimport BV v Agrosin Private Ltd (The Starsin) [2003] UKHL 12, [2004] 1 A.C. 705 at [136]; East West Corp v DKBS 1912 and Akts Svendborg [2003] EWCA Civ 83, [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239 at [24].
- 141. Jarl Tra Ab v Convoys Ltd [2003] EWHC 1488 (Comm), [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 459.
- 142. Sandeman Coprimar SA v Transitos y Transportes Integrales SL [2003] EWCA Civ 113, [2003] Q.B. 1270 at [62]. See also Palmer at para.23-038.
- 143. Fairline Shipping Corp v Adamson [1975] Q.B. 180, 190–191.
- 144. Palmer at Ch.25. See also Palmer and Merkin [1994] All E.R. Annual Review 23–25. Arguments which would have extended the scope of attornment were rejected by the Privy Council in Re Goldcorp Exchange [1995] 1 A.C. 74.
- 145. For attornment to operate, the chattel must be specific, e.g. a specific appropriation may be necessary: Unwin v Adams (1858) 1 F. & F. 312; Laurie and Morewood v Dudin & Sons [1926] 1 K.B. 223. cf. Re London Wine Co (Shippers) Ltd [1986] P.C.C. 121.
- 146. If the bailee agrees to attorn before the chattel comes into his possession, the attornment will take effect as soon as the chattel does come into his possession: Holl v Griffin (1833) 10 Bing. 246, 248.
- 147. Gosling v Birnie (1831) 7 Bing. 337; Laurie and Morewood v Dudin & Sons, above (receipt, but not “acceptance”, of the delivery order). cf. below, paras 33-123, 44-252.

148. cf. Re Savoy Estate Ltd [1949] Ch. 622.

149. Henderson & Co v Williams [1895] 1 Q.B. 521; Dublin City Distillery Ltd v Doherty [1914] A.C. 823, 847–848. cf. below, para.33-058. The bailee apparently holds the chattel on the same terms as under the original bailment: Leigh & Sullivan v Aliakmon Shipping Co Ltd [1986] A.C. 785, 812; Compania Portoraffi Commerciale SA v Ultramar Panama Inc (The Captain Gregos) (No.2) [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 395, 404–405; Mitsui & Co Ltd v Novorossiysk Shipping Co (The Gudermes) [1993] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 311, 324. The claimant may be bound by an exemption clause in the contract between the bailee and the original bailor, if the claimant is treated as an assignee of the benefit of this contract: HMF Humphrey Ltd v Baxter, Hoare & Co Ltd (1933) 149 L.T. 603; Britain & Overseas Trading (Bristles) Ltd v Brooks Wharf & Bull Wharf Ltd [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 51, 60.

150. See above, paras 33-015—33-017.

151. Alicia Hosiery Ltd v Brown Shipley & Co Ltd [1970] 1 Q.B. 195.

152. Morgans v Launchbury [1973] A.C. 127; Smith v Bailey [1891] 2 Q.B. 403; Britt v Galmoye and Nevill (1928) 44 T.L.R. 294; Hewitt v Bonvin [1940] 1 K.B. 188; Klein v Caluori [1971] 1 W.L.R. 619. See Atiyah, Vicarious Liability (1967), Ch.13.

153. Sampson v Aitchison [1912] A.C. 844; Pratt v Patrick [1924] 1 K.B. 488; Ormrod v Crosville Motor Services Ltd [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1120. cf. Morgans v Launchbury, above.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 33 - Bailment

Section 3. - Gratuitous Bailment

(a) - Deposit

Deposit ¹⁵⁴

33-032

! Deposit is the bailment of a chattel to be kept by the bailee without reward ¹⁵⁵ and to be returned upon demand to the bailor or his nominee. ¹⁵⁶ The obligation of the gratuitous bailee arises only upon actual delivery of the chattel to him and his acceptance of the deposit ¹⁵⁷; he then must take reasonable care of the chattel, and the standard of care required of him will depend on all the circumstances of the particular case. ¹⁵⁸ The onus of proof is on the bailee to show that he was not negligent in his care of the chattel. ¹⁵⁹ ! The fact that the bailment is gratuitous is one of the circumstances affecting the standard of care required of the bailee ¹⁶⁰; other relevant circumstances would include the nature and value of the chattel, ¹⁶¹ and the manner in which the bailee keeps his own chattels ¹⁶²; but he cannot show that he took reasonable care of the chattel merely by showing that he kept the goods deposited with him in the same manner as he kept his own. ¹⁶³ The liability of the gratuitous bailee is probably best classified as sui generis and it should not be assumed that it follows from the fact that the bailment is not contractual that the liability of the gratuitous bailee must lie in tort. ¹⁶⁴ Indeed, where the gratuitous bailee has extended, and broken, a particular promise to his bailor, the measure of damages "may be more akin to that referable to breach of contract rather than to tort". ¹⁶⁵

Expenses

33-033

The House of Lords has held that if the gratuitous bailee fulfils his duty of care, he has a correlative right to charge the bailor with the expenses reasonably incurred by him in doing so. ¹⁶⁶

Use of the chattel by the bailee

33-034

A gratuitous bailee is not permitted to use the chattel bailed for his own personal advantage in any way at all (without the express or implied consent of the bailor) unless such use is necessary for its preservation ¹⁶⁷; if he wrongfully makes use of the chattel he will be responsible for any loss or injury resulting from the use unless he can show that the loss or damage did not arise from his breach of duty. ¹⁶⁸ If the bailee's act is wholly inconsistent with his obligations as bailee, as where the bailee, in the absence of any emergency or necessity, sells the chattel, ¹⁶⁹ the bailment is terminated forthwith and the right to immediate possession reverts to the bailor, who may sue the bailee for conversion. ¹⁷⁰

Deposits with bankers

33-035

Where a customer deposits valuables or securities with a banker for safe custody and the banker makes no special charge, the bailment has sometimes been held to be gratuitous¹⁷¹ and sometimes for reward.¹⁷² It is submitted that the latter is the better opinion: it is based on the view that the banker might indirectly benefit from the bailment, in that it induces the customer to continue to keep his account with the banker.¹⁷³ It has been held, even on the basis that the bankers are gratuitous bailees, that where valuables or securities in a locked box or sealed parcel are deposited for safe custody with the bankers, they have no right to open the box or parcel, and its contents are not subject to any lien for previous or subsequent debts of the customer.¹⁷⁴

^{154.} Palmer at Ch.10; also (1978) 128 New L.J. 791.

^{155.} cf. Custody, below, para.33-049. Since there is no consideration in deposit, it is an instance of bailment without a contract. A bailment may be for reward, although no consideration moves from the bailor: Andrews v Home Flats Ltd [1945] 2 All E.R. 698. cf. Oliver v Sadler & Co [1929] A.C. 584, 596; Collett v National Fur Co (1945) 78 Ll.L. Rep. 1. As to the efforts of the courts to “invent” consideration so as to find a contract of bailment, see Vol.I, para.4-198.

^{156.} If a gratuitous bailee fails to return the goods on demand, he may become an insurer and hold them at his peril: Mitchell v Ealing London BC [1979] Q.B. 1. (See Palmer (1978) 128 New L.J. 791.) It is not, however, necessary for the bailor expressly to reserve a right to require that the chattel ultimately be restored to his own possession or to his order, provided that it is established that what was intended was a bailment and not a donation: Yearworth v North Bristol NHS Trust [2009] EWCA Civ 37, [2010] Q.B. 1 at [48].

^{157.} e.g. Blount v War Office [1953] 1 W.L.R. 736.

^{158.} Houghland v RR Low (Luxury Coaches) Ltd [1962] 1 Q.B. 694 (above, para.33-008); Graham v Voigt (1989) 89 A.L.R. 11; Sutcliffe v Chief Constable of West Yorkshire [1996] R.T.R. 86; City Television v Conference and Training Office Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1770; Grocutt v Khan [2002] EWCA Civ 1945, [2003] R.T.R. 22 at [23]. But see the House of Lords in China Pacific SA v Food Corp of India [1982] A.C. 939 at 960, where (obiter) the older formulation of the test was referred to, viz that the bailee in gratuitous deposit must show that degree of diligence which men of common prudence generally exercise about their own affairs or would take for the preservation of their own property; Giblin v McMullen (1869) L.R. 2 P.C. 317, 337–338; Bullen v Swan Electric Engraving Co (1907) 23 T.L.R. 258; Blount v War Office, above, at 739. But the line between the two standards is very fine: Port Swettenham Authority v TW Wu and Co (M) Sdn Bhd [1979] A.C. 580, 589. See also Palmer at paras 10-005–10-021; Paton at pp.101–110; Story at para.62; Coggs v Bernard (1703) 2 Ld.Raym. 909, 913–915; Mytton v Cock (1739) 2 Stra. 1099; Martin v LCC [1947] K.B. 628, 631. If a gratuitous bailee holds himself out to the bailor as able to deploy some special skill in relation to the chattel, his duty is to take such care of it as is reasonably to be expected of a person with such skill: Wilson v Brett (1843) 11 M. & W. 113; Yearworth v North Bristol NHS Trust [2009] EWCA Civ 37, [2010] Q.B. 1 at [48].

^{159.}  Houghland v RR Low (Luxury Coaches) Ltd, above; Port Swettenham Authority v TW Wu and Co (M) Sdn Bhd, above; Sutcliffe v Chief Constable of West Yorkshire, above; Pennington v De Wan [2017] EWHC 4 (Ch) at [22]. See also Coggs v Bernard, above, at 913–915; Doorman v Jenkins (1834) 2 A. & E. 256; Giblin v McMullen, above, at 339; Treffitz v Canelli (1872) L.R. 4 P.C. 277, 284. And see below, para.33-050.

^{160.} Paton at p.110.

^{161.} Sutcliffe v Chief Constable of West Yorkshire, above; Grocutt v Khan [2002] EWCA Civ 1945, [2003] R.T.R. 22 at [23].

- 162. Giblin v McMullen, above, at 339.
- 163. Giblin v McMullen, above, at 339; Coggs v Bernard, above, at 914, 915. cf. Doorman v Jenkins, above. Some old authorities suggest that if the bailor knows that the bailee is a negligent or imprudent man, the latter may be liable only if he fails to take the same care as he usually does for his own chattels of a similar kind: Coggs v Bernard, above, at 914–915; The William (1806) 6 Ch. Rob. 316.
- 164. Yearworth v North Bristol NHS Trust [2009] EWCA Civ 37, [2010] Q.B. 1 at [48].
- 165. Yearworth v North Bristol NHS Trust [2009] EWCA Civ 37, [2010] Q.B. 1 at [48].
- 166. China Pacific SA v Food Corp of India, above. (At 964, Lord Simon said that the bailee “incurred reasonable expenses in safeguarding and preserving the goods, to the benefit of the bailor”; in this case, the expenses were storage charges paid by the bailee.) The Supreme Court has left open the question whether the bailee can recover remuneration in respect of the services rendered: ENE Kos 1 Ltd v Petroleo Brasileiro SA (No.2) [2012] UKSC 17, [2012] 2 A.C. 164 at [29] and [35]. A similar doubt exists in relation to the recovery of storage charges, as opposed to storage expenses. The former may not be recoverable: Garside v Black Horse Ltd [2010] EWHC 190 (QB), [2010] All E.R. (D) 98 (Mar) at [122]. A shipowner in the exercise of his lien for general average contribution may be entitled to recover the costs involved in exercising that lien in terms of the continuing expense of looking after the cargo instead of being able to discharge it: Metall Market OOO v Vitorio Shipping Co Ltd (The “Lehmann Timber”) [2013] EWCA Civ 650, [2014] Q.B. 760.
- 167. Bac.Abr. Bailment A. cf. Re Tidd [1893] 3 Ch. 154.
- 168. Lilley v Doubleday (1881) 7 Q.B.D. 510, 511. cf. Coldman v Hill [1919] 1 K.B. 443.
- 169. Sachs v Miklos [1948] 2 K.B. 23, 36; Munro v Willmott [1949] 1 K.B. 295.
- 170. Fenn v Bittleston (1851) 7 Exch. 152, 159; North General Wagon and Finance Co Ltd v Graham [1950] 2 K.B. 7, 15. See above, para.33-014.
- 171. Giblin v McMullen (1869) L.R. 2 P.C. 317 (which was, however, “gravely doubted” by the Privy Council in Port Swettenham Authority v TW Wu and Co (M) Sdn Bhd [1979] A.C. 580, 589); Bullen v Swan Electric Engraving Co (1906) 22 T.L.R. 275; affirmed (1907) 23 T.L.R. 258.
- 172. Re United Service Co (1870) L.R. 6 Ch. App. 212. See below, paras 34-442-34-444; and Paget, Law of Banking, 14th edn (2014), para.7.2.
- 173. Bullen v Swan Electric Engraving Co, above, at 277 (affirmed; above); the Port Swettenham case, above, at 589. It has even been contended that the mere entrusting with the property is sufficient consideration: see Banbury v Bank of Montreal [1917] 1 K.B. 409, 439; affirmed [1918] A.C. 626.
- 174. Leese v Martin (1873) L.R. 17 Eq. 224 (following Brandao v Barnett (1846) 12 Cl. & F. 787); R. v Robson (1861) 31 L.J.M.C. 22. On a banker’s lien, see below, paras 34-550-34-553.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 33 - Bailment

Section 3. - Gratuitous Bailment

(b) - Involuntary Bailees

Involuntary bailees ¹⁷⁵

33-036

Normally, "a man cannot without his knowledge and consent be considered as a bailee of property ...", ¹⁷⁶ but circumstances may arise where a person finds that, without any consent on his part, he has another's chattel in his control or on his premises. ¹⁷⁷ The legal position of an involuntary bailee is by no means clear, but the balance of authority suggests that, although gross negligence or deliberate injury will make him liable, ¹⁷⁸ mere negligence will not. ¹⁷⁹ Thus, where an author sent a manuscript of a play to the defendant (the lessee of a theatre) who lost it, it was held that no duty of any kind was imposed on the defendant by receipt of something he had not asked for. ¹⁸⁰ The ruling has, however, been questioned ¹⁸¹ in another case, ¹⁸² where a customer accidentally left her brooch behind in the defendants' shop, and it was handed by an assistant to a shopwalker, who put it in his desk instead of taking it to the lost property office; the brooch was then stolen from the desk, and the defendants were held liable because they had not exercised reasonable care. There was in this case, however, some assumption of control over the brooch by the defendants' employee. ¹⁸³ In a further case, ¹⁸⁴ the judge held that, "If persons were involuntary bailees and had done everything reasonable they were not liable to pay damages if something which they did resulted in the loss of the property". ¹⁸⁵ Where an involuntary bailee wrote to the bailor saying that he was no longer willing to hold the goods and wanted them removed but the bailor did nothing even after receiving a second letter which stated that the goods would be sold unless removed, the court may infer that the bailor impliedly consented to the sale. ¹⁸⁶ But this view is not without difficulty because of the principle, applicable at least to the analogous situation of offer and acceptance, that silence is not consent. ¹⁸⁷ The involuntary bailee may now, however, be able to avail himself of the wide powers of sale conferred by ss.12 and 13 of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977. ¹⁸⁸ The duty of an involuntary bailee in possession of goods will be enlarged, and he will become responsible for failure to take reasonable care, if he spontaneously and officiously proposes to keep the goods ¹⁸⁹; or if he changes his character as gratuitous bailee, by taking charge of the goods for reward. ¹⁹⁰

Finding

33-037

The question whether a person who finds goods is a bailee of them is one which admits of no easy answer. It has been argued that "cases in finding give rise to a bailment, at least to the extent that the finder owes substantially the same common law duties in relation to the chattel as an ordinary consensual bailee". ¹⁹¹ While dicta can be found to support this proposition, ¹⁹² there are also dicta which are hostile to the equation of finding and bailment. ¹⁹³ The equation of finding and bailment is acceptable provided that it is accepted that bailment rules cannot be translated wholesale into the law of finding. ¹⁹⁴ The law on finding should be sought elsewhere. ¹⁹⁵

Unsolicited goods

33-038

The Unsolicited Goods and Services Act 1971 was passed to deal with the problem of goods being delivered or sent by post to recipients who did not order them, but might be subjected by the sender to some pressure to pay for them. The Act has since been supplemented by reg.27M of the Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2008¹⁹⁶ as amended by the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013.¹⁹⁷

33-039

It is an unfair commercial practice for a trader to demand immediate or deferred payment for or the return or safekeeping of products supplied by the trader, but not solicited by the consumer.¹⁹⁸ In such a case the consumer is exempted from any obligation to provide consideration for the product supplied by the trader¹⁹⁹ and the absence of a response from the consumer following the supply does not constitute consent to the provision of consideration for, or the return or safekeeping of, the products.²⁰⁰ Further, in the case of an unsolicited supply of goods, the consumer may, as between the consumer and the trader, use, deal with or dispose of the goods as if they were an unconditional gift to the consumer.²⁰¹

^{175.} Palmer at Ch.13 (also in (1978) 128 New L.J. 763). Bailment may arise without the bailor having consented to the bailee having possession of the goods: The Pioneer Container [1994] 2 A.C. 324, 341–342 (above, para.33-026).

^{176.} Winfield, Province of the Law of Tort, p.100. See Lethbridge v Phillips (1819) 2 Stark. 544; Neuwith v Over Darwen Industrial Co-operative Society (1894) 63 L.J.Q.B. 290. cf. R. v Ashwell (1885) 16 Q.B.D. 190. In the case of sub-bailment, the Privy Council said that “They incline to the opinion that a sub-bailee can only be said for these purposes to have voluntarily taken into his possession the goods of another if he has sufficient notice that a person other than the bailee is interested in the goods ...”: The Pioneer Container, above, at 342.

^{177.} e.g. carriers may become involuntary bailees when the goods are not accepted at the consignee’s address: Heugh v LNW Ry (1870) L.R. 5 Ex. 51 (at 56, Kelly C.B. apparently approved of the practice of the carrier to charge the consignee with the cost of keeping the goods thereafter).

^{178.} Hiort v Bott (1874) L.R. 9 Ex. 86, 90 (obiter, since this was a case of conversion and the defendant did not acquire possession of the goods).

^{179.} Paton at pp.113–117; Palmer at paras 13-005-13-021; Winfield and Jolowicz on Tort, 19th edn (2014) paras 18–017–18–018. But see Houghland v RR Low (Luxury Coaches) Ltd [1962] 1 Q.B. 694, 698 (see above, para.33-010). See also Burnett (1960) 76 L.Q.R. 364; Tay (1966) 5 Sydney L.Rev. 239.

^{180.} Howard v Harris (1884) Cab. & El. 253.

^{181.} cf. Summer v Challenor (1926) 70 S.J. 760, where an actor wrote acknowledging and promising to read a play and was held liable for its safe custody.

^{182.} Newman v Bourne & Hollingsworth (1915) 31 T.L.R. 209.

^{183.} Gilchrist Watt and Sanderson Pty Ltd v York Products Pty Ltd [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1262, 1268 (“the taking of possession in the circumstances involves an assumption of responsibility for the safe keeping of the goods”).

^{184.} Elvin & Powell Ltd v Plummer Roddis Ltd (1933) 50 T.L.R. 158. cf. Hiort v Bott (1874) L.R. 9 Ex. 86.

- 185. (1933) 50 T.L.R.158 at 159 (emphasis added); Scotland v Solomon [2002] EWHC 1886 (Ch); Da Rocha-Afodu v Mortgage Express Ltd [2014] EWCA Civ 454, [2014] All E.R. (D) 212 (Mar); Campbell v Redstone Mortgages Ltd [2014] EWHC 3081 (Ch), [2014] All E.R. (D) 193 (Oct).
- 186. Sachs v Miklos [1948] 2 K.B. 23, 37.
- 187. Sachs v Miklos, above.
- 188. See below, paras 33-095-33-100. Since there is no definition of “bailment” or “bailee” in the Act, it is not clear whether involuntary bailees are included.
- 189. Jones at p.48; see also Nelson v Mackintosh (1816) 1 Stark. 237.
- 190. Jones at p.49.
- 191. Palmer at para.1-037.
- 192. See, for example, Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716, 731–732; and Gilchrist Watt and Sanderson Pty Ltd v York Products Pty Ltd [1970] 3 All E.R. 825, 831–832.
- 193. See, e.g. Newman v Bourne and Hollingsworth Ltd (1915) 31 T.L.R. 209.
- 194. An obvious example is that the rule that the bailee is estopped from denying his bailor’s title cannot apply to cases of finding.
- 195. Pollock and Wright, Possession in the Common Law, pp.171–187; Palmer at Ch.26; Paton at pp.118–129. See Parker v British Airways Board [1982] Q.B. 1004; Waverley Borough Council v Fletcher [1996] Q.B. 334. See also the Report of the Law Reform Committee on Conversion and Detinue, Cmnd. 4774 (1971), App.I.
- 196. SI 2008/1277.
- 197. SI 2013/3134 Pt 4. The 2008 Regulations (in Pt 2) superseded the Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 (SI 2000/2334) reg.24 of which dealt with inertia selling and made more complete provision than that to be found in the current Regulations.
- 198. Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2008 (SI 2008/1277) Sch.1 para.29.
- 199. SI 2008/1277 reg.27M(2).
- 200. SI 2008/1277 reg.27M(3).
- 201. SI 2008/1277 reg.27M(4).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 33 - Bailment
Section 3. - Gratuitous Bailment
(c) - Mandate

Mandate

33-040

Mandate is the bailment of a specific chattel in respect of which the bailee undertakes to perform a gratuitous act. ²⁰² In deposit the main object is the safe custody of the chattel, whereas in mandate it is some service or labour to be performed by the bailee in connection with the chattel. ²⁰³ As in gratuitous deposit, above, the bailor derives an advantage from the gratuitous exertions of the bailee; but despite the absence of reward to the bailee, he must take reasonable care of the chattel according to the circumstances of the case, once he begins his task. ²⁰⁴ In the older cases, the absence of reward led the courts to hold that the mandatary was only bound to exercise ordinary diligence, and was not liable unless gross negligence, breach of orders, or fraud was proved against him. ²⁰⁵ In the present law, the fact that the bailment is gratuitous is only one of the relevant circumstances affecting the standard of care required of the mandatary. ²⁰⁶ Similarly, if the situation or profession of the gratuitous mandatary implies ²⁰⁷ special skill in the task he undertakes, his omission to employ that skill will be treated as negligence on his part. ²⁰⁸ The mandatary is liable to the bailor for the loss of, or damage to, the chattel bailed, arising from any breach of the mandatary's duty. He is, however, entitled to be reimbursed by the bailor in respect of his expenses incurred in executing the mandate. ²⁰⁹ If the mandatary does some act to or with the chattel which is unauthorised by the terms of the bailment, he is responsible for any resulting loss or damage. ²¹⁰ If the bailor refuses or neglects to take redelivery of the chattel, the mandatary will be able to avail himself of statutory powers of sale. ²¹¹

^{202.} Palmer at Ch.11; Story on Bailments, 9th edn, para.137.

^{203.} Coggs v Bernard (1703) 2 Ld.Raym. 909, 918.

^{204.} Houghland v RR Low (Luxury Coaches) Ltd [1962] 1 Q.B. 694, 698. The standard of care is to be judged objectively: above, para.33-008.

^{205.} Jones on Bailments, p.120; Mytton v Cock (1739) 2 Str. 1099; Shiells v Blackburne (1789) 1 H.Bl. 158; Dartnall v Howard (1825) 4 B. & C. 345, 350; Doorman v Jenkins (1834) 2 A. & E. 256; Parry v Roberts (1835) 3 A. & E. 118. See also Moffat v Bateman (1869) L.R. 3 P.C. 115, 122 (a case on gratuitous carriage of a person, which is criticised by Paton at pp.140–144).

^{206.} cf. Southcote's Case (1601) 4 Co Rep. 83b; Beauchamp v Powley (1831) 1 Moo. & R. 38; but see Copland v Brogan, 1916 S.C. 277.

^{207.} The same position would hold where the mandatary represents to the bailor that he possesses particular skill or experience, and the bailor reasonably relies on that representation: Chaudhry v Prabhakar [1989] 1 W.L.R. 29, an analogous case of gratuitous agency.

^{208.} Shiells v Blackburne, above, at 162; Wilson v Brett (1843) 11 M. & W. 113; O'Hanlon v Murray

(1860) 12 Ir.C.L.R. 161; Fish v Kelly (1864) 17 C.B.(N.S.) 194, 206; Story at para.182a. cf. Harmer v Cornelius (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 236; Banbury v Bank of Montreal [1918] A.C. 626, 657.

209. Story at para.154. cf. the analogous case of gratuitous deposit: see above, para.33-032. cf. Vol.I, paras 29-119 et seq.

210. Nelson v Macintosh (1816) 1 Stark. 237; Miles v Cattle (1830) 4 Moo. & P. 630.

211. Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 ss.12 and 13 (see below, paras 33-095-33-100). But as there is no definition of “bailment” or “bailee” in the Act, it is not certain that the mandatary is included.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 33 - Bailment

Section 3. - Gratuitous Bailment

(d) - Gratuitous Loan for Use

Obligations of the borrower ²¹²

33-041

A gratuitous ²¹³ bailment where the benefit is conferred upon the bailee arises when a chattel is bailed to be used by the bailee without charge, and without any advantage to the bailor (commodatum). Since the lender intends the borrower to use the chattel, the borrower is not liable for reasonable wear and tear. ²¹⁴ But he is liable for negligence, ²¹⁵ for fraud, for misuse and for his failure to exercise reasonable skill in using the chattel. ²¹⁶ The standard of care required of the borrower will depend upon all the circumstances, including the nature of the chattel, and the occupation of the borrower; but since the bailment is gratuitous, the standard will usually be a high one (exactissima diligentia of Roman law). If the borrower represents to the lender that he possesses a particular skill in regard to the use of the chattel, and the lender reasonably relies on that representation, the borrower will be held to that standard. ²¹⁷ The borrower, in the absence of agreement, must bear any usual or ordinary expense arising from his use of the chattel. ²¹⁸ The borrower must also return the chattel to the lender at the appointed time and place: if the lender refuses or neglects to take redelivery, the borrower will be entitled to avail himself of statutory powers of sale. ²¹⁹

Limits upon the borrower's right to use the chattel

33-042

The borrower has no right to deviate from the conditions of the loan, and if the goods are used for a materially different purpose he becomes an insurer, liable for any loss of or injury to the chattel. ²²⁰ Thus, if a horse is lent to a person to ride, this will not entitle him to allow the horse to be ridden by his employee ²²¹; for the borrower has no right, without the consent of the lender, to lend the goods to a third person, since the lender grants a purely personal permission to the borrower. If the borrower lends the chattel to a third person, without the consent of the lender, the bailment is determined, and the borrower is liable for any loss suffered by the lender. ²²² However, delegation may be permitted where in the ordinary course of business the custody would naturally devolve upon, or the act be performed by, some employee or agent of the bailee, and in such a case the bailee is not liable if loss or damage to the chattel occurs during the period of delegation, without any negligence on the part of his substitute. ²²³ For instance, where a horse was for sale and the vendor allowed the defendant to have the horse in order to try it, the defendant was entitled to allow a competent person to ride the horse for that purpose. ²²⁴

Liability of the lender

33-043

If the lender knows ²²⁵ of defects in the chattel which are not apparent to the borrower and which make it unfit for the borrower's purpose, he is under a duty to inform the borrower of the defects; if he fails to do so, and the borrower suffers injury through such defects, the lender is liable. ²²⁶ Thus, if the chattel has not been used for years, and is out of repair, a warning ought to be given to the borrower.

227

212. Palmer at Ch.12.

213. See above, para.33-032 n.155.

214. Blakemore v Bristol and Exeter Ry (1858) 8 E. & B. 1035, 1050. See also Pomfret v Ricroft (1669) 1 Saund. 321, 323; Coggs v Bernard (1704) 2 Ld.Raym. 909, 915; Vaughan v Menlove (1837) 3 Bing.N.C. 468, 475; Jones at pp.50, 65.

215. Houghland v RR Low (Luxury Coaches) Ltd [1962] 1 Q.B. 694, 698 (above, para.33-008). The standard to be applied to the borrower is objective, depending on all the circumstances: Chaudhry v Prabhakar [1989] 1 W.L.R. 29 (the analogous situation of gratuitous agency).

216. See the cases cited in n.214, above; also Palmer at paras 12-022 et seq.

217. Chaudhry v Prabhakar, above.

218. Handford v Palmer (1820) 2 Brod. & B. 359. (cf. below, para.33-082.) The legal position is doubtful when extraordinary expense, arising from circumstances beyond the borrower's control, is incurred to preserve the chattel: Story at paras 273-274. See also Vol.I, para.29-137.

219. Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 ss.12 and 13 (see below, paras 33-095-33-100). But the absence of a definition of "bailment" or "bailee" in the Act means that it is not certain that a borrower is included.

220. Coggs v Bernard, above, at 915; Wilson v Shepherd, 1913 S.C. 300.

221. Bringloe v Morrice (1676) 1 Mod. 210. cf. Ballett v Mingay [1943] K.B. 281 (minor borrower); Gwilliam v Twist [1895] 2 Q.B. 84.

222. See cases in n.221.

223. Camoy's v Scurr (1840) 9 C. & P. 383; Story at para.234. cf. above, paras 33-026-33-029.

224. Camoy's v Scurr, above.

225. If the lender is unaware of the defect, he is not liable: MacCarthy v Young (1861) 6 H. & N. 329; Coughlin v Gillison [1899] 1 Q.B. 145. cf. Longmeid v Holliday (1851) 6 Exch. 761, 767-768. However, since Donoghue v Stevenson [1932] A.C. 562, the lender may now be liable in negligence: see Hawkins v Coulsdon and Purley UDC [1954] 1 Q.B. 319, 333; Clerk & Lindsell on Torts, 21st edn (2014), para.11-09; Marsh (1950) 66 L.Q.R. 39.

226. Coughlin v Gillison, above, at 147, approving Blakemore v Bristol and Exeter Ry (1858) 8 E. & B. 1035, 1051 (crane); MacCarthy v Young, above. For an extension of the principle, see Oliver v Saddler & Co [1929] A.C. 584, 596. The lender is not liable to a third person injured through the borrower's negligence in using the chattel: Hewitt v Bonvin [1940] 1 K.B. 188 (approved in Launchbury v Morgans [1973] A.C. 127); Norwood v Navan [1981] R.T.R. 457. cf. Ormrod v Crosville Motor Services Ltd [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1120.

227. Coughlin v Gillison, above, at 148.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 33 - Bailment
Section 4. - Bailments for Valuable Consideration
(a) - The Supply of Services: Statutory Provisions

The Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982

33-044

This Act, by Pt II, codified certain terms ²²⁸ implied at common law into contracts ²²⁹ for the supply of services. ²³⁰ These implied terms are not exhaustive, since Pt II has effect “subject to any other enactment which defines or restricts the rights, duties or liabilities” of the parties. ²³¹ But (subject to the provisions of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977) ²³² the Act permits the implied terms ²³³ to be negated or varied by express agreement, by the course of dealing between the parties or by “such usage as binds” them. ²³⁴ The term “service” is not defined in the Act. ²³⁵ So far as bailment is concerned, it would seem to cover all types of bailments for valuable consideration (where there is a contract).

The Consumer Rights Act 2015

33-045

This Act, by Ch.4 of Pt 1, treats contracts under which a trader ²³⁶ agrees to supply a service to a consumer ²³⁷ (and which were made on or after October 1, 2015) as including a number of terms. These terms are also not exhaustive, since Ch.4 provides that it does not affect “any enactment or rule of law that imposes a stricter duty on the trader”. ²³⁸ But the ability of a trader to exclude the operation of these terms is extremely limited. ²³⁹ The term “service” is not defined in the Act. ²⁴⁰ As is the case with the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, so far as bailment is concerned, Ch.4 would seem to cover all types of bailment between a trader and a consumer for valuable consideration (where there is a contract).

Standard of workmanship and care of the chattel

33-046

Section 13 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 provides that:

“In a contract for the supply of a service where the supplier is acting in the course of a business, ²⁴¹ there is an implied term that the supplier ²⁴² will carry out the service with reasonable care and skill.” ²⁴³

The common law decisions before the Act will obviously be relevant in deciding the standard of care and skill to be expected of the bailee/supplier of services. The reference to skill will apply whenever the bailee holds himself out as professing a particular skill or expertise (in which case he will be held to the standard of the reasonably competent member of the class professing that skill or expertise). ²⁴⁴

The time for performance

33-047

Where the bailee (supplier of a service) acts in the course of a business, s.14(1) of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 provides ²⁴⁵ that where the contract does not fix or stipulate a method for determining the time for performance (and that time cannot be determined by a course of dealing between the parties), there is an implied term that the service will be carried out within a reasonable time; and under s.14(2), what is a reasonable time is a question of fact. ²⁴⁶ Where, however, the bailee's obligation to perform depends on the cooperation of the bailor, the time implied at common law will be that each party will "use reasonable diligence in performing his part". ²⁴⁷

Price for the service

33-048

Under s.15(1) of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, where the consideration to be paid by the customer (bailor) is not provided for by the contract (or determined by a course of dealing between the parties) he must pay a reasonable charge ²⁴⁸ (which is "a question of fact"). ²⁴⁹ Where the bailee refuses to return the chattel to the bailor unless he pays a charge which is unreasonably high (not being expressly provided for in the contract), the bailor who pays it under protest in order to obtain the release of the chattel may have a claim in restitution to recover the excess above a reasonable charge. ²⁵⁰

^{228.} The Act leaves it to the common law to determine the status of these "terms", viz whether the remedy includes termination of the contract: see Vol.I, paras 13-019 et seq.

^{229.} It is a contract "whatever is the nature of the consideration ..." (s.12(3)). Sch.1 para.38 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 inserts the word "relevant" before the words "contract for the supply of a service" in the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982. Sch.1 para.51 further amends s.12(1) of the 1982 Act by providing that a contract to which Ch.4 of Pt 1 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 applies shall not fall within the scope of the 1982 Act. Thus a contract under which a trader agrees to supply a service to a consumer will, if the contract was made on or after October 1, 2015, be governed by the 2015 Act and not the 1982 Act.

^{230.} A review of the Act and its operation is found in the Law Commission's Report on "Implied Terms in Contracts for the Supply of Services" (1986) Law Com. No.156. See also Palmer (1983) 46 M.L.R. 619, 627–631; Woodroffe, Goods and Services—The New Law (1982), Chs 6, 7. In the case of a contract for a trader to supply a service to a consumer (as defined in the Consumer Rights Act 2015, on which see below, paras 38-431 et seq.), the statutory rights of the consumer and the remedies available to the consumer are to be found in ss.48–57 of the Act.

^{231.} s.16(4). By s.16(3)(b), other terms not inconsistent with Pt II of the Act may continue to be implied into such contracts.

^{232.} See below, paras 33-054, 33-078.

^{233.} Those implied by ss.13 to 15 (below).

^{234.} s.16(1). On exclusion of liability, below, paras 33-053-33-054. Pt II of the Law Commission report (n.230, above) reviews the power of the supplier to exclude his liability towards consumers.

^{235.} But a "contract of service or apprenticeship" is excluded (s.12(2)). The Secretary of State is empowered by Order to exempt specified services from any of ss.13–15 (s.12(4)) but no Orders affecting bailments have been made under this power.

- 236. As defined in s.2(1) of the Act.
- 237. As defined in s.2(3) of the Act.
- 238. s.53(1).
- 239. See s.57, on which see further para.38-546.
- 240. But a “contract of employment or apprenticeship” is excluded (s.48(2)). The Secretary of State is empowered by Order to exempt specified services from Ch.4 (s.48(5)).
- 241. Partly defined in s.18(1) as including a profession and the activities of government departments and of local or public authorities. It is submitted that the term “business” would extend to regular, part-time work conducted for profit. On the work of charities, see Law Com. Report No.156 (n.230, above), para.2.27.
- 242. s.13 probably does not affect the common law rules as to when the bailee may delegate performance of his duty of care: para.2.25 of Law Com. Report No.156 (see n.230, above): cf. Palmer (1983) 46 M.L.R. 619, 628–629.
- 243. Wilson v Best Travel Ltd [1993] 1 All E.R. 353 (duty of care of travel agent in inspecting foreign hotel). This implied term will obviously not prevent the implication of a term (in appropriate cases) that the supplier has undertaken to produce a stated result (which implies strict liability if that result is not produced). See s.16(3)(a) of the Act which preserves any rule of law which imposes on the supplier a duty stricter than that imposed by ss.13 or 14 (below), e.g. innkeepers (below, para. 33-103). The equivalent term in a contract between a trader and a consumer to supply a service (if made on or after October 1, 2015) is to be found in s.49(1) of the Consumer Rights Act 2015.
- 244. The standards generally practised by the class will normally apply, but it is possible for the court to find that such a standard fails to meet the statutory standard.
- 245. See above, n.243 (on s.16(3)(a)).
- 246. The equivalent term in a contract between a trader and a consumer to supply a service (if made on or after October 1, 2015) is to be found in s.52 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015.
- 247. Ford v Cotesworth (1868) L.R. 4 Q.B. 127, 134 (not a bailment case).
- 248. This provision (unlike ss.13 and 14, above) is not confined to where the supplier acts in course of a business.
- 249. s.15(2). The equivalent term in a contract between a trader and a consumer to supply a service (if made on or after October 1, 2015) is to be found in s.51 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 cf. s.8 of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 (below, para.44-051).
- 250. See Vol.I, paras 29-098 et seq. See also CPR Pt 25 r.1(1)(m).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 33 - Bailment
Section 4. - Bailments for Valuable Consideration
(b) - Custody for Reward
(i) - In General

Custody for reward ²⁵¹

33-049

⚠ Where goods are delivered to a bailee to be taken care of by him in return for remuneration to be paid by the bailor, the contract is one of custody for reward. ²⁵² Possession of the chattel must be transferred to the bailee. ²⁵³ By s.13 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 ²⁵⁴ (covering bailments where the bailee acts in the course of a business), s.49(1) of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 (covering bailments between a trader and a consumer, where the contract is made on or after October 1, 2015 ²⁵⁵) and by the common law (applicable to other cases) the bailee must take reasonable care of the chattel, according to the circumstances of the particular case. ²⁵⁶ Thus, the bailee must take reasonable care to see that the place ²⁵⁷ where the chattel is kept is fit for the purpose of custody. ²⁵⁸ But there is no authority “to hold that a depositor of goods for safe custody, who, by himself or his servants, has had an opportunity of observing certain defects in the storehouse, must be taken to have agreed that any risk of injury to his goods which might possibly be occasioned by these defects should be borne by him, and not by his paid bailee ... the duty is incumbent on the latter, in the due fulfilment of his contract, of considering whether his premises can be safely used for the storage of [the goods bailed], and, if they cannot, to take immediate steps for placing the goods in a position of safety”. ²⁵⁹ The bailee must also take reasonable care to protect the chattel against any imminent danger ²⁶⁰; this may include a duty to take reasonable precautions against arson or vandalism by third parties. ²⁶¹ ⚠ He must take all proper measures to protect the bailor’s interests when the chattel is stolen ²⁶² or when claims adverse to the bailor are made to the chattel. ²⁶³ The bailee is not, however, an insurer and he will not be liable (apart from a special obligation undertaken in the contract) ²⁶⁴ where the loss or damage occurred without negligence on his part. ²⁶⁵

The onus of proof and the scope of the duty

33-050

⚠ The loss of, or injury to, the chattel while in the bailee’s possession places the onus of proof on the bailee to show that it was not caused ²⁶⁶ by any failure on his part to take reasonable care ²⁶⁷; but he need not show exactly how the loss or injury occurred. ²⁶⁸ The bailee’s duty to take reasonable care may include the duty to prevent damage to the chattel by the deliberate act of a third party. ²⁶⁹ ⚠ If the bailee relies on an exemption clause ²⁷⁰ he must prove facts which bring him within the exemption. ²⁷¹ The bailee is liable to the bailor for loss of or injury to the chattel caused by the negligence of the bailee’s employees or agents ²⁷² acting within the course of their employment or the apparent scope of their authority. ²⁷³ If the bailee entrusts the performance of his duty to take reasonable care of the chattel to an employee, then the bailee is liable, not only for the employee’s negligence which injures the chattel, but also for the employee’s fraud or dishonesty in making away with the chattel. ²⁷⁴

Damages

33-051

Where the bailee is liable for loss of the chattel, the bailor can recover as damages the actual value of the chattel, but he can recover further damages for consequential loss only if it was within the reasonable contemplation of the parties at the time the bailment was made. ²⁷⁵ The bailee has an insurable interest in the chattel, and may insure it for its full value. ²⁷⁶

Unauthorised dealings

33-052

The bailee must deal with the chattel in the manner authorised by the bailor. ²⁷⁷ Thus, the bailee may not delegate the storage to a third person without the bailor's permission, since personal considerations are involved in the bailor's choice of a bailee with whom to store his goods. ²⁷⁸ If the bailee deals with the chattel in an unauthorised manner, he takes upon himself the risk of loss and will be liable unless he shows that the loss occurred independently of his own acts. ²⁷⁹ So where the bailee delivers the chattel to a person not authorised by the bailor to receive it, he is liable in conversion for the misdelivery, and the question of reasonable care is irrelevant. ²⁸⁰

Exemptions from liability

33-053

Subject to the provisions of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 and the Consumer Rights Act 2015, ²⁸¹ the bailee may exempt himself from his common law liability by special conditions in the contract, ²⁸² but the exempting words must be express, unambiguous and adequate in all the circumstances ²⁸³ since they are likely to be construed strictly against the bailee. ²⁸⁴ Although the scope of an exemption clause is a question of construction, depending on the intention of the parties, ²⁸⁵ the courts will generally be slow to infer that a bailee is entitled to rely on his exemption clause if he deals with the chattel in an unauthorised manner ²⁸⁶ and it will require clear words for an exemption clause to be construed as wide enough to cover a fundamental breach ²⁸⁷ of the contract of bailment ²⁸⁸; nor can the bailee rely on an exemption clause if he orally misrepresents the scope of the clause at the time when the contract is made. ²⁸⁹ A sub-bailee may rely on exempting conditions as against the original bailor but only if the latter has actually (expressly or impliedly) or ostensibly authorised the bailee to make a sub-bailment containing those conditions. ²⁹⁰

Statutory control of exemption clauses

33-054

The main provisions of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 apply (inter alia) to contracts of bailment. ²⁹¹ Thus, where one party is dealing on the other's written standard terms of business the other party cannot, by reference to any contract term, ²⁹² when himself in breach of contract exclude or restrict any business ²⁹³ liability of his in respect of breach, ²⁹⁴ or claim to be entitled (inter alia) "to render a contractual performance substantially different from that which was reasonably expected of him, or, in respect of the whole or any part of his contractual obligation, to render no performance at all", ²⁹⁵ except insofar as the term satisfies the requirement of reasonableness. ²⁹⁶ Similarly, a contract term or notice ²⁹⁷ purporting to exclude or restrict business liability for loss or damage to property resulting from negligence must, to be effective, satisfy the requirement of reasonableness. ²⁹⁸ These provisions will therefore apply to the obligations of warehousemen, dry-cleaners and other business custodians for reward. In the case of bailments between a trader and a consumer, the Consumer Rights Act 2015 places substantial limits on the extent to which a trader can exclude liability to consumers in respect of a breach of the terms which the Act states are included in contracts of bailment. ²⁹⁹

Lien of custodian

33-055

Normally, a custodian for reward has no lien for his charges upon the chattel bailed with him ³⁰⁰ except where there is a special agreement granting him a lien. ³⁰¹ Special categories of custodians, however, have, by custom, acquired such a lien. ³⁰²

Statutory power to sell uncollected goods

33-056

Since 1977 there has been a wide statutory power conferred on bailees to sell the goods when the bailor is in breach of an obligation to take delivery of them. ³⁰³ These powers clearly extend to cases of custody of the goods. ³⁰⁴ The bailee, in appropriate circumstances, may follow the prescribed procedure and sell without the authority of the court ³⁰⁵; but, in some circumstances, he must (and in others he may) apply to the court to authorise a sale of the goods. ³⁰⁶ The details of these powers are examined later in this chapter. ³⁰⁷

Custody without special reward

33-057

Custody for reward may arise despite the absence of valuable consideration specifically allocated to the custody. For instance, where the wife of a tenant in a block of flats deposited a trunk in the room provided for storage by the landlords, it was held, notwithstanding that the rent was paid by the husband and that the wife made no special payment for the storage, that the relationship between the landlords and at least the families of tenants of the flats, if not also guests, was a business arrangement and not a gratuitous bailment. ³⁰⁸ Similarly, a hospital authority which is under a statutory duty to receive a patient, whose estate is liable for the cost of his maintenance, is a bailee for reward; therefore, when it takes possession of a patient's chattels upon his admission to the hospital, it must take reasonable care of them, e.g. it will be liable if valuable jewellery is lost through its failure to deposit the jewellery in a safe. ³⁰⁹ A banker who holds his customer's securities and valuables for safe custody may receive no special remuneration for doing so; but the better view, it is submitted, is that he should be treated as a bailee for reward. ³¹⁰

^{251.} Palmer at Ch.14. See below for the special cases of warehousemen (para.33-058), agisters (para.33-059), garaging of vehicles (para.33-060), railway cloakrooms (para.33-062), innkeepers (paras 33-101 et seq.) and lodging-house keepers (para.33-120).

^{252.} In deposit (above, para.33-032) there is no reciprocal advantage enjoyed by the bailee. As to custody "for reward" where there is no special payment for the custody, see below, para.33-057.

^{253.} cf. Ashby v Tolhurst [1937] 2 K.B. 242; Tinsley v Dudley [1951] 2 K.B. 18. (See below, para.33-061.)

^{254.} See above, paras 33-044 and 33-046.

^{255.} See below, para.38-531.

^{256.} Houghland v RR Low (Luxury Coaches) Ltd [1962] 1 Q.B. 694; Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716, 726. (The older formulation of the standard was that the custodian for reward must exercise the care and diligence exercised by a careful man in the custody of his own chattels of a similar kind: see Coggs v Bernard (1703) 2 Ld.Raym. 909, 916; Dean v Keate (1811) 3 Camp. 4; Jones at pp.86, 87.) It is not a defence that the bailee treated the chattel with the same care as he treated his own chattels: Re United Service Co (1870) L.R. 6 Ch. App. 212.

- 257. The bailee must also take care that any equipment used in connection with the chattel (e.g. tackle) is adequate for the purpose: Thomas v Day (1803) 4 Esp. 262.
- 258. Searle v Laverick (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 122; Brabant & Co v King [1895] A.C. 632; Turner v Stallibrass [1898] 1 Q.B. 56; Martin v LCC [1947] K.B. 628. But the bailee's duty is reduced if the bailor directs where the goods are to be placed: Harper v Jones (1879) 4 V.L.R. (L) 536.
- 259. Brabant & Co v King, above, at 641 (on the facts the goods bailed were explosive goods).
- 260. Brabant & Co v King, above, at 641 (flood).
- 261.  Lockspeiser Aircraft Ltd v Brooklands Aircraft Co Ltd [1990] C.L.Y. 250 (examined in detail by Palmer at para.14-032). But the duty is only one to take reasonable care: Sutcliffe v Chief Constable of West Yorkshire [1996] R.T.R. 86; Rana v Tears of Sutton Bridge [2015] EWHC 2597 (QB).
- 262. Coldman v Hill [1919] 1 K.B. 443.
- 263. Ranson v Platt [1911] 2 K.B. 291. See above, para.33-015.
- 264. A contractual obligation upon the bailee to insure the goods may justify the implication of an implied term making the bailee fully liable for loss of, or damage to, the goods: Roberts (1973) 124 New L.J. 849. On an undertaking to insure, see Lockspeiser Aircraft Ltd v Brooklands Aircraft Co Ltd, above.
- 265. Searle v Laverick (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 122; Chapman v GW Ry (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 278; Fagan v Green and Edwards Ltd [1926] 1 K.B. 102. The position is different where the bailee delivers the chattel to an unauthorised person: see below, para.33-052. It is not, however, necessary in order to avoid liability for a bailee to show what caused the loss: the bailee must show either that he took reasonable care of the goods or that his failure to do so did not contribute to the damage: Coopers Payen Ltd v Southampton Container Terminal Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 1223, [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 331 at [28].
- 266. The onus is on the bailee to prove the absence of any causal connection between a negligent act on his part and the loss of or damage to the chattel: Coldman v Hill, above, at 458; British Road Services Ltd v Arthur V Crutchley & Co Ltd [1968] 1 All E.R. 811, 820, 824; Piper v Hales [2013] All E.R. (D) 257 (Jan) at [30].
- 267. Brook's Wharf and Bull Wharf Ltd v Goodman Bros [1937] 1 K.B. 534, 538–539; Gutter v Tait (1947) 177 L.T. 1; Houghland v RR Low (Luxury Coaches) Ltd [1962] 1 Q.B. 694; Global Dress Co Ltd v WH Boase & Co Ltd [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 72; Transmotors Ltd v Robertson, Buckley & Co Ltd [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 224; Port Swettenham Authority v TW Wu and Co (M) Sdn Bhd [1979] A.C. 580, 590. See also above, paras 33-012, 33-032 (deposit); see below, para.33-064, 33-079 (hire), 35-059, 36-018 (carriage). cf. Phipps v New Claridge's Hotel Ltd (1905) 22 T.L.R. 49.
- 268. Bullen v Swan Electric Engraving Co (1907) 23 T.L.R. 258. cf. Phipps v New Claridge's Hotel Ltd, above; Joseph Travers & Sons Ltd v Cooper [1915] 1 K.B. 73. While it is not necessary as a matter of law for a bailee to show what the cause of the damage was, the identification of the cause may be a “significant pointer as to whether or not the bailee has exercised reasonable care”: Coopers Payne Ltd v Southampton Container Terminal Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 1223, [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 331 at [29].
- 269.  Lockspeiser Aircraft Ltd v Brooklands Aircraft Co Ltd, above. cf. Sutcliffe v Chief Constable of West Yorkshire [1996] R.T.R. 86 and Rana v Tears of Sutton Bridge [2015] EWHC 2597 (QB).

- 270. See below, para.33-053; also Vol.I, Ch.15.
- 271. LNW Ry v JP Ashton & Co [1920] A.C. 84; Levison v Patent Steam Carpet Cleaning Co Ltd [1978] Q.B. 69, 82, 83, 85. cf. Re S Davis & Co Ltd [1945] Ch. 402; Richmond Metal Co Ltd v J Coales & Son Ltd [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 423. Euro Cellular (Distribution) Plc v Danzas Ltd t/a Danzas AEI Intercontinental [2003] EWHC 3161 (Comm), [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 521 at [60]–[66].
- 272. The bailee may be vicariously liable for the negligence of his independent contractor to whom he has delegated part of his duty to take care of the chattel: British Road Services Ltd v Arthur V Crutchley & Co Ltd [1968] 1 All E.R. 811, 820, 824; Bosman (Transport) Ltd v LKW Walter International Transportorganisation AG [2002] EWCA Civ 850; East West Corp v DKBS 1912 and Akts Svendborg [2003] EWCA Civ 83, [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239 at [29].
- 273. Randleson v Murray (1838) 8 A. & E. 109; Beard v London General Omnibus Co [1900] 2 Q.B. 530. The custodian may be personally liable for negligence in choosing the employee in question: Williams v Curzon Syndicate Ltd (1919) 35 T.L.R. 475; John Carter (Fine Worsteds) Ltd v Hanson Haulage (Leeds) Ltd [1965] 2 Q.B. 495.
- 274. Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716 (approved by the House of Lords in Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827, 846, 852; and in Lister v Hesley Hall Ltd [2001] UKHL 22, [2002] 1 A.C. 215 at [19]–[20], [44]–[46], [55]–[60] and [71]–[76]; and by the Privy Council in the Port Swettenham case, above, at 591). cf. Leesh River Tea Co Ltd v British India SN Co Ltd [1967] 2 Q.B. 250. See also Brink's Global Services Inc v Igrox Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 1207, [2011] I.R.L.R. 343 and Atiyah, Vicarious Liability (1967), pp.268–272.
- 275. Anderson v NE Ry (1861) 4 L.T. 216. cf. Strand Electric and Engineering Co Ltd v Brisford Entertainments Ltd [1952] 2 Q.B. 246, 253–254. For the general principles of remoteness of damage in contract, see Vol.I, paras 26-107 et seq.
- 276. Hepburn v A Tomlinson (Hauliers) Ltd [1966] A.C. 451 (see above, para.33-025). The extent of the bailee's insurance cover is a question of construction of the particular policy and it is not the case that the bailee will in all cases be entitled to recover the full value of the goods lost or damaged. In particular, the policy may be held to cover only the legal liabilities of the bailee towards the bailor or a third party: see Ramco (UK) Ltd v International Insurance Company of Hanover [2004] EWCA Civ 675, [2004] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 866.
- 277. Lilley v Doubleday (1881) 7 Q.B.D. 510, 511. cf. Davies v Collins [1945] 1 All E.R. 247; Tappenden v Artus [1964] 2 Q.B. 185 (see below, paras 33-079–33-094); see also above, paras 33-026–33-029.
- 278. Edwards v Newland & Co [1950] 2 K.B. 534; Metaalhandel JA Magnus BV v Ardfields Transport Ltd [1987] 2 F.T.L.R. 319 (a “quasi-bailee” (who had contracted to collect and store goods) cannot avoid responsibility for their care by delegating their care to a sub-contractor). See Palmer (1978) 128 New L.J. 863.
- 279. James Morrison & Co Ltd v Shaw Savill and Albion Co Ltd [1916] 2 K.B. 783, 795, 796, 800; Lilley v Doubleday, above; Edwards v Newland & Co, above.
- 280. Jackson v Cochrane [1989] 2 Qd. R. 23. See also Ashby v Tolhurst [1937] 2 K.B. 242; Hollins v J Davy Ltd [1963] 1 Q.B. 844.
- 281. See below, para.33-054.
- 282. See Vol.I, Ch.15 and see below, paras 39-390–39-391; Coote, Exception Clauses (1964), Ch.2; Laskin (1956) 11 Univ. of Toronto L.J. 202. See, in addition to the cases cited below, Harris v GW Ry (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 515; Joseph Travers & Sons Ltd v Cooper [1915] 1 K.B. 73; Turner v Civil Service Supply Association [1926] 1 K.B. 50; British Traders and Shippers Ltd v Ubique Transport and Motor Engineering Co (London) Ltd [1952] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 236; Hollins v J Davy Ltd [1963] 1 Q.B. 844.

- 283. Alderslade v Hendon Laundry Ltd [1945] K.B. 189; Olley v Marlborough Court Ltd [1949] 1 K.B. 532; Canada SS Lines Ltd v R [1952] A.C. 192 (cf. Gillespie Bros & Co Ltd v Roy Bowles Transport Ltd [1973] Q.B. 400); Hollier v Rambler Motors (AMC) Ltd [1972] 2 Q.B. 71. cf. exemption clauses in hiring agreements, see below, para.33-078.
- 284. cf. Price & Co v Union Lighterage Co [1904] 1 K.B. 412; Rutter v Palmer [1922] 2 K.B. 87, 94.
- 285. Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827 (explaining Suisse Atlantique Société d'Armement Maritime SA v NV Rotterdamsche Kolen Centrale [1967] 1 A.C. 361). See Vol.I, paras 15-008 et seq.
- 286. Gibaud v GE Ry [1921] 2 K.B. 426, 431, 435; LNW Ry v Neilson [1922] 2 A.C. 263, 273–274; Cunard SS Co v Buerger [1927] A.C. 1; Alexander v Railway Executive [1951] 2 K.B. 882; Sydney City Council v West (1965) 114 C.L.R. 481; Mendelssohn v Normand Ltd [1970] 1 Q.B. 177; cf. J Evans & Son (Portsmouth) Ltd v Andrea Merzario Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1078. See also above, para.33-052.
- 287. The “doctrine” of fundamental breach was rejected by the House of Lords in the Photo Production case, above. For earlier cases on what amounts to a fundamental breach by the bailee, see Kenyon, Son & Craven Ltd v Baxter Hoare & Co Ltd [1971] 1 W.L.R. 519; United Fresh Meat Co Ltd v Charterhouse Cold Storage Ltd [1974] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 286. See now Vol.I, paras 15-023—15-027, 24-042.
- 288. The following decisions on this point must now be read in the light of the more recent House of Lords decisions (see n.285, above): Martin v N Negin Ltd (1945) 172 L.T. 275; Alexander v Railway Executive, above; Adams (Durham) Ltd and Day v Trust Houses Ltd [1960] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 380. cf. J Spurling Ltd v Bradshaw [1956] 1 W.L.R. 461; and John Carter (Fine Worsteds) Ltd v Hanson Haulage (Leeds) Ltd [1965] 2 Q.B. 495; Levison v Patent Steam Carpet Cleaning Co Ltd [1978] Q.B. 69. See Vol.I, paras 15-037—15-041.
- 289. Curtis v Chemical Cleaning and Dyeing Co [1951] 1 K.B. 805; Mendelssohn v Normand Ltd, above; J Evans & Son (Portsmouth) Ltd v Andrea Merzario Ltd [1976] 1 W.L.R. 1078.
- 290. The Pioneer Container [1994] 2 A.C. 324, 341–342; Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716, 729–730 (cf. at 731, 741). See Vol.I, paras 15-037—15-041.
- 291. For a fuller treatment of the Act, see Vol.I, paras 15-066 et seq. For the effect of the Act on exclusions of liability under non-contractual bailments, see Palmer (1978) 28 New L.J. 887, 915.
- 292. It seems that gratuitous bailments are outside the protection of this section (s.3), as is a bailor's claim against a sub-bailee (above, para.33-026) which does not depend on a contract between the parties. cf. however, s.2(2) and n.297 below.
- 293. s.1(3); see Vol.I, para.15-072.
- 294. s.3(2)(a).
- 295. s.3(2)(b).
- 296. See Vol.I, para.15-096.
- 297. Non-contractual bailments could be caught by this provision, e.g. even car park operators who operate under “licences” rather than bailments: see below, para.33-061.
- 298. s.2(2).
- 299. See below, para.38-546. The Act applies to contracts made on or after October 1, 2015, see below, para.38-431.

- 300. Hatton v Car Maintenance Co Ltd [1915] 1 Ch. 621; Gordon v Gordon [2002] EWCA Civ 1884 at [8]. cf. the lien of a person who expends skill or labour upon the chattel (see below, para.33-093). See generally Palmer at paras 14-096—14-103.
- 301. e.g. Jowitt & Sons v Union Cold Storage Co [1913] 3 K.B. 1.
- 302. See Bock v Gorrissen (1860) 2 De G.F. & J. 434, 443 (wharfingers); Re Witt (1876) 2 Ch. D. 489 (packers); Re London and Globe Finance Corp [1902] 2 Ch. 416 (factors, bankers and stockbrokers). cf. Singer Manufacturing Co v LSW Ry [1894] 1 Q.B. 833, 836, 837 (railway cloakrooms: see below, para.33-062).
- 303. Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 ss.12 and 13 (see below, paras 33-095—33-100).
- 304. e.g. Sch.1 Pt I para.4(1) expressly covers the situation where “a bailee is in possession of goods which he has held as custodian ...”
- 305. s.12.
- 306. s.13.
- 307. See below, paras 33-095—33-100.
- 308. Andrews v Home Flats (1945) 173 L.T. 408. cf. The Pioneer Container [1994] 2 A.C. 324, 338. (See above, para.33-026 n.130.)
- 309. Martin v LCC [1947] K.B. 628.
- 310. See above, para.33-035, and below, paras 34-442—34-444.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.

Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement

Volume II - Specific Contracts

Chapter 33 - Bailment

Section 4. - Bailments for Valuable Consideration

(b) - Custody for Reward

(ii) - Illustrations of Custody for Reward

Warehousemen

33-058

A warehouseman is liable ³¹¹ for any loss caused by want of reasonable care on his part or on the part of an agent or independent contractor to whom he has delegated performance of part of his duty to take reasonable care of the chattel. ³¹² When the chattel is lost, the onus is on the warehouseman to acquit himself by showing that he was not in default. ³¹³ He may, however (subject to statutory controls), ³¹⁴ contract out of his liability. ³¹⁵ It has been held that where a wharfinger negligently makes a representation to a third party as to certain goods being in his custody when, in fact, such goods have long since disappeared, he is estopped from denying that he has such goods in his possession, if, by reason of his negligence, the third party suffers damage. ³¹⁶

Agisters

33-059

The common law duty of a bailee with whom cattle are left to be fed for reward on a contract called agistment is to take reasonable care of them. ³¹⁷ Thus, an agister has been held to be in breach of his duty where the cattle are stolen through his negligence, ³¹⁸ or where he put the animal in a field knowing that there was not a sufficient fence to keep out a bull kept on the adjoining land. ³¹⁹ He does not discharge his duty as a bailee by proving that they were stolen without his default, if by using reasonable diligence he could have recovered them. ³²⁰ Further, if they are put in a place where by reason of their surroundings they are liable to suffer injury, ³²¹ or if they escape through the negligence of the bailee or his employee and in consequence of the escape are injured, ³²² the bailee will be liable. He has no lien, for he merely feeds without expending skill. ³²³ But if a lien is actually acquired by special agreement, and the owner for the purpose of defeating such lien gets the cattle away by fraud, the agister has a right to resume possession of the cattle and for so doing is not answerable in conversion. ³²⁴

Stabling of horses and garaging of vehicles

33-060

Where a horse is stabled or a vehicle is garaged in the bailee's building, he is obliged not only to take reasonable care of the horse or vehicle itself, but also to take reasonable care to see that the building is reasonably safe for the purpose of stabling or garaging. ³²⁵

Bailment distinguished from licence. ³²⁶

33-061

The circumstances of a particular case may show that, although one person permits another to leave his chattel on land in the possession of the former, there is no bailment. Thus, where the owner of a motorcar left it in an open car park and, upon payment of a shilling to the car park attendant, received a ticket on which were printed words negating liability and stating that all cars were left at owners' risk, it was held that the relationship between the owners of the car park and the owner of the car was that of licensor and licensee and not that of bailor and bailee.³²⁷ Similarly, where a motorbicycle was left in a covered yard forming part of the premises of a public house the publican was not liable for its loss through theft by a third party; he was not a bailee, since the motorbicycle had not been delivered into his possession and he was unaware that it was on his premises.³²⁸ There was no duty at common law owed to the owner of the chattel in these circumstances to take reasonable care to protect him and his chattel from the risk of the chattel being stolen by some third party.³²⁹ But under ss.12 and 13 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, there may be a duty on the defendant as a person who "agrees to carry out a service" in the course of a business³³⁰ and a similar duty may arise when a trader contracts to supply a service to a consumer under s.49(1) of the Consumer Rights Act 2015.

Railway warehouses and cloakrooms

33-062

The National Rail Conditions of Carriage, published in May 2012, no longer indicate when transport begins and ends.³³¹ According to these Conditions, a train company will only be liable for any loss or damage to luggage, articles, animals or cycles in its trains or on its premises if the loss or damage was caused by the fault of a train company or a rail service company's, staff or agents.³³² However, a train company's liability in respect of any item will not exceed the limit laid down in the EU Rail Passengers' Rights and Obligations Regulation³³³ or the value of that item, whichever is the lower.³³⁴ Property found on a train or on a train company's premises must be handed over immediately to an employee of the train company and are not to be treated as the property of the finder.³³⁵ In the case of such property, the train company may (i) open it and examine its contents before removing it to a secure place and (ii) without being liable, remove or dispose of any property which might in its opinion cause any damage or any injury or inconvenience to persons³³⁶ and (iii) within prescribed limits, make a charge for retrieval of the property by the owner.³³⁷ The Conditions further state that a train company will take reasonable care of any luggage, articles, animals or cycles which are taken into its safekeeping after being left in its trains or on its premises and will make a reasonable effort to contact the owner.³³⁸ However, a train company or a rail service company may restrict or refuse access to retrieve any property left in its trains or on its premises if it is reasonable to do so.³³⁹ It has been held that a train company must redeliver the goods to the person producing the ticket on a reasonable request and within a reasonable time.³⁴⁰

33-063

The train company may vary their liabilities as bailees by special clauses in the contract³⁴¹ or in a ticket handed to the bailor.³⁴² The train company has a lien for its charges on goods deposited in a cloakroom, and the lien will prevail against the owner of the goods even where the person depositing them was only a hirer, e.g. under a hire-purchase agreement.³⁴³

^{311.} Both under s.13 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 (covering cases where the warehouseman-bailee acts in the course of a business); and under the common law: Cailiff v Danvers (1792) Peake 114; Chapman v GW Ry (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 278; Mitchell v Lancs & Yorks Ry (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 256.

^{312.} British Road Services Ltd v Arthur V Crutchley & Co Ltd [1968] 1 All E.R. 811, 820, 824 (the obligation was placed on the bailee on the basis of an implied term in the contract of bailment).

- 313. Mackenzie v Cox (1840) 9 C. & P. 632; Reeve v Palmer (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 84; Brooks Wharf Bull & Wharf Ltd v Goodman Bros [1937] 1 K.B. 534. cf. see above, paras 33-032—33-050.
- 314. See above, para.33-054.
- 315. Rosin and Turpentine Import Co v Jacobs (1910) 15 Com. Cas. 111; Gibaud v GE Ry [1921] 2 K.B. 426; Rutter v Palmer [1922] 2 K.B. 87. See the approach to exemption clauses adopted by the House of Lords: see above, para.33-053; Vol.I, Ch.15, paras 15-024—15-027.
- 316. Seton v Lafone (1887) 19 Q.B.D. 68. cf. Laurie & Morewood v Dudin & Sons [1926] 1 K.B. 223. On attornment, see above, para.33-030.
- 317. Smith v Cook (1875) 1 Q.B.D. 79, 81; Turner v Stallibrass [1898] 1 Q.B. 56; Coldman v Hill [1919] 1 K.B. 443, 451. See also ss.12 and 13 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 (see above, paras 33-044—33-048) which cover cases where the bailee (supplier of services) acts in the course of a business and s.49(1) of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 which, for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015, covers cases where the bailee is a trader contracting with a consumer. cf. Sheehy v Faughan [1991] 1 I.R. 425 (mare left at defendant's stud: onus of proof lay on defendant to show that her death was not due to his neglect).
- 318. Coldman v Hill, above.
- 319. Smith v Cook, above.
- 320. Coldman v Hill, above.
- 321. Turner v Stallibrass, above; cf. Reid v Calderwood (1911) 45 Ir.L.T. 139 (owner aware of dangerous state of the field).
- 322. Halestrap v Gregory [1895] 1 Q.B. 561.
- 323. Jackson v Cummins (1839) 5 M. & W. 342; Re Southern Livestock Producers Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 24; Bell and Bell v Clare (1989) 23 F.C.R. 274. See also Ward v Fielden [1985] C.L.Y. 2000 (racehorse trainer has no lien over horses being trained).
- 324. Wallace v Woodgate (1824) 1 Car. & P. 575.
- 325. Searle v Laverick (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 122 (a livery-stable keeper); see also above, paras 33-044—33-046. A livery-stable keeper has no lien on a horse for its keep: Judson v Etheridge (1833) 1 C. & M. 743; Orchard v Rackstraw (1850) 9 C.B. 698; Re Southern Livestock Producers Ltd, above. cf. Bevan v Waters (1828) 3 Car. & P. 520.
- 326. This paragraph was cited with approval and applied in BG Transport Service Ltd v Marston Motor Co Ltd [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 371 (distinguishing Sydney City Council v West (1965) 114 C.L.R. 481). See Palmer at paras 5-001 et seq. The distinction between a bailment and a licence can, however, be a difficult one to draw on the facts of an individual case: see, for example, The Rigoletto [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 532, 545–547 (but note the dissent of Chadwick L.J. at 548) and Odone v Hawarden Services Ltd [2014] EWHC 1694 (QB), [2014] All E.R. (D) 214 (May).
- 327. Ashby v Tolhurst [1937] 2 K.B. 242. See also Halbauer v Brighton Corp [1954] 1 W.L.R. 1161. cf. Shorters Parking Station Ltd v Johnson [1963] N.Z.L.R. 135; James Buchanan & Co Ltd v Hay's Transport Services Ltd [1972] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 535, 542.
- 328. Tinsley v Dudley [1951] 2 K.B. 18.
- 329. But to the extent that the law might impose a duty to take reasonable care in respect of damage to the chattel left on the premises of the defendant, the provisions of s.2(2) of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 might apply see Vol.I, para.15-081.

- 330. See above, paras 33-044—33-046.
- 331. Previously, the conditions published by the British Railways Board stated that, after the “termination of the transit”, the Board held goods carried by them as warehousemen, not as carriers, and the relevant conditions were those applicable to the former situation. The distinction between the beginning and the end of transit is discussed further below at para.36-077.
- 332. Cl.50. See further below para.36-076.
- 333. EC No 1371/2007.
- 334. Cl.50. See further below para.36-076.
- 335. Cl.54.
- 336. Cl.55.
- 337. Cl.56.
- 338. Cl.52. See further below para.36-076.
- 339. Cl.53.
- 340. Stallard v GW Ry (1862) 2 B. & S. 419.
- 341. e.g. Harris v GW Ry (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 515, 529–530; Pratt v SE Ry [1897] 1 Q.B. 718. See above, para.33-050, and Vol.I, Ch.15.
- 342. As to conditions in tickets being incorporated into the contract, see Vol.I, paras 13-008 et seq.
- 343. Singer Manufacturing Co v LSW Ry [1894] 1 Q.B. 833 (this is an extension of the lien exercisable by a railway undertaking as a carrier).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 33 - Bailment
Section 4. - Bailments for Valuable Consideration
(c) - Hire
(i) - Hire (Unregulated by the Consumer Credit Act)

Hire ³⁴⁴

33-064

In the bailment termed “hire” the bailee receives both possession of the chattel and the right to use it, ³⁴⁵ in return for remuneration to be paid to the bailor or other reward provided to the bailor. ³⁴⁶ The bailee is under an obligation to return the chattel to the owner (or his nominee) at the expiration of the fixed period of the hiring ³⁴⁷ and to pay the cost of returning it ³⁴⁸; but in a hiring or lease of livestock, the progeny of the livestock born during the hiring belongs to the hirer (unless the contract provides to the contrary). ³⁴⁹ While the bailment continues to subsist, the bailee is entitled to possessory remedies, and can prevent anyone, including the owner, ³⁵⁰ from interfering with the chattel against his will.

33-065

This section will first examine the rules applicable to a hiring not falling within the definition of a “consumer hire agreement” regulated by the Consumer Credit Act 1974, ³⁵¹ and will then consider that Act.

Terms implied into a contract of hire ³⁵²

33-066

The Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 has introduced ³⁵³ into contracts for the hire of goods a number of implied terms (broadly corresponding with those implied into contracts for the sale of goods). ³⁵⁴ The Consumer Rights Act 2015 has similarly included in contracts for the hire of goods between a trader and a consumer a number of terms which also broadly correspond with those implied into contracts for the sale of goods. ³⁵⁵ Although most problems may be solved by reference to the terms implied by these Acts, ³⁵⁶ the common law rules should also be examined, because, in the case of contracts of hire which fall within the scope of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, the Act provides that it does not prejudice the operation of:

“... any rule of law whereby any condition or warranty (other than one relating to quality or fitness ³⁵⁷ is to be implied in ... a contract for the hire of goods.” ³⁵⁸

It would, nevertheless, be true to say that the common law rules are now considerably diminished in significance. The common law rules will therefore be set out briefly before turning to the terms implied by the 1982 and 2015 Acts.

Implied terms as to possession

33-067

At common law there was no authority which expressly recognised the existence of an obligation on the part of the bailor that he had the right to transfer possession of the goods by way of hire. But the common law did recognise the existence of a warranty that the bailee would enjoy uninterrupted use and enjoyment of the goods for the period of the hire.³⁵⁹ These terms have now been considerably strengthened by the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982³⁶⁰ which provides that certain terms³⁶¹ are to be implied in “a contract for the hire of goods”³⁶² (which is not restricted to hiring in the course of a business by either party): “there is an implied condition on the part of the bailor that in the case of a bailment he has a right to transfer possession of the goods by way of hire for the period of the bailment”³⁶³; “there is also an implied warranty that the bailee will enjoy quiet possession of the goods for the period of the bailment except so far as the possession may be disturbed by the owner or other person entitled to the benefit of any charge or encumbrance disclosed or known to the bailee before the contract is made”.³⁶⁴ Similar terms are to be treated as included in a contract of hire concluded between a trader and a consumer under the Consumer Rights Act 2015.³⁶⁵ Thus a term is to be included that at the beginning of the period of hire the trader has the right to transfer possession of the goods by way of hire for that period³⁶⁶ and that the consumer will enjoy quiet possession of the goods except so far as it may be disturbed by the owner or other person entitled to the benefit of any charge or encumbrance disclosed or known to the consumer before entering into the contract.³⁶⁷

Implied terms as to description and sample

33-068

The common law on hiring has little authority on correspondence with description or sample. But it is clear that the owner must supply a chattel which corresponds with the description of the chattel which, in the contract of hire, he undertook to supply.³⁶⁸ The Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 also implies terms on hiring by description or by sample. Where, in a contract for the hire of goods (the definition is not restricted to hiring in the course of a business), the bailor bails or agrees to bail the goods by description,³⁶⁹ there is an implied condition that the goods will correspond with the description³⁷⁰; where he bails or agrees to bail the goods by reference to a sample, “there is an implied condition—(a) that the bulk will correspond with the sample in quality; and (b) that the bailee will have a reasonable opportunity of comparing the bulk with the sample; and (c) that the goods will be free from any defect, making their quality unsatisfactory,³⁷¹ which would not be apparent on reasonable examination of the sample”.³⁷² Contracts of hire which fall within the scope of Ch.2 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 are also to be treated as including a term that the goods will match the description³⁷³ and, in the case where the hire is by reference to a sample of goods, that the goods will match the sample except to the extent that any differences between the sample and the goods are brought to the consumer's attention before the contract is made and that the goods will be free from any defects that makes their quality unsatisfactory and that would not be apparent on a reasonable examination of the sample.³⁷⁴

Common law as to quality and fitness

33-069

The common law rules as to quality and fitness are not clearly formulated,³⁷⁵ and they are now of very limited practical utility.³⁷⁶ Subject to any express contractual provisions,³⁷⁷ the normal rule is that the owner who lets out a chattel on hire must take reasonable care to see that it is in a reasonably fit condition for the purpose for which the bailee is to use it.³⁷⁸ Thus, in an ordinary hiring contract, the owner impliedly assumes some contractual responsibility for the fitness of the chattel for the purpose for which the hirer requires it,³⁷⁹ but the existence and extent of the obligation depends on the contractual intention of the parties,³⁸⁰ which is to be ascertained from the provisions of the particular contract and the circumstances in which the contract was made.³⁸¹ The implied undertaking, however, is only to the effect that the chattel is as fit for the purpose as reasonable care and skill on the part of the owner can make it³⁸²; breach of the undertaking may lead to liability for consequential damage.³⁸³ Although the undertaking implied at common law does not render the bailor liable where the immediate cause of the injury was a defect in the chattel not discoverable by reasonable care or skill,³⁸⁴ the onus of proving such a defence is on the bailor.³⁸⁵

Illustrations of the terms implied at common law

33-070

Where a motor car is let on hire, the owner (subject to the express terms of the contract) impliedly undertakes that it is “a functioning car which could be used on the roads”, “a viable motorcar”, “a roadworthy car”.³⁸⁶ Such an implied undertaking depends on the existence of a bailment for hire; it has been held, for instance, that the relationship of bailment may arise between a company owning taxi-cabs and the drivers of the cabs where the company receives a proportion of the fares earned by the drivers.³⁸⁷ Many older cases on the undertaking as to fitness implied at common law concerned the hire of horses and carriages: e.g. the owner was liable if the horse was vicious,³⁸⁸ or if the horse was not fit for the particular purpose for which it was hired.³⁸⁹ The undertaking as to fitness implied at common law may extend to cover an employee of the bailor whose services are hired, together with the vehicle, in order to drive it³⁹⁰, although the undertaking is limited to those acts of the employee which are within the scope of his employment, under the doctrine of vicarious liability in tort the scope of employment may be wide enough to cover even fraudulent acts of the employee.³⁹¹

Implied terms as to quality: the 1982 Act³⁹²

33-071

The Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 also provides implied terms as to quality and fitness³⁹³, where under a contract for the hire of goods, “the bailor bails goods in the course of a business”,³⁹⁴ there is an implied condition³⁹⁵ that the goods supplied under the contract are of satisfactory quality”³⁹⁶; but there is no such condition “(a) as regards defects specifically drawn to the bailee’s attention before the contract is made; (b) if the bailee examines the goods before the contract is made, as regards defects which that examination ought to reveal; or (c) where the goods are bailed by reference to a sample, which would have been apparent on a reasonable examination of the sample”.³⁹⁷

Implied term as to fitness: the 1982 Act

33-072

Finally, the Act implies a term about fitness for a particular purpose where “the bailor bails goods in the course of a business”.³⁹⁸ Where “the bailee, expressly or by implication, makes known [to the bailor or to a credit-broker³⁹⁹] ... any particular purpose for which the goods are being bailed”⁴⁰⁰ under a contract for hire, there is “an implied condition that the goods supplied under the contract are reasonably fit for that purpose, whether or not that is a purpose for which such goods are commonly supplied”.⁴⁰¹ But this provision “does not apply where the circumstances show that the bailee does not rely, or that it is unreasonable for him to rely, on the skill or judgment of the bailor or credit-broker”.⁴⁰²

Durability

33-073

The express reference to durability⁴⁰³ in the list of factors which can be taken into account when deciding whether or not goods are of satisfactory quality, resolves a point which had been of some doubt at common law, namely whether the implied terms continue to apply to the hired goods for a period after the bailor has transferred possession to the bailee.⁴⁰⁴

Implied terms as to quality and fitness: the 2015 Act

33-074

The Consumer Rights Act 2015 provides that contracts for the hire of goods from a trader to a consumer are to be treated as including a term that the quality of goods is satisfactory.⁴⁰⁵ Where, before the contract is made, the consumer, either expressly or by implication, makes known to the trader any particular purpose for which the consumer is contracting for the goods, the contract is also to be treated as including a term that the goods are reasonably fit for that purpose, whether or not that is a purpose for which goods of that kind are usually supplied.⁴⁰⁶ However, the latter term is not to be treated as included in the contract if the circumstances show that the consumer did not rely or it was unreasonable for the consumer to rely on the skill or judgment of the trader or credit-broker.⁴⁰⁷

Remedies: diminution of price and damages

33-075

If the owner supplies a defective chattel in breach of his warranty of fitness for purpose, the hirer can set up that breach in diminution or extinction of the rentals due under the contract. If the damages are assessed on the basis of hiring a similar item on similar terms they are likely to equal the claim for rentals.⁴⁰⁸ In the case of a contract of hire which falls within the Consumer Rights Act, the consumer is given a right to a price reduction in the circumstances prescribed in s.24 of the Act.⁴⁰⁹

Remedies: termination

33-076

At common law the remedies for breach of an implied term turn on the nature of the term broken. Where the term broken is a condition, then the bailee is in principle entitled to terminate the contract of hire.⁴¹⁰ But where the term broken is a warranty, the bailee is not entitled to terminate the contract and is confined to a remedy in damages.⁴¹¹ The Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 makes no general provision for the consequences of breach and so the entitlement of the bailee to terminate will turn on whether the term broken has been classified by the Act as a condition or a warranty. The Act does, however, contain one restriction on the right of the bailee to terminate. Section 10A(1) of the Act states that where the bailee would, apart from this subsection, have the right to treat the contract as repudiated by reason of a breach on the part of the bailor of a term implied by ss.8, 9, 10(2)(a) or 10(2)(b) of the Act and the breach is so slight that it would be unreasonable for him to do so the breach is not to be treated as a breach of a condition but may be treated as a breach of warranty. In other words, termination is not an available remedy in these circumstances and the only remedy is damages. This provision has created an element of uncertainty in commercial transactions. It is for the bailor to show that the consequences of the breach are so slight that it would be unreasonable for the bailee to treat the contract as repudiated.⁴¹² It is open to the parties to contract out of this provision, either actually or inferentially,⁴¹³ and thereby restore a greater element of certainty to their dealings. One restriction on the right to terminate which is not contained in the Act is that there is no provision which corresponds to s.11(4) of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 which states that where the buyer has accepted the goods the breach of a condition is generally only to be regarded as a breach of warranty. A court which wished to avoid the conclusion that the hirer had not lost his right to terminate where he continues to use the goods after becoming aware of the breach might find that he has lost his right to terminate as a result of his affirmation of the contract.⁴¹⁴

Remedies: the Consumer Rights Act

33-077

The remedies available to a consumer under the Consumer Rights Act 2015⁴¹⁵ where the trader has breached one of the terms treated as being included in a contract of hire concluded between a trader and consumer is more elaborate than that to be found at common law or in the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982. These include a short-term right to reject the goods,⁴¹⁶ a right of partial rejection,⁴¹⁷ a right to repair or replacement⁴¹⁸ and a right to a price reduction or final right to reject.⁴¹⁹

Exemption clauses⁴²⁰

33-078

At common law, the liability of the bailor for breach of the implied undertaking of fitness may be excluded by a special clause in the contract, provided the terms of the clause are made known to the hirer.⁴²¹ Subject to the provisions of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 the terms implied by the 1982 Act may be negated or varied by express agreement, by the course of dealing between the parties or by usage.⁴²² But the ability of a bailor to exclude or restrict his liability for breach of obligations or duties arising from things done or to be done by him in the course of a business⁴²³ is curtailed by the provisions of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977.⁴²⁴ In addition to the control imposed by s.2 of the Act (liability for death, personal injury or other loss or damage resulting from negligence)⁴²⁵ and s.3 (exclusion or restriction of liability arising in contract where the person against whom the exemption clause is raised deals on the other's written standard terms of business),⁴²⁶ s.7 applies specifically to contracts⁴²⁷ of bailment ("where the possession ... of goods passes under ... a contract not governed by the law of sale of goods or hire-purchase ...")⁴²⁸ and to terms in such contracts "excluding or restricting liability"⁴²⁹ for breach of obligation arising by implication of law from the nature of the contract.⁴³⁰ Section 7 thus applies to clauses which exclude or restrict a business liability under (inter alia) contracts of hire, or for work and labour. It does not specify the terms to be implied into the contract,⁴³¹ but it controls attempts to exclude or restrict liability arising under such terms. Section 7(1A)⁴³² provides:

"Liability in respect of the goods' correspondence with description or sample, of their quality or fitness for any particular purpose, cannot be excluded or restricted by reference to such a term except in so far as the term satisfies the requirement of reasonableness."

Section 7(4) further provides that:

"Liability in respect of—

(a)

the right to transfer ownership of the goods, or give possession; or the assurance of quiet possession to a person taking goods in pursuance of the contract, cannot ...⁴³³ be excluded or restricted by reference to any such term except in so far as the term satisfies the requirement of reasonableness."

(b)

As far as the Consumer Rights Act 2015 is concerned, a term of a contract to hire goods from a trader to a consumer is not binding on the consumer to the extent that it would exclude or restrict the trader's liability arising under ss.9–16 of the Act.⁴³⁴ Apart from the 1977 and 2015 Acts, the applicability of an exemption clause is a question of construction, depending on the intention of the parties⁴³⁵; it will require clear words for an exemption clause to be construed as wide enough to exempt the bailor from a fundamental breach of his undertaking.⁴³⁶ The rules on incorporation⁴³⁷ also apply. Thus the hirer will not be bound by an exemption clause printed on the back of a ticket which purports to be merely a receipt. ⁴³⁸

Obligations of the hirer

33-079

The hirer is liable to pay the agreed hire, ⁴³⁹ to return the chattel at the expiration of the agreed period, ⁴⁴⁰ and to pay the cost of returning it. ⁴⁴¹ The hirer may escape liability for failure to return the chattel if he can prove that the chattel was lost without the loss being due to his fault, ⁴⁴² or that there was “good cause” for not returning it. ⁴⁴³ The hirer is bound to take reasonable care of the chattel hired, but he is not liable for damage to it if he can prove ⁴⁴⁴ that he or his employee (acting in the course of his employment) were not negligent in causing the damage. ⁴⁴⁵ A special clause in the contract may vary the hirer’s liability at common law, and such a clause may be interpreted in the light of the condition of the chattel at the commencement of the hiring. ⁴⁴⁶

Restrictions on use

33-080

The hirer may use the chattel only for the purpose for which it was let to him. ⁴⁴⁷ So, in early cases, if a horse was let for riding, the hirer was not permitted to use it for jumping ⁴⁴⁸; if a horse was let for a particular journey, the hirer was not allowed to exceed that journey. ⁴⁴⁹ But the authority granted to the hirer to use the chattel will be construed as conferring on him implied authority to do in relation to the chattel anything reasonably incidental to its reasonable use, unless there is express provision to the contrary in the contract. ⁴⁵⁰ The hirer who uses a chattel for a purpose not contemplated by the contract of hiring will be liable both in contract and in tort for any loss caused by such use. ⁴⁵¹

Relief against forfeiture

33-081

Where the contract provides for forfeiture of amounts paid, or for premature termination of the hiring, upon a breach by the hirer, the doctrine of relief against forfeiture may apply. ⁴⁵²

Repair and maintenance of the hired chattel

33-082

The terms of the contract may make the bailor liable for the repair of the chattel. ⁴⁵³ Apart from a special obligation undertaken in the contract, the hirer is not responsible for fair wear and tear, ⁴⁵⁴ nor is he under any obligation to do any repairs ⁴⁵⁵ except such as are naturally incidental to the due performance of his obligation to take reasonable care. ⁴⁵⁶ The hirer of a horse must provide it with suitable food, unless there is an agreement to the contrary. ⁴⁵⁷ Similarly, the hirer of a motorcar is obliged to pay for petrol and oil and other “running expenses”. The mere fact of a bailment does not confer on the bailee any authority to deliver the chattel bailed to a third party for repair or otherwise so as to give that third party a lien for work done on the chattel: but where the circumstances show implied authority from the owner (e.g. where the bailee expressly agrees to keep the chattel in repair), a third party who repairs it at the request of the hirer may acquire, for the cost of the repairs, a lien effective against the owner as well as against the hirer. ⁴⁵⁸

Damages for wrongful detention by the hirer

33-083

Where the hirer wrongfully detains a chattel hired to him by the claimant, and the chattel is one which the claimant, as part of his business, hires out to users, the normal measure of damages is the full market rate of hire for the whole period of the detention if the hirer has made beneficial use of the chattel during that period. ⁴⁵⁹

-
- ^{344.} For an account of chattel-hiring, see the Crowther Report on Consumer Credit, Cmnd. 4596 (1971), paras 2.4.56 et seq. The contract of hire-purchase is dealt with separately in Ch.39, below (many of the respective duties of the owner and hirer discussed in paras 39-311 et seq. apply to ordinary hire).
- ^{345.} e.g. Beecham Foods Ltd v North Supplies (Edmonton) Ltd [1959] 1 W.L.R. 643. Where a contract of hiring is specifically enforceable, the hirer may have an equitable interest in the chattel: Bristol Airport Plc v Powdrill [1990] Ch. 744, 759.
- ^{346.} TRM Copy Centres (UK) Ltd v Lanwall Services Ltd [2009] UKHL 35, [2009] 1 W.L.R. 1375 at [11]. The “remuneration” can be paid either in cash or in kind. On the facts of the case it was held that no remuneration was paid by the party who received the photocopier so that the bailment was not by way of hire but was a gratuitous bailment. This was a case in which the provider of the photocopier paid the other party for the privilege of locating its photocopier in a place where it might generate income for both parties. If it did not generate any income, the recipient was not obliged to make any payment to the provider.
- ^{347.} Mills v Graham (1804) 1 Bos. & P.N.R. 140, 145; British Crane Hire Corp Ltd v Ipswich Plant Hire Ltd [1975] Q.B. 303, 311, 313. (But the hirer might escape liability for failure to return the chattel if he can prove that the loss of the chattel was not due to his fault: British Crane Hire Corp Ltd v Ipswich Plant Hire Ltd, above, at 311–312, 313 (see below, para.33-079); or the terms of the hiring may oblige the bailee to deliver the chattel to a third person at the expiration of the period: see above, para.33-010.) cf. Ballett v Mingay [1943] K.B. 281. In the unlikely event of the bailor not accepting redelivery, the bailee may be able to sell the chattel under statutory powers: see below, paras 33-095—33-100.
- ^{348.} British Crane Hire Corp Ltd v Ipswich Plant Hire Ltd, above, at 312.
- ^{349.} Tucker v Farm and General Investment Trust Ltd [1966] 2 Q.B. 421.
- ^{350.} Lee v Atkinson & Brook (1609) Yelv. 172; Turner v Hardcastle (1862) 11 C.B.(N.S.) 683. See above, para.33-019.
- ^{351.} See below, paras 33-085—33-090.
- ^{352.} Palmer at paras 21-016 et seq.; the Law Commission’s report on Law of Contract: Report on Implied Terms in Contracts for the Supply of Goods, Law Com. No.95 (1979).
- ^{353.} In addition to ss.13–15 of the Act, which apply if the hiring is also part of “a contract for the supply of services” (see above, paras 33-044—33-048).
- ^{354.} See below, paras 44-074 et seq. The Act is noted by Palmer in (1983) 46 M.L.R. 619 and [1983] L.M.C.L.Q. 377; see also Woodroffe, Goods and Services—The New Law (1982), Ch.5.
- ^{355.} A contract for the hire of goods is defined in s.6(1) of the Act (which applies to contracts made on or after October 1, 2015) as one under which the trader gives or agrees to give the consumer possession of the goods with the right to use them, subject to the terms of the contract, for a period determined in accordance with the contract. A hire-purchase agreement is not, for this purpose, a contract of hire. See below paras 38-455 et seq.
- ^{356.} See below, paras 33-068, 33-071—33-072.
- ^{357.} s.9(1) (see below, para.33-071 n.393).

- 358. s.11(3).
- 359. See, for example, Lee v Atkinson & Brook (1609) Yelv. 172; Turner v Hardcastle (1862) 11 C.B.(N.S.) 683.
- 360. See below, para.33-071. cf. the terms implied into contracts for the sale of goods (see below, paras 44-074 et seq.) or for hire-purchase (see below, paras 39-382 et seq.).
- 361. Except by s.9(1) (see n.393, below), the Act does not prejudice other legislation or any rule of law about terms to be implied in a contract for the hire of goods: s.11(3).
- 362. Defined to mean “a contract under which one person bails or agrees to bail goods to another by way of hire” (whether or not services are also provided, and whatever is the nature of the consideration); but the definition excludes hire-purchase agreements, and contracts under which goods are to be bailed in exchange for trading stamps on their redemption: s.6. (For definitions, see s.18(1).) Palmer [1983] L.M.C.L.Q. 377 discusses various types of contract covered by the Act. In a conditional sale or under a Romalpa clause (see below, paras 44-174—44-186), the provisions of the 1982 Act could apply to the period of bailment (i.e. before the passing of property to the bailee).
- 363. And that “in the case of an agreement to bail he will have such a right at the time of the bailment”: s.7(1). cf. below, paras 44-075 et seq.
- 364. s.7(2). The right of the bailor to repossess the goods under an express or implied term of the contract is not affected: s.7(3) (but equitable relief against forfeiture (Vol.I, paras 26-205—26-214) could prevent the bailor from repossessing). cf. below, paras 44-078 et seq.
- 365. s.17. The Act applies to contracts made on or after October 1, 2015; see below, para.38-473.
- 366. s.17(1).
- 367. s.17(2)(c).
- 368. Astley Industrial Trust Ltd v Grimley [1963] 1 W.L.R. 584; Charterhouse Credit Co Ltd v Tolly [1963] 2 Q.B. 683 (overruled on another point: Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827). On the consequences of the breach of this undertaking, see below, paras 39-387—39-389.
- 369. The definition includes the situation where “being exposed for supply, the goods are selected by the bailee”: s.8(4).
- 370. s.8(1) and (2). See, by way of example, Brewer v Mann [2012] EWCA Civ 246, [2012] R.T.R. 28 . If the reference is to a sample as well as a description it is not sufficient that the bulk of the goods corresponds with the sample if the goods do not also correspond with the description: s.8(3). cf. below, para.44-086 (sale of goods).
- 371. “Satisfactory quality” is to be construed in accordance with s.9(2A), and s.18(3).
- 372. s.10(2). cf. below, paras 44-095 et seq.
- 373. s.11(1).
- 374. s.13(2). Similar terms are to be treated as included in a contract to hire goods by reference to a model of the goods that is seen or examined by the consumer before entering into the contract: s.14(2).
- 375. See Davies (1964) 38 Aust.L.J. 277; Turner (1972) 46 Aust.L.J. 560, 619; Palmer (1975) 4 An.—Am.L.R. 207; and the Law Commission Report cited in n.352, above.
- 376. It can be argued that the common law rules still apply to contracts where the bailor is not acting in the course of a business. The basis for this argument is that s.11(3) states that nothing in the preceding provisions of the Act “prejudices” the operation of any rule of law whereby any condition (other than one relating to quality or fitness) is to be implied into such contracts. However, the words in brackets, taken together with the wording of s.9(1), suggest that there is no longer any room for the common law implied term. The better view would therefore appear to be that the common law rules are practically redundant: see Palmer at para.21-026.

- 377. Astley Industrial Trust Ltd v Grimley [1963] 1 W.L.R. 584; Charterhouse Credit Co Ltd v Tolly, above; Doobay v Mohabeer [1967] 2 A.C. 278; Hadley v Droitwich Construction Co Ltd [1968] 1 W.L.R. 37. See, however, the provisions of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 (see above, para.33-054; see below, para.33-078).
- 378. Yeoman Credit Ltd v Apps [1962] 2 Q.B. 508; Oliver v Saddler & Co [1929] A.C. 584 (in this case there was no actual hiring, but since the transaction was for the mutual convenience of bailor and bailee, the House of Lords did not treat it as a gratuitous bailment, but as analogous to a hiring); Mowbray v Merryweather [1895] 2 Q.B. 640; cf. MacCarthy v Young (1861) 6 H. & N. 329 (gratuitous loan); The Moorcock (1889) 14 P.D. 64; Farnworth Finance Facilities Ltd v Attridge [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1053, 1056 (hire-purchase: see below, para.39-385).
- 379. Fowler v Lock (1872) L.R. 7 C.P. 272, 280, 282 (subsequent proceedings (1874) L.R. 10 C.P. 90). cf. European and Australian Royal Mail Co Ltd v Royal Mail Steam Packet Co (1861) 30 L.J.C.P. 247.
- 380. The circumstances must show that the hirer is not relying solely on his own judgment of the chattel: Yeoman Credit Ltd v Apps [1962] 2 Q.B. 508; but a cursory inspection by the hirer does not preclude his relying on the implied warranty: Jones v Page (1867) 15 L.T. 619. cf. Robertson v Amazon Tug and Lighterage Co (1881) 7 Q.B.D. 598; GM Shepherd Ltd v North West Securities Ltd, 1991 S.L.T. 499.
- 381. Astley Industrial Trust Ltd v Grimley [1963] 1 W.L.R. 584 (cf. below, para.39-385); Charterhouse Credit Co Ltd v Tolly [1963] 2 Q.B. 683. (This case also deals with the measure of damages when the implied undertaking as to fitness is broken: see below, para.39-389.)
- 382. Mowbray v Merryweather [1895] 2 Q.B. 640; Reed v Dean [1949] 1 K.B. 188; Yeoman Credit Ltd v Apps, above; Astley Industrial Trust Ltd v Grimley, above, at 598. See also Vogan & Co v Oulton (1899) 81 L.T. 435, and see below, para.39-385. cf. the analogous sale of goods cases (see below, paras 44-105—44-112).
- 383. Mowbray v Merryweather, see above.
- 384. Readhead v Midland Ry (1869) L.R. 4 Q.B. 379 (contract for carriage of passengers for reward: obligation of carrier in regard to the condition of the vehicle).
- 385. Hyman v Nye (1881) 6 Q.B.D. 685 (approved in The West Cock [1911] P. 208, 227, 231 (a contract for towage by a tug)).
- 386. Yeoman Credit Ltd v Apps [1962] 2 Q.B. 508, 520, 523, 525. See also the cases cited in n.381, above. cf. the similar obligation to deliver a “reasonably fit” car under a contract of sale: Whincup (1975) 38 M.L.R. 660.
- 387. London General Cab Co Ltd v IRC [1950] 2 All E.R. 566. See Paton at pp.287–289.
- 388. Jones v Page (1867) 15 L.T. 619; Chew v Jones (1847) 10 L.T.(O.S.) 231; Windle v Jordan (1883) 75 Maine 149; Hyman v Nye, above. As to liability to third parties, see White v Steadman [1913] 3 K.B. 340.
- 389. Fowler v Lock (1872) L.R. 7 C.P. 272 (subsequent proceedings (1874) L.R. 10 C.P. 90). cf. Burnard v Haggis (1863) 14 C.B.(N.S.) 45 (hirer expressly told horse not fit for jumping).
- 390. Abraham v Bullock (1902) 86 L.T. 796. cf. the cases cited in n.391, see below.

- 391. Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716 (see above, para.33-050) (approved by the House of Lords in Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827, 846, 852; and in Lister v Hesley Hall Ltd [2001] UKHL 22, [2002] 1 A.C. 215 at [19]–[20], [44]–[46], [55]–[60] and [71]–[76]). cf. Sanderson v Collins [1904] 1 K.B. 628; Adams (Durham) Ltd and Day v Trust Houses Ltd [1960] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 380; Leesh River Tea Co Ltd v British India SN Co Ltd [1967] 2 Q.B. 250.
- 392. Under s.46(1) of the Consumer Protection Act 1987, the bailor may commit an offence if he hires or offers to hire any consumer goods which fail to meet certain safety requirements; and by s.12, regulations may prohibit the hiring of specified goods.
- 393. By s.9(1), no term is to be implied about the quality or fitness for any particular purpose of the goods, except as provided by ss.9 and 10 of the Act or by any other enactment. However, s.9(7) recognises that such a term “may be annexed by usage to a contract for the hire of goods”. (The meaning of “quality” is extended by s.18(3).) cf. below, para.44-094.
- 394. s.9(8) extends this provision to a person “who in the course of a business is acting as agent for another”, except where the bailee knows (or ought to know) that the principal is not bailing in the course of a business. cf. below, paras 44-096, 44-097.
- 395. cf. also Karsales (Harrow) Ltd v Wallis [1956] 1 W.L.R. 936, 940 (term implied that the goods should, at the time of delivery to the bailee, be in substantially the same condition as they were at the time the bailee had previously inspected them).
- 396. s.9(2). Goods are declared to be of satisfactory quality if they meet the standard that a reasonable person would regard as satisfactory, taking account of any description of the goods, the consideration for the bailment (if any) and all the other relevant circumstances (s.9(2A)). The definition of “quality” is expanded by s.18(3) so that, in appropriate cases, it encompasses (a) fitness for all the purposes for which goods of the kind in question are commonly supplied, (b) appearance and finish, (c) freedom from minor defects, (d) safety and (e) durability.
- 397. s.9(3). cf. see below, paras 44-101—44-102.
- 398. s.9(4).
- 399. Either “to the bailor in the course of negotiations conducted by him in relation to the making of the contract”, or to a credit-broker who sold the goods to the bailor before they were bailed: s.9(4). (For definitions, see s.18(1).)
- 400. s.9(4).
- 401. s.9(5). cf. below, paras 44-105 et seq.
- 402. s.9(6). cf. below, para.44-108. In the case of finance leasing, the bailee’s reliance may be on the supplier’s skill or judgment, rather than on that of the bailor who obtained the goods from the supplier.
- 403. s.18(3)(e).
- 404. There was some authority at common law for the proposition that there was a continuing element to the warranty of fitness for purpose: see James Pty Ltd v Duncan [1970] V.R. 705, 717; Lambert v Lewis [1982] A.C. 225, 276 (see below, para.44-104).
- 405. s.9(1). The Act applies to contracts made on or after October 1, 2015. Goods are stated to be of satisfactory quality if they meet the standard that a reasonable person would consider satisfactory, taking account of any description of the goods, the price or other consideration for the goods (if any) and all the other relevant circumstances (s.9(2)). The definition of “quality” is expanded by s.9(3) so that, in appropriate cases, it encompasses (a) fitness for all the purposes for which goods of the kind in question are usually supplied, (b) appearance and finish, (c) freedom from minor defects, (d) safety and (e) durability. The relevant circumstances referred to - in s.9(2) include any public statement about the specific characteristics of the goods made by the trader, the producer or any representative of the trader or the producer (s.9(5)–(7)).

- 406. s.10(1) and (3).
- 407. s.10(4).
- 408. UCB Leasing Ltd v Holtom [1987] R.T.R. 362 CA (the claim for damages related to the period when the hirer had not terminated the contract on account of the breach). See also Charterhouse Credit Co Ltd v Tolly [1963] 2 Q.B. 683; Doobay v Mohabeer [1967] 2 A.C. 278, 288–289. A deduction from the damages should be made for the value of any use which the hirer has made of the chattel.
- 409. On which see below, para.38-483. The Act applies to contracts made on or after October 1, 2015.
- 410. See Vol.I, para.13-025.
- 411. See Vol.I, para.13-031.
- 412. s.10A(3).
- 413. s.10A(2).
- 414. See further on this point, Palmer (1983) 46 M.L.R. 619, 626–627.
- 415. The Act applies to contracts made on or after October 1, 2015: see below, para.38-431.
- 416. ss.20 and 22, on which see further para.38-478 and 38-481.
- 417. s.21, on which see further para.38-480.
- 418. s.23, on which see further para.38-482.
- 419. s.24, on which see further paras 38-483—38-484.
- 420. See Vol.I, Ch.15.
- 421. e.g. Astley Industrial Trust Ltd v Grimley [1963] 1 W.L.R. 584; Handley v Marston (1962) 106 S.J. 327. Where a clause sought to be incorporated into a contract is particularly onerous or unusual, it must be fairly and reasonably brought to the attention of the party affected by it: Interfoto Picture Library Ltd v Stiletto Visual Programmes Ltd [1989] Q.B. 433; AEG (UK) Ltd v Logic Resource Ltd [1996] C.L.C. 265.
- 422. s.11(1). An express term does not negative one implied by the Act “unless inconsistent with it”: s.11(2).
- 423. s.1(3); and see Vol.I, para.15-072.
- 424. For a fuller treatment of the Act, see Vol.I, paras 15-066 et seq.
- 425. s.2.
- 426. See above, para.33-054; Vol.I, para.15-085.
- 427. See above, para.33-054, n.292.
- 428. s.7(1).
- 429. On the extended meaning of this phrase, see s.13 (Vol.I, paras 15-069—15-070).

- 430. s.7(1). See also Vol.I, para.15-094.
- 431. s.7 applies to terms implied into the contract by law or from the nature of the contract: see above, paras 33-066 et seq.; see below, para.33-092.
- 432. Which for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015, replaces s.7(3).
- 433. The excluded words refer to subs.(3A) which does not apply to contracts of hire.
- 434. s.31, on which see further below, para.38-492. Note the extensions to the scope of s.31(1) to be found in s.31(2) and (3).
- 435. Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827 (explaining Suisse Atlantique Société d'Armement Maritime SA v NV Rotterdamsche Kolen Centrale [1967] 1 A.C. 361 (Vol.I, paras 15-024 et seq.)).
- 436. The Photo Production case, see above. cf. the earlier cases: Karsales (Harrow) Ltd v Wallis [1956] 1 W.L.R. 936; Yeoman Credit Ltd v Apps [1962] 2 Q.B. 508 (see below, paras 39-392—39-393). See also White v John Warwick & Co Ltd [1953] 1 W.L.R. 1285 (construction of clause).
- 437. See Vol.I, paras 13-008—13-018.
- 438. Chapelton v Barry UDC [1940] 1 K.B. 532. On “ticket cases” generally, see Vol.I, paras 13-008 et seq.
- 439. See above, para.33-048 (s.15 of the 1982 Act).
- 440. British Crane Hire Corp Ltd v Ipswich Plant Hire Ltd [1975] Q.B. 303, 311–312, 313.
- 441. [1975] Q.B. 303 at 312.
- 442. [1975] Q.B. 303 at 311–312, 313.
- 443. [1975] Q.B. 303 at 313 (“... if some great boulder descended on the vehicle and damaged it beyond repair, that might well be good cause for not returning it. As regards getting stuck in a snowdrift or a marsh, I would not think such a happening could normally constitute good cause”, per Sir Eric Sachs). See the doctrine of frustration: Taylor v Caldwell (1863) 3 B. & S. 826, 838–839; Vol.I, Ch.23.
- 444. On the onus of proof where the bailee has died, see National Trust Co v Wong Aviation [1969] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 340.
- 445. Sanderson v Collins [1904] 1 K.B. 628 (liability for employee); British Crane Hire Corp Ltd v Ipswich Plant Hire Ltd, above, at 311–312, 313. See also Dean v Keate (1811) 3 Camp. 4; Coupé Co v Maddick [1891] 2 Q.B. 413.
- 446. Schroder v Ward (1863) 13 C.B.(N.S.) 410; Brice & Sons v Christiani & Nielsen (1928) 44 T.L.R. 335. But see the statutory controls over exemption clauses: see above, paras 33-054, 33-078.
- 447. Palmer at paras 21-071—21-075; Story at para.413; Jones at pp.68, 69.
- 448. Burnard v Haggis (1863) 14 C.B.(N.S.) 45.
- 449. Walley v Holt (1876) 35 L.T. 631.
- 450. Tappenden v Artus [1964] 2 Q.B. 185 (see below, para.33-094). cf. Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716, 729–720 (decision approved in the House of Lords: see above, para.33-070 n.391).

- 451. Burnard v Haggis, above; Walley v Holt, above.
- 452. See Vol.I, paras 26-205—26-214; see below, para.39-343.
- 453. Story at para.385. The assignee of the owner may, in some circumstances, discharge the latter's liability to repair: British Waggon Co v Lea & Co (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 149. (On such vicarious performance, see Vol.I, paras 19-082 et seq.) See also Brady v St Margaret's Trust Ltd [1963] 2 Q.B. 494.
- 454. Blakemore v Bristol and Exeter Ry (1858) 8 E. & B. 1035 (a case of gratuitous loan, but the same principle would, it is submitted, apply to a hiring); Coupé Co v Maddick [1891] 2 Q.B. 413, 415.
- 455. cf. Sutton v Temple (1843) 12 M. & W. 52, 60; Hopkins v GE Ry (1895) 12 T.L.R. 25; also, see above, para.33-041. A bailee who executes repairs to the chattel without the owner's consent probably cannot recover the expense from the bailor. cf. also Story at para.392.
- 456. Story at para.393.
- 457. Handford v Palmer (1820) 2 B. & B. 359; Story at para.393 (citing American cases, French and Roman law to the same effect).
- 458. See the cases cited below, para.33-094 nn.558 and 559.
- 459. Strand Electric and Engineering Co Ltd v Brisford Entertainments Ltd [1952] 2 Q.B. 246; Hillesden Securities Ltd v Ryjak Ltd [1983] 1 W.L.R. 959. cf. Vol.I, para.29-152.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 33 - Bailment
Section 4. - Bailments for Valuable Consideration
(c) - Hire
(ii) - Equipment Leasing

Finance leasing

33-084

In the light of various tax advantages, ⁴⁶⁰ a form of long-term financing has developed, which is known as finance leasing. In a finance lease, the lessee selects the equipment to be supplied by a manufacturer or dealer, but the lessor (a finance company) provides the funds, acquires title to the equipment and allows the lessee to use it for all (or most) of its expected useful life. During the period of the lease the usual risks and rewards of ownership are substantially transferred to the lessee, who bears the risks of loss, destruction and depreciation of the leased equipment (fair wear and tear only excepted) and of its obsolescence or malfunctioning. ⁴⁶¹ The lessee also bears the costs of maintenance, repairs and insurance. The regular rental payments during the primary period of the lease are calculated to enable the lessor to amortise its capital outlay and to make a profit from its finance charges. ⁴⁶² At the end of the primary leasing period, there will frequently be a secondary leasing period during which the lessee may opt to continue the lease at a nominal rental, or the equipment may be sold and a proportion of the sale proceeds returned to the lessee as a rebate of rentals. ⁴⁶³ The lessee thus acquires any residual value in the equipment, after the lessor has recouped its investment and charges. If the lease is terminated prematurely, the lessor is entitled to recoup its capital investment (less the realisable value of the equipment at the time) and its expected finance charges (less an allowance to reflect the accelerated return of the capital). The bailment which underlies finance leasing is therefore only a device to provide the finance company with a security interest (its reversionary right) ⁴⁶⁴; a finance lease is similar in function to outright purchase or hire purchase. ⁴⁶⁵ Details of finance leasing must be sought elsewhere. ⁴⁶⁶

^{460.} In finance leasing, tax writing-down allowances are claimed by the lessor, and the rentals payable by the lessee are reduced accordingly; the rentals are usually an expense allowed against the lessee's liability to corporation tax.

^{461.} Finance leases with non-consumers inevitably exclude the terms implied by the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 (see above, paras 33-044 et seq.). It is believed that in the case of most such finance leases the reasonableness requirement in s.7(1A) of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 (see above, para.33-078) will be satisfied: see R & B Customs Brokers Ltd v United Dominions Trust Ltd [1988] 1 W.L.R. 321, 331–332.

^{462.} A lease of equipment which does not have the characteristics set out in this paragraph is known as an "operating lease"; in such a lease the lessee has the use of the chattel for only a relatively short time and the equipment will have a substantial residual value at the end of the lease.

^{463.} Unlike a hire-purchase transaction where, at the end of the hiring period, the hirer has the option of buying the chattel for a nominal sum (see below, para.39-306).

- 464. GM Shepherd Ltd v North West Securities Ltd, 1991 S.L.T. 499, 511, 513–514.
- 465. On Demand Information Plc v Michael Gerson (Finance) Plc [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 512, 515–516, where reliance was placed by the court on this passage. See also On Demand Information Plc v Michael Gerson (Finance) Plc [2001] 1 W.L.R. 155, 158 CA. The point did not arise on the subsequent appeal to the House of Lords: [2002] UKHL 13, [2003] 1 A.C. 551.
- 466. Adams, Commercial Hiring and Leasing (1989); Sadler, Reisbach and Thomas, Equipment Leasing (1993, looseleaf); Davies, Equipment and Motor Vehicle Leasing and Hiring (1997).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 33 - Bailment
Section 4. - Bailments for Valuable Consideration
(c) - Hire
(iii) - Statutory Control of Hiring

The Consumer Credit Act 1974

33-085

This Act imposes statutory controls, not only upon consumer credit agreements, but also on “consumer hire agreements”. A consumer hire agreement is defined ⁴⁶⁷ as an agreement made by a person with an individual ⁴⁶⁸ (the “hirer”) for the bailment ⁴⁶⁹ of goods to the hirer, being an agreement which: (a) is not a hire-purchase agreement ⁴⁷⁰; and (b) is capable of subsisting for more than three months. ⁴⁷¹ The use of the term “hire” has been held to imply that there is a payment or reward for the hire so that a gratuitous bailment does not fall within the scope of the definition. ⁴⁷² A consumer hire agreement is a regulated agreement ⁴⁷³ for the purposes of the Act if it is a regulated consumer hire agreement for the purposes of Ch.14B of Pt 2 of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001. ⁴⁷⁴ The general provisions of the Act, together with the Regulations implementing the Consumer Credit Directive 2008, are examined below in Ch.39 ⁴⁷⁵; these include the power to make regulations about the information to be disclosed to a hirer before a regulated agreement is made ⁴⁷⁶; controls over the form and content of agreements ⁴⁷⁷; the duty to supply copies of agreements ⁴⁷⁸; the right of the hirer to cancel certain agreements within a “cooling-off period” ⁴⁷⁹; the duty of the owner to give notice before taking certain actions to enforce a term of the agreement ⁴⁸⁰; restrictions on the rights of the owner following the death of the hirer ⁴⁸¹; the duty of the owner to serve a “default notice” on the hirer before enforcing certain rights following breach by the hirer, ⁴⁸² or to give notice of termination of the agreement in non-default cases ⁴⁸³; provisions regulating securities ⁴⁸⁴ and the taking of negotiable instruments ⁴⁸⁵; and the powers of the court when enforcement of the agreement is sought. ⁴⁸⁶ There are many Regulations made under the Act, details of which must be sought elsewhere. ⁴⁸⁷ In this section, only those provisions of the Act which are specifically applicable to hiring agreements will be examined.

Duties on the parties to give information

33-086

The owner ⁴⁸⁸ under a regulated consumer hire agreement, ⁴⁸⁹ within 12 working days ⁴⁹⁰ after receiving a request in writing to that effect from the hirer and payment of a fee of £1, ⁴⁹¹ must give ⁴⁹² to the hirer a copy ⁴⁹³ of the executed agreement, ⁴⁹⁴ together with a statement signed by or on behalf of the owner showing, according to the information to which it is practicable for him to refer, the total sum which has become payable under the agreement by the hirer but remains unpaid and the various amounts comprised in that total sum, with the date when each became due. ⁴⁹⁵ (This provision does not apply to a non-commercial agreement. ⁴⁹⁶) If the owner fails to comply with this provision he is not entitled, while the default continues, to enforce the agreement. ⁴⁹⁷ The statement when given by the owner is binding on him. ⁴⁹⁸ A surety under a regulated consumer hire agreement may similarly request copies of the agreement, documents and the security instrument, and a similar financial statement. ⁴⁹⁹

Whereabouts of goods

33-087

Where, under a regulated agreement, the hirer must keep the goods in his possession or control, he must, within seven working days after he has received a request in writing from the owner, tell him where the goods are. ⁵⁰⁰

Right to terminate hire agreement

33-088

Irrespective of the terms of the agreement, the Act gives the hirer under a regulated consumer hire agreement ⁵⁰¹ the right to terminate the agreement by giving notice to any person entitled or authorised to receive the sums payable under the agreement. ⁵⁰² Such notice must not expire earlier than 18 months after the making of the agreement ⁵⁰³; otherwise, the minimum period of notice (unless the agreement provides for a shorter period) is as follows: (1) if the agreement provides for the making of payments by the hirer at equal intervals, the length of one interval or three months (whichever is less) ⁵⁰⁴; (2) if the agreement provides for such payments at differing intervals, the length of the shortest interval, or three months (whichever is less) ⁵⁰⁵; (3) in any other case, three months' notice. ⁵⁰⁶ The right to terminate under this provision ⁵⁰⁷ does not apply to: (1) any agreement where the payments exceed in total £1,500 in any year ⁵⁰⁸; or (2) where the goods are bailed to the hirer for the purposes of a business carried on by him ⁵⁰⁹ and the goods are selected by the hirer, and acquired by the owner for the purposes of the agreement at the request of the hirer from any person other than the owner's associate ⁵¹⁰; or (3) any agreement where the hirer requires ⁵¹¹ the goods for the purpose of bailing or hiring them to other persons in the course of a business carried on by him ⁵¹²; or (4) if the Financial Conduct Authority exempts a person from the provision. ⁵¹³

Restrictions on the owner's rights

33-089

The owner is not entitled, without an order of the court, to enter any premises to take possession of goods subject (inter alia) to a regulated consumer hire agreement. ⁵¹⁴ Special provision is made for the owner to prove that the hirer is in adverse possession of the goods. ⁵¹⁵ When the court makes an order under a regulated agreement it has wide power ⁵¹⁶ to impose conditions on the parties, or to suspend the operation of any term of the order; but it may not extend the period for which the hirer, under the terms of a consumer hire agreement, is entitled to possession of the goods. ⁵¹⁷

Financial relief for the hirer

33-090

Where the owner under a regulated consumer hire agreement ⁵¹⁸ recovers possession of the goods otherwise than by action, the Act entitles the hirer to apply to the court for an order that the whole or part of any sum paid by the hirer to the owner in respect of the goods shall be repaid, and that the obligation to pay the whole or part of any sum owed by the hirer to the owner shall cease. ⁵¹⁹ The court is empowered to make such orders "if it appears to the court just to do so, having regard to the extent of the enjoyment of the goods by the hirer". ⁵²⁰ The terms of the enactment may be wide enough to cover payments under any heading of the agreement, e.g. for rental, for "depreciation", or as "liquidated damages". ⁵²¹ If a court orders the hirer to deliver to the owner the goods covered by a regulated consumer hire agreement, an order may be made granting financial relief to the hirer in a similar way. ⁵²²

- 467. s.15(1); see also below, para.39-035.
- 468. Defined in s.189(1); see below, para.39-016.
- 469. See Palmer and Yates [1979] C.L.J. 180.
- 470. Defined in s.189(1); see below, para.39-356.
- 471. There was at one time a further requirement, namely that the agreement did not require the hirer to make payments exceeding £25,000. The financial limit was removed by s.2 of the Consumer Credit Act 2006 in relation to non-business hire, which came into force on April 6, 2008 (see Consumer Credit Act 2006 (Commencement No.4 and Transitional Provisions) Order (SI 2008/831) Sch.2 para.1).
- 472. TRM Copy Centres (UK) Ltd v Lanwell Services Ltd [2009] UKHL 35, [2009] 1 W.L.R. 1375 at [11].
- 473. Defined in s.189(1); see below, paras 39-036, 39-038.
- 474. SI 2001/544 art.60N (inserted by Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) (Amendment) (No.2) Order (SI 2013/1881 Pt 2 art.6). An exempt agreement is a consumer credit hire agreement which is an exempt agreement under arts 60O to 60Q of SI 2001/544.
- 475. See below, paras 39-002 et seq.
- 476. s.55 (below, paras 39-076—39-077).
- 477. ss.60–61 (below, paras 39-080—39-081); SI 1983/1553 (as amended) and, in the case of the Regulations implementing the Consumer Credit Directive 2008 (SI 2010/1014, as amended) (below, para.39-082).
- 478. ss.62–64 (below, paras 39-088—39-089); SI 1983/1557 (as amended) and s.61A (below, para.39-092).
- 479. ss.64, 67–73 (below, paras 39-091, 39-102 et seq.).
- 480. s.76 (below, paras 39-164 et seq.); SI 1983/1561 (as amended).
- 481. s.86 (below, para.39-175).
- 482. ss.87–89 (below, paras 39-166 et seq.); SI 1983/1561 (as amended).
- 483. s.98 (below, para.39-172); SI 1983/1561 (as amended) and s.98A (below, para.39-173).
- 484. ss.105–106, 110–113 (below, paras 39-180 et seq.); SI 1983/1556 (as amended).
- 485. ss.123–125 (below, paras 39-196 et seq.). But see SI 1984/435.
- 486. ss.127–132; 135–136. (Below, paras 39-200 et seq.).
- 487. Guest, Credit Law; Goode, Consumer Credit: Law and Practice; Bennion, Consumer Credit Control, Vol.2; F. Philpott, W. Hibbert, S. Neville, S. Popplewell, B. Say, P. Sayer and J. Smith, The Law of Consumer Credit and Hire (2009).
- 488. Defined in s.189(1) (together with a corresponding definition for “hirer”). See below, para.39-037.
- 489. For the definition of this term (in s.15(2) of the Act) see below, paras 39-035, 39-036—39-043.

- 490. SI 1983/1569 reg.2.
- 491. SI 1998/997.
- 492. “Give” means deliver or send by appropriate method to: s.189(1), as amended by SI 2004/3236 art.2(9).
- 493. See s.180 and SI 1983/1557, as amended, made thereunder, for the form and content of copies.
- 494. Defined in s.189(1). A copy must also be given of any other document referred to in the agreement: s.79(1).
- 495. s.79(1). (The subsection does not apply to an agreement under which no sum is payable by the hirer, or to a request made less than one month after a previous request was complied with: s.79(2).)
- 496. s.79(4). (For the definition of “a non-commercial agreement”, see s.189(1) and see below, para.39-049).
- 497. s.79(3)(a). Originally, if the default continued for one month, an offence was committed (s.79(3)(b)) but this provision was repealed by the Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2008 (SI 2008/1277) reg.30(1) and Sch.2.
- 498. s.172(1). (But the court has a discretion to grant the owner relief if the statement is shown to be incorrect.)
- 499. s.109. (See below, para.39-137.)
- 500. s.80 (which is examined see below, para.39-140).
- 501. For the definition, see below, paras 39-035, 39-036—39-043.
- 502. s.101(1). (But termination under this subsection does not affect any liability under the agreement which has accrued before the termination: s.101(2).)
- 503. s.101(3). (In the case of a “modifying agreement” (see s.189(1)) this reads “after the making of the original agreement”: s.101(9).)
- 504. s.101(4).
- 505. s.101(5).
- 506. s.101(6). On the extent of the protection granted by s.101 see Palmer and Yates [1979] C.L.J. 180, 195–199.
- 507. s.101.
- 508. s.101(7)(a). (Payments under this subsection do not take account of breach of the agreement.) The monetary limit may be amended: s.181. See SI 1998/997.
- 509. “or the hirer holds himself out as requiring the goods for those purposes”: s.101(7)(b).
- 510. s.101(7)(b). This provision would cover many ordinary leasing agreements.
- 511. “or holds himself out as requiring”: s.101(7)(c).
- 512. s.101(7)(c).
- 513. s.101(8). The exemption may be granted if “it appears ... to be in the interests of hirers to do so", and may be made subject to conditions. In addition, the FCA may, subject to conditions, grant an exemption of a more general nature to a consumer hire agreement which falls within a specified description: s.101(8A).

- 514. s.92(1). (An entry in contravention of s.92(1) is actionable as a breach of statutory duty: s.92(3).)
- 515. s.134 (the same provision applies to other types of regulated agreements: see below, para.39-366).
- 516. s.135(1) (see below, para.39-208).
- 517. s.135(3).
- 518. For the definition, see below, paras 39-035, 39-036—39-043.
- 519. s.132(1).
- 520. s.132(1). For an illustration, see Automotive Financial Services Ltd v Henderson, 1992 S.L.T. (Sh. Ct.) 63.
- 521. See Vol.I, paras 26-178 et seq.
- 522. s.132(2).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 33 - Bailment
Section 4. - Bailments for Valuable Consideration
(d) - Work and Labour

Bailment for hire of work and labour

33-091

Where a chattel is bailed to the bailee in order that he may perform work upon it for reward, ⁵²³ it is a bailment for hire of work and labour. ⁵²⁴ The duty of the bailor to pay the agreed price, or a reasonable remuneration upon a quantum meruit, ⁵²⁵ depends upon general principles of the law of contract, ⁵²⁶ or (where applicable) on s.15 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 or s.51 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 (discussed above ⁵²⁷); this type of contract is discussed here only insofar as it involves a bailment.

Duties and liabilities of the worker

33-092

Wherever the worker is acting in the course of a business, the standard of workmanship and of care of the chattel which he must achieve is laid down in the term implied by s.13 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 ⁵²⁸ and where a trader is supplying a service to a consumer it is to be found in s.49(1) of the Consumer Rights Act 2015. ⁵²⁹ These standards merely codify the common law rules ⁵³⁰ (which still apply to any such bailment not covered by the Acts): the reported cases will therefore still be relevant. Since the worker is to be remunerated, the common law required him to perform the work in an efficient manner, ⁵³¹ showing reasonable competence in any art or craft which he publicly professes ⁵³²; it also required him to take reasonable care of the chattel bailed to him ⁵³³ and to return it to the bailor at the expiration of the agreed ⁵³⁴ period. ⁵³⁵ This duty of care may require the bailee to take precautionary measures once the chattel is found to be in unexpected danger. ⁵³⁶ If the chattel is lost or injured during the bailment, the onus is on the bailee to show that the loss or injury was due to inevitable accident, inherent vice in the chattel, or some other cause not involving any failure on the part of himself or his employees ⁵³⁷ to take reasonable care. ⁵³⁸ Even after the work is completed, the liability of the bailee for negligence continues until the relationship of bailment terminates. ⁵³⁹ Subject to the provisions of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 and the Consumer Rights Act 2015, ⁵⁴⁰ the bailee may exclude his liability by a special clause in the contract. ⁵⁴¹ The scope of such an exemption clause is a question of construction, depending on the intention of the parties. ⁵⁴² Normally, the worker may not delegate his task to another, but the nature of the work to be done may indicate the bailor's implied permission that the worker may delegate. ⁵⁴³ If the worker deals with the chattel in a way not contemplated by the contract, he acts at his peril. ⁵⁴⁴

Lien of the worker

33-093

Where a worker is to be paid ⁵⁴⁵ for work done on a chattel bailed to him ⁵⁴⁶ he has at common law, after completion of the work, ⁵⁴⁷ a lien ⁵⁴⁸ on the chattel for the remuneration due to him ⁵⁴⁹; hence he may refuse to return the chattel until he is paid. ⁵⁵⁰ An express or implied term of the contract, especially one relating to credit, may, however, exclude such a lien.⁵⁵¹ The lien covers the sum due for materials supplied and work performed on the chattel,⁵⁵² but not charges for warehousing or storage, even during the period of the lien.⁵⁵³ There is no lien at common law for the maintenance of the chattel in its original condition without improvement.⁵⁵⁴ The lien is lost by waiver⁵⁵⁵ or by the worker relinquishing possession of the chattel,⁵⁵⁶ but the mere taking of security for the debt does not discharge the lien, unless it is inconsistent with the existence of the lien.⁵⁵⁷

Lien in favour of third person

33-094

Where the circumstances show that a bailee has actual or ostensible authority from the bailor to deliver the chattel to a third person for work to be performed upon it (e.g. when the bailee expressly undertakes to keep it in repair), the third party will obtain a lien which may be effective against the bailor as well as against the bailee.⁵⁵⁸ Thus the hirer of a motorvehicle will normally have implied authority to permit a garage to obtain a lien over it for repairs which it has carried out.⁵⁵⁹

Uncollected goods: statutory power of sale⁵⁶⁰

33-095

In the absence of agreement, the right of lien does not, at common law, confer on the bailee the right to sell the chattel.⁵⁶¹ However, subject to the terms of the bailment,⁵⁶² the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 confers a power of sale on a bailee in possession of uncollected goods.⁵⁶³ The Act does not define bailment⁵⁶⁴ and therefore all types of bailment appear to be included.⁵⁶⁵ The Act provides for two separate powers of sale, one with,⁵⁶⁶ and one without the authority of the court. The nonjudicial power of sale arises in any one of the following situations⁵⁶⁷: (a) where the bailor is in breach of an obligation to take delivery of the goods (or, if the terms of the bailment so provide, to give directions as to their delivery); (b) where the bailee could impose such an obligation by giving notice to the bailor, but is unable to trace or communicate with the bailor; or (c) where the bailee can reasonably expect to be relieved of any duty to safeguard the goods by giving notice to the bailor, but is unable to trace or communicate with the bailor.

Power to impose an obligation to take delivery

33-096

Because many bailments do not impose a definite obligation on the bailor to collect the goods before a fixed time, the 1977 Act entitles⁵⁶⁸ the bailee, by a notice in writing given to the bailor, to impose on him an obligation to take delivery of the goods (or, where relevant, to give directions as to their delivery).⁵⁶⁹ This power is without prejudice to the provisions of the contract⁵⁷⁰ and is not confined to commercial bailments where the bailee is in business, so that gratuitous bailments (e.g. between friends) are included.⁵⁷¹ The notice must be in writing,⁵⁷² and must comply with the requirements of Sch.1 Pt I, which, in summary, are: the notice must specify the bailee's name and address; must give sufficient particulars of the goods and their location; must state that the goods are ready for delivery, or (where combined with a notice terminating the contract of bailment) will be ready for delivery when the contract is terminated; and must specify any amount payable to the bailee which became due before the notice.⁵⁷³ There are further provisions⁵⁷⁴ about when the notice must be given in various circumstances, according to the purpose of the bailment in question, e.g. at any time after "the repair or other treatment [of the goods] has been carried out"; or "after the bailee has carried out the valuation or appraisal"; or (in cases of storage or warehousing by a bailee who is not a mercantile agent)⁵⁷⁵ after the bailee's "obligation as custodian has come to an end".

Notice of intention to sell⁵⁷⁶

33-097

Once the power of sale arises under the above provisions, the bailee is entitled ⁵⁷⁷ to sell the goods, if he is reasonably satisfied that the bailor owns the goods and either (a) he has given notice to the bailor of his intention to sell the goods; or (b) he has failed to trace or communicate with the bailor with a view to giving him such a notice, after having taken reasonable steps for the purpose. ⁵⁷⁸ The notice of intention to sell must be in writing and be sent by registered letter or by the recorded delivery service, ⁵⁷⁹ and must specify the following information ⁵⁸⁰: the bailee's name and address; particulars of the goods and of their location; the date on or after which their sale is proposed; and the amount, if any, payable by the bailor to the bailee in respect of the goods, and which became due before the giving of the notice. ⁵⁸¹ The period between the notice and the proposed date of sale must afford the bailor "a reasonable opportunity of taking delivery of the goods", and, when any payment is due, must be not less than three months. ⁵⁸²

Disputes

33-098

The non-judicial procedure before sale cannot be used if there is a dispute between the bailor and the bailee. It is laid down that the notice of intention to sell may not be given, nor may the goods be sold pursuant to such a notice, at a time when the bailee "has notice that, because of a dispute concerning the goods, the bailor is questioning or refusing to pay all or any part of what the bailee claims to be due to him in respect of the goods". ⁵⁸³ In these circumstances, the goods may be sold only if the court authorises the sale. ⁵⁸⁴

Effect of the sale

33-099

A sale duly made under the provisions of the 1977 Act gives a good title to the purchaser as against the bailor, but not as against the true owner. ⁵⁸⁵ After the sale, the bailee must account to the bailor for the proceeds of sale, less any costs of sale; the account is to be taken on the footing that the bailee should have adopted the best method of sale reasonably available in the circumstances and any sum due to the bailee in respect of the goods before he gave notice of intention to sell may be deducted. ⁵⁸⁶ The bailor's rights against the goods are therefore divested, and replaced by a right to claim from the bailee the balance of the proceeds of sale.

Sale authorised by the court

33-100

There are some circumstances in which it would not be prudent for the bailee to sell under the non-judicial power given by s.12 discussed in the preceding paragraphs, e.g. where the goods are of high value, or where the bailee is unable to notify the bailor, and considers that he might be at risk in selling on the basis that he had taken "reasonable steps" to trace him. ⁵⁸⁷ Section 13 therefore permits a sale with the authority of the court, which will preclude the bailor from later challenging the bailee's actions. In one situation, however, the bailee is expressly prevented from using the non-judicial power and can therefore sell only with the authority of the court, viz he cannot sell under s.12 if there is a dispute between him and the bailor over any payment claimed by the bailee. ⁵⁸⁸ Section 13 of the 1977 Act enables the bailee to sell under the authority of the court, and thereby to gain the protection of a decision which, subject to any right of appeal, is "conclusive, as against the bailor, of the bailee's entitlement to sell the goods". ⁵⁸⁹ The bailee must satisfy the court ⁵⁹⁰ that he is entitled (or would be entitled if he had given the required ⁵⁹¹ notice) to sell under s.12. ⁵⁹² The court may impose terms, may fix deductions from the proceeds of sale, and may direct that the net proceeds of sale be paid into court to be held to the bailor's credit. ⁵⁹³

- 523. On voluntary service performed without request, see Taylor v Laird (1856) 25 L.J. Ex. 329, 332; also Vol.I, paras 4-026, 4-030, 29-071.
- 524. Palmer at Ch.15; Paton at pp.331 et seq.
- 525. e.g. payment for “extras”: see Wilmot v Smith (1828) 3 C. & P. 453; Vol.I, paras 29-070—29-071 and 29-076.
- 526. On substantial performance of an entire contract, see Vol.I, para.21-033; on waiver, see Vol.I, para.22-040; on frustration, see Vol.I, Ch.23.
- 527. See above, para.33-048.
- 528. See above, para.33-046.
- 529. The Consumer Rights Act 2015 Act applies to contracts made on or after October 1, 2015: see below, para.38-431.
- 530. For a statement, see Smith v Eric S Bush [1990] 1 A.C. 831, 843.
- 531. Kimber v William Willett Ltd [1947] K.B. 570.
- 532. Lamphier v Phipos (1838) 8 C. & P. 475, 479. See also Duncan v Blundell (1820) 3 Stark. 6; Harmer v Cornelius (1858) 5 C.B.(N.S.) 236, 246; Jones at p.99.
- 533. Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716. See also Leek v Maestaer (1807) 1 Camp. 138; Clark v Earnshaw (1818) Gow. 30. cf. Wilson v Powis (1826) 3 Bing. 633; Becker v Lavender Ltd (1946) 62 T.L.R. 504 (misdelivery by bailee's negligence); Houghland v RR Low (Luxury Coaches) Ltd [1962] 1 Q.B. 694, 698 (see above, para.33-008). On special clauses limiting liability, see above, para.33-053, and Vol.I, Ch.15.
- 534. On the time when performance is due, see s.14 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 (see above, para.33-047) which applies wherever the bailee is supplying services in the course of a business and s.52 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 where a trader is supplying a service to a consumer.
- 535. Or when demanded: wrongful detention beyond this period makes the worker liable in damages for the amount which a profit-earning chattel would have earned for the owner (Re Trent and Humber Co (1868) L.R. 4 Ch. App. 112, 117) and also liable as an insurer if the chattel is lost or destroyed (Shaw & Co v Symmons Sons [1917] 1 K.B. 799; Mitchell v Ealing LBC [1979] Q.B. 1).
- 536. Leck v Maestaer, above.
- 537. Aitchison v Page Motors Ltd (1935) 154 L.T. 128. cf. Jobson v Palmer [1893] 1 Ch. 71. See also above, text at para.33-070 n.391.
- 538. Story at para.437; Leck v Maestaer, above; Clarke v Earnshaw, above. cf. Joseph Travers & Sons Ltd v Cooper [1915] 1 K.B. 73; Mayne v Silvermere Cleaners Ltd [1939] 1 All E.R. 693; Levison v Patent Steam Carpet Cleaning Co Ltd [1978] Q.B. 69, 82, 83, 85; Sheehy v Faughan [1991] 1 I.R. 425 (mare left at defendant's stud). cf. above, paras 33-010, 33-032, 33-049, 33-064, 33-079.
- 539. Mitchell v Davis (1920) 37 T.L.R. 68. On the power of the bailee to terminate the bailment and to sell the chattel, see below, paras 33-095 et seq.
- 540. See above, paras 33-054, 33-078.
- 541. Exclusion is also permitted under Pt II of the 1982 Act (see above, para.33-044) but the ability to exclude liability under the Consumer Rights Act 2015 is more limited (see s.57, on which see further para.38-546).

- 542. Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827. On exemption clauses generally, see Vol.I, Ch.15; see above, paras 33-053, 33-078.
- 543. cf. Davies v Collins [1945] 1 All E.R. 247; Martin v N Negin Ltd (1945) 172 L.T. 275; Morris v CW Martin & Sons Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 716 (see above, para.33-092) (approved by the House of Lords in Photo Production Ltd v Securicor Transport Ltd [1980] A.C. 827, 846, 852). See further, on vicarious performance, Vol.I, paras 19-082—19-085.
- 544. Doucette v Proud [1940] 4 D.L.R. 111 (sed quaere whether the bailor had waived the breach in this case); cf. above, paras 33-042, 33-052.
- 545. The statements of the rule assume that the lien arises although a precise price may not have been fixed beforehand: e.g. Scarfe v Morgan (1838) 4 M. & W. 270, 283.
- 546. The worker must have possession of the chattel: Forth v Simpson (1849) 13 Q.B. 680; James Bibby Ltd v Woods and Howard [1949] 2 K.B. 449, 453.
- 547. If the bailor countermands his order for the work before it is completed, the worker has a lien for the work actually done: Lilley v Barnsley (1844) 1 C. & K. 344, 346.
- 548. A lien does not entitle the worker to exercise any remedy of self-help, e.g. by removing engine parts so as to disable a ship from moving: The "Gregos" [1985] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 347, 361–362. (The worker is simply entitled to retain the chattel in his possession.) A lien cannot be exercised if the worker fails to give the bailor proper details of the work done: Thaper v Singh [1987] F.L.R. 369 (accountant).
- 549. Where the remuneration has not been agreed, but the worker claims an unreasonably high amount, the bailor who pays under protest may have a claim in restitution to recover the excess over a reasonable charge: see above, para.33-048; Vol.I, paras 29-098—29-103.
- 550. Story at para.440; Franklin v Hosier (1821) 4 B. & Ald. 341; Scarfe v Morgan (1838) 4 M. & W. 270 (lien on mare for services of stallion); Steadman v Hockley (1846) 15 M. & W. 553, 556–557. cf. R. v Wade (1869) 11 Cox C.C. 549; Woodworth v Conroy [1976] 1 Q.B. 884 (accountants have a lien over the books of account, files and papers delivered to them in the course of their professional work); and the lien of an agent, see above, para.31-164.
- 551. Raitt v Mitchell (1815) 4 Camp. 146 (custom excluding lien); Chase v Westmore (1816) 5 M. & S. 180, 186; Scarfe v Morgan, above, at 283; Forth v Simpson (1849) 13 Q.B. 680. See also the references in nn.558, 559, below.
- 552. On a general lien, see Paton at pp.345–347.
- 553. Somes v British Empire Shipping Co Ltd (1860) 8 H.L. Cas. 338 (distinguished by the House of Lords in China Pacific SA v Food Corp of India [1982] A.C. 939, 962–963 (owner benefited from the expenditure, which was made before he demanded redelivery of the goods: gratuitous bailment following salvage)). The principle laid down in Somes has since been restrictively interpreted (see Metall Market OOO v Vitorio Shipping Co Ltd (The "Lehmann Timber") [2013] EWCA Civ 650, [2014] Q.B. 760 at [70]) and it would now appear to stand for the proposition that the common law remedy of an artificer's lien does not attach to it, or contain within it, a right of claim to the expenses of enforcing it or exercising it and that there is no lien for such expenses unless the contract provides for one (at [90]). In any event, the principle in Somes is unlikely to apply outside the context of an artificer's lien, given that it has been stated to be of "doubtful status outside that context" (at [122]). See also Hartley v Hitchcock (1816) 1 Stark. 408.
- 554. Jackson v Cummins (1839) 5 M. & W. 342 (mere agistment of an animal: see above, para.33-059; cf. charges for training an animal: Bevan v Waters (1828) M. & M. 235; Forth v

Simpson (1849) 13 Q.B. 680; Hatton v Car Maintenance Co Ltd [1915] 1 Ch. 621. cf. Steadman v Hockley (1846) 15 M. & W. 553, 556.

555. White v Gainer (1824) 2 Bing. 23.

556. Hartley v Hitchcock (1816) 1 Stark. 408; Jacobs v Latour (1828) 5 Bing. 130; Legg v Evans (1840) 6 M. & W. 36, 42; Pennington v Reliance Motor Works Ltd [1923] 1 K.B. 127; Hatton v Car Maintenance Co Ltd, above. cf. Albemarle Supply Co Ltd v Hind & Co [1928] 1 K.B. 307 (lien continued despite temporary loss of possession); Caldwell v Sumpters [1972] Ch. 478 (solicitor's lien over documents not lost when they were sent to the client's present solicitors with the request to hold them to the order of the sender).

557. Angus v McLachlan (1883) 23 Ch. D. 330. cf. Ex p. Willoughby (1881) 16 Ch. D. 604.

558. Keene v Thomas [1905] 1 K.B. 136; Green v All Motors Ltd [1917] 1 K.B. 625; Albemarle Supply Co Ltd v Hind & Co, above; Jarl Tra Ab v Convoys Ltd [2003] EWHC 1488 (Comm), [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 459. cf. Cassils & Co and Sassoon & Co v Holden Wood Bleaching Co Ltd (1914) 84 L.J.K.B. 834; K Chellaram & Sons (London) Ltd v Butlers Warehousing and Distribution Ltd [1977] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 192; Pennington v Reliance Motor Works Ltd, above; Bowmaker Ltd v Wycombe Motors Ltd [1946] K.B. 505 (no lien arose after owners had validly terminated a hirepurchase agreement). See below, para.39-423. See also Peden (1969) 18 I.C.L.Q. 129.

559. Tappenden v Artus [1964] 2 Q.B. 185.

560. On the right of innkeepers to sell, see below, para.33-118.

561. Thames Iron Works Co v Patent Derrick Co (1860) 1 J. & H. 93. Perishable goods, however, may be sold by order of the court.

562. s.12(8). See also Sch.1 Pt I para.1(6). Section 12 therefore cannot be read as a provision which excludes previously existing common law rules regarding contracts of bailment: JJD SA v Avon Tyres Ltd, The Times, January 25, 1999.

563. ss.12 and 13.

564. The words "bailor" and "bailee" in ss.12 and 13 include successors in title: s.12(7)(a).

565. Sed quaere, in the case of involuntary bailment, sub-bailment, or bailment without the owner's consent. On the possible application of the sections to pledge, see below, para.33-132, to an innkeeper, see below, para.33-118.

566. See below, para.33-100.

567. s.12(1).

568. For the purposes of s.12(1), see above: s.12(2) and Sch.1 Pt I.

569. Sch.1 Pt I paras 1(1) and (6).

570. Sch.1 Pt I para.1(6). The power also arises whether or not the bailor has paid any amount due to the bailee in respect of the goods: Sch.1 Pt I para.5. The importance of the fact that s.12 does not remove the common law rules or prevent the implication of terms into the contract of bailment was demonstrated in JJD SA v Avon Tyres Ltd, The Times, January 25, 1999.

571. Sch.1 Pt I para.5.

572. Sch.1 Pt I para.1(2).

573. Sch.1 Pt I para.1(3).

- 574. Sch.1 Pt I paras 2–4.
- 575. Sch.1 Pt I para.4(2).
- 576. The notice required under Sch.1 Pt I (above, para.33-096), may be combined with this notice: Sch.1 Pt I para.1(4).
- 577. As against the bailor: see below, para.33-099.
- 578. s.12(3). If the bailee is in doubt whether the steps he has taken would be considered reasonable, it would be prudent to apply for the authority of the court: see below, para.33-100.
- 579. Sch.1 Pt II para.6(4).
- 580. Sch.1 Pt I para.6.
- 581. Sch.1 Pt I para.6(1).
- 582. Sch.1 Pt I para.6(2) and (3).
- 583. Sch.1 Pt II para.7(1).
- 584. Under s.13 (below, para.33-100).
- 585. s.12(4) and (6). A sale under the Act does not give a good title as against the true owner, nor against anyone claiming under the true owner: s.12(4).
- 586. s.12(5).
- 587. See s.12(3)(b) (see above, para.33-097).
- 588. Sch.1 Pt II para.7 (see above, para.33-098).
- 589. s.13(2). A sale under the authority of the court “gives a good title to the purchaser as against the bailor”.
- 590. The “court” includes the county court. See the High Court and County Courts Jurisdiction Order 1991 (SI 1991/724) art.2(1)(i).
- 591. See Sch.1 Pt II (above, para.33-097).
- 592. For the requirements of selling under this section, see above, paras 33-095—33-099.
- 593. s.13(1).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 33 - Bailment
Section 4. - Bailments for Valuable Consideration
(e) - Innkeepers ⁵⁹⁴

Definition of an inn

33-101

By the Hotel Proprietors Act 1956, ⁵⁹⁵ only a hotel within the definition contained in the Act is an inn. By the Act ⁵⁹⁶ an “hotel” means an establishment held out ⁵⁹⁷ by the proprietor as offering food, drink and, if so required, sleeping accommodation, without special contract, to any traveller presenting himself who appears able and willing to pay a reasonable sum for the services and facilities provided and who is in a fit state to be received”. ⁵⁹⁸ This definition excludes establishments which had at common law been held not to be inns, e.g. lodging houses, ⁵⁹⁹ boarding houses, ⁶⁰⁰ private residential hotels, ⁶⁰¹ alehouses (i.e. “public houses” where there is no obligation to receive and entertain guests), ⁶⁰² houses of public entertainment, ⁶⁰³ or restaurants. ⁶⁰⁴ A “tavern” and a “coffee-house” may, however, fall within the statutory definition of an hotel, ⁶⁰⁵ and so may a temperance hotel. ⁶⁰⁶ The name by which premises are designated is not conclusive: the important matter is the use to which they are applied. ⁶⁰⁷ By s.1(1) of the Act, the duties, liabilities and rights which immediately before the commencement of the Act (viz January 1, 1957) by law attached to an innkeeper as such attach, subject to the provisions of the Act, to the proprietor of an hotel within the statutory definition and do not attach to any other person. If a limited company is the proprietor of an hotel, the company is the innkeeper, even though a manager conducts the affairs of the hotel and holds the licence for the sale of intoxicating liquors in the hotel. ⁶⁰⁸

Duty to receive guests

33-102

At common law an innkeeper is obliged to receive and lodge in his inn all travellers who come to him, and to entertain them at reasonable prices, unless he has a reasonable ground for refusal. ⁶⁰⁹

Liability for goods of guests

33-103

Subject to certain exceptions and limitations, ⁶¹⁰ the proprietor of an hotel in his capacity as an innkeeper ⁶¹¹ is strictly liable to his guests for the loss of ⁶¹² or damage to ⁶¹³ the property of the guest within the hospitium of the inn. The liability of the innkeeper is strict in that he is liable even in the absence of proof of negligence on his part or on the part of his employees ⁶¹⁴, nor does the fact that he was sick or insane at the time of the loss or damage exclude his liability. ⁶¹⁵ The liability is only strict, however, and not absolute, since there are certain defences available to the innkeeper ⁶¹⁶ and he may, subject to certain conditions, limit the amount of his liability. ⁶¹⁷ This strict liability of the innkeeper depends on common law and the custom of the realm ⁶¹⁸ as modified by statute; it does not necessarily depend upon contract, bailment or pledge. ⁶¹⁹ The innkeeper is almost an insurer of the goods of his guest ⁶²⁰ in that, apart from the specified defences, he is liable even for unexplained loss of or damage to the goods. ⁶²¹ An innkeeper cannot contract out of his strict liability by special agreement, ⁶²² nor can he escape liability by informing the guest that he will not be responsible for goods not placed under lock and key, ⁶²³ or that there are persons in the inn whose character he does not know so that the guest should lock his goods in his room. ⁶²⁴

Extension of liability to cover damage to the goods

33-104

The Hotel Proprietors Act 1956 extended the common law liability of the innkeeper for loss of his guests' goods by providing ⁶²⁵ that he is under the same liability to make good to any guest of any damage to property brought to the hotel as he would be under to make good the loss of any such property. Before the Act, there was some doubt whether the innkeeper was liable for damage to goods as distinct from loss of the goods. ⁶²⁶

Conditions necessary for strict liability

33-105

For the innkeeper to come under strict liability for loss of or damage to his guests' property, six conditions must be satisfied:

- (1)
it must be an "inn" within the statutory definition ⁶²⁷;
- (2)
the guest must be a traveller who has been received at the inn ⁶²⁸;
- (3)
the guest must have engaged sleeping accommodation at the inn ⁶²⁹;
- (4)
the loss or damage must occur within a specified period of time ⁶³⁰;
- (5)
the property of the guest which is lost or damaged must fall within the category to which strict liability relates ⁶³¹;
- (6)
the property must, at the time of the loss or damage, be within the hospitium of the inn. ⁶³²

The first of these conditions has already been discussed ⁶³³; the others will be discussed in the succeeding paragraphs.

Who is a guest?

33-106

A traveller becomes a guest only when the innkeeper accepts him as such ⁶³⁴; even if the traveller is wrongfully refused accommodation ⁶³⁵ he is still not a guest. For strict liability to arise, the traveller must engage sleeping accommodation, ⁶³⁶ but the term “traveller” or “guest” does not include everyone who sleeps at the inn, since it excludes the innkeeper’s family, his employees, his private guests and his lodgers. ⁶³⁷ If a person is refused accommodation, and then, without the permission of the innkeeper, another guest permits him to share a bedroom, he is not a guest. ⁶³⁸ A guest continues to be a guest even if he remains at the hotel for some considerable time, ⁶³⁹ even for months, ⁶⁴⁰ provided nothing occurs to alter his status as a guest. ⁶⁴¹ The mere length of his stay is only one of the circumstances to be taken into consideration when deciding whether he is still a guest. ⁶⁴² If the guest makes an agreement for board at the inn for a considerable period, such as three months, he will probably be held to be a boarder, and not a guest. ⁶⁴³ It is a question of fact when a person ceases to be a guest ⁶⁴⁴; once a person ceases to be a guest he may be given reasonable notice to leave the inn. ⁶⁴⁵ The guest need not be physically within the inn at the time when his goods are lost or damaged, ⁶⁴⁶ but if he is away for several days, he will not be a guest during that period, even though his goods remain at the inn. ⁶⁴⁷ A person may be a guest although a third person is to pay the innkeeper ⁶⁴⁸; thus, in some cases the innkeeper’s liability does not depend on the existence of a contractual relationship with the guest.

Statutory conditions for strict liability

33-107

The Hotel Proprietors Act 1956 alters the strict liability of the innkeeper at common law by excluding his liability towards a traveller who seeks only temporary refreshment and not sleeping accommodation ⁶⁴⁹ and by limiting his liability to loss or damage occurring during a specified period. It is provided by the Act ⁶⁵⁰ that without prejudice to any other liability ⁶⁵¹ incurred by him with respect to any property brought to the hotel, the proprietor of an hotel shall not be liable as an innkeeper to make good to any traveller any loss of or damage to such property except where: (a) at the time of the loss or damage sleeping accommodation at the hotel had been engaged for the traveller ⁶⁵²; and (b) the loss or damage occurred during the period commencing with the midnight immediately preceding, and ending with the midnight immediately following a period for which the traveller was a guest at the hotel and entitled to use the accommodation so engaged.

Property to which strict liability relates

33-108

The Hotel Proprietors Act 1956 ⁶⁵³ provides that without prejudice to any other liability ⁶⁵⁴ or right of his with respect thereto, the proprietor of an hotel is not as an innkeeper liable to make good to any guest ⁶⁵⁵ of his any loss of or damage to any vehicle or any property left therein, or any horse or other live animal or its harness or other equipment. Subject to this exception, the innkeeper is strictly liable for the safety of all movables and moneys ⁶⁵⁶ brought by the guest into the inn; the category includes charters, or evidences concerning freeholds and inheritances, or obligations or other deeds or specialties, being things in action. ⁶⁵⁷ Where, however, goods are deposited in an inn for the purpose of being forwarded by a carrier, the innkeeper is not strictly liable. ⁶⁵⁸

Hospitium of the inn

33-109

The innkeeper is strictly liable only where the goods of the guest are within the hospitium of the inn. ⁶⁵⁹ The hospitium of the inn consists in the buildings of the inn and the precincts so intimately related to those buildings as to be treated as forming part of them. ⁶⁶⁰ If the innkeeper invites his guests, whether expressly or by implication, to place any of his goods outside the inn, he is treating that place as within the hospitium and so will be liable if the goods are lost or damaged there. ⁶⁶¹ But mere permission, not amounting to an invitation, given by an innkeeper to leave a chattel in such a place will not extend the hospitium of the inn to it. ⁶⁶² Stable buildings and garages attached to the inn, car parks, inner courts enclosed by the walls of the inn ⁶⁶³ and a yard alongside the inn, ⁶⁶⁴ have been treated as within the hospitium of the inn. But a place which is not obviously attached to the inn premises, e.g. a petrol station runway, is not within the hospitium. ⁶⁶⁵ The test is whether the place is intended and suitable for use in connection with the innkeeper's business. ⁶⁶⁶ The Hotel Proprietors Act 1956 ⁶⁶⁷ excludes strict liability for the kind of property most likely to be left outside the inn (e.g. vehicles or any property left therein), but it may still be necessary to determine the extent of the hospitium in the case of other chattels. ⁶⁶⁸

Limitation of liability by means of a notice

33-110

Provided he displays a statutory notice, ⁶⁶⁹ the proprietor of an hotel, in his capacity as innkeeper, ⁶⁷⁰ may limit his liability to make good the loss of or damage to property brought to the hotel, ⁶⁷¹ so that his liability to any one guest will not exceed £50 in respect of any one article, nor £100 in the aggregate, except where: (a) the property was stolen, lost or damaged through the default, neglect or wilful ⁶⁷² act of the proprietor or some servant of his ⁶⁷³, or (b) the property was deposited by or on behalf of the guest expressly for safe custody with the proprietor or some servant of his authorised, or appearing to be authorised, for the purpose ⁶⁷⁴ and, if so required by the proprietor or that servant, in a container fastened or sealed by the depositor; or (c) at a time after the guest had arrived at the hotel, the property in question was offered for deposit as aforesaid and the proprietor or his servant refused to receive it, or the guest or some other guest acting on his behalf wished so to offer the property in question but, through the default of the proprietor or a servant of his, was unable to do so. ⁶⁷⁵ The onus of proving the default, neglect or wilful act of the proprietor or his servant within exception (a) above, rests upon the guest. ⁶⁷⁶ For there to be an express deposit under exception (b) above, it must be shown that something was said or done to inform the innkeeper in a reasonable and intelligible manner that it was a deposit for safe custody ⁶⁷⁷; it is insufficient merely to place a bag in the office without saying a word. ⁶⁷⁸

Statutory notice

33-111

The limitation of liability under the statute does not apply to the proprietor of an hotel unless, at the time when the property in question was brought to the hotel, a copy of the notice set out in the Schedule to the Act printed in plain type was conspicuously displayed in a place where it could conveniently be read by his guests at or near the reception office or desk or, where there is no reception office or desk, at or near the main entrance to the hotel. ⁶⁷⁹ The innkeeper cannot rely on the statutory limitation of his liability unless the notice is properly exhibited ⁶⁸⁰; an unintentional misprint, even the omission of one word, may exclude the limitation. ⁶⁸¹

Defences: negligence of the guest

33-112

The innkeeper is not liable for loss or damage to his guests' property if he can show that the loss or damage was due to the negligence or misconduct ⁶⁸² of the guest or his employee. ⁶⁸³ Gross negligence need not be proved, ⁶⁸⁴ but the onus of proving negligence is upon the innkeeper. ⁶⁸⁵ Negligence in a guest has been defined for this purpose as the absence of "the ordinary care that a prudent man may be reasonably expected to take under the circumstances" ⁶⁸⁶; the negligence must be such as to render likely the loss of the property. ⁶⁸⁷ The decisions seem to show that the mere fact of a guest omitting to lock the door of the bedroom or other apartment which he occupies at an inn or hotel is not necessarily enough, of itself, to raise a presumption of negligence sufficient to avoid the liability of the innkeeper, ⁶⁸⁸ even though there may have been a notice in the room requiring the occupant to lock the door. ⁶⁸⁹ But leaving open a window communicating with a balcony which gave access to several rooms, when coupled with a failure to lock the door and a prior display in a public room of a bag containing money, has been held sufficient to absolve an innkeeper from responsibility.⁶⁹⁰ And it is carelessness conducing to the loss if a guest, after ostentatiously rolling up notes and letting people see him put them away in an ill-secured box, leaves the box in a public room.⁶⁹¹ In one case, even failure to act upon a notice in the room to the effect that “the proprietor will be happy to take charge of any valuables”, was held to avoid the innkeeper’s liability for loss.⁶⁹² A guest is not negligent in failing to discover whether a watch is kept to prevent strangers gaining access to bedrooms; he is entitled to assume that the innkeeper will take reasonable precautions in this regard.⁶⁹³

Contributory negligence

33-113

It is an undecided point whether the negligence of the guest should be treated, in proper cases, as contributory negligence under the Law Reform (Contributory Negligence) Act 1945. Under the Act, “Where any person suffers damage as the result partly of his own fault and partly of the fault of any other person”⁶⁹⁴ the damages recoverable may be reduced to such an extent as the court thinks just and equitable. It has been argued that the Act should apply to cases of strict liability upon the defendant, including innkeepers’ liability.⁶⁹⁵

Other defences

33-114

The innkeeper is not strictly liable when the guest chooses to make himself exclusively responsible for the safety of his goods⁶⁹⁶; the guest must show an intention to relieve the innkeeper of all liability.⁶⁹⁷ It depends on the facts whether the conduct of the guest indicates his assumption of entire responsibility for his own goods; thus the fact that a guest does not deposit an article at the office of the hotel, in accordance with a notice in his bedroom, does not amount to an exemption of the innkeeper’s liability.⁶⁹⁸ The common law also exempts the innkeeper from liability when the loss arises from an act of God or of alien enemies.⁶⁹⁹ It has also been held that the Fires Prevention (Metropolis) Act 1774⁷⁰⁰ limits the strict liability of an innkeeper, so that he is not liable for loss or damage caused to his guest’s goods by an accidental fire, i.e. a fire which occurred without negligence on the part of the innkeeper or his employees.⁷⁰¹

Lien of the innkeeper

33-115

An innkeeper⁷⁰² has at common law a general lien, for the unpaid amount of his bill, on all the chattels which the guest takes, in his capacity as guest,⁷⁰³ into the hospitium of the inn.⁷⁰⁴ The lien exists to cover the price of the guest’s personal food and lodging while he is a guest⁷⁰⁵; it does not cover money lent to the guest by the innkeeper⁷⁰⁶ nor money disbursed by the innkeeper on behalf of a guest.⁷⁰⁷ The exercise of the lien is not limited to articles which the innkeeper receives in the inn as luggage,⁷⁰⁸ but the lien has been held not to attach where the goods were merely sent to the guest for some particular purpose, as where a manufacturer sent in a piano to a professional pianist for him to play on during his stay.⁷⁰⁹ The Hotel Proprietors Act 1956⁷¹⁰ provides that the proprietor of an hotel⁷¹¹ has, as an innkeeper, no lien on any vehicle or any property left therein or any horse or other live animal or its harness or other equipment. This provision reverses, on their facts, many common law cases,⁷¹² though they will remain authoritative on the general principles of an innkeeper’s lien. As a result of this enactment, the lien now applies only to the property of the guest in respect of which the innkeeper is strictly liable for loss or damage.⁷¹³ Even at common law, however, the innkeeper had no right to detain the person of his guest, or to strip off his clothes, to secure payment.⁷¹⁴ While the goods are detained under the lien, they are in the possession of the innkeeper as bailee, and he is no longer subject to the strict liability of an innkeeper⁷¹⁵; according to the modern formulation of the bailee’s liability, he will be required to take reasonable care of them.⁷¹⁶ In a nineteenth-century case,

⁷¹⁷ where the innkeeper locked up the guest's clothes in a cupboard where his own goods of a similar character were kept, and the guest's clothes were damaged by moths and rats, the innkeeper was held to be not liable. The cost of storing the goods during the lien cannot be claimed by the innkeeper, since the detention is for his benefit. ⁷¹⁸

Goods not owned by the guest

33-116

The lien covers all the chattels brought in by the guest, provided the innkeeper accepts them as part of the guest's luggage, even though the chattels do not belong to the guest, ⁷¹⁹ or the owner has not consented to their being taken into the inn. ⁷²⁰ The fact that the innkeeper knows that a third person owns the chattels does not prevent the lien, so long as the innkeeper accepted them as part of the chattels accompanying the guest. ⁷²¹ The lien of the innkeeper prevails over the rights of the true owner in these circumstances, even if the goods were hired ⁷²²; if the innkeeper did not know of the facts, the lien even covers goods which had been stolen or wrongfully obtained. ⁷²³ Where a husband and wife are guests, the lien for the food and lodging of both extends to the chattels of both which are brought into the inn, even though credit may be given solely to the husband, and the wife's luggage is her property. ⁷²⁴

Loss of lien

33-117

The lien exists so long as the innkeeper retains possession of the goods. ⁷²⁵ If he allows the goods to be taken away before the guest pays his bill, and the guest returns on a subsequent occasion, the innkeeper cannot claim a lien in regard to the former bill. ⁷²⁶ The relationship of innkeeper and guest has, however, been held to continue in some circumstances despite occasional absences of the guest, ⁷²⁷ so that the innkeeper's lien continues to apply in regard to the bill covering the whole period. ⁷²⁸ The innkeeper's lien is not necessarily waived by his taking security for the guest's bill, unless the taking of the security in the circumstances is inconsistent with the lien and destructive of it. ⁷²⁹

Innkeeper's right of sale

33-118

At common law an innkeeper has no right to sell the property of a guest, ⁷³⁰ and this is so even where he is put to expense and inconvenience by keeping it, ⁷³¹ but the Innkeepers Act 1878 ⁷³² allows the innkeeper ⁷³³ to sell by public auction any goods or chattels left or deposited with him by a guest indebted to him for board, lodging or keep of horses or other animals. ⁷³⁴ There is no power to sell until the goods have been left with him ⁷³⁵ for six weeks without the debt having been paid, nor until at least one month's notice of the intended sale has been given, in one London and one local newspaper, by an advertisement containing a description of the goods and the name of the owner if it is known. ⁷³⁶ Any surplus upon the sale, after payment of the debt, costs and expenses, must be paid to the guest upon demand.

33-119

It is not clear how far the powers of sale in ss.12 and 13 of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 ⁷³⁷ would apply to an innkeeper. To the extent that he is holding the goods of his guest for safe-keeping, he would probably be a "bailee" within the terms of "goods in the possession or under the control of a bailee where—(a) the bailor is in breach of an obligation to take delivery of the goods" ⁷³⁸; but if the innkeeper holds the goods under his lien, ⁷³⁹ it is very doubtful whether these words would apply to the situation. ⁷⁴⁰

Liability of boarding-house keepers ⁷⁴¹

33-120

Though strict liability for the safety of a guest's property is imposed only in the case of an innkeeper who keeps an "inn" within the statutory definition,⁷⁴² a lodging-house or boarding-house keeper owes the lower duty of reasonable care⁷⁴³; he must take reasonable care of the property which his guests bring into his house.⁷⁴⁴ In *Scarborough v Cosgrove*⁷⁴⁵ a husband and wife took a room in the defendant's boarding-house. They told the defendant that they had property which they wished to keep under lock and key and asked for a second key to their room. This request was refused, and they were told that the key must be left in the door, to enable the defendant's employees to clean the room. They also asked for a key to the chest of drawers, but no key was given to them. Some of the plaintiff's jewellery was stolen by a fellow guest, and the Court of Appeal held that the defendant was liable since he had failed in his duty to take reasonable care. Romer L.J. said that the goods left in the room were not bailed to the defendant, but "seeing that the landlord carries on his business of a boarding-house keeper for reward, I think he is bound to carry on that business with reasonable care, having regard to the nature and normal conduct of the business as known to the guest or as represented to the guest by him".⁷⁴⁶ Similarly, in *Olley v Marlborough Court Ltd*⁷⁴⁷ the proprietors of a "residential" hotel were liable for their negligence in permitting the theft of articles from a guest's room. The custom was for residents to deposit the keys of their rooms on a keyboard when they went out. A stranger entered the hotel during the plaintiff's absence, took the key and stole the articles. It was held that the proprietors were negligent in permitting the keyboard to be unguarded.⁷⁴⁸

-
- ^{594.} See Palmer at Ch.27. The Member States of the Council of Europe have agreed certain minimum rules relevant to the liability of hotel-keepers: see the convention on the liability of hotelkeepers concerning the property of their guests (December 17, 1962) ratified by the United Kingdom on July 12, 1963. The convention entered into force on February 15, 1967 (Cmnd. 3205: Treaty Series No.9, 1967) but although its provisions bind the United Kingdom, they are not part of English municipal law.
- ^{595.} s.1(1). The Act implemented the Law Reform Committee's Second Report (on Innkeepers' Liability), Cmnd. 9161 (1954). The statutory definition supersedes many judicial statements attempting to define an inn.
- ^{596.} s.1(3).
- ^{597.} A sign is not essential for an inn: R. v Collins (1623) Palm. 373; Parker v Flint (1699) 12 Mod.Rep. 254.
- ^{598.} At common law the innkeeper was also bound to receive all travellers, and was not permitted to discriminate between them: Browne v Brandt [1902] 1 K.B. 696, 698. cf. Lamond v Richard [1897] 1 Q.B. 541, 545.
- ^{599.} Parker v Flint, above; Thompson v Lacy (1820) 3 B. & Ald. 283, 287.
- ^{600.} Dansey v Richardson (1854) 3 E. & B. 144. cf. Holder v Soulby (1860) 8 C.B.(N.S.) 254, 266; Scarborough v Cosgrove [1905] 2 K.B. 805. cf. also R. v Jones [1898] 1 Q.B. 119, 159.
- ^{601.} Duke of Devonshire v Simmons (1894) 11 T.L.R. 52, 53. cf. Olley v Marlborough Court Ltd [1949] 1 K.B. 532.
- ^{602.} Pidgeon v Legge (1857) 21 J.P. 743; Sealey v Tandy [1902] 1 K.B. 296, 299. A bar or shop for the sale of spirits is not an inn even where it is under the same roof as an inn, if it is separate from the inn and has a separate entrance: R. v Rymer (1877) 2 Q.B.D. 136.
- ^{603.} cf. Webb v Fagotti Brothers (1898) 79 L.T. 683, 684.
- ^{604.} cf. Ultzen v Nicols [1894] 1 Q.B. 92; Orchard v Bush & Co [1898] 2 Q.B. 284.

- 605. Thompson v Lacy (1820) 3 B. & Ald. 283. cf. Doe D Pitt v Laming (1814) 4 Camp. 73, 77; Fitz v Iles [1893] 1 Ch. 77.
- 606. Cunningham v Philp (1896) 12 T.L.R. 352.
- 607. Thompson v Lacy, above, at 286.
- 608. Dixon v Birch (1873) L.R. 8 Ex. 135.
- 609. Constantine v Imperial Hotels Ltd [1944] K.B. 693. See also Browne v Brandt [1902] 1 K.B. 696; Thompson v McKenzie [1908] 1 K.B. 905; R. v Higgins [1948] 1 K.B. 165. For full details of the innkeeper's liability to receive guests, see Halsbury's Laws of England, 5th edn, Vol.67, paras 183–214. For more general duties applicable see s.29 of the Equality Act 2010 and Pt II of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 (above, paras 33-044—33-048) will also apply.
- 610. See below, paras 33-110—33-114.
- 611. See above, para.33-101.
- 612. Resolution of Judges (1624) Hut. 99; Squire v Wheeler (1867) 16 L.T. 93. "Loss" includes theft of the goods: Reniger v Fogossa (1552) Plowd. 1, 9; Robins & Co v Gray [1895] 2 Q.B. 501, 504. "Loss" does not include loss by accidental fire: Williams v Owen [1955] 1 W.L.R. 1293, 1297–1298 (applying the Fires Prevention (Metropolis) Act 1774 s.86, to limit the liability of an innkeeper).
- 613. Hotel Proprietors Act 1956 s.1(2). See below, para.33-104.
- 614. Shacklock v Ethorpe Ltd [1939] 3 All E.R. 372 HL. See also Morgan v Ravey (1861) 6 H. & N. 265; Squire v Wheeler (1867) 16 L.T. 93; Cunningham v Philp (1896) 12 T.L.R. 352; Butler & Co Ltd v Quilter (1900) 17 T.L.R. 159.
- 615. Cross v Andrews (1598) Cro.Eliz. 522.
- 616. See below, paras 33-109—33-114.
- 617. See below, paras 33-110—33-111.
- 618. Calye's case (1584) 8 Co Rep. 32a; Kent v Shuckard (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 803, 804; Robins & Co v Gray, above, at 503–505; Shacklock v Ethorpe Ltd, above, at 373; 1 Smith's L.C., 13th edn, 120. See also Winfield, Province of the Law of Tort, pp.57, 59–62.
- 619. See n.618 above.
- 620. Bather v Day (1863) 32 L.J. Ex. 171, 173; Squire v Wheeler, above.
- 621. Morgan v Ravey, above; Winkworth v Raven [1931] 1 K.B. 652, 657–659.
- 622. Williams v Linnitt [1951] 1 K.B. 565, 584–585; Burns v Royal Hotel (St Andrews) Ltd, 1957 S.L.T. 53, 56.
- 623. Harland's Case (1641) Clay. 97.
- 624. Anon. (1566) Moore K.B. 78.
- 625. s.1(2).
- 626. Winkworth v Raven, above, at 657 (followed in Williams v Owen [1955] 1 W.L.R. 1293, 1297).
- 627. See above, para.33-101.

- 628. See below, para.33-106.
- 629. See below, para.33-107.
- 630. See below, para.33-107.
- 631. See below, para.33-108.
- 632. See below, para.33-109.
- 633. See above, para.33-101.
- 634. White's case (1558) 2 Dyer 158b. cf. Grant v Cardiff Hotels Co Ltd (1921) 37 T.L.R. 775 (some retrospective operation given to the acceptance of a guest: see the Hotel Proprietors Act 1956 s.2(1)(b)).
- 635. See above, para.33-102.
- 636. See below, para.33-107.
- 637. Williams v Linnitt [1951] 1 K.B. 565, 579. See also Calye's case (1584) 8 Co. Rep. 32a.
- 638. White's case, above.
- 639. In old law, a traveller ceased to be a guest if he stayed more than three days: Calye's case, above (overruled on this point in Harland's case (1641) Clay. 97 (14 days)). See now Thompson v Lacy (1820) 3 B. & Ald. 283 (83 days); Chesham Automobile Supply Ltd v Beresford Hotel (Birchington) Ltd (1913) 29 T.L.R. 584.
- 640. Allen v Smith (1862) 12 C.B.(N.S.) 638 (seven months); Hanley v Bethell Hotels Ltd (1917) 52 I.L.T. 10.
- 641. (1917) 52 I.L.T. 10.
- 642. Lamond v Richard [1897] 1 Q.B. 541, 546.
- 643. Drope v Thaire (1626) Lat. 126.
- 644. Portmand v Griffin (1913) 29 T.L.R. 225 (payment of bill terminated the relationship). See the Hotel Proprietors Act 1956 s.2(1) (below, para.33-107).
- 645. Lamond v Richard, above.
- 646. See the notes to White's case (1558) 2 Dyer 158b (goods stolen while guest away for the day).
- 647. See the Hotel Proprietors Act 1956 s.2(1) (see below, para.33-107); Gelley v Clerk (1607) Cro.Jac. 188. cf. Allen v Smith (1862) 12 C.B.(N.S.) 638.
- 648. Wright v Anderton [1909] 1 K.B. 209. cf. Cryan v Hotel Rembrandt Ltd (1925) 133 L.T. 395.
- 649. For the position at common law, see Calye's case (1584) 8 Co Rep. 32a; Bennett v Mellor (1793) 5 Term Rep. 273; Orchard v Bush [1898] 2 Q.B. 284; Williams v Linnitt [1951] 1 K.B. 565.
- 650. s.2(1).
- 651. e.g. for negligence, or as a bailee. (See on the latter, Williams v Gesse (1837) 3 Bing.N.C. 849; Adams (Durham) Ltd and Day v Trust Houses Ltd [1960] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 380.)
- 652. cf. Strauss v County Hotel and Wine Co (1883) 12 Q.B.D. 27 (plaintiff intended to sleep at an inn, but after receiving a telegram waiting for him at the inn decided not to stay; he left his baggage with the porter, and went to the refreshment room which was under the same management as the inn: held, he was not a guest at the inn).

- 653. s.2(2). The innkeeper has no lien in regard to the property mentioned in this subsection: s.2(2). On his lien, see below, paras 33-115—33-118.
- 654. e.g. for negligence, or as a bailee. (See above, para.33-107 n.651.) See also Pt II of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 (see above, paras 33-044—33-048).
- 655. On the term “guest”, see above, para.33-106.
- 656. Kent v Shuckard (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 803; Doorman v Jenkins (1834) 2 A. & E. 256.
- 657. Calye’s case (1584) 8 Co Rep. 32a; Kent v Shuckard, above, at 804, 805.
- 658. Williams v Gesse (1837) 3 Bing.N.C. 849.
- 659. Williams v Linnitt [1951] 1 K.B. 565, 580.
- 660. [1951] 1 K.B. 565, 580.
- 661. [1951] 1 K.B. 565 at 581. See also Jones v Tyler (1834) 1 A. & E. 522; Aria v Bridge House Hotel (Staines) Ltd (1927) 137 L.T. 299 (but see above, para.33-108 on vehicles); Watson v People’s Refreshment House Association Ltd [1952] 1 K.B. 318, 322.
- 662. Watson v People’s Refreshment House Association Ltd, above, at 322. cf. Gresham v Lyon [1954] 1 W.L.R. 1100, 1104.
- 663. Williams v Linnitt, above; Gee, Walker and Slater Ltd v Friary Hotel (Derby) Ltd (1949) 66 T.L.R. (Pt 1) 59.
- 664. Davies v Clarke (1953) 103 L.J. 141.
- 665. Watson v People’s Refreshment House Association Ltd, above.
- 666. Williams v Linnitt, above, at 580, 581; Watson v People’s Refreshment House Association Ltd, above, at 323, 324.
- 667. s.2(2). See above, para.33-108.
- 668. If goods are lost or damaged outside the hospitium of the inn, the innkeeper may still be liable in negligence or under s.13 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 (see above, para.33-046) or possibly under s.49(1) of the Consumer Rights Act 2015.
- 669. See below, para.33-111.
- 670. See above, para.33-101.
- 671. Hotel Proprietors Act 1956 s.2(3). The financial limits of £50 and £100 set in this subsection have not been increased in line with inflation.
- 672. The word “wilful” does not qualify “default or neglect”: Behrens v Grenville Hotel (Bude) Ltd (1925) 69 S.J. 346; Belleville v Palatine Hotel and Buildings Co Ltd (1944) 171 L.T. 363.
- 673. See Medawar v Grand Hotel Co [1891] 2 Q.B. 11; Belleville v Palatine Hotel and Buildings Co Ltd, above; Bonham-Carter v Hyde Park Hotel Ltd (1948) 64 T.L.R. 177; Olley v Marlborough Court Ltd [1949] 1 K.B. 532. The reference to “servant” does not incorporate the common law doctrine of vicarious liability: Kott v Gordon Hotels Ltd [1968] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 228.

- 674. Behrens v Grenville Hotel (Bude) Ltd, above. cf. Moss v Russell (1884) 1 T.L.R. 13 ("boots" of hotel has no implied authority to receive goods for safe deposit).
- 675. See n.671, above.
- 676. Whitehouse v Pickett [1908] A.C. 357.
- 677. [1908] A.C. 357 at 361. See also Moss v Russell, above; O'Connor v Grand International Hotel Co [1898] 2 Ir.R. 92. cf. Cryan v Hotel Rembrandt Ltd (1925) 133 L.T. 395.
- 678. Whitehouse v Pickett, above.
- 679. Hotel Proprietors Act 1956 s.2(3) proviso. On the sufficiency of notices under previous legislation (which was not identical with this proviso) see Shacklock v Ethorpe Ltd [1937] 4 All E.R. 672 (affirmed on another ground: [1939] 3 All E.R. 372); Carey v Long's Hotel Co Ltd (1891) 7 T.L.R. 213; affirming 6 T.L.R. 415.
- 680. Hodgson v Ford & Sons (1892) 8 T.L.R. 722.
- 681. Spice v Bacon (1877) 2 Ex. D. 463 (decided under the Innkeepers' Liability Act 1863 ss.1, 3 (now repealed); the notice to be exhibited under the 1956 Act is not identical with that which was required by the 1863 Act).
- 682. e.g. theft by servant of the guest: Calye's case (1584) 8 Co Rep. 32a; Burgess v Clements (1815) 4 M. & S. 306.
- 683. Calye's case, above; Cashill v Wright (1856) 6 E. & B. 891; Robins & Co v Gray [1895] 2 Q.B. 501, 504. See also, in addition to the cases cited in nn.685-693, below, Butler & Co v Quilter (1900) 17 T.L.R. 159; Hansen v Killick [1925] Ir.R. 70.
- 684. Cashill v Wright, above.
- 685. Cashill v Wright, above; Gee, Walker & Slater Ltd v Friary Hotel (Derby) Ltd (1949) 66 T.L.R. (Pt 1) 59. cf. Cross and Tapper on Evidence, 12th edn (2010), p.127, n.54 (discussing Medawar v Grand Hotel Co [1891] 2 Q.B. 11).
- 686. Cashill v Wright, above, at 900.
- 687. Armistead v Wilde (1851) 17 Q.B. 261.
- 688. Filipowski v Merryweather (1860) 2 F. & F. 285; Shacklock v Ethorpe Ltd [1939] 3 All E.R. 372; Brewster v Drennan [1945] 2 All E.R. 705. See also Herbert v Markwell (1881) 45 L.T. 649.
- 689. Morgan v Ravey (1860) 2 F. & F. 283; Carpenter v Haymarket Hotel Ltd [1931] 1 K.B. 364.
- 690. Oppenheim v White Lion Hotel Co Ltd (1871) L.R. 6 C.P. 515.
- 691. Armistead v Wilde, above.
- 692. Jones v Jackson (1873) 29 L.T. 399; but see Huntly v Bedford Hotel Co (1892) 56 J.P. 53; Wright v Embassy Hotel (1934) 39 S.J. 12.
- 693. Olley v Marlborough Court Ltd [1949] 1 K.B. 532, 542, 548.
- 694. s.1(1).
- 695. Williams, Joint Torts and Contributory Negligence (1951), pp.207–209, 326, 327. Contributory negligence is available as a defence to a claim based on s.2(1) of the Misrepresentation Act 1967: Gran Gelato v Richcliff (Group) Ltd [1992] Ch. 560; but not to a claim in deceit: Standard Chartered Bank v Pakistan National Shipping Corp (Nos 2 and 4) [2002] UKHL 43, [2003] 1

A.C. 959.

696. Farnworth v Packwood (1816) 1 Stark. 249; Richmond v Smith (1828) 8 B. & C. 9.

697. See n.696, above.

698. Carpenter v Haymarket Hotel Ltd [1931] 1 K.B. 364. cf. the cases cited in n.689, above.

699. Morgan v Ravey (1861) 6 H. & N. 265.

700. s.86.

701. Williams v Owen [1955] 1 W.L.R. 1293, 1297–1298.

702. See above, para.33-101. The keeper of a lodging-house has no lien: Alldis v Huxley (1891) 12 S.R.(N.S.W.) 158; nor, in the absence of a special agreement, has the keeper of a livery-stable: Wallace v Woodgate (1824) Ry. & Mood. 193; or the trainer of a racehorse: Ward v Fielden [1985] C.L.Y. 2000.

703. cf. Binns v Pigot (1840) 9 C. & P. 208 (goods deposited at the inn by a person who was not a guest).

704. See above, para.33-109.

705. Mulliner v Florence (1878) 3 Q.B.D. 484. cf. Smith v Dearlove (1848) 6 C.B. 132.

706. Matsuda v Waldorf Hotel Co Ltd (1911) 27 T.L.R. 153 (stolen railway tickets deposited as a security for money advanced by the innkeeper); Chesham Automobile Supply Co Ltd v Beresford Hotel (Birchington) Ltd (1913) 29 T.L.R. 584.

707. Chesham Automobile Supply Co Ltd v Beresford Hotel (Birchington) Ltd, see above; cf. Ferguson v Peterkin, 1953 S.L.T. (Sh. Ct.) 91 (no lien for damage caused by the guest).

708. Marsh v Police Commissioner [1945] K.B. 43.

709. Broadwood v Granara (1854) 10 Exch. 417.

710. s.2(2).

711. See above, para.33-101.

712. e.g. Scarfe v Morgan (1838) 4 M. & W. 270; Chase v Westmore (1816) 5 M. & S. 180; Mulliner v Florence, above, at 493; Chesham Automobile Supply Co Ltd v Beresford Hotel (Birchington) Ltd, above.

713. See above, para.33-108.

714. Sunbolf v Alford (1838) 3 M. & W. 248. See also R. v Stewart (1895) 59 J.P. 650.

715. Angus v McLachlan (1883) 23 Ch. D. 330.

716. Houghland v RR Low (Luxury Coaches) Ltd [1962] 1 Q.B. 694, 698 (see above, para.33-008); see also s.13 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 and s.49(1) of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 (see above, paras 33-044—33-046).

717. See n.715, above.

718. British Empire Shipping Co v Somes (1858) E.B. & E. 353, 367; affirmed (1860) 8 H.L. Cas. 338. However it has since been held that the principle established in Somes is a “narrow one” which is of “doubtful status” outside of the context of artificer’s liens and so on this basis it may not apply to an innkeeper, in which case an innkeeper may be entitled to recover the cost of storing the goods during the detention (Metall Market OOO v Vitorio Shipping Co Ltd (The "Lehmann Timber") [2013] EWCA Civ 650, [2014] Q.B. 760 at [122]). Where the innkeeper is held to be acting for his own benefit, then it is unlikely that the innkeeper will be entitled to make the charge, but the position may be otherwise where the guest has failed in breach of contract to remove his or her possessions from the inn.

- 719. Robinson v Walter (1617) 3 Bulst. 269; Turrill v Crawley (1849) 13 Q.B. 197; Snead v Watkins (1856) 26 L.J.C.P. 57. See also the cases cited in nn.720-722, below.
- 720. Johnson v Hill (1822) 3 Stark. 172.
- 721. Robins & Co v Gray [1895] 2 Q.B. 501 (sewing machines sent by employers to a commercial traveller for sale).
- 722. Threfall v Borwick (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 210; Chesham Automobile Supply Co Ltd v Beresford Hotel (Birchington) Ltd (1913) 29 T.L.R. 584.
- 723. Mulliner v Florence (1878) 3 Q.B.D. 484; Gordon v Silber (1890) 25 Q.B.D. 491; Marsh v Police Commissioner [1945] K.B. 43.
- 724. Gordon v Silber, above. cf. Mulliner v Florence, above, at 488.
- 725. Jones v Thurloe (1723) 8 Mod. 172; Jacobs v Latour (1828) 5 Bing. 130 (innkeeper allowed sheriff to seize the goods, and did not assert his lien); Legg v Evans (1840) 6 M. & W. 36; Orchard v Rackstraw (1850) 9 C.B. 698. cf. Wallace v Woodgate (1824) 1 C. & P. 575 (goods fraudulently taken from innkeeper's custody, in order to destroy lien).
- 726. Jones v Thurloe, above.
- 727. See above, para.33-106.
- 728. Allen v Smith (1862) 12 C.B.(N.S.) 638; affirmed (1863) 9 Jur.(N.S.) 1284.
- 729. Angus v McLachlan (1883) 23 Ch. D. 330; Matsuda v Waldorf Hotel Co Ltd (1911) 27 T.L.R. 153.
- 730. Mulliner v Florence, above, at 489.
- 731. Jones v Thurloe, above.
- 732. s.1.
- 733. The Act refers to the landlord, proprietor, keeper or manager of any hotel, inn or licensed public-house, and so has a wider application than the "hotel proprietor" referred to in the Hotel Proprietors Act 1956 (above, para.33-101).
- 734. The right of sale under this Act is unaffected by the statutory abolition of the innkeeper's lien in respect of certain property: see above, para.33-115.
- 735. cf. Chesham Automobile Supply Co Ltd v Beresford Hotel (Birchington) Ltd (1913) 29 T.L.R. 584.
- 736. s.1.
- 737. Examined above, paras 33-095—33-100.
- 738. s.12(1)(a). Sch.1 Pt I para.4(1) explicitly includes "possession of goods which he has held as custodian".

- 739. See above, paras 33-115—33-117.
- 740. ss.12 and 13 were particularly designed for goods not collected by their owners after repairs, valuations or appraisals, as well as custody, e.g. s.12(5)(b) entitles the bailee to deduct from the proceeds of sale “any sum payable in respect of the goods” (italics supplied), which is not relevant to the innkeeper’s lien.
- 741. See Palmer at Ch.28.
- 742. See above, para.33-101.
- 743. At common law (see the following note) and under the term implied (in a contract to supply services in the course of a business) by s.13 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 and included in a contract between a trader and a consumer under s.49(1) of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 (see above, paras 33-044—33-046).
- 744. Scarborough v Cosgrove [1905] 2 K.B. 805; Paterson v Norris (1914) 30 T.L.R. 393; Caldecutt v Piesse (1932) 49 T.L.R. 26; Olley v Marlborough Court Ltd [1949] 1 K.B. 532. A similar duty to take reasonable care lies upon the proprietors of a residential club: Williams v Curzon Syndicate Ltd (1919) 35 T.L.R. 475. On the distinction between a lodger and a tenant (to whom no such duty of care is owed) see Appah v Parncliffe Investments Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 1064.
- 745. See above.
- 746. See n.743, above.
- 747. See above.
- 748. This case also concerned a notice purporting to exempt the proprietors from liability: see above, para.33-110.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 33 - Bailment
Section 4. - Bailments for Valuable Consideration
(f) - Pledge ⁷⁴⁹
(i) - Pledge at Common Law

Definition of pledge

33-121

Although the Consumer Credit Act 1974 regulates many categories of pledge ⁷⁵⁰ the common law on pledges must first be examined, since it defines the concept of pledge or pawn used in the Act ⁷⁵¹ and still applies to all pledges falling outside the Act. A pledge or pawn is “a bailment of goods ⁷⁵² by a debtor to his creditor to be kept by him till the debt be discharged” ⁷⁵³; the bailment is intended to be a security for some debt or engagement. ⁷⁵⁴ The general property in the goods pledged remains in the pledgor, but a special property in them passes to the pledgee in order that he may be able to sell the goods if his right to sell arises. ⁷⁵⁵ This “special property” is strictly only a right to possession of the goods ⁷⁵⁶ together with a power of sale upon default. ⁷⁵⁷ The special property is such that if a bailee accepts an object of value as security for a debt, the dishonest retaking of the object by the bailor is theft. ⁷⁵⁸

Characteristics of pledge

33-122

Sale upon default in payment of the debt is an incident of pledge, whereas a lien gives merely a right to detain the goods until the debt is paid ⁷⁵⁹; again, a pledge, unlike a lien, ⁷⁶⁰ is assignable, and may be taken in execution against the pledgee. ⁷⁶¹ A mortgage of chattels or bill of sale differs from a pledge in that on a mortgage the property passes by assignment, subject to a right of redemption, while possession need not pass to the mortgagee. ⁷⁶²

Delivery essential for pledge

33-123

⚠ Delivery, either actual or constructive, of the articles pledged in consideration of the debt or advance is essential for pledge. ⁷⁶³ Constructive delivery is sufficient where it is practically impossible to give physical possession (as in the case of bulky goods) or where the pledge remains in the possession of the pledgor for a special purpose ⁷⁶⁴; the pledge may be legally delivered though it does not actually pass from the hands of the pledgor to those of the pledgee. ⁷⁶⁵ Delivery of a key of a warehouse in which goods are stored, ⁷⁶⁶ ⚠ or the handing over of a delivery order directing a warehouseman to deliver goods to the pledgee (followed by the warehouseman’s acknowledgment of the delivery order) ⁷⁶⁷ may be sufficient in law to form constructive delivery. But where the goods are in the possession of a third person, such as a warehouseman, the latter must attorn to the pledgee in order for possession to pass to the pledgee. ⁷⁶⁸ ⚠

33-124

In pledge, it is not essential that the advance and the delivery should be contemporaneous. It is sufficient if possession is delivered within a reasonable time of the advance, in pursuance of the contract to pledge. ⁷⁶⁹ Redelivery of the goods to the pledgor for a limited purpose and on the understanding that the pledge is to continue, does not destroy the pledge. ⁷⁷⁰

Bills of Sale Acts

33-125

If a document is signed which gives the terms of the pledge, this is not a bill of sale under the Bills of Sale Acts 1878 and 1882, since the document is not a transfer of title nor a licence to take possession of goods; it is the delivery of possession which distinguishes the pledge from a mortgage or bill of sale. ⁷⁷¹ Where, however, the document is essential to the proof of the creditor's right to possession of the goods, because there has been no delivery to complete a pledge, it is a bill of sale within the Acts, and requires registration. ⁷⁷² In deciding whether a transaction is one to which the Acts apply the court should look not merely at the documents but at the real nature of the transaction. ⁷⁷³ A delivery order, addressed to a warehouseman who holds the goods, is not a bill of sale, since it is merely a step in the transfer of possession to the pledgee. ⁷⁷⁴

Pledge of negotiable instrument

33-126

Where a pledgor pledges a negotiable instrument ⁷⁷⁵ to which he has no title or in which he has only a limited interest, but the pledgee receives it for value and in good faith, the pledgee becomes an innocent holder for value; the pledgee's right to the negotiable instrument will then prevail against the true owner despite the pledgor's lack of title. ⁷⁷⁶ Thus in London Joint Stock Bank v Simmons, ⁷⁷⁷ a broker in fraud of the owner pledged negotiable instruments, together with other instruments belonging to other persons, with a bank as a security en bloc for an advance. The bank did not know whether the instruments belonged to the broker or other persons, or whether the broker had any authority to deal with them, and made no inquiries. The broker having absconded, the bank realised the securities. It was held by the House of Lords that there being as a matter of fact no circumstances to create suspicion, the bank was entitled to retain and realise the securities, having taken negotiable instruments for value and in good faith. The mere fact that a broker brings a block of securities and pledges them with a banker against his general account and allows them to remain as security for a considerable time, is not sufficient to put the banker on inquiry. ⁷⁷⁸ If, however, the pledgee has suspicions and the means of knowledge, and wilfully shuts his eyes, he does not act in good faith. ⁷⁷⁹ It would appear that where the pledgee makes an advance upon securities, knowing that the pledgor has only a limited authority to deal with them, he must return the securities to the true owner on repayment of the advance made to the pledgor. ⁷⁸⁰

Pledges by mercantile agents or factors

33-127

There is special statutory provision for the implied authority of a mercantile agent to pledge goods in his possession ⁷⁸¹ and of a seller or buyer of goods in possession of them after the sale or agreement to sell. ⁷⁸² In the case of a factor or mercantile agent, it is expressly provided by the Factors Act 1889 ⁷⁸³ that "A pledge of the documents of title to goods shall be deemed to be a pledge of the goods".

Pledge of bills of lading ⁷⁸⁴

33-128

When goods are under the operation of a bill of lading, delivery for the purpose of pledging the goods may be effected by indorsement or transfer of the bill of lading.⁷⁸⁵ It is a question of fact whether a particular transaction was intended to pass the title in the goods, or only to create a pledge.⁷⁸⁶ A bill of lading is still in operation when the goods are landed at a sufferance-wharf with a stop for freight; a transfer of the bill of lading while the goods are there creates an effective pledge.⁷⁸⁷

Liabilities of the pledgee

33-129

The pledgee, since he has possession of the thing pledged, is liable for failure to take reasonable care of it⁷⁸⁸; if it is stolen from him he will be discharged from liability if he can show that he took ordinary care of it.⁷⁸⁹ Similarly he is excused where the thing was perishable, and did in fact perish.⁷⁹⁰ If several things are pledged for the same debt, and one of them is lost without default in the pledgee, the residue is liable to be retained for the whole debt.⁷⁹¹

Pledgor's title

33-130

By the pledge, the pledgor impliedly warrants that he has a title to the thing pledged,⁷⁹² and that it may safely be returned to him⁷⁹³; he is liable in damages to the pledgee for any breach of such a warranty.⁷⁹⁴ If the pledgor has no authority to make the pledge, the pledgee cannot hold the thing pledged as against the true owner,⁷⁹⁵ since, apart from the Factors Act 1889,⁷⁹⁶ the possession which the pledgor transferred to the pledgee is no defence to the latter when he is sued by the true owner.⁷⁹⁷ The pledgee will prevail, however, if the true owner has allowed the pledgor to hold himself out as the owner in such a way as to induce the pledgee innocently to enter into the contract of pledge.⁷⁹⁸ But an authority to sell does not impliedly include an authority to the agent to pledge.⁷⁹⁹

Power of sale at common law

33-131

If the pledgor makes default in payment at the stipulated time, the pledgee has the power at common law to sell the pledge, even although there is no express agreement to that effect⁸⁰⁰; or he may sue the pledgor for his debt, retaining the pledge as a security.⁸⁰¹ But if a time for payment has not been agreed upon, or if the time agreed upon has been extended indefinitely, the pledgee cannot sell the pledge until after demand for payment and notice of his intention to sell.⁸⁰² The pledgee must take care that it is a provident sale.⁸⁰³ At common law, he sells by virtue of an implied authority from the pledgor and for the benefit of both parties; hence he must, after deducting his debt, account to the pledgor for any surplus of the proceeds of the sale.⁸⁰⁴ If, however, the proceeds of the sale do not satisfy the debt, the pledgor is still personally liable for the deficit.⁸⁰⁵

Statutory powers of sale

33-132

The wide powers of sale conferred on bailees by ss.12 and 13 of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 were not designed with pledges in mind,⁸⁰⁶ but they could be construed as wide enough to include pledges.⁸⁰⁷ The statutory powers were examined earlier in this chapter⁸⁰⁸; the procedure under s.13, which empowers a bailee to apply to the court to authorise a sale, may be especially useful to a pledgee.⁸⁰⁹ There is a special statutory procedure for the sale of a pawn.⁸¹⁰

Other powers of the pledgee

33-133

Until repayment, the pledgee is, by virtue of his possession and his immediate right to possession of the thing pledged, the only person who may sue a stranger for trespass or conversion⁸¹¹; where the pledgee is deprived of possession by the tortious act of a stranger, the measure of damages recoverable by the pledgee is the full market value of the thing at the time when and the place where he should have obtained possession.⁸¹² (The tortfeasor cannot take advantage of the pledgee's liability, upon his receiving that value, to account to the pledgor (or another) for any amount exceeding the pledgee's interest.⁸¹³) The pledgee may assign or sub-pledge to a third person his special property or interest in the thing pledged⁸¹⁴; such a transfer is lawful only if it purports to transfer no more than the pledgee's interest in the thing, and the pledgee continues to be liable for reasonable care being taken for its safe custody.⁸¹⁵

33-134

The right of the pledgee to use the thing pledged will depend upon the agreed terms of the pledge; in the absence of any express or implied term, there is old authority to the effect that the pledgee may not use it if it is something which will be the worse for such use, such as clothes,⁸¹⁶ but that he may, at his own risk, use a thing which will not be the worse for use.⁸¹⁷ If the keeping of the thing is an expense to the pledgee, such as a cow or horse, he may milk the cow or ride the horse in recompense for the keeping.⁸¹⁸ If during the pledge there is any increase in the value of the thing pledged, the pledgee is entitled to the increase as part of his security.⁸¹⁹

Unlawful dealing by the pledgee

33-135

If the pledgee deals with the thing pledged in an unlawful manner, such as by sale before the time fixed for repayment of the debt,⁸²⁰ or by wrongfully claiming to be absolute owner of the thing,⁸²¹ the contract of pledge is not determined⁸²² and the pledgor cannot, without payment or tender of the debt, sue the pledgee for conversion.⁸²³ But if the pledgee "deals with it in a manner other than is allowed by law for the payment of his debt, then, in so far as by disposing of the reversionary interest of the pledgor he causes to the pledgor any difficulty in obtaining possession of the pledge on payment of the sum due, and thereby does him any real damage, he commits a legal wrong against the pledgor".⁸²⁴

Termination of pledge

33-136

By a bailment in pledge the pledgee impliedly undertakes to return the chattel to the pledgor upon payment of the debt.⁸²⁵ Upon repayment, the contract of pledge is extinguished, and the pledgee is divested of his special property in the chattel.⁸²⁶ The pledgor (or his personal representative)⁸²⁷ may, by virtue of his general property in the thing pledged, and upon tender of the debt,⁸²⁸ redeem it at any time⁸²⁹ until the pledge is lawfully sold by the pledgee. If the debtor tenders the debt to the pledgee, but the pledgee refuses to deliver up the pledge, the pledgee's special property therein is determined, and the pledgor becomes entitled to the immediate possession of the thing pledged; the pledgee thereupon becomes liable for conversion⁸³⁰ at the suit of the pledgor, or his assignee.⁸³¹ But apparently, even in such a case, the pledgee is entitled to deduct from the damages he must pay the amount of the debt.⁸³² If, after tender of the debt, the pledgee retains the thing pledged, he is strictly liable for its safety.⁸³³

⁷⁴⁹. See generally Palmer and Hudson, Interests in Goods, 2nd edn (1998), pp.621 et seq.

- 750. See below, paras 33-137—33-144.
- 751. See below, para.33-137 n.838.
- 752. A pledge can be created only in respect of a chattel capable of delivery; thus there can be no pledge of a chose in action as such: Harrold v Plenty [1901] 2 Ch. 314, 316.
- 753. Jones at p.118. See also Coggs v Bernard (1703) 2 Ld.Raym. 909, 913; Donald v Suckling (1866) L.R. 1 Q.B. 585, 594. The debt creates a personal liability to pay, irrespective of the pledge: South Sea Co v Duncomb (1731) 2 Stra. 919; Jones v Marshall (1889) 24 Q.B.D. 269, 271.
- 754. There must have been an intention to pledge the goods: Marcq v Christie, Manson & Woods Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 731, [2004] Q.B. 286 at [41].
- 755. Ex p. Hubbard (1886) 17 Q.B.D. 690, 698.
- 756. Which entitles the pledgee to sue strangers who tortiously interfere with the goods: see below, para.33-133.
- 757. The Odessa [1916] 1 A.C. 145, 158–159. See also Halliday v Holgate (1868) L.R. 3 Ex. 299, 302; Attenborough & Son v Solomon [1913] A.C. 76, 84. The pledgee may be under some fiduciary obligations towards the pledgor: see Mathew v TM Sutton Ltd [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1455 (see below, para.33-144 n.891; commented on by Palmer and Merkin [1994] All E.R. Annual Review 26–28).
- 758. Rose v Matt [1951] 1 K.B. 810 (larceny under the law before the Theft Act 1968: see now ss.1 and 5(1) of that Act).
- 759. Yungman v Briesemann (1892) 67 L.T. 642. cf. above, paras 33-093, 33-115.
- 760. Donald v Suckling, above, at 612.
- 761. Re Rollason (1887) 34 Ch. D. 495. cf. Insolvency Act 1986 s.311(5).
- 762. Re Morritt (1886) 18 Q.B.D. 222, 232, 234-235. A pledge is also distinguishable from an equitable mortgage (e.g. a pledgee has no right of foreclosure, since he has only a special property in the chattel): Carter v Wake (1877) 4 Ch. D. 605; Re Richardson (1885) 30 Ch. D. 396, 403.
- 763. Dublin City Distillery Ltd v Doherty [1914] A.C. 823, 843; Kum v Wah Tat Bank Ltd [1971] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 439 PC. Thus there may be a pledge of bearer bonds (Carter v Wake, above), but not a chose in action such as shares (Harrold v Plenty [1901] 2 Ch. 314, 316). Apart from the Factors Act 1889 s.3, and the exceptional case of bills of lading (below, para.33-128) the delivery of a document of title to goods is insufficient for a pledge at common law, although a lien (without a power of sale) may arise.
- 764. Reeves v Capper (1838) 5 Bing. N.C. 136; Martin v Reid (1862) 11 C.B.(N.S.) 730.
- 765. Barber v Meyerstein (1866) L.R. 2 C.P. 38; (1870) L.R. 4 H.L. 317. On constructive delivery, see Stoljar (1958) 21 M.L.R. 27, 31 et seq.
- 766.  Young v Lambert (1870) L.R. 3 P.C. 142; Hilton v Tucker (1888) 39 Ch. D. 669. See also Ward v Turner (1751) 2 Ves.Sen. 431, 443. However, the delivery of a pin code may not suffice to constitute delivery: MSC Mediterranean Shipping Co SA v Glencore International AG [2017] EWCA Civ 365 at [25]–[42].
- 767. Grigg v National Guardian Assurance Co [1891] 3 Ch. 206. But the goods must be ascertained: Re London Wine Co (Shippers) Ltd [1986] P.C.C. 121.

- 768. ! Madras Official Assignee v Mercantile Bank of India Ltd [1935] A.C. 53, 58-59; Impala Warehousing and Logistics (Shanghai) Co Ltd v Wanxiang Resources (Singapore) Pte Ltd [2015] EWHC 811 (Comm), [2015] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 234 at [54]–[59]. But the Privy Council has held that delivery under a contract of pledge to a bank is completed when the goods are shipped under a mate's receipt naming the bank as consignee: Kum v Wah Tat Bank Ltd [1971] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 439. cf. above, para.33-030, see below, para.44-015, n.83, para.44-252.
- 769. Hilton v Tucker, above; Reeves v Capper, above.
- 770. North Western Bank Ltd v John Poynter, Son & Macdonalds [1895] A.C. 56; Re David Allester Ltd [1922] 2 Ch. 211; Lloyds Bank Ltd v Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association [1938] 2 K.B. 147 (see below, para.34-549). On "trust receipts", see below and Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 7-033, 18-279—18-283.
- 771. Ex p. Hubbard (1886) 17 Q.B.D. 690; Charlesworth v Mills [1892] A.C. 231. See also Re David Allester Ltd, above.
- 772. Dublin City Distillery Ltd v Doherty [1914] A.C. 823; Re David Allester Ltd, above; Madras Official Assignee v Mercantile Bank of India Ltd, above. See also below, para.34-548; and Diamond (1960) 23 M.L.R. 399.
- 773. Dublin City Distillery Ltd v Doherty, above, at 848; Madras Official Assignee v Mercantile Bank of India Ltd, above, at 58. See also below, paras 39-519—39-528.
- 774. Grigg v National Guardian Assurance Co [1891] 3 Ch. 206. cf. s.29(4) of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 (below, para.44-252).
- 775. See below, paras 34-001 et seq.
- 776. London Joint Stock Bank v Simmons [1892] A.C. 201; followed in Fuller v Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co [1914] 2 K.B. 168.
- 777. See above. See also s.27(3) of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882.
- 778. Fuller v Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co, above. See also Crerar v Bank of Scotland, 1921 S.C. 736, 1922 S.C. 137; Colonial Bank v Cady & Williams (1890) 15 App. Cas. 268; Lloyds Bank Ltd v Swiss Bankverein (1913) 108 L.T. 143.
- 779. cf. the statutory provision on pawning in s.117(2) of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 (below, para.33-140).
- 780. Sheffield v London Joint Stock Bank Ltd (1888) 13 App. Cas. 333. See also Jameson v Union Bank of Scotland (1914) 109 L.T. 850.
- 781. Factors Act 1889 s.2(1) (discussed above, para.31-080 and below, paras 44-202—44-203). See Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 7-034—7-054. See London Jewellers Ltd v Attenborough [1934] 2 K.B. 206. cf. Buller & Co Ltd v Brooks Ltd (1930) 142 L.T. 576.
- 782. Sale of Goods Act 1979 ss.24, 25(1) and (2); Factors Act 1889 ss.8, 9 (discussed below, paras 44-212—44-229). See Benjamin at paras 7-055 et seq., 7-069 et seq.
- 783. s.3. See Benjamin at paras 7-049—7-052.
- 784. See Benjamin at paras 5-140, 18-260, 18-278—18-283.
- 785. Burdick v Sewell (1883) 10 Q.B.D. 363; affirmed sub nom. Sewell v Burdick (1884) 10 App. Cas. 74; Lloyds Bank v Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association [1938] 2 K.B. 147.

- 786. Burdick v Sewell, above, at 369-377. (For an illustration, see Chhabra Corp Pte Ltd v Jag Shakti (Owners) [1986] A.C. 337). cf. Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co v East and West India Dock Co (1880) 6 Q.B.D. 475, 481.
- 787. Meyerstein v Barber (1866) L.R. 2 C.P. 38; Barber v Meyerstein (1870) L.R. 4 H.L. 317.
- 788. Coggs v Bernard (1703) 2 Ld.Raym. 909, 917; Syred v Carruthers (1858) E.B. & E. 469; Jones at pp.75, 76. cf. Foley v O'Hara (1920) 54 Ir.L.T. 167; and Houghland v RR Low (Luxury Coaches) Ltd [1962] 1 Q.B. 694, 698 (see above, para.33-008). The pledgee might also be liable under s.13 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 or s.49(1) of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 (see above, para.33-044). On the matter of exemption clauses, see above, paras 33-053, 33-054. cf. below, paras 33-137 et seq. (statutory controls over pawning).
- 789. See n.788, above.
- 790. Ratcliff v Davis (1610) Yelv. 178.
- 791. (1610) Yelv. 178; Bac.Abr. Bailment (B).
- 792. But receipt of goods by way of pledge is conversion, if the delivery of goods is conversion: s.11(2) of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977; reversing, on this point, Spackman v Foster (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 99.
- 793. Cheesman v Exall (1851) 6 Exch. 341; Singer Manufacturing Co v Clark (1879) 5 Ex. D. 37, 42. cf. s.12 of the Sale of Goods Act 1979; also see above, paras 33-067 et seq.
- 794. Singer Manufacturing Co v Clark, above.
- 795. Williams v Barton (1825) 3 Bing. 139. See also Hoare v Parker (1788) 2 Term Rep. 376; Kingsford v Merry (1856) 1 H. & N. 503, 516; and the cases cited below, para.44-148, nn.655 and 656.
- 796. See above, para.33-127.
- 797. See n.795 above. The pledgee is liable in conversion to the true owner before he refuses to deliver the chattel to him: see n.792 above. On the position of the parties to the pledge when a third party claims an interest in the chattel which is pledged, see ss.7 and 8 of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977 (see above, paras 33-015—33-017).
- 798. Henderson & Co v Williams [1895] 1 Q.B. 521. See also Cole v North Western Bank (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 354, 363; Fry and Mason v Smellie and Taylor (1912) 106 L.T. 404; Fuller v Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co [1914] 2 K.B. 168; Blundell-Leigh v Attenborough [1921] 3 K.B. 235.
- 799. City Bank v Barrow (1880) 5 App. Cas. 664, 669, 670.
- 800. Pigot v Cubley (1864) 15 C.B.(N.S.) 701, 710; Re Morritt (1886) 18 Q.B.D. 222, 235; see also The Ningchow [1916] P. 221.
- 801. South Sea Co v Duncomb (1731) 2 Stra. 919; Lawton v Newland (1817) 2 Stark. 72.
- 802. Pigot v Cubley, above; France v Clark (1883) 22 Ch. D. 830; 26 Ch. D. 257; Burdick v Sewell (1883) 10 Q.B.D. 363, 367; (1884) 10 App. Cas. 74; see Re Morritt, above; and The Ningchow, above. The pledgor may redeem at any time up to the actual sale: Re Morritt, above, at 232; France v Clark, above.
- 803. cf. s.121(6) and (7) of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 (below, para.33-144).
- 804. The Odessa [1916] 1 A.C. 145, 159. cf. s.121(3) of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 (below, para.33-144, especially n.891).

- 805. Jones v Marshall (1889) 24 Q.B.D. 269 (extending this principle to the former “special contract” of pawn). cf. now s.121(4) of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 (below, para.33-144).
- 806. e.g. the categories in Sch.1 Pt I paras 2-4, do not include pledges.
- 807. cf. the submission made above, para.33-119, in the case of the innkeeper’s lien.
- 808. See above, paras 33-095—33-100.
- 809. See above, para.33-100.
- 810. See below, para.33-144.
- 811. Martin v Reid (1862) 11 C.B.(N.S.) 730; Broadbent v Varley (1862) 12 C.B.(N.S.) 214. Under the common law, the pledgor need not be joined as plaintiff: Saville v Tankred (1748) 1 Ves.Sen. 101; and the measure of damages is the full value of the thing: Swire v Leach (1865) 18 C.B.(N.S.) 479. But for the statutory rules, see above, paras 33-010—33-022.
- 812. Chabbra Corp Pte Ltd v Jag Shakti (Owners) [1986] A.C. 337 (following Swire v Leach (1865) 18 C.B.(N.S.) 479; and The Winkfield [1902] P. 42). See above, para.33-024 n.113.
- 813. The Jag Shakti, above cf. see below, para.33-144 n.891.
- 814. Donald v Suckling (1866) L.R. 1 Q.B. 585, 614; Halliday v Holgate (1868) L.R. 3 Ex. 299.
- 815. Donald v Suckling, above, at 615, 616. cf. Nicholson v Hooper (1838) 4 My. & Cr. 179. On the pledgee’s liability if the thing is damaged in the hands of the third person, or if the pledgor is prejudiced by delay in redelivery of the thing after tender of the debt, see Donald v Suckling, above, at 618.
- 816. Mores v Conham (1609) Owen 123.
- 817. Anon. (1693) 2 Salk. 522.
- 818. Coggs v Bernard (1703) 2 Ld.Raym. 909, 916, 917; Story at paras 329-331; Jones at p.81, n.38; Paton at pp.369, 370. cf. Cooke v Haddon (1862) 3 F. & F. 229.
- 819. Story at para.292.
- 820. Or a sub-pledge for a sum greater than that owed by the pledgor: Donald v Suckling (1866) L.R. 1 Q.B. 585. On an alleged custom for moneylenders to repledge, see Sheffield v London Joint Stock Bank (1888) 13 App. Cas. 333 (see also above, para.33-133).
- 821. Yungmann v Briesemann (1892) 67 L.T. 642. But note that “Denial of title is not of itself conversion”: s.11(3) of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977. (There must in addition be some dealing with the thing pledged.)
- 822. Unless some special personal confidence is reposed in the pledgee: Donald v Suckling, above, at 615.
- 823. Donald v Suckling, above, at 610, 616, 618; Halliday v Holgate (1868) L.R. 3 Ex. 299. cf. Pigot v Cubley (1864) 15 C.B.(N.S.) 701. (The pledgor’s claim for specific recovery must follow the rules in s.3 of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977: see above, para.33-013).
- 824. Halliday v Holgate, above, at 302. See also Donald v Suckling, above, at 611, 612, 618.
- 825. Singer Manufacturing Co v Clark (1879) 5 Ex. D. 37.
- 826. Babcock v Lawson (1880) 5 Q.B.D. 284.

- 827. Under the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1934 s.1. In view of this Act, it is submitted that the decision in Ratcliff v Davis (1610) Yelv. 178 is no longer good law on this point.
- 828. Coggs v Bernard (1703) 2 Ld.Raym. 909, 917.
- 829. After the pledgee's death, his personal representative is liable to return the pledge upon redemption: Ratcliff v Davis, above.
- 830. Coggs v Bernard, above, at 917; Donald v Suckling (1866) L.R. 1 Q.B. 585, 610; Yungmann v Briesemann (1892) 67 L.T. 642. In a claim for conversion, the pledgor may seek an order for specific delivery of the chattel: see above, para.33-013. If ownership of the thing pledged is in dispute, a temporary refusal to return it, pending investigation, is justified: Vaughan v Watt (1840) 6 M. & W. 492. cf. Clayton v Le Roy [1911] 2 K.B. 1031, 1051. On the statutory rules applicable where third parties claim an interest in the chattel, see above, paras 33-015—33-016.
- 831. Franklin v Neate (1844) 13 M. & W. 481.
- 832. Johnson v Stear (1863) 15 C.B.(N.S.) 330; see also Halliday v Holgate (1868) L.R. 3 Ex. 299; Yungmann v Briesemann, above. cf. above, para.33-017.
- 833. Anon. (1693) 2 Salk. 522 (goods stolen). cf. his liability during the period he is lawfully in possession: see above, para.33-129.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 33 - Bailment
Section 4. - Bailments for Valuable Consideration
(f) - Pledge ⁷⁴⁹
(ii) - Statutory Control of Pledges

The Consumer Credit Act 1974

33-137

This Act replaced previous legislation on pawnbrokers by ss.114-122, under the heading of "Pledges".⁸³⁴ The general provisions of the Act are discussed below in Ch.39⁸³⁵; if a pledge of goods is given as security for a regulated consumer credit agreement or a regulated consumer hire agreement,⁸³⁶ the agreement and the security are governed by these general provisions, in addition to the sections dealing specifically with pledges. It should be noted that the sections on pledges cover a wider range of transactions than are associated with the popular concept of "pawnbroking". Under the Act,⁸³⁷ a person who takes any article in pawn⁸³⁸ under "a regulated agreement",⁸³⁹ must give to the person from whom he receives it a "pawnreceipt" in the prescribed form.⁸⁴⁰ However, the obligation to give a pawnreceipt⁸⁴¹ and the other provisions of the Act on pledges (ss.114-122) do not apply to two categories⁸⁴²: (a) a pledge of documents of title or of bearer bonds⁸⁴³; or (b) a non-commercial agreement.⁸⁴⁴ It is submitted in Ch.39⁸⁴⁵ that these sections do not apply to choses in action nor to deeds or certificates of title to land deposited with a creditor as security.

Prohibited transactions

33-138

It is an offence for a person to take any article in pawn from an individual whom he knows to be, or who appears to be and is, a minor.⁸⁴⁶ There are still various statutory prohibitions against pledges of particular items, e.g. naval, military and air force equipment, arms and stores,⁸⁴⁷ and other special articles.⁸⁴⁸

Redemption period

33-139

The Act lays down several tests for the period within which the debtor may redeem the pawn. First (and irrespective of the terms of the agreement between the parties)⁸⁴⁹ the Act provides that a pawn is redeemable at any time within six months after it was taken.⁸⁵⁰ Subject to this provision, a pawn is redeemable (secondly) within the period fixed by the parties for the duration of the credit secured by the pledge, or (thirdly) within such longer period as they may agree.⁸⁵¹ The longest of these three periods is "the redemption period", but if the pawn has not been redeemed by the end of the redemption period, it nevertheless (subject to one exception)⁸⁵² remains redeemable until it is realised by the pawnee under the statutory procedure set out below⁸⁵²; the exception is where the property in the pawn passes to the pawnee in accordance with the provision dealing with a pawn securing a credit not exceeding £75.⁸⁵³

Redemption procedure

33-140

On surrender of the pawn receipt, and payment of the amount owing, at any time when the pawn is redeemable, the pawnee must deliver the pawn to the bearer of the pawn-receipt ⁸⁵⁴ (except in the special situation discussed below). ⁸⁵⁵ If the pawnee delivers the pawn to the bearer of the pawn-receipt in accordance with this provision, he is not liable to any person in tort ⁸⁵⁶; nor is the pawnee liable to any person in tort if he refuses to deliver it where the person demanding delivery does not surrender the pawn-receipt ⁸⁵⁷ or pay the amount owing, or in the special situation where “the pawnee knows or has reasonable cause to suspect that the bearer of the pawn-receipt is neither the owner of the pawn nor authorised by the owner to redeem it”. ⁸⁵⁸ The pawnee is granted immunity only “in tort” in this special situation, which means that he could still be liable in contract.

33-141

It is provided ⁸⁵⁹ that no special charge may be made for redemption of a pawn after the end of the redemption period, ⁸⁶⁰ and that charges in respect of the safe keeping of the pawn shall not be at a higher rate after the end of the redemption period than before. It is a criminal offence if a person who has taken a pawn under a regulated agreement ⁸⁶¹ refuses without reasonable cause ⁸⁶² to allow the pawn to be redeemed ⁸⁶³; although the debtor is entitled to a contractual remedy against the pawnee in these circumstances, the criminal remedy may be more efficient since the court, upon conviction of the pawnee, may make an order for restitution to the debtor. ⁸⁶⁴

Loss of pawn-receipt

33-142

The Act prescribes ⁸⁶⁵ the procedure to be adopted by a person who is not in possession of the pawn-receipt but claims to be the owner of the pawn or to be otherwise entitled or authorised to redeem it. Such a claimant may redeem the pawn (at any time when it is redeemable) by tendering in place of the pawn-receipt, either (a) a statutory declaration made by the claimant in the prescribed form ⁸⁶⁶, or (b) (when the pawn is security for a credit not exceeding £75, ⁸⁶⁷ and the pawnee agrees) a statement in writing in the prescribed form ⁸⁶⁸ signed by the claimant. ⁸⁶⁹ Such a declaration or statement is to be treated for the purpose of the redemption procedure ⁸⁷⁰ as if it were the pawn-receipt, and the pawn-receipt itself then becomes inoperative for that purpose. ⁸⁷¹

Consequence of failure to redeem

33-143

If at the end of the redemption period ⁸⁷² (or in some cases ⁸⁷³ after the expiry of five days following the end of the redemption period), the pawn has not been redeemed, it becomes (with one exception) realisable by the pawnee. ⁸⁷⁴ The exceptional case is where the redemption period is six months, the pawn is security for fixed-sum credit ⁸⁷⁵ not exceeding £75 or running-account credit ⁸⁷⁶ on which the credit limit ⁸⁷⁷ does not exceed £75, and the pawn was not immediately before the making of the regulated consumer credit agreement a pawn under another regulated consumer credit agreement in respect of which the debtor has discharged his indebtedness in part ⁸⁷⁸: at the end of the redemption period, the property in such a pawn passes to the pawnee. ⁸⁷⁹ The redemption period is extended for these purposes where the debtor is entitled to apply to the court for a time order ⁸⁸⁰: if he is so entitled, the pawn becomes realisable (or the property is automatically vested in the pawnee, as the case may be) if after the expiry of five days following the end of the redemption period the pawn has not been redeemed. ⁸⁸¹

Realisation of pawn

33-144

When the pawn has become realisable by him, ⁸⁸² the pawnee may sell it, after giving to the pawnor ⁸⁸³ not less than the prescribed ⁸⁸⁴ period (14 days) of notice ⁸⁸⁵ of intention to sell, indicating in the notice the asking price and such other particulars as may be prescribed. ⁸⁸⁶ Within the prescribed period (20 working days) ⁸⁸⁷ after the sale takes place, the pawnee must give the pawnor the prescribed information in writing as to the sale, its proceeds and expenses. ⁸⁸⁸ Where the net proceeds of sale ⁸⁸⁹ are not less than the sum which would have been payable for its redemption, ⁸⁹⁰ the debt secured by the pawn is discharged and any surplus must be paid by the pawnee to the pawnor. ⁸⁹¹ If the net proceeds are less than the sum payable for redemption, ⁸⁹² the debt shall be treated as from the date of sale as equal to the amount by which the net proceeds of sale fall short of the sum which would have been payable for the redemption of the pawn on that date. ⁸⁹³ If the pawnor alleges that the gross amount realised on the sale of the pawn is less than the true market value of the pawn on the date of sale, it is for the pawnee to prove that he and any agents employed by him in the sale used reasonable care to ensure that the true market value was obtained ⁸⁹⁴; if the pawnee fails to prove this, the references above to “the net proceeds of sale” ⁸⁹⁵ shall have effect as if “the true market value” were substituted for the gross amount realised on the sale. ⁸⁹⁶ If the pawnor alleges that the expenses of the sale were unreasonably high, it is for the pawnee to prove that they were reasonable, and if he fails to do so, the calculation of “the net proceeds of sale” ⁸⁹⁷ in the provisions above ⁸⁹⁸ shall have effect as if “reasonable expenses” were substituted for “expenses”. ⁸⁹⁹ (Unlike the former law, the 1974 Act does not require the sale of the pawn to take place by auction.)

⁷⁴⁹. See generally Palmer and Hudson, Interests in Goods, 2nd edn (1998), pp.621 et seq.

⁸³⁴. On these sections generally, see Bennion, Consumer Credit Control, paras 8-200 et seq.; Guest, Encyclopedia of Consumer Credit Law, paras 2-115 et seq. For the application of the Regulations implementing the Consumer Credit Directive 2008 to pledges, see below, para.39-195.

⁸³⁵. See below, paras 39-002 et seq.

⁸³⁶. For definitions of these terms, see below, paras 39-017, 39-018, 39-035, 39-036.

⁸³⁷. s.114(1).

⁸³⁸. “Pawn” is defined by s.189(1) as “any article subject to a pledge”; “pledge” is defined as “the pawnee’s rights over an article taken in pawn”. These definitions appear to leave the meaning of “pledge” and “pawn” to be elucidated by the common law on the subject. (The extended meaning of pledge in s.1(5) of the Factors Act 1889 would not apply.)

⁸³⁹. The definition of “a regulated agreement” is found in s.189(1) which in turn refers to s.15(2) and which is examined below paras 39-017, 39-036.

⁸⁴⁰. “Prescribed” means prescribed by Regulations to be made by the Secretary of State: s.189(1). See the Consumer Credit (Pawn-Receipts) Regulations 1983 (SI 1983/1566), as amended by SI 2004/3236. If the pawn-receipt is not separate from the document embodying the regulated agreement, reg.4 of the Consumer Credit (Agreements) Regulations 1983 (SI 1983/1553, as amended, especially by SI 2004/1482) applies.

⁸⁴¹. s.114(1).

⁸⁴². s.114(3) (as amended by the Banking Act 1979 s.38(2)).

⁸⁴³. Documents of title are not defined in the Act. The common law definition is examined in Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), paras 18-006—18-010.

⁸⁴⁴. A “non-commercial agreement” is defined by s.189(1) as a consumer credit agreement or a consumer hire agreement not made by the creditor or owner in the course of a business carried on by him: a “business” includes a profession or trade. See below, para.39-049.

845. See below, para.39-194.

846. s.114(2).

847. The specific prohibitions have now been repealed but actions of this kind may now be caught by s.24 of the Armed Forces Act 2006.

848. e.g. Firearms Act 1968 s.3(6).

849. It is not possible to contract out of the provisions of s.116: see s.173. See Wilson v Robertson (London) Ltd [2005] EWHC 1425 (Ch), [2005] C.C.L.R. 6.

850. s.116(1).

851. s.116(2).

852. s.121 (below, para.33-144).

853. s.120(1)(a) (set out below, para.33-143).

854. s.117(1).

855. s.117(2), see below.

856. s.117(3). (cf. the previous law: Singer Manufacturing Co v Clark (1879) 5 Ex. D. 37.)

857. See below, para.33-142, for the procedure to be adopted where a pawn-receipt has been lost or destroyed.

858. s.117(2).

859. s.116(4).

860. For the definition of “the redemption period”, see above, para.33-139.

861. For the definition of this term, see below, paras 39-017, 39-036.

862. By s.171(6) the burden is on the pawnee to prove that he had reasonable cause to refuse to allow the pawn to be redeemed.

863. s.119(1).

864. By s.119(2), the court may, upon the conviction of a pawnee under subs.(1), make an order for restitution under s.148 of the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000, as if he had been convicted of theft. Under s.148, the court may order restitution of the goods themselves, or of other goods which directly or indirectly represent them, or may order payment of the value of the goods. (Section 122 of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 provides for a court order in Scotland for delivery up of the pawn following a relevant conviction.)

865. s.118.

866. Consumer Credit (Loss of Pawn-Receipt) Regulations 1983 (SI 1983/1567) (made under s.189(1) of the 1974 Act).

867. “Where the pawn is security for fixed-sum credit not exceeding £75 or running-account credit on which the credit limit does not exceed £75”. (For definitions of the terms used in this provision, see below, para.33-143 nn.876-878). By s.181(1), the monetary limits in this provision may be amended by statutory instrument: the figure of £75 was fixed by the Consumer Credit (Further Increase of Monetary Amounts) Order 1998 (SI 1998/997).

- 868. To be prescribed by Regulations: s.189(1). See n.840, above.
- 869. s.118(1).
- 870. s.117 (see above, para.33-140). (But s.117(2) still applies.)
- 871. s.118(2). cf. Burslem v Attenborough (1873) L.R. 8 C.P. 122 (decided on ss.15 and 16 of the Pawnbrokers Act 1800 (now repealed)).
- 872. For the definition of this period, see ss.116, 189(1) (examined above, para.33-139).
- 873. See below (s.120(2)).
- 874. s.120(1). The procedure for realisation of the pawn is laid down by s.121 (see below, para.33-144). The question whether a default notice under s.87 must be served on the debtor (in addition to a notice of intention to sell under s.121(1) (see below, para.33-144)) is discussed in Guest, Encyclopedia of Consumer Credit Law, para.2-122.
- 875. Defined by ss.10(1)(b), 189(1); see below, para.39-026.
- 876. Defined by ss.10(1)(a), 189(1); see below, para.39-024.
- 877. Defined by ss.10(2), 189(1); see below, para.39-025.
- 878. Under s.94(3)
- 879. s.120(1)(a). (By s.181(1) these monetary limits may be amended by statutory instrument: see n.867, above): the figure of £75 was fixed by the Consumer Credit (Further Increase of Monetary Amounts) Order 1998 (SI 1998/997).
- 880. s.129 (discussed below, paras 39-202—39-205).
- 881. s.120(2).
- 882. By virtue of the provisions of s.120 (see above, para.33-143).
- 883. Except in such cases as may be prescribed: s.121(1). Agreements where the credit or credit limit is not more than £100 are exempted by the Consumer Credit (Realisation of Pawn) Regulations 1983 (SI 1983/1568), as amended by SI 2004/3236: these Regulations also fix the periods stated in the text, and prescribe the information to be given in the notices. The figure of £100 was fixed by the Consumer Credit (Realisation of Pawn) (Amendment) Regulations 1998 (SI 1998/998).
- 884. viz “prescribed by regulations made by the Secretary of State”: s.189(1). See SI 1983/1568, as amended by SI 2004/3236.
- 885. A “notice” is defined by s.189(1) as “notice in writing”.
- 886. s.121(1).
- 887. To be prescribed by Regulations: s.189(1). See SI 1983/1568, as amended by SI 2004/3236.
- 888. s.121(2).
- 889. Defined as “the amount realised (the ‘gross amount’) less the expenses (if any) of the sale”: s.121(5).

- 890. Calculated as “if the pawn had been redeemed on the date of the sale”: s.121(3).
- 891. s.121(3). The relationship between the parties being fiduciary in nature, the pawnbroker holds the surplus upon trust for the pawnor: the pawnor may therefore claim an award of interest in equity: Mathew v TM Sutton Ltd [1994] 1 W.L.R. 1455. The limitation period for a claim by the pawnor to the surplus will be six years from the sale: see Vol.I, para.28-002.
- 892. viz “Where subs.(3) does not apply”: s.121(4).
- 893. s.121(4). (See the decision of Jones v Marshall (1889) 24 Q.B.D. 269 (on the former law: the Pawnbrokers Act 1872 did not affect the right of the pawnbroker at common law to recover the deficit if the sale of the article pawned realised less than the amount advanced on it).)
- 894. s.121(6).
- 895. Defined in s.121(5): see above, n.889.
- 896. s.121(6).
- 897. Defined in s.121(5): see above, n.889.
- 898. s.121(3) and (4), see above.
- 899. s.121(7).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(a) - The Nature of Negotiable Instruments

The meaning of negotiability

34-001

The essential feature of negotiable instruments (which include bills of exchange, cheques and promissory notes) is that they can be transferred from person to person. The principles governing negotiable instruments differ from some of the fundamental principles of the law of contract. First, in a simple contract, the persons entitled to enforce it are either parties to the contract when it is made or, in certain cases, assignees.¹ In the case of a negotiable instrument, any “holder” (i.e. the payee or indorsee who is in possession of it or the bearer) can bring an action to enforce it.² There is, thus, a fundamental difference in the concept of privity. In a simple contract a privy or party is either a person who enters into the contract when it is made or an assignee. In the case of negotiable instruments any holder becomes a party. Secondly, although most contracts may be assigned, an assignee cannot sue without joining the assignor as a party unless certain requirements of form are satisfied and, in particular, notice must be given to the debtor.³ A negotiable instrument, on the other hand, may be transferred by the payee or by any subsequent holder to a third party either—insofar as the instrument is payable to order—by indorsement (i.e. the holder’s signature on the back of the instrument) and delivery, or—insofar as the instrument is payable to bearer—by mere delivery of the instrument to the third party.⁴ No notice of the transfer need be given. Thirdly, when a contract is assigned, the assignee’s rights are usually subject to the equities between the debtor and the assignor.⁵ In the case of negotiable instruments, a transferee obtains a right to enforce payment of the instrument, despite any defects in the title of or equities available to the transferor, provided the transferee is a “holder in due course”. A holder in due course is a person who takes a negotiable instrument which is:

- (a) complete and regular on its face;
- (b) for value (i.e. consideration); and
- (c) in good faith, i.e. without notice of any defect in the title of the transferor.⁶

Thus, the rule nemo dat quod non habet applies to negotiable instruments subject to considerable modifications.

Negotiable instruments as choses in action and in possession

34-002

There is a further fundamental distinction between simple contracts and negotiable instruments. The formation of a contract confers upon the parties thereto certain rights. These rights are not dependent upon the physical possession of the instrument in which the terms of the contract are recorded. They arise from the creation of the contract itself and are enforceable by action. Negotiable instruments, likewise, confer certain rights on the payee and the transferees, i.e. the procedural right to sue on the instrument and, in certain cases, the right to enforce payment. To this extent negotiable instruments resemble contracts.⁷ However, in the case of negotiable instruments possession of the instrument itself is of importance. Usually a person who obtains the possession of a negotiable instrument becomes a “holder” and has a right to sue on it. Moreover, a person can have a title to a negotiable instrument and the concept of ownership, thus, applies.⁸ Negotiable instruments may, therefore, be regarded as a special type of personal property. They differ from most types of chattel in that their possession confers certain contractual rights on the holder. But they differ from contracts by reason of the existence of proprietary elements.⁹

Practical use of negotiable instruments

34-003

The widespread use of electronic payment systems has reduced the significance of negotiable instruments in modern commercial practice.¹⁰ Nevertheless, negotiable instruments are still used in international sales as well as in domestic trade. Foremost in international transactions is the bill of exchange, which is primarily used to facilitate the payment of the price of goods. The practice is for the seller to draw a bill of exchange on the buyer, to attach it to the documents relating to the shipment of the goods and to arrange through banking channels for the presentation of this “documentary bill” for payment and for acceptance. Of particular advantage to the seller is that in many cases the bank, or other financial institution engaged by him, may agree to discount the documentary bill or to make an advance against it. In modern times this advantage has led to a noticeable increase in the volume of “commercial bills” drawn under “acceptance credits”, which are facilities used by banks to assist their customers in obtaining finance from third parties. To this end the issuing bank undertakes in the acceptance credit to accept and to pay at maturity bills of exchange drawn on it by the customer at a usance which is usually of 90 or 180 days’ sight. The customer acquires the funds needed by discounting these bills, which attain their currency mainly on the basis of the bank’s signature. The customer promises to furnish the amounts of the bills to the bank before their maturity. If he requires further credit to do so, he is asked to draw a fresh set of bills which are, again, accepted by the bank and discounted on the bills market. This procedure is known as a “roll over” of bills. The amount of the new bills usually reflects the finance charges involved in the roll-over exercise.¹¹

Promissory notes

34-004

⚠ Promissory notes are used in international trade to a limited extent, their main function being to serve as security for instalments due under transactions involving medium or long-term credit.¹² ⚠ The popularity of promissory notes is greater in domestic trade, where, basically, they serve two functions. In the first place, promissory notes made by the debtor (or by the “hirer” of a lease or of a hire-purchase agreement) constitute a useful security. The dates of payment of the notes are usually made to coincide with the dates of the instalments provided for by the main contract. If the debtor or hirer falls in arrears, the creditor is able to bring an action to enforce the corresponding promissory note or notes. The advantage of such an action over an action based on the main contract is that, even if an action on a note is maintained by the original creditor or lessor, the debtor cannot plead certain defences concerned with the main contract.¹³ For this reason, the taking of promissory notes has been precluded in respect of regulated consumer credit and consumer hire agreements by the Consumer Credit Act 1974.¹⁴ In the second place, promissory notes executed by the debtor facilitate the refinancing of the transaction: the creditor can discount the promissory notes with a financial institution and, in this way, obtain credit against them well before the date of maturity. From the discounter's point of view, the transfer to him of promissory notes is more attractive than a mere assignment of the main contract. While a simple contract is assigned subject to the equities available to the debtor against the assignor, a transferee of a negotiable instrument, who attains the status of a holder in due course, is entitled to enforce the instrument despite defects in the title of previous parties. Subject to the limitations imposed by the Consumer Credit Act 1974,¹⁵ promissory notes are the main negotiable instruments used as security for inland transactions.¹⁶ Bills of exchange (other than cheques) are not common in domestic trade. Cheques, of course, are used to effect payment.

The sources of the law of negotiable instruments

34-005

When a person wants to create a negotiable instrument, he must choose one of the forms recognised by law. Persons cannot, at will, create novel types of negotiable instruments. The negotiability of an instrument may be established either by statute¹⁷ or by mercantile usage.¹⁸ Such a usage must be notorious,¹⁹ certain²⁰ and reasonable²¹ and must further be a general usage, i.e. one recognised and adopted by the commercial world in general.²² The usage need not be of long standing, but it must have prevailed for a sufficiently long period in order to achieve certainty and notoriety. Thus, the courts may give effect to mercantile usages which establish the validity of new kinds of negotiable instruments.

The Bills of Exchange Act 1882

34-006

The most important source of the law of negotiable instruments is the Bills of Exchange Act 1882. The Act is not, however, exhaustive and, by s.97(2), the rules of the common law, including the law merchant, continue to apply to bills of exchange, cheques and promissory notes, save insofar as these rules are inconsistent with the Act. Cases decided before the Act are, thus, not without importance. However, in *Bank of England v Vagliano Bros*²³ the House of Lords indicated that such decisions should be used as a source of construction only when the sections of the Act are ambiguous or their language technical. When the language of the Act is clear, there is, indeed, no need to refer to decisions predating it. Apart from cases of ambiguities in the Act, such decisions are also of importance as regards problems on which the Act is silent.

Effect of Consumer Credit Act 1974

34-007

The use of negotiable instruments in inland transactions involving individuals (including unincorporated traders) has been affected by the coming into force of specific provisions of the Consumer Credit Act 1974.²⁴ Section 123 restricts the use of negotiable instruments²⁵ in "regulated" consumer credit agreements and consumer hire agreements, other than in the case of non-commercial agreements, i.e. those not concluded in the course of a business carried on by the creditor or the lessor ("owner").²⁶ Subsection (1) prohibits the taking of a negotiable instrument other than a cheque in discharge of amounts payable by the debtor or hirer, or by a surety.²⁷ Subsection (3) prohibits the taking of any negotiable instrument (including a cheque) as security for an amount payable under such an agreement.²⁸ A person who takes an instrument in contravention of these provisions is not entitled to enforce it.²⁹ While the owner or creditor may take a cheque in payment of an amount due to him under a regulated agreement, he is not allowed to negotiate it except to a banker.³⁰ The object of this last provision is to preclude the negotiation of a cheque to an assignee of a regulated agreement, or to a stranger to the transaction, who may seek to enforce the cheque notwithstanding disputes relating to the regulated agreement. Negotiation to a banker is permitted so as to provide for the clearing of the cheque.³¹

- 1. See Vol.I, paras 19-001 et seq.
- 2. See below, paras 34-092 et seq.
- 3. See Vol.I, paras 19-017 et seq.
- 4. See below, paras 34-085 et seq.
- 5. See Vol.I, para.19-071.
- 6. See below, paras 34-075 et seq.
- 7. cf. R. v Duru [1974] 1 W.L.R. 2, 8 (overruled in relation to s.15(1) of the Theft Act 1968 by R. v Preddy [1996] A.C. 815, 836–837). For an analysis of the contractual rights conferred by a negotiable instrument, see Pollway Ltd v Abdullah [1974] 1 W.L.R. 493, 496.
- 8. See, e.g. s.80 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, which refers to the “true owner” of a cheque. See Citibank NA v Brown, Shipley & Co [1991] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 576 (Waller J.); Dextra Bank and Trust Co Ltd v Bank of Jamaica [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 193 PC (indicating a bailee can confer title on the “true owner”).
- 9. e.g. it is possible to bring an action for conversion of a cheque and, by a “legal fiction”, damages are based on the face value of the cheque rather than the value of the cheque as paper; on the other hand, the House of Lords has held (by a majority) that the tort of conversion does not cover the appropriation of choses in action: see OBG Ltd v Allan [2007] UKHL 21, [2008] 1 A.C. 1.
- 10. See below, para.34-380 et seq.
- 11. See generally Robertson (1976) 3 Auckland L. Rev. 1; Ellinger (1978) 20 Malaya L. Rev. 84; E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger’s Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), Ch.10, s.10.
- 12.  See, e.g. Banque Cantonale de Genève v Sanomi [2016] EWHC 3353 (Comm), where two promissory notes, payable on demand, were used as security for short-term trade finance (“they played the same functional role as guarantees”: at [61]). Promissory notes are used in some transactions covered by export credit guarantees; see Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), Ch.25.
- 13. See below, paras 34-094 et seq.
- 14. ss.123, 124; see below, paras 34-007, 34-081 and 39-196.
- 15. s.123(3), (4); below, paras 34-007, 34-081 and 39-196.
- 16. See below, paras 34-190 et seq. discussing also NIFs.
- 17. e.g. promissory notes, the validity of which was for the first time established in 1704 in 3 & 4 Anne, c.8.
- 18. Goodwin v Robarts (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 337; London Joint Stock Bank v Simmons [1892] A.C. 201; Venables v Baring Bros [1892] 3 Ch. 527; Bechuanaland Exploration Co v London Trading Bank [1898] 2 Q.B. 658; Edelstein v Schuler & Co [1902] 2 K.B. 144.
- 19. Tucker v Linger (1883) 8 App. Cas. 508.
- 20. Sewell v Corp (1824) 1 C. & P. 392, 393; Devonald v Rosser & Sons [1906] 2 K.B. 728, 743.
- 21. Paxton v Courtnay (1860) 2 F & F 131; Tucker v Linger, above; Gibbon v Pease [1905] 1 K.B.

810.

- 22. Easton v London Joint Stock Bank (1886) 34 Ch. D. 95, 113; reversed on a different point sub nom. Sheffield v London Joint Stock Bank (1888) 13 App. Cas. 333.
- 23. [1891] A.C. 107, 120, 127, 144–145.
- 24. See below, paras 34-081, 39-196 and see E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), Ch.10, s.11.
- 25. The term “negotiable instrument” is not defined in the Act. It is therefore questionable whether a bill of exchange, a cheque, or a promissory note, the negotiability of which has been restricted in the manner prescribed by s.8 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 (discussed below, paras 34-026, 34-163) falls within the scope of ss.123–125 of the Consumer Credit Act 1974. See also below, paras 34-081 et seq.; for an exemption by order under s.123(6) respecting certain hire agreements which have a connection with a country outside the UK, see the Consumer Credit (Negotiable Instruments) (Exemption) Order 1984 (SI 1984/435).
- 26. “Consumer credit agreement” is defined in s.8 of the 1974 Act and in art.60B(3) of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001 (SI 2001/544) (“RAO”) (below, para.39-016); “consumer hire agreement” in s.15 of the 1974 Act and in art.60N(3) of the RAO (below, para.39-035); as regards “regulated” agreements, see ss.8(3) and 15(2) of the 1974 Act, and arts 60B and 60N of the RAO. “Non-commercial” agreement is defined in s.189(1).
- 27. Defined in s.189(1); below, para.39-183.
- 28. As to when a negotiable instrument is considered to have been taken by way of security, see s.123(4). But note exemption where a transaction involves the extension of credit respecting the supply of goods or services outside the UK: the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001 (SI 2001/544) art.60C(8).
- 29. s.125(1) (see below, para.34-082). The bill may nevertheless be enforced by a transferee (see below, para.34-082); but the creditor or owner has to indemnify the hirer, debtor or surety in respect of this liability: s.125(3).
- 30. s.123(2). The use of the word “negotiation” is puzzling. Negotiation involves the transfer of the instrument and of the right to enforce it (below, para.34-085) and is not required where a cheque is remitted by the payee to a banker for collection purposes (below, para.34-364). It would have been more consistent with the policy of the Act to prohibit negotiation altogether and, to avoid doubt, to permit transfer to a bank for collection.
- 31. The position of a holder of an instrument, made or negotiated in contravention of s.123, is discussed in the part of the chapter concerning the holder’s rights; below, para.34-092.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(b) - Bills of Exchange ³²
(i) - Definitions and Requirements

Important definitions: “bill of exchange”

34-008

According to s.3(1) of the Act, a bill of exchange is an unconditional order in writing, addressed by one person to another, signed by the person giving it, requiring the person to whom it is addressed to pay on demand or at a fixed or determinable future time a sum certain in money to, or to the order of, a specified person or to bearer. ³³ According to s.3(2) an instrument which does not comply with these conditions, or which requires an additional act to be done, ³⁴ is not a bill of exchange. However, s.3(4) provides that a bill is not invalid if it is not dated, ³⁵ or fails to specify the value given for it or the place at which it has been drawn or is to be payable.

“Drawer”, “drawee”, “acceptor”, “payee”, “indorsor” and “holder”

34-009

The elements of the definition of s.3(1) will have to be discussed in detail, but before doing so it will be convenient to define a few other terms used in connection with bills of exchange. First, the person who draws the bill is known as “the drawer”. Secondly, the person on whom the bill is drawn, i.e. the person to whom the drawer’s order is directed, is known as “the drawee”. If the drawee agrees to comply with the instruction of the drawer he may “accept” the bill. By doing so he promises to honour the bill and becomes an “acceptor”. Thirdly, the person to whose order the bill is payable is known as the “payee”. Fourthly, the payee, or any subsequent transferee, may warrant that the bill will be duly honoured by signing his name at the back of the bill. Such a signature is known as an “indorsement” and the person so signing becomes an “indorser”. Finally, the payee of a bill, who has its physical possession, and any other person, who subsequently obtains its possession either under an indorsement completed by delivery or—in the case of a bearer bill—by mere delivery, is known as “the holder”. If the holder has given value, i.e. consideration for the bill, he is a “holder for value”. ³⁶ If, in addition, he satisfies the requirements of s.29 of the Act, he is a “holder in due course”. ³⁷ It is important to emphasise that a person cannot become a holder—let alone a holder for value or a holder in due course—except insofar as he acquires the possession of the bill as payee, as indorsee or as bearer. A person does not become a holder merely because the object of the bill is to discharge a debt due to him. Thus, where a bill drawn for the payment of a deposit due under a contract of sale is made payable to the order of auctioneers, the vendor is not a holder ³⁸, but he can, of course, become the holder of the bill, if it is indorsed and delivered to him by the auctioneers. The payee of a bill becomes its holder even if, in reality, it is made out to his order and delivered to him in his capacity as another person’s agent. ³⁹

Unconditional order in writing

34-010

⚠ A bill of exchange must be an unconditional order in writing.⁴⁰ ⚠ “Written” includes “printed”⁴¹ ⚠ and, presumably, typewritten. The order given by the drawer to the drawee need not be in any specified form, and it is sufficient that the words used by the drawer constitute an unqualified order. An instruction is considered an “order” even if it is phrased in polite language, provided it is imperative.⁴² If, on the other hand, the drawer makes a precative request instead of issuing an order, the instrument is not a bill.⁴³

34-011

If the order given by the drawer to the drawee is subject to any qualification,⁴⁴ it is not “unconditional” within the meaning of the definition and the instrument is not a bill of exchange. An order to pay out of a particular fund,⁴⁵ or “out of my rents in your hands”⁴⁶ or “out of S’s money, as soon as you receive it”⁴⁷ is not unconditional. On the other hand, under s.3(3) of the Act, an order which is in itself unqualified is unconditional although it is coupled with (a) an indication of a particular fund out of which the drawee is to reimburse himself or a particular account to be debited with the amount, or (b) a statement of the transaction which gives rise to the bill. An order is conditional only when the qualification or limitation is directed to the drawee. Thus, an order of the drawer to the drawee, to pay the bill only if the payee signs a form of receipt printed at the back of the instrument, is conditional.⁴⁸ But if the drawer’s instruction that a receipt need be signed is directed not to the drawee but to the payee, the order to the drawee remains unconditional, and the instrument is a bill of exchange.⁴⁹ Similarly, an undated cheque is not conditional where there is an agreement between the drawer and the payee that it would not be dated and presented for payment until a dispute between them had been resolved.⁵⁰ Whether such an instruction is directed to the drawee or the payee is a question of fact, but an important factor to be taken into account is the part of the bill in which the instruction appears. Where the instruction that a receipt must be signed appeared immediately after the amount of the bill and above the signature of the drawer, it was held that the order to the drawee was conditional.⁵¹ Where the same instruction appeared at the foot of the bill, beneath the signature of the drawer, it was held that the order to the drawee remained unconditional.⁵² Thus where the qualifying words appear beneath the drawer’s signature, the courts are not inclined to treat them as forming part of the order addressed to the drawee.

Bill addressed to drawee

34-012

The drawee must be named or indicated in the bill with reasonable certainty.⁵³ The bill may be addressed to two or more drawees, whether they are partners or not, but an order addressed to two drawees in the alternative or to two or more drawees in succession is not a bill of exchange.⁵⁴ A bill of exchange must be drawn by one person on another.⁵⁵ It follows that if the drawer draws a bill on himself, the instrument is not a bill of exchange. A draft drawn by a branch of a bank on the main office or on another branch of the same bank is, therefore, not considered a bill of exchange.⁵⁶ However, according to s.5(2) of the Act, where in a bill the drawer and the drawee are the same person, or where the drawee is a fictitious person or a person not having capacity to contract, the holder may treat the instrument at his option either as a bill of exchange or as a promissory note. The holder of such an instrument is, therefore, for all purposes in as good a position as the holder of a valid bill. If he treats the instrument as a bill of exchange, he retains the rights which a holder usually has against the drawer. If he treats the instrument as a promissory note, he retains against the drawer the rights which a holder has against the maker of a promissory note, whose position is similar to that of an acceptor of a bill of exchange.⁵⁷

When payable: on demand

34-013

According to s.3(1) a bill of exchange may be payable on demand or at a fixed or determinable future time. A bill is payable on demand (a) if it is expressed to be payable on demand, at sight or at presentation, or (b) if no time for payment is mentioned in it.⁵⁸ Moreover, where a bill is accepted or indorsed when it is overdue it is, as regards the acceptor or indorser, deemed to be a bill payable on demand.⁵⁹

At a determinable future time

34-014

A bill is payable at a determinable future time within the meaning of the Act if it is expressed to be payable (a) at a fixed period after the date of its issue or after "sight", i.e. its presentation for acceptance, or (b) on or at a fixed period after the occurrence of a specified event which is certain to happen, though the time of its occurrence may be uncertain.⁶⁰ An instrument expressed to be payable on a contingency is not a bill and the happening of the event does not cure the defect.⁶¹ Thus, an order to pay "ten days after the death of X",⁶² or "on January 12, when X should come of age",⁶³ was held to be a valid bill of exchange. On the other hand, it was held that an order to pay "two months next after I marry X",⁶⁴ or "when my circumstances will admit without detriment to myself",⁶⁵ was not a bill of exchange, as the occurrence of such an event could not be considered a certainty. While the principle involved is clear, some authorities may be questioned. The words "when X comes of age" do not describe an event the occurrence of which is more certain than that denoted by the words "two months next after I marry X". A marriage arrangement may of course be cancelled, but the coming of age of a minor is, likewise, not a certainty as he may die before the relevant date. A strict test would, in fact, lead to treating most future events as mere contingencies. A bill is considered as payable on a contingency if the drawee is given an option concerning the date of payment. Thus, a promissory note payable "on or before December 31, 1956" has been held invalid because the maker's option concerning the date of payment created a contingency or uncertainty.⁶⁶ The same element of uncertainty was held to have been introduced into a note where it was made payable "by" a given date.⁶⁷ These principles should apply to a bill payable "on or before" or "by" a specified future date.

Ambiguity in date

34-015

A bill is also invalid if there is an ambiguity as regards its date of payment. In *Korea Exchange Bank v Debenhams (Central Buying) Ltd*⁶⁸ the drawer used a standard form of a bill of exchange but struck out the word "sight" and inserted instead of it the letters "D/A". The completed bill read: "90 days D/A of this first of Exchange pay ...". The Court of Appeal held that these words were unclear as they did not indicate whether the designated period was to run from the date of the acceptance, the date of the drawing of the bill or from any other date. Megaw L.J. added that as the word "sight" had been expressly cancelled on the face of the bill it would have been bold to conclude that the bill was nonetheless payable 90 days after sight. It followed that as the bill was not expressed to be payable at a fixed period after date or after sight it failed to comply with s.11 and was, therefore, invalid.

Tendency to uphold

34-016

Where possible, however, the courts uphold the negotiability of an instrument even if, on a strict construction, it is open to question. In *Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corp Ltd v GD Trade Co Ltd*⁶⁹ the drawers, who used blank forms of bills of exchange supplied by the bank, inserted the words "90 days after acceptance" in the blank space left between the printed words "At" and "sight". It was argued, inter alia, that this formulation rendered the instruments payable on a contingency because it was not certain at the outset whether the bills would be accepted or dishonoured by the drawee. Affirming Cresswell J.'s decision, the Court of Appeal rejected this argument. The bills were to be read as payable "90 days after acceptance/sight". As "sight" referred to presentment for acceptance, the bills were payable 90 days following their presentment regardless of whether or not the drawee accepted them. The bills were, accordingly, not payable subject to a contingency. In reaching this conclusion, the Court accepted that as negotiability was the essence of a bill of exchange, a strict construction should be adopted. But their Lordships added:

“Nevertheless [a bill] is a document in use in hundreds of commercial transactions and, in the case of an instrument which has been drawn as a bill with the plain intention that it should take effect as such, the court should lean in favour of a construction which upholds its validity as a bill where that is reasonably possible.”⁷⁰

Moreover, it is arguable that the drawee's acceptance can remove doubts arising from the manner in which the bill is drawn. The English courts have yet to decide the issue. In *Novaknit Hellas SA v Kumar Bros International Ltd*⁷¹ the drawer made the bill payable “on 60 days from shipment”. The drawee accepted it as payable 60 days after the date of his acceptance. The Court of Appeal held that the instrument so drawn was valid on the ground that “shipment is certain to have taken place prior to presentation of documents including the [bill of exchange]”.⁷² Waller L.J. was also sympathetic to the argument that the drawee's qualified acceptance cured any defect as to time of payment, although it was not necessary to decide the issue.⁷³

Date of bill and computation of time of payment

34-017

Where a bill, acceptance or indorsement is dated, that date is presumed to be the true one.⁷⁴ A bill is not invalid merely because it is post-dated, ante-dated or dated on a Sunday.⁷⁵ Where a bill is not payable on demand, the day on which it falls due is determined in accordance with s.14(1) of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 as amended by s.3(2) of the Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971. Such a bill is due and payable in all cases on the last day of the time of payment as fixed by the bill, or if that is a non-business day, on the succeeding business day. The 1971 Act repealed the provision for days of grace of the original s.14(1). The meaning of the phrase “non-business day” continues to be governed by s.92 of the 1882 Act,⁷⁶ but subject to amendments introduced by the 1971 Act. Non-business days are Bank Holidays,⁷⁷ Good Friday, Christmas Day, Sundays,⁷⁸ Saturdays,⁷⁹ and any day declared as such by the Treasury under s.2 of the 1971 Act.⁸⁰ Section 1(1) of the same Act determines which days are “Bank Holidays”, providing for separate days for England and Wales, for Scotland and for Northern Ireland.⁸¹ Additional Bank Holidays may be appointed by Royal proclamation⁸²; in the same manner a Bank Holiday may be suspended in any given year.⁸³

34-018

Where a bill is payable at a fixed period after date, after sight, or after the happening of a specified event, the time of payment is determined by excluding the day from which the time is to begin to run and by including the day of payment.⁸⁴ Where a bill is payable at a fixed period after sight, the time begins to run from the date of its acceptance, or if acceptance is refused from the date of noting or of protest.⁸⁵ As the term “month” in a bill means calendar month,⁸⁶ bills dated, for example, respectively November 28, 29 and 30, payable at three months after date, all fall due on February 28 in an ordinary year, but in a leapyear the first falls due on the 28th and the second and third on the 29th. It is assumed that none of these due dates is a non-business day.

A sum certain in money

34-019

According to s.3(1) of the Act, a bill of exchange must be for a sum certain in money. An order⁸⁷ requiring the drawee to pay a sum of money and do some other act, e.g. deliver up goods to the payee,⁸⁸ is not a bill of exchange. A sum is certain within the meaning of the Act, although it is required to be paid:

- (a)
with interest;
- (b)
by stated instalments with or without a provision that upon default in payment of any instalment the whole shall become due ⁸⁹; and
- (c)
according to an indicated rate of exchange or according to a rate of exchange to be ascertained as directed by the bill. ⁹⁰

A Canadian authority, however, suggests that if interest on the bill is stated to run from the date of the making of the advance, the sum is uncertain as its calculation then depends on extrinsic facts. ⁹¹ For the same reason, the amount of the bill is uncertain if interest is to be charged at the rate applied to advances to “most credit-worthy customers”. ⁹² It remains to be seen whether a formula such as “interest at 2 per cent. above prime” will be considered on the same basis. When the bill is payable with interest, it runs, in the absence of stipulation to the contrary, from the date of the bill or, if it is undated, from the date of issue. ⁹³ Section 3(1) has been augmented by s.2(1) of the Decimal Currency Act 1969, according to which a bill, drawn on or after February 15, 1971, is invalid “if the sum payable is an amount of money wholly or partly in shillings or pence”. ⁹⁴ A bill covering a given amount “plus bank charges” has been held to be for an uncertain amount. ⁹⁵

Discrepancy between words and figures

34-020

Where the sum payable is expressed in words and also in figures, and there is a discrepancy between the two, the sum denoted by the words is the amount payable. ⁹⁶ But if the words are unclear, e.g. “pay to my order twenty-five, fifty pence”, the figures, e.g. £25.50 may be used to clarify the intention of the drawer. ⁹⁷ In the case of a cheque in which the amount expressed in words differs from that expressed in figures, the banking practice is to return the cheque unpaid, with the remark “words and figures differ”.

The payee

34-021

According to s.3(1) of the Act, a bill of exchange must be payable to a specified person or to bearer. A bill may be made payable to the order of the drawer or of the drawee. ⁹⁸ An instrument which is made payable for a specified purpose, e.g. “cash or order”, is not a bill of exchange, as it is not payable to a specified person or to bearer. ⁹⁹ A bill payable to “cash or bearer” should, on the other hand, be considered valid, as it is payable to the bearer. Difficulties may arise when the drawer leaves the space meant for the name of the payee blank. In Daun and Vallentin v Sherwood ¹⁰⁰ it was held that a promissory note, which did not specify the name of the payee, was payable to bearer “because that is the natural legal effect”. It cannot be argued that a bill of exchange payable to “—or order” should be regarded as payable to bearer, as the words “or order” obviate such an interpretation. The drawer of such a bill has, however, the intention of creating a negotiable instrument, and one manner of giving effect to his intention is to treat the bill as payable to himself. Thus, in Chamberlain v Young and Tower ¹⁰¹ it was held that an instrument which read “pay—order” should be construed as meaning “pay my order” and be considered a bill of exchange. In R. v Randall ¹⁰² an instrument reading “pay—or order” was held not to be a bill. An attempt has been made to distinguish the cases on the ground that the addition of the word “my” to the phrase “pay—or order” would be meaningless. But the phrase could easily be read as “pay myself or order”, a formula commonly used in bills payable to the drawer's own order which are transferable by his indorsement and delivery. It is to be doubted whether the decision in R. v Randall would be followed at present.

Bearer bills

34-022

A bill of exchange may be payable either to order or to bearer. ¹⁰³ A bill is payable to bearer either if it is expressed to be so payable or if the last indorsement is in blank. ¹⁰⁴ It is payable to order either if it is expressed to be so payable or if it is expressed to be payable to a particular person and does not contain words prohibiting transfer or indicating an intention that it should not be transferable. ¹⁰⁵ The Act does not state explicitly whether a bill which is drawn as payable to bearer may be converted into an order bill by the execution of a special indorsement, i.e. an indorsement which specifies the name of the indorsee. ¹⁰⁶ According to an Australian authority such a bill remains payable to bearer regardless of the indorsement. ¹⁰⁷ But this view may be questioned as, under s.34, "any holder may convert [a] blank indorsement by writing above the indorser's signature a direction to pay the bill to or to the order of himself or some other person". Although this provision does not apply to a bill drawn payable to bearer but only where the bill has been indorsed in blank, it tends to reflect the policy of the Act. As a bill which has become payable to bearer by reason of the blank indorsement can be converted into an order bill, it is difficult to see why a bill which is originally drawn as payable to bearer may not be equally converted into an order bill by the execution of a special indorsement.

Bills payable to order

34-023

Where the bill is payable to order it must specify with reasonable certainty the identity of the payee. ¹⁰⁸ A bill may be made payable to two or more payees jointly or to one or more out of several payees in the alternative. It may also be made payable to the holder of an office for the time being. ¹⁰⁹ Where there is difficulty in establishing the identity of the payee because of some ambiguity in his description in the bill, resort must be had to the intention of the drawer. ¹¹⁰ Extrinsic evidence is admissible to identify a misnamed payee or one designated by description only. ¹¹¹ However, if it is impossible to ascertain the identity of the payee, e.g. due to the lack of evidence regarding the drawer's intention, the bill is invalid, unless it may be treated as payable to a fictitious or non-existing person.

Fictitious or non-existing payee

34-024

According to s.7(3) of the Act, where a bill is made payable to a fictitious or non-existing person, it may be treated as payable to bearer. In Bank of England v Vagliano Bros ¹¹² the plaintiffs, Vagliano Bros, were in the habit of accepting bills drawn on them by Vucina and payable to the order of P & Co. A clerk of the plaintiffs forged such a bill. The plaintiffs, who did not discover the forgery of Vucina's signature as drawer by the clerk, accepted the bill and made it payable at the defendant bank. The clerk then added an indorsement of P & Co to the bill, presented it to the bank and obtained payment. An action brought by the plaintiffs for a declaration that the bank was not entitled to debit their account with the amount of the bill was dismissed. The House of Lords held that the bill was payable to a fictitious or non-existing person and, therefore, to bearer. Although a firm by the name of P & Co did exist, the person who actually drew the bill—i.e. the clerk—had no intention that the bill should be paid to it. Thus a fictitious or non-existing person may be not only a creation of fiction (e.g. "Ivanhoe") or a person who does not exist at the time the bill is drawn (e.g. a dissolved company), but also a real payee whose name is written on the bill as a mere pretence. Whether a payee is fictitious or not depends, accordingly, on the intention of the drawer.

34-025

The principle of the Vagliano Bros case was applied in Clutton & Co v Attenborough, ¹¹³ where a clerk induced his employer to draw cheques payable to one John Brett by falsely representing that a person of that name was entitled to a remuneration for certain work done for the employer. It was held that the payee, John Brett, was a non-existing person. As the employer, the drawer, intended to make the cheques payable to a John Brett who had completed some work for him, and as there was in fact no such person in existence, this decision appears well founded. However, the position is different if the drawer is induced, by a fraudulent misrepresentation of another person, to draw a cheque payable to a designated real person. Such a cheque is not payable to a fictitious or nonexisting person and, therefore, may not be treated as payable to bearer. ¹¹⁴ The reason for this is that, although the motive which induces the drawer to draw the bill is the misrepresentation, e.g. his being misled into believing that he owes money to the payee, the drawer has, nevertheless, the intention of creating an instrument payable to that designated person. ¹¹⁵ Conceptually, though, a person may be non-existing even if the drawer intends to make the bill payable to him. An example is a bill payable to a payee who passed away before the date of issue. ¹¹⁶

Destruction of negotiability

34-026

⚠ On occasions a drawer may wish to create a bill of exchange, but without allowing for its transfer or negotiation. This can be achieved by including in the bill words prohibiting transfer. When a bill contains words prohibiting transfer, or indicating an intention that it should not be transferable, it is valid as between the parties thereto, but may not be transferred. ¹¹⁷ ⚠ This effect can be achieved by drawing a bill payable to the order of a specified payee “only”. There cannot be a holder, let alone a holder in due course, capable of suing on it. ¹¹⁸ The intention to prohibit negotiation or transfer must, however, appear clearly on the face of the bill. If the drawer makes a bill payable to a particular person, without adding the words “or order”, but does not add words prohibiting transfer, it is treated as payable to that person’s order and is negotiable. ¹¹⁹

Cancellation of “or order” or “or bearer”

34-027

A problem which awaits a direct determination concerns the effect of the mere cancellation of the words “or order” or “or bearer” in a bill written on a standard form. If the drawer strikes out these words, it may be assumed that his purpose is to prohibit transfer. The bill, however, does not “contain words prohibiting transfer or indicating an intention that it should not be transferable”. Section 8(1) of the Act governs only the effect of a bill containing such words. A strict interpretation of this section would probably lead to the conclusion that a mere cancellation of the words “or order” or “or bearer” does not destroy the negotiability of the bill, but renders it payable to the particular payee named therein. Under s.8(4), such a bill is, however, payable to that payee’s order. Such an effect may be desirable where the drawer has cancelled the words “or bearer” in a bill executed on a standard form. The cancellation of the words “or bearer” would, on this interpretation, affect the bill’s transferability; by becoming an order bill, it would cease to be transferable by mere delivery, and would require the payee’s indorsement to effect transfer. But this line of argument produces a strange result where the standard form, used by the drawer, includes the printed words “or order”. The cancellation of these words would, again, leave the bill payable to the named payee and hence to that payee’s order. The cancellation would therefore be without any practical effect. This, however, may be an inescapable conclusion from a strict construction of s.8.

“A/C Payee only” on crossed cheques

34-028

Since 1992, one type of bill of exchange—namely, a cheque—can be rendered non-transferable by the execution of a crossing accompanied by the words “A/C Payee only”. The provision to this effect, in the Cheques Act 1992, reversed the law as decided in a series of late nineteenth and twentieth century cases, ¹²⁰ which had held that the words in question did not have the effect of destroying the negotiability of a crossed cheque. Notably, the negotiability of other types of bills of exchange could always be destroyed by the addition to the instrument of the words “not negotiable”. ¹²¹

Definition and requirements of acceptance

34-029

The drawee's assent to the order given to him by the drawer is known as “acceptance”. ¹²² There are two requirements concerning the form of an acceptance. First, it must be written on the bill and signed by the drawee; the mere signature of the drawee without additional words is sufficient. ¹²³ If the drawee writes “accepted” on the bill but does not sign, or writes an acceptance in a separate letter, this is insufficient. ¹²⁴ An acceptance of the drawee written on the back of the bill is, probably, valid. ¹²⁵ Secondly, the acceptance must not express that the drawee will perform his promise by any other means than payment of money. ¹²⁶ Thus, if the drawee writes on a bill “payable in bills” or “payable in goods”, this is not an acceptance. ¹²⁷ At the same time, an acceptance to pay out of funds standing to the credit of a special account, e.g. an external account, is a promise to pay money and constitutes a valid acceptance. ¹²⁸ By accepting the bill the drawee engages to pay it when it falls due, ¹²⁹ and thus becomes primarily liable on the bill. As the bill is drawn on a specified drawee, the signature on the bill of any other person, even when accompanied by words indicating an intention to accept it, is not an acceptance, ¹³⁰ and will probably be construed as an indorsement. ¹³¹ If a bill is addressed to no one, and a person writes an acceptance on it, he is not liable as acceptor of a bill, but may be liable as the maker of a promissory note. ¹³²

Time for acceptance

34-030

The drawee's acceptance gives the bill additional currency. In most cases a bill will be presented soon after it has been signed and delivered by the drawer and before it falls due. ¹³³ But a bill may be accepted even before it has been signed by the drawer or while it is otherwise incomplete, ¹³⁴ and likewise when it is overdue, or after it has been dishonoured previously by non-acceptance or by non-payment. ¹³⁵ If a bill is accepted by the drawee when it is overdue, it becomes, as against him, payable on demand. ¹³⁶ When a bill payable at a fixed date after sight is dishonoured by non-acceptance, and the drawee subsequently accepts it, the holder is entitled to have the bill accepted as of the date of the first presentment for acceptance. ¹³⁷ When the acceptance of a bill payable at a fixed period after sight is undated, the holder is entitled to insert the true date of acceptance. ¹³⁸ When an acceptance is undated, there is a presumption that it has been given within a reasonable time after the date of issue of the bill and before it falls due. ¹³⁹

General and unqualified acceptance

34-031

An acceptance may be either general or qualified. ¹⁴⁰ It is general when the drawee assents, without any qualification, to the order of the drawer. It is qualified if the drawee varies in express terms the effect of the bill as drawn, i.e. modifies the order of the drawer. In particular an acceptance is qualified if it is:

- (a) conditional, i.e. makes payment by the acceptor dependent on the fulfilment of a condition;
- (b) partial, i.e. for less than the amount specified by the drawer;

(c)

local, i.e. an acceptance to pay only at a particular specified place;

(d):

qualified as to time; and

(e)

if the bill is drawn on more than one drawee and is not accepted by all of them. 141

An acceptance, however, is not qualified merely because it makes the bill payable at a particular place, provided it does not state that the bill is payable only there. 142

Delivery

34-032

According to s.21(1) of the Act, every contract on a bill, whether it be the drawer's, the acceptor's or an indorser's, is incomplete and revocable until the delivery of the bill; but where an acceptance is written on a bill and the drawee gives notice that he has accepted it, the acceptance then becomes complete. Thus, an acceptance becomes complete not at the time it is written, but when the acceptor gives notice of it. 143 Delivery of the accepted bill would, however, constitute notice of the acceptance.

Constructive transfer of possession

34-033

Under s.2 of the Act, delivery means the transfer of possession, whether actual or constructive, from one person to another. In most cases possession is transferred by the physical delivery of the bill. A constructive transfer of the possession of a bill may occur in the following cases:

(a)

when a person originally holds the bill for himself but subsequently holds it as an agent;

(b)

when a bill is originally held by one person as the agent of a second person but subsequently as agent of a third person;

(c)

when a person originally holds the bill as an agent of another person but subsequently holds it for himself. 144

Authorised delivery

34-034

⚠ As between immediate parties, and as regards a remote party other than a holder in due course, the delivery, in order to be effective, must be made by the party drawing, accepting or indorsing the bill, as the case may be. It may, of course, be effected by that party in person but it is also valid if effected by that party's agent, bailee or messenger. ¹⁴⁵ Evidence may be called to show that the delivery has been conditional or for a special purpose only and not for the purpose of transferring the property in the bill. ¹⁴⁶ However, evidence is not admissible to show that delivery of a bill by an acceptor was made conditionally, under an agreement to renew the bill at maturity, because the effect of such evidence would be to contradict the terms of a written instrument. ¹⁴⁷ ⚠ The position of a party to the bill who is not a holder in due course is, to a certain extent, strengthened by the rule that when a bill is no longer in the possession of the person who has signed it as drawer, a valid and unconditional delivery by him is presumed until the contrary is proved. The same presumption applies as regards the acceptor and indorsers. ¹⁴⁸ If the bill is in the hands of a holder in due course, a valid delivery of the bill by all parties prior to him so as to make them liable is conclusively presumed. ¹⁴⁹

Inchoate instruments

34-035

According to s.20(1), ¹⁵⁰ where a simple signature on a blank paper is delivered by the signer in order that it may be converted into a bill, it operates as a prima facie authority to fill it up as a complete bill for any amount, using the signature for that of the drawer, or of the acceptor, or of an indorser; and, in like manner, when a bill is wanting in any material particular, the person in possession of it has a prima facie authority to fill up the omission in any way he thinks fit. ¹⁵¹ In order that any such instrument may, when completed, be enforceable against any person who became a party to it prior to its completion, it must be filled up within a reasonable time and strictly in accordance with the authority given. What amounts to a reasonable time is a question of fact. ¹⁵² If such a paper is not filled up within a reasonable time or in strict accordance with the authority given, a mere holder cannot enforce it. ¹⁵³ However, under the proviso to s.20(2), if such an instrument is after completion negotiated to a holder in due course, it is valid and effectual for all purposes in his hands, and he may enforce it as if it had been filled up within a reasonable time and strictly in accordance with the authority given. ¹⁵⁴

34-036

Section 20 applies only where the blank signed paper is delivered by the signer in order that it may be converted into a bill. ¹⁵⁵ A blank signed paper may however be delivered for some other purpose, such as its retention by the signer's agent pending instructions. If this paper is fraudulently converted into a bill, it is probably not enforceable under s.20 even if it comes into the hands of a holder in due course. Section 20(2) provides that "if any such instrument after completion is negotiated to a holder in due course it shall be valid and effectual ...". It stands to reason that the words "such instrument" in this subsection refer to the type of paper described in s.20(1), i.e. to "a blank paper ... delivered by the signer in order that it may be converted into a bill". It appears to follow that if the signer does not deliver the paper with the intention of its being converted into a bill, s.20(2) does not apply. ¹⁵⁶

Common law estoppel

34-037

Where the blank instrument had been delivered with an intention of its being converted into a negotiable instrument, the drawer might be estopped at common law from alleging that it was completed in a different manner than that intended, even in situations where s.20 would not protect the holder. In Lloyds Bank Ltd v Cooke ¹⁵⁷ the defendant signed his name on blank stamped paper, delivered it to C and authorised him to fill it up as a promissory note for £250 payable to the plaintiffs, and to deliver it to them as security for an advance to be made by them to C. C fraudulently filled up the form as a note for £1,000 and obtained an advance of that amount from the plaintiffs, who had no notice of the fraud. As the plaintiffs were the original payees of the bill they were not holders in due course and could not rely on the proviso to s.20(2). However, the defendant was held to be estopped at common law from denying the validity of the note as between himself and the plaintiffs. This principle applies only when the blank paper is intended by the drawer to be completed as a negotiable instrument. In Wilson and Meeson v Pickering ¹⁵⁸ the plaintiff delivered a blank form of a cheque, crossed “not negotiable”, to his servant and instructed him to insert the amount of £2 and make it payable to a certain firm. The servant filled in the amount of £54 4s. and made the cheque payable to the defendant, to whom he was indebted to this amount. It was held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendant the amount of £54 4s. paid by the drawee bank. Lord Greene M.R. said:

“... the authority of Cooke’s case cannot in my opinion be extended beyond the particular facts there in question ... [A]part, of course, from some specific representation of authority or some holding out or some special character of the agent from which his authority would naturally be inferred, the rule that a person who signs an instrument in blank cannot be heard as against a person who has changed his position on the faith of it, to assert that the instrument as filled in is a forgery or that it was filled in in excess of the agent’s authority, is confined to the case of negotiable instruments.” ¹⁵⁹

The instrument in Cooke’s case was such a negotiable instrument. In Pickering’s case the cheque, crossed “not negotiable”, was not a fully negotiable instrument.

Completion after security indorsement

34-038

A bill drawn payable to the drawer’s order is incomplete until indorsed by him. If the bill bears the indorsement of a third party, who has indorsed it with the intention of making himself liable as guarantor, ¹⁶⁰ the drawer may, under s.20, complete the bill by indorsing it, and may recover against the third party. ¹⁶¹

^{32.} For detailed works on the subject, see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009); for the special aspects respecting the use of bills of exchange in international trade, see Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), Ch.22.

^{33.} In Weir v National Westminster Bank, 1944 S.L.T. 1251 it was held that a withdrawal form did not constitute a bill of exchange.

^{34.} e.g. requires the drawee to employ staff and to pay their salary: Dickie v Singh, 1974 S.L.T. (Notes) 3.

^{35.} Aspinall’s Club Ltd v Al-Zayat [2007] EWCA Civ 1001 at [27] (Lloyd L.J.: “The fact that it is not dated does not prevent the payee from presenting it for payment immediately”).

^{36.} The Act occasionally used inconsistent terminology, e.g. by referring to a “holder for value” as a “holder who has taken for value” or a “holder who has given value”; see Barclays Bank Ltd v Astley Industrial Trust Ltd [1970] 2 Q.B. 527, 538–539.

^{37.} As regards the position of the drawer, see below, paras 34-029, 34-031, 34-114; as regards the drawee, see below, para.34-029 and as regards the acceptor and acceptance, see below, paras 34-113, 34-116; as regards the payee, see below, para.34-021; as regards indorsers and indorsements, see below, paras 34-090—34-091, 34-116; as regards the position of a holder, see below, para.34-095 (holder for value), below, para.34-093 (holder in due course), and below, paras 34-092—34-099 (rights of holders).

38. Pollway Ltd v Abdullah [1974] 1 W.L.R. 493, 495.

39. Silk Bros v Security Pacific National Bank (1987) 72 A.L.R. 535, 538–539 Aust.

40. ¶s.3(1). In Banque Cantonale de Genève v Sanomi [2016] EWHC 3353 (Comm), where there were two promissory notes payable on demand, Blair J. (at [32]–[36]), having been referred to the requirement in s.83(1) of the Act that a promissory note must be in writing (the same requirement is found in s.3(1) of the Act for bills of exchange), held that there is a principle (admittedly, of uncertain scope) to the effect that oral evidence is not admissible to contradict the terms of the written instrument (in this case, the maker of the promissory notes alleged that immediately prior to him signing the notes a representative of the promisee bank had told him that the bank would make no demand under the notes).

41. ¶s.2. See also Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.1–030. Electronic bills of exchange or promissory notes seem some way off. Section 8 of the Electronic Communications Act 2000 empowers the Minister to modify, by statutory instrument, the provisions of any enactment for the purpose of authorising or facilitating the use of electronic communications or electronic storage for certain purposes. There has been no indication that the Government intends to use this power to amend the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 and, given that the 1882 Act includes a number of paper-based concepts, there would be considerable difficulties to overcome before it was possible to have an electronic bill of exchange (see Law Commission's Advice to Government, Electronic Commerce: Formal Requirements in Commercial Transactions, December 2001, para.9.5); cf. Practice Note on Execution of Documents Using an Electronic Signature (July 21, 2016) issued by a joint working party of the Law Society Company Law Committee and the City of London Law Society Company Law and Financial Law Committees, which suggests (at para.4.2) that an “electronic” promissory note can be “in writing” and “signed by the maker” for the purposes of s.83(1) of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 (but without any mention of bills of exchange). But note that provision has recently been made for cheques and other similar instruments to be presented by providing an electronic image, in place of presentment of the cheque itself: the Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Act 2015 s.13, introducing a new Pt 4A (ss.89A–89F) into the Bills of Exchange Act 1882; and see below, para.34-154. Section 13 comes into force for these purposes on July 31, 2016, although in force as from March 26, 2015 for the purpose of enabling the making of regulations under Pt 4A of the 1882 Act (Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Act 2015 s.164(4)).

42. Ruff v Webb (1794) 1 Esp. 129, in which “Mr. N will much oblige Mr. W by paying to the order of R 20 guineas in his account” was held to be imperative and thus a valid order, but it is to be doubted if such language would be considered imperative at present. cf. R. v Ellor (1784) 1 Leach C.C. 323.

43. Little v Slackford (1828) 1 M. & M. 171, where an instrument reading “Please to let the bearer have seven pounds, and place it to my account, and you will oblige” was held not to be a bill of exchange. cf. Hamilton v Spottiswoode (1849) 4 Exch. 200, 210.

44. As regards a qualification concerning the time of payment, see below, para.34-014.

45. s.3(3).

46. Jenney v Herle (1723) 2 Ld.Raym. 1361.

47. Dawkes v Lord De Loraine (1771) 3 Wils.K.B. 207. See also Buck v Robson (1878) 3 Q.B.D. 686; Fisher v Calvert (1879) 27 W.R. 301.

48. Bavins Jnr & Sims v London and South Western Bank Ltd [1900] 1 Q.B. 270.

49. Nathan v Ogdens Ltd (1905) 93 L.T. 553 (affirmed (1905) 94 L.T. 126). As regards “claused bills”, see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.2–020.
50. Aspinall's Club Ltd v Al-Zayat [2007] EWHC 362 (Comm) at [10] (summary judgment), although the Court of Appeal, [2007] EWCA Civ 1001, allowed the defendant's appeal on the ground, inter alia, that the cheque might have been a sham because the parties did not have a common intention that it would be paid on first presentation within two banking days as required by s.16(3) of the Gaming Act 1968 (since repealed and replaced by the Gambling Act 2005); cf. The Ritz Hotel Casino Ltd v Al-Daher [2014] EWHC 2847 (QB), where the provision by a casino of a cheque cashing facility for members was held not to constitute the (prohibited) provision of “credit” for the purposes of the Gambling Act 2005.
51. Bavins Jnr & Sims v London and South Western Bank Ltd, above.
52. Nathan v Ogdens Ltd, above.
53. s.6(1).
54. s.6(2).
55. s.3(1).
56. Capital and Counties Bank v Gordon [1903] A.C. 240, 250. The instrument is equivalent to a promissory note of a bank: Commercial Banking Co of Sydney Ltd v Mann [1961] A.C. 1, 7. In Abbey National Plc v JSF Finance & Currency Exchange Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 328 at [12], Sir Andrew Morritt C. said that “the legal effect of such an instrument is identical to that of a bankers' draft”. Generally as regards bankers' drafts, see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), paras 2–003, 2–012 and 2–040.
57. s.89(2).
58. s.10(1).
59. s.10(2).
60. s.11.
61. s.11. To invalidate the bill, the contingency need be apparent on the face of the instrument. English courts are unlikely to follow the decision to the contrary of the Nova Scotia Supreme Court in Eastern Elevator Services Ltd v Wolfe, 119 D.L.R. (3rd) 643 (1981).
62. Colehan v Cooke (1742) Willes 393, 399. The following were held to be certain events: “12 months after notice”—Clayton v Gosling (1826) 5 B. & C. 360; “two months after demand in writing”—Price v Taylor (1860) 5 H. & N. 540.
63. Goss v Nelson (1757) 1 Burr. 226.
64. Pearson v Garrett (1693) 4 Mod. 242.
65. Ex p. Tootell (1798) 4 Ves. Jun. 372. The following were held to be contingencies: “30 days after the arrival of the ship P.”—Palmer v Pratt (1824) 2 Bing. 185; “90 days after sight or when realised”—Alexander v Thomas (1851) 16 Q.B. 333.
66. Williamson v Rider [1963] 1 Q.B. 89 CA. See also (from South Africa) Salot v Naidoo 1981 (3) S.A. 959; Standard Credit Corp Ltd v Kleyn 1988 (4) S.A. 441. Contrast: John Burrows Ltd v Subsurface Surveys Ltd [1968] S.C.R. 607, 614 (Canada); Creative Press Ltd v Harman (1973) I.R. 313 (Ireland); Emu Brewery Mezzanine Ltd v ASIC [2006] WASCA 105 (Australia); Re York Street Mezzanine Pty Ltd [2007] FCA 922 (Australia); Club Securities Ltd v Hurley [2008] 1 N.Z.L.R. 711 (New Zealand).

- 67. Claydon v Bradley [1987] 1 W.L.R. 521.
- 68. [1979] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 100.
- 69. [1998] C.L.C. 238.
- 70. [1998] C.L.C. 238 at 242.
- 71. [1998] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 287 CA.
- 72. [1998] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 287, 292, per Waller L.J., and also Chadwick L.J. at 295. See also Credit Agricole Indosuez v Ecumet (UK) Ltd Unreported March 29, 2001, where Tomlinson J. was uncertain as to whether this reasoning was part of the ratio decidendi in Novaknit Hellas.
- 73. [1998] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 287, 292, following dicta in Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corp Ltd v GD Trade Co Ltd [1998] C.L.C. 238, 243, where it was also unnecessary to decide the issue. cf. Credit Agricole Indosuez v Ecumet (UK) Ltd Unreported March 29, 2001, where Tomlinson J. regarded the terms of the acceptance as the "critical element" in Novaknit Hellas. See also Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.2–089 (acceptor may be liable as the maker of a promissory note).
- 74. s.13(1).
- 75. s.13(2).
- 76. This section excludes non-business days when computing time where the Act requires something to be done in less than three days. See also s.1(4) of the 1971 Act.
- 77. s.92(b); see also s.4(1) of the 1971 Act.
- 78. s.92(a).
- 79. Added to s.92(a) by s.3(1) of the 1971 Act.
- 80. s.92(d) of the 1882 Act, inserted by s.4(4) of the 1971 Act. Under s.92(c)—which is not affected by the 1971 Act—non-business days include any day appointed by Royal proclamation as public fast or thanksgiving.
- 81. Sch.1.
- 82. s.1(3) of the 1971 Act. New Year's Day is appointed a Bank Holiday by Royal proclamation under the said section of the Act.
- 83. s.1(2).
- 84. s.14(2).
- 85. s.14(3).
- 86. s.14(4).
- 87. As to "order", see above, para.34-011.
- 88. Martin v Chauntry (1747) 2 Stra. 1271; cf. Re Boyse (1886) 33 Ch. D. 612, 621. See also Dickie v Singh, 1974 S.L.T. (Notes) 3 (instrument promising payment of a certain amount coupled with an undertaking to employ staff and to pay their salaries, held not to be a promissory note).
- 89. For a Canadian case in point, see Canada Permanent Trust Co v Kowal (1981) 120 D.L.R. (3d) 760.

- 90. s.9(1).
- 91. Macleod Savings and Credit Union Ltd v Perrett (1981) 118 D.L.R. (3d) 193.
- 92. Bank of Montreal v Dezcum Industries Ltd (1983) 147 D.L.R. (3d) 359.
- 93. s.9(3).
- 94. But note saving in s.2(2), concerning a bill dated on or after February 15, 1971 but proved to have been drawn earlier.
- 95. Dalgety Ltd v John J. Hilton Pty Ltd [1981] 2 N.S.W.L.R. 169 Aust.
- 96. s.9(2). See Saunderson v Piper (1839) 5 Bing. N.C. 425; Garrard v Lewis (1882) 10 Q.B.D. 30, 34, 35.
- 97. Phipps v Tanner (1833) 5 C. & P. 488.
- 98. s.5(1).
- 99. North and South Insurance Corp Ltd v National Provincial Bank Ltd [1936] 1 K.B. 328; Cole v Milsome [1951] 1 All E.R. 311; Orbit Mining and Trading Co v Westminster Bank [1963] 1 Q.B. 794.
- 100. (1895) 11 T.L.R. 211.
- 101. [1893] 2 Q.B. 206.
- 102. (1811) Russ. & Ry 195. Contrast the Scottish case of Henderson, Sons & Co Ltd v Wallace and Pennell, 1902 40 S.L.R. 70, in which an instrument in the form of a bill of exchange, reading “pay—or order”, was treated as a promissory note.
- 103. s.8(2).
- 104. s.8(3).
- 105. s.8(4).
- 106. Below, para.34-088.
- 107. Miller Associates (Australia) Pty Ltd v Bennington Pty Ltd [1975] 7 A.L.R. 144; Chappenden (1981) 55 A.L.J. 135.
- 108. s.7(1).
- 109. s.7(2).
- 110. Bird & Co v Thomas Cook & Son Ltd [1937] 2 All E.R. 227, 230-231.
- 111. Willis v Barrett (1816) 2 Stark. 29; Soares v Glyn (1845) 8 Q.B. 24.
- 112. [1891] A.C. 107.
- 113. [1897] A.C. 90. See also (from Canada) Royal Bank of Canada v Concrete Column Clamps [1977] 2 S.C.R. 456; Canada Trust Co v The Queen [1982] 2 F.C. 722; Fok Cheong Shing Investments Co Ltd v Bank of Nova Scotia [1982] 2 S.C.R. 488; Boma Manufacturing Ltd v CIBC [1996] 3 S.C.R. 727; Bank of Nova Scotia v Toronto-Dominion Bank (2001) 145 O.A.C. 106; cf. Paul v Western Canada Lottery Foundation (1981) 127 D.L.R. 502.
- 114. Vinden v Hughes [1905] 1 K.B. 795; North and South Wales Bank Ltd v Macbeth [1908] A.C.

137.

- 115. It is doubtful whether the drawee may treat as payable to bearer a cheque whose payee is fictitious or non-existent, if the printed words “or bearer” following the payee’s name have been struck out and a crossing accompanied by the words “not negotiable—a/c payee only” have been added thereto: Rhostar (Pvt) Ltd v Netherlands Bank of Rhodesia Ltd [1972] 2 S.A.L.R. 703, 709–711. As from 1992, such a cheque is, in any event, non-transferable: below, para.34-166.
- 116. Canada Trust Co v The Queen [1982] 2 F.C. 722 Can.
- 117. ¶s.8(1). See, e.g. Banque Cantonale de Genève v Sanomi [2016] EWHC 3353 (Comm) at [29] (a promissory note case).
- 118. See Hibernian Bank Ltd v Gysin and Hanson [1939] 1 K.B. 483. As regards the effect of words limiting negotiability written by the acceptor, see Meyer & Co v Decroix, Verley et Cie [1891] A.C. 520. The words “not negotiable” have a special meaning when written on a crossed cheque; as regards these and the addition of the words “a/c payee only” to a crossed cheque, see below, paras 34-163 et seq.
- 119. s.8(4).
- 120. And see below, para.34-163.
- 121. Hibernian Bank Ltd v Gysin and Hanson [1939] 1 K.B. 483.
- 122. s.17(1).
- 123. s.17(2)(a).
- 124. At common law an acceptance written on a separate paper was sufficient: Pierson v Dunlop (1777) 2 Cowp. 571; Mason v Hunt (1779) 1 Doug. 297; Wynne v Raikes (1804) 5 East 514.
- 125. Young v Glover (1857) 3 Jur.(N.S.) 637.
- 126. s.17(2)(b).
- 127. Russell v Phillips (1850) 14 Q.B. 891.
- 128. Banca Popolare di Novara v John Livanos & Sons Ltd [1965] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 149.
- 129. s.54(1); Philpot v Briant (1828) 4 Bing. 717, 720.
- 130. Jackson v Hudson (1810) 2 Camp. 447; Davis v Clarke (1844) 6 Q.B. 16; Steele v M’Kinlay (1880) 5 App. Cas. 754, 770. As regards acceptance of bills drawn on a partnership, see Re Barnard, Edwards v Barnard (1886) 32 Ch. D. 447. As regards acceptance for honour, see below, para.34-142.
- 131. s.56.
- 132. Fielder v Marshall (1861) 30 L.J.C.P. 158; Mason v Lack (1929) 140 L.T. 696; Haseldine v Winstanley [1936] 2 K.B. 101.
- 133. When a bill is payable on demand it is usual to present it simultaneously for acceptance and for payment. As to how far it is necessary to present a bill for payment, see below, paras 34-105—34-107.
- 134. s.18(1); London and South Western Bank Ltd v Wentworth (1880) 5 Ex. D. 96.
- 135. s.18(2).

- 136. s.10(2).
- 137. s.18(3).
- 138. s.12. Similarly, he is entitled to add the date of issue of a bill payable at a fixed time after date.
- 139. Roberts v Bethell (1852) 12 C.B. 778.
- 140. s.19(1).
- 141. s.19(2). See also Banca Popolare di Novara v John Livanos & Sons Ltd [1965] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 149, 155 (concerning an acceptance to pay out of a designated account); Geo Thompson (Aust) Pty Ltd v Vittadello [1978] V.R. 199, 207 (concerning an acceptance of a bill drawn on a partnership by only one of the partners who was acting in his personal capacity).
- 142. s.19(2)(c), proviso. See Halstead v Skelton (1843) 5 Q.B. 86; Ex p. Hayward (1887) 3 T.L.R. 687; Banku Polskiego v KJ Mulder & Co [1941] 2 K.B. 266; affirmed [1942] 1 K.B. 497. As to what constitutes a particular place, see Eimco Corp v Tutt Bryant Ltd [1970] 2 N.S.W.R. 249. cf. Day v Bate (1979) 41 F.L.R. 222 Aust.
- 143. Cox v Troy (1822) 5 B. & Ald. 474; Bank of Van Diemen's Land v Bank of Victoria (1871) L.R. 3 P.C. 526.
- 144. See, e.g. Bosanquet v Forster (1841) 9 C. & P. 659; Belcher v Campbell (1845) 8 Q.B. 1.
- 145. Citibank NA v Brown, Shipley & Co [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 576; Dextra Bank and Trust Co Ltd v Bank of Jamaica [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 193 PC; Abbey National Plc v JSF Finance & Currency Exchange Co Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 328.
- 146. s.21(2). As regards conditional delivery, see Bell v Viscount Ingestre (1848) 12 Q.B. 317, 319; Castrique v Buttigieg (1855) 10 Moore P.C. 94, 108.
- 147.  New London Credit Syndicate Ltd v Neale [1898] 2 Q.B. 487; applied in Banque Cantonale de Genève v Sanomi [2016] EWHC 3353 (Comm) at [36] (discussed further in n.40 above, and n.587a below).
- 148. s.21(3). See Colin v Gibson (1927) 27 S.R. (N.S.W.) 328, 331; Equitable Securities Ltd v Neal [1987] 1 N.Z.L.R. 233, 240; Midland Bank Plc v Brown Shipley & Co Ltd [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 576, 583; National Bank of Canada v Tardival Associates (1994) 109 D.L.R. (4th) 126; Surrey Asset Finance Ltd v National Westminster Bank [2001] EWCA Civ 60. The same presumption applies as regards the maker of a note, see s.89(2): Yan v Post Office Bank Ltd [1994] 1 N.Z.L.R. 154.
- 149. s.21(2); as to the application of this provision to a holder who takes the bill from a holder in due course, see Insurance Corp of Ireland v Dunluce Meats [1991] N.I. 286. As to who is a holder in due course, see s.29, discussed in para.34-072, below.
- 150. As amended by the Finance Act 1970 Sch.8 Pt V. Originally, s.20(1) applied only where the bill was completed on stamped paper and only in so far as the amount for which it was completed was covered by the stamp. The Finance Act 1970 Sch.7 Pt I para.2(2)(a), abolished stamp duty on bills and notes; previously, s.33 of the Finance Act 1961 replaced the original ad valorem duty on bills and
- 151. s.20(1). See generally Crutchly v Mann (1814) 5 Taunt. 529; Schultz v Astley (1836) 2 Bing. N.C. 544; Scard v Jackson (1875) 34 L.T. 65n.; London and South Western Bank Ltd v Wentworth (1880) 5 Ex. D. 96; Carter v White (1882) 20 Ch. D. 225 (affirmed (1883) 25 Ch. D. 666); France v Clark (1884) 26 Ch. D. 257, 262; Dunn v Jefferson (1925) 69 S.J. 725. See also s.12 concerning the position when a bill or acceptance is undated. As regards the application of this provision where a bill is indorsed for accommodation before it is signed by the drawer, see Bank of Nova Scotia v Hogg, 24 O.R. (2nd) 494 (1979) Can.

- 152. s.20(2).
- 153. Herdman v Wheeler [1902] 1 K.B. 361.
- 154. s.20(2), proviso. See Montague v Perkins (1853) 22 L.J.C.P. 187; Barker v Sterne (1854) 9 Exch. 684; Garrard v Lewis (1882) 10 Q.B.D. 30; Dunn v Jefferson (1925) 69 S.J. 725; Guildford Trust Ltd v Goss (1927) 43 T.L.R. 167. As to the definition of a holder in due course, see below, paras 34-072 et seq.
- 155. However, if the proviso to s.20(2) does not apply, the holder may, nevertheless, succeed in an action on the bill if he can, on the facts, plead a common law estoppel precluding the drawer or acceptor from alleging the invalidity of the bill: France v Clark (1884) 26 Ch. D. 257, 262; Lloyds Bank Ltd v Cooke [1907] 1 K.B. 794; discussed below, in which the plaintiff, as original payee, could not claim to be a holder in due course.
- 156. For this type of case, see Baxendale v Bennett (1878) 3 Q.B.D. 525; Smith v Prosser [1907] 2 K.B. 735 (in which, however, liability might have been based on the principle established subsequently in Lloyd v Grace, Smith & Co [1912] A.C. 716).
- 157. [1907] 1 K.B. 794. cf. RE Jones Ltd v Waring and Gillow Ltd [1926] A.C. 670.
- 158. [1946] K.B. 422.
- 159. [1946] K.B. 422 at 427. cf. Mercantile Credit Co Ltd v Hamblin [1965] 2 Q.B. 242, 274–275, 278–279.
- 160. The so-called “security indorsement”, provided for by s.56 of the Bills of Exchange Act, below, para.34-115.
- 161. Glenie v Bruce Smith [1908] 1 K.B. 263; Re Gooch [1921] 2 K.B. 593; Gerald McDonald & Co v Nash & Co [1924] A.C. 625 (distinguishing Steel v M’Kinlay (1880) 5 App. Cas. 754); National Sales Corp Ltd v Bernardi [1931] 2 K.B. 188 (in which it was held that the drawer’s indorsement may in such cases be either above or below that of the third party); McCall Bros Ltd v Hargreaves [1932] 2 K.B. 423 (in which it was held that although an indorsement, in these cases, is given by way of guarantee, there is no need for a separate memorandum to satisfy the Statute of Frauds). See also above, para.34-035.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(b) - Bills of Exchange ³²
(ii) - Capacity and Authority of Parties

Capacity to contract on a bill

34-039

According to s.22(1) of the Act, capacity to incur liability as a party to a bill is co-extensive with capacity to contract. A drawer, acceptor or indorser who has no capacity to contract is not liable on the bill. However, the fact that one party to the bill has no capacity does not, in itself, release the other parties from their liability. ¹⁶² The section provides that nothing in it shall enable a corporation to make itself liable as a drawer, acceptor or indorser of a bill unless it is competent to do so under the law relating to corporations. At common law, a corporation incurred no liability in drawing, accepting or indorsing a bill of exchange, unless expressly or impliedly authorised by its memorandum to do so. In the case of a trading company the fact of its incorporation for trading purposes conferred on it, among other incidental powers, the capacity to draw, accept and indorse bills of exchange. ¹⁶³ It appears that a non-trading company, on the other hand, had no capacity to draw, accept or indorse bills unless such powers were expressly or by clear implication conferred on it in its memorandum. ¹⁶⁴ If a company entered into a contract which was beyond its capacity, the transaction was ultra vires and void. ¹⁶⁵ However, so far as third parties are concerned, the ultra vires rule has been abolished for most companies by statute. ¹⁶⁶ The current statutory provision is s.39(1) of the Companies Act 2006, which provides that "the validity of an act done by a company shall not be called into question on the ground of lack of capacity by reason of anything in the company's constitution". Beyond that, the Companies Act does not confer on companies a specific capacity to draw, accept or indorse bills of exchange, but merely regulates the exercise of the capacity where it exists. ¹⁶⁷

Capable parties liable

34-040

Section 22(2) provides that, where a bill is drawn or indorsed by a minor or a corporation having no capacity or power to incur liability on a bill, the drawing or indorsement entitles the holder to enforce the bill against other parties to it. Thus, a bill remains negotiable even though it has been drawn or indorsed by a party who has no capacity so to do. However, it remains unenforceable against the incapacitated party, even if the incapacity is subsequently removed. It has been held that, if a minor draws a post-dated cheque, dating it a few days after his coming of age, he is not liable on it. ¹⁶⁸

Signature essential to liability

34-041

Under s.23 of the Act, a person is liable as a drawer, acceptor or indorser of a bill only if he has signed it in such a capacity. However, s.91 of the Act provides that where any instrument is required to be signed by any person, it is not necessary that he should sign it with his own hand, and his signature may be written by some other person who acts under his authority. In such cases the signature must be in the name of the principal and not the agent. An agent who signs the name of his principal without authority is not liable on the bill personally, as he has not signed it in his own name.¹⁶⁹ But when an agent signs a bill in his own name, the agent alone is bound and not the principal, even if the payee is aware that the signer is an agent.¹⁷⁰

Sufficient signature

34-042

❗ The Act does not provide what amounts to a sufficient signature. It has been held that a signature written by pencil¹⁷¹ is sufficient, and it appears that a lithographed or stamped signature would, too, suffice.¹⁷² ❗ Where the maker of a promissory note, instead of signing underneath the undertaking, wrote "I William Smith promise to pay", it was held that the writing of the name constituted a valid signature.¹⁷³

Trade or assumed name

34-043

Section 23(1) of the Act provides that where a person signs a bill in a trade or assumed name, he is liable as if he had signed it in his own name.

Partnerships

34-044

Section 23(2) makes special provisions for the liability of a partnership. It provides that the signature of the name of a firm is equivalent to the signature, by the person so signing, of the names of all the persons liable as partners in that firm. But this section has a limited scope of application. If a bill drawn on the partnership is accepted by one of the partners in his personal capacity by signing it in his own name, the other partners are not bound.¹⁷⁴

Personal liability of company's director

34-045

Under s.349(4) of the Companies Act 1985, if a director or other officer of a company signed or authorised to be signed on behalf of the company any bill of exchange, promissory note, cheque or order for money or goods in which its name was not mentioned in legible characters, he was liable to a fine; and he was further personally liable to the holder of the bill, etc. unless the instrument was duly paid by the company. Where a bill was presented for payment and dishonoured, the bill was not "duly paid" for the purposes of s.349(4).¹⁷⁵ The courts applied this subsection strictly so that directors or other officers of the company were held liable where the company's name was misstated even to a relatively minor degree.¹⁷⁶ However, where the misstatement was attributable to the holder of the bill, etc. that holder was estopped from holding the company's signatory liable.¹⁷⁷ Nevertheless, s.349(4) could operate harshly, especially on junior employees of the company, and there were calls for its repeal. The Company Law Review took this view in its Final Report,¹⁷⁸ as did the government,¹⁷⁹ and, with effect from October 1, 2008, s.349(4) was repealed by the Companies Act 2006.¹⁸⁰ The Company, Limited Liability Partnership and Business (Names and Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2015¹⁸¹ now require every company to disclose its registered name on (inter alia) its bills of exchange, promissory notes, endorsements and order forms,¹⁸² and also on cheques purporting to be signed by or on behalf of the company.¹⁸³ Under s.83 of the Companies Act 2006, if legal proceedings are brought by a company to enforce a contract made in the course of a business in respect of which the company was, at the time the contract was made, in breach of these regulations, the legal proceedings will be dismissed if the defendant shows (a) that he has a claim against the company arising out of the contract which he has been unable to pursue because of the breach of the regulations, or (b) that the company's breach of the regulations has caused him to suffer financial loss in connection with the contract, unless (in either case) the court is satisfied that it is just and equitable to permit the proceedings to continue. The company and any officer of the company may be subject to a criminal penalty for breach of the regulation. ¹⁸⁴

Non est factum

34-046

There is one important exception to the rule that a person is liable on a bill which he has signed. This exception relates to the defence of non est factum. ¹⁸⁵ If the person signing the bill is induced by the fraud of another to believe that he is signing a document which is essentially or fundamentally different, e.g. if he believes himself to be signing a contract of guarantee ¹⁸⁶ or merely to be witnessing another's signature, ¹⁸⁷ the mistake will render his signature null and void. He will not be liable on the bill even at the suit of a holder in due course. The mistake, however, must occur without negligence. The person signing the bill is not entitled to disown his signature, unless he proves that he has exercised reasonable care. ¹⁸⁸ Thus, in Crédit Lyonnais v PT Barnard & Associates Ltd ¹⁸⁹ two bills of exchange were accepted on behalf of the defendants by their general manager who, being ignorant of the French language in which the bills were drawn, believed them to be mere receipts acknowledging the arrival of a consignment of watches in the United Kingdom. Mocatta J. held the defendants liable to a holder in due course of the bills as, in his Lordship's opinion, any prudent man would have subjected the instruments to an examination and on noticing such words as "bank" and "Lloyds", which appeared in the bills, would have been put on inquiry.

Forged or unauthorised signature

34-047

Section 24 of the Bills of Exchange Act provides that where a signature on a bill is forged or placed on it without the authority of the person whose signature it purports to be, the forged or unauthorised signature is wholly inoperative, and no right to retain the bill, enforce it or discharge it can be acquired through or under that signature unless the party against whom it is sought to retain it or enforce payment of the bill is precluded from setting up the forgery or want of authority. The word "signature" is not defined in the Act, but the language of s.24 indicates that it refers to any type of signature on a bill, i.e. that of the drawer, drawee or of an indorser.

Meaning of forgery

34-048

The word "forgery" is, likewise, not defined in the Act. Section 24 distinguishes between a "forged" signature on a bill and a signature "placed thereon without the authority of the person whose signature it purports to be". Under the Forgery Act 1861, ¹⁹⁰ which was in force when the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 was passed, the placing of an unauthorised signature on a bill was not a forgery. The position was changed by s.1 of the Forgery Act 1913, which has been superseded in turn by s.9(1)(d) of the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981, which is basically similar. Section 9(1)(d) treats a document as a forgery "if it purports to have been made ... on the authority of a person who did not in fact authorise its making in those terms". This obvious departure from the 1861 Act, originally effected by the 1913 Act, has had an important implication regarding the analysis of the nature of a signature made by an agent who abuses the authority to sign his principal's name on bills. Before the coming into force of the 1913 Act, in Morison v London County and Westminster Bank Ltd, ¹⁹¹ where an agent had authority to draw cheques on his principal's account, it was held that the fraudulent misuse of that authority did not render the cheques forgeries. After 1913, in Kreditbank Cassel v Schenkers Ltd, ¹⁹² a manager of a company fraudulently drew and indorsed bills on the company's behalf for his own purposes. It was held that his signatures on these bills were forgeries within the meaning of the Forgery Act 1913 and that the bills were, thus, void. Obviously, the position ought to be the same under the 1981 Act.

Ratification of forged or unauthorised signature

34-049

In view of this, it is doubtful whether such a fraudulent signature may be ratified by the principal. On the one hand, s.24 provides that nothing in it affects the ratification of an unauthorised signature not amounting to a forgery, and the section distinguishes between an unauthorised signature and a forged one. On the other hand, under the 1981 Act, an unauthorised fraudulent signature amounts to a forgery, and most authorities indicate that a forgery may not be ratified.¹⁹³ The basis of this doctrine is that as the forger does not act and does not purport to act under the authority of the person whose signature he forges, there is no room for the adoption of his act by way of ratification. However, in the case of a fraudulent unauthorised signature, although it is technically a forgery, the agent purports to sign the bill in the name of his principal. It may perhaps be argued that, for the purpose of ratification, the distinction between a forged and an unauthorised signature should continue to be recognised, especially as it is stressed in the proviso to s.24.

Estoppels: statutory

34-050

Section 24 is stated to be subject to the "provisions of this Act". This refers to the provisions of ss.54 and 55. Under s.54(2) an acceptor is estopped from denying to a holder in due course the genuineness of the drawer's signature. According to s.55(2) an indorser is estopped from denying to a holder in due course the genuineness and regularity of the signatures of the drawer and all previous indorsers.¹⁹⁴

Estoppel: common law

34-051

Apart from these statutory estoppels, a party may by his own conduct be precluded from pleading that his purported signature is a forgery. In *Leach v Buchanan*¹⁹⁵ the acceptance of a firm was forged on a bill. Before purchasing the bill, the holder inquired whether the acceptance was genuine and the firm assured him that it was. It was held that the firm was estopped from alleging subsequently that the acceptance was forged. In *Greenwood v Martins Bank*¹⁹⁶ a husband came to know that his wife had forged his signature upon several cheques, but did not inform the bank until the death of the wife, which occurred eight months after he became aware of the forgeries. It was held that as this delay had caused the bank the loss of its right of action against the wife, the husband was estopped from alleging that the signatures were not his own. The principle, though, is not as wide as might be anticipated at first glance. In the first place an estoppel can be pleaded only by a person who has relied on a statement of another person to his disadvantage. Secondly, the estoppel is bound to fail unless the customer has actual knowledge of the facts. Constructive notice is inadequate.¹⁹⁷

Forged indorsement: bearer bills

34-052

The effect of a forged indorsement depends on whether the bill is payable to bearer or to order. A bearer bill is transferred by mere delivery¹⁹⁸ and the rights of the holder against the drawer and the indorsers do not depend on the transferor's indorsement. If he is a holder in due course, who is entitled to enforce the bill despite any defects in the title of prior parties,¹⁹⁹ the fact that an indorsement was forged would appear to be immaterial.

Forged indorsements: order bills

34-053

A bill payable to order is transferred by indorsement and delivery. ²⁰⁰ The rights of a holder of an order bill appear, thus, to depend on the validity of the indorsement. Whether a person may be a holder in due course of an order bill despite the forged indorsement is not altogether certain, but three arguments indicate a negative answer. The first argument against considering such a person a holder in due course follows from the definition, in s.2 of the Act, of the word “holder”, i.e. “the payee or indorsee of a bill or note who is in possession of it, or the bearer thereof”. A holder in due course, it is argued, must be a “holder”; when an indorsement is forged the person holding under it is not an indorsee and thus not a holder. ²⁰¹ The difficulty with this argument is that the word “indorsee” is not defined in the Act and the presumption that a person who takes the bill under a defective indorsement is not an indorsee is not directly supported by authorities based on the Bills of Exchange Act 1882. The second argument is that, according to s.29 of the Act, a person can be a holder in due course only if he takes a bill which is complete and regular, and that a forged indorsement renders the bill irregular. However, s.29 refers to completeness and regularity on the face of the bill, and it is difficult to agree that a forgery necessarily renders the bill irregular on its face. The third argument is that s.38(2) of the Act extends to a holder in due course the right to enforce the bill despite any defect in the title of the transferor, but not if the transferor has no title at all. While it is true that a forger has no title to the bill, it is difficult to agree that the distinction between a defective title and the absence of title has any room within the law of negotiable instruments. If it had, then a person who took a bill from a thief—who could have no title to the bill—could never be a holder in due course. Such an interpretation would defeat the main object of the law of negotiable instruments: it would then be necessary for a transferee to trace the title of the transferor before taking a bill. ²⁰²

Cases

34-054

There is no authority decided after the coming into force of the 1882 Act in which the rights of a holder, who took in good faith and for value an order bill bearing a forged indorsement of the payee, constituted a main issue. Cases decided before the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 held that such a person could not get a good title. ²⁰³ In Lacave & Co v Crédit Lyonnais ²⁰⁴ Collins J., obiter, expressed his view that s.24 of the Act was only declaratory of pre-existing law and that a person who took an order bill with a forged indorsement could not obtain a good title. Authority thus supports the view that a person cannot obtain a good title under a forged indorsement on an order bill. ²⁰⁵

Instruments signed by agents

34-055

The rights of the parties to a bill signed in representative form are governed by ss.25 and 26 of the Act. Section 25 governs the position of a third party who takes a bill signed by an agent. It provides that a signature by procuration operates as a notice that the agent has limited authority to sign, and that the principal is bound only in so far as the agent has acted within the limits of his actual authority. The effect of this section is that a holder in due course of such a bill cannot enforce it against the principal if the agent has exceeded his authority. ²⁰⁶ Moreover, the fact that the bill purports to be signed by an agent constitutes a “red flag”. A collecting banker who takes such a bill without inquiry may be considered as having acted negligently and thus may lose the protection against actions in conversion conferred on him by s.4 of the Cheques Act 1957. ²⁰⁷ This rule may, however, be less stringently applied in the case of bills signed by bodies corporate, as these can only act through their agents. ²⁰⁸

Signature in representative form

34-056

Section 26(1) provides that a person who signs a bill (whether as drawer, acceptor or indorser) in representative form, i.e. by adding words indicating that he signs on behalf of his principal, does not incur liability on the bill. However, the mere addition to a signature of words describing the signatory as an agent, or as acting in a representative character, does not, in itself, exempt him from personal liability.²⁰⁹ The determining factor is whether the words, indicating the signatory's position as agent, are meant to describe his occupation, or whether they are meant to show that he signs the bill on behalf of his principal. Thus, where a bill was drawn on a company and accepted by it, and, at the drawer's request, the directors indorsed it as "B. Co Ltd, J.S. & E.D., Directors", it was held that they were personally liable.²¹⁰ Where a promissory note was signed by "J. S., Managing Director" beneath a rubber stamp setting out the name of the company, the managing director was held not to be personally liable on the bill.²¹¹ The best explanation of the provision is to be found in *Bondina v Rollaway Shower Blinds Ltd*²¹² in which the signatures of two directors of the company, on whose account the cheques were drawn, was executed in ink beneath the company's name, which was printed on the cheque. One of the directors, against whom the payee sought to enforce payment, denied that he was personally liable on the instrument. Dillon L.J. said that, when the director executed his signature on the cheque, he adopted not only the writing designating the payee's name and the amount but also the printing of the company's name and of the numbers which set out the company's account. In this way, the director indicated that the cheque was drawn on the company's account and that there was no intention to create an instrument imposing joint liability. The intention of the signatory is, thus, of importance, and it may, it appears, be determined by extrinsic evidence.²¹³

Construction to uphold validity

34-057

According to s.26(2) in determining whether a signature on a bill is that of the principal or that of an agent by whose hand it is written, the construction most favourable to the validity of the instrument is to be adopted. This provision was discussed in *Rolfe Lubell & Co v Keith*²¹⁴ in which the plaintiff agreed to supply goods to a company provided that two of its directors indorsed in their personal capacity bills of exchange drawn for the price. The defendant, who was one of the directors, indorsed the bills but added to his signature by means of a rubber stamp the words: "For and on behalf of the [company]; director". Kilner-Brown J. observed that as the company assumed liability as acceptor of the bills, an indorsement executed by it would be meaningless and of no value. In view of this patent ambiguity in the bills it was permissible to call evidence to clarify the intention of the parties. On the basis of the evidence, his Lordship concluded that the words imprinted by means of the rubber stamp were of no significance. He emphasised that the "only way in which validity [could] be given to this indorsement [was] by construing it to bind someone other than the acceptor".²¹⁵ This interpretation had the additional merit of giving currency and hence full validity to the bills.

End result

34-058

In the majority of cases the result of ss.25 and 26 is that, where an agent exceeds his authority, neither he nor his principal are liable on the bill. However, although the agent is not liable on the bill, he can be sued either in deceit (if he committed a fraud) or in an action for breach of warranty of his authority to sign.²¹⁶

^{32.} For detailed works on the subject, see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009); for the special aspects respecting the use of bills of exchange in international trade, see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), Ch.22.

- 162. Wauthier v Wilson (1912) 28 T.L.R. 239 (father liable on note made jointly by himself and his minor son).
- 163. Re Peruvian Rys (1867) L.R. 2 Ch. App. 617.
- 164. Bateman v Mid-Wales Ry (1866) L.R. 1 C.P. 499.
- 165. Ashbury Railway Carriage & Iron Co v Riche (1875) L.R. 7 H.L. 653.
- 166. Companies that are charities remain subject to the rule (see Companies Act 2006 s.42).
- 167. Companies Act 2006 s.52.
- 168. Ex p. Kibble (1875) L.R. 10 Ch. App. 373; Hutley v Peacock (1913) 30 T.L.R. 42. As to whether a bill made by a person after attaining majority for the satisfaction of a debt contracted during his minority can be enforced by a holder in due course, see Belfast Banking Co v Doherty (1879) 4 L.R. Ir. 124; Smith v King [1892] 2 Q.B. 543; Hutley v Peacock, above. See also Vol.I, para.9-050.
- 169. The agent may, however, be sued for a false representation of authority: Starkey v Bank of England [1903] A.C. 114.
- 170. Leadbitter v Farrow (1816) 5 M. & S. 345, 349; Ex p. Rayner (1868) 17 W.R. 64.
- 171. Geary v Physic (1826) 5 B. & C. 234. And see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.3-023.
- 172.  This appears from Ex p. Birmingham Banking Co (1868) L.R. 3 Ch. App. 651, 653-654; Bird & Co v Thomas Cook & Son Ltd [1937] 2 All E.R. 227. And see the observations of Lord Denning in Goodman v J Eban Ltd [1954] 1 Q.B. 550, which is inconsistent with his dictum in the later case of Lazarus Estates Ltd v Beasley [1956] 1 Q.B. 702, 710. cf. Silk Bros v Security Pacific National Bank (1987) 72 A.L.R. 535, 540 Aust. See also s.2, defining "writing". A bill of exchange or promissory is not yet an electronic communication or electronic storage within the Electronic Communications Act 2000 (no order has been made under s.8), and so it is not possible to have an electronic signature of a bill or note: see above, para.34-010. If it becomes possible to have an electronic bill or note, an electronic signature may be valid: see Lindsay v O'Loughnane [2010] EWHC 529 (QB), [2012] B.C.C. 153 at [95] (Statute of Frauds Amendment Act 1928 s.6); J. Pereira Fernandes SA v Mehta [2006] EWHC 813 (Ch), [2006] 1 W.L.R. 1543 at [29] (Statute of Frauds 1677 s.4); WS Tankship II BV v Kwangju Bank Ltd [2011] EWHC 3103 (Comm) at [155] (Statute of Frauds 1677 s.4); Golden Ocean Group Ltd v Salgaocar Mining Industries Pvt Ltd [2012] EWCA Civ 265 (Statute of Frauds 1677 s.4); Bassano v Toft [2014] EWHC 377 (Ch), [2014] ECC 14 at [43] (Consumer Credit Act 1974 s.60(1)); and also Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.3-023A. See also Practice Note on Execution of Documents Using an Electronic Signature (July 21, 2016) issued by a joint working party of the Law Society Company Law Committee and the City of London Law Society Company Law and Financial Law Committees which, inter alia, considers Regulation (EU) No.910/2014 (the eIDAS Regulation) that has direct effect in EU Member States from July 1, 2016 (and see above, para.34-010, n.41).
- 173. Taylor v Dobbins (1720) 1 Stra. 399; Ruff v Webb (1794) 1 Esp. 129.
- 174. Geo Thompson (Aust) Pty Ltd v Vittadello [1978] V.R. 199, 206-208, 219-220.
- 175. Personal liability under s.349(4) could occur even where the bill had not been presented for payment. A bill is dishonoured by non-payment when presentment is excused and the bill is overdue and unpaid (Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s.47(1)(b)). Presentment is excused where the drawee is not bound, as between himself and the drawer, to pay the bill and the drawer had no reason to believe that it would be paid if presented (Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s.46(2)(c), as applied in Fiorentino Comm Giuseppe Srl v Farnesi [2005] EWHC 160 (Ch), [2005] 1 W.L.R. 3718, where a director was held personally liable under s.349(4) despite the fact that the cheque had not been presented for payment).

- 176. See, e.g. Fiorentino Comm Giuseppe Srl v Farnesi, n.175, above, where the company's name was stated as "Portofino Collections (London)" instead of "Portofino Collections (London) Ltd" on a cheque.
- 177. Durham Fancy Goods Ltd v Michael Jackson (Fancy Goods Ltd) [1968] 2 Q.B. 839 CA.
- 178. Company Law Review Steering Group, Final Report (2001), para.11.57.
- 179. White Paper, Modernising Company Law (July 2002), Cm.5553-I and Cm.5553-II; White Paper, Company Law Reform (March 2005) Cm.6456.
- 180. Companies Act 2006 s.1259 and Sch.6. Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No.5, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2007 (SI 2007/3495) paras 8, 12 and Sch.4.
- 181. SI 2015/17 (in force on January 31, 2015), made under the Companies Act 2006 s.82, and revoking the Companies (Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2008 (SI 2008/495).
- 182. reg.24(1)(b).
- 183. reg.24(1)(c).
- 184. reg.28(1), and Companies Act 2006 s.84.
- 185. See Vol.I, paras 3-049 et seq.
- 186. Foster v Mackinnon (1869) L.R. 4 C.P. 704.
- 187. Lewis v Clay (1897) 14 T.L.R. 149.
- 188. Foster v Mckinnon, above; Saunders v Anglia Building Society [Gallie v Lee] [1971] A.C. 1004.
- 189. [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 557, especially at 561.
- 190. s.22 concerned forgery of bills and notes.
- 191. [1914] 3 K.B. 356, 366. Although the decision of the Court of Appeal was delivered after the coming into effect of the 1913 Act, this Act was not relied upon as it had not been in force at the time of the trial in the King's Bench Division.
- 192. [1927] 1 K.B. 826.
- 193. Ex p. Edwards (1841) 2 Mon.D. & D. 241; Brook v Hook (1871) L.R. 6 Ex. 89. See also Williams v Bayley (1866) L.R. 1 H.L. 200; Imperial Bank of Canada v Begley [1936] 2 All E.R. 367, 374; Stoney Stanton Supplies (Coventry) Ltd v Midland Bank Ltd [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 373. Contrast M'Kenzie v British Linen Co (1881) 6 App. Cas. 82, 99 (which was a Scottish authority and in which the three first-cited English authorities were not mentioned).
- 194. Other sections which are covered by the proviso are ss.60, 64 and 80.
- 195. (1802) 4 Esp. 226. See also Brook v Hook, above; M'Kenzie v British Linen Co, above.
- 196. [1933] A.C. 51. See also Brown v Westminster Bank [1964] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 187. cf. Ontario Woodsworth Memorial Foundation v Grozbord, 48 D.L.R. (2d) 385 (1965); Jervis B Webb Co v Bank of Nova Scotia, 49 D.L.R. (2d) 692 (1965); Walpole & Patterson Ltd v National Bank of New Zealand [1975] 1 N.Z.L.R. 7.
- 197. Price Meats Ltd v Barclays Bank Plc [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 346. cf. Patel v Standard Chartered Bank [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 229, in which it was held that Nelsonian knowledge, i.e. wilful blindness, would have the same effect as express knowledge.

- 198. s.31(2).
- 199. s.38(2).
- 200. s.31(3).
- 201. See Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.3–066.
- 202. That this is not so, see Chichester v Hill (1882) 52 L.J.Q.B. 160.
- 203. Mead v Young (1790) 4 Term Rep. 28; Esdaile v La Nauze (1835) 1 You. & Coll. 394; Johnson v Windle (1836) 3 Bing. N.C. 225; Bobbett v Pinkett (1876) 1 Ex. D. 368.
- 204. [1897] 1 Q.B. 148.
- 205. cf. Embiricos v Anglo-Austrian Bank [1905] 1 K.B. 677 as regards problems of private international law concerning the validity of forged indorsements.
- 206. Morison v London County and Westminster Bank Ltd [1914] 3 K.B. 356, especially at 367; Sniderman v McGarry, 60 D.L.R. (2d) 404, 408 (1966).
- 207. Midland Bank Ltd v Reckitt [1933] A.C. 1 (decided under s.82 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, replaced and re-enacted by s.4 of the Cheques Act 1957).
- 208. Re Land Credit Co of Ireland (1869) L.R. 4 Ch. App. 460, 468; Alexander Stewart & Son v Westminster Bank Ltd [1926] W.N. 126 (reversed on a different point [1926] W.N. 271). cf. Kreditbank Cassel v Schenkers Ltd [1927] 1 K.B. 826.
- 209. As regards signature of agent on a cheque form on which the principal's name is printed, see Sniderman v McGarry, 60 D.L.R. (2d) 404 (1966).
- 210. Elliott v Bax-Ironside [1925] 2 K.B. 301; cf. Kettle v Dunster and Wakefield (1927) 43 T.L.R. 770. See also above, para.31-091.
- 211. Chapman v Smethurst [1909] 1 K.B. 927. See also HB Etlin Co Ltd v Asselstyne, 32 D.L.R. (2d) 489 (1962). cf. Jones v John Barr & Co (Pty) Ltd [1967] 3 S.A.L.R. 292, 301 et seq.
- 212. [1986] 1 All E.R. 564. cf. Holtz v G Parckdale Refrigeration Ltd, 30 O.R. (2d) 513 (1980) Can; Plascon Evans Paints (Tvl) Ltd v Ming [1980] 3 S.A. 378; Bank of Nova Scotia v Radocsay, 33 O.R. (2d) 785 (1981) Can.
- 213. HB Etlin Co Ltd v Asselstyne, above; Rolfe Lubell & Co v Keith [1979] 1 All E.R. 860; Heller Factors Pty Ltd v Toy Corp Pty Ltd [1984] 1 N.S.W.L.R. 121 (Aust).
- 214. [1979] 1 All E.R. 860.
- 215. [1979] 1 All E.R. 860 at 863.
- 216. Polhill v Walter (1832) 3 B. & Ad. 114; West London Commercial Bank Ltd v Kitson (1884) 13 Q.B.D. 360; Starkey v Bank of England [1903] A.C. 114. cf. Gowers v Lloyds and National Provincial Foreign Bank Ltd [1938] 1 All E.R. 766.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(b) - Bills of Exchange ³²
(iii) - The Consideration for a Bill

Value and holder for value

34-059

Section 27(1) provides that valuable consideration for a bill may be constituted by (a) any consideration sufficient to support a simple contract ²¹⁷, and (b) an antecedent debt or liability. Such debt or liability is deemed valuable consideration whether the bill is payable on demand or at a future time. Thus, while past consideration is insufficient to support a simple contract, it can, nevertheless, constitute good consideration for a bill. For example, if a person whose banking account is overdrawn negotiates to his bankers a cheque, drawn by a third party, to reduce the overdraft, the banker becomes a holder for value of the cheque. ²¹⁸ The pre-existing debt of the overdraft is a sufficient consideration for the negotiation of the cheque to the banker.

Past consideration

34-060

The meaning of s.27(1)(b) was discussed in Oliver v Davis. ²¹⁹ The plaintiff lent the first defendant £350 and obtained from him a postdated cheque for £400. Before the presentment of the cheque, the first defendant persuaded the second defendant to draw a cheque for £400 in favour of the plaintiff. The cheque was forwarded to the plaintiff but, before its presentment, was countermanded by the second defendant. The second defendant did not receive any consideration for the cheque from either the plaintiff or the first defendant, and the plaintiff did not change his position in reliance on the cheque. It was held that no valuable consideration within the meaning of s.27(1) was given for the cheque. Evershed M.R. pointed out that the alleged consideration in this case was not the debt of the drawer (the second defendant) but that of a third party (the first defendant). He explained that the main object of s.27(1)(b) is to establish that a past obligation of the drawer or acceptor of a cheque is valuable consideration. If the alleged consideration for the bill is not an antecedent debt or liability of the drawer or acceptor but of a third party, there must, at least, be some connection between the receipt of the bill and the antecedent debt or liability. His Lordship added that when a cheque or bill has been postdated, the courts have, in the absence of express evidence, implied a promise of the payee (creditor) to forbear from claiming the debt from the drawer (debtor) until the date of the bill. In such cases the forbearance is valuable consideration. But even where there is an antecedent debt or liability on the part of the drawer or acceptor, it does not always follow that there is consideration for the bill, as there may be no connection between the past obligation and the giving of the bill. A fortiori, when the debt or liability is that of a third party, the matter is a question of evidence.

Need to move from promise

34-061

⚠ This analysis of Evershed M.R., it is submitted, overlooks one important aspect. Section 27(1) does not modify the wellknown principle that consideration must move from the promisee. It is true that a consideration given for a bill by one party accrues, on occasions, for the benefit of other parties to the bill. ²²⁰ But it does not follow that an obligation, whether past or present, given by a stranger to the bill is valuable consideration for it. It is true that if, at the request of the drawer or the acceptor, the payee or holder of the bill forbears from claiming a debt due to him from a third party, there is valuable consideration for the bill. But the consideration is the forbearance of the holder, not the antecedent obligation of the third party (debtor). If, on the other hand, the drawer draws the bill in favour of the payee not in order to induce him to give time to the third party (debtor), but, for example, in order to pay a debt of this third party, there is no valuable consideration for the bill. This is not due to the fact that the obligation of the third party (debtor) is past, but because no consideration for the bill is given by the promisee, i.e. the holder or payee. It is submitted that an antecedent debt or liability of a stranger to the bill cannot, in itself, constitute consideration. ²²¹ ⚠ This submission has the weight of authority behind it. ²²² However, it seems that there may be consideration to support a cheque drawn in respect of a third party's debt where there exists a commercial relationship between the drawer of the cheque and the third party debtor. ²²³

Pollway Ltd v Abdullah

34-062

Support for this submission is to be found in two cases. The first is a dictum in Pollway Ltd v Abdullah. ²²⁴ The defendant purchased a property in an auction and gave the auctioneers a cheque payable to their order and covering the amount of the deposit due under the terms of the sale. Subsequently, the defendant refused to proceed with the sale and stopped payment of the cheque. He resisted the auctioneers' action to enforce the cheque on the ground that no consideration was furnished by them. Rejecting this argument, the Court of Appeal held that the consideration for the cheque was either the auctioneers' warranty to the defendant—as drawer of the cheque—of their authority to take the cheque as named payees in diminution of his obligation to pay the full price to the vendors or the auctioneers' acceptance of the cheque in the place of payment of the deposit in cash. Roskill L.J. emphasised that the vendors' undertaking to sell could not be regarded as consideration for the cheque, as this consideration did not move from the auctioneers, i.e. the payees.

Hasan v Wilson

34-063

The second case is Hasan v Wilson. ²²⁵ The plaintiff, a broker acting on behalf of an unnamed government, was entitled to an amount of £50,000 by way of agreed damages for the breach of a contract for the sale of gold coins concluded through his efforts between his principals and S. To facilitate further negotiations and as the plaintiff was not prepared to take a cheque drawn by S, the latter induced the defendant, a respectable businessman, to draw one cheque payable to the plaintiff for £50,000 and another cheque payable to S's wife for £5,000. In exchange for these cheques, S gave the defendant a cheque for £55,000, drawn by S's wife on the account of a certain company. It was clear from the facts that the defendant agreed to furnish his cheques solely for the purpose of assisting one of his friends, who stood to make a profit from the deal negotiated between S and the plaintiff. To protect himself, the defendant arranged for the special clearance of the cheque drawn by S's wife. When this cheque was dishonoured for want of funds, the defendant promptly stopped his own two cheques. Dismissing the action brought by the plaintiff as holder of the defendant's cheque for £50,000, Goff J. held that "the antecedent debt or liability referred to in s.27(1)(b) must be an antecedent debt or liability of the promisor or drawer of the relevant bill of exchange and not of a stranger to the bill". ²²⁶ The amount of £50,000 owed by S to the plaintiff could, therefore, not constitute a consideration for the defendant's cheque payable to the plaintiff. The consideration furnished by means of the cheque drawn by S's wife had, of course, failed in toto when it was dishonoured.

Need not be adequate

34-064

Apart from the exception concerning past consideration, and some other exceptions, ²²⁷ the doctrine of consideration remains unmodified in the case of negotiable instruments. An important general rule is that consideration need not be adequate. ²²⁸ However, the inadequacy of the consideration given by the holder for a bill may be evidence of bad faith or of knowledge of defects in the title of the transferor. ²²⁹

Effect of s.27(2)

34-065

Section 27(2) provides that, where value has at any time been given for a bill, the holder is deemed to be a holder for value as regards the acceptor and all persons who became parties to the bill prior to such time. Thus, any party who takes the bill after consideration has been given for it is deemed a holder for value. This is, to a certain extent, a modification of the rule that consideration must move from the promisee. Two cases illustrate the effect of this provision. In Scott v Lifford ²³⁰ a debtor asked the creditor to give him time. It was agreed that the debtor would accept a bill drawn on him by his uncle, the defendant, in favour of the creditor. The bill was dishonoured by the acceptor and the creditor sued the defendant, as drawer. It was held that, as the creditor (holder) gave value for the bill to the debtor (acceptor), the creditor was a holder for value of the bill and was entitled to sue the defendant (drawer) although the latter received no value. However, as the creditor gave time to the debtor against this bill, it may be argued that the drawer in fact obtained consideration by the creditor's forbearance. In Diamond v Graham ²³¹ H gave G his own cheque in return for G's cheque, which was payable to D's order and in reliance on which D gave H a loan. It was held that D was a holder for value of G's cheque. Consideration for G's cheque was given, in the first place, by H when he drew his own cheque in favour of D and, secondly, by D himself when he granted the loan to H on the basis of G's cheque. Emphasising that each one of these two considerations was adequate Danckwerts L.J. said:

“There is nothing in the subsection which appears to require value to have been given by the holder as long as value has been given for the cheque ...” ²³²

An important effect of s.27(2) is that a transferee of a bill, e.g. a banker, who gives value for it to the transferor becomes a holder for value and can sue previous parties to the bill even if these did not obtain any consideration for it. ²³³

Review by Court of Appeal

34-066

The most recent analysis of s.27(1) and (2) is to be found in the Court of Appeal's decision in MK International Development Co Ltd v Housing Bank. ²³⁴ A relative of King Hussein of Jordan, one N, required office space and some financial accommodation during a few months spent in London in 1983 and 1984. K made the required arrangements through two companies controlled by him. The plaintiffs, MK, provided the necessary space against N's undertaking to reimburse an amount of £1,000 towards expenses and Y Ltd granted N a substantial loan. When N defaulted, K wrote directly to King Hussein, using MK's letterhead, asking that pressure be put on N to repay his debts. In due course, K received a letter from the Royal Court, enclosing a cheque for £50,965, drawn by the H Bank in Amman on the Arab Bank in London and made payable to MK or bearer. However, before MK had the time to clear the cheque, N contacted the King's staff and denied the existence of any indebtedness to K. The cheque was thereupon countermanded and accordingly dishonoured by the Arab Bank by non-payment. The Court of Appeal held that leave to serve a summons outside the jurisdiction ought to be granted as the contract was made in England and was governed by English law. Their Lordships further concluded that, as there was an arguable case on the issue respecting the consideration given for the cheque, the H Bank was to be granted unconditional leave to defend. The issue in question arose, principally, as the cheque was payable to MK whilst the amount covered by it—except the £1,000 respecting the office expenses—was due to Y or to K. MK sought to overcome the apparent absence of consideration by raising four arguments.

Argument respecting subs.(1)(a)–(b)

34-067

MK's first argument was that N's debts furnished past consideration which, under s.27(1)(b), was adequate to support an undertaking given in a negotiable instrument. MK's second and complementary plea was that there was a "consideration sufficient to support a simple contract", within the meaning of s.27(1)(a) as, in reliance on the cheque, K and MK forbore to enforce their respective claims against N. Mustill L.J. pointed out that ²³⁵:

"the line between the two ways of putting the case seems vanishingly thin, for if the antecedent debt is to furnish any useful consideration this must be because it is regarded as nullified by the substitution of the new obligation; and the distinction between a contract which causes the old debt to cease to exist and one which requires the creditor not to enforce it appears of little practical significance."

However, as the authorities treated the pleas as distinct, his Lordship dealt with them separately. As regards s.27(1)(b), Mustill L.J. concluded that N's antecedent liabilities did not furnish a valid consideration for the cheque drawn by the H Bank in favour of MK. N was a stranger to the cheque and hence his past debts, due to Y or to K, did not constitute a valid consideration for the cheque drawn in favour of MK. Mustill L.J. then turned to subs.1(a) and the forbearance issue. Agreeing that such forbearance would usually constitute good consideration, his Lordship pointed out that only a small amount, from the total sum of the cheque, was owed by N to MK. Could MK's forbearance to enforce that minute claim furnish valuable consideration for the total amount of the cheque? Mustill L.J. took the view that the answer to this question did not depend on whether consideration had to be adequate rather than real, but on whether a partial absence of consideration provided a good defence to MK's action on the cheque. He pointed out that, although this question had not been the subject of a direct decision, it was established that "an ascertained cross-claim under the contract which formed the consideration for the bill [was] a good defence pro tanto as against an immediate party". His Lordship concluded:

"There seems no logical reason why, if subsequent failure of an ascertained part of the consideration is a defence as between immediate parties, the same should not be so where, as to part, the consideration was never there in the first place."

This reasoning led Mustill L.J. to the conclusion that MK could have a good cause of action on the bill, albeit limited to the amount of the debt owed to it. His Lordship emphasised, however, that due to the dearth of direct authority, he did not feel the "confidence which one ought to be able to feel on a point so apparently simple". ²³⁶

Critique of decision respecting s.27(1)

34-068

It is important to recall that the instant judgment was delivered in respect of issues raised in a preliminary hearing. A final answer would undoubtedly depend on the facts to be established at a trial. The issue would be whether MK's indulgence or forbearance was related to the issuing of the cheque and, further, on whether it was exercised in reliance on a request—express or implied—attributable to the H Bank. Thus, if, on the facts, the relevant forbearance constituted a consideration for the payment to be obtained from the King, would it, necessarily, be also a consideration for the H Bank's own undertaking in the cheque? From a purely commercial point of view, the H Bank issued its cheque at the instruction of the King's staff and the consideration obtained for it was the amount debited to the relevant account. It may be asserted, as against this point, that MK may still have forbore from exercising its rights against N when it received the cheque. The real issue is whether it could be shown on the facts that the claim against N could or would have been pursued but for MK's receipt of the cheque. A great deal might, for instance, depend on the length of time that had passed between the date on which the cheque was received by MK and the date on which it was dishonoured by the Arab Bank.

MK's case: s.27(2)

34-069

The third attempt to establish the existence of a valid consideration centred on an argument based on s.27(2). It was argued that as the King had given value for the cheque, MK was deemed to be a holder for value. Mustill L.J. indicated that the authorities suggested that s.27(2) applied only where the instrument had been negotiated and not in favour of the original payee. He was, further, inclined to the view that, in any event, the consideration specified in s.27(2) would have to move from a promisee of the cheque and not from a stranger, such as the King. The fourth and final attempt to establish the presence of consideration was based on the fact that the cheque was payable to "MK or bearer". Mustill L.J. observed that, if the cheque was, accordingly, payable to bearer, then the King could well be considered its first holder. Under s.27(2), the consideration furnished by him would then support the claim of any subsequent holder, such as MK.

Lienee as holder for value under s.27(3)

34-070

Section 27(1) and (2) define the type of consideration that is adequate in the context of the law of bills of exchange. Subsection (3) makes special provisions respecting the position of a lienee: where the holder of a bill has a lien on it, arising either from a contract or by implication of law, he is deemed to be a holder for value to the extent of the sum for which he has the lien. ²³⁷ A holder who has taken a bill against payment of part of its sum to the transferor is entitled to recover the whole amount of the bill, and on recovery becomes trustee for the person entitled to the remainder of the money, after deducting the amount he has advanced. ²³⁸

Accommodation bill or party

34-071

Accommodation bills are dealt with by s.28, which provides that an accommodation party to a bill is a person who has signed a bill as drawer, acceptor or indorser without receiving value therefor and for the purpose of lending his name to some other person. An accommodation party is liable on the bill to a holder for value; and it is immaterial whether, when such holder took the bill, he knew such party to be an accommodation party or not. ²³⁹ A bill which is signed by one or more accommodation parties is frequently spoken of as an accommodation bill, but this is incorrect. An accommodation bill is a bill in which the acceptor (i.e. the principal debtor according to the terms of the instrument) is in substance a mere surety for some other person who may or may not be a party thereto. ²⁴⁰ The bill is discharged when it is honoured by the accommodated party. ²⁴¹

Holder in due course

34-072

Section 29 provides that four requirements must be fulfilled before a person may be considered a holder in due course. ²⁴² First, he must take the bill when it is complete and regular on its face. Secondly, he must take it before it is overdue ²⁴³ and without notice that it was previously dishonoured, if such was the fact. Knowledge that a bill is bound to be dishonoured may also be relevant. Thus, a Canadian authority suggests that a holder, who has taken a cheque with the knowledge of its having been countermanded, is not a holder in due course. ²⁴⁴ Thirdly, he must take it in good faith and without having notice of any defect in the title of the person who negotiates the bill to him. In particular the title of the person who negotiates the bill is defective when he obtained the bill or its acceptance by fraud, duress or other unlawful means, or for an illegal consideration, or when he negotiates it in breach of faith or under circumstances amounting to fraud. ²⁴⁵ Last, a holder in due course must take the bill for value, i.e. consideration. ²⁴⁶ Apart from these requirements, it follows from the language of s.29 that a holder in due course must be a "holder who has taken a bill. ...". ²⁴⁷ It has been held that these words refer to a holder to whom the bill has been negotiated and that the original payee of a bill cannot, therefore, be a holder in due course. ²⁴⁸ The second requirement specified in s.29 has not given rise to much litigation and the last has been discussed above in relation to a holder for value; but it will be useful to examine in detail the other two requirements.

Regularity

34-073

Whether a bill is complete and regular on its face is a question of fact, and must be determined by looking only at the bill. However, an Australian authority suggests that in cases of doubt there is room for expert evidence and that regard may be had to banking practice. ²⁴⁹ The word "face" in s.29 includes the back of the bill. ²⁵⁰ A bill is not considered complete if any material detail is missing, e.g. the name of the payee, the amount payable or any necessary indorsement. ²⁵¹ A bill is not incomplete merely because it has not been accepted. ²⁵² When the blanks in a bill, which was incomplete when issued, are filled up before it comes into the hands of a holder in due course, he is entitled to enforce it even if it has not been completed strictly in accordance with the drawer's authority. ²⁵³

34-074

A bill is considered irregular whenever anything on the face or the back of the bill can give rise to doubts or is out of the ordinary, e.g. if there is a discrepancy between the words and figures denoting the amount, ²⁵⁴ or if the bill is pasted together after having been torn. ²⁵⁵ But a bill is, in all probability, not irregular merely because it is post-dated. ²⁵⁶ The indorsement of the payee is irregular when it differs materially from the name written by the drawer on the front of the bill. ²⁵⁷ Thus, if a bill is indorsed "J. Williams" instead of "John Williams", the indorsement is not irregular. But where a payee is described on the face of the bill by the wrong name (e.g. W. Williams) and then indorses the bill in his true name (e.g. John Williams) the discrepancy between the front and the back of the bill renders the bill "irregular" within the meaning of s.29. ²⁵⁸ In order to achieve regularity the payee should in such cases add an indorsement in the misnomer by which he was described by the drawer. Titles and descriptions of the payee mentioned on the front of the bill, such as "Mr" or "Dr", may be omitted in the indorsement without impairing its regularity, but the omission of the word "company" may be of considerable significance and its omission, certainly on a foreign bill, renders an indorsement irregular. ²⁵⁹ If the indorsements on the back of the bill are not arranged in their correct sequence, the bill is not, necessarily, irregular. Thus, where the indorsement of the payee was written beneath those of two directors of the company which drew the bill, evidence was admitted to show that they signed their names above the payee's indorsement in order to assume liability towards him as guarantors. The bill was, therefore, not irregular on its face. ²⁶⁰

Good faith

34-075

As regards the requirement that the holder must take the bill in good faith and without knowledge of the defects in the title of the transferor, s.90 specifies that a thing is deemed to be done in good faith where it is in fact done honestly, whether it is done negligently or not. In Jones v Gordon ²⁶¹ Lord

Blackburn said that in order to establish that a holder did not take a bill in good faith:

“... it is necessary to show that the person who gave value for the bill, whether the value given be great or small, was affected with notice that there was something wrong about it when he took it. I do not think it is necessary that he should have notice of what the particular wrong was”.

The word “notice” which appears in this dictum, as well as in s.29, means actual though not formal notice, i.e. either knowledge of the facts, or a suspicion of something wrong combined with a wilful disregard of the means of knowledge. While the doctrine of constructive notice does not apply in the law of negotiable instruments, the holder is not entitled to disregard a “red flag” which has raised his suspicions.²⁶² The knowledge in question may be that of the holder himself or that of an executive in his employment, even if that person’s involvement is contrary to the holder’s interest.²⁶³

Notice of facts respecting underlying transaction

34-076

The defect of title or suspicious circumstance, knowledge of which precludes the holder or transferee from holding the bill in due course, may relate not only to a matter pertinent to the transferor’s title to the bill but also to one concerning its negotiation or issuing. Thus, in a Canadian authority, Williams and Glyn’s Bank v Belkin Packaging Ltd,²⁶⁴ it was held that a bank’s knowledge, that promissory notes discounted by it had been issued with a view to their being retained by the payee and replaced by a subsequent issue of notes if a certain commercial event took place, constituted notice of a defect which precluded the bank from becoming a holder in due course.²⁶⁵ The rule is, however, subject to one limitation, which was defined in Österreichische Länderbank v S’Elite Ltd.²⁶⁶ A bill of exchange was negotiated to the plaintiff bank by the drawer who, to the bank’s knowledge, was insolvent. The acceptors dishonoured the bill and sought leave to defend an action to enforce it on the ground that the transfer of the bill involved an undue preference under s.44(1) of the Bankruptcy Act 1914.²⁶⁷ Their argument was that, in view of these circumstances, the negotiation was tainted with fraud within the meaning of s.29 of the Bills of Exchange Act. Rejecting this argument, the Court of Appeal held that to vitiate the rights of a holder in due course the alleged circumstances had to involve a common law fraud.

34-077

An altogether different approach is taken by Canadian authorities, which have held that a finance company, which has a close business relationship with a dealer, may not claim to be a holder in due course of bills of customers of the dealer negotiated by him to the finance company in connection with purchases by the customers from the dealer, financed by the company.²⁶⁸ However, it is difficult to agree that, if such a finance company has no “notice” within the meaning of s.29 of any irregularity or suspicious circumstance concerning a transaction financed by it, it may not be a holder in due course of bills negotiated to it by the dealer.

Basic rights of holder in due course

34-078

A holder in due course takes the bill free from any defects in the title of all prior parties as well as from any equities available to prior parties among themselves, and is entitled to enforce payment against all parties liable on the bill.²⁶⁹ The same rights accrue to any holder (whether for value or not) who derives his title from a holder in due course, provided he is not himself a party to any fraud affecting the bill.²⁷⁰ Mere knowledge of a fraud or illegality by a person who has derived his title from a holder in due course does not deprive him of these rights.²⁷¹ It is noteworthy that in certain circumstances the rights of a holder in due course may be enforced even by the drawer of the bill. This is the position where, after the dishonour of the bill by the acceptor, the drawer regains its possession by paying it to the holder in due course. ²⁷²

Presumption of good faith

34-079

Every party whose signature appears on a bill is prima facie deemed to have become a party thereto for value. ²⁷³ Every holder of a bill is prima facie deemed to be a holder in due course; but if the acceptance, issue or subsequent negotiation of the bill was affected with fraud, duress or illegality, the burden of proof is shifted, and the holder must prove that, subsequent to the alleged fraud or illegality, value was in good faith given for the bill. ²⁷⁴ Thus, once a fraud is proved, the burden of proof is shifted to the holder who must then show not only that value has been given for the bill, but also that he took the bill in good faith and without notice of the fraud. ²⁷⁵ If the holder can discharge this onus he is, again, in the position of a holder in due course. Thus, in Bank für Gemeinwirtschaft AG v City of London Garages, ²⁷⁶ where the holder proved that he had discounted bills in good faith and without any knowledge or suspicion of illegality connected with them, the court refused to grant the drawer, the acceptors and the indorsers leave to defend an action brought by the holder in summary procedure under RSC Ord.14 r.1 (see now CPR Pt 24).

Position of original payee

34-080

As the original payee of the bill is not a holder in due course, ²⁷⁷ he cannot be deemed to be one under s.30(2). But there is authority for the view that, when the bill is in the hands of a payee who has taken it in good faith and for value, the drawer or acceptor can escape liability only if he is able to prove that the payee was aware of a defect. In Talbot v Von Boris ²⁷⁸ a husband forced his wife to become together with him the joint maker of a promissory note. It was held that the onus was on the wife, who had to prove that the payee was aware of the duress. This case was, however, decided before it was held by the House of Lords that the original payee of a bill could not be a holder in due course. As s.38(2) of the Act confers a right to enforce a bill despite defects in title of prior parties only on a holder in due course, it is to be doubted whether the rights of the original payee are not defeated by defects of this type. ²⁷⁹ On this basis, it could be questioned whether Talbot v Von Boris was rightly decided although, in Hasan v Wilson, ²⁸⁰ Goff J., who considered himself bound by this decision, said that a defect, such as duress or fraud committed by a third party, would constitute a defence only if the payee was proved to have had notice thereof. More recently, in Dextra Bank & Trust Co Ltd v Bank of Jamaica, ²⁸¹ the Privy Council, applying Talbot v Von Boris and Hasan v Willson, stated that the payee of a cheque, obtained by a third party from the drawer in fraud of the drawer, would acquire good title to the cheque provided that the payee had no notice of that fraud. ²⁸²

Effect of Consumer Credit Act 1974

34-081

It will be recollected that s.123(1) prohibits the taking of bills of exchange and of promissory notes by an "owner" or "creditor" in discharge of sums payable under "regulated agreements" and that s.123(3) prohibits the taking of any negotiable instrument (including a cheque) as security for the payment of such sums. ²⁸³ Under s.123(2), cheques may be taken in discharge of payment of amounts due under regulated agreements, but negotiation is prohibited except to a banker. Significant exemptions from the restrictions imposed by s.123 are made in two Orders. The first exempts consumer hire agreements, which have a connection with a country outside the United Kingdom, provided the goods are hired in the course of the hirer's business. ²⁸⁴ The second exempts credit transactions financing international trade where credit is provided to the debtor in the course of his business. ²⁸⁵ Such agreements are not "regulated agreements" and hence fall outside the ambit of s.123.

Bill taken in violation

34-082

What is the position of a person who takes a negotiable instrument in disregard of the Act and what are the rights of a transferee? According to s.125(1) a person who takes a negotiable instrument (other than a cheque) in payment in contravention of s.123(1) or who takes a negotiable instrument (including a cheque) as security in contravention of s.123(3) is not a holder in due course and is not entitled to enforce it. But the Act does not appear to affect the rights of a person to whom such an instrument is negotiated. Provided the transferee is not himself the owner or creditor of the regulated agreement within the meaning of the Act, ²⁸⁶ his taking the instrument by way of transfer is not prohibited by s.123. Moreover, under s.125(4), nothing in the Act affects the rights of a holder in due course of any negotiable instrument. It is therefore clear that the Act contemplates the enforcement by a transferee—who is a holder in due course—of an instrument extracted from the debtor or hirer in contravention of s.123. Another surmise—based on reading ss.123 and 125 together with ss.29 and 30 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882—is that a person may be a holder in due course of an instrument although he discounts it with the knowledge of its having been taken by the transferor in violation of subss.(1) or (3) of s.123. This startling conclusion is based on the fact that neither the taking of the instrument by the owner or creditor nor its negotiation is deemed to be a defect of title for the purposes of s.29 of the 1882 Act. ²⁸⁷ Consistently, the taking and the negotiation of such an instrument have not been added to the list of factors which, under s.30(2) of the 1882 Act, shift on the transferee or holder the onus of proving good faith and the furnishing of value.

Negotiation of cheque to non-banker34-083

The effect of the negotiation of a cheque, taken for payment of an amount due under a regulated agreement, to a person other than a banker is governed by s.125(2):

“Where a person negotiates a cheque in contravention of s.123(2), his doing so constitutes a defect in his title within the meaning of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882.”

The phrase “defect of title” occurs in s.29(1)(b), according to which a person, who takes a bill of exchange with notice of a defect in the transferor’s title, is not a holder in due course. It follows that a person (other than a banker), who discounts a cheque with the knowledge of its having been drawn for payment of an amount due under a regulated agreement, is not a holder in due course. However, the burden of proving the discounter’s knowledge of the relevant facts rests on the drawer of the cheque: the prohibited negotiation has not been added to the list of factors which, under s.30(2), shifts the onus of proof on the person seeking to enforce the bill.

Indemnity34-084

It is important to emphasise that a person who at the suit of a holder in due course is forced to pay a bill or note taken from him in contravention of s.123(1) or (3), or a cheque negotiated in contravention of s.123(2), is entitled to be indemnified by the creditor or owner. But this right—conferred by s.125(4) of the Consumer Credit Act 1974—is of little consolation to the consumer where the creditor or owner is insolvent. ²⁸⁸

^{32.} For detailed works on the subject, see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009); for the special aspects respecting the use of bills of exchange in international trade, see Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), Ch.22.

- 217. As regards a situation in which the consideration is illegal, e.g. under the Gaming Act 1968 (since repealed and replaced by the Gambling Act 2005), see Ladup v Shaik [1983] Q.B. 225.
- 218. McLean v Clydesdale Banking Co (1883) 9 App. Cas. 95. See also Ex p. Richdale (1882) 19 Ch. D. 409; Royal Bank of Scotland v Tottenham [1894] 2 Q.B. 715; Barclays Bank Ltd v Astley Industrial Trust Ltd [1970] 2 Q.B. 527, 539. For a modern case concerning the meaning of “consideration sufficient to support a simple contract” within the meaning of s.27(1)(a), see Sharp v Ellis [1972] V.R. 137. As regards a consideration which fails in toto, see Miller Associates (Australia) Pty Ltd v Bennington Pty Ltd (1975) 7 A.L.R. 144 noted in (1981) 55 A.L.J. 135.
- 219. [1949] 2 K.B. 727.
- 220. e.g. in the case of a person who, without giving consideration for it, obtains it from a holder in due course: s.29(3); and see below, respecting s.27(2).
- 221.  In Crears v Hunter (1887) 19 Q.B.D. 341, cited by Evershed M.R., the holder of a promissory note forbore from claiming a debt due to him from a third party at the request of the maker of the note. Consideration moved from the maker. See also the decision of Somervell L.J. in Oliver v Davis, above, especially at 741. The view taken in cases decided in Australia and New Zealand is that past consideration furnished by a third party constitutes good consideration under s.27(1)(a) provided there is a close link between the issuing of the bill and the consideration provided in the underlying transaction: Electrical Technologies Ltd v Auckland Electrical Services Ltd [1995] 3 N.Z.L.R. 726 and cases there cited including Walsh, Spriggs, Nolan and Finney v Hoag & Bosh Pty Ltd (1976) 12 A.L.R. 411 Aust; Bonior v Asiery Ltd [1968] N.Z.L.R. 254; Finch Motors Ltd v Quin [1980] 2 N.Z.L.R. 513; International Ore and Fertilizer Corp v East Coast Fertilizer Co Ltd [1987] 1 N.Z.L.R. 9. See also Banque Cantonale de Genève v Sanomi [2016] EWHC 3353 (Comm) at [47], a promissory note case, where the promisee bank did not rely on s.27(1)(b) because the prior indebtedness owed to the bank at the time the notes were made was that of a third party company (of which the maker of the notes was the founder). However, Blair J. went on to hold (at 48)–[62]) that the promisee bank had provided consideration for the notes by promising and actually forbearing to sue the third party as part of a short-term trade finance transaction.
- 222. Oliver v Davis [1949] 2 K.B. 727; Hasan v Willson [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 431; MK International Development Co Ltd v Housing Bank [1991] 1 Bank. L.R. 74. See generally, Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), paras 4–023 et seq.; Byles on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 29th edn (2013), paras 19–011 et seq.
- 223. 223 Autobiography Ltd v Byrne [2005] EWHC 213 (Ch); distinguished in Lomax Leisure Ltd v Miller [2008] 1 B.C.L.C. 262, [48]–[50]. See further, E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.400, 435–436.
- 224. [1974] 1 W.L.R. 493, 497.
- 225. [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 431.
- 226. [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 431 at 440–441. See also AEG (UK Ltd v Lewis [1993] 1 C.L. 132, noted in [1993] J.B.L. 275. Contrast Walsh, Spriggs, Nolan and Finney v Hoag & Bosh Pty Ltd (1976) 12 A.L.R. 411 Aust. And see Geva (1981) 39 C.L.J. 360.
- 227. As to which, see below.
- 228. Jones v Gordon (1877) 2 App. Cas. 616; Adib el Hinnawi v Yacoub Fahmi [1936] 1 All E.R. 638.
- 229. Jones v Gordon, above. See also Allen v Davis (1850) 20 L.J.Ch. 44; Simons v Cridland (1862) 5 L.T. 523.
- 230. (1808) 1 Camp. 246.

- 231. [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1061; cf. Pollway Ltd v Abdullah [1974] 1 W.L.R. 493, 497.
- 232. [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1061, 1064.
- 233. Below, paras 34-098 et seq.
- 234. [1991] 1 Bank. L.R. 74.
- 235. [1991] 1 Bank. L.R. 74 at 78.
- 236. [1991] 1 Bank. L.R. 74 at 79. Mustill L.J. referred to Robert Goff J.'s words in Hasan v Wilson [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 431 at 440–441, cited above, para.34-063, and to Oliver v Davis [1949] 2 K.B. 727; Diamond v Graham [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1061; and Pollway v Abdullah [1974] 1 W.L.R. 493. But cf. Walsh, Spriggs, Nolan and Finney v Hoag & Bosh Pty Ltd (1976) 12 A.L.R. 411 Aust.
- 237. s.27(3); and see Redfern v Rosenthal (1902) 18 T.L.R. 718; Re Keever [1967] Ch. 182; Barclays Bank Ltd v Astley Industrial Trust Ltd [1970] 2 Q.B. 527, 539 (showing that if, in addition, the requirements of s.29(1) are satisfied, such a lien would render the holder a holder in due course); Bank of Credit and Commerce Int SA v Dawson [1987] F.L.R. 342.
- 238. Reid v Furnival (1833) 1 Cr. & M. 538. A stay of proceedings may in such a case be granted, if in an action on the bill, it turns out that the claimant is trustee of part of the sum and the defendant has a claim which could be pleaded by way of set-off against the beneficiary of the trust: Barclays Bank Ltd v Aschaffenburg Zellstoffwerke AG [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 387.
- 239. s.28. The person accommodated is not discharged if the bill is not duly presented for payment (s.46(2)), or by the absence of notice of dishonour (s.50(2)) or of protest (s.51(9)).
- 240. Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.4–042.
- 241. s.59(3).
- 242. The rights of a holder in due course are stated in s.38(2).
- 243. As to when a bill payable on demand becomes overdue, see s.36(3).
- 244. Galco Enterprises Ltd v Hatty (1979) 27 N.B.R. (2d) 608.
- 245. s.29(2).
- 246. The orthodox view, which relies on the wording of s.29(1), is that a holder becomes a holder in due course only insofar as he acquires the bill for value or, in other words, furnishes consideration for it: Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.4–057; Crawford, Payment, Clearing and Settlement in Canada, Ontario 2002, Vol.2, pp.911 et seq. But see Clifford Chance v Silver [1992] N.P.C. 103 in which the Court of Appeal, on a summary judgment application, held that, under s.27(2), the holder in due course could, equally, attain his status in reliance on value provided by a previous party. For a critique, see Hitchens [1993] J.B.L. 571.
- 247. But he may become a holder in due course by reason of his having a lien over the bill: s.27(3) and Barclays Bank Ltd v Astley Industrial Trust Ltd [1970] 2 Q.B. 527, 539.
- 248. RE Jones Ltd v Waring and Gillow Ltd [1926] A.C. 670, 680 HL; Lloyds Bank Ltd v Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China [1929] 1 K.B. 40, 57, 75 CA.
- 249. Heller Factors Pty Ltd v Toy Corp Pty Ltd [1984] 1 N.S.W.L.R. 121, 140–142.
- 250. Arab Bank Ltd v Ross [1952] 2 Q.B. 216, 226.

- 251. Whistler v Forster (1863) 14 C.B.(N.S.) 248, 258 (indorsement of payee missing on a bill payable to order); Slingsby v District Bank [1931] 2 K.B. 588 (affirmed [1932] 1 K.B. 544); Arab Bank Ltd v Ross, above. Section 2 of the Cheques Act 1957, however, creates an exception as regards discounting bankers: see below, para.34-375.
- 252. National Park Bank of New York v Berggren & Co (1914) 110 L.T. 907.
- 253. s.20. And see above, para.34-035.
- 254. For an extreme case, concerning a difference between the description of the currency accompanying the amount in words and its description preceding the amount in figures, see Banco di Roma v Orru [1973] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 505.
- 255. See on this point Scholey v Ramsbottom (1810) 2 Camp. 485; Ingham v Primrose (1859) 7 C.B.(N.S.) 82; Redmayne v Burton (1860) 2 L.T. 324.
- 256. Hitchcock v Edwards (1889) 60 L.T. 636 and see below, para.34-156.
- 257. Arab Bank Ltd v Ross [1952] 2 Q.B. 216.
- 258. Although the indorsement is valid for the purpose of transferring the title, provided there was an intention to make the bill payable to this payee: s.31(3) and Arab Bank Ltd v Ross, above.
- 259. Arab Bank Ltd v Ross, above.
- 260. Lombard Banking Ltd v Central Garage and Engineering Co Ltd [1963] 1 Q.B. 220. See also Yeoman Credit Ltd v Gregory [1963] 1 W.L.R. 343.
- 261. (1877) 2 App. Cas. 616, 628. See also Bank of Cyprus (London) Ltd v Jones (1984) 134 New L.J. 522. As to the distinction between negligence and lack of good faith, see Raphael v Bank of England (1855) 17 C.B. 161. See also Baker v Barclays Bank Ltd [1955] 1 W.L.R. 822.
- 262. Raphael v Bank of England, above.
- 263. Bank of Credit and Commerce Int SA v Dawson and Wright [1987] F.L.R. 342.
- 264. [1982] 6 W.W.R. 481 SC Canada.
- 265. And see Bank of Credit and Commerce Int SA v Dawson and Wright, above. Note also that, where a defect of title was cured before that date on which delivery became unconditional, the transferee's status as a holder in due course is not impaired by notice of the original defect: Clifford Chance v Silver [1992] N.P.C. 103.
- 266. [1980] 2 All E.R. 651, overruling Banca Popolare di Novara v John Livanos & Sons Ltd [1965] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 149.
- 267. Now the Insolvency Act 1986 ss.239, 340.
- 268. Rand Investments Ltd v Bertrand, 58 D.L.R. (2d) 372 (1966); Keelan v Norray Distributing Ltd, 62 D.L.R. (2d) 466 (1967). See also Stenning v Radio and Domestic Finance Ltd [1961] N.Z.L.R. 7. Contrast Automobile Finance of Australia Ltd v Henderson (1928) 23 Tas.L.R. 9; Scottish Loan Finance Co Ltd v Payne (1935) 52 W.N.(N.S.W.) 175.
- 269. s.38(2). But see n.238 above, and below, para.34-099.
- 270. s.29(3).
- 271. May v Chapman (1847) 16 M. & W. 355.
- 272. Jade International Steel Stahl und Eisen GmbH & Co Kg v Robert Nicholas (Steels) Ltd [1978]

Q.B. 917, 924, 926; First Discount Ltd v Cranston [2002] EWCA Civ 71 at [4] and [17].

273. s.30(1).

274. s.30(2), and see Berrett v Smith [1965] N.Z.L.R. 460. See also Banque du Rhône SA v Fuerst Day Lawson Ltd [1968] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 153, where it was held that if the holder, who seeks to enforce the bill, resides in a foreign jurisdiction and the drawee alleges that the acceptance was obtained by means of fraud, the court may—under RSC Ord.23 r.1, preserved by CPR—order the holder to give security for costs.

275. Tatam v Haslar (1889) 23 Q.B.D. 345; Baker v Barclays Bank Ltd [1955] 1 W.L.R. 822; Bank of Cyprus (London) Ltd v Jones (1984) 134 New L.J. 522.

276. [1971] 1 W.L.R. 149. See also Barclays Bank Ltd v Astley Industrial Trust Ltd [1970] 2 Q.B. 527, 536–537; Begley Industries Ltd v Cramp [1977] 2 N.Z.L.R. 207.

277. See above, para.34-072; RE Jones Ltd v Waring and Gillow Ltd [1926] A.C. 670.

278. [1911] 1 K.B. 854. cf. Herdman v Wheeler [1902] 1 K.B. 361, 372, 375; Lloyds Bank Ltd v Cooke [1907] 1 K.B. 794, 807–808.

279. Ayres v Moore [1940] 1 K.B. 278, 286 et seq.

280. [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 431, 441.

281. [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 193.

282. At [22]. And see Abbey National Plc v JSF Finance & Currency Exchange Co Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 328, where, for the purposes for an interlocutory application, the Court of Appeal held that the payee's knowledge should be assessed taking account of the wider circumstances in which the transaction took place, including the fact that there had been a number of similar, previous transactions which the payee knew to be fraudulent.

283. See above, para.34-007. See also below, paras 39-196 et seq.

284. Consumer Credit (Negotiable Instruments) (Exemption) Order 1984 (SI 1984/435).

285. Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001/544 art.60C(8).

286. Note that under s.189 the terms “creditor” and “owner” include assignees of a regulated agreement but do not include transferees of bills of exchange.

287. The list of factors which constitute a defect of title, enumerated in s.29(2), is not exhaustive. But in view of the specific designation of a prohibited negotiation of a cheque to a non-banker as a defect of title within the meaning of the Act, it seems probable that the failure to equally include the negotiation of instruments taken in contravention of subss.(1) and (3), precludes its being treated as a defect of title on an ejusdem generis basis.

288. But note that the drawer may be able to base a defence on the rationes of the decisions cited above.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(b) - Bills of Exchange ³²
(iv) - Transfer of Bills

Negotiation of a bill

34-085

⚠ A bill is negotiated when it is transferred from one person to another in such a manner as to constitute the transferee the holder of the bill. ²⁸⁹ A bill payable to bearer is negotiated by mere delivery. ²⁹⁰ ⚠ A bill payable to the order of a specified payee is negotiated by the indorsement of the payee, or the holder to whom the bill has been specially indorsed, and delivery of it. ²⁹¹ Section 31(4) provides that where the holder of a bill payable to his order transfers it for value without indorsing it, the transfer gives the transferee such title as the transferor had in the bill, and the transferee, in addition, acquires the right to have the indorsement of the transferor. ²⁹² However, until this has been obtained the transferee is in the position of an assignee of a chose in action, and has no better title than the assignor. ²⁹³ He does not have a right to indorse the bill in the transferor's name and it has been suggested that he may not be able to sue on the bill without joining the transferor as a party to the action. ²⁹⁴

Section 31(5) provides that where a person is under an obligation to indorse a bill in representative manner, he is entitled to indorse in terms negating personal liability. ²⁹⁵

Valid indorsement ²⁹⁶

34-086

Section 32 explains when an indorsement is valid and effective to negotiate a bill:

(a)

According to s.32(1) it must be written on the bill itself and be signed by the indorser. The signature of the indorser on the bill, without additional words, is sufficient. An indorsement written on an allonge (i.e. an attached slip) or a "copy" of a bill, issued or negotiated in a country where such copies are recognised, is deemed to be written on the bill itself. Although it is usual to indorse a bill on its back it has been held that an indorsement on the front of the bill is valid. ²⁹⁷

(b)

According to s.32(2), the indorsement must transfer the entire bill. A partial indorsement, that is to say, an indorsement which purports to transfer to the indorsee a part only of the amount payable, or which purports to transfer the bill to two or more indorsees severally, does not operate as a negotiation of the bill.

(c)

According to s.32(3), where a bill is payable to the order of two or more payees or indorsees who are not partners, all must indorse it, unless the one indorsing has authority to indorse for the others. But where the bill is payable to two payees in the alternative, the indorsement of either is sufficient. ²⁹⁸

(d)

According to s.32(4) where, in a bill payable to order, the payee or indorsee is wrongly designated, or his name is misspelt, he may indorse the bill as therein described, adding, if he thinks fit, his proper signature. This subsection is not imperative in terms. If, despite the misnomer, it is clear whom the drawer had in mind, then the indorsement of this person in his correct name is valid. ²⁹⁹ An indorsement of the payee by the name written in the bill is also valid. ³⁰⁰

(e)

According to s.32(5) where there are two or more indorsements on a bill, the indorsements are deemed to have been made in the order in which they appear on the bill, until the contrary is proved.

(f)

According to s.32(6) an indorsement may be made in blank or special. It may also contain terms making it restrictive. ³⁰¹

Conditional indorsements

34-087

According to s.33, where a bill purports to be indorsed conditionally, the condition may be disregarded by the payer, and payment to the indorsee is valid whether the condition has been fulfilled or not.

Indorsement in blank and special indorsement

34-088

An indorsement in blank specifies no indorsee, and a bill so indorsed becomes payable to bearer. A special indorsement specifies the person to whom, or to whose order, the bill is to be payable. The provisions of the Act relating to a payee apply with the necessary modifications to an indorsee under a special indorsement. When a bill has been indorsed in blank, any holder may convert the blank indorsement into a special indorsement by writing above the indorser's signature a direction to pay the bill to or to the order of himself or some other person. ³⁰² A holder is, further, entitled to strike out an indorsement of a previous party. The indorser whose indorsement has been struck out and all subsequent indorsers are then discharged. ³⁰³ An indorser often strikes out his previous indorsement when he honours the bill after its dishonour by the acceptor or drawer, in order to avoid liability if the bill is lost. By doing so he does not lose his right of recourse against prior indorsers or the drawer.

Restrictive indorsement

34-089

The indorsement of a bill to a specified person without the words “or order” is not restrictive and the bill, which remains negotiable, is to be treated as if these words were included. ³⁰⁴ An indorsement is restrictive if it either prohibits further transfers or if it specifies that it is not a transfer but a mere authority to the indorsee to deal with the bill as thereby directed, e.g. if it is indorsed “Pay D only”, or “Pay D for the account of X”, or “Pay D or order for collection”. ³⁰⁵ The statement in an indorsement, that the consideration has been furnished by a third party, does not render it a restrictive indorsement. ³⁰⁶ A restrictive indorsement gives the indorsee the right to receive payment of the bill and to sue any party that his indorser could have sued, but gives him no power to transfer his rights as indorsee unless it expressly authorises him to do so. ³⁰⁷ However, the acceptor is not liable to the indorser if the indorsee, after obtaining payment of the bill under the restrictive indorsement, misappropriates the proceeds. ³⁰⁸ Where a restrictive indorsement authorises further transfer, all subsequent indorsees take the bill with the same rights and subject to the same liabilities as the first indorsee under the restrictive indorsement. ³⁰⁹ As an indorsee, who takes a bill bearing a restrictive indorsement, is aware of the limitation of the title of the transferor, he cannot be a holder in due course.

Overdue or dishonoured bill

34-090

A bill remains negotiable until it is either restrictively indorsed or discharged. However, if an overdue bill is transferred, the transferee takes it subject to any equities available to the acceptor, drawer or indorser. ³¹⁰ Such equities include an agreement not to transfer the bill, ³¹¹ and probably the illegality of the consideration, ³¹² but neither the absence of consideration ³¹³ nor a personal right of set-off available to the acceptor against the drawer. ³¹⁴ A bill payable on demand is deemed to be overdue when it appears on its face to have been in circulation for an unreasonably long time; what constitutes an unreasonably long time is a question of fact. ³¹⁵ The holder of a bill is presumed to have taken it before it became overdue, provided the indorsement is not dated after the date of maturity. ³¹⁶ If a person takes a bill, knowing that it has been dishonoured, he is in the same position as if he took an overdue bill. ³¹⁷

Negotiation to party already liable

34-091

Section 37 provides that where a bill is negotiated back to the drawer or to an indorser or to the acceptor such party may, subject to the provisions of ss.59 to 64 (respecting the discharge of the bill), reissue and further negotiate the bill; but he is not entitled to enforce payment of the bill against any party to whom he was previously liable. It has been held that, as against the acceptor, such a drawer or indorser would be in the position of a holder in due course, provided the person from whom he acquired the bill enjoyed such a status. ³¹⁸

Rights of holder: generally

34-092

The rights of the holder depend primarily on whether he is a “mere holder”, a “holder for value” or a “holder in due course”. In certain cases it is also relevant whether a dispute is between “immediate parties” or “remote parties”. ³¹⁹ Immediate parties are those who, in addition to the privity created by the bill, have a direct legal relationship with each other. The drawer and the acceptor, the drawer and the payee and an indorser and his indorsee are usually parties who have entered into a contract with one another, such as an agreement to extend credit, a sale of goods or an arrangement for the discount of negotiable instruments; they are therefore predominantly immediate parties. But in certain circumstances even these parties may be remote parties, e.g. where the drawer makes the bill payable to the payee's order, or where the drawee executes his acceptance, at the request of a stranger to the bill. It is maintained by some writers that, generally, the defences which can be pleaded against a remote party are more restricted than those available against an immediate party.³²⁰ It will be shown, however, that the distinction between remote and immediate parties is relevant mainly in respect of actions brought on a bill by a holder for value. The superior rights of a holder in due course are defined in s.38(2) of the Act, which does not draw a distinction between remote and immediate parties.³²¹ At the other end of the scale, a mere holder, who has not furnished value, appears to hold the bill subject to virtually all equities available against prior parties, including immediate parties.

Rights of holder in due course

34-093

According to s.38(2) a holder in due course holds the bill free from any defects in the title of previous parties as well as from any equities available to prior parties among themselves and may enforce payment against all parties liable on the bill. Defects of title, which under s.29(2) include fraud, duress, force and fear and illegality connected with the issuing, with the acceptance or with the negotiation of the bill,³²² are directly related to the bill itself and before the passage of the Act were known as "equities attaching to the instrument".³²³ The term "equities available to prior parties among themselves", employed in s.38(2), is not defined in this provision or indeed elsewhere in the Act. In all probability it means personal defences, available to parties among themselves, which do not stem from the bill. By way of illustration consider defences based on an underlying contract of sale, such as the unsuitability of the goods or the failure to ship them on time. By conferring on the holder in due course the right to enforce the bill despite defects in the title of previous parties and regardless of personal defences available against them, s.38(2) enables bankers and other financial institutions to discount commercial bills without assuming the risk of becoming involved in disputes concerning the underlying business transaction.³²⁴ Thus, where the discounter is a holder in due course, he can enforce the bill of exchange against the drawee even if the latter had accepted it in the mistaken belief that a forged bill of lading attached to the bill of exchange was genuine.³²⁵ The position of a holder in due course is further safeguarded by the following sections of the Act: 12, 20(2) (completion of inchoate instruments), 21(2) (delivery), 54(2), 55(2) and 64(2).³²⁶ In effect, to defeat an action by a holder in due course it is necessary to establish a defect in his own title in which case, of course, he is not a holder in due course.³²⁷

Rights of mere holder

34-094

⚠ Section 38(1) prescribes that a holder (or "mere holder") has the right to bring an action on the bill in his own name,³²⁸ but does not indicate what type of defence is available against him. From a comparison of the language of this subsection with s.38(2) it emerges that, as against an action by a mere holder, the defendant is entitled to raise defences stemming from a defect in title of prior parties and at least some personal defences available against them. This view derives support from old authorities which, in view of the absence of explicit regulation of the question in the Act, remain good law. Thus, it has been held that absence of consideration³²⁹ and total failure of consideration³³⁰ are valid defences against a mere holder. Partial failure of consideration is a valid defence where a liquidated amount is involved,³³¹ but cannot be raised where the amount involved is an unascertained or unliquidated demand.³³² Thus, an acceptor does not have a valid defence to an action on the bill where arbitration proceedings are brought by him against the payee in respect of the underlying contract of sale. Neither can the claim involved be raised by way of a set-off or a counterclaim.³³³ ⚠ A fortiori, a right against a previous party which has no direct bearing on the bill or on the transaction related to it, such as an independent right of set-off, cannot be raised as a defence to the holder's action on the bill.³³⁴

Rights of holder for value

34-095

The rights of a holder for value are not defined in the Act. In most regards his position is similar to that of a mere holder.³³⁵ Thus, his action on the bill would be defeated if the bill was obtained by means of fraud or of duress or where the consideration furnished was illegal.³³⁶ This proposition derives support from the language of the Act. Under s.29(2) fraud, duress, force and fear and illegality of consideration are factors which render the transferor's title defective. Section 38(2) explicitly grants the right to enforce the bill despite such defects in the transferor's title to a holder in due course but does not purport to confer them on a holder for value. It follows that, subject to specific defences conferred on a holder for value by other provisions of the Act, his rights—like those of a mere holder—are governed by s.38(1) of the Act, which only confers on the holder a right to bring an action on the bill in his own name.

Total failure of consideration

34-096

Can a holder for value enforce the bill where there has been a total or partial failure of the consideration furnished to the person who is sued on the bill or where no consideration has been furnished to him? As the holder for value has furnished consideration to the transferor, the absence of consideration between prior parties to the bill does not constitute a valid defence against him.³³⁷ Moreover, when a person becomes a party to a bill without obtaining consideration, he usually acts as an accommodation party. Under s.28(2), such a party is liable to a holder for value who takes the bill with full knowledge of this fact.

Partial failure of consideration

34-097

In respect of partial failure of consideration, it is important to recall the distinction between immediate parties and remote parties. An immediate party is entitled to plead partial failure of consideration as a defence to an action by a holder for value, provided the "partial failure" involves an ascertained and liquidated amount. Thus, if a seller supplies only one half of the goods, he cannot recover more than half the amount of the bill drawn for the price and accepted by the buyer.³³⁸ But if the goods turn out to be of an inferior quality, this defect cannot be raised as a defence to the seller's action on the bill.³³⁹ An illustration in point is the decision of the Court of Appeal in *Thoni GmbH v RTP Equipment Ltd.*³⁴⁰ To settle an account related to the supply of hoses, the defendants agreed to accept the plaintiffs' bill of exchange for Ö.Sch. 1m. and to make, in addition, certain fixed periodic payments. When a subsequent shipment comprised defective hoses, the plaintiffs claimed to be entitled to a refund. They ceased to make the periodic payments and dishonoured the bill of exchange. Granting leave to defend an action on the bill, Buckley L.J. stressed that there was an arguable defence in respect of a substantial and defined part of the amount of the bill. His Lordship based this conclusion on the finding that it was established on the facts that the defendants' indebtedness was limited to Ö.Sch. 400,897. There was, therefore, a prima facie defence in respect of the balance of Ö.Sch. 599,103 as the consideration furnished for this amount had failed.

As against remote party

34-098

Partial failure of consideration does not appear to afford a defence against a remote party who is a holder for value even where the deficiency or loss is liquidated.³⁴¹ One authority suggests that total failure of consideration does not provide a defence to an action brought by a holder for value who is a remote party.³⁴² This view deserves support; as a remote party who is a holder for value has furnished consideration for the bill, it seems irrelevant that a consideration furnished by prior parties has failed. The position differs where an action is brought by an immediate party who furnished for the bill a consideration which, though valid at the time of transfer, has failed in toto at a subsequent point of time. In effect, such a party is not a holder for value strictu sensu, and the total failure of consideration is a good defence against him.³⁴³

Holder suing for benefit of third party

34-099

Normally the holder of a bill of exchange is entitled to judgment for the full sum represented by the bill. But when he sues as agent or trustee for another person, or when he sues wholly or in part for the benefit of another person, any defence or set-off available against that person is available pro tanto against the holder.³⁴⁴ Thus, in *Barclays Bank v Aschaffenburg Zellstoffwerke AG*³⁴⁵ A accepted bills drawn by B in payment for goods sold to him by B. C purchased the bills from B, paying 73 per cent of their face value and agreeing that when the bills were met on maturity the balance would be paid to B. Two of the bills were dishonoured, and, when sued by C, A sought to rely on a counterclaim in respect of the goods sold by B. It was held that C was a holder for value as to 73 per cent of the claim and trustee for the balance on behalf of B, so that there should be summary judgment for the whole amount of the bills, but with a stay of execution in respect of 27 per cent of that amount.

^{342.} For detailed works on the subject, see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009); for the special aspects respecting the use of bills of exchange in international trade, see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), Ch.22.

^{289.} s.31(1).

^{290.} [!]s.31(2). "Delivery" is defined in s.2 as the "transfer of possession, actual or constructive, from one person to another". Contrast the narrower definition of delivery in s.61(1) of the Sale of Goods Act 1979: "voluntary transfer of possession from one person to another ...". As to which bills are payable to bearer, see above, para.34-022.

^{291.} s.31(3). See Standard Chartered Bank v Dorchester LNG (2) Ltd, The Erin Schulte [2014] EWCA Civ 1382, where an analogy was made between indorsement of bills of lading under the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act 1992 s.5(2)(b), and the indorsement of bills of exchange: held (at [16]) that "[d]elivery therefore represents an essential element in a series of voluntary acts designed to give effect to the holder's intention to transfer the rights which it represents" and (at [28]) that "completion of an indorsement by delivery requires the voluntary and unconditional transfer of possession by the holder to the indorsee and an unconditional acceptance by the indorsee". As to which bills are payable to order, see above, para.34-023.

^{292.} Walters v Neary (1904) 21 T.L.R. 146.

^{293.} Whistler v Forster (1863) 14 C.B.(N.S.) 248. As regards the validity of the assignment of a chose in action conferred by a bill, see Geo Thompson (Aust) Pty Ltd v Vittadello [1978] V.R. 199, 208–212.

^{294.} Cunliffe v Whitehead (1837) 3 Bing. N.C. 828, 830; Harrop v Fisher (1861) 10 C.B.(N.S.) 196, 203.

^{295.} And see ss.16(1), 26.

^{296.} A valid indorsement may nevertheless be irregular, see above, para.34-074.

^{297.} Young v Glover (1857) 3 Jur.(N.S.) 637; Ex p. Yates (1857) 2 De G. & J. 191.

^{298.} This appears to follow from Watson v Evans (1863) 32 L.J. Ex. 137. As to the possibility of having alternative payees, see s.7(2), discussed in para.34-023, above.

- 299. Bird & Co v Thomas Cook & Son Ltd [1937] 2 All E.R. 227; Arab Bank Ltd v Ross [1952] 2 Q.B. 216. (But such an indorsement will be irregular and a holder of such a bill cannot be a holder in due course: see above, para.34-074.)
- 300. Willis v Barrett (1816) 2 Stark. 29.
- 301. As to restrictive indorsements, see below, para.34-089. As to the effect of a blank indorsement, see s.8(3).
- 302. s.34. And see above, para.34-022.
- 303. Wilkinson v Johnson (1824) 3 B. & C. 428; Mayer v Jadis (1833) 1 M. & Rob. 247.
- 304. s.8(4) which, in view of s.34(3), applies to indorsements.
- 305. s.35(1).
- 306. Buckley v Jackson (1868) L.R. 3 Ex. 135.
- 307. s.35(2); Lloyd v Sigourney (1829) 5 Bing. 525.
- 308. Williams, Deacon & Co v Shadbolt (1885) 1 Cab. & E. 529; (1885) 1 T.L.R. 417.
- 309. s.35(3).
- 310. s.36(1) and (2). That a party who takes an overdue bill cannot be a holder in due course, see s.29.
- 311. Parr v Jewell (1855) 16 C.B. 684; Redfern v Rosenthal (1902) 86 L.T. 855.
- 312. See Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.5–041.
- 313. Sturtevant v Ford (1842) 4 M. & G. 101; Ex p. Swan (1868) L.R. 6 Eq. 344.
- 314. Oulds v Harrison (1854) 10 Exch. 572; Ex p. Swan, above.
- 315. s.36(3).
- 316. s.36(4). As to when this presumption is rebutted, see Bounsall v Harrison (1836) 1 M. & W. 611.
- 317. s.36(5).
- 318. Jade International Steel Stahl und Eisen GmbH & Co Kg v Robert Nicholas (Steels) Ltd [1978] Q.B. 917, 924, 926; First Discount Ltd v Cranston [2002] EWCA Civ 71 at [4] and [17].
- 319. As regards the rights of the payee of a bill, see above, para.34-080. Note that the transferee of a holder in due course is in a position similar to that of his transferor: s.29(3), discussed above, para.34-078. As regards the effect of fraud and illegality on the position of immediate parties, see also Universal Import Export v Bank of Scotland, 1994 S.C.L.R. 944 OH.
- 320. Byles on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 29th edn (2013), paras 18–013 et seq.; Crawford, Payment, Clearing and Settlement in Canada (2002), Vol.II, pp.986 et seq.; Cowen & Gering, Law of Negotiable Instruments in South Africa, 5th edn, pp.103–109 et seq. The distinction is not fully worked out in decided cases, but see Watson v Russell (1864) 5 B. & S. 968; 34 L.J.Q.B. 93 (suggesting that the drawer and the drawee of a cheque are not always immediate parties). See also Oscar Harris, Son & Co v Vallarman & Co [1940] 1 All E.R. 185 CA; Bank Lenmi Le-Israel v Coniplan (UK) Ltd Unreported July 31, 1987; Solo Industries UK Ltd v Canara Bank [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 578 at [39] CA; GMAC Commercial Finance Ltd v Mint Apparel Ltd [2010] EWHC 2452 (Comm) at [26]. For a detailed discussion, see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), paras 4–005 et seq.

- 321. Note that only an indorsee can be a holder in due course (above, para.34-080) and that only his transferor can be regarded an immediate party. From a practical point of view, the circumstances under which a transferee has to take the bill in order to attain the status of a holder in due course are such as to rule out the need to distinguish in his case between an action against an immediate party and an action against a remote party.
- 322. See also above, para.34-072. Cowen & Gering, Law of Negotiable Instruments in South Africa, 4th edn, pp.271–274 (and see 5th edn, pp.103 et seq.) suggests that defects in title are defences in rem whilst personal equities constitute defences in personam. See also Crawford, Payment, Clearing and Settlement in Canada (2002), Vol.II, pp.986 et seq.; Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), paras 4-062-4-069.
- 323. Re Overend, Gurney & Co Ex p. Swan (1868) L.R. 6 Eq. 344, 359–362; Alcock v Smith [1892] 1 Ch. 238, 263. See also Sturtevant v Ford (1842) 4 M. & G. 101, 106.
- 324. It will be shown subsequently that certain personal equities may not be pleaded against any holder, including a mere holder.
- 325. Robinson v Reynolds (1841) 2 Q.B. 196; Guaranty Trust Co of New York v Hannay & Co [1918] 2 K.B. 623, 652. cf. Leather v Simpson (1871) L.R. 11 Eq. 398.
- 326. As regards ss.12 and 20(2), see above, para.34-035; as regards s.21, see above, para.34-032; as regards s.54(2), see below, para.34-113; as regards s.55(2), see below, para.34-114; as regards s.64, see below, para.34-141.
- 327. This can, for example, be done by showing that he holds a bill payable to the order of a specific payee under a forged indorsement: above, para.34-053.
- 328. An action to enforce a negotiable instrument may be brought under Pt 24 of the CPR (previously under RSC Ord.14) under which the claimant applies for summary judgment. As to when leave to defend will be granted, see Byles on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 29th edn (2013), paras 26–013 et seq.; and James Lamont & Co Ltd v Hyland [1950] 1 K.B. 585; Brown Shipley & Co Ltd v Alicia Hosiery Ltd [1966] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 668; Barclays Bank Ltd v Aschaffenburg Zellstoffwerke AG [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 387 (below, para.34-102); All Trades Distributors Ltd v Agencies Kaufman Ltd (1969) 113 S.J. 995; Saga of Bond Street Ltd v Avalon Promotions Ltd [1972] 2 Q.B. 325; Cebora SNC v SIP (Industrial Products) Ltd [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 271; Montebianco Industrie Tessili SpA v Carlyle Mills (London) Ltd [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 509. Although these cases were decided under RSC Ord.14, they are likely to remain good law (Safa Ltd v Banque du Caire [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 600, 605–606, Waller L.J.). See, e.g. Solo Industries UK Ltd v Canara Bank [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 578 at [22]–[28]; Isovel Contracts Ltd (in administration) v ABB Building Technologies Ltd [2002] 1 B.C.L.C. 390 at [15]–[22]; Banque Saudi Fransi v Lear Siegler Services Inc [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 47 at [14]–[16]; Enka Insaat Ve Sanayi AS v Banca Popolare Dell'Alto Adige SpA [2009] EWHC 2410 (Comm) at [19]–[25].
- 329. Forman v Wright (1851) 11 C.B. 481, 492–494; cf. Easton v Pratchett (1835) 1 C.M. & R. 798, 808–809; Milnes v Dawson (1850) 5 Exch. 948, 950–951. Note that s.28(2) does not confer on a mere holder the right to enforce a bill against an accommodation party. As regards the authority of cases decided before the passing of the Act, see above, para.34-006.
- 330. See n.343, below, showing this defence as available even against a holder for value.
- 331. Forman v Wright, above; Agra and Masterman's Bank v Leighton (1866) L.R. 2 Ex. 56, 64, 65 (supply of ascertained portion of goods instead of delivery of quantity ordered); Thoni GmbH v RTP Equipment Ltd [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 282.
- 332. Day v Nix (1824) 9 Moo. C.P. 159; 2 L.J. (O.S.) C.P. 133; Sully v Frean (1854) 10 Exch. 535; Warwick v Nairn (1855) 10 Exch. 762 (alleged inferiority of quality of goods).
- 333.  Nova (Jersey) Knit Ltd v Kammgarn Spinnerei GmbH [1977] 1 W.L.R. 713, where the majority of the House of Lords further refused to grant a stay based on the arbitration agreement respecting the underlying contract. But much turns on the construction of the arbitration agreement: as to which, see Fiona Trust & Holding Corp v Privalov [2007] UKHL 40, [2008] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 254. See also Piallo GmbH v Yafiro International Pte Ltd [2013] SGHC 260 (noted by L.K. Ho [2014] L.M.C.L.Q. 146), distinguished in Cassa di Risparmio di Parma e Piacenza SpA v Rals International Pte Ltd [2015] SGHC 264.

334. Burrough v Moss (1830) 10 B. & C. 558, 563; Whitehead v Walker (1842) 10 M. & W. 696; Oulds v Harrison (1854) 10 Exch. 572, 578–579; Re Overend, Gurney & Co Ex p. Swan (1868) L.R. 6 Eq. 344, 359–360. cf. Re European Bank Ex p. Oriental Commercial Bank (1870) L.R. 5 Ch. App. 358. But an agreement made at the time the bill is executed, which contemplates a future set-off, may be an equity affecting the bill: Holmes v Kidd (1858) 3 H. & N. 891.
335. Whistler v Forster (1863) 14 C.B.(N.S.) 248, 258.
336. But note that the list of defects, set out in s.29(2) is not exhaustive: see Williams and Glyn's Bank Ltd v Belkin Packaging Ltd, 123 D.L.R. (3rd) 612 (1981).
337. Mills v Barber (1836) 1 M. & W. 425, 430–431; Barber v Richards (1851) 6 Exch. 63. cf. Forman v Wright (1851) 11 C.B. 481, 492–494; see also s.27(2), considered in MK International Development Co Ltd v Housing Bank [1991] 1 Bank. L.R. 74; above, para.34-066. As to whether the holder can recover the full amount of the bill or only an amount equal to the value furnished by him, see Darnell v Williams (1817) 2 Stark. 166; Jones v Hibbert (1817) 2 Stark. 304; Re Bunyard Ex p. Newton (1880) 16 Ch. D. 330, 336.
338. Agra and Masterman's Bank v Leighton (1866) L.R. 2 Ex. 56, 64, 65. See also Forman v Wright, above, at 492.
339. Glennie v Imri (1839) 3 Y. & C.Ex. 436, 442–443; Agra and Masterman's Bank v Leighton, above; cf. Hitchings and Coulthurst Co v Northern Leather Co [1914] 3 K.B. 907. See also Fielding and Platt Ltd v Najjar [1969] 1 W.L.R. 357 (where the seller had performed part of the bargain before the buyer dishonoured the bill); All Trades Distributors Ltd v Agencies Kaufman Ltd, below (rejection of goods); Montecchi v Shimco Ltd [1979] 1 W.L.R. 1180; Montebianco Industrie Tessili SpA v Carlyle Mills (London) Ltd [1981] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 509 (the fact that the defect in the goods confers on the drawee a valid counterclaim is no defence to the action on the bill). But note that the buyer may counterclaim. As to whether a stay of proceedings would be granted pending the counterclaim, see James Lamont & Co Ltd v Hyland Ltd [1950] 1 K.B. 585; All Trades Distributors Ltd v Agencies Kaufman Ltd (1969) 113 S.J. 995; Cebora SNC v SIP (Industrial Products) Ltd [1976] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 271. For a recent example, see Oxigen Environmental Ltd v Mullan [2012] NIQB 17 (summary judgment on promissory note but stay of execution pending hearing of counterclaim for breach of underlying contract). Note that the amount of a dishonoured bill can be set off against an amount of damages recoverable under the underlying contract: Handley Page Ltd v Rockwell Machine Tool Co Ltd [1970] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 459, 465 (affirmed [1971] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 298).
340. [1979] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 282.
341. Archer v Bamford (1822) 3 Stark. 175; cf. Oscar Harris, Son & Co v Vallarman & Co [1940] 1 All E.R. 185 (which regards the rule as insufficiently settled to justify on its basis the striking out of an action). See also GMAC Commercial Finance Ltd v Mint Apparel Ltd [2010] EWHC 2452 (Comm) at [26]–[33].
342. Watson v Russell (1864) 5 B. & S. 968; some indirect support for the proposition follows from Misa v Currie (1876) 1 App. Cas. 554, especially 566. But even a remote party could not sue if he knew at the time he took the bill that consideration had totally failed; Lloyd v Davis (1824) 3 L.J.(O.S.) K.B. 38; cf. Fairclough v Pavia (1854) 9 Exch. 690, 695 (where, however, the transferee may have taken the bill from a holder in due course). It is arguable to the contrary, that as s.38(2) precludes the raising of a defence based on defects in title and on personal equities solely as against a holder in due course, a holder for value's rights may be defeated by failure of consideration (which presumably constitutes a personal equity).
343. Solly v Hinde (1834) 2 Cr. & M. 516 (maker executed promissory note to induce payee to act as executor of maker's will; held that as maker outlived payee, the payee's estate could not enforce the instrument); Astley and Williams v Johnson (1860) 5 H. & N. 137 (remote party was suing as agent of immediate party and hence was regarded as immediate party); Fielding and Platt Ltd v Najjar [1969] 1 W.L.R. 357. As to whether an injunction may be granted to restrain negotiation where there has been total failure of consideration, see Patrick v Harrison (1792) 3 Bro. C.C. 476; Glennie v Imri (1839) 3 Y. & C. Ex. 436; Bainbrigge v Hemingway (1865) 12 L.T. 74.

344. De La Chaumette v Bank of England (1829) 9 B. & C. 208 (as explained in Currie v Misa (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 153, 164; (1876) 1 App. Cas. 554, 570); Thornton v Maynard (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 695.

345. [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 387. See also Re Bunyard Ex p. Newton (1880) 16 Ch. D. 330, 336. cf. Nova (Jersey) Knit Ltd v Kammgarn Spinnerei GmbH [1977] 1 W.L.R. 713. See also GMAC Commercial Finance Ltd v Mint Apparel Ltd [2010] EWHC 2452 (Comm) at [19]–[25].

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(b) - Bills of Exchange ³²
(v) - General Duties of Holder

Outline

34-100

Before the holder is entitled to claim payment of a bill from the drawer and indorsers he must perform several duties. In most cases the failure of the holder to perform these duties discharges the drawer and indorsers and there is authority for saying that the debt, for the payment of which the bill is transferred to holder, is likewise discharged. ³⁴⁶

Necessity of presentment for acceptance

34-101

Presentment of the bill for acceptance is required in the following cases: (a) when the bill is payable after sight, in which case presentment is necessary to determine the maturity of the instrument; (b) when a bill expressly stipulates that it must be presented for acceptance; and (c) when it is drawn payable elsewhere than at the residence or business place of the drawee. In the last two cases it must be presented for acceptance before it can be presented for payment. ³⁴⁷ Where a bill is payable after sight the holder must either present it for acceptance or negotiate it within a reasonable time; otherwise the drawer and indorsers are discharged. ³⁴⁸ What constitutes reasonable time depends on the nature of the bill, the usage of trade with respect to similar bills, and the facts of the particular case. ³⁴⁹

Rules as to presentment for acceptance

34-102

Section 41(1) of the Act specifies the following rules for the presentment of a bill for acceptance:

(a)

the presentment must be made by or on behalf of the holder to the drawee or to some person authorised to accept or refuse acceptance on his behalf at a reasonable hour on a business day and before the bill is overdue;

(b)

where a bill is addressed to two or more drawees, who are not partners, presentment must be made to them all, unless one has authority to accept for all in which case presentment may be made to him only;

- (c) where the drawee is dead, presentment may be made to his personal representative;
- (d) where the drawee is bankrupt, presentment may be made to him or to his trustee in bankruptcy;
- (e) where authorised by agreement or usage, presentment through the post office is sufficient.

According to s.41(2) presentment in accordance with the above rules is excused, and the bill may be treated as dishonoured by non-acceptance, in the following cases:

- (a) where the drawee is dead or bankrupt, or is a fictitious person or a person not having capacity to contract;
- (b) where, after the exercise of reasonable diligence, due presentment cannot be effected;
- (c) where, although the presentment has been irregular, acceptance has been refused on some other ground.

The fact that the holder has reason to believe that the bill, on presentment, will be dishonoured does not excuse failure to present it. 350

Dishonour by non-acceptance

34-103

According to s.43(1) a bill is dishonoured by non-acceptance if:

- (a) it is duly presented and acceptance is refused or cannot be obtained; And
- (b) if presentment for acceptance is excused and the bill is not accepted.

Where a bill is duly presented for acceptance, and is not accepted within the customary time, the holder must treat it as dishonoured by non-acceptance, and if he fails so to treat it, he loses his immediate right of recourse against the drawer and indorsers. ³⁵¹ This right of recourse accrues to the holder as soon as the bill is dishonoured by non-acceptance, and he need not present the bill for payment. ³⁵² If after dishonour the drawee offers to accept the bill, it appears that the holder has the option of treating the bill as dishonoured or as accepted. ³⁵³

Duties as to qualified acceptances

34-104

The holder of a bill may refuse to take a qualified acceptance, and if he does not obtain an unqualified acceptance may treat the bill as dishonoured. Where a qualified acceptance is taken, and the drawer or an indorser has not expressly or impliedly authorised the holder to take it, or does not give his assent subsequently, the drawer or indorser is discharged from his liability on the bill. But this does not apply to a partial acceptance, of which due notice has been given. When the drawer or indorser of a bill receives notice of a qualified acceptance, and does not within a reasonable time express his dissent to the holder, he is deemed to have given his assent. ³⁵⁴

Presentment for payment

34-105

According to s.45 all bills of exchange must, subject to certain provisions of the Act, ³⁵⁵ be presented for payment and if the holder fails to do so the drawer and indorsers are discharged. There are several differences between presentment for acceptance and for payment. First, presentment for acceptance is, mainly, personal as its purpose is to obtain the drawee's undertaking to pay. The bill must, therefore, be presented for acceptance at the drawee's place. Presentment for payment is, on the other hand, for the purpose of obtaining actual payment and the bill must be presented at the place at which it has been made payable. Secondly, the date for presentment for payment is, except in the case of bills payable on demand, determinable from the bill. Presentment for acceptance, on the other hand, can be made whenever suitable to the holder, provided he does so within reasonable time. ³⁵⁶

Due presentment

34-106

The rules as to what amounts to due presentment for payment are specified in s.45 of the Act, and are as follows: if the bill is not payable on demand, it must be presented for payment when it falls due. If it is payable on demand it must be presented within a reasonable time after its issue in order to render the drawer liable, and within a reasonable time after its indorsement in order to render the indorser liable. ³⁵⁷ The bill must be presented at a reasonable hour on a business day by the holder or his agent, either to the person designated in the bill as payer or to his agent. It must also be presented either at the place specified in the bill, or, if no such place is specified, at the place of business of the drawee, or if this place is not known, at his residence. ³⁵⁸ If no person who is authorised to pay or refuse the bill can be found at the proper place, no further presentment is required. If the bill has been accepted by two or more persons who are not partners, and no place for presentment is specified, it must be presented to all of them. If the acceptor dies the bill must be presented to his personal representative. When authorised by agreement or usage, presentment through the post office is sufficient.

Excuses for delay or non-presentment for payment

34-107

According to s.46(1) delay in presentment for payment is excused when it is caused by circumstances beyond the control of the holder and not imputable to his default, misconduct or negligence. ³⁵⁹ When the cause of the delay ceases to operate, the bill must be presented with reasonable diligence. According to s.46(2) presentment for payment is dispensed with in five cases. First, it is dispensed with where, after the exercise of reasonable diligence, presentment cannot be effected, e.g. where the bill is made "payable at Guildford" and the drawee neither resides nor has an office there. ³⁶⁰ Secondly, presentment is dispensed with where the drawee is a fictitious person. Thirdly, presentment is excused as regards the drawer, where the drawee is not bound towards the drawer to accept or pay the bill and the drawer has no reason to believe that it would be paid if presented. Thus, if the drawer's account with his bank is overdrawn, and he has not been granted an overdraft, presentment of his cheque for payment is not necessary. ³⁶¹ However, the mere fact that the holder has reason to believe that the bill will be dishonoured, does not excuse presentment. Thus, where the holder comes to know that the drawer has requested the acceptor to dishonour the bill, presentment is not excused. ³⁶² Fourthly, as regards the indorser, presentment is excused if the bill has been made for his accommodation and he has no reason to expect that it will be honoured. Finally, presentment for payment may also be waived, either expressly or impliedly. ³⁶³

Dishonour by non-payment

34-108

According to s.47(1) a bill is dishonoured by non-payment either when not paid on presentation or, if presentment for payment is excused, when the bill is overdue and unpaid. ³⁶⁴ According to s.47(2) when a bill is dishonoured by non-payment, the holder obtains an immediate right of recourse against the drawer and indorsers. ³⁶⁵ An action to enforce this right can, however, be brought only if the holder gives notice of dishonour or protests the bill, if either is required.

Notice of dishonor

34-109

According to s.48, when a bill is dishonoured by nonacceptance or non-payment, ³⁶⁶ the holder must send a notice of dishonour and any drawer or indorser to whom no such notice is given is discharged. ³⁶⁷ However, if a bill which is dishonoured by non-acceptance or non-payment comes subsequently into the hands of a holder in due course, his rights are not affected by the failure of a previous holder to send a notice of dishonour. If notice of dishonour is given when a bill is dishonoured by non-acceptance, there is no need for notice of dishonour for non-payment, unless the bill has been accepted after its original dishonour. The rules prescribing the requirements of a valid notice of dishonour are set out at length in s.49 of the Act. ³⁶⁸ It is clear from the language of s.48, that notice need not be given to the acceptor.

Excuses for delay or failure to give notice

34-110

According to s.50(1), delay in sending notice of dishonour is excused under the same circumstances as delay in presentment for payment. ³⁶⁹ According to s.50(2) notice of dishonour is dispensed with in the following cases: first, notice is dispensed with when after exercise of reasonable diligence it cannot be given, e.g. if the drawer's place of business is closed, ³⁷⁰ or if it fails to reach the drawer or indorser because it is lost in the post. ³⁷¹ Secondly, notice may be waived, expressly or impliedly, both before and after it becomes due. ³⁷² Thirdly, as regards the drawer, notice is dispensed with:

(a)

where the drawer and drawee are the same person;

- (b)
where the drawee is either a fictitious person or does not have capacity to contract;
- (c)
where the drawer is the person to whom the bill is presented for payment;
- (d)
where the drawee or acceptor is as between the drawer and himself not bound to honour the bill ³⁷³; and
- (e)
where the drawer has countermanded payment. ³⁷⁴

Fourthly, notice is dispensed with as regards an indorser:

- (a)
where the indorser is aware that the drawee is a fictitious person or one without capacity to contract;
- (b)
where the indorser is the person to whom the bill is presented for payment;
- (c)
where the bill was accepted or made for the indorser's accommodation.

According to s.52(3) notice of dishonour is not necessary in order to render the acceptor liable.

Noting or protest of bill

34-111

Under s.51(1) protest is optional when the dishonoured instrument is an inland bill, i.e. one which is, or on the face of it purports to be, either both drawn and payable within the British Islands or drawn within the British Islands on a person resident therein. ³⁷⁵ Under s.51(2) protest is required when a bill which both is and appears on its face to be a foreign bill, i.e. any bill other than an inland bill, is dishonoured either by non-acceptance or, if not dishonoured previously by non-acceptance, by non-payment. Failure duly to protest such a bill discharges the drawer and indorsers but not the acceptor. A protest is carried out by the presentation of the bill for acceptance or payment, after the dishonour, by a notary public. If the bill is dishonoured when presented by the notary, he makes a copy of it in his register and "notes" on the bill the date of presentment, the answer given and the amount of his fee. After "noting" the bill, a copy of the protest must be sent to each drawer and indorser. The correct procedure for a protest is specified in s.51(3)–(8) ³⁷⁶ of the Act. According to s.93, it is sufficient if the noting of the bill is within the specified time and the formal protest may be extended subsequently. The provisions concerning both excuses for the delay in and dispensation of noting or protest, which are specified in s.51(9), are similar to those prevailing in the case of notice of dishonour. According to s.94 of the Act, when the services of a notary public cannot be obtained, a householder or substantial resident of the place may, in the presence of two witnesses, give a certificate attesting the dishonour of the bill.

Duties of holder towards the acceptor or drawee

34-112

The performance of the duties of the holder, discussed above, is a condition precedent to the liability of the drawer and indorsers. The only duty which the holder owes to the acceptor or drawee is to exhibit the bill when the holder demands payment and to deliver it against payment.³⁷⁷ As the acceptor is the main obligee of the bill, his liability does not depend on the due sending of notice of dishonour or on the protest of the bill by the holder.³⁷⁸ Presentment for payment is not necessary to render the acceptor liable if the bill is either accepted generally or if the terms of a qualified acceptance do not require it.³⁷⁹ Moreover, even if the terms of a qualified acceptance require presentment for payment, the acceptor is not, in the absence of an express stipulation to that effect, discharged if the holder fails to present the bill for payment on the day it is due.³⁸⁰ But if the acceptance requires presentment for payment, the bill must be so presented before the holder's right of action against the acceptor matures.³⁸¹

^{372.} For detailed works on the subject, see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009); for the special aspects respecting the use of bills of exchange in international trade, see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), Ch.22.

^{346.} Soward v Palmer (1818) 8 Taunt. 277; Peacock v Purssell (1863) 32 L.J.C.P. 266.

^{347.} s.39(1), (2), (3). Subs.(4) makes special provisions applicable when a bill is payable elsewhere than at the residence or place of business of the drawee and the holder is unable to present it for acceptance before the day of maturity.

^{348.} s.40(1), (2).

^{349.} s.40(3). See, e.g. Fry v Hill (1817) 7 Taunt. 397; Shute v Robins (1828) 3 C. & P. 80; Mellish v Rawdon (1832) 9 Bing. 416; Straker v Graham (1839) 4 M. & W. 721; Ramchurn Mullick v Luchmeechund Radakissen (1854) 9 Moore P.C. 46; Godfray v Coulman (1859) 13 Moore P.C. 11.

^{350.} s.41(3).

^{351.} s.42.

^{352.} s.43(2). This right is subject to the provisions of s.65 (acceptance for honour). Before exercising this right of recourse the holder must perform certain duties, i.e. the sending of notice of dishonour (s.48) and, in certain cases, protesting the bill (s.51).

^{353.} That a bill may be accepted after its initial dishonour follows from s.18(2), (3).

^{354.} s.44. This section also provides that where a foreign bill has been accepted as to part, it must be protested as to the balance.

^{355.} i.e. ss.39(4), 46; and see further special provisions for the truncation of cheques: below, para.34-155.

^{356.} See Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.6–022.

^{357.} As regards the importance of due presentment for payment, see Yeoman Credit Ltd v Gregory [1963] 1 W.L.R. 343.

- 358. If the bill cannot be so presented, it may be presented to the drawer or to the acceptor wherever he may be found or at his last place of business or residence: r.4(d).
- 359. See, e.g. Rouquette v Overmann (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 525; Re Francke and Rasch [1918] 1 Ch. 470; Hamilton Finance Co v Coverley Westray Walbaum & Tosetti Ltd [1969] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 53, 72 (delay by post alleged but not proved).
- 360. Hardy v Woodroffe (1818) 2 Stark. 319.
- 361. Wirth v Austin (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 689; Re Bethell (1887) 34 Ch. D. 561; Fiorentino Comm Giuseppe Srl v Farnesi [2005] EWHC 160 (Ch), [2005] 1 W.L.R. 3718.
- 362. Hill v Heap (1823) Dow & Ry.N.P. 57. See also Baker v Birch (1811) 3 Camp. 107.
- 363. As regards waiver of presentment of an accommodation bill, see Reisler v Kulcsar, 57 D.L.R. (2d) 730 (1966).
- 364. In Commissioner for Inland Revenue v Thomas Cook (NZ) Ltd [2003] 2 N.Z.L.R. 296, the Court of Appeal of New Zealand held that a demand does not have to be made in order to cause a stale cheque, presentment of which is dispensed with, to be "overdue and unpaid"; although this was later doubted, without deciding the matter, by the Privy Council on appeal in the same case: [2004] UKPC 53 at [11].
- 365. This right of recourse is subject to the provisions of ss.65 to 68.
- 366. As regards notice sent before actual dishonour, see Eaglehill Ltd v J Needham Builders Ltd [1973] A.C. 992.
- 367. If the holder presents the bill for payment through a collecting bank he is entitled to await its return before giving notice: Lombard Banking Ltd v Central Garage and Engineering Co Ltd [1963] 1 Q.B. 220.
- 368. Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), paras 6–096 et seq.
- 369. As to which, see para.34-107, above.
- 370. Allen v Edmundson (1848) 2 Exch. 719, 723; Studdy v Beesty (1889) 60 L.T. 647, 649.
- 371. Mackay v Judkins (1858) 1 F. & F. 208.
- 372. Lombard Banking Ltd v Central Garage and Engineering Co Ltd [1963] 1 Q.B. 220.
- 373. See, e.g. Lafitte v Slatter (1830) 6 Bing. 623; Wirth v Austin (1875) L.R. 10 C.P. 689.
- 374. And see Barclays Bank Ltd v WJ Simms Son & Cooke (Southern) Ltd [1980] 1 Q.B. 677, 702–703.
- 375. s.4, which also defines the term British Islands. As regards this definition, see below, para.34-197.
- 376. As amended by s.1 of the Bills of Exchange (Time of Noting) Act 1917. See Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), paras 6–143 et seq.
- 377. s.52(4).
- 378. s.52(3).
- 379. s.52(1), (2).
- 380. s.52(2).

381. Halstead v Skelton (1843) 5 Q.B. 86, 93–94.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(b) - Bills of Exchange ³²
(vi) - Liabilities of Parties

Liability of acceptor

34-113

A bill of exchange does not constitute an assignment of funds which the drawer has in the hands of the drawee, and the holder does not usually have a cause of action against a drawee who has not accepted the bill. ³⁸² Thus, the holder of a cheque has no action for its dishonour against the drawee bank. ³⁸³ However, when the drawee accepts the bill, he undertakes to pay it according to the tenor of his acceptance. ³⁸⁴ The acceptor is estopped from denying to a holder in due course:

(a)

the existence of the drawer, the genuineness of the drawer's signature and his capacity and authority to draw the bill;

(b)

if the bill is payable to the drawer's order, the capacity of the drawer to indorse, but not the genuineness and validity of his indorsement;

(c)

if the bill is payable to the order of a third party, the existence of the payee and his capacity to indorse the bill, but not the genuineness and validity of his indorsement. ³⁸⁵

It should be stressed that these estoppels operate only in favour of a holder in due course, and a mere holder is not entitled to plead them. ³⁸⁶ As the provisions of the Act are not exhaustive, a holder may in certain cases be able to rely on a common law estoppel to preclude the acceptor from raising certain defences. Thus, if before discounting a bill, the holder were assured by the acceptor that a certain indorsement was genuine, the acceptor could not subsequently allege that it was a forgery. ³⁸⁷

Liability of drawer and indorser

34-114

By drawing the bill, the drawer engages that it will be honoured by the drawee when duly presented, and that if it be dishonoured he will compensate the holder or any indorser who is compelled to pay it, provided the required proceedings on dishonour are taken. ³⁸⁸ A similar engagement is undertaken by each indorser to all subsequent indorsers and to the holder. ³⁸⁹ The drawer is precluded from denying to a holder in due course the existence of the payee and his capacity to indorse the bill, but not the genuineness of his indorsement. ³⁹⁰ The indorser is estopped from denying to a holder in due course the genuineness and regularity in all respects of the drawer's signature and of all previous indorsements. ³⁹¹ As against an immediate or subsequent indorsee, the indorser is precluded from denying that, at the time of his indorsement, the bill was valid and subsisting and that he had a good title to it. ³⁹² In effect, both the drawer and the indorser undertake that the bill will be honoured by the drawee and, for most purposes, are in a position similar to that of joint guarantors of a debt. Thus, when the bill is dishonoured, the holder is entitled to sue the acceptor, the drawer or the indorser, or all of them together. The drawer and indorser are entitled to the equities of a surety. ³⁹³

Other signatures

34-115

Where a person signs a bill otherwise than as drawer or acceptor, he incurs the liabilities of an indorser to a holder in due course. ³⁹⁴ His liability, though, is incurred only towards subsequent parties. Even if the indorsement is executed for security purposes, the indorser does not assume liability to any holder who, initially, became a party to the bill before him. ³⁹⁵ Furthermore, the indorser's liability is subject to the holder's due performance of the formalities prescribed by the Act in respect of dishonoured bills. On these two points, the position of an indorser differs from that of a guarantor, whose liability would be concurrent with the acceptor's. ³⁹⁶ But whilst a guarantee of a bill, which is known as an aval, is recognised in countries which have adopted the Uniform Law on Bills of the Geneva Convention as well as in the United States, ³⁹⁷ the prevailing view is that an aval is not effective in English law. ³⁹⁸ However, in G & H Montage GmbH v Irvani, ³⁹⁹ Saville J. held that English law would uphold the validity of an aval, if its validity was recognised by the foreign law system governing the instrument. His Lordship further observed that the words commonly used in an aval, e.g. "payment guaranteed", constituted an adequate memorandum within the meaning of the Statute of Frauds. His decision was affirmed, on the same grounds, by the Court of Appeal. ⁴⁰⁰ This important decision indicates that at least one of the objections traditionally raised against the recognition of an aval in English may not be of substance.

Indorsement for collection

34-116

Not every signature appearing on the back of the bill has the effect of an indorsement. It may be executed for the purpose of facilitating the collection and not the negotiation of the instrument. A person who appends his signature for this purpose is not an indorser and does not assume liability on the bill. Usually he manifests his intention by adding to his signature words indicating that the bill is transmitted solely for collection. ⁴⁰¹ In other cases the same intention may be inferred from the circumstances. Thus, it was held by an Australian authority that the signature of the payee on a cheque payable to himself "or bearer" was not to be regarded as an indorsement as such a bill was transferable by mere delivery. The payee's signature was therefore not required to effect transfer and, by signing the bill on its back, he did not purport to assume the liability of an indorser. ⁴⁰² But this decision may be questioned as, in such a case, the payee's signature may be executed at the transferee's request for the very purpose of rendering the payee liable to pay the bill in the event of its dishonour by the drawee. It is arguable that whether or not a particular signature constitutes an indorsement depends on the signer's intention. In the absence of proof to the contrary, s.56 leads to the conclusion that a signature executed by a person other than the drawer or the drawee constitutes an indorsement.

Measure of damages for dishonor

34-117

The damages for the dishonour of a bill payable in the United Kingdom consist of:

- (a) the amount of the bill;
- (b) interest thereon either, if the bill is payable on demand, from the date of presentment, or in the case of any other bill, from the date of maturity; and
- (c) the expenses of noting or of protest, when protest is required. ⁴⁰³

Section 57 does not specify the rate of interest to be applied. When calculating the appropriate rate of interest for a period from the date of the cause of action to the date of the judgment, the rate payable on judgment debts is a convenient starting point. ⁴⁰⁴ However, the usual practice in the Commercial Court is to award interest at 1 per cent above base rate, unless such rate would be unfair to one or other of the parties. ⁴⁰⁵ For small claims, it is easier to claim interest at the judgment rate. ⁴⁰⁶

Foreign currency bills

34-118

The rule prescribed by s.57 is adequate in respect of bills payable in pounds sterling. Problems arise in respect of bills payable in a foreign currency as, fundamentally, the conversion of the amount so expressed can be based on the rate of exchange prevailing on one of four possible dates:

- (i) the date on which the bill is payable;
- (ii) the date of commencement of proceedings to enforce the bill;
- (iii) the date of judgment; and
- (iv) the date on which payment is actually made.

Traditionally English law favoured the first alternative ⁴⁰⁷ and, until 1977, this was reflected in ss.57(2) and 72(4) of the Act. Under the former provision the holder of a bill dishonoured abroad was entitled to claim the amount of "re-exchange" of the bill with interest thereon until the actual time of payment. "Re-exchange" meant the amount for which a sight draft had to be drawn at the time and place of dishonour in order to realise the amount of the bill and the expenses resulting from dishonour taking into account the rate of exchange prevailing at that date. ⁴⁰⁸ Under the latter provision the amount of a bill expressed in foreign currency and drawn out of the United Kingdom but payable within the realm was, in the absence of stipulation to the contrary, to be calculated according to the rate of exchange for sight drafts at the place of payment on the date of maturity. ⁴⁰⁹

New rule

34-119

Both ss.57(2) and 72(4) further reflected the principle under which the judgment of an English court for the payment of money had to be expressed in pounds sterling. This rule was, however, reversed by the House of Lords in Miliangos v George Frank (Textiles) Ltd ⁴¹⁰ in which a foreign seller sued an English buyer for the payment of an amount which was expressed in the contract of sale in Swiss francs and in respect of which the buyer had accepted bills of exchange payable in Switzerland. It was held that the amount payable by the English buyer was to be determined on the basis of the rate of exchange prevailing at the date of actual payment, i.e. the date on which actual enforcement of the judgment was ordered. The judgment itself was expressed in Swiss francs.

Scope of application

34-120

At one stage it was thought that this new rule, which enabled English courts to order the payment of an amount expressed in foreign currency, was applicable only in respect of contracts and bills of exchange governed by a foreign proper law. But in Barclays Bank International Ltd v Levin Bros (Bradford) Ltd, ⁴¹¹ Mocatta J. held that the same principle applied in respect of a bill of exchange drawn in US dollars for the price of goods supplied by an American exporter to an English purchaser. His Lordship reached this conclusion although the bill was payable in London, although the proper law governing the buyer's acceptance was that of England and although the currency of payment was, accordingly, the pound sterling. This decision has been reinforced by the repeal of ss.57(2) and 72(4) of the Act. ⁴¹²

Transferor by delivery

34-121

Where the holder of a bill payable to bearer negotiates it by delivery without indorsing it, he is called a "transferor by delivery". ⁴¹³ A transferor by delivery is not liable on the bill, and if it is dishonoured cannot be sued on it even by the immediate transferee. ⁴¹⁴ However, by negotiating the bill, the transferor by delivery warrants to his immediate transferee (provided the latter is a holder for value), that the bill is what it purports to be, that he has a right to transfer it and that he is not aware of any fact which renders it valueless. ⁴¹⁵ Thus, if it turns out that the bill is a forgery and hence worthless, the transferor by delivery is obliged to reimburse the transferee. ⁴¹⁶ The holder of a bill who presents it for payment to the drawer is not a "transferor" and does not warrant its authenticity. ⁴¹⁷

^{32.} For detailed works on the subject, see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009); for the special aspects respecting the use of bills of exchange in international trade, see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), Ch.22.

^{382.} s.53(1). That the drawing of the bill does not constitute an equitable assignment follows from Shand v Du Buisson (1874) L.R. 18 Eq. 283, 288–289. The position is different in Scotland: s.53(2); as to which, see Williams v Williams, 1980 S.L.T. 25 Sh Ct holding that a countermanded cheque would not be effective to constitute an assignment; Sutherland v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc 1997 S.L.T. 329 OH.

^{383.} Hopkinson v Forster (1874) L.R. 19 Eq. 74; Schroeder v Central Bank (1876) 34 L.T. 735. But see s.74(3).

^{384.} s.54(1).

- 385. s.54(2) (but subject to Pt 4A of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, which deal with presentation by electronic means: see below, paras 34-153—34-154).
- 386. Ayres v Moore [1940] 1 K.B. 278.
- 387. Brook v Hook (1871) L.R. 6 Ex. 89, 99, and cases cited in para.34-053, above.
- 388. s.55(1)(a). As regards a bill indorsed for accommodation before its having been signed by the drawer, see Bank of Nova Scotia v Hogg, 24 O.R. (2d) 494 (1979) Can.
- 389. s.55(2)(a). But note that under s.16(1) the drawer or indorser may insert in the bill words negating his liability.
- 390. s.55(1)(b).
- 391. s.55(2)(b).
- 392. s.55(2)(c).
- 393. Duncan Fox & Co v North and South Wales Bank (1880) 6 App. Cas. 1, especially at 19–20. See also Rouquette v Overmann (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 525, 537; Double Diamond Bowling Supply Ltd v Eglinton Bowling Ltd [1963] 2 O.R. 222, 224–226; Re Securitibank Ltd [1978] 1 N.Z.L.R. 97, 212; Guaranty Trust Co of Canada v Seller's Oil Field Service Ltd (1984) 55 A.R. 348 at [13]–[15]; Scholefield Goodman & Sons Ltd v Zyngier [1984] V.R. 445, affirmed [1986] A.C. 562 PC. And see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.7–021. See also below, paras 45-125 et seq.
- 394. s.56.
- 395. Steele v M'Kinlay (1880) 5 App. Cas. 745; Stagg, Mantle & Co v Brodrick (1895) 12 T.L.R. 12.
- 396. Stagg, Mantle & Co v Brodrick, above; Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), paras 7–031 et seq.
- 397. ULB, arts 30–32; Uniform Commercial Code (USA) s.3–419 (Revised Version), under which the aval is treated as a specie of accommodation signature and binding as such: Ellinger, Encyclopedia of Comparative Law (Hamburg, 2001), Vol.IX, para.389.
- 398. Jackson v Hudson (1810) 2 Camp. 447, 448; Steele v M'Kinlay (1880) 5 App. Cas. 745 at 772.
- 399. [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1285.
- 400. [1990] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 14; see also, as regards avals on foreign bills, Banco Atlantico SA v British Bank of the Middle East [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 504; and see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), paras 7–039—7–041.
- 401. Keene v Beard (1860) 8 C.B.(N.S.) 372, 382; Gerald McDonald & Co v Nash [1924] A.C. 625, 634.
- 402. Miller Associates (Australia) Pty Ltd v Bennington Pty Ltd (1975) 7 A.L.R. 144; and see Chappenden (1981) 55 A.L.J. 135.
- 403. s.57(1). The claim is in damages and not in debt (Standard Chartered Bank v Dorchester LNG (2) Ltd [2014] EWCA Civ 1382 at [40]). If the law which governs the party's contract on the instrument is part of the law of the UK, then the measure of damages will be determined in accordance with s.57, but if the law which governs that contract is the law of some foreign country, s.57 will not apply, and the measure of damages will be determined by that law: Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange, 17th edn (2009), para.7–052, applied by Blair J. in Karafarin Bank v Dara (No.2) [2009] EWHC 3265 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 236 at [25]–[27].

- 404. See the notes to the CPR 1998 in the White Book 2015, para.7.0.16.
- 405. Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc v Maclaine Watson & Co Ltd [1990] 3 All E.R. 723. There is no presumption to the effect that base rate plus 1 per cent is the appropriate measure and awards of 2 per cent above base rate are common: see the notes to the CPR 1988 in the White Book 2015, para.7.0.16.
- 406. CPR Pt 12 r.6 (default judgments). On claims for interest generally, see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.7–047.
- 407. So explained by Lord Wright in Salim Nasrallah Khoury (Syndic in Bankruptcy) v Khayat [1943] A.C. 507, 512–513.
- 408. Re Commercial Bank of South Australia (1887) 36 Ch. D. 522, 528. And see Re Gillespie (1886) 18 Q.B.D. 286.
- 409. But note that it has been suggested that s.72(4) was not meant to cover cases of default: Barclays Bank International Ltd v Levin Bros (Bradford) Ltd [1977] Q.B. 270.
- 410. [1976] A.C. 443, especially at 468–469.
- 411. [1977] Q.B. 270.
- 412. Administration of Justice Act 1977 s.4.
- 413. s.58(1).
- 414. s.58(2). But see s.2 of the Cheques Act 1957.
- 415. s.58(3). Note that his liability is not incurred towards subsequent parties: Miller Associates (Australia) Pty Ltd v Bennington Pty Ltd (1975) 7 A.L.R. 144.
- 416. Gurney v Womersley (1854) 4 E. & B. 133.
- 417. Guaranty Trust Co of New York v Hannay & Co [1918] 2 K.B. 623, 631–632.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(b) - Bills of Exchange ³²
(vii) - Discharge of Bill

Discharge defined

34-122

A bill is discharged:

- (a)
by payment in due course (s.59);
- (b)
when the acceptor becomes the holder of it at or after its maturity (s.61);
- (c)
by express waiver or renunciation (s.62);
- (d)
by cancellation (s.63); and
- (e)
to a certain extent, where a bill is materially altered without the assent of the parties liable on it (s.64).

The effect of the discharge of a bill is to extinguish all rights of action based thereon, as the bill ceases to be a negotiable instrument. ⁴¹⁸ However, the position of a person who, in good faith and for valuable consideration takes a discharged bill that does not show on its face that it has been discharged, gives rise to difficulties. It has been suggested that such a person could claim to be a holder in due course and that he may be entitled to enforce the bill. ⁴¹⁹ It should, however, be recollected that a person is a holder in due course only if he takes a bill before it is overdue. The problem could, thus, arise only in the case of a bill payable on demand or, in the case of any other bill, if it was paid before maturity. In these cases it could, perhaps, be argued that an acceptor who failed to indicate on the bill that it had been discharged, should be estopped from pleading this.

Payment in due course

34-123

According to s.59(1), a bill is discharged by payment in due course, i.e. when the drawee pays it at or after maturity to a holder, and does this in good faith and without notice that the holder's title is defective. A holder is defined as the payee or indorsee of a bill who has its possession or the bearer.⁴²⁰ It is, therefore, doubtful whether payment to a person who obtained the bill under a forged indorsement of the payee constitutes a discharge.⁴²¹ It has been held that payment by the acceptor in good faith to a thief, who had stolen a bill payable to bearer, constituted payment in due course.⁴²² Payment in good faith by the acceptor to an indorsee who has obtained the bill by fraud constitutes a discharge.⁴²³

Payment by drawer or indorser

34-124

When a bill (not being an accommodation bill)⁴²⁴ is paid by the drawer or an indorser, it is not discharged. If a bill payable to a third party is paid by the drawer, he is entitled to enforce payment against the acceptor but may not re-issue the bill. If a bill payable to the drawer's own order is indorsed by him to another person but subsequently is paid by the drawer himself, he is restored to his former rights against the acceptor and antecedent parties; he is entitled to strike out his own indorsement and again negotiate the bill. This is also the position of an indorser who pays a bill.⁴²⁵ When a drawer or indorser pays a bill to a holder, he becomes entitled to the benefit of securities given to the holder by the acceptor. The reason for this is that the drawer and indorsers are considered to be guarantors of the acceptor's debt to the holder, and thus are subrogated to the holder's (creditor's) security rights vis-à-vis the debtor.⁴²⁶

Claims for repayment by drawee or acceptor.⁴²⁷

34-125

The position of a drawee or an acceptor who has paid a bill to a person not entitled to it, gives rise to problems. When such a drawee is a banker, he may be entitled to debit his customer's account despite his having paid the cheque or bill to an unauthorised person.⁴²⁸ Where the drawee does not acquire such a right, he may attempt to claim repayment of the amount of the cheque or of the bill from the payee as money paid under a mistake of fact. Moreover, even where the drawee is entitled to debit the drawer's account with the amount paid on the bill, the drawee may be induced by commercial considerations to seek a remedy against the payee. The drawee's right to demand repayment from the payee depends on the facts of each case; the principal factors to be taken into account are the nature of the mistake that induced the drawee to honour the instrument and the capacity in which the payee presented it. The drawee is not entitled to demand repayment from a payee who, having presented the bill as an agent, has remitted the proceeds to his principal.⁴²⁹ The drawee stands a better chance of succeeding against a payee who has obtained payment for himself. It is well established that restitution will be ordered against a payee who obtains payment with the knowledge that the drawee is acting under a mistake as to the facts.⁴³⁰ If the payee receives payment in good faith, the drawee or acceptor's rights depend on the nature of the mistake.

Nature of mistake

34-126

To be operative, the mistake must be material. Some authorities suggest that, to be material, a mistake must have some direct bearing on the transaction between the drawee and the payee and that a mistake concerning an extraneous fact, affecting the legal relationship between the drawee and the drawer, is usually irrelevant.⁴³¹ But in *Barclays Bank Ltd v WJ Simms Son & Cooke (Southern) Ltd*⁴³² Robert Goff J. described this view as too narrow. His Lordship said that a mistake is material if it leads the bank to the erroneous conclusion that it has the customer's mandate to effect payment. A mistake which does not directly or indirectly mislead the bank as regards its mandate to pay is inoperative. ⁴³³ Goff J.'s analysis derives support from cases according to which the bank is not entitled to reclaim payment made as a result of a mistaken belief that the customer's account has an adequate balance for meeting the instrument. ⁴³⁴ In such a case the bank actually complies with the customer's order to pay on the basis of a mistake. In doing so, it remains within the scope of its authority. His Lordship's opinion derives further support from cases which hold that the bank is entitled to reclaim payment if it has overlooked the customer's countermand even if the payee too has been unaware of the stop order at the time of payment. ⁴³⁵ In such a case the bank makes payment without having its customer's mandate.

Mistake respecting instrument

34-127

The drawee or acceptor is a fortiori entitled to recover payment where the mistake relates to the instrument itself, e.g. where the drawer's signature or a subsequent indorsement is forged or where the amount of the instrument has been fraudulently raised. There are, however, some cases which suggest that even in this type of case the drawee is unable to claim repayment of the amount paid, except where he notifies the payee of the fraud on the very day of payment. ⁴³⁶ But these cases have been questioned; it will be convenient to consider the reasoning in the authorities in point.

34-128

Three reasons are canvassed in the cases which deny the drawee's right to demand restitution of an amount paid on the basis of a mistake of fact relating to a negotiable instrument presented by the payee. First, it is suggested that when the drawee pays the instrument he induces the payee to believe that it is valid; the drawee is therefore precluded from subsequently asserting a forgery or irregularity in the bill. ⁴³⁷ Secondly, at least one authority suggests that the drawee is unable to recover where he is negligent at the time of payment, e.g. where he fails to scrutinise the drawer's signature. ⁴³⁸ Obviously, this argument would enable the drawee to recover the amount paid where he had not acted negligently, e.g. where the forgery was executed so skilfully as to defy detection. Thirdly, it has been said that the drawee loses his right to recover when the payee changes his position in reliance on the payment of the instrument; it is further asserted in this context that, unless the payee is notified about the forgery without any delay, his position is automatically altered to his detriment because a lapse of time deprives him of the opportunity to serve due notice of dishonour on previous parties. ⁴³⁹ As delay in giving notice is, however, excused in cases of this type, ⁴⁴⁰ this reasoning is not plausible. It has been suggested that the most convincing argument in support of the cases in question is that the holder of a bill or of a cheque is entitled to know promptly upon presentation whether the instrument is to be honoured or not. ⁴⁴¹ On this view, the cases in question establish an exception, concerning payment of amounts due on negotiable instruments, to the general rule that entitles the payer to claim repayment of an amount paid under a mistake of fact despite his having been negligent in failing to ascertain the correct position and regardless of a change to the detriment in the payee's position. ⁴⁴² The existence of such an exception to the general rule has, however, been questioned in two cases. ⁴⁴³ It is there suggested that, even if the cases establishing the exception constitute good law, the exception, as based on these cases, is confined to the payment under a mistake of fact of genuine negotiable instruments and does not affect the payment of instruments which are forgeries in toto and hence not negotiable. One difficulty concerning this narrow interpretation is that in many cases the holder has no means of ascertaining whether the instrument concerned is a total forgery (such as a bill bearing a forged signature of the drawer) or a valid instrument.

Attempt to reconcile

34-129

⚠ An attempt to reconcile the earlier authorities is to be found in Robert Goff J.'s decision in Barclays Bank Ltd v WJ Simms Son & Cooke (Southern) Ltd. ⁴⁴⁴ The drawer of a cheque stopped it when he was informed that a receiver was appointed under a mortgage debenture issued by the payee. Due to a clerical error, the bank paid the cheque to the receiver. When the bank discovered its mistake, it reccredited the drawer's account and claimed repayment. Giving judgment for the bank, Goff J. said that, on the basis of the "formidable line of authority" certain simple principles could be deduced ⁴⁴⁵ .

"(1) If a person pays money to another under a mistake of fact which causes him to make the payment, he is prima facie entitled to recover it as money paid under a mistake of fact. (2) His claim may however fail if (a) the payer intends that the payee shall have the money at all events, whether the fact be true or false, or is deemed in law so to intend; or (b) the payment is made for good consideration, in particular if the money is paid to discharge, and does discharge, a debt owed to the payee (or a principal on whose behalf he is authorised to receive the payment) by the payer or by a third party by whom he is authorised to discharge the debt; or (c) the payee has changed his position in good faith, or is deemed in law to have done so."

Effect of mistake

34-130

These rules led his Lordship to certain conclusions concerning the effect of a mistake of fact resulting in the payment of a cheque. If, despite the existence of the mistake, the bank paid the cheque in compliance with its customer's mandate, it would be entitled to debit his account. The payment involved would further discharge the customer's debt to the payee. Goff J. concluded that, accordingly, the bank would not be entitled to claim the amount back on the basis of its having been paid under a mistake of fact. ⁴⁴⁶ But if the bank paid the instrument without having a mandate to do so, it would not be entitled to debit the customer's account. Unless the customer ratified payment, the bank would be entitled to recover the amount paid from the payee. ⁴⁴⁷ In the case in question the balance standing to customer's account was adequate for meeting the cheque. But Goff J. intimated that his decision would have been the same even if, on the basis of its mistake, the bank had permitted the customer's account to become overdrawn. ⁴⁴⁸

General recognition of defence of change in position

34-131

The two substantive defences for actions for the recovery of money paid under a mistake of fact, applicable respectively where a bank pays the funds received by it to its customer and the cases respecting payments of negotiable instruments, constitute special applications of the general doctrine under which money is not recoverable from a payee who has changed his position in good faith in reliance on the payment made to him. These two special defences were recognised although the general doctrine or defence was, for many years, held inapplicable in English law. ⁴⁴⁹ The law in point was, however, finally changed by the House of Lords in 1991 in Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd. ⁴⁵⁰ C, who was a junior partner in a firm of solicitors, misappropriated money from the firm's client account and used it for the purchase of gaming chips with which he gambled at the premises of the defendant club. Occasionally he won and paid part of his gains to the credit of the client account; but in most instances he lost. All in all, C lost £154,695 out of the total amount of £323,224 stolen by him from the firm. The firm brought an action to recover the money from the club. Reversing the decision of the majority of the Court of Appeal, the House of Lords held that the supply of the chips by the club's cashier to C did not constitute the furnishing of a separate lawful consideration by the club. C's transactions with the club involved gambling and, as the contracts so made were void, the club had not furnished value for the funds. The firm was, accordingly, entitled to recover. This finding gave rise to the question of whether the firm was entitled to recover the total amount stolen and placed by C on the betting table or only the net amount lost by him.

Decision in Lipkin Gorman

34-132

Finding that the club had changed its position to the extent of the amounts paid out to C, their Lordships held that only the net amount won by the club was recoverable. In reaching this conclusion, their Lordships expressly gave effect to the doctrine under which an action in restitution does not lie against a person who has in good faith changed his position in reliance on the funds received. In such a case:

“... the injustice of requiring [the defendant] so to repay outweighs the injustice of denying the plaintiff restitution. If the plaintiff pays money to the defendant under a mistake of fact, and the defendant then, acting in good faith, pays the money or part of it to charity, it is unjust to require the defendant to make restitution to the extent that he has so changed his position. Likewise, ... if a thief steals ... money and pays it to a third party, who gives it away to charity, that party should have a good defence to an action for money had and received. In other words, bona fide change of position should of itself be a good defence in cases such as these.” ⁴⁵¹

Present scope of doctrine

34-133

The House of Lords has, thus, introduced the defence of the payee's change in position as a general defence to restitutionary claims. ⁴⁵² Their Lordship emphasised, at the same time, that not every change in a payee's position would, as a matter of course, entitle him to plead the defence in question. Lord Goff of Chieveley emphasised ⁴⁵³:

“I am most anxious that, in recognising this defence to actions of restitution, nothing should be said at this stage to inhibit the development of the defence on a case to case basis, in the usual way. It is, of course, plain that the defence is not open to one who has changed his position in bad faith, as where the defendant has paid away the money with knowledge of the facts entitling the plaintiff to restitution; and it is commonly accepted that the defence should not be open to a wrongdoer.”

Lord Goff added that the mere fact that the payee had spent the money did not, of itself, involve a change in his position that would bring the doctrine into operation. The “expenditure might in any event have been incurred by him in the ordinary course of things”. ⁴⁵⁴ The payee must have incurred expense that he would otherwise not have incurred ⁴⁵⁵ or have acted in such a way as to render it unjust that he should now be compelled to refund the payment. ⁴⁵⁶ Where the payee still retains the benefit of goods or services that he purchased, he may still be held to have been unjustly enriched to their value as a result of the payment. ⁴⁵⁷

Assessment

34-134

⚠ It is to be expected that the principles governing the change of position defence will be refined and articulated in due course. ⁴⁵⁸ ⚠ It will then be seen also whether the two specific applications of the doctrine, discussed earlier in respect of the payment of funds by a collecting bank to its customer and as regards payments of negotiable instruments, will be redefined in the light of the mainstream of future cases expounding the general doctrine. In the meantime, it is advisable to regard the existing cases, respecting the two specific applications of the doctrine, as basically unaffected. ⁴⁵⁹

Tracing order

34-135

⚠ Where the payee of an amount, paid by a bank under a mistake of fact, is insolvent, the bank may wish to obtain a tracing order so as to enable it to recover the amount involved in specie. Thus, in Chase Manhattan Bank NA v Israel-British Bank (London) Ltd ⁴⁶⁰ the plaintiff, a New York bank, was asked by one of its correspondents to pay a certain amount to the M Bank, another New York bank, for the account of the defendant, an English bank. Due to an error, the plaintiff paid the amount twice. Before the plaintiff noticed its error, the defendant went into liquidation. Granting a tracing order, Goulding J. observed that such an order would be available both under the laws of New York and of England. His Lordship rejected the argument that an equitable tracing order would be granted only where a fiduciary relationship existed between the payer and the payee at the time payment took place. It was “enough that ... the payment into the wrong hands itself gave rise to a fiduciary relationship”. ⁴⁶¹ Such a relationship eventuated because a person who paid money to another under a factual mistake retained an equitable property in it and the payee’s conscience would be subjected to a fiduciary duty to respect this proprietary right. ⁴⁶² ⚠

34-136

Goulding J.’s reasoning has since been strongly criticised (obiter) by Lord Browne-Wilkinson in Westdeutsche Landesbank Girozentrale v Islington LBC. ⁴⁶³ Chase Manhattan seems no longer to represent good law. ⁴⁶⁴ There is no basis for the contention that, in the ordinary course, a person retains an equitable (or any) interest in money paid away. Nevertheless, Lord Browne-Wilkinson did concede that, despite Goulding J.’s faulty reasoning, Chase Manhattan may well have been rightly decided. The recipient bank had known of the mistake made by the paying bank within two days of the receipt of the money. Lord Browne-Wilkinson concluded (at 715):

“Although the mere receipt of money, in ignorance of the mistake, gives rise to no trust, the retention of the moneys after the recipient bank learned of the mistake may well have given rise to a constructive trust.” ⁴⁶⁵

Acceptor holder at maturity

34-137

If at or after maturity of a bill the acceptor becomes its holder, in his own right, the bill is discharged. ⁴⁶⁶ Thus, if a bill is accepted jointly by three drawees, and is at maturity indorsed to one of them, it is discharged, and the remaining acceptors cannot be sued on the bill, although they may be liable to contribute as joint debtors. ⁴⁶⁷ If the acceptor of a bill becomes the executor of the holder, the bill is discharged. ⁴⁶⁸ However, this would probably not be the case if the acceptor became an administrator, as he would then not hold the bill “in his own right”. ⁴⁶⁹

Waiver

34-138

A bill is discharged if at or after its maturity the holder expressly and absolutely renounces his rights against the acceptor either in writing or by delivering the bill to him. ⁴⁷⁰ The bill is likewise discharged if it is delivered to the acceptor’s executors or administrators with an intention that it be discharged. In

Edwards v Walters, ⁴⁷¹ where the holder of a promissory note voluntarily delivered it up, after the death of the maker, to a devisee of his real estate, which he had charged with the payment of his debts, the delivery was held not to operate as a renunciation of the note. The court indicated, however, that if the devisee had been appointed executor or administrator the bill would have been discharged. In Rimalt v Cartwright ⁴⁷² it was held that the acceptance by the holder of an offer by the acceptor to pay a composition was not a “renunciation in writing” of the holder’s rights. The liabilities of any party to a bill may in like manner be renounced by the holder before, at, or after its maturity; but such renunciation does not affect the rights of a holder in due course. ⁴⁷³

Cancellation

34-139

A bill is discharged by an apparent, intentional, cancellation of it by the holder or his agent. ⁴⁷⁴ In like manner the holder or his agent may discharge any party liable on the bill by cancelling his signature. In such a case any indorser, who would have had a right of recourse against the party whose signature is cancelled, is also discharged. ⁴⁷⁵ A cancellation is effective only if it is obvious: where a bill, which had been torn into two pieces, was picked up and mended, a holder in due course, who took it subsequently, was allowed to enforce it against the acceptor. ⁴⁷⁶ A holder may prove that a cancellation was made unintentionally or under a mistake of fact or without his authority, and in that case it is inoperative. ⁴⁷⁷

Alteration of bill

34-140

Where a bill or acceptance is materially altered without the assent of all parties, the bill is, by the terms of s.64(1), avoided, except as against a party who has himself made, authorised or assented to the alteration and subsequent indorsers. ⁴⁷⁸ The section provides that where a bill has been materially altered, but the alteration is not apparent, and the bill is in the hands of a holder in due course, he may avail himself of the bill as if it had not been altered, and may enforce payment of it according to its original tenor. An alteration is considered apparent, if it would be observed by a person who intends becoming a holder of it and who scrutinises it with reasonable care. ⁴⁷⁹ The effect of this section is that a holder in due course can enforce a bill according to its original terms. Thus, where a bill has been altered from £500 to £3,500, a holder in due course is entitled to enforce payment of £500. ⁴⁸⁰ If, before being aware of the alteration of the amount of a cheque, the drawee bank pays a holder in due course the amount as altered, it may be entitled to recover from him the difference between this amount and the original one. ⁴⁸¹

34-141

The following alterations are, by s.64(2), material: any alteration of the date, ⁴⁸² the sum payable, the time of payment, the place of payment, and, where a bill has been accepted generally, the addition of a place of payment without the acceptor’s assent. The list of alterations specified in this subsection is not, however, exhaustive and whether a specific alteration is material or not is a question of fact. ⁴⁸³ An alteration which is not deliberately made by any person, but is caused by accident, does not invalidate the bill. ⁴⁸⁴ An alteration made before a bill is completely issued, e.g. the alteration by the drawer of a purported place of drawing inserted by an acceptor, who has accepted a bill before its being signed by the drawer, is not a material alteration, ⁴⁸⁵ although the same alteration may be material if made after the bill is properly issued. ⁴⁸⁶

^{32.} For detailed works on the subject, see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009); for the special aspects respecting the use of bills of exchange in international trade, see Benjamin’s Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), Ch.22.

- 418. Harmer v Steele (1849) 4 Exch. 1, 13; Burchfield v Moore (1854) 23 L.J.Q.B. 261.
- 419. Glasscock v Balls (1889) 24 Q.B.D. 13, 15. See Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.8–003.
- 420. s.2.
- 421. See above, para.34-053. An exception applies in the case of cheques. See s.60 discussed below in paras 34-351 et seq.
- 422. Smith v Sheppard (1776), cited in Chitty on Bills, 11th edn, p.278.
- 423. Robarts v Tucker (1851) 16 Q.B. 560, 576–577, 579.
- 424. Which is discharged by the party for whose accommodation it has been made: s.59(3).
- 425. s.59(2).
- 426. Duncan Fox & Co v North and South Wales Bank (1880) 6 App. Cas. 1. See also n.393 above.
- 427. For a detailed discussion, see E.P Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), Ch.12. Note that the rights of the acceptor are also affected by s.54(2), as to which see above, para.34-113.
- 428. s.60, discussed in paras 34-351 et seq., below.
- 429. Buller v Harrison (1777) 2 Cowp. 565, 568; Pollard v Bank of England (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 623, 631; Bank of Montreal v The King (1906) 11 O.L.R. 595 (affirmed 38 S.C.R. 258 (1907) Can); Gowers v Lloyds and National Provincial Bank [1938] 1 All E.R. 766, 773; National Westminster Bank Ltd v Barclays Bank International Ltd [1975] Q.B. 654. This doctrine, originally protecting an agent who has changed his position by paying the money received to his principal, has been restated as a general defence to an action in restitution in Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 1 A.C. 548. However, this is probably wrong as the defence of an agent who has paid money over to his principal is best regarded as a separate defence with its own rules (Portman Building Society v Hamlyn Taylor Neck (a firm) [1998] 4 All E.R. 202 at 207, per Millett L.J.; Jones v Churcher [2009] EWHC 722 (QB), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 94 at [77]–[78]; Jeremy D Stone Consultants Ltd v National Westminster Bank Plc [2013] EWHC 208 (Ch) at [244]). But note that the agent can be sued as long as the proceeds remain in his hands; the agent cannot defeat such an action by asserting a lien or right of set-off over the proceeds: Kleinwort, Sons & Co v Dunlop Rubber Co (1907) 97 L.T. 263; Kerrison v Glyn, Mills Currie & Co (1911) 81 L.J.K.B. 465; RE Jones Ltd v Waring and Gillow Ltd [1926] A.C. 670. See further, E Bant, "Payment over and change of position: lessons from agency law" [2007] L.M.C.L.Q. 225.
- 430. Kendal v Wood (1871) L.R. 6 Ex. 243.
- 431. Aiken v Short (1856) 1 H. & N. 210; Barclay & Co Ltd v Malcolm & Co (1925) 133 L.T. 512, 513.
- 432. [1980] Q.B. 677, 694. As regards the question of materiality generally, see at 692.
- 433. [1980] Q.B. 677 at 699–700.
- 434. Chambers v Miller (1862) 32 L.J.C.P. 30; Pollard v Bank of England (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 623, 633; Dominion Bank v Jacobs [1951] 3 D.L.R. 233. And see Goff J. in Barclays Bank case, above, at 689; and Lloyd's Bank Plc v Independent Insurance Co Ltd [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 1.
- 435. Barclays Bank Ltd v WJ Simms Son & Cooke (Southern) Ltd, above. See also Southland Savings Bank v Anderson [1974] 1 N.Z.L.R. 118 (suggesting that if the payee was aware of the countermand, he could be sued in deceit). Contrast Commonwealth Trading Bank v Reno Auto Sales Pty Ltd [1967] V.R. 790 Aust.

- 436. As regards the right of restitution where notice of the forgery is given on the day of payment, see Wilkinson v Johnson (1824) 3 B. & C. 428; Cocks v Masterman (1829) 9 B. & C. 902, 908–909.
- 437. Price v Neal (1762) 3 Burr. 1354, 1357; London and River Plate Bank Ltd v Bank of Liverpool Ltd [1896] 1 Q.B. 7, 10–11; Bank of Montreal v R. (1906) 11 O.L.R. 595 (affirmed (1907) 38 S.C.R. 258 Can). See also dicta in Hart v Frontino and Bolivia South American Gold Mining Co (1870) L.R. 5 Ex. 111, 115; Simm v Anglo-American Telegraph Co (1879) 5 Q.B.D. 188, 196, per Lindley J. (the decision was reversed by the Court of Appeal, but the dictum in question remains unaffected). That a holder does not warrant the genuineness of a bill by presenting it for payment or for acceptance, see Guaranty Trust Co of New York v Hannay & Co [1918] 2 K.B. 623. In BMP Global Distribution Inc v Bank of Nova Scotia [2009] 1 S.C.R. 504 at [32], Deschamps J., delivering the judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada, said: “I do not accept that [Price v Neal] provides a basis for an unqualified rule that a drawee will never have any recourse against either the collecting bank or the payee where payment has been made on the forged signature of the drawer”.
- 438. Smith v Mercer (1815) 6 Taunt. 76, 81, 87. See also Price v Neal, above, but contrast London and River Plate Bank Ltd v Bank of Liverpool Ltd, above, which suggests that negligence is not the correct test.
- 439. Cocks v Masterman (1829) 9 B. & C. 902, 908–909; and see below, paras 34–133 et seq. as regards the position in the light of Lipkin Gorman’s case, above. See also BMP Global Distribution Inc v Bank of Nova Scotia [2009] 1 S.C.R. 504.
- 440. Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s.50(1); above, para.34–110. And note that notice is altogether excused as regards the drawer if the cheque had been stopped: s.50(2); and see Barclays Bank Ltd v WJ Simms Son & Cooke (Southern) Ltd [1980] Q.B. 677, 700–703.
- 441. So in Cocks v Masterman, above, at 908–909. See also Mather v Maidstone (1856) 18 C.B. 273, 294 (where the acceptance itself was forged). See also BMP Global Distribution Inc v Bank of Nova Scotia [2009] 1 S.C.R. 504.
- 442. See Vol.I, paras 29–186 et seq.
- 443. Imperial Bank of Canada v Bank of Hamilton [1903] A.C. 49; National Westminster Bank Ltd v Barclays Bank International Ltd [1975] Q.B. 654. See also Bank of India v Abeyesinghe (1927) 29 N.L.R. (Ceylon) 257. See also BMP Global Distribution Inc v Bank of Nova Scotia [2009] 1 S.C.R. 504.
- 444. [1980] Q.B. 677, discussed by Matthews (1980) 130 New L.J. 587; Goode (1981) 97 L.Q.R. 254, who argues that a payee, who receives payment of a stopped cheque without notice, is entitled to retain the amount to the extent that he is entitled to succeed against the drawer. The bank, on the basis of subrogation, is entitled to maintain the debit in the drawer’s account to the same extent. See also Bank of New South Wales v Murphett [1983] 1 V.R. 489.
- 445.  [1980] Q.B. 677 at 695. For a recent example of Goff J.’s exception (2)(a), see Leslie v Farrar Construction Ltd [2016] EWCA Civ 1041 at [51]–[56].
- 446. See also Lloyds Bank Plc v Independent Insurance Co Ltd [2000] Q.B. 110 CA.
- 447. [1980] Q.B. 677 at 699–700.
- 448. [1980] Q.B. 677 at 700. See also National Westminster Bank Ltd v Barclays Bank International Ltd [1975] Q.B. 654.
- 449. For its final rejection in the 20th century, see RE Jones & Co Ltd v Waring & Gillow Ltd [1926] A.C. 670.
- 450. [1991] 1 A.C. 548.

451. [1991] 1 A.C. 548 at 579, per Lord Goff of Chieveley.
452. But there remains uncertainty as to whether the defence extends to all restitutionary claims. The defence of change of position is available against restitutionary claims based on unjust enrichment, but even then it is not open to a wrongdoer (Lipkin Gorman (a firm) v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 2 A.C. 548 at 580). There is some doubt as to whether it is available against a restitutionary claim based on the vindication of property rights, where the action is subject to the bona fide purchaser for value defence (Foskett v McKeown [2001] 1 A.C. 102 at 129; Papamichael v National Westminster Bank [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 341 at 376; Armstrong DLW GmbH v Winnington Networks Ltd [2012] EWHC 10 (Ch) at [103]). In Haugesund Kommune v Depfa ACS Bank [2010] EWCA Civ 579, [2012] 2 W.L.R. 199 at [122], where Aikens L.J. said that "the defence of change of position is a general defence to all restitution claims (for money or other property) based on unjust enrichment".
453. [1991] 1 A.C. 548 at 580. That an anticipatory mistake may be operative, see Dextra Bank and Trust Co Ltd v Bank of Jamaica [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 193 PC; Commerzbank AG v Gareth Price-Jones [2003] EWCA Civ 1663 (noted by Birks (2004) 120 L.Q.R. 373); cf. South Tyneside Metropolitan Borough Council v Svenska International Plc [1995] 1 All E.R. 545, Clarke J.
454. [1991] 1 A.C. 548; and see United Overseas Bank v Jiwani [1976] 1 W.L.R. 964.
455. Test Claimants in the FII Group Litigation v HMRC (No.2) [2014] EWHC 4302 (Ch) at [353] (Henderson J.).
456. See Commerzbank AG v Price-Jones [2003] EWCA Civ 1663 at [39]–[40], [65]–[70].
457. E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), p.530.
458. ! Important recent cases on the availability of the change of position defence include: Philip Collins Ltd v Davis [2000] 3 All E.R. 808; Scottish Equitable Plc v Derby [2001] EWCA Civ 369, [2001] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 274; and Crédit Suisse (Monaco) SA v Attar [2004] EWHC 374 (Comm) (on the need for a casual connection between the mistaken receipt and the change of position); Dextra Bank & Trust Co Ltd v Bank of Jamaica [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 193; and Commerzbank AG v Gareth Price-Jones [2003] EWCA Civ 1663 (on anticipatory change of position); Niru Battery Manufacturing Co v Milestone Trading Ltd [2002] EWHC 1425 (Comm), [2002] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 705, 741; approved [2003] EWCA Civ 1446, [2004] 4 All E.R. (Comm) 193 (on what constitutes "bad faith"); Barros Mattos Junior v MacDaniels Ltd [2004] EWHC 1188 (Ch), [2004] 3 All E.R. 299 (on change of position which constituted an illegal action); Campden Hill Ltd v Chakrani [2005] EWHC 911 (Ch) (on retention of benefit acquired as result of change of position); Abou-Rahmah v Abacha [2006] EWCA Civ 492, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 115 (on defendant's conduct at time of change of position); Test Claimants in the FII Group Litigation v Commissioners for Revenue and Customs [2008] EWHC 2893 (Ch), [2009] S.T.C. 254 at [320], [337] (wrongdoer bar to the defence of change of position); Jones v Churher [2009] EWHC 722 (QB), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 94 (when good faith requires inquiry to be made before disposing of the mistaken payment); Haugesund Kommune v Depfa ACS Bank [2010] EWCA Civ 579, [2012] 2 W.L.R. 199 (recipient of payment made under void contract of loan took risk that money would have to be repaid); Jeremy D Stone Consultants Ltd v National Westminster Bank Plc [2013] EWHC 208 (Ch) (on whether defence barred by bank's alleged failure to monitor its relationship with customer, contrary to the Money Laundering Regulations 2007 reg.8(1), and its alleged failure to report criminal activity, contrary to the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s.330); Bellis (a firm) v Challinor [2015] EWCA Civ 59 at [115]–[120] (in circumstances failure to make diligent enquiry before disposing of mistaken payment did not constitute commercially unacceptable conduct); T & L Sugars Ltd v Tate & Lyle Industries Ltd [2015] EWHC 2696 (Comm) at [137] (on anticipatory reliance); Dexia Crediop SpA v Comune di Prato [2016] EWHC 2824 (Comm) at [75] (on need for "but for" causal connection between the receipt and any change of position)—but see also [2017] EWCA Civ 428, where the Court of Appeal reversed an earlier, related judgment on a key conflict of law issue in this case, and also held (at [213]) that there was no basis for restitutionary claims by either party. In BMP Global Distribution Inc v Bank of Nova Scotia [2009] 1 S.C.R. 504, [62]–[65], the Supreme Court of Canada held that (1) the general of change of position defence applies to mistaken payments made on forged cheques; and (2) neither the collecting bank nor the payee changed their position merely by allowing the proceeds of a cheque to be credited to the payee's account. For detailed coverage, see E. Bant, The Change of Position Defence (2009). See generally, Vol. I, paras 29-186 et seq.

- 459. For further discussion of the relationship between the payment over defence and the change of position defence, see E Bant, "Payment over and change of position: lessons from agency law" [2007] L.M.C.L.Q. 225. The separate nature of the two defences was stressed in Jones v Churcher [2009] EWHC 722 (QB), [2009] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 94 at [77]–[78], and also in Jeremy D Stone Consultants Ltd v National Westminster Bank Plc [2013] EWHC 208 (Ch) at [244], with both cases citing Millett L.J. in Portman Building Society v Hamlyn Taylor Neck (a firm) [1998] 4 All E.R. 202 at 207.
- 460. [1979] 3 All E.R. 1025.
- 461. [1979] 3 All E.R. 1025 at 1032.
- 462.  For recent cases analysing the situations in which a court will grant a tracing order at law or in equity, see Agip (Africa) Ltd v Jackson [1991] Ch. 547 (affirming [1990] Ch. 265 (Millett J.)); Polly Peck Plc v Nadir (No.2) [1992] 4 All E.R. 782; Abdul Ghani el Ajou v Dollar Land Holdings Plc [1993] 3 All E.R. 717 (Millett J.); Bank Tejarat v HKSB (CI) Ltd [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 239; Re Goldcorp Exchange Ltd (in Receivership) [1995] 1 A.C. 74; Friends' Provident Life Office v Hillier Parker May & Rowden [1997] Q.B. 85; FHR European Ventures LLP v Mankarious [2016] EWHC 359 (Ch); Bainbridge v Bainbridge [2016] EWHC 898 (Ch); and the decision of the Supreme Court of Singapore in Re Untalan, Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corp Ltd v United Overseas Bank Ltd [1992] 2 S.L.R. 195 (Michael Hwang J.C.). See also BMP Global Distribution Inc v Bank of Nova Scotia [2009] 1 S.C.R. 504 at [80], [85], where the Supreme Court of Canada held that tracing at law was not defeated merely because the funds have passed through a mixed fund or a clearing system (noted by Ogilvie (2010) 25 B.F.L.R. 545; Fox [2010] C.L.J. 28; McInnes (2009) 125 L.Q.R. 552). As regards the issue of tracing funds paid into an overdrawn account, see Style Financial Services Ltd v Bank of Scotland [1986] 5 Bank. L.R. 15; Bishopsgate Investment Management Ltd v Homan [1995] Ch. 211 CA; Box v Barclays Bank Plc [1998] Lloyd's Rep. Bank 185 at 203; Shalson v Russo [2003] EWHC 1637 (Ch), [2005] Ch. 281 at [140]–[141]; Cooper v PRG Powerhouse Ltd [2008] EWHC 498 (Ch) at [28]–[33]; Re BA Peters Plc [2008] EWCA Civ 1604 at [13]–[24]; Serious Fraud Office v Lexi Holdings Plc [2008] EWCA Crim 1443 at [51]. See also Smith [1995] C.L.J. 290; Conaglen (2011) 127 L.Q.R. 432. The arguments of Smith and Conaglen were recently reviewed by the Judicial Board of the Privy Council in Brazil v Durant International Corp [2015] UKPC 35, which (at [40]) rejected the argument that there can never be "backward tracing", or that the court can never trace the value of an asset whose proceeds are paid into an overdrawn account. The relationship between tracing and unjust enrichment was explored by the Court of Appeal in Relfo Ltd (In Liquidation) v Varsani [2014] EWCA Civ 360, noted by Nolan (2015) 131 L.Q.R. 8.
- 463. [1996] A.C. 669 at 714–715 (a case where money was paid under a void contract). See also the criticisms of Lord Millett, Restitution—Past, Present and Future (1998), p.212.
- 464. Aikens J. refused to follow it in Bank of America v Arnell [1999] Lloyd's Rep. Bank 399 at 406.
- 465. This seems to require actual knowledge on the part of the recipient (Papamichael v National Westminster Bank Plc [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 341, 372), but it has also been suggested that an objective test of unconscionability ought to be adopted (Fitzalan-Howard (Norfolk) v Hibbert [2009] EWHC 2855 (QB), [2010] P.N.L.R. 11 at [49]). See also Commerzbank AG v IMB Morgan Plc [2004] EWHC 2771 (Ch), [36]; Bank of Ireland v Pexxnet Ltd [2010] EWHC 1872 (Comm), [55].
- 466. s.61.
- 467. Harmer v Steele (1849) 4 Exch. 1. cf. Foster, Hight & Co v Ward (1883) 1 Cab. & E. 168.

- 468. Jenkins v Jenkins [1928] 2 K.B. 501.
- 469. For a detailed analysis see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.8–058.
- 470. s.62(1).
- 471. [1896] 2 Ch. 157. cf. D Gokal & Co (HK) Ltd v Rippleworth Ltd [1998] 11 C.L. 370.
- 472. (1924) 40 T.L.R. 803.
- 473. s.62(2).
- 474. s.63(1).
- 475. s.63(2).
- 476. Ingham v Primrose (1859) 7 C.B.(N.S.) 82. See also Ralli v Dennistoun (1851) 6 Exch. 483; Bank of Scotland v Dominion Bank [1891] A.C. 592.
- 477. s.63(3). See Warwick v Rogers (1843) 5 M. & G. 340, approved in Prince v Oriental Bank Corp (1878) 3 App. Cas. 325.
- 478. s.64(1) has been explained as an application of the rule in Pigot's case (1614) 11 Co. Rep. 26b: Habibsons Bank Ltd v Standard Chartered Bank (Hong Kong) Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 1335, [2011] Q.B. 943 at [28].
- 479. Woollatt v Stanley (1928) 138 L.T. 620. See generally Hudson [1975] J.B.L. 108.
- 480. Scholfield v Londesborough [1896] A.C. 514.
- 481. Imperial Bank of Canada v Bank of Hamilton [1903] A.C. 49. See also above, paras 34-126 et seq.
- 482. Heller Factors Pty Ltd v Toy Corp Pty Ltd [1984] 1 N.S.W.L.R. 121 Aust.
- 483. See, e.g. Smith v Lloyds TSB Group Plc [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 693, where the Court of Appeal held that altering the payee's name on a cheque was a "material" alteration.
- 484. Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corp v Lo Lee Shi [1928] A.C. 181.
- 485. Foster v Driscoll [1929] 1 K.B. 470, 494.
- 486. Koch v Dicks [1933] 1 K.B. 307. See also Raiffeisen Zentralbank Österreich AG v Crossseas Shipping Ltd [2000] 1 W.L.R. 1135 at [19] CA.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(b) - Bills of Exchange ³²
(viii) - Acceptance and Payment for Honour

Acceptance for honour

34-142

Where the drawee of a bill dishonours it by non-acceptance, a person who is not a party to the bill may, before the bill is overdue, and provided the holder consents to his doing so, accept the bill supra protest for the honour of any party liable thereon. ⁴⁸⁷ The acceptor for honour undertakes to pay the bill himself if it is dishonoured by non-payment by the drawee, provided the bill is duly presented to the drawee and protested. He incurs liability towards the holder and all parties to the bill subsequent to the one for whose honour he has accepted it. ⁴⁸⁸ Where a bill has been accepted for honour supra protest, it must be protested for its non-payment by the drawee before it is presented for payment to the acceptor for honour. ⁴⁸⁹ Where a bill is dishonoured by the acceptor for honour, it must be protested for non-payment. ⁴⁹⁰

Payment for honour supra protest

34-143

Where a bill has been protested for nonpayment, any person may intervene and pay it supra protest for the honour of any party liable thereon. ⁴⁹¹ In order that it may operate as payment for honour and not as a mere voluntary payment, the payment must be attested by a notarial act in a specified form. ⁴⁹² Where a bill has been paid for honour, all the parties subsequent to the party for whose honour it is paid are discharged; the payer for honour is subrogated to and succeeds to both the rights and duties of the holder as regards the party for whose honour he pays, and all parties liable to that party. ⁴⁹³ If the holder of the bill refuses to receive payment for honour supra protest, he loses his right of recourse against all the parties who would have been discharged by such payment. ⁴⁹⁴ If the holder receives such payment as well as payment of notarial expenses which he incurred due to the dishonour of the bill, he is obliged to deliver the bill and the protest to the payer for honour. ⁴⁹⁵

Referee in case of need

34-144

According to s.15 of the Act, the drawer or any indorser may insert in the bill the name of a person to whom the holder may resort if the bill is dishonoured by non-acceptance or non-payment. Such a person is known as a "referee in case of need". The holder has the option to resort to the referee in case of need. A bill which contains a reference in case of need must, in the case of its dishonour by the drawee, be protested for nonpayment before it is presented for payment to the referee in case of need. ⁴⁹⁶

- 32. For detailed works on the subject, see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009); for the special aspects respecting the use of bills of exchange in international trade, see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), Ch.22.
- 487. s.65.
- 488. s.66.
- 489. s.67(1); even a bill payable after sight must be presented to the drawee after its acceptance for honour: Williams v Germaine (1827) 7 B. & C. 468. As regards the time and place for such presentment, see s.67(2). As regards excuses for delay, see s.67(3).
- 490. s.67(4). As to the computation of the maturity of such bills, see s.65(5).
- 491. s.68(1), as regards the position if more than one person offers to pay a bill supra protest, see s.68(2).
- 492. s.68(3), (4).
- 493. s.68(5). He cannot, however, negotiate the bill: Ex p. Swan (1868) L.R. 6 Eq. 344.
- 494. s.68(7).
- 495. s.68(6).
- 496. s.67(1).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(b) - Bills of Exchange ³²
(ix) - Lost Instruments

Holder's right to duplicate of lost bill

34-145

According to s.69, where a bill has been lost before it is overdue, the last holder is entitled to request another bill of the same tenor from the drawer, but must give him an indemnity against claims by any persons, arising in case the lost bill is found again. If the drawer refuses to give such duplicate bill, he may be compelled to do so. No power is given by this section to obtain an indorsement or acceptance over again.

Action on lost bill

34-146

According to s.70, in any action or proceeding on a bill, the court may order that the loss of the instrument shall not be set up, provided an indemnity be given against the claims of any other person. If the claimant wishes to secure an order for costs, he should offer the indemnity before bringing an action on the lost instrument. ⁴⁹⁷

^{32.} For detailed works on the subject, see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009); for the special aspects respecting the use of bills of exchange in international trade, see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), Ch.22.

^{497.} King v Zimmerman (1871) L.R. 6 C.P. 466, 469. Note that the section has been repealed as regards Northern Ireland: Judicature (Northern Ireland) Act 1978 s.122 and Sch.7 Pt I.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(b) - Bills of Exchange ³²
(x) - Bills in a Set

Rules as to sets

34-147

Where a bill is drawn in a set, each part of which is numbered ⁴⁹⁸ and contains a reference to the other parts, all these parts constitute one bill. Where the holder of a set indorses two or more parts to different persons, he is liable on every such part, and every indorser subsequent to him is liable on the part he has himself indorsed, as if the different parts were separate bills. Where two or more parts of a set are negotiated to different holders in due course, the holder whose title first accrues is, as between such holders, deemed the true owner of the bill; but this does not, in itself, affect the rights of a person who in due course accepts or pays the part first presented to him. The acceptance may be written on any part, and it must be written on one part only. If the drawee accepts more than one part, and such accepted parts get into the hands of different holders in due course, he is liable on every such part as if it were a separate bill. When the acceptor of a bill drawn in a set pays it without requiring the part bearing his acceptance to be delivered up to him, and that part is, at maturity, outstanding in the hands of a holder in due course, he is liable to this holder. Subject to the preceding rules, where any one part of a bill drawn in a set is discharged, the whole bill is discharged. ⁴⁹⁹

^{32.} For detailed works on the subject, see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009); for the special aspects respecting the use of bills of exchange in international trade, see Benjamin's Sale of Goods, 9th edn (2014), Ch.22.

^{498.} The parts of the set are usually expressed to be the "First", "Second", etc. "of Exchange". Such a bill is rarely used except for overseas trade, when it may be convenient to send the various parts separately to ensure the early delivery of, at any rate, one part.

^{499.} s.71.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(c) - Cheques
(i) - General Provisions

Cheques defined

34-148

According to s.73 of the Act, a cheque is a bill of exchange drawn on a banker, payable on demand.⁵⁰⁰ It should be noted that the Act does not limit the definition to bills drawn on the bank by a customer. While it is customary to draw cheques on forms contained in a cheque book supplied by a bank, a cheque may be drawn on any paper. In *Roberts & Co v Marsh*⁵⁰¹ a person drew a cheque on a sheet of writing paper, wrote on it the words "to be retained" and promised the payee to substitute a cheque written on a form. It was held that, as the words "to be retained" were directed to the payee, this instrument was a valid cheque.⁵⁰²

Provisions on bills payable on demand apply

34-149

According to s.73, except as otherwise provided in the part of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 relating to cheques (ss.73–81A), the provisions of the Act applicable to bills of exchange payable on demand apply to cheques.⁵⁰³

Certifying or marking cheques

34-150

A cheque is not intended to be (and in practice never is) accepted.⁵⁰⁴ In some Commonwealth countries bankers do, however, "mark" or "certify" cheques drawn on them by writing on the cheques the word "good" or "approved". At one time it was thought that such a certification constituted an acceptance,⁵⁰⁵ but this view has been rejected in more recent cases, and it is at present clear that a certification does not, in itself, give the holder a right to sue the certifying banker.⁵⁰⁶ However, a certification can have some effect if it is written by the drawee bank on a post-dated cheque. In such a case a banker may be estopped from pleading that the customer's account did not have a credit balance, sufficient to meet the cheque, at the date of the certification.⁵⁰⁷ But it is to be doubted whether such an estoppel would assist the holder's case, because an estoppel cannot, in itself, constitute a cause of action. Moreover, the certification of a post-dated cheque does not entitle the banker to " earmark" any amount standing to the credit of the customer's account for the purpose of meeting this cheque, and the banker will be obliged to honour any cheque presented between the date of the certification of the post-dated cheque and the date of its presentation. Thus, even if there is a sufficient balance for meeting the post-dated cheque at the date of certification, there may not be sufficient funds at the date of presentation. The certification cannot, therefore, be regarded as constituting a promise of the drawee bank that the cheque will be paid when presented. This is particularly so as the customer can effectively countermand, i.e. "stop", the payment of a certified cheque. ⁵⁰⁸

Presentment for payment

34-151

While presentment of a cheque for payment is required—except where excused by s.46—failure so to do does not necessarily discharge the drawer. ⁵⁰⁹ Section 74(1) of the Act provides that where a cheque is not presented for payment within a reasonable time ⁵¹⁰ of its issue and the drawer had the right, at the time at which the cheque should have been presented, to have it paid by the banker, he is discharged to the extent of his actual loss, i.e. to the extent to which the drawer is the creditor of the banker to a larger amount than he would have been had the cheque been paid. The effect of this provision is that the drawer is discharged only if the banker becomes insolvent, and to the extent of his actual loss. Section 74(3) provides that when the drawer is so discharged, the holder becomes the banker's creditor in lieu of the drawer.

Cheque truncation

34-152

Under the traditional banking procedure, as spelt out in the Clearing House Rules, cheques had to be presented for payment through the clearing house to the branch on which they were drawn. ⁵¹¹ This resulted in a cumbersome and prolonged clearing cycle for cheques. For many years the cheque clearing cycle took three working days after receipt of the cheque by the payee's bank. ⁵¹² In order to speed up the clearing process, the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 was amended in 1996 to allow for cheque truncation, i.e. the presentation of a cheque by means of an electronic message which sets out the serial number of the cheque, the code which identifies the drawee bank, the number of the account on which the cheque is drawn and its amount. ⁵¹³ Under a fully truncated system only this essential information about the cheque is sent electronically from the collecting bank to the drawee bank and not the cheque itself, which remains with the collecting bank. But a fully truncated cheque clearing system was never developed in the UK. The declining use of cheques, and the high costs associated with the development of a fully truncated system, meant that UK banks adopted a system of partial truncation with code line information being transferred electronically through an Inter Bank Data Exchange system, but with the cheque still being physically presented through the clearing system to the drawee bank's clearing centre. ⁵¹⁴ In fact those provisions introduced in 1996 to allow for cheque truncation (ss.74B and 74C of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882) have now been repealed by s.13 of the Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Act 2015, which introduces fresh amendments to the 1882 Act that allow for cheques to be cleared through presentation of an electronic image of the cheque (known as "cheque imaging") in place of presentation of the cheque itself. ⁵¹⁵ However, one amendment introduced in 1996 remains in force. According to s.74A of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, ⁵¹⁶ a bank may by a notice published in the London, Edinburgh and Belfast Gazettes specify an address at which cheques drawn on it may be presented for payment. A cheque presented at such an address, for instance at the bank's own data processing centre, is, then, deemed to have been presented at the "proper address". Section 74A is not limited to presentation through the cheque truncation process set out in s.74B, and it remains relevant for cheques that fall outside the new cheque imaging clearing process.

Cheque imaging

34-153

In March 2014 the government consulted with a view to introducing legislation to allow for "cheque imaging", which will speed up the clearing process, reducing it from six to two days, ⁵¹⁷ by sending a digital image of a cheque for clearing rather than the piece of paper itself. ⁵¹⁸ For example, this would enable a customer to take a photograph of their cheque on their smartphone and pay it in to his bank electronically via the bank's mobile banking app. In June 2014, following the consultation exercise, the government announced its intention to legislate to facilitate cheque imaging. ⁵¹⁹ The Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Act 2015 was enacted on March 26, 2015, and s.13 of that Act provides the legal framework for the introduction of cheque imaging by inserting a new Pt 4A (ss.89A–F) into the Bills of Exchange Act 1882.⁵²⁰

Summary of Pt 4A

34-154

The main effect of new Pt 4A of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 is to remove the right of the paying bank to demand delivery of the original paper cheque. Section 89A(1) provides that a cheque, or other instrument to which the section applies, may be presented for payment by providing an electronic image of the front and back of the cheque, instead of by presenting the physical cheque, if the person to whom presentment is made accepts the cheque as effective.⁵²¹ The electronic image of the cheque will become equivalent to the original paper cheque,⁵²² but only for the purpose of presentation.⁵²³ Cheques will still have to be written on paper. The new legislation also extends the benefits of imaging to paper instruments other than cheques that are currently cleared using the same system, e.g. bankers' drafts, postal orders, government payable orders, warrants, travellers' cheques and bank giro credits.⁵²⁴ The new legislation makes it clear that the banks involved in the clearing process are subject to the same duties in relation to collection and payment of the cheque (or other relevant instrument) as if the physical instrument had been presented. But the legislation also goes further and ensures that there are clear liabilities for banks involved in the clearing process. Under the old law (still in force at the time of writing⁵²⁵), it is the paying bank that typically pays for undetected fraud. The government considered that the bank which collects the cheque/cheque image and introduces it into the clearing system (the collecting bank) is best placed to implement measures to make the system secure, detect security risks at the earliest stage and reduce fraud in the system. Therefore, the new legislation provides, in effect, that the collecting bank, and not the paying bank, should be liable for fraud or error.⁵²⁶

Revocation of payment

34-155

According to s.75, the duty and authority of a banker to pay a cheque drawn on him by a customer are determined by countermand of payment and by notice of the customer's death.⁵²⁷ Notice of the customer's bankruptcy⁵²⁸ or that he has, due to a mental disorder, become incapable of managing his affairs⁵²⁹ appear, likewise, to determine the banker's authority to pay.

Post-dated cheques⁵³⁰

34-156

A practice has developed of writing on a cheque a date later than that of the actual day of drawing. The purpose in drawing such a "post-dated cheque" is to prevent the payee or a holder from presenting it before the day written on it. It has been held that, in view of s.13(2) of the Act,⁵³¹ such a cheque is not invalid.⁵³² Moreover, a person who obtains such a cheque for value and in good faith becomes a holder in due course when he actually takes the cheque, and not only as from the date on which it purports to be made.⁵³³ At the same time, a banker should not honour a cheque while it is post-dated.⁵³⁴ If he does, and the cheque is countermanded by the customer before the purported date of issue, the banker is not entitled to debit the customer's account.⁵³⁵ It has been suggested that a post-dated cheque is a bill of exchange payable at a future date.⁵³⁶

Use of cheque cards

34-157

Cheque cards used to be issued by banks in the UK for use with their customers' cheques. Through the card the bank undertook to the payee of the cheque that payment would be made (up to the limit indicated on the card itself) regardless of the state of the customer's account, provided that certain conditions were met. Cheque cards are no longer in use in the UK. ⁵³⁷

- ^{500.} As to which bills are payable on demand, see s.10 of the Act, discussed in para.34-013, above.
- ^{501.} [1915] 1 K.B. 42. cf. Burnett v Westminster Bank Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 742.
- ^{502.} As regards “cheques” drawn to “cash or order”, see above, para.34-021.
- ^{503.} Note that a new Pt 4A (presentment of cheques and other instruments by electronic means) was introduced into the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 by the Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Act 2015 s.13: see below, paras 34-153—34-154.
- ^{504.} Bellamy v Marjoribanks (1852) 7 Exch. 389, 404; Bank of Baroda Ltd v Punjab National Bank Ltd [1944] A.C. 176, 188.
- ^{505.} Robson v Bennett (1810) 2 Taunt. 388, 396.
- ^{506.} Gaden v Newfoundland Savings Bank [1899] A.C. 281; Bank of Baroda Ltd v Punjab National Bank Ltd, above; Southland Savings Bank v Anderson [1974] 1 N.Z.L.R. 118. But note that where a cheque is marked by the drawee bank at the request of another bank for clearing purposes, that other bank is by mercantile usage entitled to payment: Robson and Waugh v Bennett (1810) 2 Taunt. 388; Goodwin v Roberts (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 337, 351 (affirmed (1876) 1 App. Cas. 476). In BMP Global Distribution Bank Ltd v Bank of Nova Scotia [2009] 1 S.C.R. 504, [87]–[88], the Supreme Court of Canada held that certification by a bank does not prevent it from recovering the proceeds of a cheque paid by mistake.
- ^{507.} Bank of Baroda Ltd v Punjab National Bank Ltd [1944] A.C. 176 at 191. It is to be doubted whether a certification could give rise to an action by the holder against the certifying banker for a negligent misrepresentation under the rule in Hedley Byrne & Co v Heller & Partners [1964] A.C. 465. The reason for this is that by certifying the cheque the banker does not warrant that it will be paid.
- ^{508.} Keyes v Royal Bank of Canada [1947] 3 D.L.R. 161; Southland Savings Bank v Anderson, above, at 121; cf. Gibson v Minet (1824) 2 Bing. 7.
- ^{509.} As to when a cheque is considered to have been “presented” through the clearing system, see Barclays Bank Plc v Bank of England [1985] 1 All E.R. 385.
- ^{510.} As to what constitutes “reasonable time”, see s.74(2), which is similar to the relevant part of s.45(2); see also King v Porter [1925] N.I. 107.
- ^{511.} Barclays Bank v Bank of England [1985] 1 All E.R. 385.
- ^{512.} Described by Bingham J. in Barclays Bank v Bank of England [1985] 1 All E.R. 385 at 387. However, since November 2007 the payee of a UK cheque has been entitled to interest (if the account bears interest) or credit, if overdrawn, on the proceeds after a maximum of two days from deposit of the cheque, to withdraw the proceeds after a maximum of four days and to know the fate of the cheque after a maximum of six days (known as “T+2-4-6”). This means that after six working days funds credited to his account cannot be reclaimed, e.g. if there are insufficient funds in the drawer's account.
- ^{513.} Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss.74B–C, inserted by the Deregulation (Bills of Exchange) Order 1996 (SI 1996/2993). See Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), paras 13–021 et seq.; and, on cheque truncation generally, see also Vroegop [1990] L.M.C.L.Q. 244.

- 514. In December 2009, the Payments Council announced that the cheque clearing system was to close in 2018, but reversed that decision in July 2012 following public pressure.
- 515. See Pt 4A of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 (as inserted by s.13). Section 13 came into force on March 26, 2015 for the purposes of enabling the making of regulations under Pt 4A of the 1882 Act, and it will come into force on July 31, 2016 for all other purposes: Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Act 2015 s.164(4).
- 516. Inserted by the Deregulation (Bills of Exchange) Order 1996 (SI 1996/2993).
- 517. i.e. T+1–2–2 rather than T+2–4–6: compare para.34-152 n.511.
- 518. HM Treasury Consultation, Speeding up cheque payments: legislating for cheque imaging (March 6, 2014).
- 519. HM Treasury, Speeding up cheque payments: legislating for cheque imaging (June 25, 2014).
- 520. s.13 came into force on March 26, 2015 for the purposes of enabling the making of regulations under Pt 4A of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, and it will come into force on July 31, 2016 for all other purposes: Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Act 2015 s.164(4). Section 13(6) provides that amendments made by s.13 have effect in relation to presentment of instruments after it comes into force, including instruments created before that time.
- 521. subss.(2)–(3) enable the Treasury to make regulations to restrict the circumstances in which presentment by image is permissible. Furthermore, s.89C provides that the new method of presentation is not available where the bank imposes terms on a customer which require the customer to provide an image of the instrument for paying in, and prevent the customer from providing the instrument itself to the bank.
- 522. s.89D enables the Treasury to make regulations requiring a bank which pays a cheque or similar instrument to provide a copy of the instrument to the creator of the instrument (in the case of a cheque, this means the drawer) on request, and providing that this copy stands as evidence that the sum payable has been received.
- 523. s.89A(4)–(6) remove existing requirements that apply to the presentment of a cheque or similar instrument that would be inconsistent with presentment in an electronic system, such as the exhibition, presentment and delivery of the paper instrument itself, and a particular place and time of payment.
- 524. s.89B. The key requirements, set out in s.89B(1)(b), are that (i) the instrument is one which enables a person to obtain payment from a banker, (ii) it is an instrument that must be presented for payment, and (iii) it could not otherwise be presented electronically. Banknotes are expressly excluded from the new regime (s.89B(2)).
- 525. See n.514 above.
- 526. s.89E, and regulations to be made thereunder. Under s.89E(1), the Treasury may by regulations make provision for the “responsible banker” to compensate any person for any loss of a kind specified by the regulations which that person incurs in connection with electronic presentation or purported electronic presentation of a cheque or other relevant instrument. The Explanatory Notes to the Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Act 2015 (para.160) explain that such regulations could, for example, provide for a claim by the drawer of the cheque or the bank that paid the cheque where the payment was made to the wrong account because of a defect in the image, or where the image had been created fraudulently. The term “responsible banker” is defined in subs.(3) to mean (a) the banker who is authorised to collect payment of the instrument on a customer’s behalf, or (b) if the holder of the instrument is a banker, that banker. It should be noted that, under subs.(5), the regulations may make provision for (a) the responsible banker to be required to pay compensation irrespective of fault (i.e. strict liability); and (b) the amount of compensation to be reduced by virtue of anything done, or any failure to act, by the person to whom compensation is payable (i.e. contributory negligence).

Subs.(6) makes it clear that if a bank has to pay compensation under the regulations, it is not prevented from making a claim against another party for a contribution towards compensation. At the time of writing, regulations are still awaited.

- 527. As regards countermand, see further below, para.34-326.
- 528. Insolvency Act 1986 s.284.
- 529. Imperial Loan Co Ltd v Stone [1892] 1 Q.B. 599. But the position may be different where an order has been made under the Mental Capacity Act 2005 (replacing the Mental Health Act 1983 Pt VII): see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange, 17th edn (2009), para.13–047.
- 530. See Chalmers and Guest, on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.2–098.
- 531. Discussed in para.34-017, above.
- 532. Hitchcock v Edwards (1889) 60 L.T. 636; Royal Bank of Scotland v Tottenham [1894] 2 Q.B. 715. See also Hodgson & Lee Pty Ltd v Mardonius Pty Ltd (1986) 78 A.L.R. 573, 84 F.L.R. 323. (In Australia, s.16(3) of the Cheques Act 1986 (Cth) now provides that “[f]or the purpose of determining whether a post-dated instrument is a cheque, the fact that the instrument is post-dated shall be disregarded”.) A cheque is not invalid by reason of the fact that it is not dated (Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s.3(4)(a)); Aspinall's Club Ltd v Al-Zayat [2007] EWCA Civ 1001.
- 533. Hitchcock v Edwards, above.
- 534. Brien v Dwyer (1979) 53 A.L.J.R. 123, in which it was held that the furnishing of a post-dated cheque did not comply with a contractual term permitting payment by cheque.
- 535. Morley v Culverwell (1840) 7 M. & W. 174, 178; Pollock v Bank of New Zealand (1901) 20 N.Z.L.R. 174; Keyes v Royal Bank of Canada [1947] 3 D.L.R. 161. Contrast Magill v Bank of North Queensland (1895) 6 Q.L.J. 262.
- 536. Brien v Dwyer (1979) 53 A.L.J.R. 123, per Aickin J. at 134; contrast Hodgson & Lee Pty Ltd v Mardonius (1986) 78 A.L.R. 573, 84 F.L.R. 323; Shapiro v Greenstein, 10 D.L.R. (3rd) 746 (1970).
- 537. The UK Domestic Cheque Card Scheme was closed on June 30, 2011. For discussion of cheque cards and, in particular, the law relating to the use of stolen cheque cards, see the 31st edition of this work, paras 34-156—34-158.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(c) - Cheques
(ii) - Crossed Cheques

What constitutes a “crossing”

34-158

According to s.76(1) of the Act, a cheque is “crossed generally” if it bears across its face two transverse parallel lines to which may be added the words “and company” or “not negotiable” or both. According to s.76(2) a cheque is “crossed specially” to a designated banker, if it bears across its face the name of that banker either with or without the addition of the words “not negotiable”. In practice a special crossing is, too, written between two transverse parallel lines. The provisions of the Act concerning crossed cheques are, by s.95, applied also to dividend warrants. By s.5 of the Cheques Act 1957 they are further extended to:

“(a)

any document issued by a customer of any banker which, though not a bill of exchange, is intended to enable a person to obtain payment from that banker of the sum mentioned in the document ⁵³⁸;

(b)

any document issued by a public officer which is intended to enable a person to obtain payment from the Paymaster General or the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer of the sum mentioned in the document any draft drawn by a banker on himself and payable on demand.”

(c)

Who is entitled to cross a cheque

34-159

According to s.77 of the Act, a cheque may be crossed generally or specially by the drawer and holder. The holder ⁵³⁹ is entitled to cross a cheque even if it has been uncrossed, may change a general crossing into a special one by adding the name of a banker, and is always entitled to add the words “not negotiable”. Where a cheque is crossed specially, the banker to whom it is crossed may again cross it specially to another banker for collection. Where an uncrossed cheque, or a cheque crossed generally, is sent to a banker for collection, he may cross it specially to himself.

Effect of crossing

34-160

A crossing is a material part of the cheque and, except where authorised by the Act, it is not lawful for any person to obliterate a crossing or to add to it. ⁵⁴⁰ Any crossing affects the duties of the drawee bank. In the case of an uncrossed cheque the holder can obtain payment in two ways: first, he can send the cheque to his own bankers and request them to collect it on his behalf, i.e. present it on his behalf for payment to the drawee bank. Secondly, he may himself present the cheque for payment at the counter of the drawee bank. When a cheque bears either a general or a special crossing, this second mode of realisation is not available to the holder. If the cheque bears a general crossing, it must be presented for payment through a bank; if it bears a special crossing to a designated bank, it must be presented for payment through that bank. ⁵⁴¹ If the drawee bank pays a generally crossed cheque over the counter, or to a person who is not a banker, it is liable to compensate the true owner of the cheque for any loss the latter may sustain owing to the cheque having been so paid. The drawee bank incurs similar liability to the true owner if it pays a specially crossed cheque otherwise than to the banker to whom it is crossed or his agent for collection. It is, however, provided that when a cheque is presented for payment and does not, at that time, appear to be crossed or to have had a crossing which has been altered or obliterated, the drawee bank does not incur any liability to the true owner, provided it paid the cheque in good faith and without negligence. ⁵⁴²

Protects true owner

34-161

Thus, one of the main effects of a crossing is to protect the rights of the true owner. ⁵⁴³ The phrase “true owner”, which is not defined in the Act, has been held to include the holder in due course of a cheque. ⁵⁴⁴ But the true owner may be a person other than the holder. By way of illustration, take the case of a cheque payable to order, which is discounted by a financial institution at the request of a thief who has forged the payee’s indorsement. As the indorsement is ineffective, ⁵⁴⁵ the true owner is the payee and not the financial institution. Another effect of a crossing is to protect the drawer. A banker, who pays a cheque in a manner prohibited by a crossing executed on it, exceeds the authority conferred on him by the cheque and is not entitled to debit the customer’s (drawer’s) account. ⁵⁴⁶ If a banker pays a cheque according to the tenor of the crossing he obtains a certain protection against the customer and the true owner of the cheque. ⁵⁴⁷

Effect of the addition of the words “not negotiable” to a crossing

34-162

According to s.81 of the Act, where the words “not negotiable” are added to a crossed cheque, a person taking it does not obtain a better title than that of the transferor, and cannot give a better title to a further transferee. Thus, while a cheque crossed “not negotiable” remains transferable, each transferee takes it subject to the defects in the title of all previous parties so that no person can become a holder in due course of the instrument. In Great Western Railway Co v London and County Banking Corp Lord Lindley said ⁵⁴⁸: “Everyone who takes a cheque marked ‘not negotiable’ takes it at his own risk, and his title to the money got by its means is as defective as his title to the cheque itself”.

Cheques crossed “account payee only”

34-163

It is a well established practice to add the words “account payee only” to a general crossing. Until 1992 the phrase “account payee only” was not given a statutory definition. Although, generally, customers added these words to a crossing in the belief that they rendered the cheque non-transferable, a long list of cases established that the phrase did not have this effect. It was held that the words in question constituted a warning to the collecting bank that the cheque should not be collected for a person other than the nominated payee ⁵⁴⁹ but that the transferability of the cheque was not, in itself, affected. ⁵⁵⁰ In essence, the courts took the view that, on a strict reading, the phrase “account payee only” did not comprise words prohibiting transfer or evidencing an intention that the instrument be non-transferable within the meaning of s.8(1) of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882.

Recommendations for reform

34-164

A similar approach was advocated by the Review Committee on Banking Services Law (the “Jack Committee”), ⁵⁵¹ which recommend that cheques should, indeed, remain transferable even if they bore a crossing accompanied by the phrase in question. But this recommendation was rejected in the White Paper presented to Parliament by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in March 1990. ⁵⁵² Seeking to give effect to what was considered the natural meaning and common understanding of the words in question, the White Paper recommended that the addition to a crossed cheque of the words “account payee only” (or of certain similar words) should render the instrument nontransferable.

The 1992 Act

34-165

The Cheques Act 1992, which amends certain provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 and of the Cheques Act 1957, gives effect to the recommendation made in the White Paper. The new s.81A of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, inserted by the 1992 Act, reads:

“(1)

Where a cheque is crossed and bears across its face the words ‘account payee’ or ‘a/c payee,’ either with or without the word ‘only,’ the cheque shall not be transferable, but shall only be valid as between the parties.

(2)

A banker is not to be treated for the purposes of s.80 above as having been negligent by reason only of his failure to concern himself with any purported indorsement of a cheque which under subs.(1) above or otherwise is not transferable.”

Effect of s.81A(1)

34-166

Subsection (1), effectively, applies the provisions of s.8(1) to cheques bearing a crossing accompanied by the words “a/c payee only”. Such a cheque now has the same effect as one in which the words “not transferable” appear on the face of the cheque or a cheque on which the word “only” is added after the payee’s name. ⁵⁵³ Under s.8(1) and the new s.81A, the title to an instrument bearing any of these formulae cannot be passed by its negotiation. Consequently, the original payee, to whom the instrument has been issued, remains its owner notwithstanding his attempt to transfer the instrument. The transferee, thus, does not obtain a title to the cheque and cannot bring an action to enforce it in his own name. ⁵⁵⁴

Effect of s.81A(2)

34-167

Subsection (2) gives effect to another recommendation made in the White Paper. It sets out to ensure that the drawee or paying bank, that pays a crossed cheque bearing the words “a/c payee only”, retains the defence available under s.80 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 as augmented by s.1 of the Cheques Act 1957. ⁵⁵⁵ A consequential amendment to s.80 itself—effected by s.2 of the 1992 Act—has the object of putting the matter beyond doubt.

Negligence issue

34-168

Section 81A(2) provides that a banker is not to be treated for the purposes of s.80 as having been negligent by reason only of his failure to concern himself with any purported indorsement of a cheque which under s.81A(1) or otherwise is not transferable. This means that the paying bank can normally ignore any purported indorsement on the cheque, as it is the responsibility of the collecting bank to ensure that a non-transferable cheque is collected only for the account of the named payee. However, there may be other, additional circumstances, for example where the paying bank is reliably informed that the cheque has been stolen from the payee, ⁵⁵⁶ or where it is clear that the cheque has been collected on behalf of a party other than the payee, ⁵⁵⁷ in which it might be negligent for a bank to pay a non-transferable cheque bearing a purported indorsement without first satisfying itself that it was in fact being paid to the person entitled to receive it. ⁵⁵⁸

“A/c payee” on uncrossed cheques

34-169

A question which is not settled by the Act concerns the effect of the words “a/c payee only” on an uncrossed cheque. The answer is, accordingly, provided by the authorities, decided prior to 1992, which treat the formula as falling outside the ambit of s.8(1) of the 1882 Act. On their basis, the addition of the words in question would leave the uncrossed cheque transferable. The problem, though, is academic. In practice, the words in question are either printed on the cheque as part of the crossing or are appended by means of a rubber stamp which includes the two transverse lines of the crossing. The only situation in which the problem is likely to arise is where the drawer opens a crossing but fails to cancel the words “a/c payee only”. As already indicated, the cheque would, in all probability, remain transferable.

Protection of collecting banker

34-170

The provisions giving a protection to a collecting banker were originally set out in s.82 of the Act. This section has been repealed but its provisions have been re-enacted and extended in s.4 of the Cheques Act 1957 which is applicable to all cheques, whether crossed or uncrossed, and to certain analogous instruments. The issues are discussed in the section dealing with the position of the collecting banker. ⁵⁵⁹

538. This includes a cheque payable to “cash or order”: Orbit Mining and Trading Co v Westminster Bank [1963] 1 Q.B. 794.
539. For a definition of holder, see s.2 of the Act. “Holder” includes an agent for collection: Akrokerri Mines v Economic Bank [1904] 2 K.B. 465, 472; Sutters v Briggs [1922] 1 A.C. 1; Baker v Barclays Bank Ltd [1955] 1 W.L.R. 822.
540. s.78.
541. According to s.79(1), if a cheque is crossed specially to more than one banker, the drawee bank must refuse payment. But see s.77(5).
542. s.79(2).
543. As to whether the true owner had a right at common law to sue the paying banker in conversion following the wrongful payment of the cheque, see Smith v Union Bank (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 291, 295–296; affirmed (1875) 1 Q.B.D. 31.
544. Smith v Union Bank, above. In most instances, the true owner is either the issuer or the payee of the cheque: Marquess of Bute v Barclays Bank [1955] 1 Q.B. 202 (applied in Australian Guarantee Corp v State Bank of Victoria [1989] V.R. 617 Sup Ct Vic Aus). But note that the issuer of a cheque loses his title, and ceases to be the true owner of the instrument, when he delivers it to a fraudster: Citibank NA v Brown Shipley & Co [1991] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 576 (Waller J.); see also Abbey National Plc v JSF Finance & Currency Exchange Co Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 328.
545. See above, para.34-086.
546. Bobbett v Pinkett (1876) 1 Ex. D. 368, 372–373.
547. s.80 of the Act discussed in para.34-352, below.
548. [1901] A.C. 414, 424. See also Universal Guarantee Pty Ltd v National Bank of Australasia [1965] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 525, 531. cf. Miller Associates (Australia) Pty Ltd v Bennington Pty Ltd (1975) 7 A.L.R. 144.
549. Akrokerri (Atlantic) Mines Ltd v Economic Bank [1904] 2 K.B. 465, 472; House Property Co of London Ltd v London County and Westminster Bank (1915) 84 L.J.K.B. 1846; Universal Guarantee Pty Ltd v National Bank of Australasia Ltd, above; New Zealand Law Society v ANZ Banking Group Ltd [1985] 1 N.Z.L.R. 280, 287; Algemene Bank Nederland NV v Happy Valley Restaurant Pte Ltd [1991] 1 S.L.R. 708, 713. As to no negligence being involved if a suitable explanation was given, see Souhrada v Bank of NSW [1976] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 444, especially at 452.
550. National Bank v Silke [1891] 1 Q.B. 435; Importers Co Ltd v Westminster Bank Ltd [1927] 2 K.B. 297; Universal Guarantee Pty Ltd v National Bank of Australasia [1965] 2 All E.R. 98; see also Standard Bank of South Africa Ltd v Sham Magazine Centre [1977] 1 S.A.L.R. 484 App Div.
551. Cmdn.622 paras 7.18–7.20, submitted in February 1989 and adopting the approach of s.39(2) of the Australian Cheques and Payment Orders Act 1986, which became the Cheques Act 1986 s.39(2) following the enactment of the Cheques and Payment Orders Amendment Act 1998 (Cth).
552. Cmdn.1026 Annex 5 para.5.6.
553. See above, para.34-026.
554. As to the effect of a crossing accompanied by the words “A/C payee only” where a cheque is payable to bearer, see Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn

(2009), para.14–039.

- 555. And note that, under s.3 of the 1992 Act, cheques bearing a crossing accompanied by the words “a/c payee only” (or the recognised similar formulae) are specifically equated with other types of cheque in respect of the defence conferred on the collecting bank (see Honourable Society of the Middle Temple v Lloyd’s Bank Plc [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 193). Note further that the provisions respecting crossings, made under the 1882 Act, apply to such cheques in the same manner as to negotiable cheques: Cheques Act 1957 s.5, read together with s.4 of that Act (as amended by s.3 of the 1992 Act).
- 556. This assumes the drawer has not, or has not yet, countermanded payment.
- 557. Linklaters v HSBC Bank Plc [2003] EWHC 1113 (Comm), [2003] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 545 at [65]–[74].
- 558. Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.14–028.
- 559. See below, paras 34-368 et seq.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(c) - Cheques
(iii) - Travellers' Cheques ⁵⁶⁰

Description

34-171

Travellers' cheques are widely used by tourists and businessmen all over the world. Most travellers' cheques bear two blank spaces meant for the signature of the traveller who purchases them from the issuing bank or from its agents for sale. The first signature, known as "the signature", is written on the instrument by the traveller, at the time he purchases the instrument, in the presence of a clerk of the issuing bank. The second signature, known as "the countersignature", is affixed by the traveller when he cashes or negotiates the instrument. A traveller's cheque is treated as containing a promise of the issuing bank to pay the amount specified in the instrument to the traveller or a transferee, provided the signature and countersignature correspond. While travellers' cheques appear in different forms the following three patterns are the most common ones: first, the instrument may assume the form of an order by the directors of the issuing bank, to that bank, to pay a certain amount to the order of the payee (whose name is left blank) provided the signature and countersignature correspond. Secondly, the instrument may assume the form of an order given by the traveller in the absence of stipulation to the contrary who acts as drawer, to the bank, to pay the amount to his own order, provided the instrument is duly countersigned by himself. The instrument bears the signature of the directors of the issuing bank, which, presumably, constitutes an acceptance. Thirdly, some instruments assume the form of a promise by the issuing bank to pay a certain amount of money to the payee (whose name is left blank) provided the signature and countersignature correspond.

Legal nature

34-172

It will be noted that travellers' cheques drafted in the first two patterns mentioned above resemble bills of exchange while those following the third pattern resemble promissory notes. However, the order in the first two patterns as well as the promise in the third one are conditional, i.e. dependent on the correspondence between the signature and the countersignature. Thus, the instruments do not fall within the respective definitions of bills of exchange (s.3(1) of the Act) and promissory notes (s.83). ⁵⁶¹ Treating the request for a countersignature as a demand for an indorsement does not render the instrument unconditional. While an indorsement is necessary for the negotiation of a bill or a note payable to order, ⁵⁶² it is not a prerequisite of payment. In the case of travellers' cheques, however, a countersignature is needed before the drawee or maker may pay the instrument, even if it is presented by the original payee. A travellers' cheque cannot, therefore, ⁵⁶³ be regarded as an unconditional order or promise to pay and does not constitute a bill or note. ⁵⁶⁴ But travellers' cheques are regarded as negotiable instruments by the mercantile community as well as by tourists all over the world. It is arguable that they ought to be treated as a novel species of negotiable instruments established as such by a universal mercantile usage. ⁵⁶⁴ It is well established that, if such a usage is proved, it will be recognised and acted upon by the courts. ⁵⁶⁵

Application of 1882 Act

34-173

It stands to reason that the general principles of the law of negotiable instruments (most of which are now codified in the Bills of Exchange Act 1882) apply, with the necessary modifications, to travellers' cheques. This view derives support from recent cases.⁵⁶⁶ That travellers' cheques do not have greater currency than negotiable instruments and are not to be treated as the equivalent of banknotes has been decided by a South African authority.⁵⁶⁷ To date, the detailed analysis of travellers' cheques remains the province of American authorities which, thus, merit discussion. There are only three English cases in point.

The position of the traveller

34-174

Usually the relationship of "traveller", i.e. the person to whom the instrument is issued, and issuing banker does not give rise to problems. The issuing banker is obliged to pay the amount of the traveller's cheque to the traveller when it is presented and properly countersigned. Difficulties may, however, arise when the traveller loses the cheques. If the loss of the instruments occurs while they do not bear a countersignature, the traveller—in the absence of stipulation to the contrary—is entitled to obtain their face value from the issuing banker, provided he agrees to sign an indemnity.⁵⁶⁸ Such an indemnity would protect the banker if it turned out that, despite the travellers' statement, the cheques had been countersigned before they were lost. In such cases the banker would have to honour them when presented by a holder in due course,⁵⁶⁹ and the indemnity would enable him to recover the amount so paid from the traveller. The indemnity does not, however, enable the banker to recover from the traveller an amount paid to a holder who was not entitled to payment.⁵⁷⁰

Loss of uncountersigned cheque

34-175

In the absence of an express term to the contrary, the traveller's right to claim the face value of lost uncountersigned travellers' cheques does not depend on his notifying the banker promptly of their loss. In *Sullivan v Knauth*⁵⁷¹ the plaintiff lost uncountersigned travellers' cheques issued by the defendants and, having forgotten the defendants' name and address, did not notify them of the loss for several weeks. In the meantime the travellers' cheques, bearing forged countersignatures, were paid by the defendants to a third party. The defendants refused to reimburse the plaintiff and relied on a clause, printed on the folder which contained the travellers' cheques, by which prompt report of a loss was made a prerequisite to the defendants' duty to refund the amount of the cheques. It was held that the defendants' payment against forged countersignatures did not discharge them from their liability to reimburse the plaintiff.⁵⁷² An English court, though, could be persuaded to follow this decision only if it concluded that the clauses printed on the folder were not made terms of the contract entered into between the parties.⁵⁷³ As long as an express clause incorporated in the contract concluded between the issuer and the traveller at the time of the purchase of the instruments was reasonable and fair it would be hard to assail.⁵⁷⁴

Effect of clauses

34-176

That English courts will uphold express terms of a standard term contract respecting the purchase of travellers' cheques, provided the terms are clear, is demonstrated by recent cases. In Braithwaite v Thomas Cook Travellers' Cheques Ltd,⁵⁷⁵ the application signed by the traveller when he purchased the travellers' cheque rendered his right to obtain a refund subject to his having properly safeguarded each cheque against loss or theft. The traveller, who was allowed to leave the bank without signing the substantial bundle of cheques acquired by him, signed some of them whilst in the airport, others whilst in a coffee house and the remaining ones whilst travelling on the underground. Thereafter he spent an evening socialising, without making any arrangements to safeguard the instruments. It would appear that the paper bag in which he kept them after executing his signature was stolen when he fell asleep whilst travelling again on the underground. Dismissing his action for a refund, Schiemann J. held that the traveller had failed to safeguard the cheques properly and found he had, thus, acted carelessly. That such a finding would not, however, be made lightly is demonstrated by the slightly earlier decision in Fellus v National Westminster Bank Plc,⁵⁷⁶ in which Stuart-Smith J. held that a traveller was not negligent in the handling of his travellers' cheques simply because he left them in the pocket of a blazer which he had taken off for a few moments in a department store whilst trying on a new jacket. His Lordship further held that, in cases of this type, the onus of proof rested on the issuer, who would, accordingly, have to establish the traveller's negligence.

Ambiguous terms

34-177

That the courts strive to give clauses of the type under consideration a reasonable construction can be also gleaned from El Awadi v Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA.⁵⁷⁷ In this case, the standard terms executed by the traveller provided that a refund was to be subject to the bank's "approval". Hutchinson J. concluded that this clause did not have the effect of conferring on the issuer an absolute discretion respecting refunds. A refusal would have to be based on a breach by the traveller of one of the contractual obligations undertaken by him. His Lordship refused to regard the clause under consideration as imposing on the issuer a right to refuse to make a refund on the basis of the traveller's carelessness in the handling of the cheques. As the cheques involved had been lost or stolen before they had been countersigned, he held the issuer liable to reimburse the traveller.⁵⁷⁸ It is significant that, like Stuart-Smith J. in Fellus' case, Hutchinson J. referred to brochures published by financial institutions seeking to promote the sale of travellers' cheques, in which emphasis was placed on the safety provided by these instruments and on the provisions for refunds in cases of loss. An important additional argument in support of the decision in El Awadi's case is that, as the cheques involved had not been countersigned at the time of their loss, the issuer was not under an obligation to pay them on presentment. Why, then, should the traveller be refused a refund?

Loss after appending countersignature

34-178

If travellers' cheques are lost after they have been countersigned, the traveller is not entitled to claim payment from the bank, even if the loss is promptly reported. In *Emerson v American Express Co*⁵⁷⁹ it was held that the countersignature renders a traveller's cheque payable to bearer. As a result, the issuing banker becomes liable to honour the instrument when presented by a holder in due course.

The rights of a holder

34-179

A holder who obtains a properly countersigned cheque from the traveller or from a transferee is entitled to payment. Where a holder obtains a traveller's cheque from a person who does not have a good title, his rights depend, first, on the genuineness of the countersignature and, secondly, on his holding the cheque in due course. To be a holder in due course of a traveller's cheque the holder must be able to show that he took it in good faith, for valuable consideration and while it was complete and regular on its face.⁵⁸⁰ A traveller's cheque is considered as being complete on its face even while some spaces, which are in practice left blank until the cheque is paid, are not filled up. Thus, if the space meant for the name of the payee is usually left blank in a traveller's cheque, then a person can be a holder in due course even if he takes it with such a blank space.⁵⁸¹ However, if the traveller's cheque does not bear a countersignature, or bears a forged one, a holder cannot hold it in due course and cannot enforce payment.⁵⁸²

-
- 560. Hawkland (1966) 15 Buffalo L. Rev. 501; Ellinger (1969) 19 Univ. of Toronto L.J. 132; Stassen (1978) 95 S.A.L.J. 180; Frohlich (1980) 54 A.L.J. 388.
- 561. As to the meaning of “conditional”, see above, para.34-010 (regarding bills of exchange) and below, para.34-180 (regarding promissory notes).
- 562. See s.31(3) which applies, mutatis mutandis, to notes: s.89(1).
- 563. Contrast Stassen (1978) 95 S.A.L.J. 180 at 182–183, who argues that the countersignature is only a means of identification. This point, which is to be doubted, does not overcome the fact that—on its face—the order to pay is conditional. Contrast also Uniform Commercial Code s.3–106(c); E. McKendrick, Goode on Commercial Law, 4th edn (2010), pp.610–611.
- 564. So held in Ashford v Thomas Cook & Son (Bankers) Ltd (1970) 471 P. 2d 531, 532. See also S. v Katsikaris [1980] 3 S.A.L.R. 580, 592.
- 565. Goodwin v Robarts (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 337 (affirmed (1876) 1 App. Cas. 476); London Joint Stock Bank v Simmons [1892] A.C. 201; Venables v Baring Bros [1892] 3 Ch. 527; Bechuanaland Exploration Co v London Trading Bank [1898] 2 Q.B. 658; Edelstein v Schuler & Co [1902] 2 K.B. 144.
- 566. Fellus v National Westminster Bank Plc (1983) 133 New L.J. 766; Braithwaite v Thomas Cook Travellers Cheques Ltd [1989] Q.B. 553; El Awadi v Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA [1990] Q.B. 606.
- 567. S v Katsikaris [1980] 3 S.A.L.R. 580 at 592–593.
- 568. This is usually provided for in the form signed by the traveller when making application for the travellers’ cheques.
- 569. See below, para.34-179.
- 570. Sullivan v Knauth (1914) 146 N.Y.S. 583; affirmed (1915) 115 N.E. 460.
- 571. Above. But see now Uniform Commercial Code, ss.3–106(c), 3-305(a)(2).
- 572. The decision of the Court of Appeal in Burnett v Westminster Bank Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 742, indicates that a notice printed on a folder of a cheque book does not necessarily form a term of the contract of banker and customer.
- 573. For an illustration, see below, para.34-326.
- 574. For contracts made before October 1, 2015, the applicability of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 and the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/2083), will need to be considered in relation to any provision in the contract between issuer and the traveller. For such contracts made on or after October 1, 2015, Pt 2 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 amends the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Act 1977 so that it no longer applies to “consumer contracts” or “consumer notices” as defined by the new Act, and revokes and replaces the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999. For detailed analysis of the impact of the 2015 Act on the 1977 Act and 1999 Regulations, see below, Ch.38.
- 575. [1989] Q.B. 553. See also Thomas Cook Ltd v Kumari [2002] NSWCA 141.
- 576. (1983) 133 New L.J. 766.
- 577. [1990] Q.B. 606.

- 578. At 253-256, obiter, Hutchison J. said that if there had been no express term requiring the issuer to refund the value of the lost or stolen cheques such a term ought to be implied.
- 579. (1952) 90 A. 2d 236.
- 580. s.29 of the Act which provides the general definition of a holder in due course.
- 581. Emerson v American Express Co, above; cf. Gray v American Express Co, 239 S.E. 2d 621 (1977), in which, however, Emerson's case was not cited and where the holder observed the transferor's execution of both a signature and a countersignature. cf. Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), para.13–012: "it is doubtful whether [Emerson v American Express Co] would be followed in this country".
- 582. Samberg v American Express Co (1904) 99 N.W. 879; Sullivan v Knauth (1914) 146 N.Y.S. 583 . But see now Uniform Commercial Code ss.3–106 (c), 3-305(a)(2).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(d) - Promissory Notes

Definition34-180

A promissory note is an unconditional promise in writing made by one person to another, signed by the maker, engaging to pay on demand or at a fixed or determinable future time a sum certain in money, to, or to the order of, a specified person or to bearer. An instrument in the form of a note payable to the maker's order is not a promissory note unless and until it is indorsed by the maker. A note is not invalid by reason only that it contains also a pledge of collateral security with authority to sell or dispose thereof. But if a note is made to run concurrently with a charge in respect of which it is issued, the promise to pay may thereby be rendered conditional. ⁵⁸³ A note which is, or on the face of it, purports to be, both made and payable within the British Islands is an inland note. Any other note is a foreign note. ⁵⁸⁴

34-181

In Kirkwood v Carroll ⁵⁸⁵ it was held that a joint and several note for the payment of £225 by instalments, the whole to become due on default in payment of any one instalment, and providing that no time given to either party should prejudice the rights of the holder to proceed against any other party, was a valid promissory note. In Mason v Lack ⁵⁸⁶ an instrument in the form of a bill, signed by a person as drawer and not addressed to anyone, but accepted by another person, was held to be a promissory note and not a bill. In Haseldine v Winstanley, ⁵⁸⁷ a similar instrument, which had been completed by the holder, with the drawer's consent, by adding the name of the acceptor as addressee, was held to be good as a bill if the alteration was justifiable, or good as a note if it was not. An IOU containing a promise to pay is—provided the promise is in the terms specified in s.83—a promissory note. ⁵⁸⁸

Application of provisions regarding bills of exchange to promissory notes34-182

⚠ According to s.89(1) of the Act, the provisions relating to bills of exchange apply, with the necessary modifications, to promissory notes. ⁵⁸⁹ ⚠ According to s.89(2), in applying these provisions, the maker of the note is deemed to correspond with the acceptor of a bill, and the first indorser with the drawer of an accepted bill payable to his own order. Section 89(3) provides that the following provisions relating to bills of exchange do not apply to promissory notes:

(a)

those relating to presentment for acceptance (ss.39–44);

- (b) those relating to acceptance (ss.17–19);
- (c) those relating to acceptance supra protest (ss.65–67); and
- (d) those relating to bills in a set (s.71).

By s.89(4) protest is not required where a foreign note is dishonoured. ⁵⁹⁰ Further provisions, varying the law relating to promissory notes from that relating to bills of exchange, are set out in ss.84–88 of the Act, and will be discussed presently.

Delivery

34-183

According to s.84 a promissory note is inchoate and incomplete until its delivery to the payee or bearer. It should be noted that, as regards bills of exchange, s.21 enacts that a party may revoke his contract on the bill until he delivers it, but the section does not provide that the bill itself is inchoate. The proviso to s.21(1) as well as subss.(2) and (3) ⁵⁹¹ apply, mutatis mutandis, to promissory notes.

Joint and several notes

34-184

According to s.85 of the Act, a promissory note may be made by two or more makers, and they may be liable thereon jointly and severally, according to its tenor. Where a note reads “I promise to pay” and is signed by two or more persons, it is deemed to be their joint and several note. When two or more persons are jointly liable, a judgment against one of them, even though unsatisfied, is a bar to proceedings against the other or others, but not if the liability is several as well as joint. ⁵⁹² The fact that one of two joint makers of a note is not liable does not release the other. Thus, in Wauthier v Wilson ⁵⁹³ a father and his son, a minor, made a joint and several note in respect of a loan given to the son. It was held that the minor was not liable, but that the father was liable as principal debtor.

Note payable on demand

34-185

According to s.86, where a note payable on demand has been indorsed, it must be presented within a reasonable time. If it is not so presented the indorser is discharged. What amounts to reasonable time depends on the nature of the instrument, the usage of trade and the facts of the particular case. However, the section provides that, where a note payable on demand is negotiated, it is not deemed to be overdue—so as to prevent a holder from being a holder in due course—by reason that it appears that a reasonable time for presenting it for payment has elapsed since its issue.

Note given to secure payment of debt

34-186

Where a promissory note payable on demand is given to secure payment of a debt, the discharge of the debt does not, in itself, discharge the note. In Glasscock v Balls ⁵⁹⁴ the payee of a note payable on demand, who had as further security obtained a mortgage from the maker, realised the mortgage, and thus obtained the amount of a debt. He retained the note, and negotiated it to the plaintiff, who took it in good faith and for value. It was held that the note had not been paid, and that the plaintiff could recover from the maker.

Presentment for payment ⁵⁹⁵

34-187

Any promissory note must be presented for payment in order to render an indorser liable on it. ⁵⁹⁶ If the note is made payable at a particular place, it must be presented there. If the place of payment is indicated by way of memorandum only, the note may be presented at that place, but due presentment to the maker elsewhere suffices to render the indorser liable. ⁵⁹⁷ The maker's liability is subject to due presentment for payment only if the bill is made payable at a particular place. ⁵⁹⁸ A note is considered so payable only if the relevant words are imperative and constitute a part of the promise. ⁵⁹⁹ Thus, where a place of payment was indicated at the foot of the note, the maker was liable although the note was not presented for payment. ⁶⁰⁰

Limitation of action

34-188

The period of limitation under the Limitation Act 1980 runs in favour of the maker of a note payable on demand from the date of the note or its issue, and not from the date of demand. ⁶⁰¹

Liability of maker

34-189

The maker of the note is the principal debtor and his position is similar to that of an acceptor of a bill of exchange. ⁶⁰² Section 88(1) of the Act provides that the maker engages that he will pay the note according to its tenor. By s.88(2) the maker is precluded from denying to a holder in due course the existence of the payee and his capacity to indorse. ⁶⁰³

New forms of negotiable instruments

34-190

New forms of negotiable instruments have been making their appearance in recent years. Usually, they assume a form similar to that of a promissory note but, due to special terms incorporated in their text, fall outside the ambit of the definition of s.83. Thus, the instruments used in many note issue facilities (NIFS) provide for maturity of the "note" before the designated date in the event of a default under the underlying agreement. Such an instrument is, of course, not payable at a designated future time and hence does not constitute a promissory note. Another popular instrument is the negotiable certificate of deposit (NCD), which uses a language similar to that of an ordinary deposit receipt, ⁶⁰⁴ except that it is stated to be negotiable or transferable. However, many NCDs do not include an express promise of the issuer to repay the amount deposited either to the payee's order or to bearer. Such NCDs, therefore, do not constitute promissory notes.

Established by mercantile usage

34-191

Can the negotiability of such novel instruments be based on some other reasoning? It is true that the decision in Customs and Excise Commissioners v Guy Butler (Int) Ltd ⁶⁰⁵ suggests that NCDs constitute a novel form of negotiable instrument, established by a mercantile usage. The point, though, was not in issue in that case and the relevant passage is a mere observation. Cases concerning the recognition of modern mercantile usages establishing novel forms of negotiable instruments show that it is difficult to persuade courts to proclaim the validity of a new type of instrument. To be legally recognised, the usage has to be certain, reasonable, “notorious” and of a general standing. ⁶⁰⁶ Thus, although it is possible, perhaps even likely, that the courts would recognise the negotiability of NCDs if the point were argued and supported by forceful expert evidence, the outcome is not free from doubt. ⁶⁰⁷

^{583.} Bank of Montreal v Faulkner, 127 A.P.R. 256 (1987) Can.

^{584.} s.83. For the meaning of the following words, see section quoted: “unconditional”—s.3(1) and see Crouch v Crédit Foncier of England (1873) L.R. 8 Q.B. 374; Williamson v Rider [1963] 1 Q.B. 89, 97–98, 101 (above, para.34-010); cf. John Burrows Ltd v Subsurface Surveys Ltd [1968] S.C.R. 607, 614 (Canada); Creative Press Ltd v Harman (1973) I.R. 313 (Ireland); Emu Brewery Mezzanine Ltd v ASIC [2006] WASCA 105 (Australia); Re York Street Mezzanine Pty Ltd [2007] FCA 922 (Australia); Club Securities Ltd v Hurley [2008] 1 N.Z.L.R. 711 (New Zealand); “on demand”—s.10 and “fixed or determinable future time”—s.11 (above, paras 34-013 et seq.); “sum certain”—s.9 (above, para.34-019); “British Islands”—s.4 (below, para.34-197). A wider definition for the purposes of stamp duty considerations was applicable under s.33 of the Stamp Act 1891; this section was repealed following the abolition of stamp duty on promissory notes: the Finance Act 1970 s.32(a); Sch.7 Pt I para.2(2)(a); Sch.8 Pt V.

^{585.} [1903] 1 K.B. 531.

^{586.} (1929) 45 T.L.R. 363.

^{587.} [1936] 2 K.B. 101.

^{588.} Brooks v Elkins (1836) 2 M. & W. 74; Muir v Muir, 1912 1 S.L.T. 304.

^{589.}  See, e.g. Banque Cantonale de Genève v Sanomi [2016] EWHC 3353 (Comm), where Blair J., applying s.8(1) of the Act, held (at [29]) that the promissory notes in question were negotiable because they lacked any words prohibiting transfer or indicating an intention that they should not be transferable and that, in any event, a promissory note which is not negotiable is valid between the parties. Blair J. also (i) applied (at [31]) the well-established principle in English law that the holder of bills and notes is usually entitled to summary judgment because, in principle, a bill or note is to be treated as cash; (ii) held (at [32]–[36]), having been referred to the requirement in s.83(1) of the Act that a promissory note must be in writing, that there is a principle (admittedly, of uncertain scope) to the effect that oral evidence is not admissible to contradict the terms of the written instrument; and (iii) held (at [46]–[62]) that the promisee bank in the present case had provided consideration to support the maker’s promise on the notes in question by promising and actually forbearing to sue a third party company (of which the maker of the notes was the founder) for its existing indebtedness owed to the bank.

^{590.} A fortiori protest will not be required where an inland note is dishonoured: s.51.

^{591.} As to which, see above, para.34-034.

^{592.} Kendall v Hamilton (1879) 4 App. Cas. 504.

^{593.} (1912) 28 T.L.R. 239.

^{594.} (1889) 24 Q.B.D. 13.

- 595. The requirement of presentment of a promissory note for payment is to be found in s.87 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, and is summarised in this paragraph. However, s.87 is subject to Pt 4A of the 1882 Act (presentment by electronic means), inserted by s.13 of the Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Act 2015: see above, paras 34-153—34-154.
- 596. s.87(2).
- 597. s.87(3).
- 598. s.87(1); as to what constitutes a “particular place”, see Eimco Corp v Tutt Bryant Ltd [1970] 2 N.S.W.R. 249. cf. Day v Bate (1979) 41 F.L.R. 222 Aust.
- 599. Re British Trade Corp Ltd [1932] 2 Ch. 1.
- 600. Masters v Baretto (1849) 8 C.B. 433.
- 601. Norton v Ellam (1837) 2 M. & W. 461.
- 602. s.89(2), discussed in para.34-182, above.
- 603. Compare the estoppels concerning the acceptor of a bill: s.54 of the Act, discussed in para.34-113, above.
- 604. Which, unlike a promissory note, does not spell out a duty to pay.
- 605. [1977] Q.B. 377, 382.
- 606. See above, para.34-005.
- 607. For endorsement of the view that NCDs are negotiable by mercantile usage, see McKendrick, Goode on Commercial Law, 4th edn (2010), pp.613–614; A. McKnight, The Law of International Finance (2008), para.10.4.3.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(e) - Negotiable Instruments in the Conflict of Laws ⁶⁰⁸
(i) - General

Determining negotiability

34-192

Whether an instrument is negotiable or not is determined in an English court according to English law. Thus, if by a mercantile usage, prevailing in England, an instrument is treated as being negotiable, the courts will be prepared to treat it as such. ⁶⁰⁹ As the recognition in England of a usage establishing the negotiability of an instrument depends mainly on the prevalence of the usage in this country, it is possible that an instrument may not be considered as negotiable in England although it is so considered in the country of its issue. ⁶¹⁰ Negotiable instruments, however, are usually of international standing and in most cases a usage establishing the negotiability of a class of instruments will prevail not only in the place of issue of such an instrument but also at the place of payment. Generally, if an instrument derives its negotiability from a general or universal mercantile usage, it is likely that the usage will be recognised as applying in England. ⁶¹¹

Sources of law

34-193

There are a number of express provisions in the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 concerning conflict of laws. They constitute a basis, but not an exhaustive ⁶¹² regulation, of the rules of private international law applicable to bills of exchange, cheques and promissory notes. ⁶¹³ These are augmented by decisions applying general principles of the conflict of laws.

34-194

Article 1(2)(d) of the Rome I Regulation (EC) 593/2008 provides that "obligations arising under bills of exchange, cheques and promissory notes and other negotiable instruments to the extent that the obligations under such other negotiable instruments arise out of their negotiable character" are excluded from the scope of the Regulation. ⁶¹⁴ A similar exclusion is contained in art.1(2)(c) of the Rome II Regulation (EC) 864/2007 on the law applicable to non-contractual obligations.

International conventions

34-195

It is perhaps unfortunate that the United Kingdom has not adopted the two treaties of the Geneva Convention of 1930 relating to the conflict of laws in respect of negotiable instruments. ⁶¹⁵

Series of contracts

34-196

It is essential for an examination of the conflict problems arising in connection with bills of exchange to remember that a bill of exchange does not represent a single contract but a series of different promises which, while closely interconnected because they are embodied in the same instrument, are nevertheless in many respects independent. This explains why the different promises contained in a bill of exchange may be subject to different legal systems. ⁶¹⁶

34-197

The sections of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 dealing with conflict rules run as follows:

“4.—

- (1) An inland bill is a bill which is or on the face of it purports to be (a) both drawn and payable within the British Islands or (b) drawn within the British Islands upon some person resident therein. Any other bill is a foreign bill. ⁶¹⁷ For the purposes of this Act “British Islands” mean any part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, ⁶¹⁸ the Islands of Man, Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, and Sark, and the islands adjacent to any of them being part of the dominions of Her Majesty.
- (2) Unless the contrary appear on the face of the bill the holder may treat it as an inland bill.”

“72. Where a bill drawn in one country is negotiated, accepted or payable in another, the rights, duties, and liabilities of the parties thereto are determined as follows:

- (1) The validity of a bill as regards requisites in form is determined by the law of the place of issue, and the validity as regards requisites in form of the supervening contracts, such as acceptance, or indorsement, or acceptance supra protest, is determined by the law of the place where such contract was made. Provided that—
 - (a) Where a bill is issued out of the United Kingdom, it is not invalid by reason only that it is not stamped in accordance with the law of the place of issue.
 - (b) Where a bill, issued out of the United Kingdom, conforms, as regards requisites in form, to the law of the United Kingdom, it may, for the purpose of enforcing payment thereof, be treated as valid as between all persons who negotiate, hold, or become parties to it in the United Kingdom.
- (2) Subject to the provisions of this Act, the interpretation of the drawing, indorsement, acceptance, or acceptance supra protest of a bill, is determined by the law of the place where such contract is made. Provided that where an inland bill is indorsed in a foreign country the indorsement shall as regards the payer be interpreted according to the law of the United Kingdom.

- (3) The duties of the holder with respect to presentment for acceptance or payment and the necessity for or sufficiency of a protest or notice of dishonour, or otherwise, are determined by the law of the place where the act is done or the bill is dishonoured.
- (4) ... 619
- (5) Where a bill is drawn in one country and is payable in another, the due date thereof is determined according to the law of the place where it is payable.”

Summary

34-198

It follows from s.4 that a foreign bill is one which is either (a) drawn by a person who is not resident in the British Isles; or (b) drawn by a person resident in the British Isles on a person abroad and payable abroad. It should be noted that, if a bill is drawn and payable in the British Isles, it is not a foreign bill, even if the payee resides abroad. Moreover, an inland bill does not become a foreign bill because of any subsequent contract embodied in it, as for instance by indorsements effected in foreign countries. The most important difference between an inland and a foreign bill is that a foreign bill must be protested if dishonoured, while a protest is not, usually, required in the case of an inland bill. 620

34-199

Section 72 applies where an instrument “drawn in one country is negotiated, accepted, or payable in another”. Section 72 has no application where all matters connected with the instrument take place in one country. 621 As regards the reference in s.72 to “the place of issue” or “the place where the contract is made” it should be recollected that:

“every contract on a bill, whether it be the drawer’s, the acceptor’s or an indorser’s, is incomplete and revocable until delivery of the instrument.” 622

Thus, the bill must be considered as issued, and each contract as concluded, at the place in which delivery takes place, and not at the place at which the promisor signs the document. 623

608. See Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn (2012), para.33R–334 et seq.

609. Goodwin v Roberts (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 337 (affirmed (1876) 1 App. Cas. 476); Edelstein v Schuler & Co [1902] 2 K.B. 144. See also Bechuanaland Exploration Co v London Trading Bank [1898] 2 Q.B. 658.

610. Picker v London and County Banking Co (1887) 18 Q.B.D. 515.

611. See above, especially Easton v London Joint Stock Bank (1886) 34 Ch. D. 95, 113 (reversed on a different point sub nom. Sheffield v London Joint Stock Bank (1888) 13 App. Cas. 333).

- 612. Re Gillespie (1886) 18 Q.B.D. 286, 293; Embiricos v Anglo-Austrian Bank [1905] 1 K.B. 677, 685; Koechlin et Cie v Kestenbaum Bros [1927] 1 K.B. 889, 895; Zebrarise Ltd v De Niefte [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 154 at [36].
- 613. While the provisions refer to bills of exchange they apply, mutatis mutandis, to cheques (s.73) and to promissory notes (s.89); and see Embiricos v Anglo-Austrian Bank, above.
- 614. An identical provision was previously set out in art.1(2)(c) of the 1980 Rome Convention on the Law applicable to Contractual Obligations (applied in the UK under the Contracts (Applicable Law) Act 1990), which was replaced, from December 17, 2009 by the Rome I Regulation. For analysis of the Rome I Regulation, see Vol.I, paras 30-129 et seq.
- 615. The Convention for the Settlement of Certain Conflicts of Laws in Connection with Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes, signed on June 7, 1930, League of Nations Treaty Series, Vol.CXLII, p.319, No.3314 (hereinafter: Geneva Convention on Bills) and the Convention for the Settlement of Certain Conflicts of Laws in Connection with Cheques, signed on March 19, 1931, as before, p.409, No.3317 (hereinafter: Geneva Convention on Cheques).
- 616. Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn (2012), paras 3–335 et seq.; see also Lebel v Tucker (1867) L.R. 3 Q.B. 77, 83; Geneva Convention on Bills arts 2, 3, 4; Geneva Convention on Cheques arts 2, 4, 5.
- 617. As regards the corresponding provisions regarding promissory notes, see s.83(4) referred to in para.34-184, above. And see Canadian Life Assurance Co v Canadian Bank of Imperial Commerce, 98 D.L.R. (3d) 670 (1979).
- 618. The Republic of Ireland is not included: see Irish Free State (Consequential Adaptation of Enactments) Order 1923 (SR & O 1923/405) r.2.
- 619. s.72(4) has been repealed by s.4 of the Administration of Justice Act 1977.
- 620. s.51. Promissory notes need not be protested: s.89(4).
- 621. Karafarin Bank v Dara (No.2) [2009] EWHC 3265 (Comm), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 236 at [10], Blair J.
- 622. s.21. See Aspinall's Club Ltd v Al-Zayat [2007] EWHC 362 (Comm) at [16], reversed on other grounds [2007] EWCA Civ 1001. As regards promissory notes, see s.84, discussed in para.34-183, above. See Zebrarise Ltd v De Niefte [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 154 at [36].
- 623. Chapman v Cottrell (1865) 3 H. & C. 865.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(e) - Negotiable Instruments in the Conflict of Laws ⁶⁰⁸
(ii) - Form

Generally

34-200

Section 72(1) enacts as a general rule that every separate contract contained in a bill of exchange has to satisfy the formal requirements of the law of the place where the contract has been concluded. Compliance with the proper law of the contract, which in the case of simple contracts may be alternative to compliance of form with the lex loci contractus, ⁶²⁴ is thus excluded. The following issues have been regarded as questions of form, viz whether a bill of exchange contains an unconditional or conditional order, ⁶²⁵ or whether an undisclosed agent can execute an indorsement binding on his principal. ⁶²⁶ The Act provides two exceptions to the rule that the validity of form depends on the law of the place at which the contract is made, and these will be discussed presently.

Foreign stamp law

34-201

Section 72(1)(a) lays down that a bill of exchange is not invalidated merely because it fails to comply with the stamp law in the place of issue. An English court will, thus, treat a bill as valid although a court in the place of issue may be obliged to treat it as void or unenforceable.

Foreign bills

34-202

Another exception to the rule that the lex loci contractus prevails as regards the form of a bill of exchange, is to be found in s.72(1)(b) of the Act. It provides that if a bill, issued outside the United Kingdom, conforms, as regards requisites of form, to the law of the United Kingdom, it is to be treated as valid as between all the persons who have become parties to it in the United Kingdom. However, even as between these parties it is to be treated as being valid only for the purpose of enforcing payment. ⁶²⁷

⁶⁰⁸. See Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn (2012), para.33R–334 et seq.

⁶²⁴. See Vol.I, paras 30-129 et seq. (Under art.3 of the Geneva Convention on Bills, the form must, subject to certain exceptions, comply with the requirements of the place in which each contract has been signed; the same principle applies under the Geneva Convention on Cheques art.4.)

- 625. Guaranty Trust Co of New York v Hannay & Co [1918] 1 K.B. 43. The decision was reversed by the Court of Appeal on a different point: [1918] 2 K.B. 623.
- 626. Koechlin et Cie v Kestenbaum Bros [1927] 1 K.B. 889, per Bankes L.J. at 896–897, Sargant L.J., dubitante, at 899.
- 627. The following cases were decided before the Act, but appear to be good law: Bradlaugh v De Rin (1870) L.R. 5 C.P. 473; Re Marseilles Extension Railway and Land Co (1885) 30 Ch. D. 598, 603.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(e) - Negotiable Instruments in the Conflict of Laws ⁶⁰⁸
(iii) - Essential Validity

Essential validity

34-203

Section 72(2) of the Act provides that the “interpretation” of a contract contained in a bill is to be governed by the law of the country in which the contract is made. In this context, the term “interpretation” has to be construed liberally. The draftsman of the Act suggested that this term “clearly includes the obligations of the parties as deduced from such interpretation”. ⁶²⁸ This view has been confirmed by judicial authority. In Alcock v Smith, ⁶²⁹ Romer J. observed that “interpretation” in this subsection includes “the legal effect” of the contract. This subsection deals, therefore, with what is usually called the essential, as opposed to the formal, validity of the contract. The construction and interpretation of the document, the quality and import of the obligations arising from the agreement of the parties, the legality of the promises embodied in the document—these and similar questions all fall under the subsection. The Act admits, however, of an exception, which will be examined later, ⁶³⁰ to the rule applying the lex loci contractus to questions of essential validity.

34-204

The Act, thus, replaces the proper law doctrine by a rigid application of the lex loci contractus. The exclusion of the lex loci solutionis leads to a remarkable result. A bill drawn in England, on a drawee in New York but payable in Montreal, would—as regards matters of the essential validity of the bill, arising in a dispute concerning the drawee’s contract—be governed by the law prevailing in New York and not Montreal. The proper law doctrine, on the other hand, might well lead to the application of the lex loci solutionis, i.e. the law of Montreal. ⁶³¹ However, in most cases a bill would be payable at the place of acceptance. ⁶³²

Embiricos

34-205

The operation of the principle laid down in subs.(2) of s.72 is illustrated by Embiricos v Anglo-Austrian Bank. ⁶³³ In this case, the validity of an indorsement was in issue. A Roumanian bank drew, in Roumania, a cheque on a London bank payable to the plaintiffs’ order. The plaintiffs indorsed the cheque in Roumania to a London firm and posted it to them. A clerk of the plaintiffs stole the cheque, forged the indorsement of the London firm and negotiated the cheque to bankers in Vienna, who in good faith paid its value to the fraudulent clerk. The Vienna bank then indorsed the cheque to the defendants in London and the latter presented it to the drawees who honoured the cheque. By this action the plaintiffs claimed back the money from the defendants, alleging conversion of the cheque. The defence was that, according to Austrian law, the defendants had acquired a good title from their Austrian transferor, and that, according to Austrian law, a bona fide indorsee may acquire a title even under a forged indorsement. The plaintiffs replied that the title of the defendants had to be ascertained according to English law, which does not recognise a good title through a forged indorsement. The Court of Appeal held that the validity of the indorsement was governed by Austrian law and decided, therefore, in favour of the defendants. Vaughan Williams and Romer L.JJ. based their decision on the ground that Austrian law was the law governing the transfers of the cheque. Stirling L.J. and Walton J. who had decided the case in the King's Bench Division, attached more weight to the additional ground that the case was covered by s.72(2) of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882.⁶³⁴

Transfer

34-206

The reference in s.72(2) to the case of indorsements indicates that the lex loci contractus applies also to the negotiation of a bill. In *Koechlin et Cie v Kestenbaum Bros*⁶³⁵ a bill of exchange was drawn in France by one E.V. on the defendants. The payee was one M.V. who was the father of the drawer and likewise resided in France. The bill was accepted by the defendants and was made payable at a bank in London. Subsequently, the bill was indorsed by the drawer E.V. in his own name to the plaintiffs, but it never showed an indorsement of the payee M.V. The defendants refused to pay the bill. The plaintiffs maintained that they were holders in due course and sued the defendants as acceptors. The defence was that the indorsement was irregular on its face because it did not emanate from the payee (as required by s.31(3) of the Act), and that, according to English law, no oral evidence was admissible to show that E.V. acted as agent for the payee. The plaintiffs replied that, as the validity of the indorsement was governed by French law, E.V.'s indorsement was good. The Court of Appeal held that the case was covered by s.72 of the Act and that the validity of the indorsement was to be determined according to French law. The court, therefore, gave judgment against the defendants. Sargent L.J. was inclined to consider the issue as a question of form governed by s.72(1), but explained that if it were not covered by that subsection, it was covered by subs.(2):

“... in view of the very wide effect of the decision in Embircos v Anglo-Austrian Bank.⁶³⁶ ... If the indorsement in fact made is, according to the law of the place where it is made, sufficient to give a title to the indorsee, it appears to me that by the express terms of the Act the indorsee is entitled to sue. The effect is not to increase the liabilities of the acceptor, but merely to enlarge the methods by which the right to enforce those liabilities can be transferred from the person originally entitled to them to some subsequent indorsee.”⁶³⁷

Exception to the application of the lex loci contractus

34-207

It is now necessary to consider the exception admitted by the Act to the rule that the essential validity of a contract contained in a bill of exchange is determined by the law of the place where the contract is made. The proviso to subs.(2) enacts that, in the case of an inland bill indorsed in a foreign country, the indorsement is to be interpreted, as regards the payer, according to the law of the United Kingdom. It codifies the law as it stood before the Act.⁶³⁸ Thus, where an inland bill was indorsed in France in a manner void according to French but valid according to English law, it was held that the obligation of the acceptor towards the indorsee was not affected thereby.⁶³⁹ As a result, the purchaser of an inland bill is in a more favourable position than the purchaser of a foreign bill whose rights may be defeated by some infirmity imposed by foreign law. Conversely, the liability of the acceptor may be greater in the case of a foreign bill than in the case of an inland bill. The situation which existed prior to the Act and which the Act purported to adopt was described by Sargent L.J. as follows:

“The result was that any one dealing with a foreign bill of exchange was in a less certain position than a person dealing with an inland bill, because in the case of an indorsement abroad on a foreign bill he might find substituted for the person to whom he was originally liable as acceptor not merely a person to whom the transfer would have been good if made in England, but a person to whom the transfer by indorsement would be good if made according to the law of the country in which it was made.” ⁶⁴⁰

-
- ⁶⁰⁸. See Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn (2012), para.33R–334 et seq.
- ⁶²⁸. Chalmers, Bills of Exchange, 13th edn, p.241 (and see currently 17th edn, 2009, para.12-015), cited with approval in Nova (Jersey) Knit Ltd v Kammgarn Spinnerei GmbH [1979] 1 W.L.R. 713, 718.
- ⁶²⁹. [1892] 1 Ch. 238, 256. See also Embiricos v Anglo-Austrian Bank [1905] 1 K.B. 677. As regards illegality, see Moulis v Owen [1907] 1 K.B. 746; Belize Bank Ltd v Association of Concerned Belizeans [2011] UKPC 35 at [45]. See also Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn (2012), paras 33–350 et seq.
- ⁶³⁰. See below, para.34-207.
- ⁶³¹. For a criticism of the provision, see Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn (2012), para.33–350.
- ⁶³². Under art.4 of the Geneva Convention on Bills, the law of the place at which the bill is payable determines the effect of the acceptance; the effect of other signatures is determined by the law of the place at which they are affixed. See also the Geneva Convention on Cheques art.5, applying the lex loci contractus.
- ⁶³³. [1905] 1 K.B. 677.
- ⁶³⁴. As regards the construction of an aval (viz guarantee), see G & H Montage GmbH v Irvani [1988] 1 W.L.R. 1285 (affirmed [1990] 1 W.L.R. 667).
- ⁶³⁵. [1927] 1 K.B. 889. See also Alcock v Smith [1892] 1 Ch. 238.
- ⁶³⁶. [1905] 1 K.B. 677.
- ⁶³⁷. [1927] 1 K.B. at 899. The lex loci contractus applies likewise under the Geneva Convention on Bills art.4, and under the Geneva Convention on Cheques art.5; the latter however applies some special rules in art.7.
- ⁶³⁸. De la Chaumette v Bank of England (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 385; Lebel v Tucker (1867) L.R. 3 Q.B. 77.
- ⁶³⁹. Lebel v Tucker, above.
- ⁶⁴⁰. Koechlin et Cie v Kestenbaum Bros [1927] 1 K.B. 889, 898.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 1. - Negotiable Instruments
(e) - Negotiable Instruments in the Conflict of Laws ⁶⁰⁸
(iv) - Performance

Duties of holder

34-208

The rules relating to the performance of obligations arising from the bill are to be found in subss.(3) and (5) of s.72. The first of these enacts that the duties of the holder, as well as the sufficiency of the performance of his duties (e.g. presentment for acceptance and payment) are to be governed by the law of the place where the act is done or the bill is dishonoured. ⁶⁴¹ These two places will usually coincide. It should be noted that the holder's performance of his duty to present the bill for payment, and his duty of sending a notice of dishonour and protesting the bill, are not usually prerequisites for charging the acceptor. ⁶⁴² However, where any prerequisites exist before the holder may sue the acceptor, it is reasonable to assume that they should be governed by the law of the place of the acceptor. ⁶⁴³

Effect of failure to perform

34-209

Greater difficulties arise as regards the effect which the failure of the holder to perform any of his duties has—once the bill is dishonoured—on his rights against the drawer and indorsers, and the rights of each indorser against antecedent parties. The problem in particular is whether a notice of dishonour, which is necessary to preserve the rights of a holder or indorser against antecedent parties, is sufficient and valid. Here two interpretations of subs.(3) are possible, viz that the mode and sufficiency of the notice of dishonour are governed by the law of the place where the acceptor has to pay the bill, ⁶⁴⁴ or that these incidents depend on the contract between indorser and indorsee, and consequently are governed by the law of the place where this contract is to be discharged. ⁶⁴⁵ Both interpretations are reconcilable with the words of the subsection, though the former view does not strain the words of the enactment as much as the latter.

Suggested construction

34-210

It is suggested that the true meaning of this subsection is that the mode and sufficiency of the notice of dishonour are, as between indorsers, governed by the same law that determines ancillary rules relating to payment by the acceptor, i.e. by the law of the place where the bill was made payable and dishonoured. Three reasons can be advanced in favour of this view: first, the indorser, when negotiating the bill, is fully aware where the bill has to be paid.

“The indorser of a bill accepted payable in France, promises to pay in the event of dishonour in France, and notice thereof. By his contract he must be taken to know the law of France relating to the dishonour of bills; and notice of dishonour is a portion of that law.” ⁶⁴⁶

Secondly, on principle, it is preferable that questions extending to protest and notice of dishonour should, as far as the indorsers of a bill are concerned, be regulated by a single law rather than by several legal systems. Thirdly, it should be noted that the indorser's undertaking is, in the first place, that the bill will be honoured by the drawee, and only in the second place, that upon its dishonour, he will pay it himself. ⁶⁴⁷ The indorser's main promise is, thus, that the bill will be paid in the acceptor's place, where the holder has, under his contract with the indorser, to seek payment. The construction of s.72(3), which is supported in this book, gives effect to the intention of the parties.

34-211

The result is that all ancillary rules with respect to presentment for acceptance or payment, or with respect to protest or notice of dishonour, are, in principle, governed by a single law, i.e. the law prevailing at the place of the payment of the bill, no matter whether the dispute concerns the original promise of the acceptor or a subsequent contract between indorser and indorsee.

Amount payable

34-212

Until 1977 the position was governed by s.72(4) of the Act, based on the traditional common law rule under which a foreign debt was to be converted into sterling on the basis of the rate prevailing at the time at which payment was due. The introduction of the new rule, sanctioning the conversion of a foreign debt on the basis of the rate prevailing at the time at which payment is enforced by the court, has led to the repeal of s.72(4). Under the new doctrine, the holder is entitled to bring an action to enforce payment of the bill in the foreign currency in which it is expressed. ⁶⁴⁸

Date of payment

34-213

Section 72(5) provides that where a bill is drawn in one country and payable in another, the date of payment is determined by the law of the place at which the bill is payable. Thus, in Re Francke and Rasch ⁶⁴⁹ an English bank purchased before the First World War bills payable in Germany and Austria. The war legislation of these countries postponed the maturity of the bills indefinitely. The English bank brought an action against the acceptor in the English courts but failed because the postponement of the dates of maturity by the German and Austrian decrees was effective against the holder.

⁶⁰⁸. See Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn (2012), para.33R–334 et seq.

⁶⁴¹. For a criticism of this section, see Dicey, Morris and Collins on the Conflict of Laws, 15th edn (2012), paras 33–367—33–372. See also the Geneva Convention on Bills art.8; Geneva Convention on Cheques art.8.

⁶⁴². See above, para.34-114.

⁶⁴³. cf. Foote, Private International Law, 5th edn, pp.460–461, who thinks that it is “at least reasonable to presume that these incidents of non-payment will be governed by the same law that applies to all incidents of payment". As regards the question of the necessity for presentment, see Banku Polskiego v K J Mulder & Co [1941] 2 K.B. 266 (affirmed [1942] 1 K.B. 497); Cornelius v Banque Franco-Serbe [1941] 2 All E.R. 728, 732 (the case is also reported in [1942] 1 K.B. 29, where the relevant passage does not occur).

644. Rothschild v Currie (1841) 1 Q.B. 43; Hirschfeld v Smith (1866) L.R. 1 C.P. 340.

645. Horne v Rouquette (1878) 3 Q.B.D. 514; Westlake, Private International Law, 7th edn, para.232, pp.322–323.

646. Hirschfeld v Smith, above, at 352. See also Cornelius v Banque Franco-Serbe [1941] 2 All E.R. 728, 732 (the relevant passage does not appear in the report of the case in [1942] 1 K.B. 29).

647. See s.55(2)(a) of the Act.

648. See above, para.34-118.

649. [1918] 1 Ch. 470. See also Rouquette v Overmann (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 525. In Banku Polskiego v K J Mulder & Co [1941] 2 K.B. 266 (affirmed [1942] 1 K.B. 497), the bills were payable in London and not in Amsterdam, the acceptor being a firm in London and having accepted the bills generally.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law

Introduction

34-214

The treatment of banking law in this section of the chapter is concerned with the relationship of banker and customer. In order to place that relationship in its proper context, it is necessary to begin with an outline of the way banking activities are controlled in the United Kingdom.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(a) - Bank Regulation
(i) - Overview

Financial Services and Markets Act 2000

34-215

Section 19 of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ("the FSMA 2000") provides that no person may carry on, or purport to carry on, a regulated activity in the United Kingdom unless authorised or exempt. Deposit-taking is included in the list of regulated activities contained in Sch.2 to the Act. ⁶⁵⁰ Until mid-1998, the authorisation and supervision of deposit-taking institutions was a function of the Bank of England. However, a series of high-profile financial scandals in the 1990s raised doubts over whether the Bank of England was an effective supervisor and led the government to introduce legislation transferring the Bank of England's banking supervision function to a new super-regulatory body called the Financial Services Authority (FSA). The transfer was effected by the Bank of England Act 1998, which came into force on June 1, 1998. From December 1, 2001, the FSA assumed full regulatory powers in relation to banking, insurance and investment business under the FSMA 2000. ⁶⁵¹

Financial Services Act 2012

34-216

⚠ The banking crisis of 2007-2008 led to wide-spread criticism of the role and performance of the FSA. This resulted in the Government proposing reform of the regulatory system. ⁶⁵² ⚠ Financial Services Act 2012 received Royal Assent on December 18, 2013. The new Act substantially amends the FSMA 2000 and introduces key structural changes to the structure of financial regulation in the UK. The FSA was dismantled and replaced by two new regulatory bodies. First, responsibility for significant prudential regulation was transferred from the FSA to a new Prudential Regulation Authority (PRA), an operationally independent subsidiary of the Bank of England. The PRA's regulatory remit extends to deposit-taking, insurance business and dealing in investments as principal. ⁶⁵³ Secondly, the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA) was tasked with the regulation of the conduct of business of all financial firms, including retail conduct and market conduct. The FCA is also responsible for the prudential regulation of firms that are not regulated by the PRA and, since April 2014, for the regulation of consumer credit business. ⁶⁵⁴ Finally, the 2012 Act gave the Bank of England, acting through a new Financial Policy Committee, macro-prudential responsibility for oversight of the financial system.

The Prudential Regulation Authority (PRA) and the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA)

34-217

⚠ Since April 1, 2013, the PRA has been responsible for the prudential regulation of those firms considered by the Government to be systemically important, such as banks, insurers and significant investment firms.⁶⁵⁵ These firms may be described as “dual-regulated” firms (or PRA-authorized firms) because they are also regulated by the FCA for conduct of business purposes. The FCA is responsible for the conduct of business regulation of all firms, including dual-regulated firms. The PRA and the FCA are under a statutory duty to coordinate their approach to the regulation of dual-regulated firms. The FCA is also responsible for the prudential regulation of firms not regulated by the PRA. The FCA has also taken over the majority of the FSA’s market regulatory functions, including the FSA’s role as the UK Listing Authority. The PRA and the FCA each have their own separate handbook of rules and, in the case of the FCA, guidance.⁶⁵⁶ ⚠

Demise of the Banking Codes

34-218

Prior to November 1, 2009, in an attempt to ward off the threat of increased statutory control of banking activities, especially in the retail sector, the banking industry engaged in a series of measures based on voluntary self-regulation. The most notable of these measures was the introduction in 1992 of a voluntary code of best practice for banks and building societies when dealing with personal customers in the UK. The code, known as the Banking Code, was revised on a number of occasions. In March 2002 the banking industry introduced the Business Banking Code, a voluntary code of best practice for banks when dealing with small business customers (i.e. non-personal account holders with an annual turnover of less than £1 million or an income of under £1 million in the case of charities and clubs). On November 1, 2009, the Banking Code and the Business Banking Code were replaced by the FSA’s (now FCA’s) new Banking Conduct of Business Sourcebook (BCOBS) and the Payment Services Regulations 2009.⁶⁵⁷

Banking Conduct of Business Sourcebook (BCOBS)

34-219

⚠ BCOBS applies to all banks, building societies and credit unions. The change coincides with the introduction of the new Payment Services Regulations 2009 (PSRs) implementing the Payment Services Directive in the UK.⁶⁵⁸ ⚠ The PSRs apply to most retail bank accounts and themselves supersede about 40 per cent of the provisions of the Banking Codes.⁶⁵⁹ BCOBS and the PSRs together form what has been described as the new Banking and Payment Services conduct regime.⁶⁶⁰ As originally envisaged, the FSA was central to the supervision and enforcement of this new regime, but that function shifted to the FCA on April 1, 2013.⁶⁶¹ Outside the new regime, there is also a self-regulatory Lending Code setting out standards of good practice for banks, building societies and credit card providers with regards to loans, overdrafts, and credit and charge cards provided to consumers, micro-enterprises and small charities.⁶⁶² ⚠

34-220

⚠ BCOBS is the FCA’s Handbook module relating to retail banking conduct of business. It applies to firms⁶⁶³ with respect to the regulated activity of accepting deposits from banking customers carried on from an establishment in the UK and activities connected with that activity (e.g. cheques and foreign exchange).⁶⁶⁴ Except as provided for in BCOBS 1.1.4R, BCOBS does not apply to payment services where Pts 5 and 6 of the Payment Services Regulations 2009 apply.⁶⁶⁵ ⚠ BCOBS 1.1.4R(1) provides that Chs 2, 5 and 6 of BCOBS (except BCOBS 5.1.11R-5.1.19R) apply to payment services where Pts 5 and 6 of the Payment Services Regulations 2009 apply.⁶⁶⁶ ⚠ But a firm is not subject to BCOBS to the extent that it would be contrary to the UK’s obligations under an EU instrument.⁶⁶⁷ Banking customers are defined as consumers, micro-enterprises⁶⁶⁸ and charities with an annual income of less than £1 million. ⁶⁶⁹

34-221

⚠ BCOBS provides rules and guidance on the following areas of activity to the extent that this would not be contrary to the provisions of the Payment Services Directive ⁶⁷⁰: communications with banking customers and financial promotions ⁶⁷¹; distance communications, including the requirements of the Distance Marketing Directive and the E-commerce Directive ⁶⁷²; information to be communicated to banking customers, including appropriate information and statements of account ⁶⁷³; post-sale requirements on prompt, efficient and fair service, moving accounts, and lost and dormant accounts ⁶⁷⁴; and cancellation, including the right to cancel and the effects of cancellation. ⁶⁷⁵ Under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, s.138D(2), a “private person” who has suffered loss as the result of a breach of the BCOBS rules has a right of action, as if it were an actionable breach of statutory duty. ⁶⁷⁶ ⚠

The Lending Code

34-222

⚠ Those parts of the Banking Codes that dealt with overdrafts, unsecured credit and credit cards are not found replicated in the BCOBS or in the Payment Services Regulations. Instead, the British Bankers Association, the Building Societies Association and the UK Cards Association have produced a new self-regulatory Lending Code that provides banks, building societies and credit card providers with minimum standards of good practice in relation to loans, overdrafts and credit and charge cards offered to consumers, microenterprises and small charities. ⁶⁷⁷ ⚠ The Code applies to lending in sterling, although subscribers are free to apply its standards to lending in other currencies.

⁶⁷⁸ ⚠ Compliance with the terms of the Code is independently monitored and enforced by the Lending Standards Board. ⁶⁷⁹

Payment Services Regulations

34-223

⚠ The Payment Services Directive, ⁶⁸⁰ ⚠ implemented in the UK through the Payment Services Regulations 2009 (PSRs), ⁶⁸¹ introduces a new regulatory regime for payment services from November 1, 2009. ⁶⁸² Payment services include the execution of payment transactions, card issuing, merchant acquiring, money remittance, certain services based on mobile phones or other electronic devices, and the operation of “payment accounts”. Regulation 2 defines a “payment account” as “an account held in the name of one or more payment service users which is used for the execution of payment transactions”, and a “payment transaction” as “an act, initiated by the payer or payee, of placing, transferring or withdrawing funds, irrespective of any underlying obligations between the payer and the payee”. Thus, payment accounts include current accounts and easy access savings accounts. The PSRs focus only on electronic means of payment; they do not apply to cash-only transactions directly between payer and payee ⁶⁸³ or payments based on paper instruments, e.g. cheques. ⁶⁸⁴

34-224

In the context of retail banking, the PSRs impose conduct of business requirements on payment services that are within scope. For these conduct of business requirements to apply, the payment services must be provided from an establishment maintained by a payment service provider or its agent in the UK, the payment service providers of both the payer and the payee must be located within the EEA, and the transaction or payment account must be in either euro or sterling or another Member State currency. ⁶⁸⁵ The new conduct of business regulations will be relevant to banks and building societies, and all other payment services providers. These are set out in Pts 5 and 6 of the Regulations rather than the FCA's Handbook. Any breach of the requirements of Pts 5 or 6 is actionable by a private person who suffers loss as a result of the contravention, subject to the defences and other incidents applying to actions for breach of statutory duty. ⁶⁸⁶

34-225

⚠ The conduct of business regulations mostly relate to providing information to payment services users, both before and after the execution of particular transactions. ⁶⁸⁷ ⚠ There are separate provisions for single payment service contracts ⁶⁸⁸ and framework contracts. ⁶⁸⁹ There are also common provisions including a prohibition on charging for certain information. ⁶⁹⁰ The Regulations also set out the legal rights and obligations as between payment service providers and users. They provide for matters including consent to payment transactions, ⁶⁹¹ unauthorised or incorrectly executed payment transactions, liability for unauthorised payment transactions, ⁶⁹² refunds, execution of payment transactions, execution time and liability of payment service providers. ⁶⁹³

34-226

Payment service providers may contract out of certain obligations with customers who are not consumers, micro-enterprises or small charities for the purposes of the Regulations. ⁶⁹⁴ For these purposes a “consumer” is a natural person who, in payment service contracts, is acting for purposes other than his trade, business or profession. A “micro-enterprise” is an enterprise which employs fewer than 10 persons and has a turnover or annual balance sheet that does not exceed €2 million, including self-employed persons, family businesses, partnerships and associations regularly engaged in economic activity. A “charity” is one with an annual income of less than £1 million.

34-227

There are a number of exemptions to be found in Pt 2 of Sch.1 to the Regulations. These activities do not constitute payment services. The exemptions mainly cover wholesale activities of financial institutions. There are no specific exemptions based on transaction size although low-value payment instruments are subject to fewer requirements. ⁶⁹⁵ Certain requirements of the PSRs (relating to information and rights and obligations) are disapplied where the Consumer Credit Act 1974 already contains similar requirements. ⁶⁹⁶

34-228

Schedule 6 of the Regulations provides for amendments to be made to primary and secondary legislation. For example, the Cross-Border Credit Transfer Regulations 1999 are revoked, as are reg.21 of the Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 and reg.14 of the Financial Services (Distance Marketing) Regulations 2004. The matters previously covered by this revoked legislation are now covered in the new Regulations themselves.

^{650.} FSMA 2000 Sch.2 Pt I para.4 defines “deposit taking” to mean “accepting deposits”. See also the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001 (SI 2001/544, as amended) Pt II Ch.II. See below, paras 34-229 et seq.

^{651.} For a summary of the regulatory regime established by the FSMA 2000 in the context of deposit-taking, see E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), Ch.2. For detailed review, see E. Lomnicka and J. Powell, Encyclopedia of Financial Services Law (looseleaf), Pt 2A.

^{652.} ⚠ The process of reform has been wide ranging. This has been achieved through primary legislation, supported by a raft of statutory instruments. First, the Banking Act 2009 established (a) a permanent special resolution regime, which gave the Treasury, Bank of England and FSA

(now PRA/FCA) three “stabilisation options” for dealing with banks that get into financial difficulties: (i) transfer to a private sector purchaser; (ii) transfer to a bridge bank; and (iii) transfer to temporary public ownership; (b) a new bank insolvency procedure to facilitate the orderly winding up of a failed bank; and (c) a new bank administration procedure for use where there has been a partial transfer of business from a failing bank (a special administrative regime for investment banks was introduced in 2011 through the Investment Bank Special Administration Regulations 2011 (SI 2011/245)). Secondly, the Financial Services (Banking Reform) Act 2013 introduced a retail ring-fence for banks; primary loss-absorbing capacity for systemically important banks; a preference for certain depositors on insolvency; a “bail-in” tool as a new stabilisation option available to the Bank of England where a bank is failing; a new framework for the oversight of individuals within banks, including a new criminal offence aimed at senior managers whose reckless decisions cause a bank to fail; a new payment systems regulator and a special administration regime for operators of systemically important inter-bank payment systems and securities settlement systems in the event of insolvency. The Treasury has also published various statutory instruments to implement the Bank Recovery and Resolution Directive 2014/59/EU of 15 May 2014, which establishes a common framework across the EU for the recovery and resolution of failing credit institutions and investment firms (the main piece of legislation implementing the Directive is the Bank Recovery and Resolution Order 2014 (SI 2014/3329); see also SI 2014/3348 and SI 2016/1239. Some aspects of the Directive have been supplemented by additional rules made by the PRA).

- 653. Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (PRA-Regulated Activities) Order 2013 (SI 2013/556). See also the PRA’s policy statement on the designation of investment firms for prudential regulations (March 2013).
- 654. On April 1, 2014, the FCA assumed responsibility for consumer credit regulation from the Office of Fair Trading.
- 655. See para.34-216, above.
- 656. !For the PRA, see the “PRA Handbook” and also the “PRA Rulebook”, which has now replaced the PRA Handbook. For the FCA, see the following sections of the FCA Handbook: Principles for Businesses (PRIN); Banking Conduct of Business Sourcebook (BCOBS) and Consumer Credit Sourcebook (CONC).
- 657. SI 2009/209 (as amended). The background to, and reasons for, this shift away from industry self-regulation to FSA control is set out in FSA Consultation Paper CP 08/19, Regulating retail banking conduct of business.
- 658. !Payment Services Regulations 2009 (SI 2009/209), implementing Directive 2007/64 of the European Parliament and of the Council on payment systems in the internal market ([2007] O.J. L319/1). The Revised Payment Services Directive 2015/2366/EU (“PSD2”) repeals and replaces Directive 2007/64/EC. EU Member States have until January 13, 2018 to implement the requirements of PSD2. The Payment Services Regulations 2017 (SI 2017/752) (“PSRs 2017”), implement in part PSD2 in the UK. The PSRs 2017 revoke and replace the Payment Services Regulations 2009. With certain exceptions as set out in reg.1, which include where the implementation period is linked to the coming into force of the secure communication and authentication requirements adopted under art.98 of PSD2, the PSRs 2017 come into force on January 13, 2018 (PSRs 2017 reg.1(6)). See, generally, para.34-223, n.676 below.
- 659. FSA Consultation Paper CP 08/19 (November 2008), para.3.13.
- 660. See G. McMeel [2010] L.M.C.L.Q. 431. It should also be noted that, since April 1, 2014, a bank’s consumer credit-related activities (e.g. overdrafts and credit cards) has been regulated by the FCA according to the conduct of business standards set out in the FCA’s Consumer Credit Sourcebook (CONC).
- 661. See para.34-216 above.

662. !The Lending Code was introduced in November 2009. A second edition was published in March 2011, with revisions published in October 2014 and September 2015. The Code is available at <http://www.lendingstandardsboard.org.uk>. On July 21, 2016, the Lending Standards Board published a new Standards of Lending Practice for Personal Customers, which come into force on October 1, 2016. The Standards of Lending Practice will replace the Lending Code. The Standards of Lending Practice apply to personal customers and cover loans, credit cards and current account overdrafts. The new Standards represent a move away from the Lending Code, which was focused more on compliance with provisions than customer outcomes. It is anticipated that new standards for business lending, which will include small and medium-sized businesses (SMEs), will be published in 2017. In the interim the existing protections of the Lending Code will continue to apply to micro-enterprises (Standards of Lending Practice, p.3). The new Standards of Lending Practice for Business Customers were published on March 28, 2017 and became effective on July 1, 2017. They replace the micro-enterprise provisions of the Lending Code. The protections of the new Standards of Lending Practice for Business Customers apply to businesses/organisations, which at the point of lending (a) have an annual turnover of up to £6.5 million and (b) do not have a complex ownership structure (e.g. businesses with overseas, multiple, or layered ownership structures).
663. i.e. UK authorised banks, building societies and e-money issuers (but not small e-money issuers), credit unions and incoming EEA branches of credit institutions.
664. BCOBS 1.1.1R.
665. !Revised versions of Pts 5 and 6 of the Payment Services Regulations 2009 are to be found in Pts 6 and 7 of the Payment Services Regulations 2017. See, generally, n.676 to para.34-223 below.
666. !Revised versions of Pts 5 and 6 of the Payment Services Regulations 2009 are to be found in Pts 6 and 7 of the Payment Services Regulations 2017. See, generally, n.676 to para.34-223 below.
667. BCOBS 1.1.4R(3).
668. A micro-enterprise is defined in the FCA's Handbook glossary as an enterprise which employs fewer than 10 persons and has a turnover or annual balance sheet that does not exceed €2 million, including self-employed persons, family businesses, partnerships and associations regularly engaged in economic activity.
669. FSA Handbook, "Glossary of Definitions", as inserted by the Banking: Conduct of Business Sourcebook Instrument 2009, Annex A.
670. Further amendments to BCOBS have been made to ensure there are no gaps in consumer protection arising as a result of the more limited scope of the PSRs. For further details, see the Banking: Conduct of Business Sourcebook (Amendment) and Consequential Amendments Instrument 2009 (FSA 2009/52).
671. BCOBS Ch.2.
672. BCOBS Ch.3.
673. BCOBS Ch.4.
674. BCOBS Ch.5.
675. BCOBS Ch.6.
676. !The definition of a "private person" is to be found in FSMA 2000 (Rights of Action) Regulations 2001 (SI 2001/2256), as amended. See also Titan Steel Wheels Ltd v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc [2010] EWHC 211 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 92 at [68]-[70]; Camerata Property Inc v Credit Suisse Securities (Europe) Ltd [2012] EWHC 7 (Comm), [2012] 1 C.L.C. 234 at [89]-[98]; Bailey v Barclays Bank Plc [2014] EWHC 2882 (QB) at [44]; Thornbridge Ltd v Barclays Bank Plc [2015] EWHC 3430 (QB) at [138]-[141]. A claim by a private person under s.138D(2) of the FSMA 2000 may be assigned: Connaught Income Fund Series 1 v Capital Financial Management Ltd [2014] EWHC 3619 (Comm), [2015] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 751 at [45]-[46]. Exceptions to right of action under s.138D(2) are found in subss.(3) and (5). In Sivagnanam v Barclays Bank Plc [2015] EWHC 3985 (Comm), it was held (at [8]-[15]) that the claimant, the sole director/shareholder of a company that entered into an interest rate hedging product with the defendant bank, could not bring a claim for loss said to have been suffered as a private person as a result of breach of the conduct of business rules under FSMA 2000 s.138D(2), as he did not fall within the category of person intended to be protected by the FSMA 2000 or the relevant conduct of business rules. It was also held (at [16]-[21]) that his loss, as a shareholder, was irrecoverable due to the rule against reflective loss.

677.

⚠ The Lending Code was introduced in November 2009. A second edition was published in March 2011, with revisions published in October 2014 and September 2015. The Code is available at <http://www.lendingstandardsboard.org.uk>. On July 21, 2016, the Lending Standards Board published a new Standards of Lending Practice for Personal Customers, which come into force on October 1, 2016. The Standards of Lending Practice will replace the Lending Code. The Standards of Lending Practice apply to personal customers and cover loans, credit cards and current account overdrafts. The new Standards represent a move away from the Lending Code, which was focused more on compliance with provisions than customer outcomes. It is anticipated that new standards for business lending, which will include small and medium-sized businesses (SMEs), will be published in 2017. In the interim the existing protections of the Lending Code will continue to apply to micro-enterprises (Standards of Lending Practice, p.3). The new Standards of Lending Practice for Business Customers were published on March 28, 2017 and became effective on July 1, 2017. They replace the micro-enterprise provisions of the Lending Code. The protections of the new Standards of Lending Practice for Business Customers apply to businesses/organisations, which at the point of lending (a) have an annual turnover of up to £6.5 million and (b) do not have a complex ownership structure (e.g. businesses with overseas, multiple, or layered ownership structures).

678.

⚠ The Lending Code (revised September 28, 2015), para.4.

679.

A list of subscribers to the Code can be found at <http://www.lendingstandardsboard.org.uk>.

680.

⚠ Directive 2007/64 of the European Parliament and of the Council on payment systems in the internal market ([2007] O.J. L319/1). The Revised Payment Services Directive 2015/2366/EU ("PSD2") repeals and replaces Directive 2007/64/EC. EU Member States have until January 13, 2018 to implement the requirements of PSD2 (see J Chertow, J. Patient and V. Montgomery, "New Payment Services Regime: Preparing for a Revised Landscape" [2016] PLC (August) 21). The Payment Services Regulations 2017, SI 2017/752 ("PSRs 2017"), implement in part PSD2 in the UK. The PSRs 2017 revoke and replace the Payment Services Regulations 2009 ("PSRs 2009"). With certain exceptions as set out in reg.1, which include where the implementation period is linked to the coming into force of the secure communication and authentication requirements adopted under art.98 of PSD2, the PSRs 2017 come into force on January 13, 2018 (PSRs 2017, reg.1(6)). The PSRs 2017 build on the PSRs 2009. The main differences between them, which relate to matters considered in this section of Chitty, include the following:

(1)

The PSRs 2017 are of wider scope than the PSRs 2009. Pts 5 and 6 of the PSRs 2009, with some exceptions, only apply if the payment service providers of both the payer and the payee are within the EEA, and the transaction is in euro, sterling or another non-euro Member State currency. This changes with the PSRs 2017. So long as the payment services are provided from an establishment maintained by a service provider or its agent in the UK (PSRs 2017 regs 40(1)(a), 63(1)(a)), Pts 6 (informational requirements) and 7

(rights and obligations) of the PSRs 2017 extend, with some exceptions, to services relating to transactions in non-EEA currencies where both the payer and the payee are located in EEA countries (PSRs 2017 regs 40(1)(b)(ii), 63(1)(b)(ii)), and to services relating to transactions where the payment service provider of either the payer or the payee, but not both, is in the EEA (PSRs 2017 regs 40(1)(b)(iii), 63(1)(b)(iii)). Where the payment service relates to a transaction in a non-EEA currency and both payer and payee are located in the EEA (i.e. it falls within PSRs 2017 regs 40(1)(b)(ii), 63(1)(b)(ii)), or one of the payment service providers is not in the EEA (i.e. it falls within PSRs 2017 regs 40(1)(b)(iii), 63(1)(b)(iii)), Pts 6 and 7 apply only in respect of those parts of the transaction which are carried out in the EEA (PSRs 2017 regs 40(2)(a),(3)(a), 63(2)(a), (3)(a)). Payment service providers are still able to opt out of all the informational requirements in Pt 6, and certain conduct requirements in Pt 7, when dealing with business customers, unless they are “micro-enterprises” (PSRs 2017 regs 40(7), 63(5)).

(2)

The PSRs 2017 retain most of the exemptions contained in the PSRs 2009. For example, cheques and other paper-based transactions are outside the scope of the new regulations (PSRs 2017 Sch.1 Pt 2(g)), as are payment transactions contained within a payment or a securities settlement system (PSRs 2017 Sch.1 Pt 2(h)). A number of the exemptions have been clarified, such as where specific payment instruments can only be used in a limited way (PSRs 2017 Sch.1 Pt 2(k)), and where providers of electronic communication networks provide additional services and those services are the purchase of digital content and voice-based services, or the purchase of tickets and donations to charities, within certain monetary limits (PSRs 2017 Sch.1 Pt 2(l)).

(3)

The PSRs 2017 cover the activities of “payment initiation services” and “account information services” (PSRs 2017 Sch.1 Pt 1(g), (h)). A payment initiation service is an online service to initiate a payment order at the request of the payment service user with respect to a payment account held at another payment service provider (PSRs 2017 reg.2). An account information service is an online service to provide consolidated information on one or more payment accounts held by a payment service user with another payment service provider or with more than one payment service provider, and includes such a service whether the information is provided (a) in its original form or after processing; and (b) only to the payment service user or to the payment service user and to another person in accordance with the payment service user's instructions (PSRs 2017 reg.2). This would cover account aggregation services which provide customers with a consolidated view of their bank accounts and enable them to access their accounts online. The PSRs 2017 allow for access to payment accounts which are accessible online by payment initiation service providers (reg.69) and by account information services (reg.70), although access may be denied by an account servicing payment service provider (i.e. a payment service provider providing and maintaining a payment account for a payer) in certain circumstances (i.e. “reasonably justified and duly evidenced reasons relating to unauthorised or fraudulent access to the payment account”) (reg.71(7)–(10)).

(4)

The PSRs 2017 introduce changes to the way payment service providers authenticate payments. Save for exceptions permitted by the European Banking Authority (EBA), PSD2 requires all payment service providers to use “strong customer authentication” when a payer: (a) accesses a payment account online, (b) initiates an electronic payment transaction, and (c) carries out any action through a remote channel that may imply a risk of payment fraud or other abuses (art.97(1)). In addition, where a payer initiates an electronic remote payment transaction, payment service providers must apply strong customer authentication that includes elements which dynamically link the transaction to a specific amount and a specific payee (art.97(2)). Strong customer authentication means authentication based on two or more elements categorised as knowledge (i.e. something only the user knows, e.g. a password, code or PIN), possession (i.e. something only the user possesses, e.g. a token, smartcard or mobile phone) and inherence (i.e. something the user is, e.g. a biometric characteristic like a fingerprint or retina scan) that are independent in that breach of one does not compromise the reliability of the others (PSD2 art.4(30); PSRs 2017 reg.2). PSD2 mandates the EBA, in close co-operation with the European Central Bank, with development of regulatory technical standards, including those for strong customer authentication (art.98). This means that regs 68(3)(c), 69(2)(a) and (3)(d), 70(2)(a) and (3)(c) and (6) and 100 of PSRs 2017 (which deal with secure communication and authentication) only come into force 18 months after the date on which the EBA's regulatory technical standards, as adopted by the European Commission, come into force (PSRs 2017 reg.1(6)).

The PSRs 2017 contain similar (but not identical) conduct of business requirements to those found in Pts 5 and 6 of the PSRs 2009: Pt 6 of the PSRs 2017 sets out information requirements for payment services, and Pt 7 of the PSRs 2017 sets out rights and obligations in relation to payment services. Like reg.120 of the PSRs 2009, reg.148 of the PSRs 2017 makes any breach of the requirements of Pts 6 or 7 actionable by a "private person" who suffers loss as a result of the contravention, subject to defences and other incidents applying to actions for breach of statutory duty. However, and new to the PSRs 2017, it is provided, in reg.148(4), that where there is a contravention of a requirement under regs 76(5)(b), 77(6), 93(4) or 95 for a payment service provider to compensate another service provider, the payment service provider to which compensation is required to be paid is to be treated for the purposes of reg.148 as if it were a "private person".

681. SI 2009/209, as amended. See further below, paras 34-404 et seq.

682. Pts 2-4 of the Regulations deal with the regulation of non-bank payment service providers, such as money remitters and non-bank credit card issuers, known under the Directive as "payment institutions". These parts of the Regulations are irrelevant to banks and building societies automatically authorised to provide payment services without taking further action.

683. But the placement and withdrawal of cash to and from a payment account is within the scope of the PSRs.

684. Sch.1 Pt 2.

685. reg.33(1), 51(1). But reg.73 (relating to value dating and availability of funds) applies whether or not the payment service providers of both the payer and the payee are located within the EEA (reg.51(2)).

686. reg.120(1). In this regulation, a "private person" means (a) any individual, except where the individual suffers the loss in question in the course of providing payment services; and (b) any person who is not an individual, except where that person suffers the loss in question in the course of carrying on business of any kind (reg.120(3)). A fiduciary or representative may also, generally, bring the action on behalf of a private person: reg.120(2). For what constitutes "in the course of carrying on business of any kind" in the context of the similarly worded definition of "private person" in the FSMA 2000 (Rights of Action) Regulations 2001, see Titan Steel Wheels Ltd v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc, above, n.672; Camerata Property Inc v Credit Suisse Securities (Europe) Ltd, above, n.672; Bailey v Barclays Bank Plc, above, n.672.

687.  See BAWAG PSK Bank für Arbeit und Wirtschaft und Österreichische Postsparkasse AG v Verein für Konsumenteninformation (C-375/15) January 25, 2017, EU:C:2017:38 CJEU for meaning of requirement that payment service provider must "provide" information on a "durable medium" for purposes of arts 36(1) and 41(1) of the Payment Services Directive 2007/64/EC. See also Revised Payment Services Directive 2015/2366/EU arts 44(1) and 54(1).

688. regs 36 to 39.

689. regs 40 to 46.

690. regs 47 to 50.

691. reg.55.

692. regs 59 to 62.

693. regs 63 to 79.

694. regs 33(3), 51(3).

695. regs 35, 53.

696. regs 34, 52.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(a) - Bank Regulation
(ii) - The Regulation of Deposit-taking

Financial Services and Markets Act 2000

34-229

The FSMA 2000 carries forward the need for institutions to be authorised in order to carry on banking in the UK in the sense of “accepting deposits”. ⁶⁹⁷ This is done by imposing a “general prohibition” on anyone carrying on, or purporting to carry on, a regulated activity “in the United Kingdom” unless he is an authorised person or an exempt person (FSMA 2000 s.19(1)). Regulated activities are listed in Sch.2 to the Act and are defined in detail in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001 (the “RAO”). ⁶⁹⁸ One such regulated activity is “accepting deposits” by way of business (RAO art.5). ⁶⁹⁹ The FSMA 2000 has extraterritorial scope because of the extended meaning of “in the United Kingdom”. ⁷⁰⁰ This means that an institution based in the United Kingdom will require authorisation even though it is offering deposit-taking services exclusively to customers outside the UK.

“Accepting deposits”

34-230

Article 5(1) of the RAO defines “accepting deposits” in terms of two alternative categories of activity. ⁷⁰¹ The first is where “money received by way of deposit is lent to others”. The second is where “any other activity of the person accepting the deposit is financed wholly or to any material extent, out of the capital or of interest on money received on deposit”. A “deposit” is defined in arts 5(2)-(3) to mean a sum of money paid on the basis that it will be repaid with or without interest or premium either on demand or as agreed. However, it does not include an arrangement for the payment of money on terms which are “referable to the provision of property (other than currency) or services or the giving of security”. The wide definition of a “deposit” has led to specific exclusions: e.g. loans by banks and other institutions engaged in the lending business, loans between companies in the same group and transactions between relatives are all excluded from the definition. ⁷⁰²

34-231

A construction of this elaborate definition is to be found in SCF Finance Co v Masri (No.2), ⁷⁰³ decided in respect of a similar definition used in the Banking Act 1979. In that case it was argued that a firm of futures brokers, who obtained a deposit to secure its client's trading in commodities, carried on the business of deposit taking in contravention of s.1 of the 1979 Act. It was held that the payment involved did not constitute a “deposit”. It fell outside the ambit of the relevant definition because its object was to secure a contract respecting a service provided by the brokers to the client.

Accepting deposits “by way of business”

34-232

A person does not accept deposits “by way of business” if he does not hold himself out as accepting deposits on a day-to-day basis, and any deposit which he accepts are accepted only on particular occasions, whether or not involving the issue of any securities. ⁷⁰⁴ In determining whether deposits are accepted only on particular occasions, “regard is to be had to the frequency of those occasions and to any characteristics distinguishing them from each other”. ⁷⁰⁵ In SCF Finance Co v Masri (No.2), discussed above, deposits were accepted from clients by a firm of brokers, commingled with the firm’s general funds and, occasionally, lent on to other clients. In most cases the deposits were accepted as margin payments providing the brokers with security for orders placed on behalf of customers. Occasionally, the brokers also invested deposits at the request of specific clients. The Court of Appeal held that in neither case did the brokers act by way of business. It was held that the brokers had not held themselves out as running a deposit taking business and that the payments were received on particular occasions despite the frequency of those occasions. ⁷⁰⁶

Exempt persons

34-233

Although persons accepting deposits in the UK by way of business generally require authorisation, the FSMA 2000 gives power to the Treasury to exempt institutions from this requirement. ⁷⁰⁷ Such persons are termed “exempt persons” and include the Bank of England, other EEA central banks, the European Central Bank, the EU and related international bodies, and certain development banks. ⁷⁰⁸

Authorised persons

34-234

Unless an exempt person, anyone accepting deposits in the UK by way of business must be an “authorised person”. This means that they must either be a person who has obtained authorisation from the PRA, or a person authorised in another EEA Member State and entitled, through the application of the single European passport principle, to establish branches or provide cross-border services in the UK. ⁷⁰⁹

Part 4A permission

34-235

Since April 1, 2013, the PRA has been the body responsible for the authorisation of “dual-registered” firms. ⁷¹⁰ The PRA decides whether or not to grant permission but must obtain the consent of the FCA before granting permission. ⁷¹¹ The FCA is responsible for considering applications for authorisation by any person seeking to carry out regulated activities that do not include any PRA-regulated activities. ⁷¹² Where the applicant is a member of a group which includes a “dual-regulated” firm, the FCA must consult with the PRA before granting authorisation. ⁷¹³ The new regime has made important changes to the threshold conditions for authorisation to carry on regulated activities, including (a) the application of different threshold conditions to dualregulated and FCA-regulated firms; and (b) giving the PRA and the FCA the power to make “threshold condition codes”. ⁷¹⁴ There is a right of appeal to the Upper Tribunal for those aggrieved by the PRA’s or the FCA’s exercise of their powers in relation to Pt 4A permission. ⁷¹⁵

Powers to obtain information and documents

34-236

The FSMA 2000 gives the PRA and the FCA wide powers to require the provision of information from and the production of documents by an authorised person and any person connected with the authorised person. ⁷¹⁶ Both regulators also have power to require an authorised person to provide a report by an accountant or other person with relevant professional skills. ⁷¹⁷ Both regulators have the right of entry to obtain documents and information on a magistrate's warrant. ⁷¹⁸ Section 167 of the FSMA 2000 gives the PRA and FCA (or Secretary of State) power to appoint investigators to conduct general investigations into authorised persons and appointed representatives.

Sanctions for unauthorised acceptance of deposits

34-237

A person who contravenes the “general prohibition” is guilty of a criminal offence. ⁷¹⁹ Where a deposit is accepted in breach of the general prohibition, and the depositor is not entitled under the agreement between himself and the deposit-taker to recover without delay the money deposited by him, he may apply to the court for an order directing the deposit-taker to return the money to him. ⁷²⁰ The court “need not make such an order” if it is satisfied that it would not be “just and equitable” on the basis of a reasonable belief by the deposit-taker that he was not in breach of the general prohibition. ⁷²¹ The FSMA 2000 also gives the appropriate regulator power to apply to court for injunctions and “disgorgement” orders both against the person acting in breach of the general prohibition and anyone else knowingly concerned in the breach. ⁷²²

Liability of the PRA/FCA

34-238

The English courts have generally been reluctant to hold a bank regulator liable in damages to a depositor or investor of a failed bank. It has been repeatedly held by the courts that a bank regulator does not owe a duty of care to individual commercial banks, ⁷²³ nor to their depositors, ⁷²⁴ when carrying out its regulatory function. As Lord Millett stated in Three Rivers DC v Bank of England ⁷²⁵:

“[u]nfortunately for the depositors, a regulatory authority cannot be held liable in English law for negligence, however gross, in the exercise of its supervisory functions.”

Statutory immunity of the PRA/FCA

34-239

In any event, the FSMA 2000 affords the PRA and the FCA, and any person who is, or is acting as, a member, officer or member of staff of those Authorities, statutory immunity from liability in damages “for anything done or omitted in the discharge, or purported discharge, of the [Authority's] functions”. ⁷²⁶ The immunity is not absolute: it does not apply to acts or omissions shown to have been in bad faith or in breach of the Human Rights Act 1998, ⁷²⁷ nor does it prevent judicial review of the regulator's decisions. The regulator could be liable to depositors for the tort of misfeasance in public office where the necessary elements of the tort are established. ⁷²⁸ The tort of misfeasance in public office entails bad faith and so falls outside the statutory immunity. But it will not be easy to prove that the PRA or FCA acted or failed to act because of bad faith, as opposed to negligence, and the claim is more likely to be struck out than to succeed. ⁷²⁹ In any event, it may also be difficult to show that the acts or omissions of the regulator were the effective cause of the depositors' loss.

Financial Services Compensation Scheme

34-240

For many years now the UK has had an industry funded depositor protection scheme. This has ensured that depositors receive (limited) compensation in the event of a bank failing. Depositor compensation is now provided for as part of the Financial Services Compensation Scheme (the FSCS), which was established under the FSMA 2000 Pt 15. Rules governing depositor compensation are made by the PRA, which is the competent authority and designated authority under the EU deposit guarantee schemes directive.⁷³⁰ Most retail and small business depositors are protected up to £85,000 up to and including December 31, 2015; from that date the limit will be lowered to £75,000.⁷³¹

- ^{697.} Deposit-taking is defined as “accepting deposits” in the FSMA 2000 Sch.2 Pt I para.4. Many banks will also have permission to engage in other regulated activities, e.g. investment business, regulated mortgage business and insurance mediation.
- ^{698.} SI 2001/544, as amended.
- ^{699.} See Financial Services Authority v Anderson [2010] EWHC 599 (Ch).
- ^{700.} FSMA 2000 s.418, as amended.
- ^{701.} See Financial Services Authority v Anderson [2010] EWHC 599 (Ch).
- ^{702.} RAO arts 6-9AC. See Re Kaupthing Singer & Friedlander Ltd (in administration) [2010] EWCA Civ 561, [2010] 2 B.C.L.C. 259. See further, E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger’s Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), p.37.
- ^{703.} [1987] Q.B. 1002.
- ^{704.} Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Carrying on Regulated Activities by Way of Business) Order 2001 (SI 2001/1177) art.2(1).
- ^{705.} SI 2001/1177 art.2(2). This amplification was added by the Banking Act 1987 s.6(4) and is repeated in the Order. See also Financial Services Authority v Anderson [2010] EWHC 599 (Ch).
- ^{706.} But now see the amplification of what is a “particular occasion” contained in SI 2001/1177 art.2(2), which was considered in Financial Services Authority v Anderson [2010] EWHC 599 (Ch) at [53]-[57], and see also R. v Napoli [2012] EWCA Crim 1129. Nevertheless, it is strongly arguable that the case would not be decided any differently today (see E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger’s Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), p.36).
- ^{707.} s.38.
- ^{708.} Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Exemption) Order 2001 (SI 2001/1201), as amended by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Exemption) (Amendment) Order 2015 (SI 2015/447).
- ^{709.} See below, para.34-242.
- ^{710.} FSMA 2000 s.55A(2)(a). For what is meant by a “dual-regulated” firm, see para.34-217 above.
- ^{711.} FSMA 2000 s.55F(2).
- ^{712.} FSMA 2000 s.55A(2)(b).
- ^{713.} FSMA 2000 s.55E(3).
- ^{714.} FSMA 2000 ss.55B, 137O and Sch.6.

- 715. FSMA 2000 s.55Z3.
- 716. s.165 and, for additional powers of the PRA, ss.165A-165C.
- 717. ss.166-166A.
- 718. s.176.
- 719. s.23(1). But subject to a due diligence defence (s.23(3)). An “authorised” (or “exempt”) person cannot be in breach of the general prohibition. Authorised persons who exceed the limits of their permission to undertake a regulated activity are subject to disciplinary sanction and not the sanctions for breach of the general prohibition (s.20). But an authorised person is guilty of an offence if that person carries on a credit-related regulated activity in the UK, or purports to do so, otherwise than in accordance with permission given to that person under Pt 4A or resulting from any other provision of the FSMA 2000 (s.23(1A)). See also s.20(1) and (1A).
- 720. s.29(2).
- 721. s.29(3), (4).
- 722. ss.380, 382. See Financial Services Authority v Anderson [2010] EWHC 599 (Ch). For the meaning of “knowingly concerned”, see Lomnicka (2000) 21 Company Lawyer 210. The court has jurisdiction under the Senior Courts Act 1981 s.37 to make an order freezing the bank accounts of third parties over which the person who has contravened the authorisation requirements of the 2000 Act has control. See Financial Services Authority v Fitt [2004] EWHC 1669 (Ch).
- 723. Minories Finance Ltd v Arthur Young (a firm) [1989] 2 All E.R. 105.
- 724. Yuen Kun Yeu v A-G of Hong Kong [1988] A.C. 175 PC; Davies v Radcliffe [1990] 1 W.L.R. 821 PC.
- 725. [2001] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 125 at 169. See also SRM Global Master Fund LP v Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury [2009] EWCA Civ 788, [2010] B.C.C. 558 at [80].
- 726. FSMA 2000, Sch.1ZA, para.25 (FCA) and Sch.1ZB, para.33 (PRA): note also the limited extension of immunity (to vicarious liability) in para.25(1)(c) and para.33(1)(c). Questions have been raised by some commentators as to whether this blanket immunity contravenes art.6 of the European Convention of Human Rights which guarantees the right to a fair and public hearing: see C. Proctor [2002] J.I.B.F.L. 15 and 71; M. Andenas and D. Fairgrieve (2002) 51 I.C.L.Q. 757.
- 727. . FSMA 2000, Sch.1ZA, para.25(3) and Sch.1ZB, para.33(3).
- 728. Three Rivers DC v Governor and Company of the Bank of England [2000] 2 W.L.R. 1220, where the House of Lords also held that individual depositors were not given rights under relevant European legislation.
- 729. See Hall v Bank of England [2000] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 186 CA; although in Three Rivers DC v Bank of England [2001] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 125 HL, a claim against the Bank of England was, somewhat surprisingly, allowed to proceed to trial. The claim was eventually abandoned at the trial itself: see [2006] EWHC 816 (Comm).
- 730. See the Deposit Guarantee Scheme Regulations 2015 (SI 2015/486), which implement in part Directive 2014/49/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 16th April 2014 on deposit guarantee schemes (recast) repealing directive 94/19/EC of 30th May 1994 on deposit-guarantee schemes. The other provisions of the deposit guarantee scheme directive are being implemented in rules made by the PRA under the FSMA 2000.
- 731. Deposit Guarantee Scheme (Amendment) Regulations 2015 (SI 2015/1456); Deposit

Guarantee Scheme Regulations 2015 (SI 2015/486).

© 2018 Sweet & Maxwell

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(a) - Bank Regulation
(iii) - EU Harmonisation Measures

EU single market in banking

34-241

A number of changes in UK bank regulation have resulted from the implementation of the EU single market in banking. ⁷³² The EC Second Banking Coordination Directive 89/646 introduced the concept of a single banking licence enabling a bank (or “credit institution”) incorporated in a Member State to enjoy mutual recognition throughout the Community by virtue of recognition in its home country. Once the appropriate licence or authorisation is granted by the home supervisor, the bank can establish and offer certain “listed” banking services (including deposit-taking, lending and most ordinary types of banking business) in any Community country without first having to obtain host country authorisation. The main burden of the continued supervision of the bank’s activities is then placed on the home supervisor and not the host state. Through a series of banking directives, the EU has ensured similar standards of control across EU Member States. Until recently, the key directives were Directive 2006/48 relating to the taking up and pursuit of the business of credit institutions and Directive 2006/49 on the capital adequacy of investment firms and credit institutions. The Capital Requirements Directive IV package implements the Basel III global standards on bank capital in the EU through the Capital Requirements Directive 2013/36 ⁷³³ (CRD) and the Capital Requirements Regulation ⁷³⁴ (CRR). Directive 2006/48 and Directive 2006/49 have been repealed and merged into the CRD and the CRR.

Single European passport

34-242

The Second Banking Coordination Directive was given effect in the UK by the Banking Coordination (Second Council Directive) Regulations 1992, ⁷³⁵ which made substantial amendments to the Banking Act 1987. The Regulations were repealed by a Treasury order made under s.426 of the FSMA 2000. However, the principle of the single European passport has been carried through into the regulatory regime established under the FSMA 2000. Banks authorised to carry on regulated activities in other European Economic Area (“EEA”) Member States are granted automatic authorisation to carry on those activities in the UK through branches or the provision of cross-border services, provided they comply with certain formalities. ⁷³⁶ These banks, referred to as “EEA firms” in the FSMA 2000, are subject to regulation as “authorised persons” by the PRA, but only in a manner that is consistent with EU law which provides for division of responsibility between “home” (i.e. other EEA Member State) and “host” (UK) regulators. UK authorised banks are also entitled to exercise their single European passport rights throughout the EEA. ⁷³⁷

Single payment market

34-243

❗ Directive 2007/64 of the European Parliament and of the Council on payment services in the internal market (more commonly known as the “Payment Services Directive”) was published in the Official Journal of the EU on December 5, 2007. ⁷³⁸ ❗ It provides a legal foundation for the creation of a single market for payments in the EU, repealing previous legislation on cross-border credit transfers, and amending a number of existing Directives, including the Banking Consolidation Directive. The Directive establishes an authorisation regime for non-bank payment service providers, such as money remitters and non-bank credit card issuers (known as “payment institutions”), and it sets out conduct of business rules (concerning information provision and liability) for all payment service providers, including banks, e-money institutions and payment institutions. There are also provisions stipulating that rules governing access to payment systems should be non-discriminatory so as to support competition amongst payment service providers. The Directive is a maximum harmonisation measure, meaning that Member States cannot impose additional requirements unless this is expressly permitted under its terms. ⁷³⁹

34-244

The Payment Services Directive was implemented in the UK through the Payment Service Regulations 2009 (SI 2009/209), which came fully into force on November 1, 2009. ⁷⁴⁰ Although some of the areas of the Directive appear to fit into the regime established under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, the specific provisions of the Directive would have necessitated substantial modification or disapplication in the case of payment service providers. Moreover, because the Directive is a maximum harmonisation measure many provisions of the FSMA regime would have had to be disapplied in relation to payment service providers. Thus, the decision was taken by the Treasury to implement the Directive through a set of regulations which largely copy out the Directive.

^{732.} E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.69–77.

^{733.} Directive 2013/36/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council on the access to the activity of credit institutions and the prudential supervision of credit institutions and investment firms.

^{734.} Regulation (EU) 575/2013 of the European Parliament and of the Council on prudential requirements for credit institutions and investment firms.

^{735.} SI 1992/3218.

^{736.} s.31(1)(b) and Sch.3. See also the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (EEA Passport Rights) Regulations 2001 (SI 2001/2511).

^{737.} Sch.3 Pt III, and see also Pt III of the EEA Passport Rights Regulations (above).

^{738.} ❗ The Revised Payment Services Directive 2015/2366/EU (“PSD2”) repeals and replaces Directive 2007/64/EC. EU Member States have until January 13, 2018 to implement the requirements of PSD2. The Payment Services Regulations 2017 (SI 2017/752) (“PSRs 2017”), implement in part PSD2 in the UK. The Payment Services Regulations 2017 revoke and replace the Payment Services Regulations 2009. With certain exceptions as set out in reg.1, which include where the implementation period is linked to the coming into force of the secure communication and authentication requirements adopted under art.98 of PSD2, the PSRs 2017 come into force on January 13, 2018 (PSRs 2017 reg.1(6)). See, generally, para.34-223, n.676 above.

^{739.} EEC Member States had until November 1, 2009, to implement the Directive.

^{740.} See above, paras 34-223 et seq.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(b) - The Relationship of Banker and Customer
(i) - Definition of a Bank

Who is a banker: scope of problem

34-245

! The question of whether or not a given finance house constitutes a bank arises mainly where a statute confers certain privileges or rights or imposes given duties or controls on a “bank”. In the majority of cases the statute in point includes a definition of the word “bank” or “banker”. Basically, there are two types of definition. The first, which is the standard common law definition, defines a “bank” as a concern engaged in “banking business”. The construction of the latter phrase has been left to the courts. This common law definition is still used in the Bills of Exchange Act 1882. ⁷⁴¹ The second type of definition, which was utilised in a number of regulatory Acts, provided that a “bank” was a body holding a certificate to this effect issued by a specific authority. Until relatively recently, the term “bank” was usually defined in these statutes as “an institution authorised under the Banking Act 1987”. ⁷⁴² However, the Banking Act 1987 has since been repealed and replaced by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000. ⁷⁴³ Those statutes which defined a “bank” in terms of authorisation under the 1987 Act have been amended to refer to an “authorised person” (granted permission to accept deposits by the Prudential Regulation Authority) and an “EEA firm” (exercising single European passport rights in the UK) as provided for in the 2000 Act. ⁷⁴⁴ **!

Who is a banker: common law definition

34-246

“Banker” is defined in the Bills of Exchange Act as “a body of persons, whether incorporated or not, who carry on the business of banking”. ⁷⁴⁵ As the term “banking business” is not defined, and as it has been held that its meaning may vary from time to time, ⁷⁴⁶ it is not always easy to say with certainty whether or not an institution is a bank. Basically, following the established case law, the main types of “banking business” are the opening of current accounts operable by cheques ⁷⁴⁷ and deposit accounts, as well as the collection of cheques for customers. ⁷⁴⁸ Nevertheless, in recent years the use of cheques has declined and money is frequently transferred into and out of bank accounts using electronic means (e.g. by ATM and debit card transactions). In the light of this modern practice, it is submitted that the common law definition of the terms “bank”, “banking” and “banking business” should not turn on the precise mechanism by which money is paid into and out of bank accounts. ⁷⁴⁹

Reputation

34-247

It is uncertain whether an institution may be considered a bank merely because it is so regarded by the business community. This question came before the Court of Appeal in United Dominions Trust

Ltd v Kirkwood.⁷⁵⁰ A finance company brought an action to recover a loan from a dealer. The dealer pleaded that the company was an unregistered moneylender and that the contract was therefore illegal as it contravened the provisions of the Money-lenders Act 1900.⁷⁵¹ The finance company claimed that under s.6(d) of this Act it was exempted from the provisions concerning registration, because it carried on, bona fide, the business of banking. The main issue in the case was, thus, whether the finance company carried on the business of banking, or—in other words—was a banker. It was proved that the finance company was regarded as a banker in the City, enjoyed some privileges given solely to bankers and had a special clearing number. It was further established that in some cases the company furnished loans to clients by crediting the relevant amount to a current account opened in the respective client's name. The finance company did receive money on deposits, but these were invariably repayable on agreed dates of maturity and not on demand. There was no evidence to suggest that the company collected cheques on behalf of customers. On these facts, Lord Denning M.R. questioned whether the company carried on the “business of banking”. Nevertheless, he held that the company was a bank on the basis of its established reputation as “banker” in the city. Diplock L.J. concurred in holding that the company was a bank, but based his opinion on different grounds, stressing that he considered the question of reputation to be of limited importance. Harman L.J. gave a dissenting judgment, as in his opinion the company was not a bank, regardless of its reputation.

Banking as ancillary business

34-248

It is, thus, clear that in Kirkwood's case Diplock and Harman L.JJ. doubted that reputation was, in itself, a conclusive criterion for establishing that a firm was a bank as defined at common law. Their judgments indicate that the crucial point is whether or not the firm carries on banking business. But it has been accepted that a firm may be a bank although its activities are not confined to the carrying on of banking business. Some early cases suggest that, in such a case, the firm's principal business must be that of banking business.⁷⁵² But this requirement was relaxed in Re Roe's Legal Charge.⁷⁵³ As in Kirkwood's case, the problem in Roe's Legal Charge arose in respect of the Money-lenders Act. It was established that the lending institution opened current accounts for some customers and collected cheques payable to them. The institution also provided certain foreign currency facilities and arranged for the payment of customers' bills by means of money transfer orders. There were, however, four main differences between this institution's business and that of a regular bank. First, its entire banking services were furnished not at premises maintained in its own name but through an agency bank. Secondly, the number of current and deposit accounts opened by it was less than 200 and in the course of 1984 only 58 cheques had been cleared for customers. Thirdly, about three-quarters of its existing deposits were made by shareholders, by subsidiaries and by associated companies. Fourthly, the institution did not solicit deposits from the public by means of advertisements. Holding that the institution was engaged in banking business, Lawton L.J., in the Court of Appeal, said that it was immaterial that the size of the institution's banking business was negligible in comparison with that of a clearing bank. It was also irrelevant that the institution did not carry on all facets of banking business and that its main activities were in another field. The only question was whether the institution's banking business was real in terms of its entire business.

Use of “bank” in name

34-249

There were tight controls on the use of the terms “bank” and “banker” in the Banking Act 1987. Section 67 of the 1987 Act provided that, subject to certain exceptions, no person was entitled to use any banking name (i.e. indicating that the person was a bank or a banker or as carrying on banking business) unless that person was an authorised institution under the Banking Act 1987. Section 69 of the Act provided that no person was entitled to describe himself or hold himself out as to indicate that he was a bank or a banker or was carrying on a banking business unless authorised (or exempt) under the 1987 Act. These provisions have since been repealed by, and are not repeated in, the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000. The relevant provision is now s.24 of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, which makes it a criminal offence for anyone who is neither an authorised person nor an exempt person in relation to the regulated activity in question to describe himself as either authorised or exempt or who behaves or otherwise holds himself out as being authorised or exempt under the 2000 Act. It is submitted that this provision would catch an institution that called itself a “bank” without proper authorisation as this implies such authorisation.

-
- 741. s.2. For a detailed discussion, see E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), Ch.3.
- 742. Banking Act 1987 s.108(1) and Sch.6.
- 743. See para.34-229 above.
- 744.  For what is an “authorised person”, see para.34-234 above; for what is an “EEA firm”, see para.34-242 above. But the term “bank” has not been excised entirely from the “UK regulatory lexicon”, see D.A. Sabalot (2016) 11 J.I.B.F.L. 631.
- 745. s.2.
- 746. Woods v Martins Bank Ltd [1959] 1 Q.B. 55; United Dominions Trust Ltd v Kirkwood [1966] 2 Q.B. 431.
- 747. Commissioners of the State Savings Bank of Victoria v Permewan, Wright & Co Ltd (1915) 19 C.L.R. 457, 470–471; Bank of Chettinad Ltd v Commissioner of Income Tax, Colombo [1948] A.C. 378, 383; United Dominions Trust Ltd v Kirkwood, above.
- 748. United Dominions Trust Ltd v Kirkwood, above, approving the definition of banking business in Paget, Law of Banking, 9th edn, pp.5–7 (currently 14th edn, 2014, para.4.2).
- 749. See further, E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), p.85.
- 750. [1966] 2 Q.B. 431. See also Re Birkbeck Permanent Benefit Building Society [1912] 2 Ch. 183.
- 751. Repealed by the Consumer Credit Act 1974 s.192(4) and Sch.5 Pt I, also repealing s.123 of the Companies Act 1967, which empowered the Board of Trade to declare an institution a bank for the purposes of the Money-lenders Act. Note that, in view of the similarity between the definition of banker in the Money-lenders Act and in the Bills of Exchange Act, Kirkwood's case remains of topical importance.
- 752. Re Birkbeck Permanent Benefit Building Society, above; Bank of Chettinad Ltd v Commissioner of Income Tax, Colombo [1948] A.C. 378. Contrast Stafford v Henry (1850) 12 Ir.Eq.R. 400.
- 753. [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 370. See also Canadian Pioneer Management Ltd v Labour Relations Board, 107 D.L.R. (3rd) 1 (1980); Koh v Asia Commercial Banking Corp Ltd [1984] 1 W.L.R. 850 JC.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(b) - The Relationship of Banker and Customer
(ii) - Definition of a Customer

Who is a customer

34-250

The word "customer" is not defined in any statute, but it appeared in s.82 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 (now replaced by s.4 of the Cheques Act 1957). It has been held, in this context, that a person becomes a customer either when the banker opens an account in his name ⁷⁵⁴ or when the banker accepts his instruction to open an account and receives a deposit to be credited to it. ⁷⁵⁵ The fact that a banker habitually performs a casual service for a person, e.g. cashes over the counter cheques obtained by that person from third parties, does not render that person a customer. ⁷⁵⁶ Duration is, thus, not the essence of the relationship of banker and customer.

Intention of parties

34-251

The relationship of banker and customer comes into existence only if both parties have an intention that it be established. Usually this intention is expressly manifested when the account is opened at the customer's request. There are, however, cases in which the customer's consent to the opening of the account is given tacitly. Thus, in Rowlandson v National Westminster Bank Ltd ⁷⁵⁷ a business woman made a cheque payable to a bank, at which she was known but with which she did not have an account, and explained that the proceeds were a gift to her grandchildren. The bank opened an account in the grandchildren's joint names and conferred the right to draw on their guardians. Although the guardians did not expressly approve this arrangement and were not even expressly notified of the opening of the account they did eventually learn of its existence and one of them drew a cheque on it. It was held that the bank owed a fiduciary duty to the grandchildren and, furthermore, that it had committed a breach of this duty when it permitted one of the guardians to draw on the account for the credit of his own personal account. It would appear to follow that a relationship of banker and customer came into existence between the bank and the grandchildren, presumably as a result of the tacit approval of the opening of the account by the guardians. The case may, however, rest on its exceptional facts.

Account in nominee's name

34-252

⚠ A relationship of banker and customer does not usually come into existence merely because an account in a person's name has been opened by the bank. Thus, where A forges B's signature and opens a bank account in B's name without his authority, no relationship of banker and customer exists between the bank and B, and so no question respecting the breach of a contractual duty owed to B can arise. ⁷⁵⁸ In effect, the bank's customer is the person who negotiates the making of the contract and not a third party such as a nominee. Thus, in Thavorn v Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA ⁷⁵⁹ the plaintiff, an elderly woman, opened an account with the bank in her nephew's name but stipulated that during her lifetime she was to be the only person authorised to draw on it. Lloyd J. held that it was an irresistible inference that the debt created by the opening of the account was due to the plaintiff and not to the nephew. It followed that the bank's customer was the plaintiff, who had arranged for the opening of the account and who intended to retain the control over it, and not the nephew, who was a mere nominee. The position would, undoubtedly, have differed if the drawing rights had been conferred on the nephew or his guardian. In such a situation—as demonstrated by Rowlandson's case—the customer would have been the nephew. ⁷⁶⁰ In all cases it is important for the bank to know the identity of its customer. If a bank fails to have appropriate identification procedures in place, it risks committing an offence under the legislation designed to combat money laundering. ⁷⁶¹

^{754.} Lacave & Co v Crédit Lyonnais [1897] 1 Q.B. 148; Great Western Ry v London and County Banking Co [1901] A.C. 414; Ladbroke v Todd (1914) 30 T.L.R. 433; Commissioners of Taxation v English, Scottish and Australian Bank [1920] A.C. 683.

^{755.} Ladbroke v Todd, above; Woods v Martins Bank Ltd [1959] 1 Q.B. 55 (in which, however, the question was discussed not in relation to s.82).

^{756.} Great Western Ry v London and County Banking Co, above. See also Commissioners of Taxation v English, Scottish and Australian Bank, above, at 687. cf. Matthews v Brown & Co (1894) 10 T.L.R. 386.

^{757.} [1978] 1 W.L.R. 798.

^{758.} Stoney Stanton Supplies (Coventry) Ltd v Midland Bank Ltd [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 373.

^{759.} [1985] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 259, especially at 263.

^{760.} But where an account is opened in the name of a company, it is the company and not the sole owner that is the bank's customer (Diamantides v JP Morgan Chase Bank [2005] EWHC 263 (Comm), upheld on different grounds [2005] EWCA Civ 1612).

^{761.}  The Money Laundering Regulations 2007 (SI 2007/2157), as amended, require a bank to apply "customer due diligence measures" when it establishes a business relationship (e.g. when opening an account for a new customer), carries out occasional transactions (that is transactions, carried out other than as part of a business relationship, amounting to £15,000 or more), suspects money laundering or terrorist financing, or doubts the accuracy of customer identification information (reg.7). Customer due diligence measures (defined in reg.5) consist of identifying and verifying the identity of the customer and any "beneficial owner" (defined in reg.6) of the customer, and obtaining information on the purpose and intended nature of the business relationship. A beneficial owner of a customer includes, for example, anyone who ultimately owns or controls 25 per cent of the shares or voting rights in a non-listed company, or who exercises control over the management of a company (reg.6(1)). Banks have to undertake ongoing monitoring of their business relationships (reg.8). EU Member States had to implement the Fourth Money Laundering Directive 2015/849/EU by June 26, 2017. The UK did this through the Money Laundering, Terrorist Financing and Transfer of Funds (Information on the Payer) Regulations 2017 (SI 2017/692), which replace the Money Laundering Regulations 2007 (SI 2007/2157) and the Transfer of Funds (Information on the Payer) Regulations 2007 (SI 2007/3298). The new regime places increased emphasis on a risk-based approach to combating money laundering terrorist financing, and includes (inter alia) enhanced due diligence for certain types of customers (e.g. politically exposed persons and correspondent relationships) and increased emphasis on beneficial ownership of funds.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(b) - The Relationship of Banker and Customer
(iii) - Nature of the Banker–Customer Relationship

Nature of relationship

34-253

As bankers perform different services for their customers the nature of the relationship between the parties may vary from transaction to transaction. Thus, when the banker accepts the custody of documents or goods he acts as bailee ⁷⁶² and when he agrees to hold moneys on trust he becomes a trustee. The basic relationship of banker and customer, however, is established, as has been shown, by the opening of an account. When a banker opens an account for the customer the relationship established is one of debtor and creditor. ⁷⁶³ When the account is in credit, the customer is the creditor and the banker the debtor. Consequently, funds deposited by the customer become the bank's money ⁷⁶⁴; the customer acquires a debt or chose in action claimable from the bank. The position is reversed when the account is overdrawn. While the relationship of debtor and creditor prevails in all types of accounts opened by bankers, there are superadded obligations in some types of accounts, which will be discussed subsequently.

^{762.} See below, paras 34-442—34-444.

^{763.} Foley v Hill (1848) 2 H.L.C. 28; Joachimson v Swiss Bank Corp [1921] 3 K.B. 110; Rowlandson v National Westminster Bank Ltd [1978] 1 W.L.R. 798, 803–804; Financial Services Authority v Anderson [2010] EWHC 599 (Ch) at [44].

^{764.} Note that this is the position even if the funds deposited are trust property; the bank, though, would owe the duties of a trustee where it received the money in that capacity: Space Investment Ltd v Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce Trust Co (Bahamas) Ltd [1986] 1 W.L.R. 1072.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(b) - The Relationship of Banker and Customer
(iv) - Fiduciary Relationship and Duty of Care

The general rule

34-254

Usually the relationship of banker and customer is not of a fiduciary nature. ⁷⁶⁵ Special circumstances, however, may constitute the banker a fiduciary agent, thus imposing on him a duty of full disclosure or a specific duty of care. ⁷⁶⁶ Three cases illustrate both the type of circumstances that may lead to the creation of a fiduciary relationship between banker and customer and the ambit of the doctrine. In the first case, Woods v Martins Bank Ltd, ⁷⁶⁷ the manager of a branch of the defendant bank was interested in obtaining the custom of the plaintiff, a young man without business experience, who had inherited a small legacy. The branch manager offered to advise the plaintiff on his investments and business affairs and eventually induced him to invest a substantial amount of money in shares of a private company. The manager failed to disclose to the plaintiff that that company was heavily indebted to the bank and that the head office was pressing for the reduction of its overdraft. The company went into liquidation and the shares turned out to be worthless. As a defence to the plaintiff's action in damages, the bank pleaded that the advice had been given to the plaintiff before he became a customer, to whom they might have owed a duty of care. Giving judgment for the plaintiff, Salmon J. held that, even if a relationship of banker and customer had not been established at the relevant time, the bank had nevertheless assumed fiduciary obligations towards the plaintiff when it agreed to become his financial adviser. ⁷⁶⁸

Bundy's case

34-255

In the second case, Lloyds Bank Ltd v Bundy, ⁷⁶⁹ the Court of Appeal held that a bank owed a duty of "fiduciary care" to a customer from whom it had obtained a guarantee—covered by a charge over land—to secure an overdraft granted to another customer. Conceding that such a duty did not usually exist when a customer agreed to guarantee to his bank the obligations of a third party, Sir Eric Sachs emphasised that in the present case the guarantor—who was a customer of long standing—had relied on the bank's advice. As the bank had failed properly to advise the guarantor or to suggest that he obtain legal advice, the guarantee and charge were voidable on the ground of undue influence. The learned judge described the situations in which a fiduciary relationship could be created as follows:

"... whilst disclaiming any intention of seeking to catalogue the elements of such a special relationship, it is perhaps of a little assistance to note some of those which have in the past frequently been found to exist where the court has been led to decide that this relationship existed as between adults of sound mind. Such cases tend to arise where someone relies on the guidance or advice of another, where the other is aware of that reliance and where the person upon whom reliance is placed obtains, or may obtain, a benefit from the transaction or has some other interest in it being concluded. In addition, there must, of course, be shown to exist a vital element ... referred to as confidentiality.”⁷⁷⁰

Analysis of rule in Morgan's case

34-256

The principle in question has been clarified in National Westminster Bank Plc v Morgan.⁷⁷¹ The bank was asked to approve a refinancing arrangement for a customer whose improvident business ventures had led to his defaulting in payments under an existing mortgage, granted to a building society over the family home, owned jointly by the customer and his wife. As part of the proposed scheme, the object of which was to preclude the forced sale of the property by the building society, the bank demanded a charge over the same property. When the wife, who was also a customer of the bank, made it clear that she was unwilling to execute a charge covering the husband's business ventures, the branch manager advised her, erroneously but in good faith, that the charge was meant to cover only the amount advanced in respect of the refinancing arrangement aimed at salvaging the house. In reality, the bank's standard form of a charge was so phrased as to constitute the property a security for the chargors' total indebtedness to the bank. When the husband passed away, he was not indebted to the bank in respect of his business activities. The couple had, however, been in arrears of payments due under the refinancing arrangement and the bank proposed to sell the property to recover the amount due to it. Reversing the Court of Appeal's decision to set the mortgage aside, the House of Lords held that the bank had not committed a breach of a duty of care or a fiduciary duty owed to the wife. The relationship between the bank and the couple had remained one of banker and customer and, on the facts, there was no exercise of undue influence by the branch manager. Lord Scarman highlighted three points. First, the bank had not derived any hidden benefit from the transaction. The sole object of the refinancing scheme was to enable the couple to save their house from being sold by the building society. Secondly, the branch manager's statement was incorrect technically rather than in substance. Whilst the documents effectively secured the bank in respect of the husband's business debts, the bank had no intention of exercising any rights acquired by it under the charge in respect of such debts. Thirdly, the wife understood the general nature of the charge and of the transaction as a whole. In view of these facts, the mere inequality in the parties' bargaining power was immaterial. Emphasising the absence of a conflict of interests between the bank and the couple, his Lordship concluded that the bank had not been under a duty to advise the wife to seek independent legal advice.

Limitations of general principle defined

34-257

❗ It is clear from the cases considered in the foregoing paragraphs that banks are held to be subject to fiduciary duties or special duties of care only in exceptional cases. Basically, such a duty arises where the bank has assumed liability or has held itself out in a manner that justifies its imposition.⁷⁷²

❗ A duty of care is more readily invoked if the bank has derived some benefit, be it direct or indirect, from the transaction involved or if it placed itself in a situation which led to a conflict of interests between the customer and itself.⁷⁷³ Cases of this sort are, of course, rare. In its ordinary dealings, the bank need not be unduly suspicious and cannot, for instance, be expected to initiate enquiries about the motive behind a payment instruction given to it by the customer's duly authorised agent unless there are some very clear indications that ought to alert the bank about the agent's fraudulent design.⁷⁷⁴ Usually, all that is to be expected of a bank is the exercise of reasonable care in the discharge of its duties to customers. In determining whether a bank has acted negligently, regard must be had to all relevant circumstances as well as to standard banking practice. This principle emerges most clearly from an earlier authority, Schioler v Westminster Bank Ltd.⁷⁷⁵ The plaintiff, a Danish national domiciled in Denmark but resident in the United Kingdom, maintained an account with the Guernsey branch of the defendant bank. Dividends due to the plaintiff from a Malaysian company were usually remitted by it for credit of this account in sterling, an arrangement under which the plaintiff was not liable to taxation in the United Kingdom. On one occasion, however, the dividend was remitted by a voucher expressed in foreign currency. In the absence of facilities in Guernsey for the negotiation of foreign currency drafts, the dividend voucher was forwarded by the Guernsey branch for collection to the bank's head office in England. The plaintiff, thereupon, became subject to payment of United Kingdom income tax, which was duly deducted by the bank. The plaintiff's action in breach of contract was dismissed by Mocatta J., who held that the bank had not acted negligently in failing to ask for specific instructions when the dividend was received in foreign currency. As the bank had acted in accordance with established banking practice, it was not in breach of a duty of care.

Every day transactions

34-258

Another case in point is Redmond v Allied British Banks Plc. ⁷⁷⁶ The plaintiff paid to the credit of his account with the defendant bank a number of crossed cheques, bearing crossings accompanied by the words "not negotiable—account payee only", which bore on their backs the purported indorsements of the payees. These cheques were paid by the drawee bank when presented through the clearing system but as, in reality, the cheques had been circulated by persons who had no title to them, the defendant bank was sued in conversion by the true owners. The defendant bank settled these actions and then debited the plaintiff's account with the face value of the cheques. The plaintiff claimed that the bank ought to have warned him about the risk involved in the taking up of crossed cheques payable to a third party and bearing the words in question. Dismissing the action, Saville J. said that he could see no basis for a duty to advise or to warn a customer that there were risks attendant upon something which the customer proposed to do. ⁷⁷⁷ There was no need to imply such a duty in order to give business efficacy to the contract and there was no evidence to suggest that the circumstances of the transactions involved were such as to give rise to some duty of care in tort. His Lordship supported his view by a reference to the Privy Council's decision in Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Liu Chong Hing Bank Ltd. ⁷⁷⁸ It derives further support from cases ⁷⁷⁹ which show that the courts are unwilling to broaden the category of cases in which a duty of care in tort is imposed at law so as to enable a party to recover pure economic loss. ⁷⁸⁰

Information respecting new products

34-259

In Suriya & Douglas v Midland Bank Plc., ⁷⁸¹ a customer complained that the bank had not advised him that he could earn interest on the money deposited by him if he converted his existing account into a new type. Dismissing his action, the Court of Appeal held that the bank was not under a duty of care, either in contract or as fiduciary, to advise the customer of the existence of the "new products". ⁷⁸²

Effect of contractual documents on duty of care

34-260

⚠ Where a bank provides specialist banking services to financially sophisticated customers under the terms of contractual documentation drafted by specialist lawyers, the court will be slow to find a duty of care in tort going beyond the rights and obligations carefully set out in those documents. ⁷⁸³ There are a number of cases which illustrate that contractual terms, such as those which deny that advice has been given and/or relied upon, may prevent the coming into existence of any duty of care to advise. ⁷⁸⁴ ⚠ Where these terms define the basis upon which the parties act, they do not constitute exclusion clauses falling within the ambit of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 or s.3 of the

Misrepresentation Act 1967, ⁷⁸⁵ ⚠ although such a term may constitute an unfair term when found in a "consumer contract" within the meaning of Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 ⁷⁸⁶ or (for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015) the Consumer Rights Act 2015. ⁷⁸⁷

Money laundering

34-261

In Shah v HSBC Private Bank (UK) Ltd, ⁷⁸⁸ Hamblen J. considered what, if any, obligations a bank owed to its customer when it froze the customer's account having made an authorised disclosure under s.338 of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (POCA). He held that the trigger for disclosure to the authorities under POCA was the bank's subjective suspicion that a requested transfer involved funds which were criminal property. ⁷⁸⁹ The suspicion had to be genuinely held but it did not matter whether or not there were reasonable grounds for the suspicion, nor did it have to be rational. ⁷⁹⁰ Thus far, the Court of Appeal agreed with Hamblen J. ⁷⁹¹ However, their Lordships considered that the judge had been wrong to say that the customer was left to rely only on an assertion of bad faith (which he had not made). ⁷⁹² There was no reason why the customer could not require the bank to prove its case that it had the relevant suspicion and be entitled to pursue the case to trial so that the bank could make good its contention in this respect. ⁷⁹³ But their Lordships held that there was no reasonable prospect that a claim based on negligence would succeed. ⁷⁹⁴ Hamblen J. had accepted that a banker's duty of care was not completely excluded by POCA and that, in principle, delay in making a relevant disclosure might be a breach of that duty. ⁷⁹⁵ However, he had held that there was no evidence of such delay since all the disclosures had been made within two days of receiving the relevant payment instruction. Their Lordships agreed with the judge on this issue. ⁷⁹⁶

^{765.} Governor and Company of the Bank of Scotland v A Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 52, [2001] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 73 at [25]; JP Morgan Chase Bank v Springwell Navigation Corp [2008] EWHC 1186 (Comm) at [573] (affirmed [2010] EWCA Civ 1221, [2010] 2 C.L.C. 705); Forsta Ap-Fonden v Bank of New York Mellon SA [2013] EWHC 3127 (Comm) at [173]; Barclays Bank Plc v Svizera Holdings BV [2014] EWHC 1020 (Comm) at [8]; Bailey v Barclays Bank Plc [2014] EWHC 2882 (QB) at [87]–[90]. The fact that the bank holds third party security to cover the customer's indebtedness does not convert the banker-customer relationship into a fiduciary one: Kotonou v National Westminster Bank Plc [2010] EWHC 1659 (Ch), [2011] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 1164 (held bank as lender owes no duty to borrower to call on third party security before it lapsed). But some activities of a multifunctional bank may give rise to fiduciary duties, e.g. acting as custodian of its customer's securities (JP Morgan Chase Bank v Springwell Navigation Corp [2008] EWHC 1186 (Comm) at [573] (affirmed [2010] EWCA Civ 1221, [2010] 2 C.L.C. 705); Forsta Ap-Fonden v Bank of New York Mellon SA [2013] EWHC 3127 (Comm) at [173]). Even then, the fact the bank is a fiduciary in some respects does not mean that it is a fiduciary in all respects (Forsta Ap-Fonden v Bank of New York Mellon SA, above, at [174]; Saltri III v MD Mezzanine SA SICAR [2012] EWHC 3025 (Comm), [2013] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 661 at [123]). For detailed coverage, see E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), Ch.5, s.4.

^{766.} See Fahad Al Tamimi v Mohamad Khodari [2009] EWCA Civ 1109, per Wilson L.J. at [42]: "The relationship between a lender and a borrower is not in principle a fiduciary relationship. The relationship between a bank manager and a customer may in certain circumstances acquire a fiduciary character".

^{767.} [1959] 1 Q.B. 55. See also Standard Investments Ltd v Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 22 D.L.R. (4th) 410 (1985); Hong Kong Bank of Canada v Phillips [1998] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 343; United Pan-Europe Communications NV v Deutsche Bank AG [2000] 2 B.C.L.C. 461 CA; Diamantides v JP Morgan Chase Bank [2005] EWCA Civ 1612. See also Investors Compensation Scheme Ltd v West Bromwich Building Society [1999] P.N.L.R. 496 at 509, Evans-Lombe J. (independent financial adviser).

^{768.} [1959] 1 Q.B. 55 at 72. Note that this case was decided before the principle of Candler v Crane, Christmas & Co [1951] 2 K.B. 164 was overruled by the House of Lords in Hedley Byrne & Co Ltd v Heller & Partners Ltd [1964] A.C. 465, so that liability could not be placed on negligence simpliciter.

- 769. [1975] Q.B. 326.
- 770. [1975] Q.B. 326 at 341. And see Commonwealth Trading Bank of Australia v Smith (1991) 102 Aust. L.R. 453; Scaravelli v Bank of Montreal (2004) 69 O.R. (3d) 295 at [37].
- 771. [1985] A.C. 686.
- 772.  For such an exceptional case, see Verity and Spindler v Lloyds Bank Plc [1995] C.L.C. 1557 (bank manager assumed the role of borrowers' financial adviser); cf. Murphy v HSBC Bank Plc [2004] EWHC 467 (Ch) (bank assumed no responsibility to borrowers who had own solicitors and accountants to advise them). The Lending Code, revised September 28, 2015, contains requirements that banks "lend money responsibly" (para.15), and that, before lending any money, granting or increasing an overdraft or other borrowing, they make an assessment of the customer's ability to repay (paras 50, 57). See also the Standards of Lending Practice (above, para.34-222, n.673) at pp.4 (Principles for lending), 6 (Product sale) and 8 (Money Management).
- 773. Barclays Bank Plc v Quincecare Ltd [1988] F.L.R. 166 at 185 (but note that Steyn J. placed reliance on Allott J.'s decision in Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1987] 1 W.L.R. 987, which has since been reversed on appeal: [1989] 1 W.L.R. 1340; reversed on a different point: [1991] A.C. 548).
- 774. For an excellent analysis, see the decision of the Ontario Court of Appeal in Standard Investments Ltd v Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 22 D.L.R. (4th) 410 (1985).
- 775. [1970] 2 Q.B. 719.
- 776. [1987] F.L.R. 307.
- 777. See also Winnetka Trading Corp v Julius Baer International Ltd [2011] EWHC 2030 (Ch), [2012] 1 B.C.L.C. 588 at [90]–[97]. Similarly, an English bank acting as agent for collection of a cheque owes no duty of care to a foreign collecting bank, which is deemed to be its customer for these purposes, to advise on the effect of the Cheques Act 1992 on the meaning and significance of an "a/c payee only" crossing on the cheque: see Honourable Society of the Middle Temple v Lloyds Bank Plc [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 193; Linklaters (a firm) v HSBC Bank Plc [2003] EWHC 1113 (Comm), [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 545 (noted by Ellinger (2004) 120 L.Q.R. 226).
- 778. [1986] A.C. 80, discussed below, para.34-350.
- 779. D & F Estates Ltd v Church Commissioners of England [1989] A.C. 177; Caparo Industries Plc v Dickman [1990] 2 A.C. 605; Murphy v Brentwood DC [1991] 1 A.C. 398; see Vol.I, paras 18-024 et seq.
- 780. As regards liability owed to third parties, arising in the context of an ordinary banking transaction, see: TE Potterton Ltd v Northern Bank Ltd [1993] 1 I.R. 413 (paying bank owes payee of cheque a duty to act carefully and honestly when advising payee of its reasons for dishonour of cheque); Chapman v Barclays Bank Plc [1997] Bank. L.R. 315 CA (bank owes no duty of care to third party who had financial interest in the borrower's affairs); Wells v First National Commercial Bank [1998] P.N.L.R. 552 CA (bank instructed to make funds transfer to named beneficiary owes no duty of care to that beneficiary and will not be liable to him if it fails to execute the instruction); Abou-Rahmah v Abacha [2005] EWHC 2662 (QB), [2006] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 247; affirmed. [2006] EWCA Civ 1492, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 115, but with no appeal on this issue (receiving bank does not owe a duty of care to the payer of funds, who is not its customer and to whom it has undertaken no special responsibility, to pay money received only to the beneficiary identified in the payer's instructions or, in the case of discrepancies, to clarify the identity of the beneficiary with the payer); Customs and Excise Commissioners v Barclays Bank Plc [2006] UKHL 28 [2007] 1 A.C. 181 (bank notified by a third party of freezing injunction granted to the third party against one of the bank's customers affecting an account held by the customer with the bank, owes no duty to the third party to take reasonable care to comply with the terms of the injunction); Riyad Bank v Ahli United Bank (UK) Plc [2006] EWCA Civ 780, [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 292 (where there is a contractual chain, the normal position is that the chain should not be bypassed by a claim in tort, but a duty of care may exist where discussions and representations are made directly to the party who suffers loss); So v HSBC Bank Plc [2009] EWCA Civ 296, [2009] 1 C.L.C. 503 (bank owes duty of care to third party when representing that it had accepted and intended to carry out its customer's instructions).

781. [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 612.

782. See also R. (on the application of Norwich and Peterborough Building Society) v Financial Ombudsman Services Ltd [2002] EWHC 2379 (Admin), [2003] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 65. From November 1, 2009, a new Banking Conduct of Business Sourcebook (BCOBS) replaced the Banking Code and the Business Banking Code (see above, para.34-219). BCOBS reflects FSA Principle 6, which requires a firm to pay due regard to the interests of its customers and treat them fairly, and FSA Principle 7, which requires a firm to pay due regard to the information needs of its clients and communicate information to them in a way which is clear, fair and not misleading (see BCOBS 2 and 4).

783. IFE Fund SA v Goldman Sachs International [2006] EWHC 2887 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 264 at [63], per Toulson J.; affirmed [2007] EWCA Civ 811, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 449 (syndicated loan); applied in Maple Leaf Macro Volatility Master Fund v Rouvroy [2009] EWHC 257 (Comm), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 475 at [369]. See also Barclays Bank Plc v Svizera Holdings BV [2014] EWHC 1020 (Comm) at [68]–[70] (applying the opinion of Lord Hodge in Grant Estates Ltd v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc [2012] CSOH 133 at [73] as to when a tortious duty of care to advise would arise in the case of a bank or other financial institution). But contrast Sumitomo Bank Ltd v Banque Bruxelles Lambert SA [1997] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 487, where Langley J. held that provisions as to the arranging bank's duties, rights and exonerations under the syndicated loan agreement did not prevent, and were not inconsistent with, a general duty of care being owed to syndicate members. The contractual documents may also regulate the existence and extent of a fiduciary relationship, especially where the parties are both substantial financial institutions dealing on an arm's length basis (Forsta Ap-Fonden v Bank of New York Mellon SA [2013] EWHC 3127 (Comm) at [177]–[178]; Saltri III v MD Mezzanine SA SICAR [2012] EWHC 3025 (Comm) at [123(f)]).

784.  Springwell Navigation Corp v JP Morgan Chase Bank [2008] EWHC 1186 (Comm), affirmed [2010] EWCA Civ 1221, [2010] 2 C.L.C. 705; IFE Fund SA v Goldman Sachs International [2007] EWCA Civ 811, [2007] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 449; Peekay Intermark v Australia & New Zealand Banking Group [2006] EWCA Civ 386, [2006] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 511; Valse Holdings v Merrill Lynch International Bank [2004] EWHC 2471 (Comm); Bankers Trust International Plc v PT Dharmala Sakti Sejahtera [1996] C.L.C. 518; Credit Suisse International v Stichting Vestia Groep [2014] EWHC 3103 (Comm) at [113]–[114]. See also Titan Steel Wheels Ltd v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc [2010] EWHC 211 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 92 (held contract terms gave rise to contractual estoppel or, alternatively, negated the existence of a duty of care); Raiffeisen Zentralbank Osterreich AG v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc [2010] EWHC 1392 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 123 (held no representation/no responsibility provisions in Information Memorandum gave rise to contractual estoppel). The decision of the Court of Appeal in Springwell Navigation Corp v JP Morgan Chase Bank [2010] EWCA Civ 1221, [2010] 2 C.L.C. 705, is important because it upholds the doctrine of contractual estoppel, applying the approach taken by the Court of Appeal (possibly obiter) in Peekay Intermark Ltd v ANZ Banking Group, above. Followed in Cassa di Risparmio della Repubblica di San Marino SpA v Barclays Bank Ltd [2011] EWHC 484 (Comm), [2011] 1 C.L.C. 701 at [492]–[508]; Standard Chartered Bank v Ceylon Petroleum Corp [2011] EWHC 1785 (Comm) at [526]–[534], affirmed on different ground [2012] EWCA Civ 1049; Barclays Bank Plc v Svizera Holdings BV [2014] EWHC 1020 (Comm) at [58]–[63], [71]; Crestsign Ltd v National Westminster Bank Plc [2014] EWHC 3043 (Ch) at [119]; Credit Suisse International v Stichting Vestia Groep [2014] EWHC 3103 (Comm) at [307]–[308] (contractual estoppel applied to agreement about a state of affairs in the future) and [309]–[310] (questioning whether contractual estoppel is really a form of estoppel at all); Thornbridge Ltd v Barclays Bank Plc [2015] EWHC 3430 (QB) at [111]. But note that contract terms may not assist a bank when relied upon in a different context from the one in which they were intended to apply (Camerata Property Inc v Credit Suisse Securities (Europe) Ltd [2011] EWHC 479 (Comm), [2011] 2 B.C.L.C. 54 at [184]; for related proceedings, see [2012] EWHC 7 (Comm) and [2013] EWHC 29 (Comm)) or where the terms are limited in their scope (UBS AG (London Branch) v Kommunale Wasserwerke Leipzig GMBH [2014] EWHC 3615 (Comm) at [773]–[784]), and that a “disclaimer” cannot create a contractual estoppel when it is not part of the contract (Taberna Europe CDO II Plc v Selskabet AF 1. September 2008 (In Bankruptcy) [2015] EWHC 871 (Comm) at [120]); reversed on appeal [2016] EWCA Civ 1262, where Court of Appeal held at [19]–[20] that a non-contractual “duty-negating” clause fell outside s.3 of the Misrepresentation Act 1967 because it was found in the very document that was said to contain the misrepresentation. For criticism of recent trend towards “documentary fundamentalism”, see G. McMeel [2011] L.M.C.L.Q. 185; and consider ING Bank NV v Ros Roca SA [2011] EWCA Civ 353, [2012] 1 W.L.R. 472, where it was held, in a different context, that a bank acting as financial adviser might find itself under a “duty to speak” or otherwise be estopped by convention, or through a promissory estoppel, from relying on the terms of a contract with its customer where its conduct (or inaction) could be taken to have overridden those terms. In the Springwell case [2008] EWHC 1186 (Comm) at [431]ff, Gloster J. held that an investment bank owed no general advisory duty to a sophisticated investor who was aware of the risks he was running. Her decision on this point was not challenged on appeal; however, the Court of Appeal (above, at [123]) accepted Gloster J.’s tentative conclusion (above, at [108]) that there might be a “low level duty of care” on the part of a salesman not to make any negligent misstatements and to use reasonable care not to recommend a highly risky investment without pointing out that it was such. For recent first instance decisions where the courts have also rejected claims based on the existence of a general advisory duty in the context of selling financial investments, see Wilson v MF Global UK Ltd [2011] EWHC 138 (QB); Bank Leumi (UK) Plc v Wachner [2011] EWHC 656 (Comm), [2011] 1 C.L.C. 454; Standard Chartered Bank v Ceylon Petroleum Corp, above, at [507]–[525], affirmed on different ground [2012] EWCA Civ 1049; City Index Ltd v Balducci [2011] EWHC 2562 (Ch), [2012] 1 B.C.L.C. 317 at [54]; Thornbridge Ltd v Barclays Bank Plc [2015] EWHC 3430 (QB) at [96]; Finch v Lloyds TSB Bank Plc [2016] EWHC 1236 (QB) at [52]–[58]; cf. Rubenstein v HSBC Bank Plc [2011] EWHC 2304 (QB), [2011] 2 C.L.C. 459 at [70], where there was a one-to-one enquiry about a specific investment transaction: reversed in part (on causation) [2012] EWCA Civ 1184, [2013] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 915. For brief discussion of statutory regulatory regime governing the sale of financial products by banks, see n.1361 below.

785.

❗ IFE Fund SA v Goldman Sachs International [2006] EWHC 2887 (Comm), [2007] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 264 at [70]–[71], per Toulson J., affirmed [2007] EWCA Civ 811, [2007] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 449 at [28]; Springwell Navigation Corp v JP Morgan Chase Bank [2008] EWHC 1186 (Comm) at [671], affirmed [2010] EWCA Civ 1221, [2010] 2 C.L.C. 705; Titan Steel Wheels Ltd v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc [2010] EWHC 211 (Comm), [2010] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 92 at [98]; Raiffeisen Zentralbank Osterreich AG v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc [2010] EWHC 1392 (Comm), [2011] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 123 at [316]–[317]. In Springwell, the Court of Appeal held (at [181]–[182]) that “no representation” and “non-reliance” provisions of the relevant contract were caught by s.3 of the Misrepresentation Act 1967 because they were “an attempt retrospectively to alter the character and effect of what had gone before and so in substance an attempt to exclude or restrict liability” (citing Christopher Clarke J. in Raiffeisen, above, at [315], who also said, at [314], that “the key question ... is whether the clause attempts to rewrite history or parts company with reality”). Nevertheless, the Court of Appeal held that the terms were reasonable when taken in context and in the light of the fact that the principal behind Springwell was a sophisticated investor in emerging market investments who was conscious of the risks involved. See also Camerata Property Inc v Credit Suisse Securities (Europe) Ltd [2011] EWHC 479 (Comm), [2011] 2 B.C.L.C. 54 at [186]–[187] (for related proceedings, see [2012] EWHC 7 (Comm)); AXA Sun Life Services Plc v Campbell Martin Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 133, [2011] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 1 at [48]–[75]; Standard Chartered Bank v Ceylon Petroleum Corp [2011] EWHC 1785 (Comm) at [569]–[572], affirmed on different ground [2012] EWCA Civ 1049; Barclays Bank Plc v Svizzera Holdings BV [2014] EWHC 1020 (Comm) at [61]; Crestsign Ltd v National Westminster Bank Plc [2014] EWHC 3043 (Ch) at [115]–[117], [119]–[121]; Thornbridge Ltd v Barclays Bank Plc [2015] EWHC 3430 (QB) at [97]–[121] (HH Judge Moulder, sitting as a judge of the High Court, said “the test is not whether the clause attempts to rewrite history or parts company with reality. The first step is to determine as a matter of construction whether the terms define the basis upon which the parties were transacting business or whether they were clauses inserted as a means of evading liability” [105]) Sears v Minco Plc [2016] EWHC 433 (Ch) at [74]–[84] (HH Judge Hodge, sitting as a judge of the High Court, said “I respectfully agree with Judge Moulder’s analysis and conclusions [in Thornbridge]”: at [80]); Taberna Europe CDO II Plc v Selskabet AF 1 September 2008 A/S (formerly Roskilde Bank A/S) (In Bankruptcy) [2016]

EWCA Civ 1262, where Court of Appeal held at [19]–[20] that a non-contractual “duty-negating” (i.e. basis) clause fell outside s.3 of the Misrepresentation Act 1967 because it was found in the very document that was said to contain the misrepresentation. It should be noted that different, more stringent, rules apply in the case of fraud: see Vol.I, para.15-150.

786. SI 1999/2083.

787. See below, Ch.38 for details. On the temporal application of the legislation see in particular para.38-011.

788. [2009] EWHC 79 (QB), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 328.

789. At [45], applying K Ltd v National Westminster Bank Plc [2006] EWCA Civ 1039, [2007] 1 W.L.R. 311, where the Court of Appeal adopted the definition of suspicion given in R. v Da Silva [2007] 1 W.L.R. 303, stating that the bank only has to consider that there is a more than fanciful possibility that the relevant facts exist.

790. At [45] and [47].

791. [2010] EWCA Civ 31, [2011] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 67 at [21]. Re-iterated by Supperstone J. when delivering judgment at the trial of the action: Shah v HSBC Private Bank (UK) Ltd [2012] EWHC 1283 (QB) at [67]–[69].

792. At [22].

793. Hence the Court of Appeal reversed Hamblen J.'s decision to give summary judgment to the bank on the customer's claim for damages for alleged loss suffered as a result of the bank's breach of duty in failing to carry out his payment instructions. Delivering judgment at the trial of the action (see [2012] EWHC 1283 (QB)), Supperstone J. dismissed the customer's claim, holding that (1) there was an implied term in the banking contract that permitted the bank, because it suspected money laundering, to delay the execution of the customer's payment instructions until it received consent under POCA (at [45], [236]); (2) there was no duty on the bank to provide the customer with information in relation to the delay and that, in any event, there was an implied term in the banking contract that permitted the bank to refuse to provide that information where doing so might contravene its duties under POCA (at [169], [171]–[172], [238]). For related proceedings, see [2011] EWCA Civ 1154 (on disclosure of the names of employees who had reported their suspicions); [2011] EWCA Civ 1669 (on amendment to allege bad faith on the part of bank employees).

794. At [35]–[36].

795. [2009] EWHC 79 (QB), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 328 at [58].

796. [2010] EWCA Civ 31, [2011] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 67 at [35].

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(b) - The Relationship of Banker and Customer
(v) - Banks and Undue Influence

Undue influence and suretyship transactions

34-262

⚠ Banks most commonly come up against the doctrine of undue influence when they seek to enforce third party security. ⁷⁹⁷ In rare cases the bank may be accused of having exercised undue influence itself, ⁷⁹⁸ ⚠ but it is more usual for a person who has given security to the bank to cover the indebtedness of the bank's customer to allege that they did so as a result of the undue influence, misrepresentation or other wrongdoing of that customer. The typical case is where the wife charges her interest in the matrimonial home to secure the borrowing of her husband. She may have done this as a result of his undue influence or misrepresentation. The wife may later seek to raise the husband's wrongdoing against the bank when it attempts to enforce the security against her. In Barclays Bank Plc v O'Brien, ⁷⁹⁹ the first of two seminal decisions of the House of Lords in this area, it was held that the wife's prospects of having the security set aside by the court turn on whether her husband acted as the bank's agent, ⁸⁰⁰ or whether the bank had actual or constructive notice of his undue influence or other wrongdoing. ⁸⁰¹

34-263

The burden is on the wife (or other surety) adequately to plead and prove that the bank had notice of the undue influence or wrongdoing. ⁸⁰² In Royal Bank of Scotland Plc v Etridge (No.2), ⁸⁰³ the second seminal case in this area, the House of Lords held that, where a wife offers to stand surety for her husband's debts, it is enough for her to show that the bank was aware of the husband/wife relationship. In other cases, the surety must establish that the bank knew that there was a non-commercial relationship between the surety and the debtor and that the transaction was on its face to the disadvantage of the surety. The burden of proof then shifts to the bank to show that it took all reasonable steps to bring home to the wife (or other surety) the risks involved in entering into the transaction. ⁸⁰⁴ The bank's failure to take all reasonable steps does not automatically mean that the security will be set aside. The wife (or other surety) must also establish either that the transaction was procured by undue influence (or other wrongdoing), or that the basic facts of the "evidential presumption" that it was so procured by undue influence exist and that presumption has not otherwise been rebutted. ⁸⁰⁵

O'Brien's case

34-264

In Barclays Bank Plc v O'Brien, ⁸⁰⁶ the husband, who was an accountant, persuaded his wife to execute a charge over the matrimonial home to back a guarantee given by him to secure the debts due to the bank from a company in which he had an interest. The relevant mortgage documents were executed by the wife at the bank's premises. She was not given the chance to read them and, in addition, the clerk who proffered the documents for her signature failed to draw her attention to a side-letter, in which the wife purported to acknowledge that she understood the nature of the transaction and that the bank had recommended that she take independent legal advice. The clerk further failed to carry out the branch manager's instruction to explain to her the nature of the transaction. Reversing the trial judge's decision, the Court of Appeal set the charge aside. ⁸⁰⁷ After a review of both the 19th-century decisions and the modern cases in point, Scott L.J. concluded that many of the relevant authorities treated a certain class of surety, encompassing married women and other persons such as aged relatives, as a "protected class". Scott L.J. concluded that—as a matter of policy—the existence of such a class of protected debtor should be recognised, although its existence was not postulated in all the authorities in point.

34-265

The House of Lords affirmed the Court of Appeal's decision, but on a different reasoning. To start with, Lord Browne-Wilkinson emphasised that it was essential that a law designed to protect the vulnerable, such as wives and cohabitees, should not render the matrimonial home unacceptable as security to financial institutions. His Lordship then reviewed the authorities respecting undue influence and concluded that, although there was no presumption of undue influence as between husband and wife, it was open to the wife to prove that, in her particular case, she did leave decisions on financial affairs to her husband. By doing so she established that "she reposed confidence and trust in her husband in relation to financial affairs and therefore undue influence [was] to be presumed". ⁸⁰⁸

Actual or constructive notice

34-266

His Lordship then considered the situations in which the undue influence exercised by the husband over the wife would induce a Court of Equity to set aside a charge or mortgage granted by the wife to a third party such as a bank. Naturally, such a charge would be set aside if the wrongdoing husband was acting as the bank's agent in obtaining the security from the wife. In such a case the bank would be fixed with the wrongdoing of its agent. His Lordship added:

"Apart from this, if the creditor bank has notice, actual or constructive, of undue influence exercised by the husband (and consequently of the wife's equity to set aside the transaction) the creditor will take subject to that equity and the wife can set aside the transaction against the creditor ... as well as against the husband." ⁸⁰⁹

Lord Browne-Wilkinson concluded that, if the doctrine of notice was properly applied, there was no need to postulate a special equitable doctrine applicable to charges executed by a class of debtor comprising wives and other persons such as cohabitees and aged parents. The key to the problem was to identify the circumstance in which the bank or other creditor was to be taken to have had notice of the wife's (or other chargor's) equity to set aside the transaction. His Lordship emphasised that, generally, a person would have constructive notice of such an equity where he was in command of facts which put him on inquiry as to the possible existence of the defect. Applying this general principle, his Lordship said:

"... a creditor is put on inquiry when a wife offers to stand surety for her husband's debts by the combination of two factors: (a) the transaction is on its face not to the financial advantage of the wife; and (b) there is a substantial risk in transactions of that kind that, in procuring the wife to act as surety, the husband has committed a legal or equitable wrong that entitles the wife to set aside the transaction." ⁸¹⁰

Avoiding constructive notice

34-267

His Lordship recognised that a bank could not be expected to conduct a detailed examination of the circumstances of each case in which a wife, a cohabitee or an aged parent offered to execute a charge over a piece of property. The bank could avoid being fixed with constructive notice by taking reasonable steps to satisfy itself that the wife's consent was freely given. It satisfies these requirements by insisting "that the wife attend a private meeting (in the absence of the husband) with a representative of the creditor at which she is told of the extent of her liability as surety, warned of the risk she is running and urged to take independent legal advice". ⁸¹¹

O'Brien guidelines in practice34-268

⚠ The practice of banks, both before and after the House of Lords issued its guidance in O'Brien, has been, and remains, not to have a private meeting with the surety. ⁸¹² It appears that banks have preferred not to adopt this course, probably because of the risk that the surety could later assert that the bank had somehow misrepresented the position. Instead, banks have made it their standard practice to insist both that the surety obtains independent legal advice on the nature and effect of the documents that she is to sign, and that the legal adviser confirms to the bank in writing that such advice has been given. ⁸¹³ ⚠ In Royal Bank of Scotland Plc v Etridge (No.2), ⁸¹⁴ the House of Lords expressed general approval of this practice, subject to certain controls, and dropped the requirement that the bank must have a private meeting with the surety.

Etridge's case34-269

In 2001, the House of Lords revisited this "difficult corner of the law" in Royal Bank of Scotland Plc v Etridge (No.2). ⁸¹⁵ The House of Lords heard eight appeals together. In seven of the appeals, the appellant was a wife who had agreed to subject her property, usually her interest in the matrimonial home, to a charge in favour of the bank in order to provide security for the payment of her husband's debts, or the debts of a company by means of which her husband carried on business. In each case the bank had started proceedings for possession of the mortgaged property, but the wife had defended the action on the ground that her agreement to grant the charge was brought about by the undue influence or misrepresentation of her husband and that, in the circumstances, the bank should not be allowed to enforce the charge against her. In each case the issue was whether the bank had notice of the husband's impropriety or alleged impropriety. In each case the bank had some reason to believe that a solicitor had acted for the wife in the transaction in question. So the question for their Lordships to decide was the extent to which the solicitor's participation, or believed participation, had absolved the bank of the need to make further inquiries about the circumstances in which the wife was persuaded to agree to grant the charge, or to take any further steps to satisfy itself that her consent was a true and informed consent. ⁸¹⁶

Bank put on inquiry34-270

In Etridge, the House of Lords recognised that Lord Browne-Wilkinson had not used the equitable concept of constructive notice in O'Brien in a conventional manner. ⁸¹⁷ By contrast, in Etridge the House spoke in terms of the bank, or other creditor, being "put on inquiry". ⁸¹⁸ Two factors combine to put the bank on inquiry: the non-commercial relationship between the surety and the debtor and the fact that the transaction is on its face to the disadvantage of the surety. This is a low threshold and Lord Nicholls held it to be crossed whenever a wife offers to stand surety for her husband's debts. ⁸¹⁹

Relationship between surety and debtor

34-271

⚠ A bank will be put on inquiry where a wife guarantees her husband's debts. ⁸²⁰ ⚠ Similarly, the bank will be put on inquiry where a husband guarantees his wife's debts or there is a heterosexual or homosexual relationship between surety and debtor (cohabitation not being essential), provided the bank is aware of the relationship. ⁸²¹ The same rule applies where the bank knows of a parent and child relationship between debtor and surety. ⁸²² Similarly, the rule applies where the bank is aware that there is a relationship of trust and confidence as between surety and debtor even though that relationship is not sexual. ⁸²³ However, Etridge is a landmark decision because Lord Nicholls was prepared to go even further than this. His Lordship did not want to draw an arbitrary boundary between those relationships that would activate the O'Brien principle and those that would not. Lord Nicholls held that, in future, banks should regulate their affairs on the basis that they are put on inquiry in every case where the relationship between the surety and the debtor is non-commercial. ⁸²⁴

Nature of the transaction

34-272

⚠ In Etridge, the House of Lords stressed that there would be other cases where a bank is not put on inquiry: e.g. where money is advanced to husband and wife jointly, unless the bank is aware that the loan is being made for the husband's purposes, as distinct from their joint purposes. ⁸²⁵ ⚠ Cases where the wife stands surety for the debts of a company whose shares are held by her and her husband were declared to be less clear-cut. ⁸²⁶ However, Lord Nicholls considered that a bank is put on inquiry in such cases, even where the wife is a director or secretary of the company. He held that the shareholding interests, and the identity of the directors, was not a reliable guide to the identity of the person who actually had control of the conduct of the company's business. ⁸²⁷ ⚠

Reasonable steps that a bank should take 34-273

Once put on inquiry, Lord Nicholls considered that a bank should not be expected to discover for itself whether a wife's consent had been procured by the exercise of undue influence, nor should it be expected to insist on confirmation from a solicitor that the solicitor has satisfied himself that the wife's consent has not been procured by undue influence. ⁸²⁸ Neither should the bank be compelled to hold a personal meeting with the surety. ⁸²⁹ According to Lord Nicholls ⁸³⁰:

"The furthest a bank can be expected to go is to take reasonable steps to satisfy itself that the wife has had brought home to her, in a meaningful way, the practical implications of the proposed transaction. This does not wholly eliminate the risk of undue influence or misrepresentation. But it does mean that a wife enters into a transaction with her eyes open so far as the basic elements of the transaction are concerned."

Lord Nicholls stressed that, in the ordinary case, it would be reasonable for the bank to rely upon confirmation from a solicitor, ⁸³¹ acting for the wife, ⁸³² that he has advised the wife appropriately. ⁸³³ However, in an extraordinary case, where the bank knows that the solicitor has not duly advised the wife or if the bank knows facts from which it ought to have realised that the wife has not received the appropriate advice, it will proceed at its own risk. ⁸³⁴

Future transactions

34-274

 Lord Nicholls also gave detailed guidance to banks as to how they should act in future when looking to the fact that the wife has been, or reasonably appears to have been, advised independently by a solicitor. ⁸³⁵ This guidance is not to be considered as optional. ⁸³⁶ It can be summarised as follows:

(a)

the bank should make direct contact with the wife and:

(i)

explain to her the reason why it requires written confirmation from a solicitor, acting for her, that he has fully explained the nature of the documents to her and the practical implications they will have for her; and ask her to nominate a solicitor to act for her and provide the necessary confirmation (she should be told that this may be the same solicitor that acts for her husband but that she may choose another solicitor if a solicitor is already acting for her and her husband). The bank should not proceed with the transaction until it has received an appropriate response directly from the wife.

(ii)

(b)

The bank must provide the wife's solicitor with such financial information as he needs for the purpose of explaining the nature of the documents and their practical implications to her. It should be routine practice for banks to send necessary financial information to the solicitor. What is required depends on the facts of the case but, ordinarily, it will include information on the purpose for which the proposed new facility has been requested, the current amount of the husband's indebtedness, the amount of his current overdraft facility and the amount and terms of any new facility. A copy of any written application of the husband for a facility should also be sent to the solicitor. The bank will have to obtain the consent of the customer to the disclosure of confidential information, and the transaction should not be allowed to proceed without such consent (Lord Scott considered that a husband who proposes that his wife stands surety for his or his company's debts constitutes implied consent to disclosure, ⁸³⁷ but it is submitted that obtaining express consent to disclosure would be a much safer option from the bank's point of view, especially where the debtor is technically the husband's company ⁸³⁸ ).

(c)

In those exceptional cases where the bank believes or suspects that the wife has been misled by her husband or is not entering into the transaction of her own free will, the bank must inform the wife's solicitors of the facts giving rise to its belief or suspicion.

(d)

The bank must in every case obtain from the wife's solicitor a written confirmation to the effect

mentioned above. ⁸³⁹

Independent advice

34-275

Should the solicitor acting for the wife act for her alone? Does it matter that the solicitor also acts for the husband and/or the bank in the transaction? In the Etridge case, Lord Nicholls considered this to be a much-vexed question: one, he stressed, which could not be answered by reference to decided cases. ⁸⁴⁰ Lord Nicholls balanced the factors that suggest that the solicitor should act for the wife alone against those factors that suggest that he may also act for the husband or the bank, provided he is satisfied that this is in the wife's best interests and is satisfied also that this will not give rise to any conflicts of duty or interest. In Lord Nicholls' opinion, the latter proved more weighty than the former. ⁸⁴¹ At the heart of Lord Nicholls' reasoning was the understanding that when advising the wife the solicitor owes his duties, both legally and professionally, to her and her alone. He is concerned only with her interests. ⁸⁴²

No imputation of solicitor's knowledge to bank ⁸⁴³

34-276

Does the solicitor act as the bank's agent for these purposes so that the solicitor's knowledge that he has not done his job properly, whatever he said on the certificate, can be imputed to the bank? Lord Nicholls answered this question in the negative. ⁸⁴⁴ The idea central to the arrangement is that in advising the wife the solicitor is acting for her and no one else. According to his Lordship, "[t]o impute to the bank knowledge of what passed between the solicitor and the wife would contradict this essential feature of the arrangement". ⁸⁴⁵ The mere fact that the bank, for its own purposes, asked the solicitor to advise the wife did not constitute the solicitor the bank's agent when giving that advice. Lord Nicholls concluded that, in the ordinary case, deficiencies in the advice given were a matter between the wife and the solicitor so that the bank was entitled to proceed on the assumption that a solicitor advising the wife has done his job properly. However, he held that the position would be different where the bank knew that the solicitor had not done his job properly, or if it knew facts from which it ought to have realised this. Similarly, Lord Scott thought that where the solicitor's only instructions came from the bank, and the bank was his only client, so that he never became the solicitor of the wife, his knowledge of what had or had not taken place regarding advice to the wife might well be imputed to the bank. ⁸⁴⁶

Rescission

34-277

Where a wife (or other surety) successfully raises an O'Brien/Etridge defence, she is entitled to rescind the transaction with the bank. ⁸⁴⁷ The fact that the person who exercised the undue influence, or made the misrepresentation, is not himself a party to the transaction is basically irrelevant. If, for example, the bank has constructive notice to the effect that the wife has been subjected to undue influence by her husband, it would be irrelevant that the charge was executed by the wife alone and not jointly by the spouses. ⁸⁴⁸ Where the wife has received benefits under the transaction with the bank, she should be required, as a condition of rescission, to make counter-restitution to the bank of the value of the benefit she has received. ⁸⁴⁹ However, the equitable remedy of rescission will not be made on terms where the wife obtained no benefit for herself from the transaction. In TSB Bank Plc v Camfield, ⁸⁵⁰ a wife was induced to stand surety by her husband's innocent misrepresentation that their maximum liability in respect of the loan for his business was £15,000, when in fact it was unlimited. The bank was held to have constructive notice of the misrepresentation and the issue turned on whether the security could be partially enforced up to £15,000. The Court of Appeal held that the security was to be set aside in full. Nourse L.J. stated: “[t]he wife’s right to have the transaction set aside in toto as against the husband is no less enforceable against the mortgagee”.⁸⁵¹ The decision may be criticised on the ground that as the wife was prepared to guarantee payment of £15,000, it was appropriate to impose terms.⁸⁵² Of course, in a case of undue influence, where the surety’s consent is totally vitiated, it is right that the security be set aside in full.⁸⁵³ However, even in a case of undue influence it may occasionally be possible to sever tainted material from untainted material in an instrument, and to set aside only the former, so long as this does not amount to rewriting the contract.⁸⁵⁴

Duty of care

34-278

In the normal course of events, a bank is under no duty of care to proffer explanations as to the nature and effect of a security document executed by a surety, or to advise the surety to take independent legal advice.⁸⁵⁵ However, a duty of care may arise where there are special factors, e.g. where it is clear that the bank is being looked to for advice or is in some close relationship with the prospective surety of a kind which gives rise to a fiduciary relationship between them.⁸⁵⁶ Whether a duty of care is owed depends upon all the circumstances of the case, including relevant evidence of banking practice.⁸⁵⁷ Although it seems established that no duty of explanation or advice normally arises where the surety is not a customer of the bank, there is some uncertainty whether the same can be said where the surety is an existing customer of the bank. In Cornish v Midland Bank Plc,⁸⁵⁸ where the Court of Appeal held that the bank had been negligent in the advice it had given to its customer, the surety, Kerr L.J. went on to consider, obiter, whether the bank was under a duty of care to give an explanation of the security documents. Kerr L.J. came to the tentative conclusion that banks are under a duty to their own customers to proffer an adequate explanation of the nature and effect of the security documents they are about to sign. Kerr L.J.’s dictum has been considered in a number of subsequent cases and rejected in nearly all of them.⁸⁵⁹ It is submitted that the better view is that customers should be treated in the same way as non-customers, and that there should normally be no duty of care to proffer an explanation or advice in either case. Imposition of a duty to proffer an explanation or advice would seem to undermine the arm’s length nature of the banker-customer relationship.

Damages

34-279

Where a bank attempts to explain the nature and extent of the security documents to the surety, will it be liable in damages for negligent advice if it fails to do so properly? In Midland Bank Plc v Perry,⁸⁶⁰ the trial judge held the bank liable for negligence in such circumstances. In Cornish v Midland Bank Plc,⁸⁶¹ it was conceded, with the approval of the Court of Appeal, that the bank owed the surety a duty of care to give a full and proper explanation of the security documents when it had undertaken the task of giving an explanation.⁸⁶² However, in Barclays Bank Plc v O’Brien,⁸⁶³ Scott L.J. said that where equity required the bank to explain the nature of a security document to the surety, the bank was not to be placed under a duty of care. He distinguished between where the surety is a customer of the bank, or where the bank voluntarily assumes the role of adviser, when it may be under a duty to advise carefully, and where the bank explains the security documents and the transaction to the surety to avoid the security being set aside in equity, when a duty of care would not arise. Nevertheless, a bank which proffers an explanation or advice as to the security documents runs the risk of crossing the line and being held to have voluntarily assumed the role of an adviser.⁸⁶⁴ It is no wonder, therefore, that banks have sought to avoid this risk by adopting the practice of requiring the surety to take independent legal advice.⁸⁶⁵

⁷⁹⁷. See Vol.I, paras 8-057 et seq. for general discussion of the doctrine of undue influence.

- 798. !The normal bank–customer relationship does not give rise to a presumption of undue influence (National Westminster Bank Plc v Morgan [1985] A.C. 686 HL: see para.34-256 above), but see Lloyds Bank Ltd v Bundy [1975] Q.B. 326 (para.34-255 above) for an exceptional case; Libyan Investment Authority v Goldman Sachs International [2016] EWHC 2530 (Ch) illustrates just how hard it is for a claim based on undue influence (or unconscionable bargain) to succeed where commercial parties transact with each other and each side can be expected to negotiate their own terms without regard to the other side's interests.
- 799. [1994] 1 A.C. 180.
- 800. e.g. Avon Finance Co Ltd v Bridger [1985] 2 All E.R. 281; Kingsnorth Trust Ltd v Bell [1986] 1 W.L.R. 119. But in O'Brien (at 195), the House of Lords criticised the artificiality of the agency analysis in most surety transactions, and it is not likely to be applied unless the debtor acts as the bank's agent "in a real sense" (CIBC Mortgages Plc v Pitt [1994] 1 A.C. 200 at 211 HL).
- 801. Note that the equitable concept of constructive notice is not used in a conventional manner in this context: see Royal Bank of Scotland Plc v Etridge (No.2) [2001] UKHL 44, [2002] 2 A.C. 773 at [39], [108] and [145].
- 802. Barclays Bank Plc v Boulter [1999] 1 W.L.R. 1919 HL.
- 803. [2001] UKHL 44, [2002] 2 A.C. 773 at [84].
- 804. Barclays Bank Plc v Boulter, above.
- 805. As to which, see Vol.I, paras 8-073–8-100. See, e.g. Royal Bank of Scotland Plc v Chandra [2011] EWCA Civ 192, [2011] N.P.C. 26 (held at [40] that no misrepresentation or undue influence); Davies v AIB Group (UK) Plc [2012] EWHC 2178 (Ch), [2012] 2 P. & C.R. 19 (held at [113]–[114] that no undue influence: husband made full disclosure of the entire transaction and all of the relevant documents so as to put wife's solicitor in the position to tender full and informed advice to her).
- 806. [1994] 1 A.C. 180.
- 807. [1993] Q.B. 109.
- 808. [1994] 1 A.C. at 190.
- 809. [1994] 1 A.C. 190 at 191. For further consideration of what constitutes constructive notice, contrast the approach of Lord Brown-Wilkinson in O'Brien, at 195–196, with that of Millet J. in MacMillan Inc v Bishopsgate Investment Trust Plc (No.3) [1995] 1 W.L.R. 978, 1014; and for resolution of any inconsistency between the two approaches, see Lord Neuberger M.R. in Sinclair Investments (UK) Ltd v Versailles Trade Finance Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 347, [2012] Ch. 435 at [109], as explained by Lord Clarke in Crédit Agricole Corporation and Investment Bank v Papadimitriou [2015] UKPC 13 at [12]–[21].
- 810. [1994] 1 A.C. 190 at 196. cf. CIBC Mortgages Plc v Pitt [1994] 1 A.C. 200, heard at the same time as O'Brien, where the loan appeared on its face to be a joint one for the benefit of both husband and wife.
- 811. [1994] 1 A.C. 190 at 196; but note that Lord Browne-Wilkinson added that, in circumstances in which a bank had knowledge of specific facts which rendered undue influence probable rather than a mere possibility, it ought to insist that (and not only to suggest) that independent advice be taken by the chargor.
- 812. Royal Bank of Scotland Plc v Etridge (No.2) [2001] UKHL 44, [2002] 2 A.C. 773 at [51].
- 813. !Royal Bank of Scotland Plc v Etridge (No.2)* [2001] UKHL 44, [2002] 2 A.C. 773 at [51]. This probably goes further than contemplated in Barclays Bank Plc v O'Brien [1994] 1 A.C. 180, since Lord Browne-Wilkinson considered (at 197) that it would only be the exceptional case in which the bank should not only advise the surety to obtain independent legal advice but should insist that she do so. The Lending Code, revised September 28, 2015, para.69, only requires the bank to make a recommendation to the surety to take independent legal advice. See, generally, paras 67-73 of the Lending Code for best practice when taking guarantees for personal and micro-enterprise lending. See the Standards of Lending Practice for Personal Customers (above, para.34-222, n.673) at pp.7 (Account maintenance and servicing) and 11 (Customer vulnerability). See also the Standards of Lending Practice for Business Customers (above, para.34-222, n.673) at pp.6–7 (Product sale):

“13.

If an individual or a business agrees to be a guarantor or to provide an indemnity, the Firm should make the individual/business aware of their obligations under the agreement and that they have the option to seek legal advice, should they wish to do so.

14.

Firms should not accept unlimited guarantees from an individual/business unless it is to support a customer's liabilities under a merchant agreement; however other forms of unlimited third party security may be taken, if available.”

and also at pp.9–10 (Product execution):

“6.

Firms should ensure that where an individual provides a guarantee/indemnity or other security, they are able to request information regarding their current level of liability, as long as the customer gives their permission and confidentiality is not breached.”

as well as the section on “vulnerability” (pp.14–15).

814. [2001] UKHL 44, [2002] 2 A.C. 773 at [55].

815. [2001] UKHL 44, [2002] 2 A.C. 773. The quote is from Lord Hobhouse at [98]. The opinion of Lord Nicholls was said to command “the unqualified support of all members of the House”: per Lord Bingham at [3].

816. The eighth appeal before the House, Kenyon-Brown v Desmond Banks & Co (a firm), was a case in which the wife had sued the solicitor who acted for her in this type of transaction alleging breaches of duty owed to her by the solicitor. This case raised an issue as to the extent of the duty lying on a solicitor who acts for a wife who is proposing to grant a charge over her property as security for her husband’s, or his company’s, debts.

817. At [39], [108] and [145].

818. At [44], where Lord Nicholls went on to accept that even this phrase is a misnomer as the bank is not required to make any inquiries.

819. At [44].

820. !At [44], [46]. But that does not mean that the wife will easily be able to establish undue influence in the first place. Lord Nicholls (at [30]) did not think that, in the ordinary course, a wife's guarantee of her husband's business debts was to be regarded as a transaction which, failing proof to the contrary, was explicable only on the basis that it had been procured by the exercise of undue influence by the husband. See also Lord Scott at [162]. See above, Vol.I, paras 8-093—8-094; and generally, Treitel, The Law of Contract, 14th edn (2015), paras 10-026 and 10-039.

821. At [47].

822. At [84].

823. At [83], citing Crédit Lyonnais Bank Nederland NV v Burch [1997] 1 All E.R. 144.

824. !At [87]–[89]. See Bank of Scotland Plc v Makris Unreported May 15, 2009 (relationship between surety and debtor was held not to be non-commercial where debtor was joint venture company and surety was director and shareholder who took active interest in the company). See also Trustees of Beardsley Theobalds Retirement Benefit Scheme v Yardley [2011] EWHC 1380 (QB) at [47] (employee's guarantee of employer's obligations as tenant under lease). But the O'Brien principle only applies to suretyship transactions, i.e. tripartite transactions as described by Lord Nicholls in Etridge at [43]: Chancery Client Partners Ltd v MRC 957 Ltd [2016] EWHC 2142 (Ch) at [28]–[29].

825. !CIBC Mortgages Plc v Pitt* [1994] 1 A.C. 200 HL. See also Mortgage Agency Services Number Two Ltd v Chater [2003] EWCA Civ 490, [2004] 1 P. & C.R. 4 (joint loan to mother and son); Bradley v Governor of the Bank of Ireland [2016] NICH 11 (joint loan to mother and son). Similarly, a third party is unlikely to be put on constructive notice when the agreement will confer a joint tenancy on the wife: Darjan Estate Co Plc v Hurley [2012] EWHC 189 (Ch), [2012] 1 W.L.R. 1782 at [34], and above, Vol.I, para.8-117. But contrast Davies v AIB Group (UK) Plc [2012] EWHC 2178 (Ch), [2012] 2 P. & C.R. 19 at [117], obiter (bank aware that joint loan being made for purposes of husband's company, as distinct from their joint purposes).

826. See, e.g. Goode Durrant Administration v Biddulph [1994] 2 F.L.R. 551 (a joint loan case).

827. !At [49]. See Mahon v FBN Bank (UK) Ltd [2011] EWHC 1432 (Ch), [2011] B.P.I.R. 1029 (bank still put on inquiry despite wife being sole shareholder and company secretary); cf. National Westminster Bank Plc v Alfano [2012] EWHC 1020 (QB) at [54] (guarantors were directors or senior managers of debtor company). For loan made to family partnership, see O'Neill v Ulster Bank Ltd [2015] NICA 64, [2016] B.P.I.R. 126 at [17] (arguable that situation analogous to where wife stands surety for loan made to company in which she is a shareholder).

828. At [53].

829. At [53]. See also Lord Clyde at [94]–[95]; Lord Scott at [148].

830. At [54].

831. This includes the case where the certificate is given by a legal executive, provided that the advice was independent and was given with the authority of the legal executive's principal: Barclays Bank Plc v Coleman [2001] Q.B. 20 at [78], affirmed [2001] UKHL 44, [2002] 2 A.C. 773 at [292]. The mere fact that the wife has seen a solicitor is not enough without confirmation that he has given her independent advice: Lloyds TSB Bank Plc v Holdgate [2002] EWCA Civ 1543, [2003] H.L.R. 25; First National Bank Plc v Achampong [2003] EWCA Civ 487, [2004] 1 F.C.R. 18; cf. Gov and Co of the Bank of Scotland v Hill [2002] EWCA Civ 1081, [2002] 29 E.G.C.S. 152. See also UCB Corporate Services Ltd v Williams [2002] EWCA Civ 555, [2002] 3

F.C.R. 448 (bank did not even know wife had seen a solicitor).

- 832. In National Westminster Bank Plc v Amin [2002] UKHL 9, [2002] 1 F.L.R. 735, it was not clear that this requirement had been met.
- 833. At [56]. The steps that a solicitor should take when advising the wife or other surety are set out in Vol.I, para.8-120. See also Padden v Bevan Ashford Solicitors [2011] EWCA Civ 1616, [2012] P.N.L.R. 14 and [2013] EWCA Civ 824 (appeal following retrial).
- 834. At [56]-[57]; and also Lord Scott at [175]. See also HSBC Bank Plc v Brown [2015] EWHC 359 (Ch) (where despite certificate being signed by a solicitor, the bank ought to have realised that the surety had not received appropriate advice).
- 835. At [79]. See Royal Bank of Scotland v Chandra [2010] EWHC 105 (Ch), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 677, especially at [173]-[175], for a case where the court had to decide whether the transaction was "past" or "future" for the purposes of the Etridge guidance (no discussion of this issue on appeal: see [2011] EWCA Civ 192, [2011] N.P.C. 26).
- 836. Lord Hobhouse at [100], who thought that it should be applied equally to past as well as future transactions because it represented a reasonable response to being put on inquiry.
- 837. At [190].
- 838.  The Lending Code, revised September 28, 2015, stresses that customer permission must be given and confidentiality not breached when the bank provides financial information to a guarantor (para.67), and also calls on the bank first to obtain customer consent before responding to the guarantor's request for confidential financial information (with the exception of the current level of liability) (para.68). See the Standards of Lending Practice (above, para.34-222, n.673) at p.7 (Account maintenance and servicing). See also the Standards of Lending Practice for Business Customers (above, para.34-222, n.673) at pp.9-10 (Product execution), point 6: see para.34-268, n.807 above.
- 839. See also Trustees of Beardsley Theobalds Retirement Benefit Scheme v Yardley [2011] EWHC 1380 (QB) at [51]: guarantee of tenant's obligations under lease held unenforceable where landlord failed to obtain acknowledgement from solicitor that he had given appropriate advice to guarantor; HSBC Bank Plc v Brown [2015] EWHC 359 (Ch) (held bank proceeded at own risk where, despite certificate being signed by a solicitor, the bank ought to have realised that the surety had not received appropriate advice).
- 840. At [69]-[70].
- 841. At [74]. See also Lord Clyde at [96] and Lord Scott at [173].
- 842. At [74]. See also Kapoor v National Westminster Bank Plc [2010] EWHC 2986 (Ch), where it was held that the wife had received independent legal advice, and the bank was entitled to rely on the solicitor's certificate that she had received that advice, despite the fact that the wife had ignored the bank's suggestion to consult a different solicitor than the one advising her husband.
- 843. A separate question is whether knowledge of the surety's solicitor should be imputed to her. The general rule is that, subject to any statutory variation, a solicitor's knowledge is treated as that of his client (see AIB v Martin and Gold Unreported March 15, 1999, Jacob J.), but in Davies v AIB Group (UK) Plc [2012] EWHC 2178 (Ch), [2012] 2 P. & C.R. 19 at [116], without deciding the issue, Norris J. thought that some caution might be required in the context of undue influence arguments: "A principle of attributing the knowledge of an agent to the principal does not really assist in identifying how an intention to enter a transaction was produced—freely or under undue influence."
- 844. At [77]-[78]. See also Lord Hobhouse at [122].
- 845. At 77.

846. At [180].
847. Subject to the usual bars, including that restitutio in integrum is impossible (but it need not be precise); there has been affirmation or delay (First National Bank Plc v Walker [2001] 1 F.C.R. 21 CA); there has been intervention of a bona fide purchaser for value without notice (CIBC Mortgages Plc v Pitt [1994] 1 A.C. 200). See generally, Vol.I, para.8-101. If the property subject to the security is jointly owned by a husband and wife then, even though the security may not be enforceable against the wife, it may be against the husband, and so the court may still order the property to be sold, under the Trusts of Land and Appointment of Trustees Act 1996 s.14, in order to realise the husband's share: see First National Bank Plc v Achampong [2003] EWCA Civ 487, [2004] 1 F.C.R. 18 (noted by Thompson [2003] Conv. 314).
848. Royal Bank of Scotland Plc v Etridge (No.2) [2001] UKHL 44, [2002] 2 A.C. 773 at [39], [144]-[146]; Banco Exterior Internacional SA v Thomas [1997] 1 W.L.R. 221.
849. See Dunbar Bank Plc v Nadeem [1998] 3 All E.R. 876 CA; Society of Lloyds v Khan [1998] 3 F.C.R. 93. See also National Commercial Bank (Jamaica) Ltd v Hew [2003] UKPC 51 at [43].
850. [1995] 1 W.L.R. 430.
851. At 437.
852. But contrast C. Mitchell, P. Mitchell and S. Watterson, The Law of Unjust Enrichment, 8th edn (2011), paras 40-13—40-14. For opposing arguments, see J. O'Sullivan, Restitution and Banking Law (1998), pp.64-69, and G. Virgo's reply, which appears in Ch.4 of the same book, pp.76-77. In De Molestina v Ponton [2002] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 271, Colman J. rejected partial rescission. In Australia rescission on terms is accepted (Vadasz v Pioneer Concrete (SA) Pty Ltd (1995) 184 C.L.R. 102 H Ct), as it is in New Zealand (Scales Trading Ltd v Far Eastern Shipping Co Public Ltd [1999] 3 N.Z.L.R. 26 CA; the Privy Council, having made a different factual finding, did not express an opinion on the issue, [2001] 1 N.Z.L.R. 513). See also J. Poole and A. Keyser, "Justifying Partial Rescission in English Law" (2005) 121 L.Q.R. 273.
853. But see Castle Phillips Finance v Piddington (1994) 70 P. & C.R. 59, an undue influence case, where the Court of Appeal was able to mitigate the effect of setting aside the charge in full by subrogating the creditor to an earlier, valid charge. Applied in UCB Group Ltd v Hedworth [2003] EWCA Civ 1717 (a case of sub-subrogation). By contrast, where an earlier charge is voidable for undue influence, a replacement charge, taken out as a condition of discharging the earlier charge, will also be voidable, even though the replacement charge was not itself procured by undue influence (Yorkshire Bank Plc v Tinsley [2004] EWCA Civ 816, [2004] 1 W.L.R. 2380, emphasising at [26], [32] and [39] that the two charges were "inseparably connected"). But this will only occur where the undue influence which procured the first charge remained "operative", in the sense that the grantor of the security was unaware that the first charge could have been set aside. The grantor will not be entitled to set aside the second charge where she was aware of her right to set aside the first charge before she entered into the second charge (Wadlow v Samuel [2007] EWCA Civ 155).
854. Barclays Bank Plc v Caplan [1998] 1 F.L.R. 532 Ch D.
855. Chetwynd-Talbot v Midland Bank Ltd (1982) 132 N.L.J. 901; O'Hara v Allied Irish Banks Ltd [1985] B.C.L.C. 52; Westpac Banking Corp v McCreanor [1990] 1 N.Z.L.R. 580; Shivas v Bank of New Zealand [1990] 2 N.Z.L.R. 327; Barclays Bank Plc v Khaira [1992] 1 W.L.R. 623; and Union Bank of Finland v Lelakis [1995] C.L.C. 27. cf. Cornish v Midland Bank Plc [1985] 3 All E.R. 513 at 522-523, per Kerr L.J.; Shotter v Westpac Banking Corp [1988] 2 N.Z.L.R. 316.
856. Barclays Bank Plc v Khaira [1992] 1 W.L.R. 623, 637, Morison Q.C., sitting as Deputy High Court judge.
857. Union Bank of Finland v Lelakis [1995] C.L.C. 27, 47, Clarke J.
858. [1985] 3 All E.R. 513, 522-523.

- 859. Westpac Banking Corp v McCreanor [1990] 1 N.Z.L.R. 580; Shivas v Bank of New Zealand [1990] 2 N.Z.L.R. 327; Barclays Bank Plc v Khaira [1992] 1 W.L.R. 623; and Union Bank of Finland v Lelakis [1995] C.L.C. 27. cf. Shotter v Westpac Banking Corp [1988] 2 N.Z.L.R. 316. Kerr L.J.'s dictum was not considered by the Court of Appeal in Barclays Bank Plc v O'Brien [1993] Q.B. 109, where the issue appears to have been left open.
- 860. [1987] F.L.R. 237 (no appeal on this point).
- 861. [1985] 3 All E.R. 513.
- 862. See also Barclays Bank Plc v Khaira [1992] 1 W.L.R. 623 at 634.
- 863. [1993] Q.B. 109 at 140-141. See also Purchas L.J. at 156. The House of Lords did not deal with this issue.
- 864. In Midland Bank Plc v Kidwai [1995] 4 Bank. L.R. 303, 307-308, Morritt L.J. emphasised that O'Brien principles do not require the bank to take on the duties of a solicitor or other independent adviser.
- 865. Royal Bank of Scotland Plc v Etridge (No.2) [2001] UKHL 44, [2002] 2 A.C. 773 at [51]. See above, para.34-268.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(b) - The Relationship of Banker and Customer
(vi) - Banks as Constructive Trustees

Introduction

34-280

A bank's liability as constructive trustee is, conceptually, distinguishable from its liability for the breach of a fiduciary duty or of a special duty of care. Liability for the breach of such a duty is usually maintainable only in cases in which there is a proximate relationship between the bank and the person who seeks to hold it liable. Normally such a person would have to be a customer. By contrast, the bank's liability as a constructive trustee is incurred when another person, who is a trustee or otherwise subject to fiduciary duties, has committed a breach of trust or fiduciary duty and the bank has become involved in the matter in such a manner as to become answerable. The victim's claim is, thus, based on the bank's act or omission and not on his being able to establish proximity with it. It follows that although in many of the cases in which banks were sued as constructive trustees the claimant was a customer, the fate of his claim did not depend on this circumstance.

The nature of constructive trust claims

34-281

The starting point of any analysis of this area of law is the classic dictum of Lord Selborne L.C. in Barnes v Addy:

“... strangers are not to be made constructive trustees merely because they act as the agents of trustees in transactions within their legal powers, transactions perhaps of which a Court of Equity may disapprove, unless (i) those agents receive and become chargeable with some part of the trust property, or (ii) unless they assist with knowledge in a dishonest and fraudulent design on the part of the trustees.” ⁸⁶⁶

Further, his Lordship continued, to ensure that “the transactions of mankind” can be conducted with safety, it is necessary that:

“... persons dealing honestly as agents [be] at liberty to rely on the legal power of the trustees, and are not to have the character of trustees constructively imposed upon them”. ⁸⁶⁷

This qualification is relevant in respect of both branches of the doctrine.

34-282

The first type of liability is generally known as liability for “knowing receipt”. The second type of liability was known as liability for “knowing assistance” until a change in the law in 1995 made it more appropriate to refer to it as liability for “dishonest assistance”. In both cases liability is personal and not proprietary.⁸⁶⁸ But there the similarity ends. The two types of liability are fundamentally different. As Lord Nicholls observed in Royal Brunei Airlines v Tan:

“The first limb of Lord Selborne L.C.’s formulation is concerned with the liability of a person as a recipient of trust property or its traceable proceeds. The second limb is concerned with what, for want of a better compendious description, can be called the liability of an accessory to a trustee’s breach of trust. Liability as an accessory is not dependent upon receipt of trust property. It arises even though no trust property has reached the hands of the accessory. It is a form of secondary liability in the sense that it only arises where there has been a breach of trust.”⁸⁶⁹

Lord Nicholls went on to opine that whereas “recipient liability is restitutionbased; accessory liability is not”.⁸⁷⁰

34-283

The distinction between the two types of liability was again highlighted by the Court of Appeal in Grupo Torras SA v Al-Sabah:

“The basis of liability in a case of knowing receipt is quite different from that in a case of dishonest assistance. One is a receipt-based liability which may on examination prove to be either a vindication of persistent property rights or a personal restitutionary claim based on unjust enrichment by subtraction; the other is a fault-based liability as an accessory to a breach of fiduciary duty.”⁸⁷¹

It should be noted, however, that until the issue is authoritatively decided upon by the higher courts, the precise relationship between liability under the receipt category of constructive trusteeship and the law of restitution remains unclear and uncertain under English law.⁸⁷² By contrast, following the Privy Council’s landmark decision in Royal Brunei Airlines v Tan, the requirements for accessory liability can now be stated with more certainty. Accessory liability is “faultbased”; the “touchstone of liability” is the accessory’s dishonesty.⁸⁷³

Dishonest assistance

34-284

Liability for dishonest assistance will be imposed on anyone who has dishonestly been accessory to, or assisted in, a disposition of property in breach of trust or other fiduciary obligation. In such a case the accessory or assister is traditionally described as a “constructive trustee” and said to be “liable to account as a constructive trustee”.⁸⁷⁴ However, as the accessory or assister does not have to receive any trust property for this type of liability to arise, it seems misleading to describe him as a trustee at all.⁸⁷⁵ In fact, the expressions “constructive trust” and “constructive trustee” are really “nothing more than a formula for equitable relief”.⁸⁷⁶ It would be more accurate, and less confusing, to regard dishonest participation in a breach of trust as a species of equitable wrong⁸⁷⁷: “the equitable counterpart of the economic torts”,⁸⁷⁸ or an “equitable tort”.⁸⁷⁹ These are cases of “ancillary liability” where the intervention of equity is “purely remedial”.⁸⁸⁰ The remedy for the wrongdoing is compensation for the loss caused by the dishonest assistance.⁸⁸¹

Requirements for accessory liability

34-285

There are four requirements for accessory liability to be imposed:

- (i)
there must have been a trust or other fiduciary relationship;
- (ii)
there must have been a misfeasance or other breach of trust, though Tan establishes that such misfeasance or breach of trust need not itself be dishonest or fraudulent;
- (iii)
the person upon whom liability is to be imposed must, as a matter of fact, have been accessory to, or assisted in, the misfeasance or breach of trust, and
- (iv)
the accessory must have been dishonest. ⁸⁸²

(i) Trust or other fiduciary relationship34-286

Although the Barnes v Addy doctrine started life as a response to the misapplication of trust funds by express trustees, its coverage has since been extended to include the breach of fiduciary duties by others. The doctrine is now commonly applied in the corporate context where directors and other senior officers of the company are deemed to owe fiduciary duties to the company. ⁸⁸³

(ii) Misfeasance or other breach of trust34-287

In Barnes v Addy, Lord Selborne L.C. specifically referred to assistance “in a dishonest and fraudulent design on the part of the trustees”. ⁸⁸⁴ An attempt by Ungood-Thomas J., in Selangor United Rubber Estates Ltd v Cradock (No.3), ⁸⁸⁵ to jettison the reference to dishonesty and fraud, was emphatically rejected by the Court of Appeal in Belmont Finance Corp Ltd v Williams, ⁸⁸⁶ on the ground that to depart from it would introduce an undesirable degree of uncertainty over what degree of unethical conduct would suffice if dishonesty was not to be the criterion. It was not until 1995, when the Privy Council delivered its advice in Royal Brunei Airlines v Tan, ⁸⁸⁷ that the need to establish dishonesty or fraud on the part of the trustee or other fiduciary was finally abandoned as a prerequisite to accessory liability. This was the main point at issue in the case. Those earlier authorities holding that the breach of trust must be fraudulent may now be taken as overruled, although it should be noted that in most cases the breach of trust is likely to be a dishonest one. ⁸⁸⁸

34-288

⚠ There remains uncertainty as to whether liability as a constructive trustee is restricted to assistance in a breach of trust in relation to property or whether it also extend to a case of dishonest assistance in any breach of fiduciary duty. In Tan, Lord Nicholls stated that:

“... a liability in equity to make good resulting loss attaches to a person who dishonestly procures or assists in a breach of trust or fiduciary obligation”. ⁸⁸⁹

Lord Nicholls’ formulation does not require the misapplication of trust property or its proceeds, but as the point was not in issue in that case, where trust property had certainly been misapplied, this cannot be taken as the last word on the subject. The issue was left open in a number of cases, ⁸⁹⁰ though in others the broader approach was rejected. ⁸⁹¹ However, the Court of Appeal has recently held in Novoship (UK) Ltd v Mikhaylyuk that “the remedy of an account of profits is available against one who dishonestly assists a fiduciary to breach his fiduciary obligations, even if that breach does not involve a misappropriation of trust property”. ⁸⁹²

(iii) Accessory or assister

34-289

The person upon whom liability is to be imposed must as a matter of fact have been accessory or assisted in the misfeasance or breach of trust. In many cases banks will not find it easy to avoid the charge that they were accessory to or assisted in a breach of trust, especially one that involves the fraudulent misapplication of trust funds. The provision of banking services to persons behaving in a fraudulent or improper manner often exposes a bank to potential liability under this head. The misapplied trust funds will usually be held in bank accounts and moved between bank accounts. The banks that hold those accounts, as well as any other bank involved as an intermediary in the funds transfer process, run the risk of being accused of providing assistance to the dishonest fiduciary. For example, payment by a bank on the instructions of fraudulent directors of a company of moneys of the company to another person may be such assistance. ⁸⁹³ More worrying still, at least from the bank’s point of view, is that the mere provision of advisory services to the fiduciary can be deemed “assistance” where there is a sufficient causative link between that advice and the breach of trust, ⁸⁹⁴ even though the bank itself never comes into contact with the misapplied funds. ⁸⁹⁵ It is because the “assistance” net can be cast so widely that attention has focused so crucially on the level of mental intent required the person giving assistance for him to be held liable under this head of constructive trusteeship. Banks and other financial institutions involved in millions of money transmission activities on a daily basis, and so particularly vulnerable to the charge of “assistance”, have always argued that the level of mental intent should be high.

(iv) Dishonesty

34-290

The accessory must have been dishonest. It is the presence of the necessary level of mental intent, which, following Royal Brunei Airlines v Tan, ⁸⁹⁶ is dishonesty, that is the fourth requirement for accessory liability to be imposed. Tan has finally settled an issue that has plagued the English courts for many years. ⁸⁹⁷ The decision is to be welcomed for bringing a greater degree of certainty to this notoriously difficult area.

34-291

 In Tan, Lord Nicholls, speaking by way of obiter dicta, confirmed that “dishonesty is a necessary ingredient of accessory liability. It is also a sufficient ingredient”. ⁸⁹⁸ Lord Nicholls also attempted to clarify the meaning of dishonesty in this context. The key passage from his judgment reads as follows:

“Whatever may be the position in some criminal or other context (see, for instance, R. v Ghosh [1982] Q.B. 1053), in the context of the accessory liability principle acting dishonestly, or with a lack of probity, which is synonymous, means simply not acting as an honest person would in the circumstances. This is an objective standard. At first sight this may seem surprising. Honesty has a connotation of subjectivity, as distinct from the objectivity of negligence. Honesty, indeed, does have a strong subjective element in that it is a description of a type of conduct assessed in the light of what a person actually knew at the time, as distinct from what a reasonable person would have known or appreciated. Further, honesty and its counterpart dishonesty are mostly concerned with advertent conduct, not inadvertent conduct. Carelessness is not dishonesty. Thus for the most part dishonesty is to be equated with a conscious impropriety. However, these subjective characteristics of honesty do not mean that individuals are free to set their own standards of honesty in particular circumstances. The standard of what constitutes honest conduct is not subjective. Honesty is not an optional scale, with higher or lower values according to the moral standards of each individual. If a person knowingly appropriates another's property, he will not escape a finding of dishonesty simply because he sees nothing wrong in such behaviour. In most situations there is little difficulty in identifying how an honest person would behave. Honest people do not intentionally deceive others to their detriment. Honest people do not knowingly take others' property. Unless there is a very good and compelling reason, an honest person does not participate in a transaction if he knows it involves a misapplication of trust assets to the detriment of the beneficiaries. Nor does an honest person in such a case deliberately close his eyes and ears, or deliberately not ask questions, lest he learns something he would rather not know, and then proceed regardless." ⁸⁹⁹

34-292

Lord Nicholls expressly referred to an "objective standard" of dishonesty. But he also spoke of honesty having "a strong subjective element" and that, for the most part, "dishonesty is to be equated with a conscious impropriety". This has left room for doubt and uncertainty as to the precise test to be adopted when assessing whether or not an accessory has been dishonest. There are three possible standards which can be applied to determine whether a person has acted dishonestly:

(1)

a purely subjective standard, whereby a person is only regarded as dishonest if he transgresses his own standards of honesty, even if that standard is contrary to that of reasonable and honest people;

(2)

a purely objective standard, whereby a person acts dishonestly if his conduct is dishonest by the ordinary standards of reasonable and honest people, even if he does not realise this;

(3)

a standard which combines a objective and a subjective test, and which requires that before there can be a finding of dishonesty it must be established that the defendant's conduct was dishonest by the ordinary standards of reasonable and honest people and that he himself realised that by those standards his conduct was dishonest ("the combined test").

Combined test of dishonesty

34-293

In Twinsectra Ltd v Yardley,⁹⁰⁰ a majority of the House of Lords held that the “combined test” was the correct test to be applied in a case of dishonest assistance.⁹⁰¹ In this case, T Ltd granted Y a loan of £1 million, the application for which was processed by Y’s solicitor, one L, who in turn utilised the services of another solicitor, S. T Ltd disbursed the loan to S against his undertaking that the proceeds would be utilised solely for the acquisition of a given property and that the funds would be retained in his client’s account until this property was acquired. In breach of this undertaking, S paid the proceeds over to L. L, who knew of the undertaking given by S, did not take steps to ensure that it was utilised for the acquisition of property by Y. L simply paid out the money on Y’s instructions. In the event, about £358,000 were utilised by Y for other purposes. Their Lordships affirmed the Court of Appeal’s decision that money in a solicitor’s client account was held by him as a trustee and that, in the instant case, the wording of the undertaking demonstrated that the ownership of the funds remained vested in T Ltd. But they restored (Lord Millett dissenting) the trial judge’s decision holding L not liable as a constructive trustee. Although L was aware of the terms of the trust, he did not appreciate that, by paying the amount out without acquiring the assurance that it would be utilised only for the prescribed purpose, he acted in a manner that would be regarded as dishonest by the standards of honest and reasonable people. Accordingly, L had not been consciously dishonest as required to render him liable as an accessory.

34-294

Lord Hutton delivered the main judgment of the majority on the dishonesty issue. He emphasised three points in favour of the combined test of dishonesty.⁹⁰² First, a finding by a court that a defendant had been dishonest was a grave finding, and it was particularly grave against a professional man, such as a solicitor. Secondly, notwithstanding that the issue arose in equity law and not in a criminal context, it would be less than just for the law to permit a finding that a defendant had been “dishonest” in assisting in a breach of trust where he knew of the facts which created the trust and its breach but had not been aware that what he was doing would be regarded by honest men as being dishonest. Thirdly, a defendant should not escape a finding of dishonesty because he sets his own standards of honesty and does not regard as dishonest what he knows would offend the normally accepted standards of honest conduct.

Retreat from Twinsectra

34-295

The majority of their Lordships in Twinsectra held that for a defendant to be found to be dishonest “it must be established that the defendant’s conduct was dishonest by the ordinary standards of reasonable and honest people and that he himself realised that by those standards his conduct was dishonest”.⁹⁰³ The Privy Council revisited the issue in Barlow Clowes International Ltd v Eurotrust International Ltd,⁹⁰⁴ where Lord Hoffmann delivered the unanimous advice of the Privy Council (which included Lord Nicholls). Ostensibly, Lord Hoffmann purported to clarify the “combined test” of dishonesty laid down in Twinsectra,⁹⁰⁵ but in actual fact he altered the test by dropping the requirement that the defendant himself must realise that by the standards of reasonable and honest people his conduct was dishonest.⁹⁰⁶ The change is a welcome one as it undoubtedly represents a more accurate interpretation of what Lord Nicholls said in Tan.⁹⁰⁷ Subjective elements, such as what the defendant actually knew at the time and his level of experience or intelligence, are still relevant, for they must be taken into account when assessing whether ordinary people would objectively consider the defendant’s conduct to be dishonest.⁹⁰⁸ But what is not required is for the defendant himself to realise that his conduct is dishonest before liability can be imposed. Lord Hoffmann made it clear that there is no need to establish that the defendant had knowledge of the existence of the trust, or of the facts giving rise to the trust, it is enough to show that he knew or suspected (but deliberately chose to make no further enquiries) that he was assisting in the misappropriation of money.⁹⁰⁹

34-296

Following Barlow Clowes, for a bank to be held liable for dishonest assistance, what has to be established is that the bank engaged in commercially unacceptable conduct in the light of all the circumstances known to it. In Abu-Ramah v Abacha,⁹¹⁰ the defendant bank received two payments made by the victims of a fraud with instructions to credit the account of a customer named “Trust International". In fact the bank credited the account of an entity called "Trusty International", which was controlled by the fraudsters. The victims claimed against the bank alleging, inter alia, dishonest assistance in a breach of trust. The Court of Appeal upheld the trial judge's finding that the bank had not been dishonest. Rix and Pill L.JJ. did not find it necessary to decide whether Barlow Clowes, a decision of the Privy Council, had the effect of overturning Twinsectra, a decision of the House of Lords, on the dishonesty issue, because they held that the bank's conduct was not objectively dishonest, as it had no suspicions about the payments at the time they were made. By contrast, Arden L.J. considered that Barlow Clowes should be followed but held that the bank's general suspicions about the customer's business dealings when the account was opened were not enough to make it dishonest with regard to the particular payments in question. Arden L.J. considered that:

"it is unnecessary to show subjective dishonesty in the sense of consciousness that the transaction is dishonest. It is sufficient if the defendant knows of the elements of the transaction which makes it dishonest according to normally accepted standards of behaviour." ⁹¹¹

In Starglade Properties Ltd v Nash, ⁹¹² the Court of Appeal, reversing the trial judge, held that there was not a sliding scale of honesty but a single standard of honesty objectively determined by the court. Sir Andrew Morritt C. said ⁹¹³:

"The relevant standard ... is the ordinary standard of honest behaviour. Just as the subjective understanding of a person concerned as to whether his conduct is dishonest is irrelevant so also is it irrelevant that there may be a body of opinion which regards the ordinary standard of honest behaviour as being set too high. Ultimately, in civil proceedings, it is for the court to determine what that standard is and to apply it to the facts of the case."

Knowing receipt

34-297

⚠ The liability of a recipient of property disposed of in breach of trust is generally known as liability for knowing receipt. ⁹¹⁴ The liability is personal and is to restore the value of any property received in breach of trust. ⁹¹⁵ ⚠

Requirements of recipient liability

34-298

There are three requirements, all of which must be met, for liability to arise under this category. They were summarised by Hoffmann L.J. in El Ajou v Dollar Land Holdings, when he stated that the claimant must show:

"... first, a disposal of his assets in breach of fiduciary duty; secondly, the beneficial receipt by the defendant of assets which are traceable as representing the assets of the [claimant]; and thirdly, knowledge on the part of the defendant that the assets he received are traceable to a breach of fiduciary duty." ⁹¹⁶

Types of knowing receipt

34-299

In Agip (Africa) Ltd v Jackson, Millett J. identified two main types of “knowing receipt” as follows:

“The first is concerned with that of the person who receives for his own benefit trust property transferred to him in breach of trust. He is liable as a constructive trustee if he receives with notice, actual or constructive, that it was trust property and that the transfer to him was a breach of trust; or if he received it without notice but subsequently discovered the facts. In either case he is liable to account for the property, in the first case as from the time he received the property, and in the second as from the time he acquired notice.

The second and ... distinct class of case is that of a person, usually an agent of the trustees, who receives the property lawfully and not for his own benefit but who then either misappropriates it or otherwise deals with it in a manner inconsistent with the trust. He is liable to account as constructive trustee if he received the trust property knowing it to be such, though he will not necessarily be required in all circumstances to have known the exact terms of the trust.” ⁹¹⁷

The second class is sometimes referred to as “liability for inconsistent dealing”. But where the inconsistent dealing is not for the benefit of the agent, there seems to be a good case for saying that liability only arises if there has been dishonest assistance because beneficial receipt is the essence of the knowing receipt type constructive trust. ⁹¹⁸

Beneficial receipt

34-300

Liability depends on beneficial receipt of the property disposed of in breach of trust or of its traceable product. Agents who receive trust money in a ministerial capacity, i.e. for the benefit of their principal and not for their own use and benefit, are not to be made liable for “knowing receipt”. ⁹¹⁹ In Agip (Africa) Ltd v Jackson, ⁹²⁰ Millett J. expressed the clear view (obiter) that paying and collecting banks could not normally be brought within the “knowing receipt” category since they do not generally receive money for their own benefit, acting only as their customer’s agent, but that the position would be otherwise if the collecting bank uses the money to reduce or discharge the customer’s overdraft, when it would be using the money for its own benefit. ⁹²¹

34-301

A bank account may fluctuate between credit and debit and so it may not be easy to ascertain whether money received into the account was received beneficially or not. Writing extra-judicially, Lord Millett (as he now is) has emphasised that the mere continuation of a running account should not be sufficient to render the bank liable as a recipient: there must probably be some conscious appropriation of the sum paid into the account in reduction of the overdraft. ⁹²² This provides an important gloss to his Lordship’s dictum in Agip, although we await a court to adopt it.

34-302

Following Lord Millett’s reasoning, if a bank receives trust property into an account in credit, knowing that it has been paid in breach of trust, the bank cannot be held liable under the “knowing receipt” category of constructive trust: it may, however, be held liable under the “dishonest assistance” category if the necessary elements of that head of liability are all present. Of course, a bank would be considered to have beneficially received trust property where it exercised a right of set-off against it once it was credited to the account, or debited its commission, fees or other charges against the trust property. Again, some conscious appropriation by the bank seems necessary. ⁹²³

34-303

In Trustor AB v Smallbone (No.2), ⁹²⁴ Morritt V.C. held that a court was entitled to pierce the corporate veil and recognise receipt by a company as receipt by the individuals in control of the company if the company was used as a device or façade to conceal the true facts thereby avoiding or concealing any liability of those individuals.

Level of knowledge required

34-304

The third requirement, identified by Hoffmann L.J. in El Ajou v Dollar Land Holdings, ⁹²⁵ for receipt-based liability relates to the knowledge of the recipient. Liability depends on the recipient's knowledge of the breach of trust. For this purpose, reference is often made to the five categories of "knowledge" set out by Peter Gibson J. in 1983 in Baden v Société Générale pour Favoriser le Développement du Commerce et de l'Industrie en France SA. ⁹²⁶ In that case the judge divided "knowledge" into the following five categories:

- (1)
actual knowledge;
- (2)
wilfully shutting one's eyes to the truth;
- (3)
wilfully and recklessly failing to make such inquiries as a reasonable and honest man would make;
- (4)
knowledge of circumstances which would indicate the facts to an honest and reasonable man; and
- (5)
knowledge of circumstances which would put a reasonable man on inquiry.

Categories (1) to (3) represent "dishonesty"; categories (4) and (5) denote "negligence".

34-305

Some cases support the view that liability only arises if the recipient has knowledge falling within the first three Baden categories, i.e. only in cases of dishonesty or want of probity. ⁹²⁷ This approach has the superficial attraction of putting the level of knowledge necessary for the receipt category of liability on a par with the need for dishonesty under the assistance category. However, it ignores the fact that a recipient beneficially receives trust property, whereas the defendant may have assisted another's breach of trust without necessarily being personally enriched. This fact alone seems to argue in favour of some difference in measure between them. Other cases suggest that knowledge within the first three categories is required in commercial transactions, but that knowledge falling within any of the five categories (so as to include constructive notice) is enough in non-commercial transactions. ⁹²⁸ A third line of cases support the view that liability arises whenever the recipient has knowledge falling within any of the five Baden categories, i.e. even negligence is enough to give rise to receipt-based liability. ⁹²⁹

Unconscionability as the test of liability

34-306

❗ In BCCI v Akindele ⁹³⁰ ❗ BCCI's liquidators claimed that A, a Nigerian businessman, was liable to repay the proceeds of an investment agreement that had been executed by BCCI's directors in breach of trust. The liquidators claimed under both the "knowing receipt" and "dishonest assistance" heads of constructive trust. At first instance, both claims failed. There was no appeal on the assistance claim as the liquidators could not prove that A had been dishonest. The issue before the Court of Appeal turned on the level of knowledge required to impose liability under the receipt category. Nourse L.J. delivered the judgment of the Court, which can be summarised as follows. First, dishonesty is not a necessary ingredient of liability in knowing receipt. Secondly, just as there is a single test of dishonesty for knowing assistance (see Tan), there should be a single test of knowledge for knowing receipt. Thirdly, all that is necessary is that the recipient's state of knowledge must be such as to make it unconscionable for him to retain the benefit of the receipt. Fourthly, a test based on unconscionability, while it could not avoid difficulties of application, ought to avoid the difficulties of definition which have bedevilled other categorisations of the requisite degree of knowledge, such as the Baden five point scale. ⁹³¹ Applying the test of unconscionability to the facts of the case, the Court of Appeal held that A's state of knowledge was not such as to have made him liable under the head of knowing receipt.

34-307

❗ It is submitted that the rejection of dishonesty as the appropriate fault element for knowing receipt is welcome. It is more appropriate to a cause of action founded on culpable acts, e.g. procuring or assisting a breach of trust, than it is to passive receipt. ⁹³² However, the term "unconscionable" lacks objectivity and is open to subjective interpretation. This leads to uncertainty. In Tan, Lord Nicholls was particularly critical of the use of unconscionability as the test of liability for assistance:

"[i]f it means no more than dishonesty, then dishonesty is the preferable label. If it means something different, it must be said that it is not clear what that something different is. Either way, the term is best avoided in this context." ⁹³³

There has already been speculation as to what the term "unconscionable" means in this context. ⁹³⁴ In Criterion Properties Plc v Stratford UK Properties LLC, ⁹³⁵ the Court of Appeal held that an assessment of unconscionability based merely on whether the recipient had actual knowledge of the circumstances which gave rise to the breach of duty "was too narrow and one-sided a view of the matter". ⁹³⁶ ❗ The court was to have regard to the recipient's actions and knowledge in the context of the commercial relationship as a whole to determine whether the test of unconscionability was satisfied. In Akindele, Nourse L.J. was at pains to emphasise that the new test would enable the courts to give common sense decisions in the commercial context. This seems to mean that the courts will pay equal regard to the need for speed in commercial transactions, which limits the ability to investigate matters, while also recognising that there must be cases where there is no justification on the known facts for allowing a commercial man who has received funds paid in breach of trust to plead the shelter of the exigencies of commercial life. ⁹³⁷

Strict liability

34-308

⚠ It was pointed out above that the English courts are increasingly coming to regard “knowing receipt” as restitution-based. Certain distinguished judges and scholars argue in favour of a standard of strict liability subject only to the defences of bona fide purchaser without notice and change of position.⁹³⁸ Nourse L.J. touched on the issue in BCCI v Akindele. His Lordship doubted whether strict liability coupled with a change of position defence would be preferable to fault-based liability in many commercial transactions.⁹³⁹ Nourse L.J. thought it was commercially unworkable, and also contrary to the internal management rule of company law, that simply on proof of an internal misapplication of the company's funds, the burden should shift to the recipient to defend the receipt either by change of position or in some other way. There does seem good sense in this last observation. For the moment, the issue must await determination by the House of Lords.⁹⁴⁰ ⚠

Duties of care: third parties

34-309

The relaxation of the test of knowledge in the Royal Brunei case may have a bearing on yet another type of action that is occasionally brought against banks by persons other than customers, namely, an action in negligence based on the breach of a duty of care. Notably, in Lipkin Gorman,⁹⁴¹ the Court of Appeal indicated that, usually, such an action would succeed only in circumstances that might also give rise to an action in constructive trust. In a more recent case, Chapman v Barclays Bank Plc,⁹⁴² the Court of Appeal indicated, however, that such an action would lie only if a certain proximity between the bank and the claimant could be established on the facts. It is believed that, generally, the chances of a third party are, accordingly, slim.⁹⁴³

^{866.} (1874) 9 Ch. App. 244 at 251.

^{867.} (1874) 9 Ch. App. 244 at 251.

^{868.} See Re Montagu's ST [1987] Ch. 264, 276, per Megarry V.C., dealing with knowing receipt; Twinsectra Ltd v Yardley [1999] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 438, 467, per Potter L.J., dealing with dishonest assistance.

^{869.} [1995] 2 A.C. 378 at 382.

^{870.} At 386.

^{871.} [2001] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 36 at [122].

^{872.} See below, para.34-308.

^{873.} See below, para.34-290.

^{874.} See, e.g., Westdeutsche Landesbank Girozentrale v Islington LBC [1996] A.C. 669, 705, per Lord Browne-Wilkinson.

^{875.} Agip (Africa) Ltd v Jackson [1990] Ch. 265, 292, per Millett J.; Paragon Finance Plc v DB Thakerar & Co (a firm) [1999] 1 All E.R. 400, 409, per Millett L.J.; Dubai Aluminium Co Ltd v Salaam [2002] UKHL 48, [2003] 2 A.C. 366 at [141], per Lord Millett. See generally, W. Swadling, “The Fiction of the Constructive Trust” (2011) 64 C.L.P. 400, especially 414-416; contrast C. Mitchell and S. Watterson, Constructive and Resulting Trusts (2010), pp.115-158, especially 129.

^{876.} Selangor United Rubber Ltd v Cradock (No.3) [1968] 1 W.L.R. 155, 1582, per Ungood-Thomas

J.

- 877. See Grupo Torras SA v Al-Sabah [2001] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 36 at [123] CA; Casio Computer Co Ltd v Sayo [2001] EWCA Civ 661 at [14]. See also Lord Nicholls, Restitution—Past, Present and Future (Oxford: Hart Publishing, 1988), 244.
- 878. Twinsectra Ltd v Yardley [2002] UKHL 12, [2002] 2 A.C. 164 at [127], per Lord Millett.
- 879. Abou-Rahmah v Abacha [2006] EWCA Civ 1492, [2007] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 115 at [2], per Rix L.J.
- 880. Williams v Central Bank of Nigeria [2014] UKSC 10, [2014] A.C. 1189 at [9], per Lord Sumption J.S.C. The Supreme Court held (by a majority) that the words “trust” and “trustee” in s.21(1)(a) of the Limitation Act 1980 bear their orthodox meanings, and that “trustee” does not include those who are liable to account in equity because they have dishonestly assisted in a breach of trust or knowingly received trust property. It was also held (by an even narrower majority) that the words “party or privy” to a fraud or fraudulent breach of trust within s.21(1)(a) applies only to claims brought against trustees and not to claims brought against anyone else who is involved in the fraud or fraudulent breach of trust, and that, in consequence, the limitation period for claims against dishonest assisters and knowing recipients is six years (but note the effect of s.32 of the 1980 Act which, in certain cases, postpones the commencement of the six years). For useful notes, see S. Watterson [2014] CLJ 253 and P. Davies [2014] L.M.C.L.Q. 313.
- 881. Sinclair Investment Holdings SA v Versailles Trade Finance Ltd [2007] EWHC 915 (Ch), [2007] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 993 at [120]-[125], where Rimer J. stressed that the remedy was personal and not proprietary. Sometimes an account of profits will be awarded against an accessory who profits from the assistance: see Novoship (UK) Ltd v Mikhaylyuk [2014] EWCA Civ 908, [2015] Q.B. 499, requiring a sufficiently direct causal connection between the accessory's gain and the dishonest assistance (noted by P. Davies (2015) 131 L.Q.R. 173; P. Devonshire [2015] C.L.J. 222). For further discussion of the remedies available against a dishonest assister, see S.B. Elliott and C. Mitchell (2004) 67 M.L.R. 16; S. Baughen [2007] L.M.C.L.Q. 545, 556-558; P. Ridge (2008) 124 L.Q.R. 445.
- 882. As summarised by Cresswell J. in Bankgesellschaft Berlin AG v Makris Unreported January 22, 1999.
- 883. See, e.g. Agip (Africa) Ltd v Jackson [1990] Ch. 265; affirmed [1991] Ch. 547.
- 884. (1874) 9 Ch. App. 244 at 252.
- 885. [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1555.
- 886. [1979] Ch. 250.
- 887. [1995] 2 A.C. 378.
- 888. W. Blair (2000) 30 H.K.L.J. 74 at 88, n.44.
- 889. [1995] 2 A.C. 378 at 392.
- 890. Brown v Bennett [1999] 1 B.C.L.C. 649; Fyffes Group Ltd v Templeman [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 643; Goose v Wilson Sandiford & Co (No.2) [2000] EWCA Civ 73, [2001] Lloyd's Rep. P.N. 189 at [88]; Gencor ACP Ltd v Dalby [2000] 2 B.C.L.C. 734, 757; JD Wetherspoon Plc v Van de Berg & Co Ltd [2009] EWHC 639 (Ch) at [518]; Fiona Trust & Holding Corp v Privalov [2010] EWHC 3199 (Comm) at [61].
- 891. Satnam Investments Ltd v Dunlop Heywood & Co Ltd [1999] 3 All E.R. 652, 651; Petrotrade Inc v Smith [2000] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 486, 491-492.
- 892.  [2014] EWCA Civ 908, [2015] Q.B. 499 at [93]; per Longmore L.J. (delivering the judgment of the court). See also Schenk v Cook [2017] EWHC 144 (QB) at [85].

- 893. See, e.g. Selangor United Rubber Estates Ltd v Cradock (No.3) [1968] 1 W.L.R. 1555; Karak v Rubber Co Ltd v Burden (No.2) [1972] 1 W.L.R. 602.
- 894. See Brown v Bennett [1999] 1 B.C.L.C. 649.
- 895. In Casio Computer Co Ltd v Sayo [2001] EWCA Civ 661 at [15], the Court of Appeal held that loss caused by the breach of fiduciary duty is recoverable from the accessory without the need to show a precise causal link between the assistance and the loss.
- 896. [1995] 2 A.C. 378.
- 897. For a thorough review of the conflicting authorities, see E.P. Ellinger and E. Lomnicka, Modern Banking Law, 2nd edn (1994), pp.205–211.
- 898. At 392.
- 899.  At 389. Recklessness is not equivalent to dishonesty but it can be a sign of dishonesty: see Lord Nicholls at 389–391, as interpreted by Lewison L.J. in Clydesdale Bank Plc v Workman [2016] EWCA Civ 73, [2016] P.N.L.R. 18 at [48]–[53]. Lord Nicholls said that “[c]arelessness is not dishonesty” (above). This is also reflected in the recent statement of Rose J. in Singularis Holdings Ltd (In Liquidation) v Daiwa Capital Markets Europe Ltd [2017] EWHC 257 (Ch) at [147]: “There is an important difference between being incompetent—even grossly incompetent—and being dishonest”.
- 900. [2002] UKHL 12, [2002] 2 A.C. 164.
- 901. Lords Slynn, Steyn, Hoffmann and Hutton; Lord Millett dissented, preferring a test of dishonesty based on a purely objective standard.
- 902. At 174.
- 903. [2002] 2 A.C. 164 at [27], per Lord Hutton (emphasis added).
- 904. [2005] UKPC 37, [2006] 1 W.L.R. 1476.
- 905. At [15].
- 906. At [16].
- 907. For criticism of the Twinsectra interpretation of Tan, see R. Thornton [2002] C.L.J. 524, 525–526; C. Rickett [2002] R.L.R. 1121, 117–120. The Court of Appeal of New Zealand also expressed (obiter) reservations about the subjective element of the combined test of dishonesty in US International Marketing Ltd v National Bank of New Zealand Ltd Unreported October 28, 2003 CA at [62] and [78]–[79], noted by Yeo (2004) 120 L.Q.R. 208.
- 908. M. Conaglen and A. Goymour [2006] C.L.J. 18, 20.
- 909. At [28]. See also Quick Draw LLP v Global Live Events LLP [2012] EWHC 2105 (Comm) at [146]. The question of what knowledge is required to establish dishonest assistance was left unanswered in Stokors SA v IG Markets Ltd [2013] EWHC 631 (Comm), [2013] 2 P. & C.R. DG9 (noted by Saunderson [2013] B.J.I.B.F.L. 267).
- 910. [2006] EWCA Civ 1492, [2007] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 115.
- 911. Applied by Lewison J. in Mullarkey v Broad [2007] EWHC 3400 (Ch), [2008] 1 B.C.L.C. 638 at [36] (affirmed [2009] EWCA Civ 2) and by Newey J. in Al Khudairi v Abbey Brokers Ltd [2010] EWHC 1486 (Ch) at [134]. See also Aerostar Maintenance International Ltd v Wilson [2010] EWHC 2032 (Ch) at [184].

- 912. [2010] EWCA Civ 1314. Applied in Fiona Trust & Holding Corp v Privalov [2010] EWHC 3199 (Comm) at [1437]; Secretary of State for Justice v Topland Group Plc [2011] EWHC 983 (QB) at [94]–[103]; The Governor & Co of the Bank of Ireland v Jaffery [2012] EWHC 1377 (Ch) at [289]; Otkrite International Investment Management Ltd v Urumov [2014] EWHC 191 (Comm) at [75]. See generally, P. Shine, “Dishonesty in Civil Commercial Claims: A State of Mind or a Course of Conduct?” [2012] J.B.L. 29.
- 913. At [32].
- 914. It has been said that, according to modern authority, the recipient “is now better simply described as a person who is accountable in equity on such grounds”: Relfo Ltd (In Liquidation) v Varsani [2012] EWHC 2168 (Ch) at [71], per Sales J. (affirmed [2014] EWCA Civ 360), citing Paragon Finance Plc v DB Thakerar & Co [1999] 1 All E.R. 400, 409; Dubai Aluminium Co Ltd v Salaam [2002] UKHL 48, [2003] 2 A.C. 366 at [142]; Sinclair Investments (UK) Ltd v Versailles Trade Finance Ltd (In Administrative Receivership) [2011] EWCA Civ 347, [2011] 4 All E.R. 335 at [43]–[44]. Lord Sumption J.S.C. has described this form of liability as “ancillary” and equity’s intervention as “purely remedial”, see Williams v Central Bank of Nigeria [2014] UKSC 10, [2014] 2 W.L.R. 355 at [9] (and see also n.874 above).
- 915.  Arthur v Att-Gen of the Turks and Caicos Islands [2012] UKPC 30 at [37]. But for the purpose of claiming a contribution from another wrongdoer under the Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978, the remedy for knowing receipt is deemed to be “compensatory”: see Charter Plc v City Index Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 1382, [2008] 2 W.L.R. 950 at [32].
- 916. [1994] 2 All E.R. 685 at 700. On the requirement that the disposal of the assets must be in breach of duty, see M. Cogan and R. Nolan (2013) 129 L.Q.R. 359. On the question of tracing, the court may decide that funds held in the defendant’s bank account were the traceable proceeds of funds originally held by the claimant, notwithstanding that the claimant cannot prove every stage in the process by which the funds were ultimately transferred to the defendant, see Relfo Ltd (In Liquidation) v Varsani [2014] EWCA Civ 360, especially at [56]–[68] (noted by S. Watterson [2014] CLJ 496).
- 917. [1990] 1 Ch. 265 at 291; affirmed [1991] Ch. 547.
- 918. The point is made by William Blair Q.C. in (2000) 30 H.K.L.J. 74 at 82.
- 919. Uzinterimpex JSC v Standard Bank Plc [2008] EWCA Civ 819, [2008] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 456 at [39].
- 920. [1990] Ch. 265 at 292.
- 921. Implicitly approved on appeal [1991] Ch. 547; and applied by the Supreme Court of Canada in Citadel General Assurance Co v Lloyds Bank Canada, 152 D.L.R. (4th) 411, 422–423 (1997).
- 922. P.J. Millett (1991) 107 L.Q.R. 71, 83, n.46.
- 923. It has been argued that a bank receives beneficially all money deposited, irrespective of the state of the account, as the bank is entitled to do as it pleases with money received to the credit of a customer provided it pays the customer an equivalent sum on demand: see Gleeson, Laundering and Tracing (1995), pp.126–127; Bryan, Restitution and Banking Law (1998), pp.180–187; cf. Mitchell, Dirty Money: Criminal and Civil Aspects (2003), pp.199–226, citing the arguments of Moore, Restitution from Banks, unpublished D.Phil dissertation, University of Oxford, 2000, that banks receive money beneficially when deposited by the account holder but only ministerially when deposited by someone else. Moore-Bick L.J., speaking obiter in Uzinterimpex JSC v Standard Bank Plc [2008] EWCA Civ 819, [2008] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 456 at [40], saw “a good deal of force in Dr Bryan’s criticisms of the decision in Agip v Jackson”.
- 924. [2001] 1 W.L.R. 1177. But see Law Society of England and Wales v Habitable Concepts Ltd [2010] EWHC 1449 (Ch) for a case where the court refused to pierce the corporate veil. façade to conceal the true facts thereby avoiding or concealing any liability of those individuals.

- 925. See above, para.34-298.
- 926. [1993] 1 W.L.R. 509.
- 927. See, e.g., Nelson v Larholt [1948] 1 K.B. 339; as interpreted in Carl-Zeiss-Stiftung v Herbert Smith & Co (No.2) [1969] 2 Ch. 276; Re Montagu's Settlement Trusts [1987] Ch. 264.
- 928. See Eagle Trust Plc v SBC Securities Ltd [1994] 1 B.C.L.C. 464, although Vinelott J. clouded the issue by relying on the concept of “inferred knowledge”; Eagle Trust Plc v SBC Securities Ltd (No.2) [1996] 1 B.C.L.C. 121; Cowan de Groot Properties Ltd v Eagle Trust Plc [1992] 4 All E.R. 700.
- 929. See Nelson v Larholt, above, as interpreted in Cowan de Groot Properties v Eagle Trust [1992] 4 All E.R. 700; Belmont Finance Corp Ltd v Williams Furniture Ltd (No.2) [1980] 1 All E.R. 393; International Sales and Agencies Ltd v Marcus [1982] 3 All E.R. 551; Houghton v Fayers [2000] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 145 CA; Westpac Banking Corp v Savin [1985] 2 N.Z.L.R. 41 NZCA; Powell v Thompson [1991] 1 N.Z.L.R. 597 at 607–610; Citadel General Assurance Co v Lloyds Bank Canada, 152 D.L.R. (4th) 411, 429 (1997) Sup Ct Can.
- 930. ![2001] Ch. 437; the Akindele test of “unconscionability” has been endorsed by the Court of Appeal in the following cases: Criterion Properties Plc v Stratford UK Properties Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 1883, [2003] 1 W.L.R. 2108 at [20]–[39] (affirmed on different grounds: [2004] UKHL 28, [2004] 1 W.L.R. 1846); Charter Plc v City Index Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 1382, [2008] Ch. 313 at [8]; Uzinterimpex JSC v Standard Bank Plc [2008] EWCA Civ 819, [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 456 at [37]–[46]; and, following agreement of the parties, by the Privy Council in Arthur v Att-Gen of the Turks and Caicos Islands [2012] UKPC 30 at [33]–[36] (stressing the difference between proprietary and personal remedies).
- 931. Nourse L.J. added (at 455), “I have grave doubts about its utility in cases of knowing receipt”. Contrast, Lewin on Trusts, 18th edn (2008), para.42–49 et seq.; and see below, para.34–307.
- 932. Nolan [2000] C.L.J. 447.
- 933. [1995] 2 A.C. 378 at 392.
- 934. See, e.g. Barkehall Thomas (2001) 21 O.J.L.S. 239 at 253–264, who formulates guidelines so as to render the test economically efficient, and also Stevens [2001] R.L.R. 99, who considers Nourse L.J.'s analysis to be “flawed”.
- 935. [2002] EWCA Civ 1883, [2003] 1 W.L.R. 2108 at [38]; affirmed on different grounds: [2004] UKHL 28, [2004] 1 W.L.R. 1846.
- 936. !In Papamichael v National Westminster Bank Plc [2003] EWHC 164 (Comm), [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 341 at [247], Judge Chambers Q.C. treated actual knowledge as a necessary condition for liability. In Crown Dilmun v Sutton [2004] EWHC 52 (Ch), [2004] 1 B.C.L.C. 468 at [200], Peter Smith J., reluctantly applying the Court of Appeal decision in Criterion Properties, held that “attribution of knowledge is not enough. It must be unconscionable for the ... defendant to retain the benefit”. In Starglade Properties Ltd v Nash Unreported January 26, 2010, N. Strauss Q.C. (sitting as a deputy judge of the High Court) said, at [57], that unconscionability provides “a flexible test, which requires the court to consider what is right, taking into account the nature and extent of the defendant's knowledge and all the circumstances relating to the receipt. Actual knowledge which could put a reasonable man on enquiry, coupled with a failure to enquire, may suffice ...”. (Although the Court of Appeal reversed the deputy judge's decision on the claim based on dishonest assistance (see para.34–296 above), there was no appeal against his decision on the knowing receipt claim: see [2010] EWCA Civ 1314 at [6].) In Law Society of England and Wales v Habitable Concepts Ltd [2010] EWHC 1449 (Ch), Norris J. held, at [16], that “[t]he unexplained nature of the bank credit and its sheer scale would call for enquiry to be made by anyone who wished to deal with the credit with a clear conscience”. In Armstrong DLW GmbH v Winnington Networks Ltd [2012] EWHC 10 (Ch), S. Morris Q.C.

(sitting as a deputy judge of the High Court) said, at [132], that, in a commercial context, Baden types (1) to (3) knowledge on the part of a defendant renders receipt of trust property unconscionable (adding that it is not necessary to show that the defendant realised that the transaction was “obviously” or “probably” in breach of trust or fraudulent; the possibility of impropriety or the claimant’s interest is sufficient); and that Baden types (4) and (5) knowledge also renders receipt “unconscionable” but only if, on the facts actually known to the defendant, a reasonable person would either have appreciated that the transfer was probably in breach of trust or would have made inquiries or sought advice which would have revealed the probability of the breach of trust. In Crédit Agricole Corporation and Investment Bank v Papadimitriou [2015] UKPC 13 at [20], where the (different) issue was whether the appellant bank was a bona fide purchaser of assets without constructive notice of an existing proprietary interest in them, the Privy Council stated that “[t]he bank must make inquiries if there is a serious possibility of a third party having such a right or, put in another way, if the facts known to the bank would give a reasonable banker in the position of the particular banker serious cause to question the propriety of the transaction”. Note Lord Sumption’s (at [33]) statement that “[w]hether a person claims to be a bona fide purchaser of assets without notice of a prior interest in them, or disputes a claim to make him accountable as a constructive trustee on the footing of a knowing receipt, the question what constitutes constructive notice or knowledge is the same”. See also Thanakharn Kasikorn Thai Chamkat (Mahachon) v Akai Holdings Ltd (2010) H.K.C.F.A.R. 479 at [135], where Lord Neuberger, delivering the judgment of the Hong Kong Court of Final Appeal, said that the test of “unconscionability” for knowing receipt was “effectively identical” to that of “irrationality” for determining whether a defaulting agent has apparent authority, and that “equity would follow the law” absent special circumstances (explained and criticised by R. Lee and L. Ho in (2012) 75 M.L.R. 91). In Relfo Ltd (In Liquidation) v Varsani [2012] EWHC 2168 (Ch) at [79]–[80] (affirmed [2014] EWCA Civ 360), Sales J. said “one needs to be a little careful in using this formulation” (i.e. unconscionability), and preferred to speak in terms of the “relevant knowledge” identified by Millett J. in Agip (Africa) Ltd v Jackson [1990] 1 Ch. 265, 291F–G, when referring to the first of the two main types of knowing receipt (see para.34-299 above). In Arthur v Att-Gen of the Turks and Caicos Islands [2012] UKPC 30 at [40], Sir Terence Etherton, delivering the advice of the Privy Council, said “Knowing receipt in the Akindele sense is ... not merely absence of notice but unconscionable conduct amounting to equitable fraud. It is a classic example of lack of bona fides”.

937. See Butterworths, Corporate Law Update, August 3, 2000.

938. See Birks, Breach of Trust (2002), 213; Lord Nicholls, writing extra-judicially, in Cornish, Restitution—Past, Present and Future (1998), p.231; Lord Walker, “Dishonesty and Unconscionable Conduct in Commercial Life” (2005) 27 Sydney L.R. 187, 202.

939. [2001] Ch. 437 at 456.

940.  Dicta from their Lordships’ House favours strict liability: Criterion Properties Plc v Stratford UK Properties LLC [2004] UKHL 28, [2004] 1 W.L.R. 1846 at [4], per Lord Nicholls; Twinsectra Ltd v Yardley [2002] UKHL 12, [2002] 2 A.C. 164, 194, per Lord Millett; but contrast Farah Constructions Pty Ltd v Say-Dee Pty Ltd [2007] HCA 22 at [131] and [151]–[155], noted with approval by Conaglen and Nolan [2007] C.L.J. 515, 516, where the High Court of Australia (obiter) preferred fault-based liability over strict liability, applied in Bell Group Ltd (In Liquidation) v Westpac Banking Corp [2008] WASC 239, and see also D. Salmons [2017] C.L.J. 399.

941. [1989] 1 W.L.R. 1340; reversed on different grounds [1991] 2 A.C. 548.

942. [1997] 6 Bank. L.R. 315.

943. See, e.g. Jeremy D Stone Consultants Ltd v National Westminster Bank Plc [2013] EWHC 208 (Ch) at [255]–[260].

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(b) - The Relationship of Banker and Customer
(vii) - Duty of Secrecy

Duty of secrecy

34-310

⚠ The relationship of banker and customer is of a confidential nature and, as a general rule, the banker is under a duty of secrecy. The leading English case is Tournier v National Provincial Bank, where Atkin L.J. ⁹⁴⁴ ⚠ observed that this duty applies not only to information derived by the banker from the account, but extends also to information obtained from other sources, if the occasion upon which the information is obtained arises out of the banking relationship of the bank and its customer. It does not, however, preclude the bank from referring to or disclosing information which the enquirer can readily obtain from another source, such as a caution in bankruptcy proceedings and, presumably, a caveat. ⁹⁴⁵ Generally, though, the bank's duty of confidentiality does not terminate on the closing of the account and, presumably, survives the death of the customer. In Tournier's case the Court of Appeal indicated, further, that the banker may disclose such information in the following cases ⁹⁴⁶:

(a)

when there is compulsion by law, e.g. when the banker is obliged to give evidence in legal proceedings ⁹⁴⁷ ⚠

(b)

when public interest calls for disclosure, e.g. when during war time the customer's activities disclose dealings with the enemy ⁹⁴⁸; and when the disclosure is necessary in the banker's own interest, e.g. when, in order to claim repayment of an overdraft, he has to disclose that the customer's account is overdrawn. ⁹⁴⁹

(c)

Finally, Tournier's case indicates that the banker is entitled to give information when expressly or impliedly authorised so to do by the customer. ⁹⁵⁰ ⚠ There is an established trade practice that banks provide each other with credit references relating to their customers. In the past banks justified this practice on the ground that their customers gave their implied consent to it. However, in Turner v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc, ⁹⁵¹ a case where the customer had a personal account with the bank, the Court of Appeal held that this practice was not sufficiently "notorious" (i.e. known to the bank's

❗ The Court of Appeal ignored the fact that the customer also held a business account at the bank, and so it is unclear whether Turner applies to business customers. ⁹⁵³

Extraterritorial orders

34-311

Specific problems arise where courts in one country issue orders for the disclosure of information which are meant to have effect in another country. ⁹⁵⁴ In practice, this type of case arises principally where courts or grand juries in the United States issue orders addressed to overseas branches of American banks or instruct a bank's American head office to acquire the information involved from its branches abroad. The customer of the respective overseas branch may, of course, object to the disclosure of the information and, where necessary, apply for an injunction to preclude his branch from complying with the American order. Predictably, English courts have shown no sympathy for the foreign courts' trespass into their jurisdiction. Thus, in Re Westinghouse Uranium Contract ⁹⁵⁵ the House of Lords held that a request for the disclosure of information made in a letter rogatory addressed by the United States District Court to the High Court ought to be denied if the information involved was subject to bank secrecy in the United Kingdom. Their Lordships placed considerable weight on an opinion submitted by the Attorney-General, who took the view that the wide investigatory procedures applicable under the United States' anti-trust law against foreign citizens constituted an infringement of the law of the United Kingdom.

34-312

In another case, X A G v A Bank, ⁹⁵⁶ Leggatt J. showed no hesitation in enjoining an American bank from complying with an American Department of Justice's subpoena duces tecum which was supported by an order issued by the United States District Court, in which the bank's head office was instructed to produce in the United States records maintained with its London office. Holding that the proper law of the contract between the bank and the relevant customer was English law, his Lordship observed that if the order were carried out, it:

“... would take effect in London for the production of documents in breach of what might be termed a private interest in the sense that what is directly involved is a contract between banker and customer. But this indubitably is also a matter of public interest, because it raises issues of wider concern than those peculiar to the [instant] parties.” ⁹⁵⁷

Weighing all the circumstances of the case and taking into account the interests of both the bank and the customer, Leggatt J. enjoined disclosure.

34-313

English courts are, thus, strongly disinclined to uphold a foreign court's order which is contrary to English law or which conflicts with what may be best termed the local public interest. A more recent instance of the same policy is to be seen in Libyan Arab Foreign Bank v Bankers' Trust Co. ⁹⁵⁸ In this case Staughton J. ordered an American bank to effect payment of an amount deposited with its London office, notwithstanding an order in which President Reagan sought to freeze balances maintained by Libyan Government bodies with all the branches of American banks. As a corollary to their firm stand against extraterritorial orders issued overseas, the English courts have shown an unwillingness to issue orders for the disclosure of evidence that would have to take effect outside the United Kingdom. ⁹⁵⁹

^{944.}

❗ [1924] 1 K.B. 461, 485, and see Bankes L.J. at 474. In Tournier the bank's duty of confidentiality was held to be an implied term of the bank–customer contract; alternatively, it may arise from an express assurance of confidentiality by the bank (see, e.g. Primary Group (UK) Ltd v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc [2014] EWHC 1082 (Ch), where Wrotham Park /negotiation damages awarded), or out of an equitable obligation of confidence (see, e.g. CF Partners (UK) LLP v Barclays Bank Plc [2014] EWHC 3049 (Ch), where Wrotham Park /negotiating damages awarded). For case law relating to the prohibition of disclosure to other companies in the same group, see Bank of Tokyo v Karoon [1987] A.C. 45n., 53–54 CA; Bhogal v Punjab National Bank [1988] 2 All E.R. 296, 305 CA. See also the Lending Code, revised September 28, 2015, para.[15] (customer's personal information to be treated as private and confidential); the Standards of Lending Practice for Personal Customers (above, para.34-222, n.673) at pp.7 (Account maintenance and servicing: "Firms will maintain the security of customers' data but may share information about the day-to-day running of a customer's account(s), including positive data, with credit reference agencies where the firm has agreed to follow the principles of reciprocity. [CONC 5]"), and for the same guidance with regard to business customers, see the Standards of Lending Practice for Business Customers (above, para.34-222, n.673) at pp.9–10 (Product execution), point 5. Personal data relating to customers who are natural persons is held by a bank subject to the Data Protection Act 1998.

945. Christofi v Barclays Bank Plc [1998] 1 W.L.R. 1245; affirmed [2000] 1 W.L.R. 937.

946. "Where the case is within one of the qualifications to the duty of confidence, the duty, ex hypothesi, does not exist": El Jawhary v Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA [1993] B.C.L.C. 396 at 400, per Nicholls V.-C. See also Barclays Bank Plc v Taylor [1989] 1 W.L.R. 1066 at 1074, per Lord Donaldson M.R.

947.

⚠ Consider, e.g. the banker's duty of making payment to sequestrators and of disclosing to them the state of the customer's account: Bucknell v Bucknell [1969] 1 W.L.R. 1204; Eckman v Midland Bank Ltd [1973] Q.B. 519. For another instance of legal compulsion, see, e.g. the Income Tax Act 2007 s.771. See also the Bankers Books Evidence Act 1879 s.7, and the analysis in Williams v Summerfield [1972] 2 Q.B. 512; and in R. v Marlborough St Metropolitan Stipendiary Magistrate Ex p. Simpson [1980] Crim. L.R. 305; Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s.9; the Companies Act 1985 ss.434(2), 452(1A); Insolvency Act 1986 ss.236, 366; Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XI. Note that disclosure of such information by way of a discovery will be ordered, as a matter of justice, in respect of proceedings in which the bank's customer is sued in fraud by a third party: A v C [1980] 2 All E.R. 347; Bankers Trust Co v Shapira [1980] 3 All E.R. 353; C v S [1999] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 26 (giving important guidance to banks served with a disclosure order and also concerned with prosecution for "tipping off": two "tipping off" offences are now to be found in the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s.333A, with the separate offence of prejudicing an investigation in s.342; see also Bank of Scotland v A Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 52, [2001] 1 W.L.R. 751; Tayeb v HSBC Bank Plc [2004] EWHC 1529 (QB), [2004] 4 All E.R. 1024). And note that where the bank is compelled to disclose, it is not under a duty to oppose the orders or to notify the customer: Barclays Bank v Taylor [1989] 1 W.L.R. 1066 CA. A bank is likewise not in breach of its duty of confidentiality where it produces documents as ordered in a subpoena duces tecum (now called a "witness summons" under the Civil Procedure Rules 1998): Robertson v Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce [1994] 1 W.L.R. 824 PC. Legislation to combat money laundering and the financing of terrorist activities is particularly draconian. A bank commits an offence if it fails to disclose to the National Crime Agency its knowledge or suspicion, or that it has reasonable grounds for knowledge or suspicion, that a customer is engaged in money laundering or terrorist offences (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s.330; Terrorism Act 2000 s.21A, as inserted by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 Sch.2 Pt 3). The threshold for suspicion is low: the bank only has to consider that there is a more than fanciful possibility that the relevant facts exist (K Ltd v National Westminster Bank Plc [2006] EWCA Civ 1039, [2007] 1 W.L.R. 311 at [16], applied in Shah v HSBC Private Bank (UK) Ltd [2009] EWHC 79 (QB), [2009] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 328 at [45], reversed [2010] EWCA Civ 31, [2011] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 67, but K Ltd applied at [21], and also applied by Supperstone J. at the trial of the action: [2012] EWHC 1283 (QB) at [67]–[69])). Subjectively, the bank may itself know or suspect the customer is engaged in money laundering or terrorist offences but, even if it does not, it may objectively have reasonable grounds for such knowledge or suspicion. Such disclosure is a "protected disclosure", i.e. it "is not to be taken to breach any restriction on the disclosure of information (however arising)" (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s.337(1); Terrorism Act 2000 s.21B(1), as inserted). In general terms, a customer who opens an account at a bank in the UK must be taken to have accepted and be entitled to assume that the bank will act in accordance with applicable anti-money laundering and terrorism legislation (Tayeb v HSBC Bank Plc [2004] EWHC 1529 (Comm), [2004] 4 All E.R. 1024 at [57], per Colman J.) A bank (the paying bank) may be granted a Norwich Pharmacal order against another bank (the beneficiary's bank) compelling it to disclose information in relation to the identity of certain of its customers who were beneficiaries of electronic payments made as a result of the paying bank's own mistakes, e.g. making a duplicate payment, selection of an incorrect mandate or insertion of an incorrect account number, see Santander UK Plc v National Westminster Bank Plc [2014] EWHC 2626 (Ch); Santander UK Plc v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc [2015] EWHC 2560 (Ch) at [11]–[17], but with criticism of the ruling in Santander UK Plc v National Westminster Bank Plc, above, that a claim in unjust enrichment was a wrong capable of justifying a Norwich Pharmacal order (noted by M. Campbell [2016] L.M.C.L.Q. 42).

948. For recent cases recognising the existence of an independent ground of disclosure under this qualification, see Price Waterhouse v BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg) SA [1992] B.C.L.C. 583; Douglas v Pindling [1996] A.C. 890 PC; Pharaon v Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA (In Liquidation) [1998] 4 All E.R. 455. For earlier tentative (and obiter) recognition, see Libyan Arab Foreign Bank v Bankers Trust Co [1989] Q.B. 728, 771, per Staughton J. See also Rodaro v Royal Bank of Canada, 59 O.R. (3d) 74 (2002) Ont CA, noted by Ogilvie (2004) 19 B.F.L.R. 103.

949. See Kaupthing Singer & Friedlander Ltd v Coomber [2011] EWHC 3589 (Ch) at [52], [56]; Deutsche Bank (Suisse) SA v Khan [2013] EWHC 482 (Comm) at [384]–[393]. See also Sunderland v Barclays Bank Ltd (1938) 5 L.D.A.B. 163; Nam Tai Electronics Inc v Price-waterhouseCoopers [2008] 1 H.K.C. 427 at [49], [53], [54] HKCFA. See also Primary Group (UK) Ltd v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc [2014] EWHC 1082 (Ch) at [192], where disclosure was held not to be “reasonably necessary” for the bank's own protection. The “interests of the bank exception” probably needs to be reassessed in the light of developments in the law of confidence, misuse of private information and data protection (as to which, see R. Spearman [2012] J.I.B.F.L. 78).

950.  It has been suggested that where such consent has been given not freely but under compulsion, for instance, by a foreign court, the bank ought to refuse to make disclosure: Re ABC [1985] F.L.R. 159 Cayman Islands. But see R. Cranston, Principles of Banking Law, 2nd edn (2002), p.180. For examples where legislation allows disclosure but only with customer consent, see the Small and Medium Sized Business (Credit Information) Regulations 2015 (SI 2015/1945) regs 3(2), 6(1)(b); the Small and Medium Sized Business (Finance Platforms) Regulations 2015 (SI 2015/1946) regs 3(4), 6(3)(b).

951. [1992] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 664.

952.  Turner dealt with banking practice between 1986 and 1989, and therefore predates the 1994 revision of the Banking Code (for personal customers) which made banker's references subject to the express consent of the customer concerned. A similar requirement was contained in the Business Banking Code (for business customers) first published in 2002. Both Codes were replaced in November 2009 by a new Banking and Payment Services (BPS) conduct regime (see above, para.34-219). Those aspects of the Codes not covered by the BPS conduct regime (dealing with lending) are to be found in the Lending Code, which is a “self-regulatory” code of practice (see above, para.34-222). The Lending Code contains specific restraints on passing on customer information for marketing purposes (s.2) and to credit reference agencies (s.3), but makes no direct reference to the practice of giving banker's references. (See also the Standards of Lending Practice (above, para.34-222, n.673) at p.7 (Account maintenance and servicing), with the relevant paragraph set out in n.937 above; and for the same guidance with regard to business customers, see the Standards of Lending Practice for Business Customers (above, para.34-222, n.673) at pp.9–10 (Product execution), point 5.) A bank has been held to owe a duty of care to its customer when providing information to credit reference agencies in relation to that customer, and to owe a duty of care to the customer's spouse where she was a joint holder of the same account and a co-director of the family business which largely depended on her husband's credit (but “almost certainly” not in the ordinary case): Gatt v Barclays Bank Plc [2013] EWHC 2 (QB) at [35], where held that bank was not liable to spouse in contract (she was also a customer of the bank), negligence or defamation where it sent computerised information about her husband to credit reference agencies stating that an account, which was a joint account with her, was “delinquent” because the overdraft exceeded the agreed limit. For the duty imposed on designated banks to provide information about their small and medium-sized business customers to designated credit reference agencies (“CRAs”), and the duty on designated CRAs to provide credit information about small and medium-sized businesses to finance providers, see the Small and Medium Sized Business (Credit Information) Regulations 2015 (SI 2015/1945).

953. E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.195–197.
954. Where a requesting court located in another EU Member State (except Denmark) issues a letter of request to obtain evidence in the UK in relation to a “civil or commercial matter”, the position is governed by Council Regulation (EC) 1206/2001 on the co-operation between Member States in the taking of evidence in civil or commercial matters. Where the requesting court is not located in another Member State, a letter of request is governed by the Hague Convention on the Taking of Evidence Abroad in Civil or Commercial Matters 1970, and, where the requested court is in the UK, the position is governed by the Evidence (Proceedings in Other Jurisdictions) Act 1975. See generally, E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.197–207.
955. [1978] A.C. 547.
956. [1983] 2 All E.R. 464.
957. [1983] 2 All E.R. 464 at 477. But see First American Corp v Sheikh Zayed Al-Nahyan [1999] 1 W.L.R. 1154; Pharaon v BCCI SA (In Liquidation) [1998] 4 All E.R. 455: the public interest in making documents available in the foreign court in respect of international fraud usually outweighs concerns about bank confidentiality.
958. [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 259; and see Libyan Arab Foreign Bank v Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 494; and Libyan Arab Foreign Bank v Manufacturers Hanover Trust (No.2) [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 608 (Hirst J.).
959. R. v Grossman (1981) 73 Cr. App. R. 302; MacKinnon v Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp [1986] Ch. 482. See also Société Eram Shipping Co Ltd v Compagnie Internationale de Navigacion [2003] UKHL 30, [2003] 3 W.L.R. 21 at [22]–[23] and [67] HL (similar principles expressed when court refuses to grant third party debt order over credit balance in foreign bank account). cf. Masri v Consolidated Contractors International Co SAL (No.2) [2008] EWCA Civ 303, [32]–[35], per Lawrence Collins L.J., but see also Masri v Consolidated Contractors International Co SAL (No.4) [2008] EWCA Civ 876, [15]–[16], [80]; [2009] UKHL 43, [19], [26]. Interestingly, in Credit Suisse Trust Ltd v Intesa Sanpaolo SpA [2014] EWHC 1447 (Ch), the English High Court granted Norwich Pharmacal relief to the victim of fraud by ordering the London branches of two Italian banks to provide information about a customer, despite the fact that the banking activity took place in Italy and all the information sought was held in Italy: the only link to the UK was that the banks had branches in London.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(b) - The Relationship of Banker and Customer
(viii) - Termination of Relationship

Termination of relationship by consent

34-314

⚠ The contract may fix the period the bank-customer relationship is to last, e.g. as with a fixed term deposit, so that there can be no early termination without the consent of both parties. By contrast, where an account is repayable on demand, as with a current account or easy access savings accounts, the customer may at common law terminate the relationship at any time by withdrawing the credit balance and closing the account. ⁹⁶⁰

For accounts that fall within the scope of the Payment Services Regulations 2009, ⁹⁶¹ ⚠ such as current accounts and easy access savings accounts, the contract may be terminated by the customer at any time, unless a period of notice (not exceeding one month) has been agreed. ⁹⁶² ⚠ The position is different where the bank wishes to terminate the relationship. At common law, as recently confirmed by Lord Hoffmann in National Commercial Bank of Jamaica Ltd v Olint Corp Ltd, ⁹⁶³ “in the absence of express contrary agreement or statutory impediment, a contract by a bank to provide banking services to a customer is terminable upon reasonable notice”. ⁹⁶⁴ ⚠ However, current accounts and easy access savings accounts will constitute “framework contracts” under the Payment Services Regulations 2009, so that a bank may only close an account opened for an indefinite period by giving at least two months’ notice, if the contract so provides. ⁹⁶⁵ ⚠

^{960.} But see Bank of Baroda v Mahomed [1999] Lloyd’s Rep. Bank. 14 CA (limitation point arising because customer made separate demands for repayment).

^{961.} ⚠ SI 2009/209, as amended. See above, paras 34-223 et seq. The Revised Payment Services Directive 2015/2366/EU (“PSD2”) repeals and replaces Directive 2007/64/EC. EU Member States have until January 13, 2018 to implement the requirements of PSD2. The Payment Services Regulations 2017 (SI 2017/752) (“PSRs 2017”), implement in part PSD2 in the UK. The PSRs 2017 revoke and replace the Payment Services Regulations 2009. With certain exceptions as set out in reg.1, which include where the implementation period is linked to the coming into force of the secure communication and authentication requirements adopted under art.98 of PSD2, the PSRs 2017 come into force on January 13, 2018 (PSRs 2017 reg.1(6)). See, generally, para.34-223, n.676 above.

^{962.} ⚠ Termination of a “framework contract”, such as one for a current account or easy access savings account, including the bank’s right to charge for closing the account, is provided for in the Payment Services Regulations 2009 reg.43 (see also PSRs 2017 reg.51). A framework contract is defined in reg.2 (see also PSRs 2017 reg.2) to mean “a contract for payment services which govern the future execution of individual and successive payment transactions and which may contain the obligation and conditions for setting up a payment account". The regulation does not affect the parties' rights to treat the framework contract, in accordance with the general law of contract, as unenforceable, void or discharged (reg.43(7); see also PSRs 2017 reg.51(7)). Where the framework contract is also a regulated agreement under the Consumer Credit Act 1974 reg.43 does not apply (reg.34; see also PSRs 2017 reg.41(2)).

963. [2009] UKPC 16 at [1].

964.  As to what constitutes a reasonable period of notice, see Prosperity Ltd v Lloyds Bank Ltd (1923) 39 T.L.R. 372 (refusing to grant a mandatory injunction ordering the bank to reopen the account). See also National Commercial Bank of Jamaica Ltd v Olint Corp Ltd, above, at [16]–[21], where application for injunction also refused on grounds that, where customer disputes closure of his account, damages will usually be an adequate remedy. cf. N v S [2015] EWHC 3248 (Comm) at [12]–[13], where Burton J. held that the customer had an arguable case that the bank was not entitled to terminate the banking relationship without notice under its contractual terms, and went on to grant an interim mandatory injunction requiring the bank to comply with the customer's instructions in relation to existing transactions, while the customer sought to move its account to a new bank. For reversal of Burton J.'s decision by the Court of Appeal ([2017] EWCA Civ 253), and for the money-laundering aspects of this case, see below, para.34-325A).

965.  reg.43(4). See also PSRs 2017 reg.51(4).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(c) - The Current Account
(i) - Rights and Duties of the Banker

Nature of relationship

34-315

⚠ The relationship between the banker and a customer who has opened a current account is that of debtor and creditor. ⁹⁶⁶ ⚠ The debt is, however, payable only on demand at the branch in which the account is kept. ⁹⁶⁷ Thus, it is not the banker's duty to seek his creditor, the customer, and repay the debt. The banker is under an obligation to honour cheques of the customer, provided an adequate credit balance is available. ⁹⁶⁸ When drawing a cheque the customer, acting as principal, authorises his banker—his agent—to make payment. ⁹⁶⁹ A relationship of principal and agent is, accordingly, superimposed on the basic relationship of creditor and debtor. In carrying out instructions given to the bank by its customer—the principal—it must exercise reasonable care and skill. ⁹⁷⁰ Its main duty, though, is to adhere strictly to the terms of its mandate. ⁹⁷¹ ⚠

The mandate to pay: electronic means of payment

34-316

⚠ In modern banking practice, a bank usually agrees with its customer to honour payment instructions delivered by electronic means, e.g. by use of a debit card, or by use of a password communicated to the bank over a telephone or internet link. ⁹⁷² ⚠ The bank is probably not obliged to provide these services to its customer without special agreement whereas it is obliged to honour cheques drawn by its customer under the express or implied terms of the banker–customer contract which arises when an account is opened. ⁹⁷³ In fact, current accounts are now more commonly accessed by electronic means than by the customer drawing a cheque on the account. Banks have standard terms and conditions that govern the operation of a customer's current account and which provide for access to the account through electronic means. Such terms and conditions usually reflect the statutory rights and duties that apply through the provisions of the Payment Services Regulations 2009 (PSRs), ⁹⁷⁴ ⚠ and also the FCA's Banking Conduct of Business Sourcebook, which provide mandatory rules for those residual cases where the PSRs do not apply. ⁹⁷⁵ ⚠ Regulation 66(5) of the PSRs ⁹⁷⁶ ⚠ provides that:

“[w]here all the conditions of the payer's framework contract have been satisfied, the payment service provider may not refuse to execute an authorised payment order irrespective of whether the payment order is initiated by the payer or by or through a payee, unless such execution is otherwise unlawful.” ⁹⁷⁷ ⚠

Detailed consideration of the PSRs is found later in this chapter. ⁹⁷⁸ Cheques fall outside the PSRs. ⁹⁷⁹

The mandate to pay: cheques

34-317

The customer's cheque is a mandate authorising the banker to honour the cheque when presented by the payee or a holder. ⁹⁸⁰ The mandate may be limited by the inclusion of a general or special crossing, as well as by including in the cheque words prohibiting transfer. ⁹⁸¹

Limits on duty to honour cheque

34-318

There are several limitations to the banker's duty to honour a cheque drawn by the customer. First, the banker is under an obligation to honour a cheque only if the customer's account is either actually in credit, or, where it is in debit, if the customer has been granted an overdraft. ⁹⁸² Thus, if the customer has made a deposit, but a cheque is presented before the banker has had reasonable time for crediting the amount deposited to the account, he is not liable if he dishonours the cheque. ⁹⁸³ Similarly, if the customer instructs his bankers to collect cheques and credit his account with the proceeds, he is not entitled to draw against these cheques until they have been cleared. However, once the account is credited the customer is, in the absence of stipulation to the contrary, entitled to draw the full amount, although some cheques paid in may not have been cleared. ⁹⁸⁴ Secondly, the cheque is a mandate requesting the banker to pay it at the branch at which the account is kept. The customer is not entitled to demand payment at another branch, and, if a cheque is, in point of fact, cashed for a holder at another branch of the bank, this branch is probably to be considered as discounting or collecting the cheque. ⁹⁸⁵ Thirdly, a cheque should be paid only if presented during ordinary business hours. However, if a banker pays a cheque shortly after business hours, he does not exceed his authority. ⁹⁸⁶ Finally, as a matter of practice, bankers do not honour cheques that have been outstanding for a long period, and one presented more than 6 months after the date of issue is unlikely to be paid. ⁹⁸⁷ It is, likewise, the practice not to pay an undated cheque ⁹⁸⁸; but a banker would honour it, if the holder exercised his prima facie authority to complete the instrument within a reasonable time.

Overdrafts

34-319

Where there are insufficient funds available to cover the full amount of the customer's cheque, the bank may refuse to honour it. In such circumstances the cheque stands as an offer by the customer to the bank to extend credit to him on the bank's usual terms as to interest and other charges, unless other terms have been agreed between them. ⁹⁸⁹ The bank may either reject the offer or accept it by paying the cheque and, in doing so, allow the customer to overdraw. ⁹⁹⁰ In the case of a joint account, all the account holders will be liable for the overdrawn balance where the bank advances funds at the request of only one of them, even though as between the account holders themselves this was unauthorised, so long as the bank acts within the terms of the original mandate agreed when the account was opened, e.g. where only one signature is required on the cheque. ⁹⁹¹

Combining accounts

34-320

It has been held in Garnett v M'Kewan ⁹⁹² that if a customer has a current account which is in credit with one branch of the bank, and another account which is overdrawn with another branch, the banker is entitled to combine the two accounts,⁹⁹³  so as to set off the overdraft against the credit balance. The nature of this right and of its abrogation by contract are discussed in National Westminster Bank Ltd v Halesowen Presswork and Assemblies Ltd.⁹⁹⁴ The plaintiffs maintained an account with the defendant bank. In April 1968, when this account showed a substantial debit balance, an account No.2 was opened for the plaintiffs' trading operations. The bank agreed that, in the absence of a material change of circumstances, account No.1 would remain frozen for a period of four months. On June 12, 1968, the plaintiffs passed a resolution to wind up voluntarily. On June 19, the bank informed the liquidator that it had determined to set off the debit balance in account No.1 against the credit balance in account No.2. The majority of the House of Lords held that the bank was entitled to take this course. In the first place, the resolution to wind up involved a change in the circumstances under which the bank had agreed to keep the two accounts separate, whereupon the bank regained its right to combine the accounts. Secondly, the dealings between the plaintiffs and the bank were "mutual" within the meaning of s.31 of the Bankruptcy Act 1914.⁹⁹⁵  This provision, which has since been superseded by s.323 of the Insolvency Act 1986, conferred on the bank a statutory right of set off. Their Lordships pointed out that this right of set off, as well as the ordinary right to combine accounts, is to be distinguished from the banker's lien. Sums standing to the credit of the customer's account constitute a debt payable to him by the bank and the actual funds involved are the bank's property. The bank cannot have a lien over its own property.⁹⁹⁶

Effect of agreement

34-321

Halesowen's case does not question the validity of an agreement abrogating the bank's right to combine accounts in situations in which s.31, or currently s.323, is inapplicable.⁹⁹⁷ An agreement to keep an account separate can be inferred where it is opened for a specific purpose, e.g. for the paying of an employee's wages,⁹⁹⁸ or when the customer indicates, when opening the account, that it may not be combined with other accounts and a note to this effect is entered in the ledger.⁹⁹⁹ Moreover, an account which the customer opens as trustee, or as agent or as nominee of another person, may not be combined with the customer's private account.¹⁰⁰⁰ Similarly, where an amount constituting a "retention fund" under a building contract is paid into a joint account in the names of the contractor and the landowner, the bank cannot combine the balance standing to the credit of this account with the debit balance in the contractor's personal account.¹⁰⁰¹ A question that has arisen in recent years is whether a bank is entitled to exercise an equitable set-off as against money standing to the credit of X's account, if the beneficial owner of the funds is Y, who is indebted to the bank. It has been held that such a right of set-off is exercisable only if X concedes, or the bank can clearly establish on the evidence, that the money is due to Y as equitable owner.¹⁰⁰²

Customer's remedies for dishonor

34-322

A cheque which is returned unpaid by a banker usually bears on its face a written answer. The practice of bankers to make such an answer is, however, compulsory only where the cheque is presented through a clearing house which so stipulates. Answers on unpaid cheques must be composed with some care. "Refer to drawer", is ordinarily met with in cases of want of funds, and may be libellous if used in other circumstances. Although the words seem merely to invite the presenter of the cheque to inquire of the drawer as to the reason of dishonour,¹⁰⁰³ they have acquired a certain notoriety.¹⁰⁰⁴ Where words are not plainly defamatory, the test is not what they would convey to a particular person, but what they would suggest to a person of average intelligence.¹⁰⁰⁵ In New Zealand "Present again" has been held to be libellous¹⁰⁰⁶ as of course are the words "Not sufficient".¹⁰⁰⁷

Damages for breach of contract

34-323

Apart from any rights that may arise in tort from the nature of the written answer, the wrongful dishonour of the cheque, in itself, entitles the customer to damages for breach of contract. ¹⁰⁰⁸ For many years the amount of damages recoverable by the customer differed according to whether he was a trader or a non-trader. Where the customer was a trader or, probably a professional man, he could recover substantial damages for injury to his credit and reputation without proof of actual loss, ¹⁰⁰⁹ but where he was a nontrader he could only recover nominal damages for breach of contract, unless he proved actual loss. ¹⁰¹⁰ However, the distinction between traders and non-traders has now been swept away by the Court of Appeal in Kpohraror v Woolwich Building Society. ¹⁰¹¹ Evans L.J. observed that in modern social conditions it is not only tradesmen for whom the dishonour of a cheque might be obviously injurious. ¹⁰¹² The credit rating of individuals is as important for their personal transactions, including mortgages and hire-purchase and banking facilities, and it is notorious that central registers are kept containing information relevant to credit ratings. Accordingly, the Court of Appeal held that in every case (trader and non-trader alike) there is a presumption of fact that the customer suffers some injury to his credit and reputation when his cheque is wrongfully dishonoured. This development is to be welcomed for it acknowledges the important role of credit in modern consumer society. ¹⁰¹³

Mandate and third parties

34-324

A bank is entitled, and indeed bound, to refuse to honour its customer's cheque or other payment instruction where to do so would render it liable as an accessory to misfeasance or breach of trust. ¹⁰¹⁴ However, the bank must have positive evidence of misfeasance or breach of trust: mere suspicion is not enough to refuse its customer's instructions. ¹⁰¹⁵ The bank may face a dilemma in cases where it is aware that the customer is the subject of criminal investigation. On the one hand, if the bank allows the customer to operate the account and withdraw misappropriated funds, it could be held liable as a constructive trustee of the funds and made to account to the victim ¹⁰¹⁶; on the other hand, if it raises the issue with the customer, it could commit a "tipping off" offence under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002, where the disclosure is likely to prejudice an investigation. ¹⁰¹⁷ It was held by the Court of Appeal in Governor & Company of the Bank of Scotland v A Ltd, ¹⁰¹⁸ that in such a case the bank may ask the court for an interim declaration as to what information can be disclosed to the customer but once that information has been identified the bank had to take a commercial decision as to the course of action it then wishes to take, i.e. whether or not to contest proceedings brought by the customer for repayment of his deposit. Lord Woolf C.J. added that "it seems almost inconceivable that a bank which takes the initiative in seeking the court's guidance should subsequently be held to have acted dishonestly so as to incur accessory liability". ¹⁰¹⁹

Proceeds of Crime Act 2002

34-325

⚠ A bank must freeze an account where it knows or suspects that the account contains the proceeds of crime. ¹⁰²⁰ In practice, the bank cannot give an explanation to its customer for fear of committing a "tipping-off" offence, ¹⁰²¹ unless the relevant authorities (the National Crime Agency (NCA)) ¹⁰²² consent or the court so directs. ¹⁰²³ ⚠ The bank does not act in breach of contract by refusing to honour its customer's payment instructions where it is suspicious that the money in the account is criminal property. ¹⁰²⁴ The bank must report its knowledge or suspicion to NCA. ¹⁰²⁵ If, after an initial period of seven days to investigate the matter, NCA refuses to give the bank consent to deal with the suspect account, it remains frozen for a further period of 31 days. ¹⁰²⁶ ⚠ At any stage the bank, or any other person affected by the freezing of the account, may ask NCA to look at the matter again. ¹⁰²⁷ At the end of the 31 day moratorium, NCA must apply to the court for an order to prohibit further dealing with the funds in the account. ¹⁰²⁸ Unless such an order has been made, the bank is now bound to act in accordance with its customer's instructions.

34-325A

⚠ In N v S, ¹⁰²⁹ ⚠ the defendant bank, suspicious about eight accounts held by the claimant foreign exchange dealer (an authorised payment institution), which related to particular customers of the claimant, froze all 160 of the claimant's accounts and gave notice to close all of its accounts with immediate effect. This left 476 individual transactions in limbo and the claimant in danger of going out of business. Burton J., recognising the exceptional nature of the case, granted an interim mandatory injunction requiring the bank to comply with the customer's instructions in relation to the 476 transactions, and made an interim declaration protecting the defendant bank against any related criminal liability that might arise under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002. The judge held that the claimant had an arguable case that the bank had no contractual right to terminate the banking relationship without notice and that the balance of convenience and justice required the claimant be given this protection. No express consent had been sought from the NCA by the bank in respect of the transactions and the judge accepted that if consent was now sought the resultant moratorium period would almost certainly have disastrous consequences for the claimant. The judge stated that "[t]he significant fact" was that there was no evidence known to the NCA that the monies being transferred were criminal property or suspected of being so. ¹⁰³⁰ ⚠

⚠ However, Burton J. was reversed in the Court of Appeal. ¹⁰³¹ ⚠ Hamblen L.J., delivering a judgment with which Simon and Hickinbottom L.JJ. agreed, confirmed (at [59]-[60]) that the court had jurisdiction to override the compulsory statutory consent procedure under POCA 2002 by granting interim relief, but stated that, as the balance of convenience is likely to lie in favour of the public interest in the prevention of money laundering in most cases, such intervention was likely to be exceptional, e.g. where a bank acted in bad faith. He added (at [61]) that the balance of convenience would generally favour the bank in that the inconvenience to the customer would be outweighed by the potential prejudice to the bank of being compelled by the order to commit, or risk committing, a criminal offence. Hamblen L.J. stated (at [62]) that this prejudice could be overcome if the court could be satisfied at the interim application stage that there was a real prospect of such criminal liability, but considered (at [63]-[64]) that the court would be unlikely to have sufficient evidence to reach a conclusion on the issue at the interim stage. The Court of Appeal ruled (at [88]-[91]) that this case was not sufficiently exceptional to justify the grant of an interim declaration and that (at [92]-[96]), if it was inappropriate to grant an interim declaration to provide the bank with protection, it was inappropriate to grant a mandatory interim injunction.

⁹⁶⁶.

⚠ Foley v Hill (1848) 2 H.L.C. 28; Joachimson v Swiss Bank Corp [1921] 3 K.B. 110. A bank opening a current account must satisfy certain "customer due diligence" requirements contained in the Money Laundering Regulations 2007 (SI 2007/2157), as amended. It must also normally satisfy the requirements of the Banking Conduct of Business Sourcebook (BCOBS) and the Payment Services Regulations 2009 (SI 2009/209). For details, see E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), Ch.7, s.2. Note also that contracts for the provision of financial services are excluded from the Consumer Contracts (Information, Cancellation and Additional Charges) Regulations 2013 (SI 2013/3134), implementing the Consumer Rights Directive 2011/83/EU, but the earlier Financial Services (Distance Marketing) Regulations 2004 (SI 2004/2095), implementing the Financial Services Distance Marketing Directive 2002/65/EC, make broadly similar provisions for "distance contracts" for the provision of financial services to consumers in respect of information requirements and a consumer's right of cancellation. See below, para.38-131. The Revised Payment Services Directive 2015/2366/EU ("PSD2") repeals and replaces Directive 2007/64/EC. EU Member States have until January 13, 2018 to implement the requirements of PSD2. The Payment Services Regulations 2017 (SI 2017/752) ("PSRs 2017"), implement in part PSD2 in the UK. The PSRs 2017 revoke and replace the Payment Services Regulations 2009. With certain exceptions as set out in reg.1, which include where the implementation period is linked to the coming into force of the secure communication and authentication requirements adopted under art.98 of PSD2, the PSRs 2017 come into force on January 13, 2018 (PSRs 2017 reg.1(6)). See, generally, para.34-223 n.676 above. EU Member States had to implement the Fourth Money Laundering Directive (2015/849/EU) by June 26, 2017. The UK did this through the Money Laundering, Terrorist Financing and Transfer of Funds (Information on the Payer) Regulations 2017 (SI 2017/692), which replace the Money Laundering Regulations 2007 (SI 2007/2157) and the Transfer of Funds (Information on the Payer) Regulations 2007 (SI 2007/3298). The new regime contains (inter alia) detailed provisions dealing with customer due diligence.

- 967. Joachimson v Swiss Bank Corp, above; Arab Bank Ltd v Barclays Bank DCO [1954] A.C. 495. The rule that repayment must be demanded at the branch of the bank that holds the account is ripe for review in the light of modern technology and business practices when customers can now access their accounts remotely, via cash machines and through debit cards, and where some banks operate over the internet and through telephone banking services with no branches at all. The courts in one overseas jurisdiction seem prepared to jettison the rule (Damayanti Kantilal Doshi v Indian Bank [1999] 4 S.L.R. 1, 11 Sing CA).
- 968. Joachimson v Swiss Bank Corp, above; Bank of New South Wales v Laing [1954] A.C. 135, 154; Barclays Bank Ltd v WJ Simms Ltd [1980] 1 Q.B. 692, 699; Sierra Leone Telecommunication Co Ltd v Barclays Bank Plc [1998] 2 All E.R. 821, 827.
- 969. London Joint Stock Bank v Macmillan [1918] A.C. 777; Westminster Bank v Hilton (1926) 43 T.L.R. 124. This remains the case even where the account is overdrawn: Coutts & Co v Stock [2000] 1 W.L.R. 906 at 909, Lightman J., endorsed by the Court of Appeal (obiter) in Hollcourt (Contracts) Ltd v Bank of Ireland [2001] 2 W.L.R. 290 at 296, 300.
- 970. Astro Amo Compania Naviera SA v Elf Union SA (The Zographia M) [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 382, 393; Barclays Bank Plc v Quincecare Ltd [1992] 4 All E.R. 363, 376.
- 971.  Conflict can exist between the bank's duty to honour the mandate and its duty to exercise reasonable care and skill in and about the execution of the mandate, e.g. where an agent authorised to draw on his principal's bank account does so for his own benefit or for an unauthorised purpose: see Lipkin Gorman (a firm) v Karpnale Ltd [1989] 1 W.L.R. 1340 CA, varied on another point: [1991] 2 A.C. 548; Barclays Bank Plc v Quincecare Ltd [1992] 4 All E.R. 363; Verjee v CIBC Bank & Trust Co (Channel Islands) Ltd [2001] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 279. In Singularis Holdings Ltd (In Liquidation) v Daiwa Capital Markets Europe Ltd [2017] EWHC 257 (Ch) at [192], Rose J. held that the defendant stockbroker (Daiwa) had made payments from a segregated client account held for the benefit of the claimant company (Singularis), in breach of its Quincecare duty of care, because any reasonable banker would have realised that there were many obvious signs that AS, a director and sole shareholder of Singularis, who had instructed Daiwa to make the payments, was perpetrating a fraud on Singularis and was clearly using the funds for his own purposes. In making the disputed payments without proper or any inquiry, Daiwa was negligent and liable to repay the money to the claimant company. The judge (at [184]) rejected Daiwa's defence that AS's fraud was to attributed to Singularis as a "one man company" because this "would denude the [Quincecare] duty of any value in cases where it was needed most". She also rejected a defence of illegality, holding (at [215]) that the wrongdoing of AS was not to be attributed to Singularis. However, Rose J. (at [250]) reduced the damages awarded to Singularis by 25 per cent because of its contributory negligence.
- 972.  The bank's standard terms and conditions often allow a customer to give, and the bank to act on, oral instructions (see Earles v Barclays Bank Plc [2009] EWHC 2500 (QB) at [17]). On its true construction, a "one signature" mandate expressed to authorise payment by cheques or other written instructions and 'for all other purposes' has been held to bind a partnership in respect of loan agreements signed by only one of the partners (Kotak v Kotak [2017] EWHC 1821 (Ch)).
- 973. Libyan Arab Foreign Bank v Bankers Trust Co [1989] Q.B. 728, 749.
- 974.  SI 2009/209, as amended. For when the PSRs apply, see above, paras 34-223—34-224, and below, paras 34-404—34-405. The PSRs may be disapplied in favour of the Consumer Credit

Act 1974 ss.83–84 (PSRs reg.52(c)) The Revised Payment Services Directive 2015/2366/EU (“PSD2”) repeals and replaces Directive 2007/64/EC. EU Member States have until January 13, 2018 to implement the requirements of PSD2. The Payment Services Regulations 2017 (SI 2017/752) (“PSRs 2017”), implement in part PSD2 in the UK. The PSRs 2017 revoke and replace the Payment Services Regulations 2009. With certain exceptions as set out in reg.1, which include where the implementation period is linked to the coming into force of the secure communication and authentication requirements adopted under art.98 of PSD2, the PSRs 2017 come into force on January 13, 2018 (PSRs 2017 reg.1(6)). See, generally, para.34-223, n.676 above. Note that PSRs 2017 regs 41 and 64, deal with the application of Pts 6 and 7 respectively in the case of consumer credit agreements.

975.

❗BCOBS Ch.5, in particular BCOBS 5.1.11R (bank's liability for unauthorised payments) and 5.1.12R (banking customer's liability for unauthorised payments). BCOBS 5.1.11R–5.1.19R are similar to Pt 6 of the PSRs (see also PSRs 2017 Pt 7).

976.

❗See also PSRs 2017 reg.82(5), and note that the obligation to execute is placed on the “account servicing payment service provider” irrespective of whether the payment order is initiated by the payer, through a “payment initiation service provider”, or by or through a payee, unless execution is otherwise unlawful.

977.

❗For definition of a “framework contract”, see reg.2 and n.955 above (see also PSRs 2017 reg.2). But note the “force majeure” provision set out in reg.79 (see also PSRs 2017 reg.96).

978.

See below, paras 34-404 et seq.

979.

❗PSRs Sch.1 Pt 2(g), the exclusion under this paragraph also include travellers' cheques, bankers' drafts, paper-based vouchers and paper postal orders. See also PSRs 2017 Sch.1 Pt 2(g).

980.

At the time the account was opened, the customer will have identified those individuals who are authorised to sign cheques and draw on the account. But even a customer's irrevocable authority to a bank to accept the written demand of a particular person may later be overridden by the oral instructions of the customer himself: Morrell v Workers Savings & Loan Bank [2007] UKPC 3 at [10].

981.

As regards crossing cheques, see above, paras 34-158 et seq.; as regards words prohibiting transfer, see ss.8 and 81A of the Act, discussed in paras 34-026—34-028 and 34-165—34-168, above.

982.

See below, para.34-319.

983.

Marzetti v Williams (1830) 1 B. & Ad. 415, 424.

984.

Capital and Counties Bank v Gordon [1903] A.C. 240, 249.

985.

Woodland v Fear (1857) 7 E. & B. 519. But see also above, n.960.

986.

Baines v National Provincial Bank (1927) 32 Com. Cas. 216.

987.

In New Zealand it has been recognised that a cheque becomes stale after 6 months: Commissioners of Inland Revenue v Thomas Cook (NZ) Ltd [2003] 2 N.Z.L.R. 296 at [31]–[39], upheld on different grounds [2004] UKPC 53.

988.

Griffiths v Dalton [1940] 2 K.B. 264.

989.

❗Emerald Meats (London) Ltd v AIB Group (UK) Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 460 at [12]; Lloyds Bank Plc v Voller [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 978 at 982 CA; Barclays Bank Ltd v WJ Simms, Son & Cooke (Southern) Ltd [1980] Q.B. 677 at 699. The Supreme Court has held that bank charges levied on personal current account customers in respect of unauthorised overdrafts constitute part of the price or remuneration for the banking services provided and, in so far as the terms giving rise to the charges are in plain intelligible language, no assessment of the fairness of those terms, under the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999, may relate to their adequacy as against the services provided: see Office of Fair Trading v Abbey National Plc [2009] UKSC 6, [2010] 1 A.C. 696. Note that, in response to the Supreme Court's decision in OFT v Abbey National Plc, the Consumer Rights Act 2015 s.64(2), introduces an additional requirement for the application of the exclusion from the test of unfairness of terms relating to the main subject matter of the contract or the price/quality ratio: the term must be both transparent (expressed in plain and intelligible language and, in the case of a written term, legible: subs.(3)) and (which is new) prominent (brought to the consumer's attention in such a way that an average consumer would be aware of the term: subss. (4)–(5)), and not a term listed in Pt 1 of Sch.2 of the 2015 Act (subs.(6)) Pt 2 of the 2015 Act replaces the 1999 Regulations for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015, (see below, Ch.38)). Andrew Smith J. held at first instance in Abbey National that such bank charges could not be characterised as penalties because they were levied other than upon a breach of contract: [2008] EWHC 875 (Comm), [2008] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 625. But in Andrews v Australia and New Zealand Banking Group Ltd [2012] HCA 30, (2012) 290 A.L.R. 595, the High Court of Australia held that similar bank charges were capable of being characterised as penalties, even though they did not arise upon a breach of contract (see Davies and Turner [2013] C.L.J. 21; Peel (2013) 129 L.Q.R. 152; Dharmananda and Firios [2013] L.M.C.L.Q. 145 and Mason [2013] L.M.C.L.Q. 233). The Supreme Court of the UK reviewed the law relating to penalty clauses in Cavendish Square Holding BV v Makdessi [2015] UKSC 67, [2016] A.C. 1172, which is now the leading authority on the subject (see above, paras 26-178 et seq.). The Supreme Court (at [40]–[43]) declined to follow the approach taken in Australia and retained the requirement the penalty doctrine is only triggered by breach. The different approaches to the breach requirement in the two jurisdictions has been confirmed by the High Court of Australia in Paciocco v ANZ Banking Group Ltd [2016] HCA 28 at [7]–[10] and [119]–[127], which is now the leading authority in relation to the test to be applied in Australia in determining where a clause is penal. For whether overdraft charges can be challenged as part of an “unfair credit relationship” under Consumer Credit Act 1974 ss.140A–D, see D. Cook, A. Ibrahim and A. Khan [2011] J.I.B.F.L. 212.

990. Barclays Bank Ltd v WJ Simms, Son & Cooke (Southern) Ltd [1980] Q.B. 617. See also Office of Fair Trading v Abbey National Plc [2008] EWHC 875 (Comm), [2008] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 625 at [79] (bank must exercise its decision honestly and rationally). In Verjee v CIBC Bank and Trust Co (Channel Islands) Ltd [2001] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 279, it was held that the mere fact that a cheque was drawn against an inadequate balance did not put the bank on inquiry and that, by honouring the cheque, the bank did not commit a breach of a duty of care to the customer.

991. Royal Bank of Scotland Plc v Fielding [2003] EWHC 986 (Ch) at [81], [85], per Hart J.; affirmed. [2004] EWCA Civ 64 (but Jonathan Parker J. suggesting (at [108]) (without deciding the point) that bank might breach its duty of care to one account holder if it continued to operate the account even though it “had some reason to suppose the mandate was being abused” by the other account holder, or (at [101]) had “notice that a fraud is being committed”).

992. (1872) L.R. 8 Ex. 10. See also Barclays Bank Ltd v Okenarhe [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 87. For a detailed discussion see E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.248–268, 884–891.

993.  Garnett v M'Kewan, above, does not regard the right of combination as subject to notice; National Westminster Bank Ltd v Halesowen Presswork and Assemblies Ltd [1972] A.C. 785, 807, 810, 820 treats the question as still open but contains strong dicta suggesting that notice, even though with immediate effect, is required. For retail customers, the bank's right of set-off (or combination) is now regulated by the FCA's Banking Conduct of Business Sourcebook (BCOBS), which imposes certain information requirements pre-contract (BCOBS 4.1.4AG(2)(a)(i),(ii)), pre-use of set-off rights (BCOBS 4.1.4AG(2)(b)(i),(ii)) and post-use of set-off rights (BCOBS 4.1.4AG(2)(c)). BCOBS also imposes limits on the use of set-off rights against retail customers: see BCOBS 5.1.3AG(1),(2)(a) (customer must be left with a “subsistence balance”); BCOBS 5.1.3AG(2)(b)(i),(ii) (no set-off of personal debts against ring-fenced or earmarked funds) and BCOBS 5.1.3BG(1),(2) (refund is usual remedy unless not fair to do so). See also the Lending Code, revised September 28, 2015, paras 195–200. Neither the Standards of Lending Practice for Personal Customers nor the Standards of Lending Practice for Business Customers (above, para.34-222, n.673) have detailed provisions about the use of the right of set off.

994. Above, reversing the decision of the Court of Appeal and restoring Roskill J.'s judgment: [1971] 1 Q.B. 1. See also Vol.I, para.20-040.

995.  As applied to the winding up of companies under the Insolvency Rules 1986 (SI 1986/1925), r.4.90. The requirement of mutuality means that the claim and cross-claim must be between the same parties in the same right. Thus, in MS Fashions Ltd v BCCI [1993] Ch. 425, where a surety deposited money with a bank to secure the borrowings of his company and by the terms of the security documentation agreed that his liability should be that of a principal debtor (and not merely that of a guarantor), Hoffmann L.J. (at first instance) and the Court of Appeal held that, on the bank's subsequent liquidation, automatic mandatory insolvency set-off of the deposit against the surety's obligation to the bank operated so as to repay the principal debtor's indebtedness to the bank. It made no difference that the bank had not made a demand on the surety as he was himself severally liable for the debt. By contrast, in Re Bank of Credit and Commerce International (No.8) [1996] Ch. 245, where the surety deposited money and granted the bank a charge over it, but did not give any express covenant or personal guarantee to repay, the Court of Appeal held there was no sum due from the surety before demand and there could be no set-off on the bank's subsequent liquidation (affirmed by the House of Lords on other grounds, [1998] A.C. 214). MS Fashions Ltd v BCCI was later followed in Lehman Brothers Commodity Services Inc v Credit Agricole Corporate and Investment Bank [2011] EWHC 1390 (Comm), [2012] 1 All E.R. (Comm.) 254. The party relying on set-off must establish mutuality clearly on the evidence (see Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA (In Liquidation) v Al-Saud [1997] 1 B.C.L.C. 457, where the Court of Appeal denied set-off under r.4.90 of the Insolvency Rules to guarantor X whose beneficial interest in accounts in the name of Y with an insolvent bank was not shown to be clear and free from doubt). Where the conditions of the rule are satisfied, a set-off is treated as having taken place automatically on the bankruptcy date. The original claims are extinguished and only the net balance remains owing one way or the other (see Stein v Blake [1996] A.C. 243 HL; Re BCCI (No.8) [1998] A.C. 214 HL). This contrasts with the common law right of combination, which does not operate automatically (see P.R. Wood, English and International Set-Off (1989), p.47). The administration regime introduced into the Insolvency Act 1986 by the Enterprise Act 2002 includes a mandatory set-off rule in similar form to r.4.90: see r.2.85 of the Insolvency Rules 1986. Revised versions of r.2.85 and r.4.90 came into force on April 1, 2005: see the Insolvency (Amendment) Rules 2005 (SI 2005/527). Mutual dealings and set-off rules are now to be found in r.14.24 (administration) and r.14.25 (winding up) of the Insolvency (England and Wales) Rules 2016 (SI 2016/1024).

996. But note that it is now accepted that a bank can have a charge over funds deposited with it: Re Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA [1998] A.C. 214; overturning Re Charge Card Services Ltd [1987] Ch. 150; affirmed (on another point) [1989] Ch. 197; Re Spectrum Plus Ltd [2005] UKHL 41, [2005] 2 A.C. 680 at [60], per Lord Hope.

997. It appears that the right under s.323 cannot be abrogated by contract: Halesowen's case, above, at 805, 809, 824; Fraser v Oystertec Plc [2006] 1 B.C.L.C. 491 at [16].

998. Re EJ Morel (1934) Ltd [1962] 1 Ch. 21. cf. Re James R Rutherford & Sons Ltd [1964] 1 W.L.R. 1211. And see Coca-Cola Financial Corp v Finsat International Ltd [1998] Q.B. 43 CA. For a case involving a bank's refusal without notice to sanction further advances under a facility agreement, see: Socomex Ltd v Banque Bruxelles Lambert SA [1996] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 156 (Mance J.).

999. Barclays Bank Ltd v Okenarhe [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 87. Usually the arrangement remains in effect only insofar as there is no substantial change in the circumstances: British Guiana Bank v OR (1911) 104 L.T. 754; Halesowen's case, above; cf. Direct Acceptance Corp Ltd v Bank of New South Wales (1968) 88 W.N. (N.S.W.) (Pt 1) 498. As regards the combination of a current account and a loan account, see Bradford Old Bank Ltd v Sutcliffe [1918] 2 K.B. 833, 847.

- 1000. Union Bank of Australia v Murray-Aynsley [1898] A.C. 693; Barclays Bank Ltd v Quistclose Investments Ltd [1970] A.C. 567. But an account opened by a person as trustee may be subject to combination with that person's other accounts if the bank is not aware of the existence of a trust: Thomson v Clydesdale Bank [1893] A.C. 282; Royal Bank of Scotland Plc v Wallace International Ltd [2000] All E.R. (D) 78 CA. Section 85(2) of the Solicitors Act 1974 provides that "client accounts" of a solicitor may not be combined with his personal account.
- 1001. MPS Construction Pty Ltd (In Liquidation) v Rural Bank of NSW [1980] A.C.L.R. 835, especially at 842–843 Aust.
- 1002. Punjab National Bank v Basna [1988] F.L.R. 97. See also Neste Oy v Lloyds Bank Plc [1983] Com. L.R. 145, concerning the combination of an account maintained by the customer as an agent with his personal account. And see Bhojal v Punjab National Bank [1988] 2 All E.R. 295; followed in Uttamchandani v Central Bank of India (1989) 133 S.J. 262; and Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency v Dresdner Bank AG [2003] EWHC 3271 (Ch), [2004] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 19; affirmed. [2004] EWCA Civ 1074, [2005] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 12.
- 1003. Szek v Lloyds Bank (1908), in Legal Decisions Affecting Bankers, Vol.II, p.159; Flach v London and South Western Bank (1915) 31 T.L.R. 334; Plunkett v Barclays Bank [1936] 2 K.B. 107; Jayson v Midland Bank Ltd [1968] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 409. cf. Pyke v Hibernian Bank [1950] Ir. Rep. 195.
- 1004. See E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.509–513. See also Aktas v Westpac Banking Corp Ltd [2010] HCA 25 (where the High Court of Australia, by a majority, rejected a defence of qualified privilege); criticised by Tobin & Hare [2012] L.M.C.L.Q. 1.
- 1005. Frost v London Joint Stock Bank (1906) 22 T.L.R. 760.
- 1006. Baker v Australia and New Zealand Bank [1958] N.Z.L.R. 907.
- 1007. Davidson v Barclays Bank [1940] 1 All E.R. 316.
- 1008. See also below, para.34-407, for the payer's rights against the payer's bank under the Payment Services Regulations 2009 for non-execution or defective execution of an (electronic) payment transaction that falls within the scope of the Regulations; for the payee's rights against the payee's bank, see below, paras 34-410 et seq.
- 1009. Wilson v United Counties Bank Ltd [1920] A.C. 102 at 112, per Lord Birkenhead.
- 1010. Gibbons v Westminster Bank [1939] 2 K.B. 882; Rae v Yorkshire Bank Plc [1988] F.L.R. 1 CA.
- 1011. [1996] 4 All E.R. 119.
- 1012. At 124.
- 1013. R. Hooley [1996] C.L.J. 189 at 191; cf. N. Enonchong (1997) 60 M.L.R. 412.
- 1014. Royal Brunei Airlines Sdn v Tan [1995] 2 A.C. 378 PC. See above, paras 34-284—34-296.
- 1015. TTS International v Cantrade Private Bank Unreported 1995 Royal Court of Jersey, but see (1995) 4 J Int. Tr. 60.
- 1016. See above, para.34-289.
- 1017. s.333A ("tipping off" offences). See also s.342 (offence of prejudicing an investigation). The Terrorism Act 2000 s.39, as amended by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001, also provides for a "tipping off" offence.
- 1018. [2001] EWCA Civ 52, [2001] 1 W.L.R. 751.

- 1019. At [47]. To similar effect, see Tayab v HSBC Bank Plc [2004] EWHC 1529, [2004] 4 All E.R. 1024 at [75]–[77].
- 1020. Squirrel Ltd v National Westminster Bank Plc [2005] EWHC 664 (Ch), [2006] 1 W.L.R. 637, considering s.328 of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 which creates an offence of facilitating the acquisition, retention, use or control of criminal property.
- 1021. s.333A (“tipping off” offences). See also s.342 (offence of prejudicing an investigation).
- 1022. The NCA replaced the Serious Organised Crime Agency in 2013.
- 1023. ! Bank of Scotland v A Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 52, [2001] 1 W.L.R. 751; Amalgamated Metal Trading Ltd v City of London Police Financial Investigation Unit [2003] EWHC 703 (Comm), [2003] 1 W.L.R. 2711. But see also National Crime Agency v N [2017] EWCA Civ 253 at [71], where Hamblen L.J. said that Bank of Scotland v A, a tipping-off case, had to be “considered with caution and cannot be regarded as providing general guidance” in the context of the statutory consent regime contained in POCA 2002.
- 1024. K Ltd v National Westminster Bank Plc [2006] EWCA Civ 1039, [2007] 1 W.L.R. 311, where it was held that the bank does not have to adduce evidence to support any such suspicion or even show that there were reasonable grounds for the suspicion. But in Shah v HSBC Private Bank (UK) Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 31, [2011] 1 All E.R. 67, the Court of Appeal held that where a customer brings non-summary proceedings against his bank claiming damages to compensate for loss caused to him because of the bank’s failure to carry out his payment instructions, and the bank relies on its suspicion that the requested transfer involved funds which were criminal property, there was no reason why the bank should not be required at trial to prove that it had the relevant suspicion: at the trial the High Court held that HSBC did in fact have a genuine suspicion that the funds were criminal property, see [2012] EWHC 1283 (QB).
- 1025. An “authorised disclosure” under s.338.
- 1026. ! s.335. The court will be given power to extend the moratorium period up to 186 days when amendments to Pt 7 of the 2002 Act, introduced by the Criminal Finances Act 2017 s.10, come into force. EU Member States had to implement the Fourth Money Laundering Directive (2015/849/EU) by June 26, 2017. The UK did this through the Money Laundering, Terrorist Financing and Transfer of Funds (Information on the Payer) Regulations 2017 (SI 2017/692), which replace the Money Laundering Regulations 2007 (SI 2007/2157) and the Transfer of Funds (Information on the Payer) Regulations 2007 (SI 2007/3298). The new regime does not change the principal offences under the POCA 2002, nor the regime for reporting money laundering suspicions, but it does introduce a number of changes due to greater emphasis on a risk-based approach to tackling money laundering and terrorist financing.
- 1027. R (on the application of UMBS Online Ltd) v Serious Organised Crime Agency [2007] EWCA Civ 406.
- 1028. s.41.
- 1029. ! [2015] EWHC 3248 (Comm).
- 1030. ! At [17].
- 1031. ! [2017] EWCA Civ 253.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(c) - The Current Account
(ii) - Termination of Duty to Pay

Countermand of payment

34-326

Section 75(1) of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 provides that the banker should not honour a cheque if the customer has countermanded, or “stopped”, it. If the banker pays a cheque after having received notice of countermand, he is not entitled to debit the customer’s account. However, the notice given by the customer to the banker must be unambiguous and should identify the cheque: otherwise the banker is not at fault if he honours it. ¹⁰³² At the same time, if the notice is clear, it is effective, and the banker is not entitled to rely on a business practice prevailing in his firm in order to disregard it. In Burnett v Westminster Bank Ltd ¹⁰³³ the plaintiff had one current account with the X branch of the defendant bank and another one with its Y branch. The payment of cheques drawn on the Y branch was done through a computer, which calculated whether there were sufficient funds in the account for meeting the cheque, and then forwarded it to the branch on which it was drawn, where the teller would check the signature. The computer identified the account and the branch on which the cheque was drawn by decoding numbers printed on each cheque with magnetic ink. Customers were, therefore, requested, in a clause printed on the folder of each cheque book, not to use cheque forms contained in it for drawing on any other account. Despite this clause, the plaintiff used a form contained in the cheque book supplied by the Y branch in order to draw a cheque on the X branch, changing the address in the form to that of the X branch. On the next day he gave notice of countermand to the X branch. The cheque was presented through the clearing house, and was forwarded by the computer to the Y branch and honoured. It was held on the facts that the clause demanding that forms contained in the cheque book be used for drawing cheques only on the Y branch, was not a term of the contract between the plaintiff and the defendant bank, and that notice of countermand given to the X branch, on which the cheque was drawn, was sufficient.

When effective

34-327

The notice of countermand becomes effective only when it reaches the teller or ledger clerk, and the mere fact that a letter countermanding payment has arrived at the banker’s address at the time the cheque is honoured, does not render the banker liable. However, if the letter remains unopened for an unreasonable time, and as a result the teller is not notified of the countermand and the cheque is honoured, the banker may be liable in an action in negligence. ¹⁰³⁴ Unless otherwise agreed, no particular form is required for an effective countermand. The countermand may be made orally, in person or by telephone, or by letter, telex, fax, email or other writing. However, in each case the bank must be able reasonably to satisfy itself that the countermand is that of its customer. The bank is not obliged to accept an unauthenticated message as countermand of its duty and authority to pay in accordance with its customer’s mandate, although it may rely on the unauthenticated message to delay payment pending confirmation. ¹⁰³⁵ Use of an agreed password may even authenticate a countermand given over the telephone or via the internet. Notice of countermand given at one branch is not an effective countermand at any other branch of the bank ¹⁰³⁶, but it is sufficient if the customer gives notice of countermand to the branch on which the cheque is drawn. ¹⁰³⁷

Payment Services Regulations 2009 ¹⁰³⁸

34-328

⚠ The Payment Services Regulations 2009 (SI 2009/209) reg.55(3) (see also PSRs 2017 reg.67(3)), provide that the payer's consent to a payment transaction can be withdrawn at any time before the point at which the payment order can no longer be revoked under reg.67 (see also PSRs 2017 reg.83). ¹⁰³⁹ ⚠ Regulation 67(1) (see also PSRs 2017 reg.83(1)), restricts the ability of a payment service user to revoke a payment order by providing that, subject to certain exceptions, the payment service user may not revoke a payment order after it has been received by the payer's payment service provider. ¹⁰⁴⁰ ⚠ In the case of a payment transaction initiated by or through the payee, the payer may not revoke the payment order after transmitting the payment order or giving consent to execute the payment transaction to the payee (reg.67(2); see also PSRs 2017 reg.83(2), but note the change in wording to include a payment transaction initiated by a "payment initiation service provider", and making the payer's "consent" alone the point at which the payer may not revoke the payment order). In the case of a direct debit, the payer may not revoke the payment order after the end of the business day preceding the day agreed for the debiting of funds (reg.67(3); see also PSRs 2017 reg.83(3)). ¹⁰⁴¹ ⚠

Death of customer

34-329

Section 75(2) of the Act provides that notice of the customer's death terminates the banker's duty and authority to pay a cheque. This section seems to overcome, as regards payment of cheques, the principle that the authority of an agent is automatically determined by the principal's death and that the agent is liable for any act performed after it. ¹⁰⁴²

Mental disorder of customer

34-330

There is no authority regarding the effect of the insanity of the customer on the banker's duty to pay his cheques. ¹⁰⁴³ It has been held in Yonge v Toynbee ¹⁰⁴⁴ that the authority of an agent is determined by the principal's insanity. The relationship of customer and banker is not, however, solely that of principal and agent and it may, thus, be doubted whether the principle of Yonge v Toynbee applies. It is thought that notice of the customer's insanity terminates the banker's authority to pay cheques. ¹⁰⁴⁵ Where an order is made under the Mental Capacity Act 2005 the position should be clearer.

Winding up

34-331

⚠ The bank has to exercise extreme caution where a customer, who is a body corporate, is being wound up. By s.127 of the Insolvency Act 1986, in a winding-up of a company by the court, any disposition of the company's property made after the commencement of the winding-up is, unless the court orders otherwise, void. According to s.129 of the 1986 Act, the winding-up of a company by the court is deemed to commence at the time of the presentation of the petition for winding-up (or, if the company was already in voluntary liquidation, at the time when the resolution for voluntary winding-up was passed). Section 127 does not specify the appropriate remedy of the company's liquidator when the disposition is avoided but the Court of Appeal indicated in Hollicourt (Contracts) Ltd v Bank of Ireland that the right of recovery is restitutionary.¹⁰⁴⁶ Problems for the bank arise if, due to oversight or to its ignorance of the pending petition, the bank allows payments to be made into and out of the company's account. Until recently, all payments into and out of a company's bank account were considered to be dispositions of the company's property and void.¹⁰⁴⁷ That view has turned out to be too sweeping. Payments into an account in credit have been held not to constitute dispositions of the company's property as the amount standing to the credit of the customer's account is increased.¹⁰⁴⁸ Payments into an overdrawn account do constitute dispositions of the company's property and are void under s.127 unless validated by the court.¹⁰⁴⁹ Payments made out of a company's bank account, whether the account is in credit or overdrawn, have been held not to constitute a disposition of the company's property to the bank, which merely acts as the company's agent in making a disposition in favour of the third party.¹⁰⁵⁰  In any event, a bank is well advised to ask the company for a validation order under s.127 before allowing it to continue to operate the account as notice of the winding-up petition terminates the bank's authority to honour its customer's cheques.¹⁰⁵¹  If a disposition is made in good faith in the ordinary course of business when the parties are unaware of the presentation of the petition, and it is completed before the winding-up order is made, the court is likely to validate it (unless it can be challenged as a preference).¹⁰⁵²

Bankruptcy

34-332

 The bankruptcy of an individual commences with the day on which the bankruptcy order is made.¹⁰⁵³ By s.284(1) of the 1986 Act any disposition of property made by the bankrupt between the presentation of the bankruptcy petition and the vesting of the bankrupt's estate in his trustee (i.e. the day he is appointed) is void, except to the extent that it is made with the consent of, or is ratified by, the court. The wording of s.284(1) is similar to that of s.127 of the 1986 Act, and so s.284(1) should apply to dispositions of the type caught by s.127.¹⁰⁵⁴  The discretion vested in the court under s.284(1) is also likely to be exercised in a way similar to the discretion vested under s.127. If the bank makes a payment which is caught by s.284(1), but does so unaware of the presentation of the petition, the court is likely to ratify the payment. The bank is given further protection by s.284(5) which allows it to maintain a debit if the bank pays against the bankrupt's payment instruction after the making of a bankruptcy order, unless the bank did so with notice of the bankruptcy or it is not reasonably practical to recover the amount from the payee. It would seem that the subsection only applies where the payment is made out of an overdrawn account, because only then has the bankrupt "incurred a debt to a banker" by reason of the making of the payment.¹⁰⁵⁵ A bank which receives a payment into the account before the bankruptcy order may be protected by s.284(4). By subs.(4), the amount paid into the account is irrecoverable if received before the commencement of the bankruptcy in good faith, for value and without notice of the presentation of the bankruptcy petition.

Third party debt orders

34-333

Service of a third party debt order (formerly called a "garnishee order") relieves the banker of his obligation to pay his customer's cheques or other payment instruction, until the order is discharged, regardless of the respective amounts of the balance and the judgment debt.¹⁰⁵⁶ In many interim third party debt orders, however, a named sum is now expressed as the limit attachable, in which case it is the practice of bankers to earmark such specified amount together with an additional sum to cover estimated costs and to allow the customer to operate on the remaining balance. An interim third party debt order citing a solicitor as a judgment debtor will attach the balance on the solicitor's "clients" account.¹⁰⁵⁷ A third party debt order attaches foreign currency balances maintained with a bank in the United Kingdom¹⁰⁵⁸ but not with a foreign branch.¹⁰⁵⁹ The procedural rules relating to third party debt orders are to be found in Pt 72 of the Civil Procedure Rules 1998¹⁰⁶⁰ where reference is made to third party debt orders being made in respect of debts "due or accruing" from a third person to the judgment debtor.¹⁰⁶¹ Doubts as to whether money standing to the credit of a customer in a current account could be deemed "due or accruing" were resolved in *Joachimson v Swiss Bank Corp.*¹⁰⁶²

Ordinarily a demand is necessary before moneys so credited strictly fall due, but the Court of Appeal held that service of a garnishee summons operated as a demand. ¹⁰⁶³ Compliance with a final third party debt order discharges the bank's indebtedness to its own customer, but there is no discharge if the bank pays in reliance on only an interim order. ¹⁰⁶⁴

34-334

Additional limitations on the availability and operation of third party debt orders are illustrated by two recent cases. In Taurus Petroleum Ltd v State Oil Marketing Company of the Ministry of Oil, Republic of Iraq ¹⁰⁶⁵ Field J. set aside an interim third party debt order obtained by a judgment creditor in respect of sums payable to the judgment debtor (the defendant, SOMO). The judge held that since there were two beneficiaries under the letters of credit (SOMO and the Central Bank of Iraq), the amount payable under the letters of credit could not be the subject of an interim order in respect of a debt owed by just one of them. Field J. said that:

“if [the issuing bank's] obligation to pay under the credits was owed to SOMO and CBI jointly, the debt due under that promise could not in my judgment be attached by an interim third party debt order pursuant to CPR Part 72.2(1) because the words ‘any debt due or accruing due to the judgment debtor from the third party’ connote in my opinion a debt owed solely to the judgment debtor.” ¹⁰⁶⁶

Although the Court of Appeal affirmed Field J.'s decision to set aside the third party debt order, a majority of their Lordships disagreed with the judge's reasoning that the debt due under the letters of credit was owed to SOMO and CBI jointly. ¹⁰⁶⁷ Sullivan and Briggs L.JJ., ¹⁰⁶⁸ differing from Moore-Bick L.J. ¹⁰⁶⁹ on this point, held that special conditions in the credits, requiring payment to be made to CBI and not to SOMO, made CBI the sole creditor, even though the promise to pay was made to SOMO and CBI jointly. In their Lordships' opinion, the third party debt order was to be set aside because SOMO was not owed a debt under the credits; SOMO only had a non-proprietary right to damages for any failure by the issuing bank to pay CBI. Since the debt was the property of CBI and not SOMO, it was therefore immune from execution under s.14(4) of the State Immunity Act 1978. ¹⁰⁷⁰

34-334A

In Merchant International Co Ltd v Natsionalna Aktsionerma Kompaniia Naftogaz Ukrainy, ¹⁰⁷¹ Blair J. held that, for an interim third party debt order to be effective, it must be served on the third party at the time the third party holds the relevant funds: in this case the order failed because it was served before the third party bank had received funds from the judgment debtor. There was no appeal on this issue. Blair J. also held that another interim third party debt order failed, despite the fact that the third party bank now held funds received from the judgment debtor at the time of service, because the judgment debtor had deposited the funds with the third party under the terms of an agreement whereby the third party bank was obliged to pay the funds to bondholders and not back to the judgment debtor (which had issued the bonds). Despite the fact that these funds were never used to pay the bondholders, who had been paid using additional funds advanced for this purpose, the Court of Appeal, upholding Blair J., held that the order failed because the original funds were still held by the third party bank under the terms of the agreement for the purpose of making future interest payments to bondholders and not as a debt repayable to the judgment debtor on demand; in other words, the debt thereby created was not “due or accruing due” to the judgment debtor. ¹⁰⁷²

Period of limitation

34-335

The amount credited to the customer's account is payable on demand. ¹⁰⁷³ It follows that the six-year limitation period does not run against the customer in respect of his credit balance in a current account until a demand for payment has been made. It has been suggested that when the account is overdrawn the period of limitation runs against the bank from the date of the advance. ¹⁰⁷⁴ However, if the banker grants the customer an overdraft, repayable on demand, the time begins to run from the time of the demand. ¹⁰⁷⁵

34-336

⚠ Where a customer (the payer) seeks redress against his own bank (the payer's bank) for an unauthorised or incorrectly executed (electronic) payment transaction under the Payment Services Regulations 2009, ¹⁰⁷⁶ ⚠ the payer must notify the payer's bank without delay, and in any event no later than 13 months after the debit date, on becoming aware of any unauthorised or incorrectly executed payment transactions. ¹⁰⁷⁷ ⚠

Effect of war

34-337

The effect of war on the banker's duty to pay his customer's cheques depends largely on legislation, e.g. the Trading with the Enemy Act 1939, which may prohibit the honouring of certain types of cheques, e.g. those of persons residing in territory occupied by the enemy. The outbreak of hostilities or of war may further suspend the banker's duty to pay if it becomes impossible to do so, e.g. if hostilities are carried on in his place of business. When the banking business can safely be resumed, the banker's duty to pay the customer's cheques is revived, and any credit balance becomes again payable on demand. ¹⁰⁷⁸

Effect of extraterritorial orders

34-338

From time to time attempts are made by certain governments, such as the United States, to freeze or block accounts maintained by designated persons or bodies not only within the territory but even in places over which the government concerned has no sovereignty. ¹⁰⁷⁹ An instance was President Reagan's Order of January 8, 1986 which sought to freeze all property and interests of the Government of Libya and any entities controlled by it which were at that date, or came thereafter, into the possession or control of any "US persons including overseas branches of US persons". This Order created problems for Libyan banks, which maintained accounts with American banks. Whilst an attempt to challenge the Order in the United States would have been futile, attempts were, predictably, made to enforce payment of amounts deposited by Libyan bodies with American banks in other countries.

The Libyan Arab Bank cases

34-339

In the leading case, Libyan Arab Foreign Bank v Bankers Trust Co, ¹⁰⁸⁰ the L Bank, which was a Libyan government body, maintained a Eurodollars account with BT's office in London and another account, used predominantly for transfers and settlements, with BT's head office in the United States. After the making of the Order, the L Bank demanded payment in London of the US $140m deposited with the London office. BT refused, arguing that its contractual relationship with the L Bank was governed, in its entirety, by the law of the United States. It was, further, argued that even if the proper law of the deposit made in London was English law, payment should not be ordered as it would involve the performance of an act in the United States which was illegal under American law. To substantiate this second argument, BT called expert evidence to show that an amount of such magnitude could be cleared and settled only in the United States. Giving judgment for the L Bank, Staughton J. held that, although there was only one contract between the two banks, it was governed by two separate proper laws. American law governed the deposit made in the United States, whilst English law governed the deposit made in London. ¹⁰⁸¹ On this basis his Lordship concluded that President Reagan's Order did not affect the deposit made in London. He accepted, at the same time, that, in English law, it would be wrong to order BT to perform an act, such as the settlement of a debt or its payment through an American clearing system, if the process involved the performance in the United States of an act there illegal. Staughton J. held, however, that BT could pay the amount involved in cash in US dollars notes, as these could be imported without an infringement of American law from the United States. Alternatively, payment could be effected in pounds sterling of an amount equal to US $140m. His Lordship pointed out that the conversion of the currencies, namely the sale of the US dollars and the purchase of the required pounds sterling, could be effected in London. It should be emphasised that in the instant case the contract between the banks did not include a jurisdiction or choice of law clause. The outcome may, possibly, have differed if the contract between the parties had been made subject to the law of New York. It is interesting to note that some banks seek to protect themselves against problems of the type here encountered by including in their standard terms and conditions respecting deposits in foreign currency a clause which makes payment subject to the "lawful and instant availability" of clearing facilities in the country in whose currency the account is denominated.

Closure of bank

34-340

If the bank closes down or is being wound up, its duty to honour the customer's cheques is terminated. The balance standing to the customer's account becomes, in such cases, payable at once, and without the need of a demand. ¹⁰⁸²

^{1032.} Westminster Bank v Hilton (1926) 43 T.L.R. 124. See also Giordano v Royal Bank of Canada [1973] 3 O.R. 771 Canada.

^{1033.} [1966] 1 Q.B. 742.

^{1034.} Curtice v London City and Midland Bank [1908] 1 K.B. 293; Reade v Royal Bank of Ireland [1922] 2 Ir.R. 22.

^{1035.} Curtice v London City and Midland Bank Ltd [1908] 1 K.B. 293.

^{1036.} London Provincial and South Western Bank v Buszard (1918) 35 T.L.R. 142.

^{1037.} Burnett v Westminster Bank Ltd [1966] 1 Q.B. 742; Royal Bank of Canada v Boyce, 57 D.L.R. (2d) 683 (1966).

^{1038.} The Revised Payment Services Directive 2015/2366/EU ("PSD2") repeals and replaces Directive 2007/64/EC. EU Member States have until January 13, 2018 to implement the requirements of PSD2. The Payment Services Regulations 2017 (SI 2017/752) ("PSRs 2017"), implement in part PSD2 in the UK. The PSRs 2017 revoke and replace the Payment Services Regulations 2009. With certain exceptions as set out in reg.1, which include where the implementation period is linked to the coming into force of the secure communication and authentication requirements adopted under art.98 of PSD2, the PSRs 2017 come into force on January 13, 2018 (PSRs 2017 reg.1(6)). See, generally, para.34-223, n.676 above.

^{1039.}  See also reg.55(4) for withdrawal of consent to the execution of a series of payment transactions (see also PSRs 2017 reg.67(4)). For application of the PSRs in general, see above, paras 34-223 et seq. The PSRs focus only on electronic means of payment, so that cheques fall outside their scope. For application of PSRs 2017 in general, see para.34-223, n.676 above.

^{1040.}  For time of receipt of a payment order, see PSRs reg.65. See also PSRs 2017 reg.81.

- 1041. !For further provisions relating to revocation, see PSRs reg.67(4)-(6). See also PSRs 2017 reg. 83(4)-(6).
- 1042. Campanari v Woodburn (1854) 15 C.B. 400. And see E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.479–481.
- 1043. But see Drew v Nunn (1879) 4 Q.B.D. 661; Daily Telegraph Newspaper Co v McLaughlin [1904] A.C. 776. See also Vol.I, paras 9-075 et seq.
- 1044. [1910] 1 K.B. 215.
- 1045. Hart, Law of Banking, 4th edn, p.302; F.H. Ryder, “Bankers and the Law relating to Lunacy” (1934) 55 J.I.B. 14; cf. Megrah, The Banker's Customer, 2nd edn, p.76.
- 1046. [2001] Ch. 555 CA. A change of position defence may defeat the restitutionary claim, although this will depend on the circumstances of the particular case, and the issues raised by the application of that defence are different to those raised by a request for a validation order: see Re Tain Construction Ltd [2003] B.P.I.R. 1188.
- 1047. Re Gray's Inn Construction Ltd [1980] 1 W.L.R. 711 CA.
- 1048. Re Barn Crown Ltd [1994] 4 All E.R. 42, criticised in R.M. Goode, Principles of Corporate Insolvency Law, 4th edn (2011), para.13–131.
- 1049. Re Gray's Inn Construction Ltd, above; Re Tain Construction Ltd [2003] B.P.I.R. 1188.
- 1050. !Hollicourt (Contracts) Ltd v Bank of Ireland*, above, CA, endorsing the ruling of Lightman J. in Coutts & Co v Stock [2000] 1 W.L.R. 906. But in Officeserve Technologies Ltd (In Liquidation) v Anthony-Mike [2017] EWHC 1920 (Ch), H.H.J. Paul Matthews, sitting as Judge of the High Court, stated obiter (at [88]) that whilst he agreed with Lightman J. that there is no disposition of the company's property to the bank on the facts of Coutts & Co v Stock, where the account was overdrawn, he considered that there is a disposition caught by s.127 where the account is in credit because the bank's liability to the company has been reduced. The judge (at [88]) preferred the reasoning of Blackburne J. at first instance in Hollicourt (Contracts) Ltd v Bank of Ireland [2000] 1 W.L.R. 895, although he did not refer to the Court of Appeal's reasoning when reversing Blackburne J. on appeal at [2001] Ch. 555, and (at [97]) relied on dicta of Lord Neuberger in Akers v Samba Financial Group [2017] UKSC 6, [2017] A.C. 424 at [74] to the effect that the giving up of contractual rights by a company would be a “disposition” within s.127.
- 1051. !Pettit v Novakovic* [2007] B.P.I.R. 1643 at [7]. Presentation of the petition does not automatically terminate the bank's mandate: Hollicourt (Contracts) Ltd v Bank of Ireland, above. The principles that govern the validation of a disposition, either prospectively or retrospectively, are set out in Re Gray's Inn Construction Ltd [1980] 1 W.L.R. 711 CA; and in Denney v John Hudson & Co Ltd [1992] B.C.L.C. 901; see also Wilson v 375 Live Ltd [2015] EWHC 870 (Ch); Re Gray's Inn Construction Ltd was explained and amplified by the Court of Appeal in Express Electrical Distributors Ltd v Beavis [2016] EWCA Civ 765, [2016] 1 W.L.R. 4783, where Sales L.J. (at [56]) said validation would ordinarily only be granted “if there is some special circumstance which shows that the disposition in question ... has been ... for the benefit of the general body of unsecured creditors”.
- 1052. In Re Tain Construction Ltd [2003] B.P.I.R. 1188 it was held that this does not mean “prefer” in the technical sense of preference under the sections of the Insolvency Act 1986 avoiding transactions as preferences; rather, it means circumvention of the pari passu distribution of assets which is the policy of s.127 to achieve.
- 1053. Insolvency Act 1986 s.278(a).

- 1054.  See above, para.34-331. But note that there are differences between the two regimes and differences between s.127 and s.284: Pettit v Novakovic, above. See also Thomas v D'Eye [2016] B.P.I.R. 883 at [49], per Baister R., who said of s.284, “we are not dealing with unjust enrichment generally but a particular statutory regime which gives rise to an account for money had and received to which there are limited defences”.
- 1055. Paget's Law of Banking, 14th edn (2014), para.14.48.
- 1056. Rogers v Whiteley [1892] A.C. 118. See also Edmunds v Edmunds [1904] p.362. For a detailed analysis including the question of priorities, see E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.459–470.
- 1057. Plunkett v Barclays Bank [1936] 2 K.B. 107, but the order is unlikely to be made final where the account is a trust account.
- 1058. Choice Investments Ltd v Jeromnimon (Midland Bank Garnishee) [1981] Q.B. 149; Camdex International Ltd v Bank of Zambia (No.3) (1997) 6 Bank. L.R. 44 CA.
- 1059. Either because the court has no jurisdiction to make a third party debt order over a foreign debt, or as a matter of discretion, or because to make the order would be contrary to general principles of international law: Société Eram Shipping Co Ltd v Compagnie Internationale de Navigation [2003] UKHL 30, [2004] 1 A.C. 260; Kuwait Oil Tanker Co SAK v Qabazard [2003] UKHL 31, [2004] 1 A.C. 300. See also Masri v Consolidated Contractors International Co SAL [2008] EWCA Civ 303, [41]–[42], [47]; Taurus Petroleum Ltd v State Oil Company of the Ministry of Oil, Republic of Iraq [2015] EWCA Civ 835 at [14]–[24]. Discussed further in E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.464–465.
- 1060. Part 72 of the Civil Procedure Rules 1998 came into effect on March 25, 2002, replacing RSC Ord.49.
- 1061. In Alawiye v Mahamood [2005] EWHC 277 (Ch), [2006] 3 All E.R. 668, Lindsay J. held that, in the absence of any contrary indication, the court could and should accept, as sufficient for the purposes of an interim third party debt order under CPR 72.4, evidence in which the judgment creditor was able to say no more than that the judgment debtor had previously had an account with the third party bank and that it had previously been in credit. Lindsay J. also stated (obiter) that the fact that the account had previously been overdrawn did not of itself preclude there being a debt to the judgment debtor from the third party, at least where there is nothing to indicate that, overall, the bank is not a debtor to the judgment debtor.
- 1062. [1921] 3 K.B. 110, 131.
- 1063. As regards the right of the bank served with a third party debt order to deduct its expenses from the amount attached, see Gerry Webb Transport v Brenner [1985] C.L. 152.
- 1064. Crantrave Ltd v Lloyds TSB Bank Plc [2000] Q.B. 917 CA. Where there is a prior equitable charge or flawed asset arrangement over the account, the court will not make a third party debt order final: Fraser v Oystertec Plc [2004] EWHC 1582 (Ch), [2005] B.P.I.R. 381.
- 1065. [2013] EWHC 3494 (Comm), [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 432.
- 1066. At [13]. For further discussion of the attachment of a joint account by an interim order, see E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.468–469.
- 1067. [2015] EWCA Civ 835.
- 1068. At [54] and [55]–[64].
- 1069. At [11]–[12]: Moore-Bick L.J. could see no reason why a letter of credit should not be issued in favour of joint beneficiaries, but he held that, in this case, SOMO was the sole beneficiary of the credits.

1070. At [54] (Sullivan L.J.); and at [57] (Briggs L.J.).

1071. [2014] EWHC 391 (Comm), affirmed [2014] EWCA Civ 1603.

1072. This was despite the fact that the judgment debtor had already requested, and been paid, the surplus (above the amount claimed by the judgment creditor) from the third party bank. Arden L.J. said ([2014] EWCA Civ 1603 at [49]) this was beside the point: “[i]t was not paid under an immediate and unconditional obligation to do so.”

1073. Joachimson v Swiss Bank Corp [1921] 3 K.B. 110.

1074. Parr's Banking Co v Yates [1898] 2 Q.B. 460.

1075. Lloyds Bank v Margolis [1954] 1 W.L.R. 644. As regards a fresh demand and acknowledgment of the debt, see Bank of Baroda v Mahomed [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 14 CA. See also Vol.I, paras 28-039—28-040.

1076.  See above, paras 34-223 et seq. (noting, in particular, the scope of the Regulations), and below, paras 34-404 et seq. The Revised Payment Services Directive 2015/2366/EU (“PSD2”) repeals and replaces Directive 2007/64/EC. EU Member States have until January 13, 2018 to implement the requirements of PSD2. The Payment Services Regulations 2017 (SI 2017/752) (“PSRs 2017”), implement in part PSD2 in the UK. The PSRs 2017 revoke and replace the Payment Services Regulations 2009. With certain exceptions as set out in reg.1, which include where the implementation period is linked to the coming into force of the secure communication and authentication requirements adopted under art.98 of PSD2, the PSRs 2017 come into force on January 13, 2018 (PSRs 2017 reg.1(6)). See, generally, para.34-223, n676 above.

1077.  reg.59(1), which makes the payment service user's reporting obligation a condition for redress under regs 61, 75, 76 or 77. Regulation 59(2) relieves the payment service user of this obligation if his bank has failed to comply with various information requirements in Pt 5 of the Regulations. The payee's rights to redress under these provisions are also subject to the same time-bar. PSRs 2017 reg.74(1), makes the payment service user's reporting obligation a condition for redress under regs 76, 91, 92, 93 or 94. Regulation 74(2) relieves the user of this obligation if the user's bank has failed to comply with the various information requirements set out in Pt 6.

1078. Arab Bank Ltd v Barclays Bank DCO [1954] A.C. 495. See also Vol.I, para.23-030.

1079. Sanctions may also be imposed by the UN Security Council or the EU against states, governments, individuals and other entities in order to bring about a change in their policy or activity. For a recent example, where a bank was held to have been entitled to freeze the bank accounts of one of its customers, as it had reasonable cause to suspect, for the purposes of the Syria (European Union Financial Sanctions) Regulations 2012, that the funds in the account might be held by, controlled by or owned by her husband, who had been identified by the Council of the European Union as benefitting from or supporting the regime in Syria, see Hmicho v Barclays Bank Plc [2015] EWHC 1757 (QB). The UK has not opted into, and is not bound by, Regulation (EU) 655/2014 on the freezing of bank accounts, which enables a claimant to make a single application to the courts of one Member State to obtain a European Account Preservation Order, which freezes bank accounts held by a defendant in other Member States, without further intervention by the courts in those Member States.

1080. [1989] Q.B. 728. See also Libyan Arab Foreign Bank v Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co [1988] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 494; and Libyan Arab Foreign Bank v Manufacturers Hanover Trust (No.2) [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 608 (Hirst J.).

1081. At common law, the bank-customer contract and the account contract are governed by the law of the place of the branch where the account is held. The same principle applied under the Contracts Applicable Law Act 1990, implementing the Rome Convention on the Law Applicable to Contractual Obligations (Sierra Leone Telecommunications Co Ltd v Barclays Bank Plc [1998] 2 All E.R. 820, 827) and continues to apply under EC Regulation 593/2008 on the Law Applicable to Contractual Obligations (in force December 17, 2009) arts 4(1)(b), 19(2), as the law applicable to banking operations is prima facie “the place where the branch ... is located”, although the applicable law may be that of the jurisdiction where the bank has its head office when two or more accounts are held in different jurisdictions (art.4(2)). See E.P Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.380–381.

1082. Re Russian Commercial and Industrial Bank [1955] Ch. 148. See also Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA v Malik [1996] B.C.C. 15.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(c) - The Current Account
(iii) - Protection of Paying Banker in Cases of Unauthorised Payment

Payment Services Regulations 2009

34-341

⚠ The law set out in this section of the chapter reflects the general common law and statutory position as it emerged before the enactment and coming into force of the Payment Services Regulations 2009 (PSRs). ¹⁰⁸³ ⚠ The pre-2009 law remains applicable to cheques (as cheques fall outside the scope of the PSRs) ¹⁰⁸⁴ ⚠ and to other payment transactions that do not fall within the scope of the PSRs. ¹⁰⁸⁵ In respect of payment transactions that fall within their scope, the PSRs do not expressly preserve the common law position. ¹⁰⁸⁶ ⚠ We have already noted the restrictions on opting out of the PSRs where the payment service user is a consumer, a micro-enterprise or a charity. ¹⁰⁸⁷ It remains possible for the bank and its customer to contract in such a way that improves the customer's position to that found in the PSRs.

Discharge

34-342

If the banker pays a cheque in compliance with the terms of his mandate, he is entitled to debit the customer's account. Likewise, he gives an effective discharge of the cheque by paying it in due course, and is entitled to debit the customer's account. ¹⁰⁸⁸ Payment, it should be noted, is complete when the money is placed on the counter; if the cashier appreciates immediately thereafter that the customer's account is overdrawn, the money is not recoverable from the payee, even though, at the moment, he may be counting the money in the cashier's presence. ¹⁰⁸⁹ If the banker does not pay the cheque in compliance with his mandate or in due course, he may nevertheless be able to rely on some special defences. Under the common law he is protected, if he is able to show either that the customer is precluded from asserting wrongful payment, or that such payment was caused by the customer's own fault or negligence. The Bills of Exchange Act 1882 and the Cheques Act 1957 provide special defences for bankers who pay cheques bearing forged or irregular indorsements. All these defences require a detailed discussion.

Estoppel

34-343

The customer may, by his conduct, be precluded from asserting that the banker exceeded his mandate by paying a cheque. Thus, if the customer assured his banker, before payment of the cheque, that his signature was genuine, he would later on be precluded from asserting that it had been forged. ¹⁰⁹⁰ In Greenwood v Martins Bank ¹⁰⁹¹ a husband was aware that his wife had forged and cash his cheques, but did not disclose this fact to his bankers for a long period. In the meantime the wife forged further cheques and, when threatened by him with exposure, committed suicide. It was held that the husband was estopped from pleading the forgery of any of these cheques and that, as his silence had lulled his bankers into security, he could not recover from them the amount paid on any of these forgeries. It was further held that the detriment sustained by the bank was its inability, resulting from the customer's silence, to proceed against the wife. In a case like Greenwood v Martins Bank Ltd, the customer must have actual knowledge of the forgery, or have deliberately turned a blind eye, for an estoppel to be raised successfully against him. Constructive knowledge, in the sense that the customer had knowledge of circumstances which would cause a hypothetical reasonable customer to discover the fraud, is not enough. ¹⁰⁹²

The Liggett defence

34-344

Where the banker is unable to establish an absolute defence based on an estoppel, he may nevertheless have a partial defence if it can be shown that the customer's loss is smaller than the amounts of the cheques wrongfully honoured. Thus, where cheques drawn by an employee without authority are wrongfully honoured by the banker but a portion of the proceeds is injected by the employee into the customer's business, the banker is obligated to re-credit the customer's account only with the amount misappropriated by the employee. This rule is based on the equitable doctrine that a person who pays the debts of another without authority is allowed the benefit of such payment. ¹⁰⁹³

Ratification

34-345

Where an agent exceeds his authority in drawing a given cheque, his act may be ratified by the principal. The ratification precludes the principal from seeking reimbursement from the drawee bank which has paid the cheque. Cases of this type arise where an agent draws on his principal's account a cheque for an amount exceeding his mandate or where a director, who is authorised to draw on the company's account jointly with another person, draws a cheque without obtaining that other person's signature. The latter type of case arose in London Intercontinental Trust Ltd v Barclays Bank Ltd. ¹⁰⁹⁴ Here the cheques, which were honoured by the bank although they bore the signature of one director instead of the required two signatures, were drawn principally in order to transfer funds from one of the company's accounts to another. Initially, when the board of directors discovered the discrepancy, it resolved not to take any action. Subsequently, the company ran into financial difficulties and a new board was appointed. It was then resolved to bring an action against the bank, alleging that the cheques in question had been paid in breach of mandate. Slyn J. gave judgment for the bank on three grounds. First, he held that the director in question had the actual authority to transfer the relevant amounts so that he could have issued in his own name a written or oral instruction to this effect. The bank was, therefore, entitled to act on this specific instruction of the director although he gave it by means of cheques signed by himself only.

“The bank as a result of its failure to observe the discrepancy took a risk in honouring the cheque that [the director] was not in fact authorised. In the case of both these cheques ... he was so authorised.” ¹⁰⁹⁵

Secondly, his Lordship concluded, on the facts, that the original meeting of the board had adopted the director's act with the full knowledge that the cheques had been improperly drawn. The company had therefore ratified the payment of these cheques by the bank. Thirdly, his Lordship noted that before the company brought its action against the bank it had pursued a claim in liquidation before the Stock Exchange on the basis that the transactions were valid. In this way the company made its election and was bound by it. An election, however, denotes ratification only if it is final and unequivocal. In Limpgrange Ltd v BCCI SA ¹⁰⁹⁶ Staughton J. held that an entry in the customer's books, which treated a debt as due from a third party rather than from the bank, did not in itself constitute a final election and hence did not amount to a ratification of the bank's unauthorised payment to the third party.

Pass books and periodic statement

34-346

Credit entries in a periodic statement or pass book constitute prima facie evidence against the banker but may be rectified within a reasonable time to show the true facts. ¹⁰⁹⁷ If in reliance on an erroneous credit entry the customer changes his position, the bank is estopped from asserting the mistake and, thus, is unable to recover the amount involved. ¹⁰⁹⁸ But this principle applies only where the customer establishes that it would be inequitable to require him to effect reimbursement. ¹⁰⁹⁹ The fact that the customer does not object to entries in his pass book or periodic statement does not preclude him from alleging, subsequently, that they have been wrongfully made. Modern English authorities indicate that in the absence of an express contractual undertaking, the customer is neither under any implied obligation to examine the debit entries in his pass book or periodic statement of account nor to check the validity of any cancelled cheques which the banker may forward him. ¹¹⁰⁰ It has been held that not even the return of a pass book to the banker by a customer, without comment and with the entries ticked, constitutes a settled account, and that the customer is not prevented from subsequently challenging the correctness of the entries. ¹¹⁰¹ One possible solution is to incorporate a suitable clause in the bank's standard terms and conditions. Canadian cases indicate that if a customer signs an undertaking to examine a pass book or periodic statement and to inform the banker of any errors before a stated date, the banker will then be absolved by the customer's neglect, provided consideration for the undertaking is established. ¹¹⁰² But the Privy Council's decision in Tai Hing Cotton Mills Ltd v Liu Chong Hing Bank Ltd ¹¹⁰³ suggests that to be effective, such a clause must impose on the customer a definite duty to peruse his statement and, further, must convey to him that the entries made in the statement will be conclusively binding on him unless he queries them within the prescribed period.

Customer's negligence in drawing cheque

34-347

If the customer has been so careless when drawing a cheque as to facilitate a fraud by a third party, he is precluded from asserting the forgery against the bank. In London Joint Stock Bank v Macmillan ¹¹⁰⁴ a clerk prepared a cheque for £2 payable to bearer. There was no sum in words then written on the cheque, but after it had been signed by his employers the clerk altered the figures to £120 and wrote the words "one hundred and twenty pounds" in the space provided. The clerk presented the cheque and, as the forgery was not readily apparent, received payment and absconded. The banker was held entitled to debit the customer's account. Lord Finlay L.C. said:

"A cheque drawn by a customer is in point of law a mandate to the banker to pay the amount according to the tenor of the cheque. It is beyond dispute that the customer is bound to exercise reasonable care in drawing the cheque to prevent the banker being misled. If he draws a cheque in a manner which facilitates fraud, he is guilty of a breach of duty as between himself and the banker, and he will be responsible to the banker for any loss sustained by the banker as a natural and direct consequence of this breach of duty." ¹¹⁰⁵

Scope of principle

34-348

The principle in Macmillan's case may well be extended so as to prejudice the right of recovery against the banker of a customer who has left in blank the amount payable on a promissory note made by him, or on a bill of exchange which he has accepted, provided that these instruments are expressed to be payable at a named bank. ¹¹⁰⁶ Where the note or bill is not expressed to be payable at a bank, however, it seems that no duty is owed to anyone to guard against fraud. ¹¹⁰⁷ Even in the case of cheques, a customer is not always considered negligent if he leaves a blank space. The question is, always, whether a reasonable man would leave such a blank space or not. In Slingsby v District Bank, ¹¹⁰⁸ the customer left a blank space between the name of the payee and the words “or order”, and a fraudulent third party filled up this space by making the cheque payable to the payee “per pro” himself, and then negotiated the cheque by indorsing it in his own name. It was held that the customer was not negligent and that, although the alteration was not apparent, the banker could not debit the customer’s account with the amount paid against the cheque.

Carelessness not connected with the drawing of a cheque

34-349

Negligence of the customer which is not connected with the actual drawing of a cheque does not, usually, afford a defence to a banker who has wrongfully honoured the cheque. Parke B. in Bank of Ireland v Evans’ Trustees, ¹¹⁰⁹ which related to the negligent keeping of a seal, expressed to the House of Lords the unanimous opinion of the judges: “If there was negligence in the custody of the seal, it was very remotely connected with the act of transfer”. The learned judge went on to explain that:

“If such negligence could disentitle the plaintiffs, to what extent is it to go? If a man should lose his cheque-book, or neglect to lock the desk in which it is kept, and a servant or stranger should take it up, it is impossible in our opinion to contend that a banker paying his forged cheque would be entitled to charge his customer with that payment. Would it be contended that if he kept his goods so negligently that a servant took them and sold them, he must be considered as having concurred in the sale, and so be disentitled to sue for their conversion on a demand and refusal?”

Tai Hing

34-350

Thus, while a customer must be careful not to facilitate fraud when drawing cheques, he is not under a duty to his banker to take reasonable care in organising his business so as to prevent opportunities for others to forge his cheques. ¹¹¹⁰ Any doubts that could have existed on this point were settled by the Privy Council’s decision in Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Liu Chong Hing Bank Ltd. ¹¹¹¹ A book-keeper perpetrated a series of frauds on his employers. In some cases he tricked them into signing blank or incomplete cheques which he converted and completed in a manner that suited his purposes. In other cases, he resorted to the cruder method of forging the required signatures. As the rogue, who had the custody of the firm’s cheque books with its three banks, enjoyed his employers’ utmost trust, there was no attempt to check his activities and his frauds went undetected for approximately six years. When he was eventually unmasked, the employers accepted responsibility for all cheques which carried genuine signatures, but demanded that the three banks recredit the firm’s respective accounts with the amounts paid out against the forged cheques. The banks’ defence was, principally, that the frauds were occasioned by the firm’s negligence in the way it conducted its business, pleading that the firm should, accordingly, be estopped from disputing the validity of the payments made by the banks. Reversing the Hong Kong Court of Appeal’s decision in favour of the banks, Lord Scarman emphasised that, on the facts, none of the contracts made between the firm and the banks included an express term imposing on the firm a duty to conduct its business in a manner aiming to combat the perpetration of a fraud. At common law, a customer’s duty of care was confined to what could:

“be seen to be plainly necessary incidents of the relationship. Offered such a [current account] service, a customer must obviously take care in the way he draws his cheque, and must obviously warn his bank as soon as he knows that a forger is operating his account.” ¹¹¹²

❗ His Lordship rejected the view that the customer's duty at common law went further than this. ¹¹¹³

❗ As already pointed out, a wider duty could, however, be imposed on the customer by means of an express verification clause. A question which was not raised in Tai Hing is whether a bank may effectively recover losses resulting from the payment of forged cheques of the type here encountered by suing the rogue in deceit and by seeking to hold the employers vicariously liable. ¹¹¹⁴

Forged indorsement

34-351

If an indorsement is forged on a cheque payable to bearer, and the banker pays it to a holder or his agent, he will—in the absence of special circumstances—be considered as having paid the cheque in due course. The holder, in such cases, obtains his title by the delivery to him of the cheque, and does not claim under the forged indorsement. If, however, a cheque payable to order bears a forged indorsement of the payee, a transferee is, it appears, not a holder, ¹¹¹⁵ and payment to him does not constitute payment in due course. However, s.60 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 protects the banker in such cases. It provides that if a banker pays a cheque payable to order in good faith and in the ordinary course of business, he is deemed to have paid it in due course although it may bear a forged indorsement of the payee or of a subsequent holder. ¹¹¹⁶ This section applies regardless of whether a cheque has been paid over the counter or through the clearing system. ¹¹¹⁷ The phrase “in the ordinary course of business” probably means: the mode of transacting business which is adopted by the banking community at large. ¹¹¹⁸ It has been held that if the banker pays a crossed cheque over the counter, ¹¹¹⁹ or honours a cheque bearing an irregular indorsement, ¹¹²⁰ he does not pay it in the ordinary course of business. It is not certain whether a banker, who acts negligently, may nevertheless be considered as paying a cheque in the ordinary course of business. In Carpenters' Co v British Mutual Banking Co ¹¹²¹ Greer L.J. expressed the view that, when a banker acts negligently, he cannot be regarded as paying a cheque in the ordinary course of business. Slessor L.J., who concurred with Greer L.J.'s judgment on other grounds, thought that a banker may be acting in the ordinary course of business despite his negligence, and his view was supported by Mackinnon L.J., who delivered a dissenting judgment.

Payment with negligence

34-352

Section 60 appears wide enough to give adequate protection to the banker both in the case of uncrossed as well as crossed cheques bearing a forged indorsement. But s.60 cannot apply to cheques crossed “account payee” or “account payee only” as such cheques are non-transferable (s.81A(1) of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882) and, therefore, cannot be payable to order as required by the section. ¹¹²² Section 80, however, expressly provides a similar protection to a banker who pays a crossed cheque (a) in conformity with the tenor of the crossing; (b) in good faith and; (c) “without negligence”. This last phrase thus replaces the words “in the ordinary course of business” of s.60. Section 80 appears to reproduce s.9 of the Crossed Cheques Act 1876 and the need to include it, in addition to s.60, in the 1882 Act has been questioned. ¹¹²³ However, there are points of difference between the two sections. Section 80 only covers crossed cheques, s.60 extends to crossed and uncrossed cheques. Section 60 only covers cheques payable to order, s.80 extends to cheques which under s.81A of the 1882 Act or otherwise are not transferable. A banker is not to be treated for the purposes of s.80 as having been negligent by reason only of his failure to concern himself with any purported indorsement of a cheque which under s.81A(1) of the 1882 Act or otherwise is not transferable. ¹¹²⁴ In other words, the paying banker can ignore any purported indorsement on the cheque, as it is the responsibility of the collecting banker to ensure that a non-transferable cheque is collected only for the account of the named payee. However, there may be additional circumstances, e.g. where the paying banker is reliably informed that the cheque has been stolen from the payee (assuming the drawer has not, as yet, countermanded payment), in which it might be negligent for a bank to pay a nontransferable cheque bearing a purported indorsement without first satisfying itself that it was in fact being paid to the person entitled to receive it. ¹¹²⁵

Irregularity in or absence of indorsement

34-353

Section 60 protects the paying banker only in cases of a forged indorsement which is regular on its face. Section 1 of the Cheques Act 1957 protects a banker who, in good faith and in the ordinary course of business, pays a cheque which is not indorsed or is irregularly indorsed. It provides that a banker who pays such a cheque is deemed to have paid it in due course within the meaning of s.59 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882. ¹¹²⁶ However, the Committee of London Clearing Bankers has taken the view that the public interest would best be served by retaining the need for indorsement in certain circumstances. These circumstances are set out in a circular of September 23, 1957, ¹¹²⁷ forwarded by that Committee to Clearing Bank Managers. The procedure laid down in this circular may, no doubt, be taken as establishing "the ordinary course of business" and if disregarded would deprive a banker of the protection of s.1. This is especially so because s.1 provides that the banker does not incur liability by "reason only of" the irregular indorsement. As from the date of the circular, the banker, when paying an irregularly indorsed cheque, not only pays despite this defect but also in disregard of standard banking practice. Insofar as that circular relates to the paying banker, it provides that indorsements will continue to be required where cheques or other instruments are cashed over the counter, but that otherwise the paying banker need not concern himself with indorsements unless the instruments are travellers' cheques, bills of exchange (other than cheques) and promissory notes.

Where cheque avoided by forgery

34-354

Do the paying bank's statutory defences, under ss.60 and 80 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 and under s.1 of the Cheques Act 1957, apply where a cheque bears a forged signature of the drawer or if it has been materially altered by a fraudster? The paying bank's statutory defences do not apply where the drawer's signature is forged because the instrument is not a cheque at all. By s.24 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, a forged or unauthorised signature is "wholly inoperative" and so the instrument does not meet the statutory definition of a bill of exchange and, therefore, of a cheque. ¹¹²⁸ However, common law defences do remain open to the bank. ¹¹²⁹ In Slingsby v District Bank, ¹¹³⁰ Scrutton and Greer L.J.J. thought that a cheque, which, under s.64, was avoided by a material alteration, ceased to be a cheque and hence fell outside the ambit of these provisions. It is submitted that this remains good law. Indeed, in Smith v Lloyds TSB Bank Plc, ¹¹³¹ where a claim was brought against a collecting bank in conversion, it was held by the Court of Appeal that:

"... the effect of the presence of the word 'avoided' in s.64(1) of the 1882 Act is that the materially altered cheque or draft is, subject to the qualifications in the section, a worthless piece of paper."

Section 64(1) does go on to provide that, where the material alteration is not apparent, the instrument is enforceable in the hands of a holder in due course according to its original tenor. However, as most cheques drawn on United Kingdom banks are crossed and marked "account payee", so as to be nontransferable under s.81A(1) of the 1882 Act, this proviso is unlikely to apply much in practice.

Extension of protection to other instruments

34-355

Section 1(2) of the Cheques Act 1957 gives a protection similar to that of subs.(1) to a banker who pays any such instruments as the following: (a) a document issued by a customer which, though not a bill of exchange, is intended to enable a person to obtain payment of a certain sum from a banker ¹¹³², and (b) a draft payable on demand drawn by the banker on himself.

Reclaiming money from payee

34-356

In certain cases a bank, which paid money without a mandate or under some other mistake of fact, may wish to claim it back from the payee. Usually such an action is brought for the unjust enrichment of the payee, based on the fact that the money had been paid under a mistake of fact or in circumstances involving a total failure of consideration. The main authorities in point have been discussed in respect of actions in money had and received brought by the acceptor of a bill of exchange against the payee. ¹¹³³ Westdeutsche Landesbank Girozentrale v Islington LBC ¹¹³⁴ establishes that the same principle entitles a bank to recover an amount paid by it to a customer in pursuance of an unenforceable agreement. In the instant case the action was brought to recover the balance of an amount initially paid by the bank to the local authority in pursuance of an interest rate swap agreement which was ultra vires the authority's powers. ¹¹³⁵ It is, however, clear that no amount would be recoverable in such an action if it was paid out by the bank after it had come to realise that the agreement was void, or at least took the risk that it was void. ¹¹³⁶

¹⁰⁸³.

❗ SI 2009/209, as amended. See above, paras 34-223 et seq., and below, paras 34-404 et seq. The Revised Payment Services Directive 2015/2366/EU ("PSD2") repeals and replaces Directive 2007/64/EC. EU Member States have until January 13, 2018 to implement the requirements of PSD2. The Payment Services Regulations 2017 (SI 2017/752) ("PSRs 2017"), implement in part PSD2 in the UK. The PSRs 2017 revoke and replace the Payment Services Regulations 2009. With certain exceptions as set out in reg.1, which include where the implementation period is linked to the coming into force of the secure communication and authentication requirements adopted under art.98 of PSD2, the PSRs 2017 come into force on January 13, 2018 (PSRs 2017 reg.1(6)). See, generally, para.34-223, n.676 above.

¹⁰⁸⁴.

❗ PSRs Sch.1 Pt 2. See also PSRs 2017, Sch. 1, Pt 2. The statutory protection relating to the payment and collection of cheques extends by virtue of the Cheques Act 1957 ss.1(2) and 4(2) to certain other instruments analogous to cheques. See below, paras 34-355 and 34-372.

¹⁰⁸⁵.

For the scope of the PSRs, see above, paras 34-224 et seq. The contractual terms and conditions upon which the bank supplies its services would also require consideration in such cases.

¹⁰⁸⁶.

❗ But note, e.g., the express preservation of general common law rights in the context of the termination of a framework contract, see reg.43(7), and see also above, n.955. See also PSRs 2017 reg.51(7). See also below, para.34-405, and E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.618–619.

¹⁰⁸⁷.

reg.51(3), and see above, para.34-226.

¹⁰⁸⁸.

s.59(1), discussed in para.34-123, above. (Note that an extra duty of care may be imposed on the banker where a fiduciary relationship between him and the customer comes into existence; above, paras 34-254 et seq.)

¹⁰⁸⁹.

Chambers v Miller (1862) 13 C.B.(N.S.) 125. cf. Balmoral Supermarket Ltd v Bank of New Zealand [1974] 2 N.Z.L.R. 155 (deposit held incomplete where bank robbery occurred while funds to be deposited were counted by teller). As to when payment is complete when effected through the clearing system or by giro, see below, paras 34-423—34-431.

- 1090. Brook v Hook (1871) L.R. 6 Ex. 89, 99–100, and see above, para.34-051.
- 1091. [1933] A.C. 51. See also Bank of New Zealand v Auckland Information Bureau Inc [1996] 1 N.Z.L.R. 420 NZCA (principle extended to unauthorised direct credit instructions). As to wider application of the principle, see Geniki Investments International Ltd v Ellis Stickbrokers Ltd [2008] 1 B.C.L.C. 662 at [44]–[46] (client/stockbroker relationship; where also held that duty arises on awareness of unauthorised transaction and that it is not necessary for customer to have knowledge of possible fraud behind transaction); cf. Banque Nationale de Paris v Hew Keong Chan Gary [2001] 1 S.L.R. 300 (High Court of Singapore).
- 1092. Price Meats Ltd v Barclays Bank Plc [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 346; Patel v Standard Chartered Bank [2001] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 229. See also Morison v London County and Westminster Bank Ltd [1914] 3 K.B. 356; Brown v Westminster Bank Ltd [1964] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 187; Tina Motors Pty Ltd v Australia and New Zealand Banking Group Ltd [1977] V.R. 205.
- 1093. B Liggett (Liverpool) Ltd v Barclays Bank Ltd [1928] 1 K.B. 48; Lloyds Bank Ltd v Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China [1929] 1 K.B. 40, 61; cf. Re Cleadon Trust Ltd [1939] Ch. 286, 302–303, 315; Crantrave Ltd v Lloyds TSB Bank Plc [2000] Q.B. 917, 924, 925; Swotbooks.com Ltd v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc [2011] EWHC 2025 (QB), [49]–[56]. See also Associated Midlands Corp v Bank of New South Wales [1983] 1 N.S.W.L.R. 533 Aust; Limpgrange Ltd v BCCI SA [1986] F.L.R. 36; RCL Operators Ltd v National Bank of Canada [1997] 6 Bank. L.R. 195 NB CA; Majesty Restaurant Pty Ltd v Commonwealth Bank of Australia Ltd (1999) 47 N.S.W.L.R. 593 Aust. For a detailed discussion, see Ellinger and Lee [1984] L.M.C.L.Q. 459; and see also E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.500–501.
- 1094. [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 241; applied in HJ Symons & Co v Barclays Bank Plc [2003] EWHC 1249 (Comm). See also Izodia v Royal Bank of Scotland International Ltd Unreported August 1, 2006, Royal Court of Jersey; noted (2007) 3 J.I.B.F.L. 143.
- 1095. [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 241 at 249. Applied in Senex Holdings Ltd (In Liquidation) v National Westminster Bank Plc [2012] EWHC 131 (Comm), [2012] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 1130 at [18]–[20] (director had actual authority despite it being arguable that he was in breach of duty to company's creditors at the time he gave instructions to the bank).
- 1096. [1986] F.L.R. 36; distinguished in Swotbooks.com Ltd v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc [2011] EWHC 2025 (QB) at [43]–[44], although held no ratification because account entries could not be considered in isolation (at [45]–[48]).
- 1097. Commercial Bank of Scotland v Rhind (1860) 3 Macq. H.L. 643; British and North European Bank v Zalstein [1927] 2 K.B. 92.
- 1098. Skyring v Greenwood (1825) 4 B. & C. 281; Holt v Markham [1923] 1 K.B. 504; Lloyds Bank v Brooks (1951) 72 J.I.B. 114. See also Holland v Manchester and Liverpool District Banking Co (1909) 14 Com. Cas. 241.
- 1099. United Overseas Bank v Jiwani [1976] 1 W.L.R. 964.
- 1100. Lewes Sanitary Steam Laundry Co Ltd v Barclay & Co Ltd (1906) 95 L.T. 444; Kepitigalla Rubber Estates Ltd v National Bank of India [1909] 2 K.B. 1010; Walker v Manchester and Liverpool District Banking Co (1913) 108 L.T. 728; Brewer v Westminster Bank [1952] 2 All E.R. 650; Wealden Woodlands (Kent) Ltd v National Westminster Bank Ltd (1983) 133 New L.J. 719; Royal Bank of Scotland Plc v Fielding [2003] EWHC 986 (Ch); affirmed [2004] EWCA Civ 64. The principle is much criticised: Pollock (1910) 26 L.Q.R. 4; Holden (1954) 17 M.L.R. 41; Chorley, Gilbart Lectures (1954). For a detailed discussion, see E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), p.233.

- 1101. Chatterton v London and County Bank, The Times, January 21, 1891.
- 1102. Mackenzie v Imperial Bank [1938] 2 D.L.R. 764; B & G Construction Co v Bank of Montreal [1954] 2 D.L.R. 753; Arrow Transfer Co v Royal Bank of Canada, 19 D.L.R. (3d) 420 (1971); Canadian Pacific Hotels Ltd v Bank of Montreal, 40 D.L.R. (4th) 385 (1987); Kelly Funeral Homes Ltd v Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 72 D.L.R. (4th) 276 (1990). See, generally, K.W. Perrett (1999) 14 B.F.L.R. 245.
- 1103. [1986] A.C. 80. See also Financial Institutions Services Ltd v Negril Negril Holdings Ltd [2004] UKPC 40 (conclusive evidence clause was not clear and unambiguous and so was construed narrowly against the bank). It may also be necessary to assess the clause in the light of the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 and/or the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 (as to assessment under the Singaporean version of the latter statute, see Pertamina Energy Trading Ltd v Credit Suisse [2006] 4 S.L.R. 273 Singapore CA; Jiang Ou v EFG Bank AG [2011] SGHC 149 Singapore HC, noted by S.A. Booysen [2011] L.M.C.L.Q. 477 and (2012) 27 B.F.L.R. 687). With the coming into force of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 for contracts made on or after October 1, 2015 (as to which, see below, para.38-011), ss.2 and 3 of the 1977 Act will not apply to “consumer contracts” and “consumer notices”, but see the provision made about such contracts and notices in ss.62 and 65 of the 2015 Act. The Unfair Terms in Consumer Contract Regulations 1999 will be revoked and replaced by Pt 2 of the Consumer Rights Act 2015 but will apply to contracts made before October 1, 2015.
- 1104. [1918] A.C. 777. The rule has been established for a long time: see Young v Grote (1827) 4 Bing. 253.
- 1105. [1918] A.C. at 789.
- 1106. As to whether the customer may be entitled to plead contributory negligence on the bank’s part, see below, para.34-373. As regards the bank’s right to recover an amount paid under a mistake of fact from the payee, see above, paras 34-125 et seq.
- 1107. Scholfield v Londesborough [1896] A.C. 514.
- 1108. [1931] 2 K.B. 588 (affirmed [1932] 1 K.B. 544); cf. Lumsden & Co v London Trustee Savings Bank [1971] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 114, 121.
- 1109. (1855) 5 H.L.C. 389, 410–411. See also Welch v Bank of England [1955] Ch. 508.
- 1110. Lewes Sanitary Steam Laundry Co Ltd v Barclays & Co Ltd (1906) 95 L.T. 444. See also Keptigalla Rubber Estates Ltd v National Bank of India [1909] 2 K.B. 1010.
- 1111. [1986] A.C. 80; applied in Yorkshire Bank Plc v Lloyds Bank Plc [1999] Lloyd’s Rep. Bank. 191. For recent criticism, see C. Hare (2012) 23 J.P.F.L.P. 182.
- 1112. [1986] A.C. 80 at 106. See also Wealden (Woodlands) Kent Ltd v National Westminster Bank Ltd (1983) 133 N.L.J. 719. For these purposes the customer must have actual knowledge of the forgery as opposed to constructive knowledge: Price Meats Ltd v Barclays Bank Plc [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 346; Patel v Standard Chartered Bank [2001] Lloyd’s Rep. Bank. 229.
- 1113.  But note E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger’s Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), p.496, n.330, which makes the point that whilst Tai Hing remains good law for cheques, “statutory developments have resulted in a potentially greater risk of liability for customers who pay by card or electronic funds transfer”. See the Payment Services Regulations 2009 (SI 2009/209), as amended, regs 57(2), 62(2). See also PSRs 2017 regs 72(3), 77(3).
- 1114. The point was pleaded but not pursued in the Tai Hing case. It gains support from dicta of Richmond J. in National Bank of New Zealand Ltd v Walpole and Patterson Ltd [1975] 2 N.Z.L.R. 7, 14; and that of La Forest J. (dissenting) in Boma Manufacturing Ltd v Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 140 D.L.R. (4th) 463, 499 (1996). It does not matter for these purposes that the employee (or agent) is acting in furtherance of his own interests and not those of his employer (or principal), so long as he is acting within the course of his employment (or within the scope of his actual or apparent authority): Lloyd v Grace, Smith & Co [1912] A.C. 716 HL; Crédit Lyonnais Bank Nederland NV v Export Credit Guarantee Department [2000] 1 A.C. 486 HL; as explained in Dubai Aluminium Co Ltd v Salaam [2002] UKHL 48, [2003] 2 A.C. 366 at [39], [114]. See also E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.497–498, and C. Hare (2012) 23 J.B.F.L.P. 182 at 210–213.

- 1115. See above, para.34-054, discussing s.24 of the Act.
- 1116. s.60 applies only to cheques. As regards bills of exchange, see s.19 of the Stamp Act 1853, which gives a similar protection.
- 1117. Australian Mutual Provident Society v Derham (1979) 39 F.L.R. 167, 173.
- 1118. See also E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.503–505.
- 1119. Smith v Union Bank (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 291; affirmed (1875) 1 Q.B.D. 31, 35.
- 1120. Charles v Blackwell (1877) 2 C.P.D. 151, 159–160; Slingsby v District Bank [1931] 2 K.B. 588; affirmed [1932] 1 K.B. 544. But note as regards protection in respect of cheques irregularly indorsed, below, para.34-353.
- 1121. [1938] 1 K.B. 511.
- 1122. Since the Cheques Act 1992 introduced s.81A into the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, to the effect that crossed cheques marked “account payee” or “a/c payee”, with or without the word “only”, are not transferable, United Kingdom banks now almost invariably supply their customers with cheque forms which are crossed and pre-printed with the words “account payee”, so that the cheque is valid only as between the parties to it.
- 1123. Holden, History of Negotiable Instruments in English Law, p.229; Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange, 17th edn (2009), para.14–027. An extra duty of care may be imposed on the banker where he owes his customer a fiduciary duty of care: above, paras 34-254 et seq.
- 1124. Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s.81A(2).
- 1125. Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange, 17th edn (2009), para.14–028.
- 1126. As regards such a cheque's effect as a receipt, see the Cheques Act 1957 s.3 as amended by art.5 of the Deregulation (Bills of Exchange) Order 1996 (SI 1996/2993).
- 1127. Set out in Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange, 17th edn (2009), para.17–003.
- 1128. Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s.3(1). By s.73 of the 1882 Act, a cheque is defined as “a bill of exchange drawn on a banker payable on demand”. See Arrow Transfer Co Ltd v Royal Bank of Canada, 27 D.L.R. (3d) 81, 104 (1972). See further, Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange, 17th edn (2009), paras 2-013, 3-062, 17-063.
- 1129. See above, paras 34-343 et seq.
- 1130. [1932] 1 K.B. 544 at 559 (Scrutton L.J.), 562 (Greer L.J.). See also Kulatilke v Bank of India (1958) 59 New L.R. (Ceylon) 190; Kulatilke v Bank of Ceylon (1958) 59 New L.R. (Ceylon) 188; Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange, 17th edn (2009), para.17-063.
- 1131. [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 693, 703.
- 1132. This includes a cheque payable to “cash or order” which is not a bill of exchange; Orbit Mining and Trading Co v Westminster Bank [1963] 1 Q.B. 794.

- 1133. See above, paras 34-125 et seq.; generally on actions in restitution see Vol.I, Ch.29.
- 1134. [1996] A.C. 669, reversing as regards the interest claimable [1994] 1 W.L.R. 938. But for a restatement of the mistaken payer's right to claim interest, see Sempre Metals Ltd v Inland Revenue Commissioners [2007] UKHL 34, [2007] 3 W.L.R. 354.
- 1135. As held in Hazell v Hammersmith and Fulham LBC [1992] 2 A.C. 1.
- 1136. Haugesund Kommune v Depfa ACS Bank [2010] EWCA Civ 579, [2011] 1 All E.R. 190 at [104] (Court of Appeal recognised that restitutionary remedies can be awarded to recover the value of void loans; putting "the final nail in the coffin of Sinclair v Brougham [1914] A.C. 398", per G. Virgo [2011] C.L.J. 445, 447).

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(c) - The Current Account
(iv) - Special Types of Current Accounts

The joint account

34-357

An account opened in the names of two or more customers is known as a joint account. The customers, in the instructions given to the bank when the account is opened, may stipulate that cheques may be signed by any one of them, by two or more of them signing together or by all of them jointly. The last two types of instruction give rise to disputes when the bank honours a cheque bearing a forgery of one of the required signatures or a cheque on which one of the mandatory signatures is missing. ¹¹³⁷ In Jackson v White and Midland Bank Ltd ¹¹³⁸ the plaintiff entered into negotiations for a contract under which he was to become a partner in, or a joint owner of, the first defendant's business. An amount of £2,000 was paid by the plaintiff into a joint account opened by himself together with the first defendant at a branch of the defendant bank. Cheques drawn on this account required the signatures of both parties. The first defendant forged the plaintiff's signature on several cheques, which were honoured in due course by the bank. The business negotiations between the plaintiff and the first defendant broke off. As the first defendant did not refund the amounts drawn, the plaintiff applied for an injunction ordering the bank to reverse the debit entries arising from the payment of the forged cheques and an injunction ordering the first defendant to authorise the payment of these amounts by the bank to the plaintiff. Giving judgment for the plaintiff Park J. said:

“... the Bank made an agreement with the plaintiff and the first defendant jointly that it would honour any cheques signed by them jointly, and also a separate agreement with the plaintiff and the first defendant severally that it would not honour any cheques unless he had signed them. It follows, therefore, as the Bank has honoured cheques not signed by the plaintiff, the plaintiff is entitled to sue for breach of that separate agreement.” ¹¹³⁹

A similar conclusion was reached by Bingham J. in Catlin v Cyprus Finance Corp Ltd. ¹¹⁴⁰ His Lordship pointed out that:

“... the only purpose of requiring two signatures was to obviate the possibility of independent action by one account holder to the detriment of the other”. ¹¹⁴¹

In both Jackson and Catlin the respective plaintiff was, in effect, allowed to recover the full amount paid out on cheques that ought to have been dishonoured by the Bank. But it is important to emphasise that it was established on the facts that the funds paid into the account were the plaintiff's property. Where such facts cannot be proved, the innocent joint owner of the account would appear to be entitled to recover an equal share of the amounts paid out wrongfully against cheques not signed by him. ¹¹⁴²

Where debt discharged

34-358

The innocent joint owner of an account is not entitled to recover payment of the amount of a cheque on which his signature has been forged, if the cheque is drawn in discharge of a debt that can be enforced against him. Thus, in Jackson's case it was conceded that one of the cheques had been drawn in payment for goods in respect of which the plaintiff was liable to the seller for payment of the price. Park J. thought that plaintiff's counsel was right in withdrawing the claim related to this item as the bank was entitled:

"... to take advantage of the equitable doctrine by which a person who had in fact paid the debts of another without authority was allowed the advantage of his payments". ¹¹⁴³

Position when each party entitled to draw

34-359

Where two persons open a joint account at a bank on the terms that cheques may be drawn on the account by either of them, then, in the absence of facts or circumstances which indicate that the account has been opened for some specific purpose, each party can draw upon it not only for the benefit of both parties, but also for his own benefit. Thus, in Re Bishop decd, National Provincial Bank Ltd v Bishop ¹¹⁴⁴ a husband and wife opened a joint account and each of them was authorised to draw on it. The husband drew several cheques for the payment of shares purchased in his own name. It was held that these shares were the property of the husband, and were not held by him in trust for his wife and himself.

Survivorship

34-360

In the absence of agreement to the contrary, there is a presumption that upon the death of one of the owners of a joint account, all rights concerning the account vest in the survivor. This presumption is, however, frequently displaced, although not readily where both owners have paid money into the account. The test is one of intention, particularly the intention of the principal depositor, and regard must be had to all the surrounding circumstances. In Marshall v Crutwell ¹¹⁴⁵ the plaintiff's husband, being in ill-health, transferred his account from his own name into the joint names of his wife and himself, and directed the banker to honour cheques drawn by either of them. The withdrawals made by the wife were all under the direction of the husband and related to household expenses. Upon the death of the husband, Sir George Jessel M.R. held that no gift had been intended, and that the transaction was simply a mode of conveniently managing the husband's affairs. On the facts, the presumption of survivorship was displaced. In Re Harrison ¹¹⁴⁶ the husband, without informing his wife, opened an account in their joint names. The wife never drew a cheque on the account until, when the husband was in failing health, the bank manager informed her of the arrangement. On the husband's death an envelope was found amongst his papers indorsed with his wife's initials and containing deposit receipts. In the bank ledger was written: "Repayable to either or survivor", and the manager testified that such words would never have been recorded except on the husband's instructions. Russell J. could find no motive for the opening of the joint account except that the wife should take on survival. It is to be remembered that the courts have been careful not to formulate any inflexible test and the cases are but illustrations of the evidentiary weight of separate circumstances. ¹¹⁴⁷

Partnership accounts

34-361

⚠ Unless otherwise agreed, each partner is entitled to open an account in the firm's name or to draw upon any existing partnership account. ¹¹⁴⁸ ⚠ Although in a sense it is a joint account, each partner is in fact acting as agent of the firm. Usually, however, the articles of a partnership specify the manner in which cheques should be drawn, and the signatures of two of the partners are commonly required. ¹¹⁴⁹ As it is common knowledge that most partnerships have articles, it stands to reason that a banker must take reasonable steps to inform himself of the provisions concerning the rights of the partners as regards the opening of accounts and the drawing of cheques. ¹¹⁵⁰ A partner is not entitled to open a partnership account in his own name. ¹¹⁵¹

Trust accounts

34-362

A cheque drawn on a trust account should bear the signature of all trustees, unless the trust instrument stipulates to the contrary. ¹¹⁵² However, a trustee may, by power of attorney, delegate for a period not exceeding 12 months "all or any of the trusts, powers and discretions vested in him as trustee either alone or jointly with any other person or persons". ¹¹⁵³ Delegation to a sole trustee is permitted, but this cannot circumvent the rule requiring payment of capital money to at least two trustees. ¹¹⁵⁴ The banker is not, generally, concerned with the propriety of the acts of the trustees; he only has to satisfy himself that their acts are within the apparent scope of their powers. Usually, in the absence of actual knowledge on the part of the banker that a cheque is drawn by the trustee for improper purposes, he is not liable. However, certain acts of the trustee should constitute a red flag. Thus, a banker should be put on his guard if a trustee draws on trust funds and directs the banker to credit the cheque to his overdrawn personal account. In Foxton v Manchester and Liverpool District Banking Co, ¹¹⁵⁵ Fry, J. held that the burden of proof in these circumstances is on the banker to show that the payment was legitimate and proper, and if he fails to prove this he must reimburse the funds. There is some authority ¹¹⁵⁶ for the view that before this principle may apply the banker must have already struck a balance and known of the overdraft, or perhaps even to have pressed for payment. The opinion of Fry J. has since, however, been cited with approval by Farwell J., ¹¹⁵⁷ and is the more likely to prevail. ¹¹⁵⁸

Executors' accounts

34-363

An account opened by executors or administrators is to be regarded as that of the estate. Each executor has the power to open an account, but the other executors are entitled to countermand his actions and stop cheques drawn by him. ¹¹⁵⁹ To avoid difficulties bankers usually insist on a mandate given by all the executors or administrators before opening the account. While the executors have no power to carry on the deceased's business or to borrow money for this purpose, they are nevertheless authorised to wind up the estate and can, for that purpose, pledge assets or give other securities over them. ¹¹⁶⁰ The banker can, thus, safely grant an overdraft or advance money against such a security and, provided the banker acts in good faith and without knowledge of a breach of trust on the part of the executor, can enforce the security against the estate. ¹¹⁶¹

¹¹³⁷. See generally, Welch v Bank of England [1955] Ch. 508; Baker v Barclays Bank Ltd [1955] 1 W.L.R. 822. Contrast Brewer v Westminster Bank [1952] 2 All E.R. 650.

¹¹³⁸. [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 68.

¹¹³⁹. [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 68 at 79.

- 1140. [1983] Q.B. 759.
- 1141. [1983] Q.B. 759 at 771, applied in Dar International FEF Co v Aon Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 921 at [30]-[32].
- 1142. Twibell v London Suburban Bank [1869] W.N. 127. See also Ardern v Bank of New South Wales [1956] V.L.R. 569; Official Trustee in Bankruptcy v Alvaro (1996) 138 A.L.R. 341; Vella v Permanent Mortgages Pty Ltd [2008] NSWSC 505 at [442] (“it is only the [claimant’s] proportionate interest that is being compensated for in damages”).
- 1143. [1967] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. at 80. The doctrine referred to is based on B Liggett (Liverpool) Ltd v Barclays Bank Ltd [1928] 1 K.B. 48. Later cases have explained, and limited the application of, the Liggett doctrine by requiring the bank’s payment to be in some way authorised or ratified by the customer despite being outside his mandate. See Re Cleadon Trust Ltd [1939] Ch. 286 CA; and Crantrave Ltd v Lloyds TSB Bank Plc [2000] Q.B. 917 CA. In Crantrave v Lloyds TSB Bank Plc, there was also support for the view that the bank might have a defence to a claim for breach of mandate where it could be established on the evidence that the customer had been “unjustly enriched” by the unauthorised payment ([2000] Q.B. at 924, 925; see also Majesty Restaurant Pty Ltd v Commonwealth Bank of Australia Ltd (1999) 47 N.S.W.L.R. 593, for a case that might fall within this exceptional category). But no evidence of any “unjust factor” or “unconscionability” in Swotbooks.com Ltd v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc [2011] EWHC 2025 (QB), where S. Phillips Q.C., sitting as a Deputy High Court judge, stated (at [54]) that “the fact that a bank wrongfully debited its customers’ account by mistake and thereby paid a creditor of its customer without authority, does not of itself, in my judgment, make it unconscionable for the customer to recover the mistaken payment from the bank”.
- 1144. [1965] Ch. 450; followed in Pettitt v Pettitt [1970] A.C. 777, 815 HL. See also Fielding v Royal Bank of Scotland Plc [2004] EWCA Civ 64, where bank held entitled to follow express mandate and debit account on instructions of one of the joint account holders, but Jonathan Parker J. suggesting (at [108]) (without deciding the point) that bank might breach its duty of care to one account holder if it continued to operate the account even though it “had some reason to suppose the mandate was being abused” by the other account holder, or (at [101]) had “notice that a fraud is being committed”.
- 1145. (1875) L.R. 20 Eq. 328.
- 1146. (1920) 90 L.J.Ch. 186. See also Re Bishop decd, National Provincial Bank v Bishop [1963] Ch. 450; Re Figgis, decd, Roberts v McLaren [1969] 1 Ch. 123; Crill v Wood (2003-04) 6 I.T.E.L.R. 590 Royal Court, Jersey.
- 1147. McEvoy v Belfast Banking Co [1935] A.C. 24; Young v Sealey [1949] Ch. 278. In Aroso v Coutts & Co [2002] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 241, Lawrence Collins J. recently held that the fact that one of the holders of a joint account did not contribute to or draw upon the joint account did not prevent that person from having beneficial interests. It would not matter if such a person did not even know of the existence of the joint account. Moreover, the fact that the joint account holder was never intended to use the account while the other account holder was still alive would not prevent the former from succeeding to the whole of the account by survivorship. By contrast, in Sillett and Lowe v Meek [2007] EWHC 1169 (Ch), where an elderly woman, who was in ill health, transferred her bank account into the joint names of herself and her carer, it was held, on the totality of the evidence, that there had been no intention to make a gift, the transfer being done for administrative convenience, so that the carer was not the beneficial owner of the account by survivorship on the woman’s death.
- 1148.  Partnership Act 1890 ss.5, 6. As to whether a partner has authority to overdraw an account, see Bank of Australasia v Breillat (1847) 6 Moore P.C. 152, 193. See also Kotak v Kotak [2017] EWHC 1821 (Ch) at [118] et seq. (obiter) on whether a partner who signed a number of loan agreements had done “any act for carrying on in the usual way business of the kind carried on by the firm of which he is a member” within the second limb of s.5 of the 1890 Act. It was held in Kotak v Kotak that, on its true construction, a “one signature” mandate expressed to authorise payment by cheques or other written instructions and “for all other purposes” bound the partnership in respect of loan agreements signed by only one of the partners.

- 1149. As regards the position where a cheque payable to a partnership is paid into a partner's personal account, see Souhrada v Bank of NSW [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 444.
- 1150. For an interesting case concerning an innocent partner's position where a dishonest partner has perpetrated irregularities respecting a trust account and, in consequence, caused loss to the bank, see National Commercial Banking Corp of Australia Ltd v Batty (1986) 65 A.L.R. 385 Aust.
- 1151. Alliance Bank v Kearsley (1871) L.R. 6 C.P. 433. For a detailed account, see E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), p.441.
- 1152. For the nature of a trust account, see Mann v Coutts & Co [2003] EWHC 2138 (Comm), [2004] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 1 at [154]-[165].
- 1153. Trustee Act 1925, as amended by the Trustee Delegation Act 1999 s.5. Delegation may be to a trust corporation (Trustee Act 1925 s.25(3), as amended).
- 1154. Trustee Delegation Act 1999 ss.7, 8. Previously delegation to a sole trustee was not permitted. See generally, Hanbury and Martin's Modern Equity, 19th edn (2012), para.20-019.
- 1155. (1881) 44 L.T. 406, 408; and see Space Investment Ltd v Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce Trust Co (Bahamas) Ltd [1986] 1 W.L.R. 1072.
- 1156. Gray v Johnston (1868) L.R. 3 H.L. 1; Coleman v Bucks and Oxon Union Bank [1897] 2 Ch. 243.
- 1157. Att-Gen v De Winton [1906] 2 Ch. 106, 116.
- 1158. As regards the position when the banker's duties as trustee conflict with his being a banker, see Re Pauling's Settlement Trusts [1964] 1 Ch. 303, 339. See also above, paras 34-254 et seq.
- 1159. Gaunt v Taylor (1843) 2 Hare 413; and see E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.336-337.
- 1160. This appears to follow from Farhall v Farhall (1871) L.R. 7 Ch. App. 123.
- 1161. Berry v Gibbons (1873) L.R. 8 Ch. App. 747.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(d) - Discount and Collection

Discount and collection compared 34-364

In the vast majority of cases, cheques are not presented by the payee directly to the drawee bank but are remitted by him to his own banker, who arranges for their clearance. In such cases the payee's banker assumes either the role of a collecting banker or that of a discounting banker. When the banker presents the cheque to the drawee on behalf of his customer, he acts as a collecting banker and in the capacity of an agent. If the banker gives his customer value for the cheque before clearance, he presents it, in point of fact, in order to obtain payment for himself. He is in such a case a discounter and holder of the cheque. Whether a banker acts, in a specific case, as a collecting banker or as a discounting banker is a question of fact. The mere crediting of the customer's account before clearance, does not, in itself, constitute him a discounter; but if he agrees to grant the customer an overdraft against the cheque, or actually allows him to draw against it before clearance, he becomes a discounter. ¹¹⁶² The two roles, however, are not exclusive of one another. A banker may at one and the same time be an agent for collection and a discounter or holder of that cheque for value. Thus, a banker who grants his customer an overdraft of £5 against an uncleared cheque for £100 has given value for it; but it cannot be said that—as a result—he ceases to be the customer's agent for collection. ¹¹⁶³

Non-transferable cheques

34-365

It is almost invariably the case today that where a cheque is delivered to a bank for collection the bank receives the cheque as agent for the customer for the purposes of collecting it on the customer's behalf and not as discounter. ¹¹⁶⁴ For these purposes, the collecting bank's customer may be another domestic or foreign bank using the collecting bank as its agent to gain access to the cheque clearing system. ¹¹⁶⁵ In theory, the collecting bank could give the customer value for the cheque and collect the cheque, to the extent of the value given, on its own behalf as a holder for value, but the fact that UK banks now almost invariably issue cheque forms to their customers which are crossed and pre-printed with the words "account payee", thereby making the cheque non-transferable, ¹¹⁶⁶ means that this is very rare indeed, for a collecting bank cannot become the holder of a non-transferable cheque. ¹¹⁶⁷

Electronic presentation of cheques

34-366

The Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Act 2015 s.13, amends the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 to allow for the electronic presentation of cheques by the collecting bank to the drawee bank for payment. ¹¹⁶⁸ Under new s.89E(1), the Treasury may by regulations make provision for the "responsible banker" to compensate any person for any loss of a kind specified by the regulations which that person incurs in connection with electronic presentation or purported electronic presentation of a cheque or other relevant instrument. The Explanatory Notes to the Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Act 2015 explain that such regulations could, for example, provide for a claim by the drawer of the cheque or the bank that paid the cheque where the payment was made to the wrong account because of a defect in the image, or where the image had been created fraudulently. ¹¹⁶⁹ The term “responsible banker” is defined in subs.(3) to mean (a) the banker who is authorised to collect payment of the instrument on a customer’s behalf, or (b) if the holder of the instrument is a banker, that banker. It should be noted that, under subs.(5), the regulations may make provision for (a) the responsible banker to be required to pay compensation irrespective of fault (i.e. strict liability); and (b) the amount of compensation to be reduced by virtue of anything done, or any failure to act, by the person to whom compensation is payable (i.e. contributory negligence). Subsection (6) makes it clear that if a bank has to pay compensation under the regulations, it is not prevented from making a claim against another party for a contribution towards compensation. At the time of writing, regulations are still awaited.

Causes of action

34-367

If the collecting bank collects a cheque for anyone other than the true owner, the bank may be liable to the true owner for conversion of the cheque. ¹¹⁷⁰ The value of the cheque is deemed to be its face value and the true owner can recover damages of that amount. ¹¹⁷¹ However, where the cheque has been materially altered, the measure of damages is not the face value: the cheque is avoided under s.64(1) of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 and becomes a worthless piece of paper. ¹¹⁷² The true owner is the person with an immediate right to possession of the cheque. ¹¹⁷³ In cases of misappropriation, the identity of the true owner depends on whether the cheque has been delivered by the drawer to the payee. Problems sometimes arise where a cheque is stolen in the post. Where a cheque is sent by post by a debtor to pay his creditor, the issue turns on whether the creditor expressly or impliedly requested or authorised payment through the post: if he did then he is the true owner. ¹¹⁷⁴ If it is uncertain whether a cheque was misappropriated whilst in the hands of the drawer or the payee, by s.21(3) of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 the payee will be deemed to have received a valid and unconditional delivery of the cheque, and hence be the true owner, until the contrary is proved. ¹¹⁷⁵ Alternatively, the amount received for the cheque may be recovered from the bank by the true owner as money had and received. ¹¹⁷⁶ In theory, the collecting bank may have a right of indemnity or recourse against its own customer who paid in the cheque for collection, but in practice this may prove worthless. ¹¹⁷⁷ As the collecting bank will have a defence to the restitutionary claim for money had and received if it has already paid the proceeds of the cheque over to its customer in good faith and in ignorance of the claim, ¹¹⁷⁸ the most common form of action brought by the true owner against the bank is an action in conversion.

Protection of collecting banker

34-368

A defence available to a collecting banker against an action for the conversion of a cheque (or an action related thereto but brought under the law of unjust enrichment) is provided in s.4 of the Cheques Act 1957, which has replaced and widened the scope of the protection previously afforded by s.82 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882. Under s.4, a banker is not liable to the true owner of a cheque if he has received payment of it for a customer in good faith and without negligence despite any defects in the customer’s title. ¹¹⁷⁹ To avail himself of this defence, the collecting banker must, thus, be able to prove, among other things, that he has acted without negligence. Where compliance with this standard is in issue, it is of primary importance to examine whether or not the banker has acted in conformity with prevailing banking practice. In Lloyds Bank v Savory & Co ¹¹⁸⁰ the required standard was described as based on:

“... the practice of reasonable men carrying on the business of bankers, and endeavouring to do so in such a manner as may be calculated to protect themselves and others against fraud.”

Emphasis is to be placed on the words “reasonable men”; they imply that the courts will be reluctant to be guided by, or give effect to, a banking practice which is unreasonably lax or which may exonerate bankers from liability where they fail to exercise the degree of skill expected of conscientious businessmen. ¹¹⁸¹ Some support for this submission is to be found in the fact that mere exigencies of business will not excuse negligence. ¹¹⁸² However, the banker is not required to play the amateur detective and is not expected to be abnormally suspicious. ¹¹⁸³

Instances of negligence

34-369

Negligence in the collection of cheques, within the meaning of s.4, may occur either at the time the account is opened or when the banker accepts a specific cheque for collection. In the past, the banker has been held to be negligent if he opens an account without taking up references of the customer, ¹¹⁸⁴ or without ascertaining the occupation of his prospective customer and, if he turns out to be an employee, to ascertain the name of his employer. ¹¹⁸⁵ It has also been held that the banker's failure to insist on an identification does not constitute negligence. ¹¹⁸⁶ There is, however, authority for the view that an immigrant, who wishes to open an account shortly after arriving from overseas and who is unable to provide a referee known to the banker or to one of his correspondents, should be asked to produce a passport or some other proof of identity. ¹¹⁸⁷ Today, failure to check the identity of a customer is more likely to amount to negligence. This is because banks must ensure that they have proper procedures for identifying their customers so as to comply with the stringent requirements of the Money Laundering Regulations. ¹¹⁸⁸ Banks must also comply with the rules laid down by the Financial Services Authority to combat money laundering (one of the regulatory objectives of the Authority under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 is “the reduction of financial crime”). Banks are now less likely to require references when a new account is opened, which is not surprising as satisfactory references are relatively easy for a thief to fabricate. ¹¹⁸⁹

34-370

Bankers have been held to have acted negligently in the actual collection of cheques in the following cases: where an employee, official or agent was allowed to place to his credit cheques payable to or, in some cases, drawn by his employer or principal ¹¹⁹⁰; where a cheque was collected and credited to the private account of an agent although the cheque indicated that he obtained it in his representative capacity ¹¹⁹¹; where a banker collected a cheque crossed “a/c payee only” for a person other than the specified payee ¹¹⁹²; and where a banker collected for his customer, without inquiry, cheques to an amount clearly out of proportion to the known position in life of the customer. ¹¹⁹³ A banker is, however, not considered negligent merely because he fails to compare the signature of the drawer with an indorsement, and consequently fails to discover that the customer is not only the payee but also the drawer of a company's cheque paid into his account. ¹¹⁹⁴

Absent or irregular indorsement

34-371

Before 1957 a banker, who collected a cheque bearing an irregular indorsement, was considered to have acted negligently and was therefore not protected by s.82 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882. ¹¹⁹⁵ The law was changed by s.4(3) of the Cheques Act 1957, according to which a banker is not to be treated as having been negligent by reason only of his failure to concern himself with the absence of, or the irregularity in, indorsements. This provision must, however, be read in the light of the Circular of the Committee of London Clearing Bankers (namely the predecessors of the Committee of London and Scottish Banks) of September 23, 1957, which remains the basis of the prevailing banking practice in point. Just as this circular requires the paying banker to insist upon indorsements in certain circumstances, so also it gives detailed instructions for the guidance of the collecting banker. The effect of it is that as a matter of practice the collecting banker is expected to require indorsements of any cheque or other instrument:

- (i)
which is tendered for an account other than that of the ostensible payee (in such a case the banker must look for the indorsement of the payee and of all subsequent indorsees other than that of the customer for whose account it is to be collected); or
- (ii)
on which the payee's name is misspelt, or the payee is incorrectly designated, and the surrounding circumstances are suspicious; or
- (iii)
which is payable to joint payees and tendered for an account to which not all are parties.

It follows that if a banker collects one of the instruments mentioned in the circular despite its being unindorsed or bearing an irregular indorsement, he may be considered as having acted negligently by ignoring a requirement of common banking practice.

Other documents

34-372

The statutory protection relates not only to the collection of cheques, but under s.4(2) applies also to the collection of:

- (a)
any document issued by a customer of a banker which, though not a bill of exchange, is intended to enable a person to obtain payment from that banker of the sum mentioned in the document ¹¹⁹⁶;
- (b)
any document issued by a public officer which is intended to enable a person to obtain payment from the Paymaster-General or the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer of the sum mentioned in the document but is not a bill of exchange; and
- (c)
any draft payable on demand drawn by a banker upon himself, whether payable at the head office or some other office of his bank. ¹¹⁹⁷

It thus includes dividend and interest warrants, conditional orders and bankers' drafts. It does not include commercial bills of exchange or promissory notes.

Contributory negligence

34-373

Can a plea of contributory negligence be raised as a partial defence to an action in conversion brought by the true owner of a cheque against a collecting banker? A positive answer to this question was given in Lumsden & Co v London Trustee Savings Bank.¹¹⁹⁸ In that case a collecting banker failed to establish that he had acted without negligence in the collection of certain cheques and was therefore held not to be entitled to the protection of s.4 of the Cheques Act 1957. It was, however, held that the customer was guilty of contributory negligence to the extent of 10 per cent and the amount recoverable by him was reduced accordingly. Donaldson J.'s decision to allow this defence was based on the language of s.1 of the Law Reform (Contributory Negligence) Act 1945:

“Where any person suffers damage as the result partly of his own fault and partly of the fault of any other person or persons ... the damages recoverable in respect thereof shall be reduced to such extent as the court thinks just and equitable ...”

The learned judge held that this provision does not confine the defence of contributory negligence to instances in which the claimant—against whom it is raised—owes a duty of care to the defendant. It is sufficient if the claimant's carelessness or fault has contributed to the occurrence of the loss. Whilst Australian authorities cast some doubts on the correctness of this decision,¹¹⁹⁹ it has been affirmed in England by statute. Under s.47 of the Banking Act 1979 the defence of contributory negligence is available to a banker “in any circumstances in which proof of absence of negligence would be a defence in proceedings by reason of s.4 of the Cheques Act 1957”.¹²⁰⁰

Protection of discounting banker

34-374

A discounting banker may, on occasions, be able to plead two defences against an action in conversion by the true owner of a cheque. First, s.4(1)(b) protects the banker not only if he collects the cheque for a customer but also when “having credited a customer's account with the amount of such an instrument, [he] receives payment thereof for himself”. Thus, it is arguable that a discounting banker may claim the defence of s.4 provided the cheque has been credited to the customer's account: he cannot rely on this section if the cheque has not gone through the customer's account, e.g. if the banker has paid cash against the cheque.¹²⁰¹ The second defence which may, on occasions, be open to the discounting banker is to rely on his position as holder in due course of a cheque. If he can bring himself within the definition of a holder in due course, he is to be regarded as the owner of the instrument and an action in conversion against him will fail.¹²⁰² However, in order to be considered a holder in due course, the banker must prove that he took the cheque in good faith and for value and that the cheque was, at that time, complete and regular on its face.¹²⁰³

Regularity

34-375

The last requirement proved, on occasions, a pitfall, as a cheque is considered regular on its face only insofar as, inter alia, it is regularly indorsed.¹²⁰⁴ However, it appears that this requirement has been mitigated by s.2 of the Cheques Act 1957, which confers on a banker who gives value for a cheque payable to order, which the holder delivers to him for collection without indorsing it, such rights as he would have had if it had been indorsed in blank. Two cases show that a discounting banker may rely on this section in order to establish that he is a holder in due course of an unindorsed cheque. In *Midland Bank Ltd v RV Harris Ltd*¹²⁰⁵ a customer of the plaintiffs paid into his account with them two cheques drawn by the defendant on Lloyds Bank and payable to the customer's firm. The cheques were dishonoured by Lloyds Bank and the plaintiffs brought an action claiming to be holders in due course of the cheques. It was proved that the customer was allowed to draw against the cheques before their clearance. Although the cheques did not bear an indorsement, it was held that, by s.2, the plaintiffs could be treated as holders in due course of the cheques despite the absence of an indorsement. In *Westminster Bank v Zang*¹²⁰⁶ a customer of the plaintiffs paid into the account of a company of which he was a director an unindorsed cheque, drawn by the defendant and payable to the customer's order. The defendant stopped the cheque and it was dishonoured by the drawee bank. The plaintiffs brought an action to enforce payment, claiming to be holders in due course. As it was proved that the plaintiffs did not give value for the cheque, it was held that they were not holders in due course or for value, and could not enforce payment. The House of Lords held, however, that if they had given value for the cheque, they would have been holders in due course despite the missing indorsement. It was further held that the fact that the cheque was not collected for the original payee was of no relevance.

Comparison with non-bank holder

34-376

Zang's case demonstrates that a banker may be considered a holder in due course in circumstances in which an ordinary member of the public—who is less familiar with negotiable instruments than a banker—would not be so considered. It should be noted that a person may be a holder in due course although he has acted with negligence.¹²⁰⁷ Accordingly, a discounting banker may find it useful to rely on his being a holder in due course of a cheque if he is not able to prove that he has acted without negligence. If he cannot show that he is a holder in due course, e.g. where he discounts an order cheque bearing a forged indorsement,¹²⁰⁸ he may still escape liability for conversion by relying on s.4, provided the cheque has been credited to the account of a customer.

Non-transferable cheques

34-377

As UK banks now almost invariably issue their customers with cheque forms which are crossed and pre-printed with the words “account payee”, thereby making the cheque non-transferable,¹²⁰⁹ the holder in due course defence will rarely be available to a collecting bank. The collecting bank cannot become a holder in due course, or indeed any other type of holder, of a non-transferable cheque when it is not the named payee.¹²¹⁰ In consequence, the holder in due course defence need only be considered in those relatively rare cases where a cheque is uncrossed, or where the words “account payee” are absent or have been deleted by the drawer of the cheque.

Protection in cases of forgery

34-378

It has been indicated that the true owner of a forged cheque, e.g. a company whose cheque has been forged by a director, may recover the face value of the cheque from the collecting banker, provided the latter cannot claim to be protected under s.4.¹²¹¹ Insofar as the action of the true owner against the collecting banker is one in conversion, it is submitted that the true owner should be allowed to recover only the true value of the instrument. Whilst the value of a genuine cheque or bill is the amount for which it is drawn, it should be observed that by alleging the forgery of the instrument, the owner, or claimant, claims that it is null and void.¹²¹² Why then should he be allowed to claim its face value? In *Mathew and Cousins v Sherwell*¹²¹³ a person drew a cheque and delivered it, after his being declared a bankrupt, to the defendant. Sir James Mansfield dismissed an action by the assignee in bankruptcy for the conversion of the cheque, holding that even if the action succeeded the assignee could, at most, recover the value of the paper on which the cheque was written. The assignee was not allowed to claim that whilst the cheque was a nullity, it had the value of £300. This reasoning has been followed in modern cases decided in Australia and in Canada.¹²¹⁴ Most recently, in Smith v Lloyds TSB Group Plc,¹²¹⁵ the English Court of Appeal has rejected the face value rule where a cheque had been “materially altered” by an unauthorised person so as to fall within s.64(1) of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882. The Court of Appeal held that such a cheque was a “worthless piece of paper”.¹²¹⁶ It may be that the true owner of the cheque could overcome such a result by relying on the law of unjust enrichment and suing the collecting banker for money had and received. Whilst there is authority indicating that the claimant, the true owner of the cheque, may do so,¹²¹⁷ it is to be doubted if he would usually be able to succeed. It should be noted that the collecting banker receives the amount of the cheque as the agent of his customer, and it is doubtful whether an action for money had and received would succeed against such an agent once he has paid the amount of the collected cheque to his principal, the customer. ¹²¹⁸

Duty to customer

34-379

Quite regardless of whether the bank has accepted a cheque for collection or on the basis of a discount arrangement, it owes its customer the duty to present the instrument for payment with ordinary diligence. ¹²¹⁹ Basically, the bank has a “reasonable time” to present the cheque for payment. ¹²²⁰ In practice, the position is governed by the Clearing House Rules. Under the traditional banking procedure, cheques had to be presented for payment through the clearing house to the branch on which they were drawn. ¹²²¹ In 1996, the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 was amended to allow for cheque truncation. ¹²²² Under a fully truncated system only essential information about the cheque is sent electronically from the collecting bank to the drawee bank and not the cheque itself, which remains with the collecting bank. The declining use of cheques, coupled with high development costs, meant that a fully truncated cheque-clearing system was never developed in the UK. In fact those provisions introduced in 1996 to allow for cheque truncation (ss.74B and 74C of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882) have now been repealed by s.13 of the Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Act 2015, which introduces fresh amendments to the 1882 Act that allow for cheques to be cleared through presentation of an electronic image of the cheque (known as “cheque imaging”) in place of presentation of the cheque itself. ¹²²³

^{1162.} Re Farrow's Bank [1923] 1 Ch. 41; AL Underwood Ltd v Barclays Bank [1924] 1 K.B. 775; Westminster Bank Ltd v Zang [1966] A.C. 182; Barclays Bank Ltd v Astley Industrial Trust [1970] 2 Q.B. 527, 539. The same is true where the banker accepts a cheque in reduction of an overdraft: McLean v Clydesdale Bank (1883) 9 App. Cas. 95. For a detailed analysis, see National Australia Bank Ltd v KDS Construction Services Pty Ltd (1988) 76 A.L.J. 27 Aust. See also Taylor v Australia and New Zealand Banking Group Ltd Unreported May 26, 1988 Sup Ct Vic (both Australian authorities consider also whether the transaction constituted an undue preference). A Canadian authority suggests that the bank becomes a discounter even if the overdraft is granted by error: Bank of Nova Scotia v Taylor (1979) 60 A.P.R. 14.

^{1163.} Barclays Bank Ltd v Astley Industrial Trust, above, at 538.

^{1164.} But the proceeds are not held on trust for the customer; the bank merely incurs a commitment to credit the customer's account with an equivalent amount: Emerald Meats (London) Ltd v AIB Group (UK) Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 460.

^{1165.} See Importers Co Ltd v Westminster Bank Ltd [1927] 2 K.B. 297; Honourable Society of the Middle Temple v Lloyds Bank Plc [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm) 193; Linklaters (a firm) v HSBC Bank Plc [2003] EWHC 1113 (Comm), [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 545 (Comm), noted by Ellinger (2004) 120 L.Q.R. 226.

^{1166.} Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s.81A(1).

^{1167.} See R. Hooley [1992] C.L.J. 432.

^{1168.} See above, paras 34-153—34-154 (especially for commencement dates).

^{1169.} Explanatory Notes, para.160.

^{1170.} Morison v London County and Westminster Bank Ltd [1914] 3 K.B. 356; AL Underwood Ltd v Barclays Bank [1924] 1 K.B. 775; Lloyds Bank Ltd v Savory & Co [1933] A.C. 201; Marquess of Bute v Barclays Bank [1955] 1 Q.B. 202 (which shows that the claimant need not be the owner of the cheque, but may be a person entitled to immediate possession).

^{1171.} Marquess of Bute v Barclays Bank [1955] 1 Q.B. 202. For criticism of the face value rule, see

- E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.683-685. The rule was described as a "legal fiction" by Lord Nicholls in OBG Ltd v Allan [2007] UKHL 21, [2007] 2 W.L.R. 920 at [227]-[228].
- 1172. Smith v Lloyds TSB Plc [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 693 CA. The proviso to s.64(1) cannot apply where the cheque is non-transferable: see above, para.34-354.
- 1173. Marquess of Bute v Barclays Bank Ltd [1955] 1 Q.B. 202.
- 1174. Norman v Ricketts (1886) 3 T.L.R. 182; and see also Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange, 17th edn (2009), para.2-151.
- 1175. Surrey Asset Finance Ltd v National Westminster Bank Plc, The Times, November 30, 2000; permission to appeal refused [2001] EWCA Civ 60.
- 1176. Bavins Jnr & Sims v London and South Western Bank [1900] 1 Q.B. 270; Morison v London County and Westminster Bank Ltd, above; United Australia Ltd v Barclays Bank Ltd [1941] A.C. 1 (waiver of tort); cf. John v Dodwell & Co [1918] A.C. 563, 570. But this restitutionary claim may fail if the money is paid over to the principal. The collecting bank does not owe a duty of care to the drawee: Yorkshire Bank Plc v Lloyd's Bank Plc [1999] Lloyd's Rep. Bank. 191.
- 1177. But see Honourable Society of the Middle Temple v Lloyds Bank Plc, above, where an English clearing bank was held entitled to claim a full indemnity from the overseas bank that had instructed it to act as the collecting agent of the overseas bank, applied in Linklaters (a firm) v HSBC Bank Plc, above, where Gross J. held that the fact the collecting agent was also the paying bank was of no significance to its claim for a complete indemnity and that there was no room for just and equitable apportionment between the two banks under the Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978 as this solution was inherently uncertain and carried with it a much increased risk of litigation. See also Ellinger (2004) 120 L.Q.R. 226.
- 1178. See Vol.I, paras 29-186 et seq.
- 1179. As regards the protection afforded by this section to a discounting banker, see para.34-374, below. As regards the meaning of the word "customer", see above, para.34-250. See generally, E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), Ch.15.
- 1180. [1933] A.C. 201, 221; see Megrah (1956) 77 J.I.B. 256. In Marfani & Co Ltd v Midland Bank Ltd [1968] 1 W.L.R. 956, 957, Diplock L.J. observed that current banking practice provided a better guide for determining the absence or presence of negligence than cases decided 30 years earlier, when banking facilities were far less widespread.
- 1181. See implied warning to this effect by Cairns J. in Marfani & Co Ltd v Midland Bank Ltd, above, at 981-982. And see Thackwell v Barclays Bank Plc [1986] 1 All E.R. 676, which also supports the view that a failure to make an enquiry is not excused by the fact that an answer would have allayed fears of fraud.
- 1182. Ross v London County and Westminster Bank [1919] 1 K.B. 678.
- 1183. Penmount Estate Ltd v National Provincial Bank (1945) 173 L.T. 344, 346. See also Smith and Baldwin v Barclays Bank (1944) 65 J.I.B. 171.
- 1184. Ladbroke v Todd (1914) 30 T.L.R. 433; Hampstead Guardians v Barclays Bank (1923) 39 T.L.R. 229. cf. Commissioners of Taxation v English, Scottish and Australian Bank [1920] A.C. 683.
- 1185. Lloyds Bank v Savory & Co [1933] A.C. 201.
- 1186. Marfani & Co Ltd v Midland Bank Ltd [1968] 1 W.L.R. 956.

- 1187. Lumsden & Co v London Trustee Savings Bank [1971] 1 Lloyd's Rep. 114.
- 1188. The Money Laundering Regulations 2007 (SI 2007/2157), as amended, require a bank to apply "customer due diligence measures" when it establishes a business relationship (e.g. when opening an account for a new customer), carries out occasional transactions (that is transactions, carried out other than as part of a business relationship, amounting to €15,000 or more), suspects money laundering or terrorist financing, or doubts the accuracy of customer identification information (reg.7). Customer due diligence measures (defined in reg.5) consist of identifying and verifying the identity of the customer and any "beneficial owner" (defined in reg.6) of the customer, and obtaining information on the purpose and intended nature of the business relationship. A beneficial owner of a customer includes, for example, anyone who ultimately owns or controls 25 per cent of the shares or voting rights in a non-listed company, or who exercises control over the management of a company (reg.6(1)). Banks have to undertake ongoing monitoring of their business relationships (reg.8).
- 1189. E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.695-698.
- 1190. Morison v London County and Westminster Bank Ltd [1914] 3 K.B. 356; Ross v London County and Westminster Bank [1919] 1 K.B. 678; Souchette v London County and Westminster Bank (1920) 36 T.L.R. 195; AL Underwood Ltd v Bank of Liverpool [1924] 1 K.B. 775; Lloyds Bank v Savory & Co [1933] A.C. 201. However, if business efficacy requires that certain cheques payable to a drawer be collected through the account of the agent and this procedure is adopted with the drawer's knowledge, he is estopped from suing the collector's banker: Australia and New Zealand Bank Ltd v Ateliers de Constructions Electriques de Charleroi [1967] 1 A.C. 86.
- 1191. Marquess of Bute v Barclays Bank [1955] 1 Q.B. 202. cf. Moser v Commercial Banking Co of Sydney Ltd (1974) 22 F.L.R. 123 Aust: cheque payable jointly to husband and wife collected for husband's personal account; held to involve negligence.
- 1192. Bevan v National Bank (1906) 23 T.L.R. 65; House Property Co of London v London County and Westminster Bank (1915) 31 T.L.R. 479; Rhostar (Pvt) Ltd v Netherlands Bank of Rhodesia Ltd [1972] 2 S.A.L.R. 703, especially 717; National Commercial Banking Corp of Australia Ltd v Robert Bushby Ltd (1984) 1 N.S.W.L.R. 559, affirmed sub. nom. National Commercial Banking Corp of Australia Ltd v Batty (1986) 65 A.L.R. 385. But note that if the payee authorises the collection of the cheque for the credit of an account other than his own, there is no conversion involved: Souhrada v Bank of NSW [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 444, 452. Note further that there is no negligence in the collection for an account other than the ostensible payee's of a cheque crossed with the mere addition of the words "not negotiable": Day v Bank of NSW (1978) 19 A.L.R. 32 Aust. Following the passing of the Cheques Act 1992 (discussed above, para.34-165), in the absence of special circumstances, it would generally be negligent to collect payment of an "a/c payee" cheque for someone other than the named payee without further inquiry. But in each case the enquiry is fact sensitive and current banking practice is highly relevant to the issue of negligence (Architects of Wine Ltd v Barclays Bank Plc [2007] EWCA Civ 239, [2007] 2 All E.R. 285 at [12], per Rix L.J., who added that "[a] bank's evidence about its practice is, especially if unchallenged, relevant evidence of the current practice of bankers"). As regards the collection of an "a/c payee" cheque on the instructions of a non-clearing bank, see Hon Society of the Middle Temple v Lloyd's Bank [1999] 1 All E.R. (Comm); Linklaters (a firm) v HSBC Bank Plc [2003] EWHC 1113, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 545 (Comm), noted by Ellinger (2004) 120 L.Q.R. 226.
- 1193. Lloyds Bank v Chartered Bank of India [1929] 1 K.B. 40; Motor Traders Guarantee Corp v Midland Bank [1937] 4 All E.R. 90; Nu-Stilo Footwear v Lloyds Bank (1956) 77 J.I.B. 239; Day v Bank of NSW [1976] 2 Lloyd's Rep. 444, which also concerned the question of negligence arising from the bank's failure to inquire as regards the authority of an indorser who paid a cheque into his own account having indorsed it per pro the payee.
- 1194. Orbit Mining and Trading Co v Westminster Bank [1963] 1 Q.B. 794
- 1195. Bavins Jnr & Sims v London and South Western Bank Ltd [1900] 1 Q.B. 270.

- 1196. Such a document includes a cheque payable to “cash or order”: Orbit Mining and Trading Co v Westminster Bank [1963] 1 Q.B. 794.
- 1197. As regards the legal nature of such a draft, see Commercial Banking Co of Sydney Ltd v Mann [1961] A.C. 1, 7. See generally as regards bankers’ drafts: Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange, 17th edn (2009), paras 2–003, 2–012 and 2–040.
- 1198. [1971] 1 Lloyd’s Rep. 114; following Helson v McKenzies (Cuba Street) Ltd [1950] N.Z.L.R. 878.
- 1199. Wilton v Commonwealth Trading Bank [1973] 2 N.S.W.R. 644; Tina Motors Pty Ltd v ANZ Banking Group Ltd [1977] V.R. 205, 208–209; Day v Bank of NSW (1978) 19 A.L.R. 32, 42 et seq.; Grantham Homes Pty Ltd v Interstate Permanent Building Society Ltd (1979) 37 F.L.R. 191; Oxland Enterprises Pty Ltd v Gierke (1980) 91 L.S.J.S. 276. See also dictum of Lord Wright in Lloyds Bank v Savory & Co [1933] A.C. 201, 229. cf. Varker v Commercial Banking Co of Sydney Ltd [1972] 2 N.S.W.R. 967.
- 1200. The object of this provision was to ensure that the application to actions of this type of the plea of contributory negligence was not affected by s.11(1) of the Torts (Interference with Goods) Act 1977. Note that contributory negligence also constitutes a defence to an action for the breach of a contractual duty of care where the defendant is also liable in the tort of negligence for the same default: Vol.I, para.26-077.
- 1201. Under s.82 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 a banker was not protected if he credited the customer’s account before clearance: Capital and Counties Bank v Gordon [1903] A.C. 240. This difficulty was removed by s.1 of the Bills of Exchange (Crossed Cheques) Act 1906, which provided that a banker collected a cheque within the meaning of s.82 notwithstanding that he credited his customer’s account with the amount of the cheque before clearance. Under that section a discounting banker would not have been protected, as such a banker collects the cheque for himself and not for a customer. Section 4(1)(b), it should be noted, explicitly protects a banker who, having credited the customer’s account, receives payment for himself.
- 1202. See s.38(2) of the Act discussed in para.34-093, above.
- 1203. See s.29 of the Act, discussed in para.34-072, above.
- 1204. Arab Bank Ltd v Ross [1952] 2 Q.B. 216.
- 1205. [1963] 1 W.L.R. 1021.
- 1206. [1966] A.C. 182.
- 1207. See above, para.34-075.
- 1208. See above, para.34-053.
- 1209. Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s.81A(1).
- 1210. The requirements for holder in due course status are set out in s.29(1) of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, and are considered in para.34-072 above.
- 1211. Orbit Mining and Trading Co v Westminster Bank [1963] 1 Q.B. 794. See also Stoney Stanton Supplies (Coventry) Ltd v Midland Bank Ltd [1966] 2 Lloyd’s Rep. 373, 385.
- 1212. See ss.24 and 64 of the Act. And see above, para.34-354, considering the argument in respect of ss.60 and 80 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882.
- 1213. (1810) 2 Taunt. 439. cf. Building and Civil Engineering Holidays Scheme Management Ltd v Post Office [1964] 2 Q.B. 430, 444–447.
- 1214. Arrow Transfer Co Ltd v Royal Bank of Canada, 19 D.L.R. (3rd) 420 (1971), affirmed 27 D.L.R.

(3rd) 81 (1972) Can; Number 10 Management Ltd v Royal Bank of Canada, 69 D.L.R. (3d) 99, 105 (1977); Koster's Premier Pottery Pty Ltd v Bank of Adelaide (1981) 28 S.A.S.R. 355 Aust.

1215. [2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 693.

1216. At 703.

1217. Morison v London County and Westminster Bank Ltd [1914] 3 K.B. 356, 365–366; United Australia Ltd v Barclays Bank Ltd [1941] A.C. 1, above, para.34-367.

1218. Morison v London County and Westminster Bank Ltd, above, at 386; above, para.34-125; for the same reason he would lose on an action in money had and received based on the ratio in Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1991] 1 A.C. 548, above, para.34-131.

1219. By contrast, where a collecting bank collects an instrument for a remitting bank, there is no privity of contract between the collecting bank and the customer of the remitting bank either at common law or under the Uniform Rules for Collections, 1995 revision (URC 522): Grosvenor Casinos Ltd v National Bank of Abu Dhabi [2008] EWHC 511 (Comm), [2008] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 112 at [157], Flaux J., distinguishing Bastone & Firminger Ltd v Nasima Enterprises (Nigeria) Ltd [1996] C.L.C. 1902 at 1908, Rix J., who thought the URC point arguable. See further, H. Bennett (2008) 124 L.Q.R. 532.

1220. Note that as a collecting bank does not become a holder the position is not governed by s.45(2) of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, although this provision furnishes a guideline. For a detailed discussion of the collecting bank's duties, see E.P. Ellinger, E. Lomnicka and C.V.M. Hare, Ellinger's Modern Banking Law, 5th edn (2011), pp.715 et seq.; the clearing house rules are discussed at pp.390 et seq.

1221. Barclays Bank v Bank of England [1985] 1 All E.R. 385.

1222. Bills of Exchange Act 1882, ss.74B–C, inserted by the Deregulation (Bills of Exchange) Order 1996 (SI 1996/2993). See Chalmers and Guest on Bills of Exchange and Cheques, 17th edn (2009), paras 13–021 et seq.; and, on cheque truncation generally, see also Vroegop [1990] L.M.C.L.Q. 244. See above, para.34-152.

1223. See Pt 4A of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 (as inserted by s.13). Section 13 came into force on March 26, 2015 for the purposes of enabling the making of regulations under Pt 4A of the 1882 Act, and it will come into force on July 31, 2016 for all other purposes: Small Business, Enterprise and Employment Act 2015 s.164(4). See above, paras 34-153–34-154.

Chitty on Contracts 32nd Ed.
Consolidated Mainwork Incorporating Second Supplement
Volume II - Specific Contracts
Chapter 34 - Bills of Exchange and Banking
Section 2. - Aspects of Banking Law
(e) - The Giro System and Electronic Transfer of Funds 1224

Introduction

34-380

The word “giro”, which is used to describe money transfer operations is derived from the Greek word for circle. Giro denotes the cyclic operation involved in the transfer of credit balances from one bank account into another.

Nature of a giro transfer

34-381

The common thread that runs through all giro operations, paper-based or electronic, is that they involve the movement of a credit balance from one account to another brought about through adjustment of the balances of the payer's and the payee's accounts. 1225 The payer's account is debited and the payee's account is credited. This results in the debt owed to the payer by his bank being extinguished or reduced pro tanto (or, where his account is overdrawn, his liability to the bank increased) by the amount of the transfer to the payee, whilst the debt owed to the payee by his own bank is increased (or, where his account is overdrawn, his liability reduced) by the same amount.

Transfer of value

34-382

A giro operation does not involve the transfer of property, simply the adjustment of separate property rights (i.e. choses in action) of the payer and the payee against their own banks. 1226 It is, therefore, something of a misnomer to speak of the “transfer” of funds as there is no actual transfer of coins and bank notes from the payer to the payee. 1227 Moreover, there is no assignment of any debt that may be owed to the payer by his own bank. 1228 As Staughton J. observed in Libyan Arab Foreign Bank v Bankers Trust Co 1229:

“‘Transfer’ may be a somewhat misleading word, since the original obligation is not assigned (notwithstanding dicta in one American case which speaks of assignment) 1230; a new obligation by a new debtor is created.”

Transfer of value, rather than the transfer of funds, is probably a more accurate description of the giro process.

Credit and debit transfers

34-383

Giro operations can be classified as either credit transfers or debit transfers according to the way the payment order is communicated to the payer's bank.

Credit transfers34-384

A credit transfer represents a "push" of funds by the payer to the payee. The payer instructs his bank to cause the account of the payee, at the same or another bank, to be credited. The payer's payment order may be for an individual credit transfer, e.g. by bank giro credit or CHAPS payment, or for a recurring transfer of funds under a standing order (standing orders are instructions given by a customer to his bank to make regular payments of a fixed amount to a particular payee). ¹²³¹ On receipt of the payer's payment order, the payer's bank will debit the payer's account, unless the payer has provided his bank with some other means of reimbursement, and credit the payee's account where it is held at the same bank, or, where the payee's account is held at another bank, forward a payment order to the payee's bank, which will credit the payee's account.

Debit transfers34-385

A debit transfer represents a "pull" of funds by the payee from the payer. The payee conveys instructions to his bank to collect funds from the payer. These instructions may be initiated by the payer and passed on to the payee, e.g. as happens with the collection of cheques; alternatively, they may be initiated by the payee himself pursuant to the payer's authority, as happens with direct debits (where the payer signs a mandate authorising his bank to pay amounts demanded by the payee). ¹²³² On receipt of instructions from the payee, the payee's bank usually provisionally credits the payee's account with the amount to be collected and forwards instructions to the payer's bank, which will debit the payer's account. The credit to the payee's account becomes final when the debit to the payer's account becomes irreversible.

Clearing34-386

Payment effected through a giro transfer system is initiated by a payment order given by the payer, or someone else acting with his authority, to his own bank. In cases where the payment is not "in-house" (i.e. the payer and the payee hold accounts at the same bank), the payer's payment order will lead to a further payment order passing between the payer's bank and the payee's bank, sometimes through the intermediation of other banks. The process of exchanging payment orders between participating banks is known as clearing. Clearing may take place through a series of bilateral exchanges of payment orders between banks, but in the United Kingdom it is more common for clearing to take place multilaterally through a centralised clearing house.

Paper-based and electronic system34-387

❗ Giro transfer systems are classified as either paper-based or electronic depending on the medium used for inter-bank communication of payment instructions. ¹²³³ In a paper-based funds transfer system the paper embodying the payment instruction is physically transferred from one bank to another, e.g. by direct courier or at a centralised clearing house. The credit clearing is a paper-based funds transfer system. ¹²³⁴ By contrast, with an electronic funds transfer system the inter-bank communication of payment instructions is by electronic means, e.g. by magnetic tape, disc or, more usually, telecommunication link. The major inter-bank electronic funds transfer systems in the United Kingdom are the services operated by BACS Payment Schemes Ltd, called BACS, the payment systems run by the CHAPS Clearing Co Ltd, called CHAPS, and the Faster Payments Service operated by the Faster Payments Scheme Ltd. ¹²³⁵

Settlement

34-388

Where the payer and the payee hold accounts at the same bank, the transfer of funds between the two accounts will usually involve a simple internal accounting exercise at the bank, known as an “in-house” transfer. ¹²³⁶ The payer’s account is debited and the payee’s account is credited. The position will be different where the payer’s account and the payee’s account are held at different banks, known as an “inter-bank” transfer. In such cases an inter-bank payment order will pass from bank to bank, sometimes from the payer’s bank directly to the payee’s bank, otherwise via intermediary banks which each issue their own payment order to the next bank down the chain, until a payment order finally reaches the payee’s bank. Each inter-bank payment order must be paid by the bank sending the instruction to the bank receiving it. It is this process whereby payment is made between the banks themselves of their obligations inter se which is known as settlement.

Bilateral and multilateral settlement

34-389

Settlement can occur on either a bilateral or multilateral basis. Bilateral settlement occurs where the bank sending the payment order and the bank receiving it are “correspondents”, meaning that each holds an account with the other. Settlement is effected through an adjustment of those accounts. Multilateral settlement involves the settlement of accounts of the sending bank and the receiving bank held at a third bank. The third bank could be a common correspondent of the two banks, i.e. one where they both have accounts; alternatively, and more typically, the third bank could be a central bank.

Gross and net settlement

34-390

Settlement may be either gross or net. With gross settlement the sending and receiving banks settle each payment order separately without regard to any other payment obligations arising between them. This is usually done on a real-time basis, with settlement across the accounts of participating banks held at the central bank as each payment order is processed. With net settlement the mutual payment obligations of the parties are set off against each other and only the net balance is paid. This process occurs periodically with net balances being settled either at the end of the day (“same-day” funds) or on the following day (“next-day” funds). Net settlement may be either bilateral or multilateral. ¹²³⁷ In a bilateral net settlement system, a participant’s exposure is measured by reference to its net position with regard to each individual counterparty and not by reference to the system as a whole. In a multilateral net settlement system, a participant’s position is measured by reference to its net position with regard to all other participants in the system as a whole. As a result, each participant will end up as a net net debtor or a net net creditor in relation to all other participants in the system. Multilateral netting may arise through direct determination of multilateral net positions, or indirectly by netting the net bilateral positions and thereby obtaining net net positions. In each case, settlement follows the multilateral netting process.

Clearing systems

34-391

The very nature of giro operations anticipates the existence of a suitable clearing system. Geva has identified two senses in which the term “clearing system” can be used. ¹²³⁸ First, in its narrow sense, the term refers to a mechanism for the calculation of mutual positions within a group of participants with a view to facilitating the settlement of their mutual obligations on a net basis. Secondly, in its broad sense, the term also extends to the settlement of those obligations.

Clearing house rules

34-392

⚠ The banks and building societies which are members of the various clearing systems ¹²³⁹ ⚠ must have settlement accounts at the Bank of England. Other banks and building societies may gain access to these systems through agency agreements with those members. Members are bound by the rules of the clearing system through a multilateral contract. ¹²⁴⁰ The rules must be interpreted against the background of the manner and operation of the particular clearing system. Any interpretation of the rules must also be in accordance with the nature of the rules themselves. ¹²⁴¹ A customer of a clearing bank may be bound by, and able to rely on, the clearing system rules against his own bank through an implied term of the banker–customer contract (it is always open for the clearing house rules to be expressly incorporated into a bank’s contract with its customer but this is unlikely in practice). The customer is taken to have contracted with reference to the reasonable usage of bankers, including those clearing system rules which represent such reasonable usage. ¹²⁴² ⚠ However, where clearing house rules derogate from the customer’s existing rights, the usage codified in the rules will be deemed unreasonable and will not bind the customer without his full knowledge and consent. ¹²⁴³ In order to rely on the clearing house rules against a member bank other than his own bank, the customer would have to bring himself within the ambit of the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999, which may prove difficult, not least because the member banks may have “contracted out” of the Act. ¹²⁴⁴ ⚠ Agency arguments are likely to prove equally problematical.

UK clearing systems

34-393

⚠ There are four major clearing systems for giro transfers in the United Kingdom. ¹²⁴⁵ Each is run by an independent company supported by Payments UK, which is the trade association representing the UK payments industry. From July 1, 2017, Payments UK was integrated into a new finance and banking industry trade association called UK Finance (<https://www.ukfinance.org.uk>). ¹²⁴⁶ First, there is the credit clearing system, run by the Cheque and Credit Clearing Co Ltd, which is a paperbased credit transfer system used for the physical exchange of high-volume, lowvalue, credit collections such as bank giro credits. Secondly, there is BACS, operated by BACS Payment Schemes Ltd, which provides a high-volume, low-value, bulk electronic clearing service for credit and debit transfers, including standing orders, direct debits, wages and salaries, pensions and other government benefits. Thirdly, there is CHAPS sterling, which is operated by the CHAPS Clearing Co Ltd. CHAPS sterling is an electronic sterling credit transfer system, normally used for high value transfers. ¹²⁴⁷ ⚠ The fourth system, operated by Faster Payments Scheme Ltd, is called the Faster Payments Service. It began operation in May 2008 and offers a near real-time facility for internet and telephone transfers between bank accounts, with standing orders being processed on a same day basis. ¹²⁴⁸ ⚠ Save for CHAPS sterling, which is a real-time gross settlement system, the other clearing systems are multilateral net settlement systems with settlement of balances across the participants’ accounts held at the Bank of England at the end of each day, or several times each day for the Faster Payments Service. ¹²⁴⁹

Individual money transfer forms (bank giro credit transfers)

34-394

The bank giro credit, or the individual credit transfer form, is the basic facility used by the banks in money transfer operations. Prior to January 1, 1998, bank giro credit transfers were made using standard credit forms which left blank spaces for the payer to insert details concerning the transfer: the name of the payee's account and the other details concerning it; and the amount involved. However, many of these forms were completed inaccurately, which led to unacceptable delays in payment being made. Thus, since January 1998 inter-bank bank giro credits must be made using pre-printed credit forms, such as those found at the back of cheque books, or provided with utility bills. It is a matter for individual banks whether they will continue to accept blank credit forms completed in manuscript for intrabank transfers.

34-395

The bank giro credit form sets out neither the payer's express request that the bank execute the transfer nor his authorisation for the debiting of his account. The payer is, however, required to sign the form; his mandate to the bank as regards the remittance of the funds is based on his executing, in this manner, a standard bank giro credit. But the bank giro credit does not, even by implication, confer on the bank the authority to reimburse itself. The payer has to remit to the bank the required cash, a personal cheque, or cheques of third parties payable to himself.

Standing orders

34-396

